THE General Hiſtory
OF ENGLAND,
BOTH
Eccleſiaſtical and Civil:

Containing the REIGNS of

EDWARD I, II, III,
AND RICHARD II.

Taken from the moſt Antient Records, Manuſcripts and Printed Hiſtorians.

AS ALSO

AN APPENDIX,

Repreſenting the moſt MATERIAL Arguments and Authorities, for and againſt the Antiquity of the COMMONS Summoned to Parliament before the 49th of Hen. III.

VOL. III.

By JAMES TYRRELL Eſq;

LONDON,
Printed for W. Rogers, in Fleet-ſtreet; J. Taylor, in St. Paul's Church-yard; J. Nicholson, in Little-Britain; and A. Bell, in Cornhill. MDCCIV,

BRITISH MUSEUM

The NAMES of the Authors, both in Print and Manuſcript, made uſe of in this Volume; and how denoted in the Margin.

In Latin, Printed.

CHronicon Thom. Wikes. T. W. }
Annales de Waverly. A. W. }
Inter Script. Oxon. edit. Vol. II. }

Annales Wigorn. Edit. inter Script. in Anglia Sacra, Vol. I. An. Wig.

Mat. Weſtmonaſt. Flores Hiſt. M. W.

Thom. de la More, Vita R. Edwardi II.

Hen. de Knyghton, de Eveetibus Angliæ. H. K.

Thom. Walſingham, Hiſt. Regum Angliæ. T. W.

Ejuſdem Ypodigma Neuſtriæ. Y. N.

Polydori Vergilii Hiſt. Anglic.

Johan. Fordun. Hiſt. Scotorum.

Hector. Boethii Hiſt. Scotica.

Johan. Leſlæi Epiſcop. Roſ. Chronicon Scotiæ.

Pauli Æmylii, de Rebus geſtis Francor.

Odorici Raynoldi Annal. Baronii Continuatio. Od. Raynold.

Antiquit. Acad. Oxon. per Anton. Wood, ~~Bren.~~

Fran. Godwin de Præſul. Angliæ.

In French.

Jean Froiſſart, Hiſtoire de France, &c. Froiſ.

*Hiſt. d'*Angleterre, per And. du Cheſne.

abregé de l'Hiſtoire de France, par le Sieur de Mezeray.

Italian.

Franciſ } Villani *Hiſtoria d'*Italia. Vil.

In Engliſh.

Ran. Hygden's Polychronicon.

Caxton, Hollingſhed, Stow, their ſeveral Chronicles. Dr.

In Latin, Manuſcript

CHronicon Nich. Trivet, Regum Edwardi I. & II. in Bib. Regin. Oxon. C. N. T.

Adam de Murimuthe, Hiſt. Reg. Edwardi I. & II. in eod. Vol. Extat etiam plenius in Bib. Magdal. Oxon. C. A. M.

Annal. Civit. London, in Libro antiquo de Legibus penes Clericum Urbis.

Annal. Johan. de London, in Bib. Officii Herald.

Chron. Joh. Everſden, in ead. Bib. C. J. E.

Walter Hemingford Chronic. Reg. Edwardi I. & II. in Bibl. S. Trinitat. Cantab. C. W. H.

Annales de Abbingdon, in Bib. Pub. Cantab. & in Bib. Bod. Oxon.

Annales Monaſt. S. Auguſt. Cant. in Bib. Coll. S. Benedicti, Cantab. An. Aug.

Annal. Anon. in Bib. Cotton. Chron. Cot.

Chronicon Monaſt. de { Lanercoſt. Chr. Lan.
{ Norwic.
{ S. Alban.
{ Dunſtaple.

Annales Johan. Troclow.
Extant omnia in Bib. Cotton.

Robert. Aveſbury Hiſt. Rerum Edwardi III. Regis.

Chronic. Monaſt. Chriſti, Cant.
Extant ambo in Bibl. Domini Simonds D'Ews, Baronetti.

Chronic. Anon. Monaſt. de Eveſham (ut puto) Regum Ang. ad Rich. II. incluſ. in Bib. Bod. Oxon.

Joh. Tin-muthe Hiſt. Aurea, in Bib. Lamb.

Regiſters.

Regiſtrum Arch. Cant. vocat. Pecham.

Regiſtrum Monaſt. S. Edmundi, vocat. Werkton, penes Rich. Gipps Mil.

Rolls.

The Names of the Authors, &c.

Dr. Power's Annals of Wales.

Cotton's Abridgment of the Records of Parliament.

Rolls in the Tower

Rot. Clauſ. Rot. Pat. Rot. Parl. Rot. Vaſ. Rot. Scot. Rot. Alman. Rot. Walliæ, Rot Pipæ.

Manuſcripts in old French.

Scalæ Chronicon, in the Library of Bennet College in Cambridge.

Les Chroniques de St. Denys, a large and fair Manuſcript belonging to the City of London, in the Cuſtody of the Town-Clerk.

THE Author's almoſt conſtant Abſence from the Preſs, hath occaſion'd the Errata to be more, eſpecially in proper Names, than otherwiſe they would have been. The Literal ones, and thoſe of leſs moment, the Reader may eaſily diſcover and correct: The greater are theſe that follow, viz.

ERRATA.

PReface, p. 2. l. 24. dele yet. p. 8. l. 25. r. laborious. p. 16. l. 14. for the r. three. Introduction, p. 15. l. 14. for Seventy r. Fifty. Hiſtory, p. 24. l. 21. for Welſh r. of Wales. p. 26. l. 14. r. de Caudrſis. p. 28. l. 15. r. de Caudrſis. p. 33. l. 16. after Council r. Parliament. p. 37. l. 4. r. Llampadarn. p. 45. l. 9. dele who. p. 52. l. 33. for kept r. paid. p. 80. l. 41. for the ſame time r. two Months before. p. 81. l. 34. for Summer r. Spring. p. 115. l. penult. for Suffolk r. Hereford. p. 132. in the Margin, after Rot. Clauſ. r. 27 Ed. I. p. 145. in the Margin, r. Rot. Clauſ. 28 Ed. I. p. 146. l. 2. for Parliament r. Council. p. 143. l. 30. for Introduction r. Appendix. ib. l. 33. after Appendix r. p. 214, 215. p. p. 147. l. 30. after Appendix r. p. 137. p. 157. l. 10. after John r. de. p. 160. l. 18. after Story r. though p. 268. l. 15. for Walter de Merton r. William de Melton. p. 311. l. 30. in r. to. p. 319. l. 2. r. Ponthieu. ib. l. 3. r. Edmund. p. 342. l. 8. r. retreated. p. 360. l. 15. for by r. of. p. 364. l. 11. grant r. agree. p. 366. l. 34. r. Edmund. p. 371. l. 22. dele then. p. 376. l. 21. after defence, add, then the Engliſh Lords. p. 395. l. 39. r. of Lancaſter. p. 411. l. 4. r. Barbenoir. p. 423. l. 1. r. ſeeing, dele fore. p. 427. l. 20. Continue r. raiſe. p. 428. l. 5. r. Ewer. p. 438. l. 4. after Gaunt r. not. p. 458. l. penult. r. Gory le Foreſt. p. 432. l. 21. r. Amado. p. 487. l. 11. r. Montſegur. p. 491. l. 18. for John r. William. p. 537. l. 39. r. Strathern. p. 586. l. 39. r. Wight. p. 616. l. 38. r. an. p. 651. l. 27. after John, add, Earl of Richmond. p. 679. l. 32. after March, r. A. D. 1369. p. 686. l. 37. r. Maſter. p. 706. l. 4. r. Charney. ib. l. 48. dele and. p. 739. l. 5. dele his. p. 742. l. 29. after Gariſon r. in the Caſtle. ib. l. 30. r. Army was. P. 745. l. 4. Nephew r. Father. p. 840. l. 14. r. Haullie. p. 851. l. 10, 11. r. Marches. p. 853. l. 19. after Duke r. promis'd to. ib. l. 20. r. March. p. 854. l. 22. r. Elder. p. 856. l. 12. for Sixty r. Six. p. 903. l. 11. for Earl of Suffolk r. Biſhop of Durham. p. 904. l. 43. many r. manly. p. 949. l. to r. by. p. 998. l. 42. deplorate r. deſperate.

THE PREFACE.

I Shall perſue the ſame Method in this, as I did in my former Preface; which is, in the Firſt Place, To give ſome Account, together with a ſhort Character, of the Principal Authors, as well in Print as Manuſcripts, from whence the enſuing Hiſtory hath been collected.

This Volume commences with the Reign of King Edward I. which is indeed a Noble and Glorious One; and it is great pitty that ſome able Pen of his own Age had not undertaken the Writing of it in a Work deſign'd for that purpoſe: Yet, ſince that Task was never hitherto perform'd as it ought to have been, I have taken ſome Pains to collect the moſt memorable Actions of his Reign, not only from Printed, but Manuſcript Authors, who lived in or about that time, and which have hitherto lain hid in the Libraries of private Gentlemen, or elſe in thoſe of the Univerſities, or ſome particular Colleges there.

As for Printed Authors, I have drawn the Main Strokes of the Reign abovemention'd, from Matt. Weſtminſter, his Flores Hiſtoriarum, who continued that Work to the end of this King's Reign, as well as from the divers Manuſcript Chronicles, not only of his own Abbey, but thoſe of Norwich and Rocheſter, now in the Cottonian Library, that noble Repoſitory of our Engliſh Antiquities.

To him I muſt, in the next Place, add Thomas of Walſingham, a Monk of St. Albans; who, tho' he took upon him to continue Matt. of Weſtminſter's Deſign, yet nevertheleſs begins his Work with the Reign of Edward I. and hath thereto added a great many memorable Paſſages, that the former had omitted, which he might very well do, having not only the Aſſiſtance of the Antient Annals of his own Abbey, (that ſtill preſerved in the Library of Bennet-College in Cambridge) but alſo of the Chronicles of Nicholas Trivet, and Adam Murimuthe, and others: Tho' I cannot omit here taking notice, that this Author, in the very firſt Page of his Hiſtory, places the Death of King Henry the Third in the Year 1273. whereas indeed it was in 1272. and he has by that means made King Edward not to have began his Reign till 1274. in which he not only differs from Matt. Weſtminſter, but alſo from himſelf, One whole Year, as appears by his Ypodigma Neuſtriæ, where he makes that King's Reign to have began, A. D. 127$^{2}_{3}$. as it indeed did.

After theſe, I cannot omit the Chronicle of Thomas Wikes, as alſo the Annals of Waverly and Worceſter, which I have alſo made uſe of in the laſt Volume, together with the Elaborate Collections of Henry de Knyghton, which he ſtiles Ymagines Hiſtoriarum: Who, tho' he flouriſhed under Richard the Second, yet had no doubt the peruſal of many choice Manuſcripts more than he cites in his Margin. I have made but little uſe of Ranulph Higden's Polychronicon, unleſs it were to Adjuſt the exact Time of ſome Action, which by the various Reports of other Writers was rendred dubious and uncertain, this Author being accounted the moſt exact and diligent in point of Time of any that have undertaken to write our Engliſh Annals; yet he was never ~~yet~~ publiſhed entirely in Latin, tho' he was Tranſlated into Engliſh as far as the Year 1301. by John Treviſa, a Secular Prieſt, Rector of Berklay in Gloceſterſhire, and Chaplain to the Lord of that Name, to whom he Dedicated that Work; and this I take to be the firſt Hiſtory that we have in the Engliſh Tongue, at leaſt in Proſe; for as to the Manuſcript Hiſtory of Robert of Glouceſter, written in Rhime, it does not ſeem by the Stile of it to be more Antient than the Reign of Edward II. or beginning of Edward III. at furtheſt.

Having done with the Printed Hiſtorians, I ſhall now proceed to thoſe in Manuſcript: In the Firſt Place, I cannot but take notice of an Anonimous Chronicle in the Cottonian Library, written in a very bad, but yet no very antient Character. This is falſly aſcribed to Walter of Coventry, but with whom it does not at all agree, as to what he writes concerning the Reign of Henry the Third: Nor could he write the Hiſtory of his Son, ſince he Died about the middle of his Father's Reign, as I have obſerved in the Preface to my laſt Volume: However, I have made uſe of this Author, as to ſeveral Paſſages either wholly [illegible]itted, or leſs exactly related, by other Hiſtorians.

I have likewiſe Extracted ſome Matters of Moment concerning Edward the Firſt and Second, from John of London, a Monk of Weſtminſter, his Manuſcript Chronicle, and in particular that Noble Character he gives of the firſt of theſe Princes; And I had borrowed more from him, had not Matt. of Weſtminſter prevented me, by Tranſcribing many Paſſages from him almoſt word for word.

I have alſo made ſome Uſe of John of Everſden's Series Temporum: He was a Monk of St. Edmunds-Bury, and Cellarer of that Monaſtery: He begins his Chronicle from Adam, and brings it down as far as the Year 1300, being the 28th of Edward the Firſt; but is very faulty and careleſs in point of Time, and other Circumſtances: Both theſe laſt mention'd are preſerved in the Library of the Heralds Office, and were formerly the Lord Howard's of Naworth.

I have been alſo beholding, for ſome choice Tranſactions, to a Manuſcript Chronicle formerly belonging to the Abbey of St. Alban's, written by a Monk of that Monaſtery, at the particular Inſtance of John the Abbot, in the time of Edward the Firſt: It begins Ann. Dom. 1200. and ends 1300. being the ſame Year that Everſden concludes his Hiſtory. This Chronicle is extant in the Cottonian Library, as is alſo another of the Abbey of Rocheſter, which ends imperfectly with the Year of our Lord 1306. Out of this Matt. of Weſtminſter hath alſo taken a great deal, as I have done ſome Things which he has omitted.

I have Collected (as is aboveſaid) ſome Paſſages from Nich. Trivet, a Dominican Fryar, who flouriſhed under King Edward the Third, and begun his Chronicle Ann. Dom. 1303. and wrote moſt of it from his own Knowledge, as far as the Twenty firſt Year of Edward the Firſt, from which it is continued by another Hand to the Year 1318. being the Twelfth of Edward the Second.

I have been beholding likewiſe to Adam Murimuthe's Chronicle, (who was a Learned Canon of St. Paul's) and firſt wrote to the Year 1303. and then continued his Chronicle down as low as to the Year 1342. being the Sixteenth of Edward the Third, and is very exact for the Time it treats of: The moſt perfect Copy of which is preſerved in the Library of Trinity-College in Cambridge; and there is alſo another in St. Mary Magdelen's College, Oxon.

To theſe I muſt likewiſe add Walter Hemingford's Chronicle; the firſt part of which, as far as the ~~the~~ beginning of the Reign of Edward the Firſt, is Printed in the laſt Volume of our Engliſh Hiſtorians, Publiſhed by the learned Dr. Gale late deceaſed; but the ſecond part which contains the Reigns of Edward the Firſt and Second, with great part of that of Edward the Third, is not yet Publiſhed, but remains ſtill in Manuſcript, in the Library of Trinity-College in Cambridge, where I had the favour to peruſe it, and have added ſome things from thence into the Reign's of Edward the Firſt and Third.

But the moſt conſiderable Aſſiſtance I have had, eſpecially concerning the Wars of King Edward the Firſt in Wales and other Places, hath been from an Anonimous Chronicle in the Bodleian Library, the Original of which is in a moſt elegant Character, which once belonged to the Abbey of Abingdon, and is ſtill preſerved in the Publick Library of the Univerſity of Cambridge: I ſhall ſay no more of this Author, but that I find Walter Hemingford abovementioned, and Henry de Knyghton, to have Tranſcribed ſeveral of the moſt conſiderable Paſſages into their Reſpective Hiſtories, though according to the Manner of the Monks of that time, they have not thought fit to cite it.

To this Collection I muſt add another Anonimous Chronicle in the Bodleian Library, often quoted by Sir William Dugdale in his Baronage of England, by the Name of the Chronicle of Eveſham; but ſince I find the very ſame, or much the like Chronicle in the Cottonian Library under the Title of The Chronicle of Glaſtenbury, which has moſt the ſame things word for word, I cannot tell to which of them to aſcribe it; for they have both of them inſerted divers Tranſa~~n~~ctions and Relations which particularly concern each of thoſe Monaſteries: I ſhall therefore here ſay no more of it, but that I have extracted ſome paſſages from thence, not elſewhere to be found.

uo

Nor have I left ſome Biſhops Regiſters unſearched; having been beholding for the Relation of the great Tranſaction between King Edward the Firſt and Llewellyn the laſt Prince of Wales, to Archbiſhop Peckham's Regiſter, from whence it was Tranſlated into Engliſh by Dr. Powell, who inſerted it into his Hiſtory of Wales, and is now Printed from the Original in the Second Volume of Sir Henry Spelman's Britiſh Councils.

I have alſo made uſe of ſome other Manuſcript Chronicles in the Cottonian and other Libraries; but ſince the Paſſages I have borrowed from them are but few, I have not thought it worth my while particularly to mention them in this place, but refer the Reader to the Catalogue before the enſuing Volume: But though that antient Manuſcript Book belonging to the City of London (which I have ſo often cited in my laſt Volume) go no farther then the Reign of Henry the Third, yet I have there found ſome few conſiderable Paſſages inſerted relating to the Reigns of Edward the Firſt, and Edward the Second, which I have put in their proper places; but as for the Scotiſh and Northern Affairs in the latter end of the firſt of the Kings laſt mentioned, and during the whole Reign of the latter, I have been beholding to the Manuſcript Chronicle of the Abbey of Lanercoſt in Cumberland, which contains ſo exact an Account of our Engliſh Affairs, eſpecially in all things relating to Scotland, that one may admire how thoſe Monks that lived in ſo remote a Corner of England, ſhould come to that nice and particular Information of moſt Civil and Military Tranſactions. This is alſo preſerved in the ſame Library, and it is pity that that part of it at leaſt had not been Publiſhed in the ſame Volume with the X. Scriptores.

In Writing the Reign of Edward the Second, beſides the Printed Authors made uſe of for his Father's Reign, and continued to this, I have taken divers Paſſages from Sir Thomas Delamore's Hiſtory of this King, who hath given us an Account of ſeveral Particulars omitted by others, though having been a Servant to Him, he is not to be credited in all he relates, eſpecially when he oppoſes the contrary Teſtimonies of other Writers of much better Credit; and indeed he ſhews himſelf ſo partial to this King's Perſon and Cauſe, that he plainly diſcovers he is not to be relied on as a juſt and Impartial Writer; I have alſo borrowed ſome particular Paſſages in this Reign from the ſhort Manuſcript Annals of John Trocklow, a Monk of St. Alban's, a very exact and diligent Writer, as far as he undertook the Hiſtory of our Affairs, which he ends with the Death of this Prince.

For the Reign of Edward the Third, I confeſs I have had greater Helps than for any of the former; ſince beſides the Printed and Manuſcript Authors already mentioned, of which ſome of them carry on the Hiſtory as far as the beginning or middle of this King's Reign, I have extracted divers conſiderable things in both Reigns, from a Manuſcript Hiſtory of one Le Grey, which he calls by the Name of Scalæ Chronicon, i. e. the Chronicle of the Ladder; and the reaſon why he ſays he gave it this Title, was, becauſe he had, from the ſeveral Authors which he made uſe of, aſcended (as it were) by ſo many Rounds, from his own, to the Knowledge of more antient Times. It appears by his Book, that he was taken Priſoner in an Expedition againſt the Scots, and finiſhed it in the Caſtle of Edinburgh. There is but one Copy of this Manuſcript extant (that I know of) and that is in the Library of Bennet's Colledge in Cambridge, where I had the favour of the Peruſal of it.

I have alſo taken many things from the Manuſcript Hiſtory of Robert Avesbury, Regiſter of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Court, a conſiderable Writer of that Age, who is very exact in his Account of this King's Actions beyond Sea, as having taken them from ſeveral Original Letters of Perſons of Note, who were then preſent with him, ſeveral of which he hath given us at large; and indeed it had been very conducing to the Writing of a perfect Hiſtory of this King's Reign, if he had continued his Labours; but he is ſo far from that, that whether he was prevented by Death, or hindered by ſome other occaſions, he leaves off Writing about the Twenty ninth Year of this King, viz. Anno Dom. 1355. when he had recovered Berwick, which had not long before been taken by the Scots.

I have likewiſe borrowed ſeveral conſiderable Paſſages relating to this King's Reign, from a fair and antient Manuſcript Chronicle in French, preſerved in the Archives of the City of London, under the Cuſtody of the Worthy Henry Aſhurſt Eſq; their preſent Town Clerk, which ſeems to be written by a Monk of the Abbey of St. Denis near Paris: But though he is very partial to his own Nation, yet he hath ſeveral Memorials which are not to be met withal elſewhere, particularly concerning the Treaty of Bretagne, beſides others that are not reported with that exactneſs in the Printed Hiſtorians. This Author ends his Hiſtory with the Reign of Charles VII.

As for King Edward the Third's Actions abroad, I confeſs my ſelf to have been cheifly beholding to the French Hiſtory of John Froiſſard, who by his frequenting the Courts of the Princes of that time, and his Acquaintance with divers great Men, and Principal Commanders, both of the French and Engliſh Nations, during thoſe long and Bloody Wars between them, could not but be very well informed of moſt of the Chief Actions and Succeſſes that happened on either ſide in France, Flanders and other Places; yet one great Fault of his Hiſtory is, that it is very tedious in the Relations, and ſtuffed with many unneceſſary Circumſtances, as Dialogues and Speeches delivered in an ordinary and familiar Stile; which plainly ſhews his Memoirs were not borrowed out of Books, but from the particular Relations of the Parties concerned: But I have abridged what I have taken out of him into as narrow a Compaſs as I could; but how great ſo ever the Credit of this Author may be, in Reſpect to Foreign Affairs, I cannot allow him the like as to thoſe of England, concerning which he often received very falſe or imperfect Informations, for I will not lay it to his charge, that he himſelf invented thoſe Stories; ſuch as are the taking and burning of Durham by David King of Scots, which is contrary to the Teſtimony of all our Hiſtorians and Annals in Print and Manuſcript, who agree that the King never approached nearer the City laſt mentioned, than Nevil's Croſs, where that Battel was fought; and whereas he ſuppoſes Queen Philippe to have been perſonally preſent at this Battel, and to have encouraged the Soldiers to Fight, I do not find it related by any of our Engliſh Hiſtorians, who ſpeak of the Archbiſhop of York, and the Lord Piercy and Nevil, as the ſole Commanders at that Battel, without one word of the Queen's being there, or ſo much as of her going down into thoſe Parts; which if true, ſure ſo memorable a Circumſtance could have hardly been omitted by thoſe that Writ the Hiſtory of thoſe times. To theſe I may likewiſe add that Romantick Expedition of King Edward againſt the Scots, for the Relief of the Caſtle of Weark, and the Counteſs of Salisbury who was therein beſieged by the Scots, whom this Author makes to have been ſet free by the King, and that he then fell in love with her, when indeed ſhe was not there at all; and if it were any one of that name, it muſt have been the Counteſs Dowager her Mother in Law, as I have obſerved in the enſuing Hiſtory: Nor can

I find, either by our own or the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, that either King David invaded England, or that King Edward made any Expedition into the North that Year; and whoever will carefully peruſe this Author, may obſerve a Romantick Humour of Love and Honour running through all his Hiſtory; ſo that there is ſcarce an Action performed by a young Commander, in which his Miſtreſs is not ſome way or other concerned; therefore although I have for the Reader's Entertainment ſet down thoſe falſe or at leaſt ſuſpicious Relations, yet I ſhall leave it to their Judgment how far they will give Credit to them; and I have thought fit to give you theſe Advertiſements concerning this Author, ſince they may be of ſome uſe, and have never been taken notice of before by any other Writer that I know of. But before I leave him, this muſt be acknowledged for his Honour, that his Hiſtory was of that Reputation above 200 Years ago, that Sir Henry Boucher, Lord Barners, a Learned Baron, undertook to tranſlate it into Engliſh in the beginning of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, by the particular Command of that Prince; and it is ſtill extant in the old Print of that time, being the firſt Work of that kind that was performed in Engliſh by a Perſon of his Quality.

To conclude with Parliamentary and other Civil Affairs, I have for thoſe chiefly made uſe of the Records in the Tower, by the Favour of my worthy Friend William Petyt Eſq; the faithful Keeper of, as well as Diligent and Labourous Collector from them; though I could not begin more early then the 3d Year of Edward the Third, becauſe no Proceedings in Parliament are extant on the Rolls before that time; however the Writs of Summons to all Parliaments, from the 23d of Edward the Firſt, down as low as the Reign of Henry the Seventh, are found moſt commonly entered on the back of the cloſe Rolls; and their Authority, whenever I had Occaſion, I have made uſe of; but as for the Account of moſt Parliamentary Proceedings related in this Volume, I muſt own my ſelf beholden to Dr. Brady's diligent Collection of them in the laſt Volume of his Hiſtory, as alſo from the Rolls of Scotland, France, Gaſcoigne, Rome and Almayne, concerning ſeveral Tranſactions of great moment, though I have examined many of them my ſelf, when I doubted any thing to differ from the Original.

Nor have I tyed my ſelf up to his Tranſlation, but have often varied from it, when I thought it for the better; and added ſome conſiderable paſſages, which he had omitted, and reſtored others to their due Order, where I found them miſplaced.

I have alſo corrected ſeveral Errors, and made ſome Additions from the Records themſelves to that Abridgment of them, which goes under the Name of Sir Robert Cotton, though erroneouſly through Mr. Prynn's Miſtake, who finding it among the Manuſcripts of that learned Antiquary ſuppoſed it to be of his compoſing, whereas if he had ever ſeen the Original Manuſcript of that laborious Collection now in the Herald's Office, he would have found by a Memorandum in the very firſt Page of it, under the hand of Mr. Robert Bowyer, that it was made by his Father, Keeper of the Tower Records in the latter end of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and beginning of King James the Firſt, and what was wanting in it, viz. the Abridgment of the Rolls of Parliament of the 21ſt and 46th of Edward the Third, the 8th of Henry the Fifth, and 20th of Henry the Sixth, were ſupplied by William Bowyer, the Son and Succeſſor of Robert in the ſame Office, as appears by a Certificate under the hand of this William; and that Sir Robert Cotton's Copy was from an Imperfect one of this Robert Bowyer's, appears by its wanting the Abridgment of thoſe Rolls abovemention'd. This I thought fit to mention, for the Information of the Curious Reader; but I ſhall now proceed to the further Account of the Manuſcripts, from whence I have digreſſed.

And as for Leagues and Agreements, with ſome other great Tranſactions, between ſome of the Kings, whoſe Reigns I now write, and thoſe of France, I have been beholding to the Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus of Mounſieur Leibnitz; with the Mantiſſa, or Second part to it, for ſome rare Charters and Inſtruments, which I have not met with elſewhere.

I am alſo beholding for ſome conſiderable Tranſactions to the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, eſpecially John of Tinmuthe's Hiſtoria Aurea, who among a great many fabulous Relations, often intermixes very conſiderable Paſſages relating to Civil Hiſtory; and I have in the beginning of the Reign of Edward the Third extracted an Account of that great Riot and Aſſault, made by the Mayor and Townſmen of St. Edmundſbury, upon the Abbots and Monks of that Monaſtery, out of an Antient Leiger Book that belonged to that Abbey, and from whence I ſuppoſe Hollingſhed hath inſerted it into his Hiſtory, though I have made it much ſhorter in mine, as you will find in the beginning of this King's Reign laſt mention'd: But as for the Letters and Tranſactions between ſeveral Popes and this Prince, during the Wars between France and England, they are moſtly taken from Odoricus Raynoldus's Continuation of the Annals of Cardinal Baronius; and indeed that Author having had acceſs to the Pope's Archives, hath given us ſeveral choice Letters, not to be met withal elſewhere; ſome of which I have inſerted, That ſo the Reader may obſerve, how partial thoſe Popes of the French Nation, and (who commonly reſided at Avignon*) then were to the intereſt of the* French King, whoſe Subjects they had been.

And indeed I muſt acknowledge my ſelf very much obliged to the Voluminous and Elaborate Hiſtory of this King, written by the Learned Mr. Joſhua Barnes, late Fellow of Emanuel College in the Univerſity of Cambridge; who hath, out of a great number of Authors, collected all that ~~ever almoſt~~ can be found relating to this King's Life and Actions, or of thoſe of the Great Men either Biſhops or Laymen that lived in his time; and I confeſs, I have borrowed from thence a great many Paſſages, eſpecially of Foreign Authors, not commonly known in England, ſuch as are the Italian Hiſtories, of both the Villani's, whereof John was the Uncle, and Matthew the Nephew, who continued the Hiſtory that the former had began; yet I have not followed Mr. Barnes as a Plagiary, in blindly Tranſcribing whatever I found in him for my purpoſe, but by comparing his Quotations from the Authors from whence they were taken, and by Abridging the length of his Relations, eſpecially as to Sieges and Battles, have made them in a manner my own: Nor do I always approve of the Authors he makes uſe of, particularly of an Engliſh Manuſcript Chronicle in Bennet-College Library, which contains a ſhort Hiſtory of the Kings of England, down to the Reign of Edward the Fourth; yet as it is of no great Antiquity, ſo it is ſtuffed with a great many falſe and futilous Relations, very different and often contradictory to the Accounts of our beſt and moſt credible Writers. However I confeſs I have taken from this, or rather from Caxton's Chronicle, (who hath tranſcribed a great deal from him almoſt verbatim*) ſome Paſſages which not being to be found elſewhere, may ſerve to* illuſtrate this Hiſtory, and being very probable, may deſerve our Notice. I have nothing more to obſerve concerning this Manuſcript, but only that I find it for the moſt part tranſcribed from another more Antient one, written in the French Tongue about the time of Richard the Second, or Henry the Fourth, and is to be ſeen in the Cottonian Library. To conclude this Head, I hope the Learned Author abovementioned will pardon me, if I have taken upon me to differ from him in the Account he gives of ſome Actions, and the Cauſes of them, as alſo as to the time when they were performed, which I have ſometimes corrected according to Walſingham's Account, who begins the Year at Chriſtmaſs-day.

In the writing of the Reign of Richard the Second, as I have been overwhelm'd with Authors in that of his Grand-father, ſo I find a great Deficiency of good Writers, eſpecially Manuſcripts, concerning this King's Life and Actions; therefore I have been moſt beholding to Henry Knyghton and Thomas Walſingham: Yet I cannot but obſerve, That the only Copy I know of extant, of the former Author in the Cottonian Library being imperfect, ends at the 18*th Year of his Reign; but that it is very likely he wrote the Hiſtory of the other Three Years, appears by this, That at the end of the* Manuſcript Copy abovementioned, there is ſtill extant the Articles of the Parliament againſt Richard the Second, the manner of his Reſignation and Depoſition, and the Form of their renouncing their Homages to Him; which being faithfully tranſlated, you will find inſerted at the end of this King's Reign.

But indeed Thomas Walſingham, hath been ſo very large and particular in his Relation of this King's Life and Actions, that he hath made ſome amends for the want of other Authors; and though he lived and wrote ſome Years after this King's time, yet he had very good Authorities for what he related, for there is ſtill preſerved in the Library of Bennet-College in Cambridge a large Leiger Book, that once belonged to St. Alban's-Abbey, of which our Author was a Monk, wherein among divers particulars relating to that Monaſtery, there is alſo intermixed (by way of Annals) a great deal of Civil Hiſtory, eſpecially relating to the Reign of this Prince, and from whence I find our Author to have bor- rowed moſt of his matter, though he had digeſted it into a much better Stile and Order.

There is likewiſe preſerved in the Bodleian Library a Manuſcript Copy of this Author's Chronicle, which as it wants divers things that are found in the Printed Editions of it, D contains ſo ~~that~~ alſo ~~has~~ ſome Paſſages, particularly relating to the Affairs of the Church, which are not in the Prints, and ſeem to have been added by ſome Monk of the Abbey laſt mention'd, who tranſcribed it: Some of which I have made uſe of in the enſuing Hiſtory.

I have likewiſe in this Reign, for want of more antient Writers, taken ſome Paſſages out of Fabian's Chronicle, chiefly relating to that King's ſevere dealing with the City of London; for he being a Citizen was moſt likely to underſtand the truth of thoſe Tranſactions: I have alſo borrowed ſome few things from Polydore Vergil's Hiſtory of this King's Reign, with reference to the Grounds and Reaſons of the King's great hatred to the Duke of Glocester and Earl of Arundel, and which I ſuppoſe he found in ſome Manuſcript Hiſtory of that time, that is either now loſt, or elſe carried by him away into Italy.

But as for Manuſcript Authors, I have found but very few concerning this King's Reign, from which I could extract any thing that might give greater light to it; Two in the Lambeth Library, One whereof contains certain Annals which begin with the latter end of Edward the Third, and proceed to the very end of Richard the Second; but moſt of the ſame things being related more exactly by Walſingham and others, I only collected ſome Paſſages here and there, which had been omitted by them.

The next I met with in the ſame Place, is an exact Account from a nameleſs French Gentleman, that came over by the leave of the King of France to attend King Richard in his laſt Expedition into Ireland, and upon the News of the arrival ~~Land~~ing of the Duke of Lancaſter, and his ſtrange Succeſs, return'd with that King ~~Him~~ into England, and Landing in Wales, was preſent at all the Meſſages and Tranſactions that paſſed between that Prince the Duke of Lancaſter, ~~and King Richard,~~ whilſt He remain'd at Conway Caſtle, and alſo at his being carried to that of Flynt, with the manner of the meeting of the King and Duke at that Place, and what paſſed between them at that fatal fatal Interview; as alſo how this King was conveyed to Cheſter, and from thence to London as a Priſoner; all the particular Circumſtances of which, not being ſo exactly related by any other Writer, as I find they are in his Manuſcript, partly in Proſe, and partly in pitiful Rhime, I have tranſlated from the French Original, as you may find near the end of this Volume. +

And ſince I have now given you the Account I deſign'd concerning the Authors from whom I have collected this Work, I ſhall beg leave to ſay ſomewhat of the undertaking it ſelf, in the drawing up of which, I have not to my knowledge omitted any Action, either Civil or Military worth mentioning, tho I confeſs I have done as much as I could to avoid the inſerting of any unneceſſary Matters or Circumſtances, eſpecially in the Relations of Sieges and Battels, becauſe I thought they would not prove very inſtructive to the Gentlemen of the Sword; War being an Art to be chiefly learn'd by Action and Experience, rather than by Books; but I hope none of my Readers will take it amiſs, that I have been ſo particular in the Relation of Parliamentary Affairs, from the Rolls in the Tower; ſince beſides the uſefulneſs of this kind of Learning, I would not fall ſhort of Dr Brady's Performance in this way, ſuppoſing a competent knowledge of them to be very neceſſary for our Young Nobility and Gentry, who have or ſhall have Places in either Houſe of Parliament; and I have moreover for their Uſe, and for the Satisfaction of the Students of our Common-Law, or ſuch Noblemen and Gentlemen and others that ſhall peruſe this Hiſtory, inſerted (at the end of each King's Reign) a brief Abſtract of the Statutes or Acts of Parliament now in force, and ſome of them obſolete, that were made in their Reigns, containing the Chief Heads of thoſe that are of greater Moment, and moſt neceſſary to be known; by which means the Reader will have a clear view before him of the Riſe, Progreſs and Alteration of our Statute Laws, which were at firſt but few and ſhort, though now they are riſen to ſuch an immeaſurable Bulk of a great many unneceſſary and obſolete Statutes, that I know nothing that the Wiſdom of the State could better employ it ſelf about, than in appointing ſome of the Learned Profeſſors of the Law to reduce that vaſt Volume into a leſſer Compaſs, by throwing aſide thoſe Laws, that are now become unneceſſary, ~~and obſolete~~, and by Abridging thoſe that are in force and deſerve to be continued, and bringing them under certain Heads after the method of Juſtinian's Inſtitutions. But to ſay no more of this great Deſign, which I can rather wiſh for, than expect to ſee done in my time, I have likewiſe (to give you as perfect a Hiſtory of our Laws as I could) tranſcribed, from the late Lord Chief Juſtice Hales's Manuſcript Annalyſis of the Laws of England, certain Learned and Judicious Obſervations he hath made upon the Laws and Statutes of each King, eſpecially ſuch as have alter'd or amended the former Courſe of the Common-Law, either in Point of Proceſs, or of the Law it ſelf. All which taken together, may, I hope, give the Reader ſuch an Account of our Common and Statute Laws, as the Learned Lord Bacon propoſes as neceſſary to a Compleat Hiſtory of England, or at leaſt may come ſomewhat near that excellent Model laid down by that great Perſon.

And that I may render this Work ~~still~~ the more uſeful to all ſorts of Readers, I have further for the Benefit of thoſe, whether Divines or others, that delight in Church-Hiſtory, given a brief Account of the chief Eccleſiaſtical Matters in each King's Reign, eſpecially ſuch as relate to Synods and Convocations, and the Diſputes between the King and the Pope or Clergy: And ſince the Riſe and Progreſs of New Doctrines and Opinions in Religions is very neceſſary to be known, and not unpleaſant to be read, I have alſo added a brief Hiſtory of Dr. John Wickliff and his Tenets, which were much the ſame with thoſe of John Huſſe and Hierome of Prague in Bohemia, and ſeem to be derived from the antient Albigenſes, who have continued ſo many Ages in the South of France, and in the Mountains of Savoy and Piedmont, until they were lately likewise expell'd their Country by a cruel and unjuſt Perſecution.

But I cannot deny, That after Wickliff's Death, if not before, divers of thoſe that pretended to be his Followers, broached ſeveral extravagant and unorthodox Opinions, which are much the ſame with thoſe of the Quakers and other Sectaries of our times, as you will find by their Doctrines and Tenets at the end of this Volume: And here I muſt own my ſelf beholding to Dr. Brady's diligent and elaborate Collections of theſe Matters, which I have tranſcribed, with the Addition of ſome particular Obſervations of my own, eſpecially from a Manuſcript Copy, or rather Abridgment of Thomas Walſingham, ſingham, done by ſome Monk of the ſame Monaſtery, who hath inſerted ſome things concerning the Opinions and Demands of Wickliff's Followers in Parliament, which are not to be found in^that Author.

^the printed Copies of

Before I conclude this Preface, I ſhall anſwer what I am ſenſible may be objected againſt this Performance, viz. That ſince Dr. Brady hath wrote a Compleat Hiſtory of theſe Four Kings, to what purpoſe was it, that I took upon me to do the ſame? To which I reply, That had his Work fully anſwered the Title it bears, I had not put my ſelf to the trouble to write, or the Reader to peruſe the enſuing Collections; for I muſt needs ſay (and ſhould have done the ſame were the Learned Doctor now living) that his Second Volume much leſs deſerves the Name of a Compleat Hiſtory than the former, ſince it omits a great many conſiderable Actions both Civil and Military, eſpecially in the Reigns of King Edward the Third, and Richard the Second, of whoſe Perſonal failings and Errors in Government, by breaking in upon the Privileges both of the Nobility and People, he hath given us a very partial and imperfect Relation; ſo that indeed one would believe that the chief Intent of the Writing of thoſe Reigns, was, to juſtify the illegal Proceedings of thoſe Princes, or elſe to tack together the Collection he had made of Parliamentory Records, by intermixing here and there ſome Paſſages from the Hiſtorians of thoſe times, yet omitting a great many others altogether as conſiderable, and fit to be known; for the truth of which cenſure, I deſire the Reader to compare the Doctor's Hiſtory with the Printed or Manuſcript Writers of the Reigns of thoſe Four Kings he has undertaken to write of, or if that be too great a trouble, he may compare it with what I have Writ in the enſuing Volume; and though I freely acknowledge, That the Records ſtill extant on the Patent-Clauſe and Parliament Rolls, may be of great uſe, not only to give light to many Paſſages in our Printed Hiſtorians, but alſo^to correct divers Errors, eſpecially in the Account of Parliamentary Affairs, they have fallen into ~~by conſulting them~~; yet that a Compleat Hiſtory of England can ever be wrote from Records, I believe no Man that underſtands any thing of it, as he ſhould do, will be ſo bold as to Affirm.

^by consulting them

^yet these were a line higher

I ſhall now conclude this Preface with ſome Obſervations upon the groſs Errors and wilful Miſtakes of Father d'Orleans his French Hiſtory of the Revolutions of England, ſince I perceive it hath been of late much in vogue among our young Nobility and Gentry, who are Maſters of the French Tongue, and who may have thereby received ſome Prejudices and Miſinformations concerning thoſe great Changes and Revolutions which the Neceſſity of preſerving our Common Liberties hath ſometimes produced. I ſhall begin with the Author's Firſt Volume, where, in the beginning of the Reign of Edward the Firſt, he ſays of Leolyn (as he calls him) Prince of Wales, 'That He had united in his Perſon, all 'that the Antient Brittiſh Nation poſſeſſed in the Country of three 'Wales, divided before him into ~~the~~ Petty Eſtates, ~~the one~~ e 'independant from the other, which were called according to 'their ſituation North-Wales and South-Wales, and in 'reuniting theſe Territories, He alſo reunited the hatred of 'the whole Nation againſt the Engliſh, &c.

This is a very great Miſtake; for as to South-Wales, it was ſo far from being united to North-Wales at this time, That great part of it was then under the Dominion of King Edward, either by Conqueſt, or the Submiſſion of the Princes of that Country; though ſome of them were permitted to enjoy certain ſmall Territories in thoſe Parts, but without the Title of Princes, as any one that will take the pains to peruſe Doctor Powel's Chronicle of Wales, may be eaſily ſatisfied: But as for Llewelyn's thereby reuniting the antient hatred of the Britiſh Nation againſt the Engliſh, it is ſo far from being true, That they had never lived with fewer Quarrels, than from the latter end of Henry the Third's Reign to the beginning of his Son's, when the War between Him and this Prince again broke out.

In the Relation of King Edward's undertaking the Deciſion of the Claims of the ſeveral Competitors to the Crown of Scotland, he blindly follows Hector Boethius and Buchanan, in relating that King Edward offer'd to adjudge the Crown of Scotland to Bruce, provided he would promiſe to do Him Homage for it; but he diſdaining the Crown upon ſuch baſe Terms, the King applied Himſelf to Baliol; who having more Ambition, accepted it upon thoſe Conditions: This is the Sum of his Relation; but whoever will peruſe our Hiſto-

Hiſtorians, confirm'd by that full Account which is given of it in the Rolls of Scotland, will find that all the Competitors, at King Edward's Deſire, Sign'd an Inſtrument, whereby they own'd his Sovereignty over the Kingdom of Scotland, and promiſed to ſtand to the Award He ſhould make concerning it; the Original of which under all their Seals, (even that of Robert Bruce himſelf) is ſtill preſerved in the Cottonian Library: And though this Author will have only Bruce of all the Scottiſh Nobility to have refuſed to ſubmit to Baliol, yet it is a great miſtake; for he as well as the others, own'd his Title, and was preſent at his Coronation; neither was it this Bruce, but his Son, that afterwards poſſeſſed himſelf of the Crown of Scotland.

This Author alſo under the Year 1303. in his Relation of P. 356. King Edward's Reduction of Scotland, after his vanquiſhing the Scottiſh Army, follows Boethius in that falſe Story of this King's carrying away all the Libraries and Learned Men He could light on out of that Kingdom; which ſince it is already ſufficiently confuted in the following Hiſtory, I ſhall ſay no more of it in this Place.

In the Reign of Edward the Second, there is not ſo much to be excepted againſt as in the former; only contrary to the Teſtimony of almoſt all our Hiſtorians, he will needs make P. 441. Henry Earl of Lancaſter not Brother, but Son to Thomas who was beheaded, and blames (though without any juſt Cauſe) thoſe Writers who affirm the contrary.

But the Two following Reigns will afford a more ample ſubject for our Animadverſions, when under the Year 1329 Tom. 2. p. 7. he follows Hector Boethius in making the Lord Edward Baliol, being then in Normandy, to have been excited by one Lawrence Twine, a mean Fellow (who had fled out of Scotland into France upon his being Excommunicated) to renew his Father's claim to that Kingdom; whereas the Account I have given of that Tranſaction, from ſome of our Engliſh Hiſtorians, is much more probable, ſince the Lord Beaumont, who procured Baliol's Releaſe from the King of France, and brought him privately over into England, in order to that Deſign, was much more likely to have put him upon it, hebeing more able, (together with others of the ſame Party) to give him a powerful Aſſiſtance, and alſo might prevail with King Edward the Third to eſpouſe his Quarrel, as he did not long afterwards.

P. 26. Under A. D. 1336 he follows the Errors of Froiſart, in making David King of Scots to have return'd this Year into his own Country, and then to have invaded England with a great Army, and to have taken and burnt the City of Durham, and put the Inhabitants to the Sword; and in his Return to have beſieged the Caſtle of Weark, where the young Counteſs of Salisbury then reſided; and gives the ſame Romantick Account of the raiſing of the Siege by King Edward, and of his Interview and Falling in Love with that Lady; all which being pure Invention, I have ſufficiently confuted in this Preface, to which I refer the Reader.

P. 58. Under the Year 1377, being the beginning of the Reign of Richard the Second, he not only juſtifies all the raſh and violent Proceeding of that unhappy Prince, but alſo paſſes a very ſevere and unjuſt Cenſure upon the Engliſh Hiſtorians of thoſe times in theſe Words; that whoever will but examine this King's Conduct (notwithſtanding whatſoever the Engliſh Hiſtories, always unjuſt to Kings, and ever favourable to the People, ſhall ſay to the contrary) will find that he did not at all merit his Misfortune. This, whether it were true or not, is beſt to be judged from his Actions, as they are even related by Froiſſart, his greateſt Vindicater, who in divers Places blames his unadviſed Proceedings, and his taking the Advice of young and unexperienced Councellors, rather then of thoſe who were more ſober and diſcreet; and eſpecially in his falſe and ungenerous Dealing with the Duke of Lancaſter his Coſin, whereby He gave him a juſt Pretence of doing whatever he could againſt him.

But to ſay ſomewhat in vindication of our Engliſh Hiſtorians, they are ſo far from being too ſevere to the Memory of our Kings, when they have carried themſelves like Fathers, and not as Tyrants over their People, that none can give them a higher Character, when they deſerve it; as appears by this very Author's Accounts of the Actions of Edward the Firſt, and his Grandſon Edward the Third, which are chiefly taken from our own Hiſtorians; though it muſt be confeſſed that none are more ſeverely juſt in their Characters of thoſe mean ſpirited unjuſt and Tyrannical Princes that have ſat upon the Engliſh Throne: And in both theſe they have imitated the ſincerity of Suetonius and Tacitus, with the reſt of the Roman Hiſtorians: But that ours have been more hard and unjuſt to Kings, and partial to the People, than they ought, none but thoſe of this Author's Principles will affirm, ſince the Engliſh have never been deſirous of Change, till the evil Conduct and falſe Meaſures of ſome weak and ill adviſed Princes, that have gone about to ſubvert the very Fundamentals of our Government, made them ready to lay hold on the firſt opportunity of caſting off their Yoke.

To conclude, I ſhall leave it to the impartial Reader to judge, which ſort of Writers are moſt to be commended and believed, thoſe that relate Matters of Fact truly and impartially, without ſparing the Memory of any undeſerving Prince; or elſe ſuch as are hired in a certain Country of Europe, to write Panegyricks inſtead of true Hiſtories, and to juſtifie even the Vices and Perjury of their Kings, and the cruel Oppreſſion of their Subjects, by palliating them under the ſpecious Titles of Royal Prerogatives, and the neceſſary Means for the Preſervation of their Government, and advancing the Glory of their Monarch; to bring about which, nothing is with them counted unjuſt or unlawful. Upon theſe Principles (if Princes themſelves or their Flatterers may be Judges) none ever were or can be guilty of Tyranny or Male-adminiſtration.

But to proceed, in the following Page the Author gives us a ſhort Character of King Richard the Second, in which I will except againſt nothing (ſince I did not know him) but the great Courage and Clemency with which he ſuppoſes him endued; Virtues, which none but this Author ever gave him before: For how can he be called courageous, who never ſignalized himſelf by any Noble or Warlike Action? For as for both his Expeditions into Ireland, they were made with vaſt Armies againſt an almoſt naked and divided Nation; and as for his paſſive Valour, how meanly he behaved himſelf in the Reſignation of his Crown, the Hiſtory it ſelf declares. And as for his Clemency, how that can conſiſt with putting his own Uncle to Death contrary to Law, and cutting of ſo many Noblemen, and condemning others to die for Matters done above nine Years before, and thoſe indeed neceſſary for the Preſervation of the State, and which had been already Pardon'd in Parliament; I leave to the Conſideration of the Impartial Reader. Nay, the Engliſh Nobility were ſo far from not paſſing over the Faults of his Youth, that notwithſtanding his ſetting on, and ſecretly ſupporting his Favourite the Duke of Ireland, to raiſe a new War to cruſh the oppoſite Party, yet they never laid it to the King's Charge, but again quietly ſubmitted to his Government; and after thoſe Favourites were puniſh'd that had been the Cauſe of the Quarrel, they ſuffer'd Him, when He came of Age, to put in and out what Officers and publick Miniſters He pleas'd, till He had brought all Things to the ſame Confuſion as they were before. But the true Reaſon, why this Author ſo magnifies this King's Actions, is, Becauſe He was always Averſe to a War with France, and made a Truce and Match with that Crown upon very Mean and Diſadvantageous Conditions, to buy a few Years unglorious Quiet, and that contrary to the Opinion and Advice of the Duke of Glouceſter, and the Senſe of the Nation at that time; altho' there was another Reaſon, why King Richard might be ſo fond of this Alliance with France, becauſe He hoped for Aſſiſtance from thence (as Froiſart and others expreſly relate) to free Himſelf from the Duke laſt mention'd, and to be Revenged on him and his Party, for having Baniſhed or put to Death his Minions and Favourites: And all the Hiſtorians agree, That it was from the Advice and Incitement of the Earl of St. Paul, who came Ambaſſador to the King from the Court of France, that He was firſt excited to rid Himſelf of the Duke of Glouceſter, and the Earls of Arundel and Warwick.

Ibid. 85. But to return to this Author; who blindly following Froiſart, gives a very falſe Account of the reaſon of the Duke of Glouceſter, and the reſt of the Lords of his Party, their taking up Arms, after they had been Pardon'd by the King, and had promiſed to refer all Matters in Diſpute to the next Parliament; which this Author ſuppoſes to have happen'd from the King's going down with his Favourite into Wales after the Parliament was Summon'd; and that this hindred that Duke, and the reſt of the Lords, from diſmiſſing their Forces as they had promis'd: Of which, the King being inform'd, ſent Sir Robert Treſilian (who Froiſart, and this Author, from him, falſly calls the King's Chamberlain) to London, in a Diſguiſe; and that Lodging near the Place where the Confederate Lords held their Aſſemblies, he was diſcover'd by a Servant of the Duke of Glouceſter's; who thereupon cauſed him to be Seiz'd, and put to Death, without any regard to the King, of whom he was much beloved.

But whoever will conſult Walſingham and Knyghton, and compare their Relations with the Records of Parliament, ſhall find, that this is pure Invention; For the King was in or near London during all this Tranſaction, and went not into Wales (till his Voyage into Ireland*) after he had agreed with the Confederate Lords: But the Truth is, That the Duke of* Glouceſter, and the reſt of his Party, defer'd the diſmiſſing of their Forces, till they might ſee what Courſe the Duke of Ireland and the reſt of the Favourites would take, who were now privately retired from the Court; and the next News thoſe Lords heard was, That the Duke laſt mention'd, by the King's Secret Orders, was levying an Army in Cheſhire and Wales, in order to march up to London and Subdue the Confederate Lords, and Reeſtabliſh Himſelf and His Accomplices in the Government: Upon which, the Duke of Glouceſter and the reſt of the Lords Muſtering up their Forces, marched againſt him, and put him to flight, in the manner as this Author truly enough relates: But that the King then went away with the Duke of Ireland, and ſent Treſilian as a Spy, to give an Account of the Lords Proceedings, is altogether falſe; for the King remain'd ſtill at Weſtminſter, and when He ſaw no hopes of any Succour from the Duke of Ireland's Forces, He was, after divers Delays and much Oppoſition on his part, forced at laſt to call a Parliament, as He had at firſt promiſed, and in which the Duke of Ireland and all the reſt of his Favourites were Attainted. But as for Treſilian, it appears on Record of this Parliament, that he could not be ſent by the King in a Diſguiſe to Spy out the Lord's Proceeding; but having been already Attainted in Parliament, for not appearing and anſwering to his Charge, he was taken in Diſguiſe in a Houſe near Weſtminſter-Hall; and being brought before the Lords, to ſee if he had any thing to ſay why Execution ſhould not paſs upon him according to the late Sentence; he having nothing material to alledge, was Executed accordingly: Nor do we find that the King ever interceeded for him, or indeed, uſed his Intereſt to ſave any of thoſe Offenders, except Sir Simon Burley, whom this Author makes to have been Beheaded before by the Sentence of the Duke of Glouceſter and the reſt of the Lords appointed Chief Governours of the Kingdom: But this is a great Miſtake, as I have already ſhewn; for this Gentleman was not Condemned to be put to Death until this Par-

Parliament, as the Rolls of it ſufficiently teſtifie, the ſum whereof the Reader will find in this Hiſtory.

The like Faults this Author alſo perſues in the reſt of the Relation of the King's Reign, by following the falſe Accounts of Froiſart : For this Writer, tho' he often blames King Richard's Imprudent Actions, yet accuſes the Duke of Glouceſter of divers Crimes, which after his Death were never laid to his Charge, and of which if he had been Guilty he would certainly have been Attainted in Parliament for them; whereas we find nothing of that nature laid to his Charge, being only Accuſed for having taken up Arms, with the Earls of Arundel and Warwick, to remove the Duke of Ireland, and the reſt of the King's Favourites from his Perſon, and for which he was then Murther'd in Priſon, and Attainted by Act of Parliament, as you will find in the enſuing Hiſtory; where, ſince I have given a brief Anſwer to Froiſart's Accuſations againſt this Duke, and ſhewn the great Improbability of them, I ſhall ſay no more in this Place, but refer the Reader to the Work it ſelf.

I ſhall now proceed to the latter part of this King's Reign, and ſhew you ſome other of this Author's Miſtakes, in ſo blindly following Froiſart's Authority, and deſerting our Engliſh Hiſtorians, who write with far greater Truth and Probability; tho' I cannot ſo much blame him for following Froiſart in making the Duke of Norfolk to have firſt accuſed the Duke of Hereford of Treaſon, ſince Polydore Vergil, and ſeveral others of our Engliſh Hiſtorians fall into the ſame Miſtake, which I have rectified in the enſuing Hiſtory, from Walſingham, and the Records of Parliament : But this will bear no Apology, his making King Richard never to have left the Kingdom, or gone over into Ireland at all in the laſt Year of his Reign, and yet that there ſhould be ſuch an unanimous Rebellion againſt Him, that the Eſtates of the Kingdom ſhould meet and ſend over the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the Duke of Lancaſter, then at Paris, to invite him to come over into England; which is ſo falſe and improbable a Story, that I wonder Froiſart, who was then no farther off than the hither Parts of Germany, or the Low Countries, ſhould ever come to be ſo ill-inform'd. But ſince I have ſufficiently refuted that Miſtake in the enſuing Hiſtory, I ſhall paſs it by, without ſaying any more of it, but only to obſerve, That this Author has been ſo far from avoiding the Errors committed by others, that he falls into ſeveral new Ones of his own, as appears, by his making the Chair in which the Kings of Scotland were wont to be Crown'd, and which King Edward the Firſt caus'd to be brought into England and placed in Weſtminſter-Abbey, to be different from that fatal Stone ſuppos'd to have been Jacob's Pillow, and on which the Scotiſh Kings having been antiently Crown'd, there was an old Prophecy, That it ſhould one day carry that Crown along with it wherever it was removed; whereas indeed, theſe were not two different Chairs or Seats, but one and the ſame, that Stone being only inſerted or put under the fore part of the Chair, as it is to be ſeen at this day.

I ſhall omit ſeveral other ſmaller Miſtakes, (indeed too many to be here ſet down) among which I may reckon his groſs ones in the Names of the Places and Noblemen of England, which ſufficiently expoſes his Ignorance in both; for though Froiſart, being a Stranger, might plead ſome Excuſe for it, yet this Author, pretending to Write from our own Hiſtorians, which then I ſuppoſe lay before him, and who write the Names of Men and Places moſt commonly true, cannot pretend to the ſame Excuſe.

But to pay this Writer a little in his own Coin, and to let the World ſee, that England is not the only Country of Troubles and Inſurrections, I have been the more particular in ſetting forth the great Tumults and Commotions that aroſe in the City of Paris, and adjacent Countries, among the Peaſants, ſome time after the taking of their King John Priſoner by our Edward the Black Prince; and during which the Pariſians taking part with the King of Navarre, were very like to have ſet the Houſe of Valois aſide, and to have placed him on the Throne, had it not been out of Fear, leaſt his Competitor King Edward ſhould have taken the Advantage from their Civil Diſſentions, to have reduced France wholy under his Obedience. To conclude, I ſhall defer my farther Obſervations upon this florid, tho' careleſs Writer, till the next Volume; and then I will do the like for the reſt of thoſe King's Reigns I deſign to write, if God ſhall pleaſe to grant me Life and Health for ſo Laborious an Undertaking.

I ſhall conclude this Preface with a few Words, more concerning the length of this Third Volume; for I doubt the Reader at firſt ſight may think it too prolix, eſpecially in the two laſt Kings therein compriſed; but I could not well make it ſhorter, without doing Injury to the Work it ſelf; for, in Writing a juſt Hiſtory of this Kingdom, I would not omit the inſerting the moſt conſiderable Tranſactions of each Parliament from the Rolls themſelves, as far as they are extant; and alſo at the end of every Reign to give an Abridgment of the chief Statutes that were then Enacted, and which are ſtill in Force; and in doing theſe Things (which I hope I have done) as they ought to be, tho' the Work be ſomewhat longer, yet the Candid Reader will more eaſily excuſe it, ſince it is impoſſible otherwiſe to give an Account of Affairs moſt neceſſary to be exactly known and tranſmitted to Poſterity.

However, To ſatisfie thoſe whoſe conſtant Employments in their reſpective Profeſſions will not afford them leiſure to read over bulky Volumes, as well as others whoſe Natural Tempers render them averſe to it, I intend (if God ſpare me life) to Epitomize thoſe I have Written, or ſhall Write hereafter, into as ſmall a compaſs as the Subject will bear without doing Injury to the Matters to be therein related; and I hope it will prove ſuch a one as may bear the Tranſlating into Latin, or any Modern Language, for the Uſe and Information of thoſe Foreigners who do not underſtand Engliſh, and have no opportunity to learn it.

THE INTRODUCTION.

THE main Deſign of my Introduction to this Volume (as well as to the former) is to acquaint the Reader with ſuch Alterations, or new Inſtitutions in the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Government of this Kingdom, as either have really been, or at leaſt by ſome are ſuppos'd to have been introduced within theſe Reigns, of which I have here given a true and faithful Hiſtory. The firſt and moſt conſiderable Change that I find alledged to have been made in the Civil Conſtitution, is the Summoning the Commons to our Parliaments under the Titles of Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes; which both Sir Henry Spelman and Mr. Pryn ſeem poſitive to have begun in the 49th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Third, though Dr. Brady will only allow them to have been Summon'd but once to a Parliament, even in this very Year, by Simon Montfort, and that too in a time of open Rebellion, when he and the Earls and Barons of his Faction had that King abſolutely in their Power, and kept his Brother the King of the Romans, and their Sons, like Priſoners, untill Prince Edward making his Eſcape, and ſetting himſelf free, joyn'd with the Earl of Gloceſter and other Barons of the Marches of Wales, by whoſe Aſſiſtance he fought that famous Battle of Eveſham, wherein Montfort and his Son were Slain, and He reſcued and reſtored to his Liberty and Government; after which the King reſolving to Act like a Conqueror, not only neglected to call the Repreſentatives of the Commons to any Parliament during his Reign, but He made the great Barons and Tenants in Capite the only Conſtituent parts of his Great Councils, wherein He enacted Laws, with ſuch others of his Privy Council as he was pleas'd to Summon: And thus the Doctor ſuppoſes it continued in his Son's Reign, only that he called ſeveral new Barons to Parliament by Writ, and again Summon'd the leſſer Tenants in Capite to appear there alſo, according to the Form of King John's Charter; which with the Biſhops, Abbots and Earls, then made up the whole Community or Body Politick of the Kingdom in Parliament. And thus he ſays it continued till the 18th Year of Edward the Firſt's Reign, when (as he further alledges) the King, at the Inſtance and Requeſt of the Earls and Barons of the Kingdom aſſembled in Parliament firſt ſummon'd the Knights of Shires, and about four Years after, the Citizens and Burgeſſes, to another Parliament at Weſtminſter; this mighty Change in the Civil Conſtitution being ſuppos'd to be brought about and ſettled in this King's Reign, with which I begin the preſent Volume.

At firſt I deſigned to have made this important Controverſy the main Subject of this Diſcourſe; but finding it hath ſwell'd to a Bulk beyond what will well conſiſt with an Introduction, I have order'd it to be Printed by it ſelf, as an Appendix to this Volume; that ſuch as deſire it ſhould be Bound up with the Book; may have it ſo if they pleaſe.

I ſhall not ſay any thing here of the Reaſons which induced me to undertake ſo laborious, and (as ſome may think) unneceſſary a Task; but will refer thoſe that deſire further Light in this matter to the Preface to that Diſcourſe, where I hope I have given a Satisfactory Account of the Reaſons that render'd this Performance, if not abſolutely neceſſary, yet at leaſt very fit and uſeful at this time.

The next Parliamentary Inſtitution (for I dare not call it a Change or Alteration, ſince it was without doubt much Elder then this King's Reign, though the Records of it are now loſt) is, that of the King's Council in Parliament, who were commonly ſummon'd thither by diſtinct Writs, entred in the Clauſe Rolls immediately after thoſe to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal. *The Perſons ſo Summon'd to be of this Council were chiefly the Kin'g Great Officers of the Crown, as the Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer, and Chancellor of the Exchequer, the two chief Juſtices, the Juſtices of King's Bench and Common Pleas, with the Barons of the Exchequer, and Juſtices in Eyre, and Itinerant, Juſtices aſſigned, the Clerks of the Council (who were then all Clergymen) as appears by their ſeveral * Writs, the firſt to be found of this kind extant on the Rolls, being the 23d of Edward the Firſt, M. 9. Dors. and is almoſt the ſame with that of the Biſhops and Barons, being both alike Commanded to give their Advice, ſuper quibuſdam arduis negotiis Nos & Regnum noſtrum tangentibus de Conſilio noſtro, &c. without any Clauſe, ad tractandum, &c. which is the Diſtinction between their Writs and thoſe to the Peers. The chief Buſineſs of this Council was, to be the ordinary Aſſiſtants in Points of Law, both to the King and the Lords in all Cauſes, Controverſies and Queſtions of Moment, that came before them: And beſides this, they often Sate with the King ~~alone~~, and gave Him their Advice in ſuch Matters, as came before Him by way of Petition in Parliament. * and this further appears from

Power &
* or the Authority of this Council see the statutes and Reports cited in this loose paper

*See Mr. Pryn's firſt Part of the Regiſter of Parliamentary Writs, p. 341. 342.

Theſe Petitions were then commonly directed, as appears by their Titles on the Rolls, to the King and his Council in Parliament; and the King's Anſwers to ſuch Petitions, eſpecially concerning Grievances either from the Clergy, the Lords or Commons, were oftentimes the only Acts or Statutes that were made for the redreſſing of them; as the Reader may obſerve by the manner of the King's paſſing ſeveral Acts, only by way of Anſwer to the Petitions of the Lords and Commons, and as we may ſee was practiſed in the King's Anſwer to that Great Petition of Right in the fourth Year of Charles the Firſt.

This Council alſo, with the Aſſiſtance of a Committee of ſuch Biſhops Lords and others, as the King or Houſe of Peers pleas'd to appoint, drew up all Bills into the Form of Acts, ſometimes before, and ſometimes after the Parliament was riſen, which in thoſe Reigns we now treat of, Sate for the moſt part but a very ſhort time, and ſo had not leiſure to ſee the Acts themſelves drawn up with that Formality as they were afterwards publiſhed. But I cannot forbear taking notice of a very great miſtake in Doctor Brady's Introduction to the Hiſtory of England; in which, becauſe he found it recited in the Titles to the Statute of Bigamy, 4 Edw. I. and that of Mortmain and Acton Barnel, and other Statutes in Edward I. his Reign, that they were made by the King and his Council in Parliament, that therefore this Council had as great a hand

of 14
10
~~here~~ compl
sever chief Courts with the Lays of &c.
fore, by for th at eve amend Prela
Earls Barons by the
of the

* the Justices of the one Bench and of the other together with others of [illegible], of the the Kings Council, shall have full Power from the King, upon Petition of the Par aggrieved, to hear and determine all complaints, by reason of such delays and the Tenor of the Records and Processes relating to such Judgments, to be before them, and that then the Judges, shall allow on these Lords of Parliament recited who upon hearing the whole matter, shall give a good Judgment, shall thereupon be amended, and entred ~~before such~~ Justices, before whom cause or complaint did depend. and it further appears by the year book of 40
E. 3. that a doubt arising among the Judges, and Sergeants, whether the Co by vertue of this Statute, any whole word ~~might be~~ ~~added~~ ~~in a Record~~ that add or amend een omitted in the Record, since that Statute gave them Power to amend no more a single letter, or syllable omitted in a Record by the mistake of the Clerk, there sayd, that the Judges would not give their opinions, before they had attended ings Council in Parliament, which then consisted of divers Bps, Earls and Barons, of whom they demanded how they would please to declare their Judgment in the point which was that such a word so omitted might be added or amended.

hand in paſſing thoſe Acts into Laws, as the Peers themſelves, whoſe Conſents (as well as Advice) was always neceſſary thereunto; whereas the Advice of the former was no farther neceſſary, than as the King and Lords thought fit to make uſe of them, and at laſt they took this Buſineſs wholly out of their hands into their own, as alſo the Commons, when they became a diſtinct Houſe, did the drawing up of all Bills, that concern'd themſelves, or that began there; yet that the conſent of this Council was not neceſſary, or ever given as a diſtinct Eſtate of the Kingdom, Mr. Pryn himſelf might have inform'd the Doctor in the ſame Treatiſe already cited, if he had been as mindful to follow him in this, as he is other things, wherein that Author hath written according to the Doctor's notions.

Regiſt. of Parliamentary Writs, Tom 1. p. 362.

I ſhall ſay no more of this Council in this Place, but that it was no part of the King's Privy Council, which ſate conſtantly, and this only in Parliament time; but the extraordinary Power of this Council, dwindled away by degrees, and became at laſt ſettled in the Court of Star Chamber, in Edward the Third's time, and had afterwards other greater Powers annexed to it by the Statute of Henry the Seventh, Cap. 3. tho' the firſt Memorial of this Council's Sitting as a Court by its ſelf in the Star Chamber is to be found on the Clauſe Roll 41 Ed. 3. upon a Complaint of Nicholas Audley, Plaintiff againſt Jane Audley Defendant, who appeared before the King's Council, there mentioned by name, being the Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer, Juſtices and Barons of the Exchequer, with ſome others, and as the Record ſays, were aſſembled en la Chambre des Eſtoiles pres de la * Receipt: But this Court of Star Chamber becoming very grievous and oppreſſive by reaſon of its Severe and Arbitary Proceedings in fining, impriſoning and inflicting other Corporal Puniſhments beyond what the Crimes could deſerve, was by a Statute made in the Sixteenth Year of King Charles the Firſt wholly diſſolved, and taken away, as prejudicial to the Rights and Liberties of Free-born Engliſhmen.

See more of the Original of the Court of Star Chamber, in Cokes 4th. Inſt. p. 62.

* i.e. The Office of the Receipt in the Exchequer.

To conclude this Head concerning the King's Council in Parliament; the only Remains of it ſtill continue in the Judges of both Benches, the Maſters of Chancery and King's Serjeant and Attorney, who ſit on the Wooll Packs in the Houſe of Lords to aſſiſt them with their Advice in Matters of Law, whenever they are required ſo to do.

The next Alteration, or rather Innovation in Parliamentary Proceedings, is, that Power the Houſe of Commons firſt took (as far as I can find by the Parliament Rolls) in the latter end of the Reign of King Edward the Third, of Impeaching any Perſons, whether Lords or others, of High Treaſon, or Miſdemeanors before the Peers in Parliament; though this way of Proceeding, againſt ſuch great Offenders became more Common in the Eleventh Year of Richard the Second, when they impeached the Arch-biſhop of York, the Duke of Ireland, with ſeveral others, of High-Treaſon; and at the ſame Time alſo Sentenced moſt of the Judges of England, ſome to be Hanged, and others to be Baniſhed into Ireland, for certain Arbitrary and Illegal Opinions they had not long before given the King under their hands.

But as for the Proceſs againſt the Duke of Gloceſter and Earl of Arundel, with the reſt of the Noblemen and Gentlemen, who had been of their Party, they were not impeached by the Commons in the Parliament of the 20th of Richard II. but by certain Lords Appellants, who then took upon them their Proſecution, and Proof of the Articles given in againſt them, and upon which they were Attainted, and moſt of them Condemned to be Beheaded; only the Earl of Warwick, upon the acknowledgement, and begging pardon for his Offences, was to be kept a Perpetual Priſoner in the Iſle of Man, and the Duke of Gloceſter, being by his Keeper the Earl Marſhal returned dead of an Apoplexy at Calais (though indeed privately Murder'd there) was attainted by Act of Parliament: But ever ſince the Reigns laſt mention'd, eſpecially in that of Henry the Sixth, Impeachments of Great Officers of the Kingom, or others, by the Commons in Parliament, have been often practiced, though more frequently in modern Times.

But before the Reign already aſſigned I do not find by any Records, or Hiſtorians now extant, that the Commons ever took upon them to Impeach any Perſons after that Manner; the uſual way of Proceeding againſt Offenders in Parliament, before that time, being by Acts of Attainder or Baniſhment: Thus was Pierce Gaveſton removed for ever from the King's Perſon, and Baniſhed out of England in the beginning of the Reign of Edward II. the like is to be ſaid of the Baniſhment of the Spencers, Father and Son, which was done about the middle of the ſame Reign; both which Proſecutions began with the Lords, who were their Chiefeſt Enemies and Accuſers.

Before I conclude this Head concerning Parliamentary Proceedings, I muſt here obſerve it was towards the latter end of this Period, that the Phraſe or Expreſſion of all the Eſtates of Parliament (conſiſting of the Biſhops, Abbots, with the Clergy, and Lords Temporal and Commons) began firſt to come in uſe; being borrowed from the like Phraſe then uſual in France: The firſt time we meet with it is, in the 5th Year of Richard II. Cap. 2. ſo likewiſe in the Preamble to the Statute of the 16th of that King, Cap. 5. where the Commons pray him To examine all the Lords in the Parliament as well Spiritual as Temporal and all the Eſtates of Parliament, &c. by which it appears that the King was not then accounted as one of the Eſtates, though afterwards, in the * Second Year of Henry the Fourth, it ſeems as if he were then reckon'd among them, as you may find by an Addreſs the Commons then made to that King in Parliament, wherein they tell him, That the Eſtates of the Realm may very well be reſembled to ~~a~~ the Trinity, to wit the Perſon of the King, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons; and then follows their deſire that the King would make up the Quarrel between the Earl of Rutland and the Lord Fitz Walter.

* Rot. Parl. 2 H. 4. m 12. n 32.

The next Parliamentary Alteration I am to take notice of, began about the end of the Reign of King Henry the Third, and was in reſpect of the ancient Barons of England by Tenure; many of whom dying ſome time before, without Iſſue Male, or elſe being kill'd in the Battel of Eveſham, and their Heirs reduced to a low Condition by the great Fines that were impos'd upon them by the Sentence or Decree of Kenelworth, the King took hold of that Opportunity of leaving out whom of them He pleas'd, and calling others by Writ who were not anciently Barons, to ſerve in their ſteads; and many of theſe enjoy'd that Title to them and their Heirs: Which Courſe was alſo followed by his Son King Edward I. who had an opportunity of calling many new Barons to Parliament, upon the Death of ſeveral of the old ones without Iſſue, who Died in the long Voyage they made with that Prince to the Holy Land; ſo that in the Reign of Edward the Third, this King's Grandſon, that antient antient Dignity of Barons by Tenure dwindled by degrees into that Titular Honour we now ſee at this day, diſpoſable by the King's Writs or Letters Patents; in the laſt of which there is moſt commonly a particular Clauſe inſerted, whereby there is granted to the Peer ſo created, and his Heirs, a Place and Seat as a Baron among the other Barons in all Parliaments to be held by the King and his Succeſſors.

Vid. Camden's Preface to his Britan. Engl. Edit. Spelman's Gloſs. Tit. Baro p 66.

And though a General Summons by Writ to a Nobleman or Gentleman to Parliament, to treat with the King and the reſt of the Prelates, and Greatmen of the Kingdom is looked upon at this day to give the Perſon to whom it is directed a Place in Parliament to Him and his Heirs for ever, whether Male, or Female, yet anciently it was not ſo; ſince Mr. Pryn hath given us ſeveral Inſtances of divers Noblemen, who were called to Parliaments once, twice, thrice, or oftener, and they and their Sons not being conſtantly Summon'd, they were quite omitted, and not reckon'd any more among the Barons of the Kingdom; and theſe I conceive were the Perſons, which in the modus Tenendi Parliamentum, and Parliament Rolls of Edward the Third and Richard the Second, are often mention'd after the Barons, by the Title of Pares Baronum, i. e. Barons Peers, or elſe of Antres Grantz; and theſe continued to be ſo ſummoned, till about the middle of Richard the Second's Reign, when a Summons by Writ was looked upon to confer a conſtant Title and Place in Parliament to the Party ſo ſummoned and his Heirs, as appears by the Example Mr. Selden hath given us of Sir Thomas Camoys, who being choſen a Knight of the Shire for the County of Surrey, was, by the King's Writ, directed to the Sheriff of the ſaid County, ordered to be diſcharged of that Employment, and another choſen in his room, becauſe he was a Banneret; by which Title Mr. Selden underſtands ſuch a one, who by himſelf or Anceſtors had been oftentimes ſummoned to Parliament by Writ, though without any Barony by Tenure annexed to it: And this way of Creation of Barons by Writ is attended with this Advantage, That for want of Heirs Male, it deſcends to a Daughter. But this way of creating Barons was not ſo much in uſe, when the other of making them by Letters Patents came in faſhion; the Firſt of which kind, that we can diſcover upon the Rolls, being John Lord Beauchamp, who (as Mr. Selden informs us) was created Baron of Kederminſter by King Richard II. as appears from the Letters Patents to him and his Heirs Males, as that Honour is moſt commonly granted at this day, unleſs the King pleaſes to limit it further to ſome particular Perſons in Remainder: And yet the old way of making Barons by Writ, is not wholly diſuſed, the King ſometimes calling up the Eldeſt Son of a Duke, Earl or Baron, by a particular Writ directed to him for that purpoſe; though it is now declared by a late Reſolution of the Lords in Parliament, That ſuch a Summons ſhall not create any new Title of Honour to the Deſcendent of any Nobleman ſo ſummoned.

Ib. p. 237.

Tit. of Honour, Part 2. Cap. 5. p. 609. 610. Rot. Clauſ. 7 Rich. 2. m. 32.

As for the Creation of Earls, that was antiently perform'd by the King's Girding a Sword about them, and thereby delivering them the Cuſtody of the County they were to command, with the Third Peny out of the Pleas of the County Court; and aſſigning them their Places accordingly, amongſt the reſt of the Earls of the Kingdom, without any Letters Patents of Creation: The antienteſt of which, that we know of, and as I can find, was that of the Empreſs Maud to Geoffery de Mandeville, Earl of Eſſex, which you may find in Selden's Titles of Honour. And during the Reigns of the Firſt Three Edwards, and Richard the Second, when Dukes and Earls were created by Letters Patents, even that was often not thought ſufficient, until they had their Charters confirm'd by Aſſent of Parliament, where they being ſolemnly introduced, and Girded by the King with a Sword, and Inveſted with the Cap and Robes ſuitable to their Dignities, they took their Places among the reſt of their Peers. This may be proved from divers Inſtances and Precedents, not only mention'd by our Printed Hiſtorians, but which are alſo found upon the Parliament Rolls themſelves: But this way of confirming Peers by Act of Parliament, grew into Diſuſe in the Reigns of King Henry VI. and Edward IV. for which I refer the Reader to Mr. Selden's learned and elaborate Work of Titles of Honour. Rot. Clauſ. 21 Rich. 2. m. 14. Par. 2. p. 624

I was about here to inſert a Hiſtory of Money and Coinage ſince the Conqueſt; but there being, during the Period I now write of, no Alteration made in the antient Engliſh Standard, Silver being now worth Twenty Pence the Ounce, I ſhall defer the treating of it till my next Volume; only ſhall here obſerve that the intrinſick Value of every Peny of thoſe times (which was then the largeſt Silver Piece of Engliſh Money) was really worth our preſent Threepence, as appears by that antient Standard, commonly known among Goldſmiths by the name of a Threepeny weight, at this day.

But as for the Value of Gold in Compariſon to Silver, it bore in that Age we now write of near three times a higher Value, then it does at this day, ſince the Diſcovery of the Weſt-Indies and the Sea-Coaſt of Affrica, whereby a Trade hath been eſtabliſhed in Guinea and other Places on that Coaſt for Gold Duſt and other Commodities; before which times, there was little or no Gold brought into Europe, but what came by the Merchants of Spain and Italy, who Traded with the Moors of Barbary, by bartering Cloth and other Commodities for Gold in Duſt, which was brought them out of the more inward Parts of that Continent, where it is waſhed down from the Mountains, and left in ſmall Particles mixed amongſt the Sands.

But the Reader may take notice, That though we had ſome French and German Gold Coins that went current in England, yet there was none coined here until Edward the Third's time, who, in the 18th Year of his Reign, firſt coined the Golden Noble, of the Value of about Twenty Shillings at this day, and on which you will ſee the Figure of this Prince ſitting in a Ship, bearing a Shield of France and England quarter'd on his Arm, to expreſs his Sovereignty over the Britiſh narrow Seas. And thô I have already taken notice in my laſt Volume, That King Henry the Third coin'd a ſmall Piece of Gold, of the Value of Twenty Pence Sterling, and equal to about Five Shillings of our preſent Money, yet the City of London being diſcontented at it, as ſuppoſing it to be ſet at too high a Rate, it was ſoon called in, and no more of them coined afterwards, as I have ſhewn in the former Volume. Lownds Eſſay of Coins, p. 35.

I hope it will not be thought foreign to the Deſign of this Introduction, if I give you a Brief Account of the Claim which King Edward the Firſt laid to be ſupreme Lord of Scotland, upon his being made Arbitrator by the Eſtates of that Kingdom, in that great Diſpute about the Succeſſion of the Crown; which He would not undertake to decide, before all the Competitors to it had ſeal'd an Inſtrument, wherein they publickly acknowledged his Right: The Original whereof, under all their Seals, is not only preſerved in the Cottonian Library to this day, but there are divers Authentick Copies of it entred, by that King's Order, in the Leigier Books of ſeveral Monaſteries, and are there likewiſe ſtill to be found; which may ſerve to confirm the Authority of Matt. Weſtminſter and Tho. Walſingham, who have alſo entred it in their reſpective Hiſtories. But beſides all this, there is ſtill preſerved a Noble Monument among the Records of the Tower, entituled, Rotulus Scotiæ de Superioritate Regis; in which is contained at large a faithful and exact Account of King Edward's demanding an Acknowledgment from the Scottiſh Clergy, Noblemen and Commons, of his ſaid Superiority, and that it was then ſolemnly own'd by them, thô afterwards they recanted it: And it alſo ſets forth the manner of John Baliol's doing his Homage to that King, after he had adjudged the Crown for him; and likewiſe the Homages that were then made by the Scottiſh Biſhops and Lords. All which will ſerve evidently to confute the falſe Relations of Boethius, Buchanan and other Scottiſh Hiſtorians, concerning this Affair; who ſuppoſe that King Edward had made a ſecret Bargain with Baliol beforehand, to paſs Sentence in his Favour, and to confer the Crown on him, provided He would do Him Homage for it; which Bruce (as they ſay) refuſed: Whereas it appears by this Record, That the King did not give any Judgment in this Caſe, without the Adviſe and Conſent of the Scottiſh Prelates and Noblemen, who were, by the Eſtates of both Kingdoms, appointed his Counſellors and Adviſers in this ſo high and difficult a Caſe, the like to which I do not find in any Antient or Modern Hiſtory. And as for the Competitors, (of whom Baliol and Bruce were the chief) they had no reaſon to count themſelves injur'd in the Acknowledgment they made of King Edward's being Superior Lord of Scotland; becauſe they themſelves declar'd they did it ex animo, willingly, as appears by their Charter of Submiſſion already mention'd, under their reſpective Seals; and among which is alſo found the Acknowledgment of Robert Bruce the Elder, Father to him who ſome Years after ſhook off the Engliſh Yoke, and made Himſelf King of Scotland.

I ſhall not here enter into Debate concerning the Juſtice or Legality of this Homage and Superiority then claim'd by King Edward the Firſt, and afterwards by his Grandſon Edward the Third, over Scotland; but only obſerve, That it was at that time the current Opinion of thoſe who pretended to any Skill in Antiquities, that it was this King's and his Predeceſſors undoubted Right; which appears by that famous Epiſtle the King himſelf ſent to the Pope, to aſſert and prove his being ſuperior Lord over Scotland: The Authorities therein produced are collected out of our moſt antient Engliſh Hiſtorians, and the Chronicles of ſeveral Abbies. This Epiſtle to the Pope was not long after ſeconded by another from almoſt all the Earls and Barons of England, under their Seals, at the Parliament held at Lincoln, in the Year 1300. being the 27th of this King's Reign; wherein they not only aſſert the King's Right, as Supreme Lord of Scotland, but ſo far inſiſt upon it, as boldly to declare, That if He ſhould go about to part with it, they would by no means permit Him ſo to do; as you will read in the enſuing Hiſtory.

But the Scottiſh Nobility and Gentry were not leſs reſolute to maintain the juſt Right of their Kings, and Liberties of their Country, as appears by that remarkable Letter which was ſent to the Pope, about Twenty Years after this, from England, under the Seals of all the Earls and chief Barons of Scotland, where having now obtain'd great Advantages over the Engliſh in the following King's Reign, the Pope wrote to them to forbear thoſe Hoſtilities: In Anſwer to which, they do in this Letter ſet forth the Antiquity and Independency of their Kings, and the unjuſt Pretences of any ſuch Superiority by thoſe of England; farther declaring, That as they would ſtand by their King (Robert) to maintain their Liberties to the utmoſt of their Power, ſo if he ſhould go about to ſubject their Country to the Engliſh, they would lay him aſide, and chuſe another King, who would better defend his Country; and therefore deſire his Holineſs's Mediation with the King of England, That he would deſiſt from his unjuſt Demands. This Letter bears Date at Aberbroth, Anno Dom. 1320. being the Fourteenth Year of the Reign of Robert Bruce. You may find it Printed in the Appendix to the Reverend Dr. Burnet, now Lord Biſhop of Salisbury, his Second Volume of his Hiſtory of the Reformation, N. 10.

This Claim of Homage was vigorouſly maintained all the Reign of Edward the Firſt; but when towards the end of it Robert Bruce abovementioned, had made himſelf King of Scotland, not long after the Death of that Victorious Prince, by reaſon of the mean Spirit and ill Conduct of his Son Edward the Second, the Engliſh were not only quite beaten out of Scotland, but the Scottiſh King had reduced three of the Northern Countries to his Obedience; and our Edward having much ado to defend the reſt, it was no wonder if the further inſiſting upon this Superiority was then laid aſide: But in the begining of the Reign of Edward the Third, after his firſt unſucceſsful Expedition againſt the Scots, there was a Peace ſuddenly Clapped up between the two Kingdoms, when, in conſideration of a Marriage to be Solemnized between David the Young King of Scots, and Joan King Edward's Siſter, He renounced for Himſelf and his Succeſſors all Right of Homage from, and Superiority over that Kingdom, and then deliver'd up the Original Charter of the Homage of John Baliol late King of Scots, beſides divers others Charters and Inſtruments relating to that Affair.

However this being done during the King's Minority, and whilſt he was under the Power of the Queen his Mother, and her Favorite Roger Mortimer, it was quickly after revoked; for no ſooner did this Young Prince gain Power and Experience upon their being removed from the Government, but he took another Courſe; for when Edward Baliol, Son of John abovemention'd, by the means of a few Engliſh Volunteers who were rais'd by the Lord Beaumont and other Noblemen that had loſt great Eſtates in Scotland, had invaded that Kingdom, and contrary to expectation put to flight two ſeveral Armies, raiſed by the then Governor of Scotland on the behalf of King David, at that time a Minor, and that Baliol had thereupon caus'd himſelf to be crown'd King of that Kingdom, then our Edward, renouncing his former League and Agreement with his Brother-in-Law, as being done whileſt he was under Age, (as is ſaid before) immediately join'd his Forces with thoſe of King Baliol, and having received his Homage for the Crown of Scotland, beſides a Grant of Edenburgh and the Countries adjacent, he not only ſubdued the greater part of Scotland, but alſo forced King David, with his Queen, to paſs over into France, where they continued for near the ſpace of Ten Years enſuing.

But our King Edward being not long after engaged in a long and expenſive War with France, the Scots laid hold of this Opportunity, not only to expel Baliol and his Party out of Scotland, but alſo to recover the greateſt Part of the Kingdom for their natural Prince, whom they at laſt ſent for over to receive the Government into his own hands. Not long after this he invaded England, but his Army being totally Defeated, and great Part of it deſerting Him at the Battel of Nevil's Croſs, He was there taken Priſoner, and ſo kept in ſeveral Places in England for divers Years; till at laſt, upon the Declining of King Edward's Succeſs in France, he was perſwaded to admit the Scottiſh King to be ranſom'd for the Sum of Threeſcore thouſand Marks, and to be releaſed without doing any Homage, though King Edward at firſt mightily inſiſted that he ſhould; but the Scottiſh Nobility would by no means allow of it, and ſaid they would never receive him if he did it; therefore upon his Payment of part of the Money a Truce was made with that King and Nation for Twenty Years enſuing; but for all that it was frequently broken, ſometimes on the Scottiſh, and ſometimes on the Engliſh ſide, and as often pieced up again in the Reign of Richard the Second, till towards the latter end of it, when the Scots were included in that long Truce of Thirty Years, made between that King and Charles the Sixth his Father in Law: And after this time I do not find any Homage ever demanded by the Kings of England from thoſe of Scotland; though I grant that there are among the Archives in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, in ſeveral Boxes in the Great Cheſt, Entituled Scotia, ſtill preſerved, divers Charters under Seal, that ſeem to acknowlede the Superiority of the Kings of England over Scotland, and the Homage due from them on that Account; and that theſe Inſtruments written in Latine have ſpecious Titles.

The firſt of them is a pretended Grant (or Confirmation) from David II. King of Scots to the Lords and Noblemen of Scotland, of ſeveral Rights and Privileges, with a Clauſe of ſaving the Right of the Superiority of the King of England over that Kingdom. This bears date in the Firſt Year of this David's Reign, at a time when there was open War between England and Scotland, and when that King utterly diſclaim'd any ſuch Superiority; ſo that there needs no other proof to Demonſtrate the Forgery of this Charter.

The Second Inſtrument is of another like Ratification from King Robert I. to the ſame Noblemen, and of the like Privileges too; in which is alſo recited at length a pretended Charter of Homage, ſuppoſed to be made by Alexander King of Scots to Henry the Third of England: This bears date in the firſt Year of King Robert, at a time when the two Kingdoms were in perfect Peace; and is certainly a Forgery.

The Third is a Charter of King Robert the Second (as is ſuppoſed) to the Great Chamberlain of Scotland, reciting, That whereas He had lately received the Homages of the Earls and Barons of his Kingdom, yet it was to be with a Salvo of the Fealty and Homage, which they owed the King of England as Superior Lord of Scotland: But ſince neither this King, nor his Predeceſſors of the Family of the Bruces, ever acknowledged any ſuch Superiority, or did any ſuch Homage, there needs no further confutation of this Inſtrument any more then of the reſt. And whereas Dr. Brady hath in his Hiſtory tranſcribed a Charter of Homage, pretended to be made by King David II. to our Edward the Third, in the Ninth Year of his Reign; ſince I have in the enſuing Volume ſufficiently confuted and expoſed the ſpuriouſneſs of that Inſtrument, I ſhall ſay no more of it in this Place.

But perhaps it may be here enquired, Who it was that was ſo bold as to forge theſe Charters? As for that laſt mention'd, I cannot juſtly ſay, only that it was made after that King's time, and perhaps by the ſame Perſon who forged all the reſt, * for by an Antient Book in the keeping of the King's Remembrancer of the Exchequer, there is entred a Memorandum, That all the three Charters before mention'd were deliver'd into the Exchequer by Indenture between John Earl of Shrewsbury, then Lord Treaſurer of England, and John Harding Gentleman, in the 36th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Sixth. This Harding was a Poet and an Hiſtorian, and had been ſent, not many Years before, by that King into Scotland, and had King Roberts Letters of ſafe Conduct for that purpoſe; and * Pitzeus tells us it was in this Journey, that he pretended to have made himſelf Maſter of thoſe rare Charters by finding means to ſteal them away from the Place wherein they were kept: This will alſo ſerve to confute that falſe Relation in * Hall's Chronicle, concerning the Homage done by King James the Firſt to our Henry the Sixth, in the Second Year of his Reign, which that Author has ſet down at large; for thô this Homage is alſo recited in the * Declaration of War by King Henry the Eighth againſt his Nephew James the Sixth of Scotland, Printed in the ſame Chronicle, yet it is certainly a forged Piece; becauſe had any ſuch Homage been made, there would ſurely have been ſome Inſtrument or Memorandum of it left upon Record, concerning ſo Remarkable an Action; whereas there is no ſuch thing to be met with, or if there had, it muſt ſtill have been a Forgery, becauſe this King always refus'd to do any Homage to King Henry the Fifth, and it is not likely He would do that to his Son, then an Infant, which He had refus'd to the Father, who was one of the greateſt and moſt Warlike Princes of his time; nor would the Scots have eaſily received this King to Reign over them, had He done ſo mean a thing in their Opinion, as to Subject the Crown of Scotland to that of England by this ſuppoſed Homage.

And it further appears, That neither King Edward the Fourth, nor Richard the Third, nor Henry the Seventh, upon the ſeveral Truces and final Peace made with that Kingdom, did ever demand or inſiſt upon any ſuch Homage: For when King Henry concluded a Match between his Eldeſt Daughter Margaret and James the Fourth; and alſo that Henry the Eighth made a Defenſive War by his Lieutenant the Earl of Surrey againſt that Prince, who was Slain at Flodden Feild; I do not find any Homage ever to have been demanded by Him, before this Declaration of War abovementioned againſt King James the Fifth; which was in the latter end of Henry's Reign.

Thus I have given you a brief Account of this great and troubleſome Affair, concerning the Claim of Homage of our Kings upon them of Scotland, which began in the time of Edward the Firſt, and was often inſiſted on till towards the end of his Great Grandſon Richard the Second's Reign: And whilſt this Claim continued, it was one great Cauſe of thoſe bloody Wars and long Enmities between the two Nations, for near Two hundred Years, and which indeed could never be quite extinguiſhed or

* For this Note, as alſo the Sight of the ſaid Charters, I have been beholden to the Learned and Ingenious Mr. Rymer, Hiſtoriographer to Her Majeſty.

* De Scriptoribus Anglicis ad An. 1461.

* P. 86. b.

Ib. p. 152.

or taken away, until the Succeſſion of King James the Sixth of Scotland to the Engliſh Throne. But I hope now to ſee that good Correſpondence preſerved by a firmer and ſtricter Union between the two Kingdoms; ſo that we may never have any freſh Occaſions of Sheathing our Swords in each others Bowels. I likewiſe hope the Reader will pardon me, if I have dwelt a little longer on this Subject, than I at firſt intended; ſince it gives light into divers Pieces of Hiſtory, which though uſeful, yet are not commonly known.

I ſhall conclude this Introduction with an Account of ſome remarkable Alterations in Eccleſiaſtical Matters, that happened within this Period. The Firſt is that of Summoning the Deans, Archdeacons and Proctors of the Inferiour Clergy, to Parliament; together with the Biſhops, Abbots and Priors, who held by Barony, and made a part of it before: The firſt Inſtance of this kind is upon Record in the Cloſe Rolls of the 23d of Edward the Firſt, Anno Dom. 1295. where is inſerted that memorable Clauſe of Præmunirentes, into the Writs of Summons to the Biſhops; M. 3. whereby they are requir'd To præmoniſh the Deans, Priors, Archdeacons and Chapters of their reſpective Cathedral Churches; the Archdeacons in their proper Perſons, the Chapters by One, and the Clergy of every Dioceſe by Two Proctors ſufficiently impower'd, to be preſent at the Parliament, together with the King, to treat of and conſent to ſuch things as ſhould be ordain'd by the Common Council of the Kingdom. This is the Effect of that remarkable Clauſe that ſtill remains in the Writs of Summons to the Biſhops, though none but they come now to Parliament by Vertue of that Writ, as I ſhall farther ſhew hereafter.

I cannot deny, That the Deans and Archdeacons, with the Proctors for the Chapters of Cathedrals (as appears by our antient Hiſtorians and Records) were ſometimes ſummoned to Great Councils or Parliaments long before this; and that the Proctors of the Inferiour Clergy abovementioned, were by the Mandate of the Archbiſhop likewiſe ſummoned to meer Eccleſiaſtical Synods and Convocations, ſome Years before the 23d of Edward the Firſt, ever ſince the Year 1282. or thereabouts; yet thus much is certain, That the Proctors of the Inferiour Clergy never were Summon'd to Parliament till this Year; when the King being deſirous to have a great Tax from them, to carry on his Wars againſt France and Scotland, with both which he was then engaged, reſolved to order the Biſhops to Summon them to this Parliament, together with themſelves; not for any Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Buſineſs, but purely to grant the King ſuch an Aid as his preſent Neceſſities did then require.

But the Clergy finding this was not intended by the King, as any Favour or Privilege to them, but purely to get Money from them, it is no wonder that they did what they could to excuſe themſelves from coming to Parliament at all; which yet they could not altogether avoid complying with, during this King's Reign, nor that of his Son Edward the Second, and Grandſon Edward the Third. And thus the Inferiour Clergy continued (though not conſtantly) to appear in Parliament, by Vertue of that Clauſe of Præmunientes, until about the middle of the Reign of Henry the Sixth, when their Appearance in Parliament came to be wholly diſpenſed with: And oftentimes before, ſo long as the King found He could do the ſame thing, that is, get Money from them, whenever He wanted it, in thoſe Provincial Convocations, which were ſummoned by the Two Archbiſhops at his Command; He did not ſtand much upon it, which way they appeared: Yet which way ſoever they were aſſembled, they always gave their own Taxes by themſelves, as a diſtinct Eſtate from the Lay Commons; though we cannot find that they had a Negative Vote in other Matters, or that their Proteſtations againſt the paſſing of any Law, to be enacted by the King and the other Eſtates, were thought ſufficient to put a ſtop thereunto; as in the Caſes of Mortmain, Proviſions, Eccleſiaſtical Courts and Cauſes, &c. might eaſily be made appear, were it the Deſign of this Introduction to write a particular Hiſtory on this Subject.

Therefore to conclude, I ſhall farther obſerve, That though whilſt the Clergy continued to act in this Capacity, they made one of the Eſtates in Parliament, yet it was only for the Purpoſe abovemention'd, or elſe for preſenting their Petitions to have ſuch Grievances redreſſed, as they then conceived they lay under; upon the granting of which, they ſtill gave the King Money: However afterwards we often find them, though by the means of the Biſhops, preferring ſeveral Bills in Parliament againſt the Lollards or Hereticks of thoſe times, in the Name of all the Clergy of England. The Reader is likewiſe here to take notice, That theſe Parliamentary Conventions of the Clergy differed very much from thoſe Provincial Convocations abovementioned; which at firſt were ſeldom Summoned about the ſame time with the Parliament, by the Two Archbiſhops, at the King's Command, in order to get that Money from the Clergy; for theſe two Aſſemblies ought to be carefully diſtinguiſhed, though they have been jumbled together, and made to be but one and the ſame, by ſome late Writers upon this Subject, who yet confeſs at the ſame time, they were Summoned by two different Writs, directed to the Archbiſhops; That for the Convocation being to entreat and command them to cauſe the Biſhops of their reſpective Provinces to appear therein, and alſo to require them to Summon the Abbots, exempt or not exempt, with the Priors, Deans and Archdeacons, and the Proctors of the Inferiour Clergy, to do the like. Nor did theſe Aſſemblies differ only in the manner of their being Summon'd, but alſo in divers other very material Circumſtances, both in reſpect of the Time and Place of their Meeting: For the Parliamentary Convention, being a part of the Parliament, was Summoned to meet at the ſame Time, and at the ſame Place, with it, and was conſequently Diſſolved whenever the Parliament was; whereas by the Writs to the Two Archbiſhops for calling a Convocation, the Time and Place of their Meeting was antiently left to their Diſcretions, provided it was done as ſoon as they well could: Nor were they obliged to meet at the ſame time with the Parliament, but either before or after it, as the Archbiſhops thought fit, and as the King's Occaſions for Money requir'd; but as for the Convocation for the Province of Canterbury, this was by that Archbiſhop moſt commonly cited to meet at St. Paul's Church, as that of York was at St. Peter's in that City: So likewiſe as to the Perſons who compos'd theſe two Councils, they differ'd very much; for to Parliamentary Conventions only ſuch Abbots and Priors were Summoned, as were wont to come to Parliament by reaſon of their Tenures; whereas to Provincial Convocations, all Abbots and Priors whatſoever, as well exempt as not exempt, were Summon'd to appear by the Archbiſhop's Mandate; all which plainly ſhews, they were a quite different Council from the Parliamentary Convention of the Clergy.

However, if we conſider the Nature of theſe Provincial Convocations Summon'd by the Archbiſhop, we ſhall find, That though they conſiſted of Spiritual Men, yet they were not properly Eccleſiaſtical, but Civil Aſſemblies: For when they met by Vertue of the King's Writ, it was not upon any Eccleſiaſtical Buſineſs, but purely to ſupply the King's Occaſions, not only when there was a Parliament Summon'd, but alſo at other Times, as the learned Dr. Wake, in his abovemention'd Book, has proved (in my opinion) beyond all Exception, againſt his ingenious Antagoniſt Dr. A's Rights and Powers of an Engliſh Convocation. But it muſt be granted, That thô in divers following Reigns, the Two Archbiſhops did oftentimes propoſe to their Suffragan Biſhops and Clergy in Convocation, the Reformation of ſeveral Abuſes and Corruptions in the Church, to ſave themſelves and the Clergy the double Charge and Trouble of appearing in both theſe Aſſemblies; yet this did not at all abridge the Power of the Two Archbiſhops to call ſuch Eccleſiaſtical Synods or Councils whenever they pleas'd, by their ſole Authority, until the 24th of Henry the Eighth; when the Biſhops and Clergy being aſſembled in Convocation upon the King's Summons, to avoid the Premunire that then hung over their Heads, tied themſelves up by a ſolemn Promiſe, ſub verbo Sacerdotis, That they would not, for the future, put in ure, promulge and execute any new Canons, &c. without the King's Licence; which Promiſe and Submiſſion were alſo confirm'd and enacted by a *Statute made the Year following for that Purpoſe, in which the Words, attempt, alledge and claim, are alſo added, &c. ſo that ever ſince, the Clergy have been bound, not only from meeting in Convocations without the King's Writ, but alſo from making or attempting to make or promulge or execute any new Canons, without his Licence for the ſame: From which time it muſt be acknowledged, That both the Provincial Convocations have been for the moſt part Summoned by Vertue of the King's Writ, and have Met, Sate and been Diſſolved, upon or very near the ſame Time with the Parliament, as it continues to this day.

Cap. 6. 7. 4.

Vid. Dr Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation, Vol. 1. p.

25. Hen. 8. cap. 19.*

I ſhall, in the next place, treat of ſome Reformations that have been endeavour'd to be made in the Church during this Period; and in particular, that remarkable one, concerning the abating the Pope's exorbitant Power in the Matter of thoſe Proviſions he then uſually exerciſed, by filling up Biſhopricks, and other Eccleſiaſtical Benefices in England, of any Value, whenever they became vacant, and oftentimes before. For under this Pretence he took upon him to confer the beſt Spiritual Preferments on his own Creatures, who being for the moſt part either Frenchmen or Italians, it proved ſo great a Grievance and Burthen to the Engliſh Church and Nation, that when the Court of Rome refuſed to Reform it, upon divers earneſt Requeſts and Addreſſes from King Edward the Firſt, the Nobility and Commons of England being no longer able to bear with ſo great an Abuſe, they reſolved to Reform it themſelves, by a Law made for that Purpoſe, viz. that famous Statute of Carliſle, enacted in the 35th Year of that King; who dying not long after, before it could be put in execution, and being ſucceeded by his Son Edward the Second, a weak Prince, who had conſtant Wars with the Scots or Civil Diſſentions at home; and this Abuſe being alſo connived at by the Biſhops, who were afraid of diſpleaſing the Pope; it is no wonder if this excellent Law took little or no Effect, but lay as it were dormant all the Reign of that King, and good part of that of Edward the Third, till till the 25th and 27th Years of his Reign; by which time the Pope had ſo encreaſed his former Oppreſſions, in conferring the beſt Biſhopricks in England upon Strangers, under the Pretence of theſe his Proviſions, that the whole Kingdom was again under a great Diſcontent at that Oppreſſion: Whereupon the Lords and Commons in Parliament humbly Petitioned the King, That they might be no longer continued, but that He would revive and confirm the Statute of Carliſle, made by King Edward his Grandfather; which was done accordingly.

Vid. Stat. 35 Ed. 1. recited in the Stat. of 27 Ed. 3. cap.

Rot. Parl. 27 Ed. 3.

But this Act ſome Years after being found inſufficient, (notwithſtanding ſeveral other Statutes to enforce it) was revived by more ſevere *Statutes in the Thirty eighth Year of the ſame King, not only againſt theſe Proviſions, but alſo all unneceſſary Appeals to Rome, which put a ſtop to this Miſchief for ſome time: But the Pope taking freſh Courage, through the Negligence and Cowardice of the Biſhops, who durſt not openly oppoſe him, (and whom he often bribed and took off, by conferring on them better Biſhopricks) began again in the next Reign to renew his former Oppreſſions. This cauſed ſome other Statutes to be made, in the Second and Third Years of Richard the Second, to confirm and enforce thoſe of his Grandfather, againſt the Taking or Receiving any Benefice from any Perſon, but only from the King or his Subjects; and particularly forbidding all Aliens from taking or accepting any ſuch Eccleſiaſtical Benefices or Dignities, without the King's Licence: And theſe Statutes were afterwards enforced by another of the Thirteenth of this King, for the free Election of Archbiſhops and Biſhops, &c. as alſo by another of the Sixteenth, againſt all Tranſlations, Proceſſes and Sentences of Excommunication, purchaſed from the Court of Rome, concerning Things which touch the King, his Crown, Regality and Realm, in all the Matters aforeſaid. I have but barely mentioned theſe Statutes in this place, becauſe the Reader will find, at the end of thoſe Reigns abovementioned, an exact Hiſtory of thoſe Papal Proviſions, and of the Laws made againſt them, and the great Conteſt there was in that Age between our Kings and ſeveral Popes about it, who did not look upon themſelves as tied up by any Laws of this Kingdom, from exerciſing that unjuſt and uſurped Power which they claim'd of diſpoſing of all Biſhopricks and Benefices in England, according to their abſolute Will and Pleaſure: And indeed this Evil could never be totally eradicated, until King Henry the Eighth, by an Act of Parliament made for that purpoſe, abſolutely aboliſhed and took away the Papal Power in England; when almoſt all the Biſhops (though outwardly in the Communion of the Church of Rome) concurred with the King, Lords and Commons, in the paſſing of that Statute.

Stat. Book, cap. 1, 2.

I ſhall conclude this Introduction, with a ſhort Account of that famous Tribute or Penſion of One thouſand Marks per Annum, which was granted by King John to the Pope, upon his Legate Pandolf's reſtoring to Him his Crown. This was paid (though with ſome Interruption, and running ſeveral times in Arrear) until the Sixth Year of Edward the Third; when I find an Original Breve in the Cottonian Library, of Pope John 22. to the ſaid King, ſub Annulo Piſcatoris, (i. e. his Seal in Lead, called Bulla, from whence thoſe Inſtruments are ſtiled) dated in the Sixth Year of his Reign, containing an Acquittance or Diſcharge of all Arrears due on Account of the ſaid Penſion, in Conſideration of Fifteen hundred Marks then actually paid: But whether it was ever paid any more, or not, I cannot ſay; ſay; though it ſeems moſt probable that it was not, becauſe not long after, upon that King's claiming the Crown of France, and the Pope ſhewing Himſelf averſe to his Title, and very partial to the French King's Intereſt, it is very likely that our Edward, to be even with Him, ſtopped the Payment of it for divers Years; until at laſt Pope Urban V. highly reſenting this Contempt, ſent over his Legates on purpoſe to demand the Payment of it, with the Arrears then due. Whereupon King Edward calling a Parliament in the Forty ſecond Year of his Reign, the Eſtates of the Kingdom wrote the Pope that remarkable Letter, which you may find in the enſuing Hiſtory of that King's Reign; in which they declar'd, That King John could not charge his Kingdom with the Payment of any ſuch Tribute, without Conſent of all the Eſtates aſſembled in Parliament. After which time I do not find it was any more demanded; nor did the Pope think it his Intereſt ſo to do, ſince there being for near ~~Seventy~~ fifty Years together Two Popes at once, the former of them, reſiding at Rome, was acknowledged by our Kings, whilſt the other, who had his Seat at Avignon, was chiefly own'd and defended by the King of France: So that during this Schiſme the Pope at Rome durſt not inſiſt upon the former Demands of this Penſion, nor yet compel the King to pay it, leſt He ſhould abſolutely caſt off his Obedience to him, and join with the Antipope of Avignon. And after this Schiſme was ended, upon the Election of Pope Martin V. and the Depoſition or Reſignation of his Competitors, the Demand of this Penſion became ſtale and obſolete; and the Crown of England being now become powerful under that Victorious Prince Henry V. I do not find any other Popes, after him laſt mentioned, renewed their Claim to it.

Cleopat. E. 3. p. 14, 15.

8 JA 56

THE General Hiſtory OF ENGLAND, BOTH Eccleſiaſtical and Civil.

VOL. III. BOOK IX.

King EDWARD the Firſt.

SO ſoon as the Obſequies of the late King Henry were perform'd, on the 20th Day of November, in the Abby Church of Weſtminſter, [1] John Earl of Warren and Surrey, and Gilbert Earl of Gloceſter, with all the Clergy and Laity there preſent, went to the High Altar, and ſwore Fealty to his Eldeſt Son Edward, ſuppoſed at that time to be in the Holy Land, [2] though they were uncertain whether He was alive or no. But yet this was not thought ſufficient: Wherefore the Day after, Robert Kilwardy, Archbiſhop Elect of Canterbury, and the Earl of Gloceſter, with other Prelates and Noblemen of the Kingdom, met at the New-Temple, and there Recognized* the ſame Prince for their Liege Lord, and *declar'd him Succeſſor of his Father's †Dignity; and then, with the Aſſent of the Queen Mother, (having made a new Great Seal) they appointed Select Miniſters and Guardians to keep the King's Treaſure, and the Kingdom, till his Return.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXII.

[1] M. W. King Henry being interred, all the Clergy and Nobility take an Oath of Fealty to King Edward.

[2] T. Wi. * He is again recognized at the New Temple, and a new Great Seal appointed, with Guardians of the Kingdom.

* Ordinaverunt.

† Honori.

Theſe [3] Guardians were Walter Giffard, Archbiſhop of York; Edmund Plantagenet, Son to the late deceaſed Richard Earl of Cornwall, Brother to King Henry the Third; and Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloceſter; who took upon them the Exerciſe of the Government, by the ſole Advice and Appointment of the Nobility: However all Writs, Proclamations and Publick Inſtruments were iſſued forth in the King's Name, as appears by a *Writ on the Rolls of the Tower, directed to all the Sheriffs in England, to proclaim the King's Peace to be kept throughout their whole Counties, in all Cities, Burghs, Fairs, Markets and other Places. It begins thus: Edward by the Grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland, and Duke

[3] M. W. The Names of the Guardians and what they did.

* Clauſ. 1 Ed. 1. M. 11. de Pace Reg. Edwardi proclamanda.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXII.

Vid. Dr. Brady's App. ad Vol. 2. n. 1.

Duke of Aquitain, &c. Whereas by the late Deceaſe of Our Father King Henry of Famous Memory, the Government of the Kingdom is come to Us by Hereditary Succeſſion, &c. We command, &c. Witneſs W. Archbiſhop of York, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, and G. Earl of Gloceſter, at Weſtminſter, the 23*d of* November, in the Firſt Year of Our Reign. This was within three Days after the Interment of his Father. [4] He was proclaimed firſt in London, and then in all the other Cities of England. Immediately after this, the ſaid Guardians iſſued forth another * Writ in the King's Name, dated the 29th of the ſame Month at the New-Temple, London, by the Hands of Walter de Merton, then Chancellor, directed to the Abbots of Dore and Hagenham, appointing them to receive the Oath of Fidelity from Llewellyn, Son of Griffyn Prince of Wales: But it is evident, by the Return of this Writ (which is annexed to it) from thoſe Abbots, as alſo from the Conſtable of Montgomery Caſtle, That the ſaid Prince neither appeared at the Time and Place appointed, nor ſent them any Meſſage by way of Excuſe for his Abſence; ſo much did he then ſtand upon his Terms. But he was ſufficiently humbled for this, as well as for his other Rebellious Actions not long after the King's Return into England: But from theſe Records it appears, That King Edward was the Firſt, who, wholly claiming by Hereditary Succeſſion and the Will and Appointment of the Great Men of the Kingdom, was ſtiled King of England in any Publick Inſtruments, before his Coronation.

[4] Annal. de Lon

* Bundela Brevium hujus Regis in turre. Vid. Ibid. N. 2.

Another Writ to receive the Oath of Fealty from the Pr. of Wales.

* And on ye same Day ye Arch Bishop of York with the Bishops of Winchester Rochester, Worcester &c. ~~with~~ ye other Prelates & Barons, [illegible] there mentioned, sent a letter to King Edward giving him notice of ye Death of the King his Father on the Feast of St. Edward the Confessor, & of his Burial in Westminster Abbey on ye Feast of St. Edward the Martyr, as also of the Oathes of Fealty they had taking to King Edward as their Liege Lord. ~~this~~ this bears Date at ye new Temple 23. Nov: & is preserved in ye Exchequer vid: R.s Coll p. 888-889-

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIII.

Not [5] long after Chriſtmas the ſaid Guardians Summoned all the Eſtates of the Kingdom to meet in a Parliament, (as they call it) at Weſtminſter, upon the Feaſt of St. Hilary; which are thus recited and diſtinguiſhed by our * Authors, viz. The Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons, Abbots and Priors, as alſo Four Knights for each County, and Four Citizens for each City; who being there aſſembled, did all, in the preſence of the Lords William Archbiſhop of York, Robert de Mortimer and R. Burnel, Clerks, take an Oath to the Lord Edward, as * King of this Land, as alſo firmly and truly to keep the Peace of the Kingdom; and there Walter de Merton was again appointed, or rather confirmed Chancellor, and was ordered to reſide at Weſtminſter till the King's Return: It was there likewiſe farther provided, That till that time there ſhould be no other * Juſtices, but only ſuch as ſate on either Bench. Not long after, viz. on the 10th of December, Earl Edmund, the King's Brother, returned from his Voyage to the Holy Land.

[5]

* Annal. de Waverly. Annal Wigorn. Ang. Sacra, Vol. 3.

An Aſſembly of Eſtates ſummoned to meet at Weſtminſter; and of whom it conſiſted.

The Oath of Allegiance taken again to him by all the Members of it.

* Terræ Principi.

* I. e. There ſhould be no Juſtices Itinerant.

But we muſt now look back, and ſee what is become of our Prince Edward ſince his Departure from Paleſtine the laſt Autumn; [1] who being ſafely arrived in Sicily, was joyfully received by Charles King of that Iſland: And there Prince Edward firſt heard the News, both of the Death of his Eldeſt Son John, and of the King his Father; the latter of whom He much more lamented than the former; inſomuch that when King Charles began to comfort Him for that Loſs, He made this pious Return, That He had much greater Reaſon to be grieved for the One than the Other, ſince He could have more Sons, but not another Father. [2] Then the King of Sicily having taken his Leave of his Royal Gueſt, ordered his Son Charles to wait upon him to the utmoſt Limits of his Kingdom; and the King coming into Pope Gregory's Territories, was by him moſt kindly received at Viterbo, having been his old Acquaintance, as well as fellow Pilgrim in the Holy Land. Here the King complained to the Pope, of the late Murther of his Couſin Henry, Son to Richard late King of the Romans, which was committed

[1] T. W.

[2] Id. Ib. M. W.

He leaves Sicily, and is kindly received by the Pope.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIII.

committed in the Church of Viterbo, by Guido de Montfort, (as hath been already related) with the Aſſiſtance of Count Aldebrandino, Sirnamed the Red, his Father-in-Law: Whereupon the Pope having declared the ſaid Guido guilty of Murther, ſolemnly excommunicated him and all his Abettors, until ſuch time as they ſubmitted themſelves, and made Satisfaction to the Church.

Who Excommunicates the Murtherers of Henry, Son to the King of the Romans.

This Affair being diſpatched, the King paſſed through Italy over the Alpes in his way to France; and [3] being arrived on the Borders of that Kingdom, the Count de Chalons in Burgundy envying his Glory ſent him an Invitation, or rather a Challenge to come to the City of Chalons, and there to Tourney with him and his Knights, whom he ſhould bring thither: Hereupon the King, though he might very well have refuſed the offer, becauſe he was upon his Journey homeward, yet did not think it for his Honour to deny this Invitation, and therefore cauſed it to be every where Proclaimed, That he, with the Strangers that waited on him, would maintain a Tourneament againſt all Comers; upon which a great many both Horſe and Foot flocked thither in joint Confederacy, to ſpoil the Engliſh of their Horſes and Arms: King Edward alſo ſent into England for ſome of his Noblemen to come over to his Aſſiſtance, and there went to him divers Earls and Barons; ſo that at the time prefixed for this Combat, the King carried thither with him about a thouſand Knights or Horſemen beſides Foot; but thoſe of the contrary Party had as many more, where inſtead of a Tourneament it became a ſort of a Petty War; for both Parties meeting without the City of Chalons, the Count's Gentlemen firſt began the Combat, and were as valiantly reſiſted by the Engliſh, inſomuch that many of the former were killed, and the reſt driven back to the Gates of the City, or elſe into the adjoining River, where they were drowned.

[3] T. Wi. Chron. Wal. Hemingford L. 3. Cap. 36.

Prince Edward is challenged by the Count of Chalons to a Tourneament.

[4] In the mean time the Count de Chalons in Perſon, with Fifty ſelect Knights, engaged with the King and thoſe of his Party, and fought Him a long time hand to hand; but finding he could do no good with his Sword he cloſed in with him, and throwing his Arm about his Neck, thought to have pulled Him from off his Horſe, but the King clapping Spurs to his ſides, and he thereupon ſpringing forward, pulled the Count (ſtill hanging about his Neck) from his Saddle, and not being able to hold out long in that poſture, he fell to the Ground with ſuch a force, that his Breath was almoſt beat out of his Body. Then King Edward alighting, ran to pull off his Helmet to give him Air; which when He had done, and ſtill perceiving the great Malice of the Count's Party, who inſtead of a Tourneament now made War in earneſt, He preſently ordered his Men not to ſpare any of them, but to pay them in their own coin; ſo the Foot being now returned from the Chace had time to fall upon the Enemies Horſe, which not being drawn up in any cloſe Order, they either ran them into the Bellies, or cut their Girts, ſo that their Riders were thrown to the Ground: Notwithſtanding this, the Count being again mounted by his Men would not give over, but fell upon King Edward afreſh, and continued the Diſpute with him, till at laſt, after he and his Party were well beaten, he was forced to ſurrender himſelf a Priſoner, at the King's Command, to an ordinary Knight; and though many of them ran away, yet more than thoſe fell dead upon the Spot.

[4] Id. ib.

The Count de Chalons encounters King Edward in Perſon.

And is taken Priſoner and his Party routed.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIII

[5] C. H. ib. And what enſued thereupon.

The Engliſh having thus obtained the Victory, returned with Triumph into the City; and thinking they might there quietly take up their Quarters, they were killed by the Citizens as they paſſed along the Streets: But ſo ſoon as the King heard of it, He ſent preſently for the Magiſtrates, commanding them to puniſh and reſtrain the Townſmen, or elſe He would ſet Fire to their City, and burn it down to the Ground; whereupon they immediately placed Guards in moſt of the Avenues, and ſo the King and his Men remained quiet and ſafe; but in this diſpute there was ſo much Blood ſhed, that inſtead of the Tourneament it was ever after called the little Battel of Chalons.

[1] M W. T. W. King Edward is kindly received at Paris, and does Homage to King Philip for his Territories in France.

What farther happened between this ſtout Earl and the King, we do not find; [1] only that the latter leaving that City went forward to Paris, and was there about the middle of July kindly received by King Philip his Coſin German; (for their Mothers were Siſters) and after the Prince had for ſome time been nobly entertained there, He demanded of that King thoſe Territories which belonged to Him by Hereditary Right; to which the King of France replied, That He was ready to ſatisfie Him according to Reaſon; whereupon our Edward did King Philip Homage in this form of Words, My Lord the King, I do You Homage for all the Lands I ought to hold of You; by which Words ſome underſtood as if He had thereby meant Normandy, and thoſe other Countries formerly ſubject to the King of England, which the French King ſtill retain'd.

The King by his Writ Orders all Flemmings in England to depart.
[2] An. de Lond.

The King having been highly provoked at the Hoſtilities committed by the Flemmings on the Merchants of England, about the begining of September, gave Orders for iſſuing out a Writ or Letter directed to the Mayor, Sheriffs and Commonalty of London, which was read in their Guild-Hall not long after, wherein, reciting the many Injuries done by the Counteſs of Flanders to his Subjects in thoſe Parts, Commands them to make Proclamation, That no Flemming ſhould enter or ſtay in London on pain of Forfeiture of his Goods, notwithſtanding any Grant made by the King his Father, or any of his Predeceſſors to the contrary; yet gives ſuch Flemmings licenſe to receive their Merchandize and other Effects already due from Chriſtmas laſt paſt, and then to depart the Realm, and not to Return on pain of Forfeiture as aforeſaid. * From whence you may obſerve the King's Clemency to theſe Flemmings, That notwithſtanding the late Hoſtilities committed by them, yet He gave them leave to remove all their Effects before their Departure. But this Quarrel did not continue long as you will find under the next Year.

* Dat per Walt. de Merton Can. Lond. 8 die Sept. A. R. Primo.

[4] Id. ib. Robert Kilwarby made Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

[3] As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; about the ſame time Frier Robert Kilwarby having been made Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury by the Pope (as was mention'd in the end of the laſt King's Reign) now returned into England, and was conſecrated in his own Cathedral ſomewhat before our Lady-day, many of the Biſhops of his own Province being preſent.

[5] id. ib. Communitatis The King's Letters to the City of London read publickly; with an Account of His Injunctions to them.

[4] And about our Lady-day, the King's Letters to the Mayor, Sheriffs and Commonalty of London, were read in Guid-hall, being to this Effect; they firſt give the City an Account of the King, ‘That He ‘was at the time of the Writing thoſe Letters at Caples, or Capua, in Terra ‘de Lavoro, with his Kinſman the King of Sicily, and was as well as He ‘could be, conſidering his Sorrow for the Loſs of the King his Father; and ‘that ſince He deſired all Men ſhould enjoy Peace and Tranquility during ‘his Abſence, He therefore Commands them by their Love and Fidelity 'to Himſelf. That they ſhould take care to preſerve the Peace till his Return, which (he ſays) He will haſten with all the ſpeed He can, and 'hopes that He may have Reaſon to thank them; then concludes, That 'ſince He had no Seal of the Kingdom with Him, therefore He had incloſed theſe preſents with the Seal of the King of Sicily. Teſte me ipſo apud 'Caples 19 die Jan. A. R. primo. And it further appears that he having then been invited by the Pope's Bull to be present at this Council, to consult about sending some further Relief to the Holy Land, he thereupon deferr'd his Return home & went thither to consult with the Pope about that affair: Vid. the two Bulls published in R— Coll. Vol. II. p. 10. 20.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIII.

Anno. Dom MCCLXXIV.

King Edward having thus ſettled his Affairs at Paris, [5] took his Leave of King Philip, and went into his own Territories in Gaſcoigné, where He received the Services and Homage of all his Subjects, reducing thoſe to his Obedience that ſtood out; the Chief of whom (as the [1] French as well as our own Hiſtorians inform us) was Gaſton de Moncade, Lord of Bearn, who refuſing to do his Homage to King Edward, He beſieged him in his Caſtle, and ſeized upon his Perſon, and kept him in Priſon for ſome time, till at laſt making his Eſcape he complained of this ſevere Uſage to King Philip of France, as Sovereign Lord both of Edward and himſelf: Whereupon Philip ſummoning an Aſſembly of his Eſtates, upon a full and ſolemn Hearing of the Cauſe before them, they at laſt pronounced Sentence on the behalf of King Edward; and Gaſton de Bearn was adjudged to hold that Country of Him, and to do Him Homage for it. And we farther find in our [2] Hiſtorians, That the Year following he came into England by the King of France's Order, and preſented himſelf before King Edward, being then at Oxford, with a Rope about his Neck, and was kept for ſome time a Priſoner here; but being at laſt pardoned, and having made his Peace with the King, he remained ever after faithful to Him.

[5] M. W.

The K. leaves Paris, and goes into his own Dominions, and there beſieges the Lord of Bearn, and puts him in Priſon for his Diſobedience.

[1] Vid. Mezeray Fr. Hiſt. under this year.

Having eſcaped, he flies to the K. of Fr. to make his Complaint, where he receives no Redreſs.

[2] M. W. T. W.

To intermix ſomewhat of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: [3] The General Council of Lions being now aſſembled, King Edward went thither, to make a Viſit to the Pope and Cardinals, where the Ambaſſadors from England met Him, and deſired Him to return home, to reform his deſolate Kingdom.

[3] Chron de Lanc. ſt. in Bib. Cot.

But during this Prince's preparing for his Journey, it is fit we return into England, and ſee what hath happened there all this while, as well in Civil as Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; which I have put here together, though ſomewhat out of their due place, becauſe I would not interrupt the Relation of this King's great Actions before his Return into England; where little happened conſiderable: Only we find by the Tower Records, a * Writ to have iſſued forth in the King's Name, directed to Richard de Clifford, his Eſcheator on this ſide Trent, to aſſeſs a Talliage upon the City of Briſtol, either ſeparately or by Poll, or elſe in Common, according as it had been uſually practiſed in other Talliages. This Writ bears date the 27th of January, by the hands of Walter de Merton, then Chancellor; But though the Record mentions only Briſtol to have been thus Talliated, yet it is highly probable, That the ſame Tax was raiſed in like manner upon all Cities and Trading Towns throughout England: Yet that this Talliage was not impoſed upon them by reaſon of any Tenure in Capite, but only becauſe of the King's granting them the Privilege of a Free Trade, I have ſufficiently proved in my Introduction.

* Rot. Par. 1. E. 1. M. 18. de Tallagio concedend. Vid. Dr. B's App. n. 3.

A Writ from the K. to aſſeſs a Talliage on the Cities and Towns that held of him.

In Summer following we find another * Writ to have been directed to the Sheriff of Surrey and Suſſex, commanding him, upon a Complaint of divers Robberies and other Miſchiefs committed in that County, to uſe greater Diligence in keeping the Peace, and to do his utmoſt Endeavour to apprehend thoſe Malefactors, and to cauſe all Bayliffs to do the like.

* Rot. Pat. 1. E. 1. M. 16. de Conſ. Pac Ang.

Another Writ to the Sheriffs commanding them to keep the Peace.

This

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIV.

This Writ likewiſe bears Date at Weſtminſter the Sixth of June, in the Firſt Year of this King's Reign.

* Bundela Brevium in Turre n 11

The King's Letter of Thanks to the Chancellor.

And I ſuppoſe it was for the Chancellor's diligence in repreſſing theſe Enormities, as well as other matters, that we find upon Record a *Letter of thanks to him from the King, wherein He farther requires him to proceed as he had begun, and to do Juſtice without any Reſpect of Perſons and to puniſh with Rigor thoſe whom Gentleneſs could not reſtrain from doing Injuries. This bears date at Milan upon the River Seine, on the Ninth of Auguſt.

* N. 3, 4, 5.

But though we are beholding to Dr. Brady, for Printing theſe three laſt Records in his Appendix*, yet I muſt here obſerve, he hath not thought fit to take any notice of them in the body of his Hiſtory, ſo that they are of no uſe to Common Engliſh Readers; and therefore I have thought fit to inſert the ſubſtance of them in their proper Places.

[4] M. W. The Pope ſent a Legate into England, ordering the Clergy to pay their Tenths to the King.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, nothing happened conſiderable, only [4] that the Pope ſent the laſt year a certain Gaſcogne Clerk, called Reymond, into England, with Power to compell all Spiritual Perſons to pay the Tenths of their Eſtates, as well Eccleſiaſtical, as Temporal to the King and his Brother Earl Edmund for their late Expences in the Holy Land; which though it was to have been rais'd in two years time, was now paid all in this, to the great Burthen of the Inferior Clergy; yet of this Money the Legate retain'd a great part for the Pope's uſe.

[5] Annal. de London. The King makes an Agreement with the Counteſs of Flanders.

The King Lands in England, and is joyfully received.

[1] M. W. He is Crown'd at Weſtminſter.

[2] Id. T. W.

[5] King Edward being now arrived at Boloigne, in order to his Return into England, treated and made a final Agreement with the Counteſs of Flanders, concerning all Injuries and Hoſtilities done by her Subjects to thoſe of England, as alſo for the Money which the Queen his Mother had borrowed of her. ⁊ Then the King having ſettled his Affairs beyond Sea, took Shipping at Boloigne, [1] and Landed in England on the Five and twentieth of July: At his Landing Gilbert Earl of Gloceſter, and John Earl of Warren, received Him more magnificently then any other Noblemen; for the former Conducted him to his Caſtle of Tonebridge in Kent, and the latter to that of Riegate in Surry; at both which Places they treated Him for ſome days with great Satisfaction; but being arrived at London, [2] He was on the Nineteenth of Auguſt, together with his Queen Eleanor, Crowned at Weſtminſter by Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Alexander King of Scots, and John Duke of Bretagne his Brother in Law, being preſent, together with a great many of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Noblemen. I need ſay no more of this Coronation, all things being then perform'd according to the uſual Forms. ✓

× And we find ye Articles of this Peace inserted in R—'s Coll: Vol. II. p. 32 - the Chief of which is, yt there shall be a mutual Restitution of all Goods taken away from the merchants of both nations, and a free commerce between them for the future: this Instrument Dated at Monstreile the Saturday after the Feast of St. Mary Magdalen A.D. 1274. Vide R—'s Coll: p. 32.

[3] Id. ib. The King of Scots does his Homage to the King.

Nothing elſe happened worth noting, but that the day after the Coronation [3] the King of Scots did his Homage to King Edward, but whether for Scotland, or elſe for the Earldom of Huntington, and other Lands held of the Crown, our Authors do not mention. When the Solemnity was over, the King paſſed the reſt of this Summer in Settling his Affairs, and reforming ſuch Abuſes as had crept in during his Father's remiſs and unequal Government: And that He might have a better Inſight into the Rights and Revenues of the Crown, and concerning the Incrochments, that had been made upon them, it appears upon *Record, that toward the middle of October, He iſſued out Writs of

* Rot. Par. 2. Ed I. M. 6.

of Enquiry, by the Oaths of Twelve Legal Men, directed to two Commiſſioners in every County, ‘to enquire what were the Royalties, Liberties and Prerogatives of his Crown; as alſo who were his Tenants in Capite or by Military Service; and how many, and what Fees they held of Him; alſo concerning his Tenants in Antient Demeſne, how they had behaved themſelves, and in what Condition their Farms were; and farther to enquire concerning Sheriffs, Coroners, Eſcheators, Bayliffs and their Clerks, whether they had extorted Money by reaſon of their Office, had wronged any Man, or received Bribes, or had been Remiſs in their Places, &c. The whole Enquiry containing Four and thirty Articles, being now Obſolete, need not be further mention'd.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIV.

He iſſued out Writs of Enquiry into Royalties and Liberties of the Crown.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: (4) This Year was held the General Council of Lyons, under Pope Gregory the Tenth, to which Palæologus the Greek Emperor, and the Patriarchs of Jeruſalem and Conſtantinople, came in Perſon; and there was then a Temporary Reconciliation patched up between the Roman and Greek Churches, but it did not continue long.

[4] Ciacon. de vitis Pontif. p. 740.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXV.

[5] The King having this Year kept his Chriſtmas at Woodſtock, not long after Prorogu'd the Parliament (which He at firſt intended to have held Fifteen days after Candlemas) till the morrow after the cloſe of Eaſter next enſuing, as appears by a * Writ, the Copy of which is extant in the † Regiſter of the Biſhop of Worceſter. When this Parliament was aſſembled at Weſtminſter according to the Prorogation, the King there made divers excellent Laws, both for the Eaſe and Benefit of Church and State; the Title or Preface to which being very Remarkable, I ſhall here ſet down at large from the * French Original: Theſe are the Acts, or Eſtabliſhments of King Edward, Son to King Henry, made at Weſtminſter at his firſt General Parliament after his Coronation, on the Monday after Eaſter, in the † Third Year of his Reign, by his Council, and by the Aſſent of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons and all the Commonaltie of the Realm thither Summoned; becauſe our Sovereign Lord the King had great Zeal and Deſire to Redreſs the State of the Realm, in ſuch things as required Amendment, for the Common Profit of Holy Church and the Realm, and becauſe the State of the Realm and Holy Church had been evilly kept, and the Prelates and * Religious of the Land grieved many ways, and the People otherwiſe intreated than they ought to be, the Peace leſs kept, and the Laws leſs obſerved, and Offenders leſs puniſhed then they ought to be, by reaſon whereof the People of the Land leſs feared to offend; the King hath ordained and Eſtabliſhed theſe Acts underwritten, which He judges to be neceſſary and profitable for the whole Realm.

[5] Annal. de Waverly ad hunc An. Annal. Wig ad eundem.

† Regiſtr. Giffard, f. 48.

A Parliament meets at Weſtminſter.

* Vid. Totel's Collection of old Statutes, the Titles to the Laws there made.

† Note Dr. Brady, in the laſt Volume of his Hiſtory, places this Parliament under A.D. 1376. being therein miſled by Mat. Weſtminſter and Thom Walſingham.

* I. e. the Monaſticks.

As for this Body of Laws, which are commonly called the Statutes of Weſtminſter the Firſt, and contain in the whole Fifty one Chapters, I ſhall ſay no more of them here, becauſe I ſhall give the Reader an Abſtract of thoſe and all other Statutes of this King at the end of his Reign. I find no more concerning this Parliament, [1] but that divers of the King's Tenants being troubled by Writs of Quo Warranto, now ſurrendred their Fees to the King, who compounded with ſome of them, and gave them leave to hold their Eſtates for Term of Life.

The Statute of Weſtminſter the firſt enacted, with other things then done.

[1] An. Wav. ib.

Nothing happened remarkable this Summer, nor the Summer following, only that in the begining of September there happened ſo great an Earthquake at and about the Cities of London, Canterbury, Worceſter and all

[2] Chron. Thom Wikes & M. W. ad hunc An.

A great Earthquake in England.

Annō Dom. MCCLXXIV.

all the Weſtern Sea Coaſts, that divers Houſes and Churches were overthrown by it; which being very rare in England, I thought fit to take notice of.

[3] Id. ib. Annal. Wigor. Another Parl. held at the ſame place. Annal. Wigorn.

[3] Fifteen days after Michaelmas the King held another Parliament at Weſtminſter; wherein He required a Fifteenth, both of the Clergy and Laity, towards the Charges He had been at in his Wars in the Holy Land: This was granted by the latter; but the former, lying already under a great Burthen of a Tenth, impoſed upon them by the Pope for Six Years for the like purpoſe, excuſed themſelves; yet the Biſhops promiſed, That they would do their Endeavour that the Clergy of their reſpective Dioceſes ſhould grant ſomewhat more, by way of Benevolence, at their next Meeting, ſome time after Eaſter.

[4] An. Wav. ib. The Jews prohibited from putting out their Money to Uſury.

In [4] this Parliament alſo the Jews were prohibited, by a Statute not now extant, from putting out their Money to Uſury, and that they ſhould live by their Labour and Merchandize; and were alſo enjoyned to wear certain Badges on their upper Garments, of a Span long, whereby they might be known. Theſe Statutes, though mention'd by our Hiſtorians, are not extant upon the Rolls; and had they been duly obſerved, would have made the Jews quit the Kingdom, without any Law to be made on purpoſe for it.

[5] M. W. T. W. Ad An. 1375. Llewellyn Pr. of Wales ſummon'd to the Coronation, and to Parl. but refus'd to appear, and on what Pretence y see the writ of Summons it selfe: Pat. 33. Edw: 1. m: 10. Dat. ~~at~~ Chester. 20. Sept:

We ſhall now ſay ſomewhat of the Affairs Welſh [5] Llewellyn then Prince thereof, having been invited to the King's Coronation to do his Homage, and alſo Summon'd to his Firſt Parliament at Weſtminſter, refuſed to appear; becauſe (as he pretended) ſome of the Great Men laid wait for his Life: And being again called upon by the King to do his Homage, he ſtill made the ſame Excuſe, and demanded no leſs than the King's Son, with Robert Earl of Gloceſter and Robert Burnell (then Chancellor) as Pledges for his ſafe Coming and Return. Which Affront the King ſilently paſſed by, till the firſt Parliament at Weſtminſter was over; not long after which, [1] He went on Progreſs as far as Cheſter, and from thence ſent again to the Welſh Prince, to ſummon him to appear at the next Parliament that ſhould be held at London preſently after Michaelmas; but he refuſed to come thither, ſaying, He too well remembred the Fate of Llewellyn his Father, who endeavouring to eſcape out of the Tower, fell down from thence, and broke his Neck (as has been already related.) Upon which Anſwer the King finding there was no hopes of prevailing with him by fair means, reſolved to raiſe an Army to force him to comply with what was looked upon as his Duty to perform. But I do not find He proceeded any farther againſt him this Year; which ſo encouraged the Welſh Prince, That he took Arms, and ſeized upon and demoliſhed Rothland, and ſeveral other ſtrong Caſtles in the Borders of his Country. *

[1] M. W. ib. The K. goes to Cheſter, and there again ſummons Pr. Llewellyn, with his Anſwer. * See the laſt Vol. p.

* But Prince Lewellyn fearing the Pope's Excommunication would be issued out against him sent y^e Pope a long Letter wherein he vindicates himselfe for making war with the King of England; reciting the last Peace made between King Henry & himselfe, which had been confirmed by y^e oaths of y^e s^d King & y^e Lord Edward his son & Successor, & being reduced into Writing had been seald by both their Seals, in which it was agreed amongst oth^r things, y^t he should hold his Principality of Wales by Homage from him and his Successors. Yet so, y^t all y^e Barons of Wales should hold their Lands immediately of him y^e Prince & his successors; for which he was to do Homage to y^e King of England & also y^t it was therein contained, y^t should not receive any Rebells or Fugitives which should rebell ag^st him y^e said Prince: but notwithstanding all this, Edward y^e now detained certain Lands, w^ch had belong'd to y^e s^d Prince's Dominions, & had also seized & detained one of y^e Baronies, w^ch by y^e s^d Peace to his Territories; & had also received and maintained some of his Barons, who had conspired his Death & plundered his Lands, & com murthers, & do not cease so to do. & y^t all this was done notwithstanding y^e said King had received his Holiness's Letters, y^t he should observe yet that he had shown no Reverence to them; but had summoned him to come & do him Homage in an unsafe Place amongst his & Fugitives, & to w^ch he could not come without Danger of his Person: — And y^t altho he had thrice sent his excuse to y^e King concerning he had refused to accept it, or to appoint any safe Place where he might do his Homage, which he was ready to perform, always would also observe all the Articles contained in y^e said Treaty of Peace, & would correct what had been acted ag^st it; & altho it had not y^e fair offer yet that he (the Prince) had further besought him to send some of his Subjects to take his Fealty on his Behalf, until som be agreed on where he might come & do his Homage to him in Person, which y^e King had positively deny'd: And therefore he (the Prin y^e King might further do, & seek an occasion of wholly departing from y^e Treaty of Peace; to prevent this, he casts himself at his Ho beseeching him to find out such a Remedy as he thought most expedient to compell King Edward to observe y^e said Form of very unwilling to break, since his Holiness cannot but be sensible how great Dangers hung over the English & Welsh Nation Differences should again arise, which God avert. — He then concludes y^t since he is seated in Parts so remote from his that there is no access to it by Land, but through the Dominions of his Capital Enemies, who also guard the Sea

* Rot. Parl. 3. Ed. 1. M. 2. vid. Dr. B's App. n. 6. The King is ſummon'd to the Parl. of France, but not being able to go thither, makes his Excuſe.

King Edward being now returned to London, it appears by a *Record in the Tower, That about the end of October the King of France ſent to him to come over to his Parliament that was to be held at Paris on the morrow of the Quindene of the Feaſt of St. Martin, (being the 26th of November) then to appear with the reſt of the Peers of France, who were to be Judges in a great Cauſe depending between Robert Duke of Burgundy on the one Part, and Robert Earl of Nevers and Jobende his Wife on the other, concerning the Dutchy of Burgundy. But the King being taken up with the weighty Affairs of his own Kingdom, ſent Maurice de Credome, Otto de Grandiſon, and Roger de Clifford, his Envoys, to make his Excuſe. Their Commiſſion bears Date at Weſtminſter the Second of November.

ould be given for his sending to that Court, he therefore beseeches his Holyness not to give Ear to any, who should y thing to his Disadvantage, or yt he should have acted contrary to ye said Treaty of Peace, until such Time as his Holyness truely inform'd concerning ye said Affair by some faithful & discreet Person to be sent for that Purpose: This Letter bears Tresselin on the 20th of Sept: this year, & is publish'd in R—'s Coll: Vol: II. p. 57. 58.

given you ye substance of this Prince's Defence to the Pope, I shall now give you King Edward's own Account concerning & original of this Quarrel, since it is omitted by all the Historians of that Time & is only to be found upon the Rolls of this being a Declaration of this King's to satisfy his Subjects of the Justice of his Cause & the Resolution of his great Council therein this Effect, yt ye King had held a great Council of the Bishops, Abbots, Earls & Barons of England on ye Morrow after ye Feast of St. Martin or 12th of Novb to whom he had communicated all ye Process yt had passe between him and Llewellyn

November this Year, and deſerves our Notice, ſince it ſhews us, That the King of England then thought it no Leſſening of His Royal Dignity, to be ſummoned as Duke of Aquitain to appear at a Parliament in France. X

[1] This Year the King kept his Chriſtmas at the Caſtle of Wincheſter, and after the Holidays held a Parliament there for divers Weeks, thô what was done in it does not now appear, more than what is mentioned by this Author, That about Candlemas, whilſt it ſtill continued ſitting, Gaſton Lord of Berne came over into England, and preſented himſelf to the King's Mercy for his late Rebellion, according to the Order of the King of France: This Nobleman being courteouſly received, was kept in free Cuſtody in the ſaid Caſtle for ſome days, and then ſet free in full Parliament, on Condition, That he ſhould attend the * Court of the King of France, there to receive what He ſhould ordain concerning him. But Walſingham relates, That King Edward now pardoned him, and being received into his Favour, he continued faithful to his Intereſt as long as he lived.

In [2] this Parliament likewiſe at Wincheſter, the King confirmed the Charters of Liberties and Foreſts, and ordered it ſhould be proclaimed all over England, That they ſhould be ſtrictly obſerved.

About this time there happen'd an Accident, that for the preſent took off all hopes of any Accommodation between the King and the Prince of Wales: For the latter, to ſtrengthen his Intereſt againſt King Edward, [3] had entred into a private League with the King of France, and as an Earneſt of it, deſired that Eleanor, Daughter to Simon Montfort, late Earl of Leiceſter, a young Lady of great Beauty, might be ſent over to him into Wales, to be married. [4] King Philip complying with his Requeſt, did, by the Conſent of her Mother, then a Nun at Montargis, ſend her accordingly, accompanied by her Brother Amey a Clergy Man: But the Ship in which they were, being ſet upon by Four Briſtol Veſſels, was eaſily taken near the Iſles of Scilly, and the young Lady, with her Brother and all the reſt of their Company, were carried away Priſoners to King Edward, who not thinking it convenient that the Welſh Prince, being now entred into a State of War againſt him, ſhould match into the Family of his greateſt Enemy, though he received the Lady (as being his near Relation) with all Kindneſs and Civility, and committed her to the Care of his Queen; yet as for her Brother, the King ordered him to be kept for a long time Priſoner, firſt in Corfe, and then in Sherborn Caſtle.

[5] Then preſently after Eaſter, the King held another Parliament at Weſtminſter, where He pardoned ſeveral who had been diſinherited for their Rebellion with Montfort: And He had now granted Him a Fifteenth from the Laity; but ſince I do not find how much was given by the Clergy, I ſhall only tell you what is upon * Record concerning it. Firſt, there is the King's Letter or Declaration, which is to this effect; The King to all Perſons ſends greeting: Whereas the Earls, Barons, with other great Men, and the Communalty of Our Kingdom, have granted Us a Fifteenth of all their Goods; and the Venerable Father the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Suffragan Biſhops, for Our urgent Occaſions, have alſo granted Us an Aid of their Goods: We by theſe Letters do declare and proteſt, That this Gift proceeded purely from free Goodwill, and not in the Name of a Fifteenth; and that it ſhall not be urged as an Example, or as a Due be drawn into a Cuſtom by Us or Our

Anno Dom. MCCLXXV.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVI.

[1] Annal. Wigorn. ad hunc An.

A Parliament at Wincheſter.

Gaſton de Berne comes over, and ſubmits himſelf to K. Edward.

* Curia; the Parliament of Paris, as I ſuppoſe.

[2] Id. ib.

[3] Pol. Vergil, Lib. 17.

Pr. Llewelyn deſires to marry the Daughter of Simon de Montfort, who is ſent over to him out of France, and taken at Sea.

[4] T. W. ad An. 1277.

She is preſented to the K. and kindly uſed, but her Brother kept Priſoner.

[5] An. Wav. M. W.

Another Parl. where the K. receives a Fifteenth from the Laity, and a voluntary Gift from the Biſhops.

* Rot. Pat. 4 Ed. 1. M 6.

The King's Declaration concerning it.

X As for Ecclesiastical Affairs, I find nothing worth mentioning, but that Walter de Merton Chancellor to the late King Henry was this year elected Bp. of Rochester, ~~al~~ but he had already founded Merton Colledg in Oxon. Chron: de Tinmuthe ad hunc ann.

Ap: Griffyn Prince of Wales & how often he had been summon'd since ye King's Coronation to appear & do his Homage; as first at Chester, then at Winchester, & lastly at Westminster; at all which summons he had fail'd to come, but only had by his Envoys put off his appearing by frivolous Excuses, & yt upon his failing to appear three weeks after Easter as was last appointed him, ye ArchBishop of Canterbury & some other Bishops, Earls & Barons had earnestly desired ye King yt they might send Messengers to ye Prince to persuade him to come & do his Homage, & yt he would supersede the further Proceeding in this affair until another Time; to wch Entreaties, sent to ye Prince by the Arch Deacon of Canterbury, he would give no satisfactory Answer tho' ye sd Arch Deacon had labour'd much in it. And further that after 15 Days after Michaelmas last past, ye said Llewellyn had signify'd to him by his Letter, yt he would come to Montgomery to ye white monastery, & there do his Homage, yet on this condition yt ye King should give him a safe Conduct, viz: by the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Winchester, the Earls of Cornwall, Norfolk Lincoln, & others therein mention'd, for his coming, staying and returning without any Challenge or Demand to be made ag. him by any Persons. And further that ye King should confirm by Letters ye Terms of Peace formerly made between King Henry his Father & himself, & yt he would cause to be supply'd & made good whatsoever had been wanting in the said Peace, Lastly yt he w. restore him his wife with all her Attendants &c.

Upon his performance of what ye K. requir'd ll which Letters & Promises, together with the whole Process above mention'd, having been on the Morrow after ye Feast of artin read and lay'd open before the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, ye Bishops of London & Rochester & other Prelates there tion'd, as also before the Lord William de Valence, the Earls of Cornwall, Glocester, & Hereford, with other Earls, ns & great men, Justices & others of the Council of their Lord the King, they came to this Resolution, that whereas ye Llewellyn had been oftentimes summon'd to come, & do his Homage on ye certain Days & places assign'd him, as ght to have done, being thereunto requir'd; but had contemn'd the King's Summons in all the Premisses, unless ye would straiten & confine himself to those things, which he is no ways oblig'd to observe.

yt ye said Llewellyn had not observ'd those Articles, which are contain'd in ye Treaty of Peace made between ye late King Henry self, but had presum'd to break them contrary to his own oath & Promise, & yt he had also lately in hostile Manner himself & his Followers spoil'd the King's Subjects in the Marches of Wales, killing many of them, & executing Burnings & plundering of Houses & had receiv'd the said Murtherers & Robbers into his Protection against Kingdom;

It was therefore agreed by the Common Advice of all the said Prelates, Earls, & Barons & other great Men, yt ye K give Ear to the said Prince's Petition, nor admit his Excuses, but shd proceed against him as his Rebell & Perturbator of his Pe
Then follows an Order, yt all yt owe ye King their military Services shall be at Worcester by ye Feast of St. John Bapti Horses & Arms &c. which since you will find more at large in the Writ for that Purpose I barely mention; and that while the Marches shall be fortified with sufficient Garrisons: then it concludes with a strict Prohibition of all the Ki in England, Ireland & Gascoigne not to hold any Correspondence with Lewellyn, or his Confederates, or to supply any victuals, Horses or Arms, or other things necessary for their use, & yt whoever shall presume to act against the said Inhibitions shall incur ye Punishment of publick Enemies to the King & Kingdom. this bears Date at Westminster the Day of Nov: this year & is published in R–'s Coll: p. 68. 69.

And besides this ye King then ordered ye Bishops to proceed agst said Prince by Spiritual Censures of Excommunication, whereupon the Arch Bishop of Canterbury & his Suffragans wrote to him to admonish him to desist from disturbing ye Peace of the King & Kingdom by making war upon them; & yt if he did not immediately do so, they threatened to put ye Sentence of Excommunication against him, which had been agreed on in the Council of Oxford, in ye Time of Stephen late Arch Bishop, & had likewise been denounced by ye late Arch Bishop Boniface & other Bishops in Westminster Hall by order of ye late King, the Earl of Cornwall & other great Men, & which had been also confirmed by the Authority of the Pope against all those, who should presume to disturb the Peace of the King & Kingdom, or deprive him of any of his just Rights: this Letter bears Date at Westminster on Friday after the Feast of St. Martin & is published in R–'s Coll: p. 71. from an old Book in the Exchequer in the Custody of the Chamberlain.

All that I can find further to have been order'd in Relation to this intended War against this Welsh Prince is, that about this Time the King by a Writ or Declaration, directed to the Earls, Barons Knights and others his faithful Subjects of the Counties of Shropshire & Herefordshire, with the Parts adjacent, thereby appointed Roger Lord Mortimer Captain or Commander in Chief of the Militia in those Counties against Lewellyn, commanding them to obey the said Roger as his Lieutenant, & to assist him with Horses and Arms according to their Power, as oft as they should be by him required on the Kings Behalf, until he should give further Orders. This bears Date at Westminster the 15th of Nov: (whilst the great Council was still sitting) and is entered on the Rolls of this Year vid: R–'s Coll: p. 71.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVI.

Nothing now given by the infer. Clergy.

Heirs. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, the Firſt of November. But thô the Biſhops now gave the King this voluntary Aid, yet I do not find that the Inferior Clergy granted Him any thing, for that it is mention'd in this Declaration to be only the Act of the Biſhops.

[1] M. W. ib.

Pr. Llewellyn is again ſummon'd, but refuſes to come, and again invades the Eng. Territories.

[2] Pol. Vergil, ib.

[3] T. W. ib.

[4] M. W. ib.

The King marches to the Borders of Wales, and takes Rothland Caſtle.

All that I can find done farther during this Parliament, was, [1] that Prince Llewellyn was again ſummoned to it, but refuſed to appear; only ſent to the King, offering him a great Sum of Money for rhe Ranſom of his Miſtris, then under His Cuſtody: But this the King denied him, unleſs he would firſt build and reſtore the Caſtles he had taken; which ſo incenſed him, [2] that in the Spring he again invaded the Engliſh Territories, and took ſome other ſtrong Places. Upon which the King was ſo enraged, that He [3] marched immediately with ſome Forces to the Borders near Cheſter, and beſieged and retook the Caſtle of Rothland; and at the ſame time ſent Payne de Cadurſis, a Commander of Note, into Weſt-Wales, where with Fire and Sword he laid waſt all that Country, [4] The King alſo, much about the ſame time, ſent Three hundred Men at Arms into the South-Marches, next to Briſtol and Montgomery, to reſtrain the Incurſions of the Welſh Men. But not having an Army ſtrong enough to make an entire Conqueſt of that Country, He did nothing more this Year againſt them; being taken up otherwiſe, in making great Preparations of Men and Money to carry on the War the Year following.

A Parliament held, in which the Statute de Bigamis was paſſed.

Vide Stat. de Bigamis, 4 of Edw. I. in the Printed Statute Books.

But to leave Military, and return to Civil Affairs: I find nothing of particular Moment to have been tranſacted till ſome time after Michaelmas, when the King held another Parliament at Weſtminſter, in which the Statute de Bigamis was made, having been firſt drawn up in Chapters, and recited in the Preſence of certain of the Biſhops, Juſtices, and others of the King's Council, who did all agree, That they ſhould be publiſhed for perpetual Memory; and they were then confirmed and paſſed into an Act by the King and his Parliament, as appears by the Concluſion of this Statute; which I here take notice of, that the Reader may obſerve the Form of drawing up and paſſing Acts of Parliament in this Age.

Why it is ſo called, and the effect of that Decree.

But to come to the Statute it ſelf; it derives its Title from the Fifth Chapter or Conſtitution of it, being an Interpretation of the Sixteenrh Canon of the Second Council of Lyons; wherein, among other things, Pope Gregory X. determined that long diſputed Queſtion concerning Perſons twice married, whom He thereby declares utterly deprived and uncapable of all Clerical Privileges, and left them to the Secular Juriſdiction; and farther forbad them, under a Curſe, either to be ſhaven, or wear a Clergyman's Habit.

All Perſons that had been twice married are excluded from all Clerical Privilege by this Stat.

Upon this Decree ſome Biſhops or Ordinaries in England did take this Canon to extend only to thoſe that were twice married after the making of this Canon; but as to ſuch as were in that State before that time, theſe being arraigned for ſtealing, the Biſhops required to be delivered up to them, that they might have the Benefit of their Clergy: For the ſettling of which dubious Point, this Statute was made, wherein it is declared, That the aforeſaid Conſtitution or Decree ſhould be ſo underſtood for the future, that thoſe who were Bigamiſts, as well before as after the making of it, ſhould for the time coming not be delivered to the Prelates, but have Juſtice paſs upon them as meer Laymen. This Statute, tute, though now obſolete, yet ſince it ſhews the Judgment of the Parliament of that Age, concerning this Point, deſerves our Notice.

[Pol.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVI.

And now to intermix ſomewhat of military Matters for the Diverſion of the Reader; I ſhall here take Notice, [2] that about Michaelmas before, the King to enure his Nobility to Feats of Arms, held a great Tourneament at Jouſtings (as they were then call'd) in Cheapſide, ſuch a one as the like had not been ſeen before, conſiſting of the moſt Active and Courageous Young Noblemen and Knights of the whole Kingdom, this is the firſt time I can find theſe martial Exerciſes to have been performed at this Place, though in the Reign of King Edward the Third, his Grandſon, they were frequently held there.

[2] H ſt. MS. Rob. Aveſbury, Cap. 6.

A great Tourneament held in Cheapſide.

King Edward being now reſolved to make a vigorous War to reduce the Prince of Wales, at the latter end of this Year iſſued out his * Writs of Summons, bearing date the Twelfth day of December, directed to all Lords, whether Spiritual or Temporal, and to all others that held of him by Knights Service; which Writs being very remarkable, I ſhall here inſert a Copy of them. Whereas Llewellyn the Son of Griffin Prince of Wales and his accomplices Our Rebels, have invaded the Lands of Our Subjects in the Marches, and do daily invade them, and commit Murthers and other Wickedneſſes, and the ſame Llewellyn refuſes to obey Us, as he ought, to the great Prejudice and Contempt of Us, and to the manifeſt Diſinheritance and great Damage of you (the Perſon to whom the Writ was directed) and other of Our Subjects, We have therefore now cauſed Our Army to be Summoned at Worceſter, eight days after the Feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt, to repreſs the Rebellion of the ſaid Llewellyn and his Aſſiſtants; wherefore We command you to be ready with your Horſes and Arms, and with your Service due to Us, to march with Us from thence againſt the aforeſaid Llewellyn, &c. So this Winter and part of the Summer following was ſpent in making great Preparations for the War againſt Wales; the King in the mean while acting only defenſively. x

The King reſolves to proſecute the War againſt Wales.

* Rot. Scutag. 5 Ed. 1. M. 8.

The Form of the Kings Summons to his Military Tenants.

x ~~This year a considerable accession was added to King Edwards territories in France; for the Queen Dowager of Castile Mother to Eleanor the Kings consort, was deceasing the Earldom or County of Ponthieu (a). 1279 [illegible] to that of Bologne descended to the Queen of England as Heir to her Mother. Chron. de [illegible]~~

I ſhall conclude this Year with ſome Eccleſiaſtical Affairs worth our remarking, though they fell out in Italy; when [3] Pope Gregory X. deceaſing the latter end of the laſt Year, was in the beginning of this Succeeded by Innocent V. who ſate but five Months and two days, and then dying He was ſucceeded by Cardinal Ottobon (who had been Legate in England) and now took the name of Adrian V. but he governed only two Months more, and upon his deceaſe Peter a Spaniard was choſen Pope, and was ſtyled John the XXI. He was accounted a great Scholar, yet lived to forget all his Learning, having ſcarce common Senſe for ſome time before he died, which was the Year following; And that which was moſt obſervable, is, That there were no leſs then four Popes in the ſpace of little more then one Year. But to return to the Affairs of England:

[3] M.W. T.W.

The Death of Pope Gregory, and two others Popes within one Year.

Anno. Dom. MCCLXXVII.

This Year begins with the War againſt Wales; when not long after Chriſtmas the King, till He could raiſe his Army, ſent down Forces towards the Borders of that Country, to defend them and hinder the Incurſions of the Welſhmen, which was very well perform'd; [4] then Fifteen days after Eaſter King Edward, leaving London, began his Journey towards Wales, the whole Militia of England being to meet Him at Worceſter, according to his Summons: But perceiving his Stay in thoſe Parts was like to be of ſome Continuance, He removed his Courts of Juſtice to Shrewsbury; and arriving at Worceſter before the time appoin-

3 Chron. T. Wikes ad Annum. 1276

The King ſends down ſome Forces to defend the Borders of Wales

[4] M. W.

And then Marches with his whole Army for that Country, and removes his Courts to Shrewsbury.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVII.

[5] T.Wikes ad An. 1277.

The King rebuilds the Caſtles of Rothland and Flynt.

The Welſh flee to the Mountain of Snowdun.

The K. Conquers the Iſle of Angleſey.

Dr. Powel's Chron. ad hunc Ann.

Southwales ſubmits to K. Edward's General.

ted, He marched towards Midſummer into [5] Wales, beyond Cheſter; and coming to a thick Wood, which he found unpaſſable for his Army, He cauſed a large Way to be cut through it, by which He got into Lluellyn's Territories, and then making ſome Stay near the River Dee, He order'd the Caſtle of Rothland, which had been demoliſhed by the Welſh Prince, to be repaired; and alſo new built the Caſtle of Flynt, for the better Security of thoſe Marches. Upon the King's Approach the Welſh, terrified by ſo great a Force, fled for Refuge to their old Retreat the Mountain of Snowdun; where the King being at preſent not able eaſily to aſſault them by Land, made War upon them by Sea; and with the Aſſiſtance of a numerous Fleet, ſet out and mann'd by thoſe of the Cinque-Ports, He landed great part of his Army in the Iſle of Angleſey, and made an entire Conqueſt of it, though He afterwards reſtored it to Lluellyn upon the Peace. But in the mean while the King's Forces, under the Command of Payne de Caturſis in South-wales, found much better Succeſs; for the People of that Country fearing the Power of King Edward's Army, preſently ſubmitted themſelves, and delivered up the ſtrong Caſtle of Yſtratwy to his General abovementioned.

[2] Ib. M. W.

A Peace between the K. and the Pr. of Wales, with the Conditions.

But the War was carried on in North-wales with great Vigour, all this Summer, till the Autumn following, when upon this unexpected Succeſs, Prince Llewellyn ſeeing his Country almoſt loſt, and South-wales already ſubdued, and that his Subjects had many of them forſaken him; being unable any longer to reſiſt the King's Forces, [2] he at laſt ſued to Him for Peace, which was there treated, and ſoon agreed on, by Commiſſioners appointed on both ſides, upon the following Articles:

I. That all Engliſh Priſoners ſhould be releaſed freely, without claiming any thing from them.

II That for this Peace, and the King's Goodwill, he ſhould pay, at the King's Pleaſure, Fifty thouſand Pounds Sterling.

III. That Four Cantreds, and all the Lands conquered by the Engliſh, (except Angleſey) ſhould be and remain to the King and his Heirs for ever: And for Angleſey, the Prince was to enjoy it, paying the King One thouſand Marks every Year, the firſt Payment to begin at Michaelmas then at hand; and as a Fine for his Ingreſs or Entry upon it, Five thouſand Marks: And if the Prince died without Heirs, the King to have the Poſſeſſion of it.

IV. That he ſhould come into England to the King at Chriſtmas, to do his Homage.

V. That all the Homages in Wales ſhould be to the King, except thoſe of Five Barons that lived in the Confines of Snowdun; becauſe he could not be called Prince, unleſs he had ſome Barons under him; yet this only for his Life; but after his Death the Homages of thoſe Five Barons ſhould remain to the King and his Heirs for ever.

VI. Item, for the Performance of theſe Articles, he delivered to the King Ten Hoſtages, of the beſt Perſons in Wales, but without being reſtrain'd or diſinherited; and the beſt Men of every Cantred, and of Snowdun, by Conſent of the Prince, were to ſwear upon the Holy Relicks, That whenſoever the Prince broke any of theſe Articles, unleſs upon Admonition he preſently amended, they were to leave him, and become his Enemies.

The Prince was alſo bound to make Satisfaction to his Brothers for the Injuries he had done them; and they were Three, Owen and Roderick, rick, whom he had put in Priſon, and David whom he had forced to fly into England; where having long ſerved the King, He Knighted him, and gave him the Daughter of the Earl of Derby in Marriage, as alſo Denbigh-Caſtle, and a thouſand Pounds per Annum beſides; in conſideration of which, he was to permit the Prince his Brother to enjoy that part of the Eſtate in Wales that came to him from his Father. I have no more to add concerning this Peace, but that the King Authorized Robert Tiptoſt, Anthony Beke, and William de Southampton, Provincial of the Friars-Preachers, as his Commiſſioners to receive Prince Llewellyn's Oath to obſerve it; and the Prince appointed on his part Theodor ap Ednyuet, and Grono ap Heilyn to receive the like Oath from the Lord Robert Tiptoſt on the behalf of the King, who thought it beneath Him to Swear in Perſon; but ſince by this Agreement there was little more left to poor Llewellyn, than the meer Title of a Prince, it is no wonder, that being a Man of a haughty Spirit, and receiving further provocations from the Engliſh, if in ſome years after, he began another War, which ended in the ruin of himſelf and Family.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVII.

Upon this Succeſs, the King (having built the Caſtle of Lampader-Vaur for the Security of the Marches,) returned into England with Honour, and at his Return the Laity granted him a Thirtieth part of their moveable Goods for the Charges of his Welſh Expedition, which was done in Parliament, though our Author does not expreſly mention it, which ſhews us that there were many more Parliaments, than we can now find upon Record.

[3] T. W.

The Laity grant the King a Thirtieth Part of their moveable Goods.

All I can find as to forreign affairs is, that this year the King directed a Letter to Robert de Ufford his Justiciary in Ireland, reciting, that whereas the Community of that Kingdom had offered him 8000 marks on condition, that he would grant, that the Laws of England should be observed in that Country; the King therefore lets him understand, that since the Laws and Customs which are used in Ireland are detestable to God, & disagreeable to right Reason, he therefore having taken diligent advice and Deliberation with his Councel, thought it expedient to grant his said Subjects the Laws of England, provided that the common consent of the People, or at least of the Prelates & great men who were best affected to him shall agree to receive them. Therefore the King commands him, yt having first had a Treaty with them, & diligently examin'd their Inclinations, he should agree with them for the greatest Sum of Money he could obtain from them, or ye better, or major Part of them, as he shall find it most expedient for his Service to agree with them concerning the Premisses, & besides yt they should take care to provide, & get ready 100 able footmen to be transported, when he should think fit to send for them. This writ is to be found in a loose Bundle of Letters in the Tower vid: R—'s Coll: p. 78. From which it appears yt notwithstanding a great Part of Ireland had been for near 100 years under ye Dominion of ye Kings of England, & ye Kings writ or ye Orders yt had been sent over for yt Purpose, yet ye Power of ye great Lords & Proprietors had been so great in those Parts, that they would never admit the English Laws to be observed there till about this Time, when some of ye Prelates & noblemen, being weary of their Tyranny, & Oppression, were desirous to enjoy the like Laws & Priviledges with those of England, especialy those granted by Magna Charta, & other wholesome Statutes.

As to Church Matters in England, [4] Walter de Merton Biſhop of Rocheſter, and late Lord Chancellor, in a Journey as he paſſed over a dangerous Ford, had the miſhap to fall from his Horſe into the Water, and being with ſome difficulty pulled out, he thereby got cold, and died not long after; who deſerves our remembrance, as having, Anno Domini 1267, founded Merton College in Oxford, which hath produced many Prelates and other Perſons famous for their Learning and Worth.

[4] Id.

If we look into Italy, [5] Pope John XXI, being extreamly bruiſed by the fall of ſome new Lodgings, which He had built at his Palace at Viterbo, died of it in a few days; to whom ſucceeded John, Cardinal and Biſhop of Cajeta of the noble Family of the Urſini, who was called Pope Nicholas the Third: He was alſo learned, and wrote ſeveral Treatiſes.

[5] C. N. Trivet.

Pope John XXI dies of a Bruiſe, and is ſucceeded by Nicholas III.

And one of ye first things the new Pope did after his Promotion was, to send a Letter to King Edward to give him Notice of it, & to exhort him to continue in the ways of virtue, & ye good Government of his Subjects. It is dated at the Palace of St Peter in the Lateran 16th Cal: of Feb: & is published in R—'s Coll: p. 88. 89.

It is likewiſe very remarkable, that in leſs then two Years there were five Popes who ſucceded each other.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVIII

An Waver.

The firſt Action I can find to have been perform'd by the King this Year, is the Progreſs which He and his Queen made at Eaſter to Glaſtenbury-Abbey, where He cauſed the Bones of King Arthur to be taken out of their Tomb, or Coffin, and having ſurveyed them with Admiration, order'd them to be laid up in their Treaſury, that all Men might ſee them; then the King and Queen having made rich Offerings or Preſents to that Monaſtery, return'd to London.

The King and Queen go to Glaſtenbury and there view King Arthurs Bones.

But the Antient * Leiger Book that once belonged to the Abbey of Glaſtenbury (called Secretum Abbatis) relates this Story ſomewhat otherwiſe, and though it agrees with the former concerning the King and Queen's then viewing King Arthur's Bones, yet it alſo mentions thoſe of Queen Guenevere his Wife, both which the King ordered to be again put into their ſeveral Coffins, only that of King Arthur's

* In Bib. Bodleian. pergulâ novâ.

Another Relation of this Matter from the old Leiger Book.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXVIII

thur's were ordered to be laid by the High-Altar with an Inſcription, ſetting forth at large whoſe Bones they were, and that they had been viewed by King Edward and his Queen this very Year, in the Preſence of the Biſhop Elect of Norwich, and other Clergymen and Noblemen of England, as alſo of the Earl of Savoy, who was then here. This ſhews us the truth of what was related in the firſt Volume of this Hiſtory, concerning King Arthur's Bones being diſcovered in the Reign of Henry II. But to come to Matters of greater moment:

1 Vol. Book 3. p. 137.

A Parliament at Glocester, and the Laws there made.

* Vid. Keebles Stat. ad hunc Annum.

About Fifteen days after Midſummer the King ſummoned a Parliament at Glocester, in which were made that Body of Laws called the Statutes of Glocester, containing fourteen Chapters, of which you will ſee the Titles or Heads at the end of this Reign: But I muſt Advertiſe the Reader that the date of the Year, in the Preface to theſe Statutes in the * Printed Copy is miſtaken, being Anno Domini 1277. whereas it ſhould have been 1278. and ſo is likewiſe the Publication of them, which is there ſaid to be given at Glocester the Fourth of October, whereas the Explanations of theſe Statutes, which immediately follow them, bear date likewiſe at Glocester, the Sunday after the Feaſt of St. Peter ad Vincula (which is the Sixteenth of Auguſt) ſo that this Parliament ſate about Five Weeks, which was a very long Seſſion in thoſe Times.

[2[Ch. Abing. C. W. H.

The King Iſſues out his Writs of Quo Warranto. The Earl of Surrey being Summoned, gives ſo ſtout an Anſwer, as ſtopt thoſe Proceedings.

Not long after this Parliament, (2) the King iſſued out certain Writs of Enquiry called of Quo Warranto (i. e. by what Warrant or Authority Men held their Eſtates) and if they could not ſhew a good Title, they were to be ſeized into the King's Hands; whereupon John Earl of Warren and Surrey being cited amongſt others to ſhew the Title of his Eſtate before the King's Juſtices, and asked by what Warrant he held them, ſaid thus, My Anceſtors coming in with William the Baſtard, won theſe Lands by the Sword, and by the Sword I will defend them againſt any that will take them away; for that King did not Conquer for Himſelf alone, neither did my Anceſtors aſſiſt Him for that end: Which being heard by the reſt of the great Men there preſent, they were much incenſed; and when the King perceived it, He was affraid, and deſiſted from his Enterpriſe of looking further into Men's Titles.

I am ſenſible that this Story may be urged by ſome as an Inſtance, That it was an Opinion then generally received, that King William the Firſt had a Right by Conqueſt to all the Lands of England: Perhaps the Nobility of the Norman Race might then believe ſo; but this doth neither prove the matter of Right, nor yet that of Fact, that ever King William claimed England by Conqueſt; But however this Inſtance plainly ſhews, that thoſe Noblemen never believed that King William thereby acquired an abſolute Power over them and their Eſtates.

[3] T. Wi. M. W.

The King goes again into Wales, to obſerve the Motions of the Welſh Prince.

[3] Prince Llewellyn having fail'd to appear at ſeveral Parliaments to which he had been Summoned, it made the King Jealous, that this Prince intended to break the Peace; and therefore He reſolved to go down in Perſon into the Marches of Wales, attended but with a ſmall Guard, about the middle of Auguſt, to obſerve his Motions: But ſo ſoon as the Prince heard of the King's Arrival, being afraid of his Indignation, he preſently attended Him, and making plauſable Excuſes for his not appearing, ſo far regain'd the King's Favour, as to obtain his Conſent to Marry the Lady Eleanor abovemention'd, and to whom he was already Contracted.

There-

Anno Dom.
MCCLXXVIII.

Therefore it is very likely, that the King continued in theſe Parts till after Michaelmas, and it is probable that then He being reconciled to the Welſh Prince, [4] he accompanied Him to Worceſter * where on the Third of October, he was ſolemnly Married to that Lady, whom he had ſo long Courted, the Queen and moſt of the Nobility of England being preſent at the Solemnity, and the Expences of the Wedding were wholly defray'd by the King: And this Prince waited on Him to Weſtminſter with his new Bride, where they kept their Chriſtmas with great Jollity. But this Lady dying the Year following, and thereby the main Bond of this Peace failing, it is no wonder if it did not laſt long, as you will find hereafter.

Who is now Married to Simon Montfort's Daughter.

[4]
* T. Wi.

About the middle of October the King held another Parliament at Weſtminſter, though what was done there we do not find; only that Alexander King of Scots appeared at it, either to do his Homage (as the Annals of Worceſter ſuppoſe) for Tivedale and Weſtmorland, or elſe (as Walſingham relates) only to conſult with the King concerning ſome weighty Affairs relating to his own Kingdom; which is the more likely of the two, ſince he had already perform'd his Homage at the King's Coronation: But at this Parliament, he [1] alſo obtain'd the Royal Letters, teſtifying, That the late Aſſiſtance which he had given the King in the War againſt Wales, was not done by reaſon of any Service due to the Crown of England.

[5]
Id. ib.
The King holds another Parliament at Weſtminſter, at which the King of Scots appears.
Angl. Sacra Vol. I.

[1]
F. Wal.

There happened little elſe conſiderable, but that the King finding His Money to be very much clipped, and the Jews being accuſed as the Authors of it, about the middle of November * He cauſed all of them in England to be ſeized and put in Priſon in one day, a great many of whom being found Guilty of that Crime before certain Juſtices, whom the King had appointed for that Purpoſe, no leſs than Two hundred and fourſcore Jews of both Sexes were executed at London for this Offence, beſides a Great number of them who ſuffered in other Cities in England.^

[2]
Id. ib.
Many Jews ſeized and Executed for clipping the Money.
* M. W. T. W.

× And to say something further as to forreign Affairs: in ye Month of March, the begining of this Year ye King married his third Daughter Margaret, to John son to the Duke of Lorrain and Brabant, as appears by that Duke's Articles of Agreement with King Edward before the Marriage, concerning the Portion & Dowry of ye young Princess, the Copies of which are still preserved with the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, & are published in R—'s Coll: p. 100. to, 105.

Alſo this Year the Queen of Caſtile, Mother to Queen Eleanor deceaſed, by whoſe Death the Earldom of Ponthieu in Picardy, fell to Queen Eleanor Her Daughter, as right Heir thereof.^ (2)

[3]
M. W.
The Queen of Caſtile deceaſes.

(2) ^ which proved a considerable accession to the Kings territories in France.

As for Church Affairs, this Year Pope [4] Nicholas created Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, a Cardinal; and commanding his Attendance in Italy, made him Biſhop of Porto, which Honour the Archbiſhop accepted, though much to his Loſs: So reſigning his Archbiſhoprick, he went into Italy, and there deceaſed not long after. But it may very well be queſtion'd, whether the Pope advanced this Archbiſhop, ſo much out of Reſpect to him, as to get him from ſo conſiderable a Poſt, and to put one of his own Favourites in his place: For when Robert Burnel, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, the King's Chancellor, had been Canonically Elected Archbiſhop, the Pope vacated the Election, and by his ſole Authority conferr'd that Dignity upon John Pecham a Friar Minor, then his Reader or Lecturer in Divinity; who coming over into England, was Conſecrated the Year following, and proved a notable Stickler for the Papal Power.

[4]
Id. ib.
Robert Kilwarby Archbiſhop of Canterbury, being made a Cardinal, leaves the Kingdom, and goes to Rome.

He is ſucceded by John Pecham a Friar Minor.

Anno. Dom.
MCCLXXIX.

I find little worth noting to have happened this Year, until the beginning of this Summer, * when the King, together with the Queen, paſſed the Seas into France about the Feaſt of Aſcenſion, and were honourably entertain'd by King Philip and the Great Men of his Kingdom at Amiens;

* Id.
The King goes into France and renews His Homage to that King.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIX.

Vid. Mezer Hiſt. de France. ad hunc An.

Amiens; and there he received the Homages of the King and Queen of England, of the former for the Countries of Agenois, Limoſin, Perigord, Xantoigne in Aquitain; and of them both for the Earldom of Ponthieu in Picardy, lately fallen to the Queen: And then that King confirmed the Poſſeſſion of thoſe Territories to them and their Heirs; and for this Grant King Edward reſign'd all his Right in the Dutchy of Normandy, only reſerving Thirty Livres of Paris Money to be paid Annually out of the King's Exchequer; though I do not find that this ſmall Tribute or Acknowledgment was ever paid. When the King had diſpatch'd his Affairs in France, He and his Queen returned into England a little before Midſummer. *

* I must here further observe That during the Kings absence in France, the Bishops of Worcester & Hereford, with Edmund Earl of Cornwall, & Henry Earl of Lincoln were appointed Lords Justices, or Lieutenants during his absence; and it is also very observable yt ye King then ratifyed the former Peace & agreement made between the late King Henry and Lewis King of France containing all the Particulars above mention'd as appears by a Copy of the Charter it self, under the Great Seal of King Philip of France, bearing Date at Amiens A.D. 1279. & is recorded in a Book in the Exchequer, vid: R–s Coll: p. 134 to 137.

[5] Chron. Abing. MS. M. W.

All the Money of the Kingdom is new coin'd.

The First thing He did after his Return, was, [5] the new coining all the Money of the Kingdom, which had been ſpoiled by the clipping of the Jews; and whereas the Penny before this King's time was ſtamped with a deep Croſs quite through the midſt of it, ſo that it might be divided according to Peoples occaſions into Half-pence and Farthings, the King now ordered a new Penny to be coin'd, which was called the Penny-Round, theſe were of the ſame Value with the former, viz. Fourpence Sterling, and a Pound of Silver being then worth Three Pounds, weighed alſo a Pound weight: But you are alſo to obſerve that this new Coin was called the Round-Penny, not as if the Old Peices had not been alſo coin'd of the ſame Figure, but becauſe being now ſtamped without any ſuch deep Creviſe through the middle, they could not be any more divided as they were before; and at this time there was no more then one ſort of Silver coin'd in England (viz. Pence.) Nothing elſe happened remarkable, only the [1] Lord Roger de Mortimer this Year held a Great Tourneament at Warwick of a hundred Knights, who were called Knights of the Round Table, in memory of the old Romantick Round Table of King Arthur. To this Solemnity, vaſt numbers both of Foreign and Engliſh Noblemen reſorting, a great deal of Money was there idlely expended.

[1] M. W.

A great Tourneament held at Warwick.

A Provincial Synod at Reading.

[2] Chron. de Abing. MS. in Bib. Pub. Cantab. Regiſt. Peckham MS. Printed in Spelman's Council, 2d Vol. ad hunc An.

* Ad finem p. 25.

* Vid. Dr. Wakes State of the Church, p. 220.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, the moſt remarkable is, That this new Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about St. James-tide, [2] held a Provincial Council or Synod at Reading, in which divers Antient Decrees of General Councils were revived, and ſeveral new Canons made, and among theſe, this Conſiderable one, that all Rectors or Parſons of Churches ſhould for the future enjoy but one ſingle Benefice with cure of Souls: And whereas another Canon of this Council is ſet down in * Lynwoods Provincial Conſtitutions, as if it had been then ordain'd, that the Inferior Clergy of every Dioceſs ſhould be repreſented, and appear in each future Synod or Council by two Proctors at leaſt, choſen by the ſaid Clergy, this is added to * Lynwood, and is not found in the antient Manuſcript Copies of this Council: However, many Years before this, the Inferior Dignified Clergy, ſuch as Deans and Priors, with the Proctors for the Chapters of Cathedral Churches, often appeared in thoſe Aſſemblies, and were thereunto impower'd by Inſtruments, or Letters of Proxy from the ſaid Bodies for that purpoſe, as were likewiſe the Arch Deacons, by a like Inſtrument, to repreſent and act for the Inferior or Parochial Clergy of each Dioceſe, who in thoſe days, when Synods were frequent, were willing to be excuſed the Expence and Trouble of Attendance: And this method was often practiſed during the long Reign of Henry the Third, as appears from the Authorities of Matt. Paris, cited in in the Margin; but from about the Tenth of Edward the Firſt, the Proctors of the Inferior Clergy, have been moſt commonly admitted into our Provincial Councils.

Vid. p. 329, 389, 446.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXIX.

Yet that theſe Synods were not uſually Summoned at the ſame time with the Parliament, appears by what the Learned Dr. Wake (already cited) has proved at large. However Proctors of the Inferior Clergy were not called to Parliament 'till the Twenty third Year of this King's Reign, when He Summoned all the Biſhops, Abbots, and Inferior Clergy to His Parliament at London, and made them appear there as a Third Eſtate; of which you will find more hereafter.

The State of the Church and Clergy, lately Printed, Cap. VI, VII.

Alſo this Year deceaſed Walter Giffard, Archbiſhop of York, a jolly hoſpitable Prelate, who was ſucceeded by William Wickwaine, of a quite contrary Temper, being lean, ſevere, and covetous; but otherwiſe of a ſtrict and unblamable Converſation.

Chron. de Lanercoſt, MS. in Bib. Cott.
Walter Arch Biſhop of York dies.

But the chief thing worth our notice this Year, is, That the King having Summoned a Council at Weſtminſter in the beginning of November, that famous *Statute of Mortmain was enacted; whereby all Perſons as well Religious as Others, were ſtrictly forbid to ſell, give, or Leaſe out any Lands or Tenements, whereby ſuch Lands, &c. might any ways come into Mortmain (i. e. into the hands of Eccleſiaſtical or Religious Perſons, who were looked upon as dead hands, becauſe they did not give the Kingdom any Military Defence or Aſſiſtance) under pain of forfeiture thereof; and in ſuch caſe the next Lords of the Fee ſhould have Power to enter upon the ſame. The reaſon of which Statute is beſt underſtood by the Preamble to it, which I ſhall here ſet down.

* Vid. the Stat. at large, ad hunc An.
The Statute of Mortmain enacted, with the effect thereof.

'Whereas of *late it was provided, That Religious Men ſhould not 'enter into the Fees of any, without Licence and Will of the Chief 'Lords, of whom ſuch Fees be holden immediately; yet notwithſtanding ſuch Religious Men have entred as well into their own Fees, as 'into the Fees of other Men, appropiating and buying them, and ſome 'time receiving them of the Gift of others, whereby the Services, that 'are due of ſuch Fees, and which at the beginning were provided for 'Defence of the Realm, are wrongfully withdrawn, and the Chief 'Lords do Leeſe their Eſcheats of the ſame: We therefore, &c. Then follows the enacting Part, which is repeated more at large among the Laws at the end of this Reign; therefore I ſhall ſay no more of it here, but that Monkery did thereby receive ſo great a Blow, that it is no wonder our Monkiſh Authors thereupon complain, that the Eſtates of the Kingdom wanted Faith to believe that the Army of the Amalakites was more ſubdued by the hand of Moſes, then the Fighting of the Children of Iſrael; as if the Prayers of the Monks, and thoſe of Moſes, had the like efficacy. But enough of theſe Fopperies.

* Vid. Stat. 9. H. 3. C. 36.
For the reaſon of this Statute, ſee Notit. Monaſtica. pref. p. 58.

This Year proving Barren of Civil Matters of any great moment, I ſhall give you all I can find to have been performed in it, which is, [4] That King Edward now cauſed a Noble Toomb to be made for the King His Father, in the Abbey Church of Weſtminſter, and adorned it with thoſe Jaſper Stones He had brought with Him out of France for that end: It is that very Tomb, which is to be ſeen at this day, with King Henry's Effigies upon it in Braſs, near that of Edward the Confeſſor, and is, I ſuppoſe, the moſt antient of that kind in England; that

Anno Dom. MCCLXXX.

[4] T. W. Ypod. Neuſt.
King Edward makes a Monument for His Father.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXX.

that of King John at Worceſter, with His Image upon it, being erected after the end of His Son's Reign.

[5] Id. Hiſtor. Angl. Concil. Spelman, 2 Vol. A Synod at Lambeth, and what was there decreed.

[1] C. T. Wikes.

[2] Ch. Abing.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, [5] the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the beginning of the Month of October, held a General Synod of the Biſhops and Clergy of his Province at Lambeth; where ſeveral new Canons were decreed, and thoſe of Otto and Ottobon Legates in the time of King Henry the Third were again renewed and confirmed. The Archbiſhop then made alſo divers other Conſtitutions in that Synod, as [1] that all Rectors of Churches having care of Souls, ſhould be made Prieſts within a Year enſuing, or elſe be deprived of their Benefices; which ſhews the corruption of the Church at that Time, when meer Deacons, if they had curam Animarum, might put in Curates to officiate for them. [2] The Archbiſhop did at the ſame time propoſe to annull ſeveral Prerogatives belonging to the King, and relating to Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, and Perſons, as his Cognizance of de Jure Patronatus, or of the Right of Patronage or Preſentation, and Pleas concerning the Chattles of Clergymen; but when the King found what they were doing, He ſent thither certain Commiſſioners, who openly declared againſt their Proceedings, and threatned all ſuch as ſhould preſume to intrench upon the Royal Prerogative; and ſo put an End to thoſe Debates. There were then alſo made divers other Conſtitutions Eccleſiaſtical, for which I refer the Reader to Sir H. Spelman's 2d Volume of the Brittiſh Councils.

* M. W. ad An 1281. Abbots and Priors exempt refuſing to appear at this Synod are excommunicated by the Archbiſhop.

[3] Id. ib. Americ de Montfort is ſet at Liberty.

T. Wi.

I ſhall here further obſerve, * That the Archbiſhop having ſummoned to this Synod all Abbots, and Priors, as well Exempt as not Exempt from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, the latter refuſing to appear, the Archbiſhop thereupon iſſued out a Severe Sentence againſt them, by which he ſuſpended all ſuch Exempt Abbots and Priors from ſo much as entring into their Churches; from which Sentence the Abbots of Weſtminſter, St. Edmundsbury, and Waltham, together with the whole Ciſtertian Order, did ſtrait appeal to the Pope; but I do not find that any thing farther came of it. Nothing elſe happen'd remarkable in Church Matters, [3] but that Americ de Montfort the King's Couſin, who had been Four Years a Priſoner, was now by the Interceſſion of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury diſcharged of his Impriſonment, as being a Clergyman in Holy orders, upon which he immediately went to his Relations in Italy; where in the mean while, Pope Nicholas III. dying ſuddenly, Simon of Towrs, Cardinal of St. Sabin's, was choſen in his ſtead, who took the Name of Martin IV.*

* Who immediately after his Promotion gave King Edward an account of it by a Letter for that Purpose, in which are also inserted divers honest and whole-some Exhortations to a good & just Government, as appears by ye original which is still pre-served & is published in R—'s Coll: p. 166. 167. And to add something of lesser moment, King Edward this year sent Bailiffe & other officers, that they should aid & assist Peter Corbet toward the taking and destroying all Wolves in ye Forrests & Parks in the Counties of Glocester, Worcester Hereford, Shropshire & Staffordshire by Dogs and Engines as he should think fit during the Kings Pleasure as appears by his Letters Patents [Pat. 9 Ed: I. M. 20.] published in R—'s Coll: p. 168 169. from whence it appears that notwithstanding ye Authority of some of our modern Historians, wolves were not destroyed in ~~England~~ the mountainous parts of the western and north western Counties of England till towards the end at least of this Kings reign if not later.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

[4] Dr. Ps. Chron. Prince Llewellyn afreſh exaſperated againſt the King, and upon what Occaſion.

Prince Llewellyn, having for about Four Years laſt paſt, pretty well obſerved the late Treaty of Peace; and his Wife the King's Couſin dying about this time, he now grew more and more exaſperated againſt the King and Engliſh Nation, daily complaining of great Grievances and Oppreſſions impoſed upon him by the Wardens of the Marches, and the Chief Juſtice of Cheſter; who only minding their own profit, oppreſſed the Inhabitants with new Exactions, contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Country; as alſo that they ſhewed themſelves partial to the Engliſh in any Suit or difference at Law that came before them; which exactions and partiality did ſo alienate the Hearts of the Welſhmen from the King of England, that they reſolved to endure any thing rather then theſe Oppreſſions: Wherefore the Noblemen and People Aſſembling together, prevailed upon David Lord of Denbigh to be reconciled to Prince Llewllyn his Brother; and taking pitty upon the miſerable Condition of the Country, to become their Captain and General, as being more experienced in Matters of War than the Prince himſelf.

Prince Llewelyn is reconciled to his Brother, on condition he would quit the Engliſh Intereſt.

But one of the Chief Conditions of David's Reconciliation to the Prince his Brother was, That he promiſed, he would never after ſerve the King of England as he had done before, but become his utter Enemy: Which being done, [5] David preſently began the War, and beſieged and took the Caſtle of Harwarden, and therein Sir Roger Clifford, Juſtice of the Marches, who was grievouſly wounded; ſlaying all that reſiſted, and ſpoiling all the Country. This done, he with his Brother the Prince laid Siege to the Caſtle of Rothland.

Id. Ib.

[5] T. Wa. Ypod. Newſt.

Prince Llewellyn revolts, takes the King's Juſtice Priſoner, and ſpoils the Engliſh Borders.

When the King (who was then keeping his Eaſter at the Deviſes) heard this, He preſently ſummoned a Council of his Nobility to meet him on Midſummer-day at Worceſter, and to be all ready to attend Him with their Horſes and Arms at the Feaſt of St. Peter, or the Nine and twentieth of Auguſt. The King then perceiving this War was like to continue long, [2] He, to be nearer his Civil as well as Military Affairs, removed his Courts of Juſtice from Weſtminſter to Shrewsbury, and raiſing a Great Army out of all the Counties of England, marched towards Wales to raiſe the Seige; but upon his Approach, the Prince with his Army retired into the mountainous Parts of the Country: But ſome time before this, Rees the Son of Maelgon, and Griffyth ap Owen, with other Noblemen of South-Wales took the ſtrong Caſtle of Aberyſtwyth (otherwiſe called Lampader Vawr) and divers other Caſtles in that Country, ſpoiling all the Engliſh that inhabited thereabouts.

[1] Chron. T. Wikes Annal. Wigorn.

The King Summons a great Council at Worceſter.

[2] Matt. Weſt.

And removes his Courts from Weſtminſter to Shrewsbury, and raiſing a great Army Marches into Wales.

To put an amicable end to this War, [3] the King (being now at Rothland Caſtle) ſent the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to treat with the Welſh Prince and his Brothers; or as the Archbiſhop in his Propoſals to the Prince ſets forth, he went of his own accord (without the King's Order) to Mediate a Peace between the King and him.

[3] Id. Ib.

The King ſent the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury to Treat with the Welſh Prince about a Peace.

* Dr. Powell in his Chronicle hath given us all the Proceedings of this Treaty with the Welſh Prince, from the Manuſcript Regiſter of John Pecham, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; having firſt ſet down the Requeſts and Complaints of the ſaid Archbiſhop to the Prince of Wales and his People, concerning their late Breach of the Peace, and their ſudden making War upon the Engliſh. And in return to theſe Articles, there follows the Prince's Anſwer or Apology for his late Actions, wherein he ſets forth the great Oppreſſions and Injuries offer'd by the King and his Officers to himſelf and Subjects, contrary to the Articles of Peace lately made; which Grievances being redreſſed, he declares himſelf ready to make Amends for all Treſpaſſes and Wrongs done by him, to the utmoſt of his Power; and if the like may be perform'd on the King's part, he would then conclude and eſtabliſh a laſting and a Firm Peace, and that without raiſing any Army, or moving the Prelates of the Church to Excommunicate them; ſo concludes with deſiring the Archbiſhop not to give credit to the falſe Suggeſtions of his Enemies. Dated at Garth-Celyn, at the Feaſt of St. Martin (i. e. the Eleventh of November,) 1381.

* P 338 to 371.

Vid. Arch-Biſhop Pechams Reg. p. 344 345.

The Arch-Biſhop's Complaints againſt the Prince.

This Defence is written in Latine, and is very well and cloſeſly pen'd according to the mode of Writing at that time. Then follwos a large Liſt of the particular Grievances and Oppreſſions, ſent with the ſaid Appology from Prince Llewellyn to the Archbiſhop; which are tranſlated Word for Word out of the ſaid Records, containing Eleven Heads or Articles.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

The Heads of the Prince's Articles of the Grievances & Oppreſſions committed by the K. and his Officers.

The Firſt of which, is, the King's detaining divers Lands in Aruſtly, betwixt the Rivers of Dyui and Dulas; which though the King had granted ſhould be examined according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of Wales, yet notwithſtanding, the Day of appearing before the King was not only put off, but he the Prince was cited to other Places, where he ought not to have been ſummoned: Neither could he obtain any Juſtice or Judgment, unleſs it were according to the Laws of England, contrary to the Articles of the Peace. Nay at the laſt the King Himſelf at London denied him Juſtice, unleſs he would be judged according to the Engliſh Laws in the ſaid Matter.

The Second ſets forth, That when the Lord Reginald Gray was made Juſtice, he began divers Accuſations againſt the Men of Tegengl and Ros, for Treſpaſſes done in the time of the late King Henry, contrary to an Article of Peace, whereby all Injuries on both ſides were to be remitted.

The Third ſets forth the Injury done to Rees ap Malgon, in being ſpoiled of his Lands of Geneurglyn, which he then held, together with the Tenants and Cattel upon the Premiſſes.

The Fourth contains another Complaint againſt the Lord Reginald Gray, for introducing many new Cuſtoms into the Four Cantreds, which the King holds in his hands, contrary to his own Grant and Agreement.

The Fifth Grievance, is, the King's ſending Juſtices into Angleſey, who preſume there to judge the Men and Subjects of the Prince, ſetting Fines upon them, contrary to the Laws of Wales; ſeeing neither this nor any thing like it was ever heard of in times paſt, impriſoning ſome, and outlawing others; whereas the Prince is always ready to do Juſtice to all Men that complain againſt any of his Subjects: And indeed all Controverſies between the Prince and any other within his own Territories, are to be decided according to the Laws of Wales, and by no other whatſoever.

The Sixth is of no great Moment; therefore I omit it.

The Seventh complains of the Exaction of the Duty called Aurum Reginæ, which the Prince was forced to advance to the Queen over and above the Money he paid to the King; and beſides which, he was alſo made to pay Two thouſand Marks to the Queen Mother.

The Eighth ſets forth, That when the Prince laſt waited on the King at Worceſter, at his own Marriage, the King, on the ſame day, and juſt before it was ſolemnized, forced him to Seal and Deliver a Writing, containing (among other things) That he would never harbour nor maintain any Man againſt the King's Will; by which Means it might come to paſs, that the beſt of the Prince's Men might be taken from him whenever the King pleaſed.

In the Ninth he complains of the Juſtice of Cheſter, for levying a Diſtreſs upon his Goods in lieu of a certain Shipwreck which he had ſeized during the late War; notwithſtanding that all ſuch Treſpaſſes on either ſide were releaſed.

The Tenth being only concerning the taking away certain Goods belonging to the Prince's Subjects, and killing ſome of them by the Engliſh, I barely mention, as being of no great Moment.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

The Eleventh ſets forth, Whereas it is contain'd in the Peace, That all things committed in the Marches ſhould be redreſſed in the Marches; yet the King's Officers would not there hear the Prince's Men, but put them in the Caſtle of Lhanpadarn, which is againſt the Peace aforeſaid, and by which Articles, and divers others, the King ſtandeth ſworn to the Prince and to his People; and although both He and they have often requeſted that the ſaid Articles ſhould be obſerved, yet that they were never kept, but the King's Juſtices do daily heap more Injuries and Oppreſſions upon the People of thoſe Parts; ſo that he (the Prince) cannot be blamed, if he did aſſent to thoſe who began this laſt War, ſeeing the Oath which the Lord Robert Tiptoft had taken for the King, was in no point obſerved; and chiefly ſeeing the Prince was forewarn'd, That he ſhould be taken ſo ſoon as the King came to Ruthlan, as he had been indeed if the King had come thither after Chriſtmas, as He deſign'd.

Then follow the [3] Grievances done by the King and his Officers to the Lord David ap Griffyth, Brother to the Prince; which do not ſeem ſufficient to require the making of a War for them, they being only about the King's uſurping upon him certain Towns, which he claim'd as belonging to thoſe Cantreds the King had beſtowed upon him: As alſo for his being made to anſwer, at the Suit of one William Venables, at the Court of Cheſter, for certain Villages of Hope and Eſton in Wales, which he held of the King, and for which he ought to anſwer no Man, but according to the Laws of Wales.

The reſt of the Articles, containing certain Complaints againſt the Juſtice of Cheſter, for cutting down and carrying away his Woods, where he the ſaid Juſtice had no Juriſdiction; or elſe as being falſly accuſed for receiving certain Thieves or Outlaws, I barely mention.

The laſt Article ſets forth, That whereas it is provided by the ſaid Peace, that all Welſhmen in their Cauſes ſhould be judged after the Laws of Wales, this was in no Point obſerved with the ſaid David and his People: For which Grievances, thô He had often demanded Amends from the ſaid Juſtice, either according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of Wales, or of ſpecial Favour, yet He could never obtain any Redreſs at his Hands.

The ſaid David further ſets forth, That He was warn'd at the King's Court, that He ſhould be taken and ſpoiled of his Caſtle of Hope, his Woods ſhould be cut down, and his Children taken for Pledges, as ſoon as Reginald Gray ſhould come from the Court. Wherefore ſeeing, notwithſtanding his faithful Serving of the King in his Wars, yet that He could obtain neither Juſtice, Amends nor Favour at his Hands, having ſuch great Wrongs offer'd unto Him, and fearing his own Life and his Children's, or elſe a perpetual Priſon, He was forced, as it were againſt his Will, to undertake this War,

Theſe Articles have very plauſible Appearances: But whether they could have been all made out, eſpecially the laſt, cannot be determined at this diſtance of time; eſpecially ſince we do not find what Anſwer was return'd to them by the Archbiſhop. But as for the ſeveral Articles of Grievances, then given in by the Men of Roſs and Penlyn, concerning ſeveral Murthers, Treſpaſſes and undue Exactions of Money upon the ſaid People; as alſo the many Injuries and Oppreſſions offer'd by the King and his Juſtices towards Rees ap Vachan of Stratwy, and ſeveral other Welſh Noblemen, concerning divers Uſurpations upon their Lands, Privileges and Franchiſes, and the Diſinheriting them of their

Eſtates,

[3] Ib. p. 350.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

Eſtates, contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms of Wales, which they were by Vertue of the late Peace ſtill to enjoy; I only mention them, ſince they are very long: And therefore I refer the Reader to my Author Dr. Powell, for farther Satisfaction, if he deſire it.

The Reaſons that the Welſh had to begin the War.

I have only ſet down theſe Particulars, to let you ſee, That the Welſh had ſome (I will not ſay ſufficient) Reaſons to begin this War: For althô the Complaints of thoſe, who have taken Arms againſt their Superiors, are not to be altogether believed, yet is it not likely that a Prince and People, who had been ſo lately ſubdued, ſhould take up Arms againſt ſo powerful a Prince as the King of England, unleſs they had been highly provoked by the Wrongs and Oppreſſions of his Officers, and for which they could not obtain any ſufficient Redreſs or Satisfaction; and perhaps this politick Prince might order, or at leaſt permit many of theſe Oppreſſions on purpoſe, That the Welſh Prince and his Subjects being driven to take up Arms, He might thereby have ~~a juſt~~ Pretence wholly to ſubdue that Prince, and conquer his Country. But leaving theſe Conſiderations, as only probable, let us now return to the Hiſtory.

[4] Id. The Archbp. interceeds for the Pr. That the K. would admit of a Treaty with him, which is refuſed.

The [4] Archbiſhop having received theſe Articles, came to the King, and beſeeched Him to conſider theſe Wrongs, and to cauſe Amends to be made, or at leaſt excuſe the Welſhmen, as having ſo juſt Cauſe of Diſcontent. The King anſwered, That the Welſhmen were to be in part excuſed, and that He was ever ready to do Juſtice to all Men that complained. Whereupon the Archbiſhop again beſought the King, That the Welſhmen might have free and ſafe Acceſs to Him, to declare their Grievances, and to ſeek for Remedy. The King replied, they ſhould freely come and depart, if it ſhould appear that by Juſtice they deſerved to depart in Safety.

The Pr. Refuſes to ſubmit himſelf abſolutely to the King.

When the Archbiſhop had received this Anſwer, he return'd to the Prince of Wales, being then at Snowdun, that he might perſwade him and his Abettors to ſubmit themſelves, and thereby encline the King to admit them to a perſonal Treaty. When the Archbiſhop arrived, he had a long Conference with the Prince, where at laſt he gave him this final reſolute Anſwer; which, had it come from the Mouth of one ſtrong enough to make good what he ſaid, had been counted truly magnanimous and worthy a Prince: That he was willing to ſubmit himſelf to the King, reſerving two things; the Firſt was the Conſcience or Senſe he ought to have for the Safety and well Government of his People; the Other was the Honour or Decorum belonging to his Dignity and Calling. The Archbiſhop returning to the King with this Anſwer, his Reply was, That He required, the Prince and his People ſhould abſolutely ſubmit themſelves to Him. But the Archbiſhop knowing that the Welſhmen would never ſubmit themſelves upon thoſe Terms, he then requeſted the King, That He would permit him to confer with the Noblemen then at Court; and that He would follow their Advice in ſo weighty an Affair; which being agreed to by the King, the Archbiſhop and the Nobility having conſulted together, they at laſt agreed upon theſe following Articles, which the Archbiſhop ſent in his own Name to the Prince, by John Wallenſis, viz.

Articles agreed by the A. Bp and Nobility to be Propoſed to the Pr. in order to a Peace.

Firſt, That of the Four Cantreds, and the Lands by the King given to his Nobles, and the Iſle of Angleſey, He will have no Treaty about them.

Alſo, Secondly, as to the Tenants of theſe Four Cantreds, if they will ſubmit themſelves, He purpoſeth to do as becometh a King; and we verily believe, He will deal with them mercifully; and to that end we will endeavour, and truſt to obtain it.

Thirdly, as touching the Lord Llewellyn, we can have no other Anſwer, but that he ſhall ſubmit himſelf wholly to the King: And we certainly believe He will deal mercifully with him; and to that end we labour all we can, and verily have great Hopes to be heard by Him.

Theſe following Articles were to be propoſed to the Prince in Private.

[5] Id.

Firſt, That the Nobility of England have contrived this favourable Method of a Peace, that the Lord Llewellyn ſhould ſubmit himſelf to the King, and that he ſhould allow him an honourable maintenance of a Thouſand Pounds Sterling, with ſome County or Earldom in England, provided the ſaid Prince would put the King in quiet Poſſeſſion of Snowdun; and then the King will alſo honourably provide for the ſaid Prince's Daughter, according to her Quality and near Relation to Him.

Secondly, Alſo if it ſhall happen, That Prince Llewellyn * ſhould Marry another Wife, and have by her an Heir Male, they hope to intreat the King that ſuch Heir, and his Heirs, ſhall have the ſame Thouſand Pounds per Annum, and Country, ſettled upon him for ever.

* Note the Princeſs his Wife, the King's Coſin was lately Dead.

Laſtly, as to the People Subject to the ſaid Llewellyn, the King will provide for them, as becometh their Eſtates and Condition: And to that the King is well inclin'd.

Theſe Articles are to be propoſed to David, Brother to Llewellyn, in Private.

The Articles propoſed to Prince Da

Firſt, That if, for the Honour of God, he will go to the Holy Land, he ſhall be ſet out and maintained by the King, according to his Quality, provided he do not return, unleſs he be recalled by the King: Then follows divers Motives, why David and the Welſhmen ſhould now ſubmit, ſince a much greater Peril now hangs over them, than when he (the Archbiſhop) was with them; and though theſe Conditions may ſeem grievous, yet it is a great deal worſe to be ſubdued by Arms, whereby they and their Families may be extirpated, ſince their Danger encreaſes every day more and more; and that it is a miſerable thing to be always in War, in anguiſh of Mind and danger of Body, to live in Rancor and Malice, and to die in deadly Sin.

Laſtly, The Archbiſhop declares, That unleſs they do agree to Peace, he muſt iſſue out the Sentence of Excommunication againſt them; whereas if they will agree, they ſhall find Grace and Mercy. Then concludes with Pray ſend us your Anſwer in Writing.

When Prince Llewellyn had received theſe Propoſals, he returned his Anſwer in Writing, together with the following Letter in Latin, which was thus directed;

To the moſt Reverend Father in Chriſt, the Lord John, by God's Grace Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Primate of all England, his obedient Son Llewellyn, Prince of Wales and Lord of Snowdun, ſendeth Greeting.

'Moſt heartily with all Reverence and Honour, we are content and 'ready, Holy Father, as you have councelled us, to ſubmit our 'ſelves unto the King's Grace, provided it be in that Form, that ſhall be ſafe and honourable for us: But becauſe that Form of Submiſſion, contained in the Articles which were ſent us, is neither ſafe nor honourable; and, as we and our Council do ſuppoſe, tends rather to the Deſtruction of us and our People, than any Security or fair Dealing; we may in no wiſe yield our Aſſent unto it: And if we ſhould ſo do, our Nobles and People would not agree to the ſame, knowing the Miſchief and Inconveniency that is like to enſue thereof. Nevertheleſs, we beſeech your Holy Fatherhood, That for the perfecting of an honourable and firm Peace, (for which you have taken ſo great pains, and do ſtill circumſpectly provide) you would conſider the following Articles, which we now ſend unto you in Writing; ſince it is more Honourable for the King, and more agreeable to Reaſon, that we ſhould hold our Lands in the Country where we dwell, than that we ſhould be diſinherited, and our Lands given to Strangers. Dated at Garth-Celyn.

'be

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

The Anſwers of the Welſh Noblemen to theſe Articles on their Prince's behalf.

After this follow, the Anſwers of the Welſh Noblemen on the behalf of their Prince.

The ſubſtance of which is, That though the King will not allow to have any Treaty concerning the Four Cantreds, which He had given his Nobles, nor about the Iſle of Angleſey, being already Conquer'd; yet the Prince's Council will not agree to a Peace, unleſs a Treaty may be had about them, ſince they had belonged to the Princes of Wales, from the time of Camber the Son of Brutus, and had been alſo confirm'd to the Prince, by Ottobon the Pope's Legate, with the conſent of this King and his Father.

Secondly, all the Tenants of theſe Cantreds do affirm, That they dare not ſubmit themſelves to the King's Pleaſure.

Firſt, Becauſe He hath obſerved no Grant, Covenant or Oath, which He hath ever made to the Prince and his People.

Secondly, The King's Men do cruelly Tyranize over the Church and Church-men.

Thirdly, That they (the Welſh-men) are not bound to any ſuch Matter, ſeeing they are the Prince's Tenants, who are ready to do the accuſtomed Service, and to obey the King, with and by the ſaid Service.

Fourthly, As to what is required, That the Prince ſhould ſimply ſubmit himſelf to the King's Will, it is anſwered, That ſince none of us ſingle dare come to the King, for the Cauſes aforeſaid; we being all together will not ſuffer our Prince to come to Him in that manner.

Fifthly, Alſo ſuppoſing the Great Men of England would procure a Proviſion of a Thouſand Pounds a Year for the Prince in England; it may be anſwered, That ſuch Proviſion is not to be accepted, for that it is promoted by thoſe, who go about to diſinherit the Prince to have his Lands in Wales.

Sixthly, The Prince ought not to reſign his Inheritance in Wales, which he and his Predeceſſors have enjoyed ſince the time of Brutus, and take Lands in England, where he underſtandeth neither their Language, Manners, Laws nor Cuſtoms; ſo that he may be ſoon enſnared by the Engliſh, his old inveterate Enemies, and thereby may loſe the Lands in England: For ſeeing the King goeth about to deprive him of his antient Inheritance, it is not likely He would ſuffer him long to poſſeſs any Lands in England, where he claimeth no ſuch Right, &c.

Seventhly,

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

Seventhly, As to the King's Demand of the Delivery of Snowdun, it may be anſwered, that ſeeing that Place is one of the Chief Appurtenances of the Principality of Wales, which the Prince and his Predeceſſors have held ever ſince the time of Brute (as is before ſaid) his Council will not ſuffer him to renounce that Place, and to take another leſs due unto him.

Laſtly, the People of Snowdun ſay, 'That although the Prince would give the King poſſeſſion of it, yet they would never do Homage to Strangers, of whoſe Tongue, Manners and Laws, they are utterly ignorant; for by that means they ſhould for ever be delivered up Captives, and as cruelly handled as the Four Cantreds have been by the King's Bayliffs and other Officers, as will appear by that Liſt of their Grievances, which had been already preſented to the Archbiſhop.

Id. p. 370.

The Anſwers of David, Brother to the Prince, were to this effect, which I ſhall abridge, as not now being very material. In the Firſt place he declares, 'That when he is diſpos'd to viſit the Holy Land, he 'will do it voluntarily for God's ſake, and not by Compulſion; for he 'knows that ſuch a forced Pilgrimage cannot be acceptable unto God: 'And then, Secondly, proceeds thus, That ſince neither the Prince, nor his 'People have undertaken this War for Gain, or to invade other Men's 'Properties, but purely for Defence of their own Lands, Laws, and 'Liberties, whilſt that the King and his People, out of Covetouſneſs to 'get our Lands, have made this War; therefore, ſeeing our Self-defence 'is juſt and lawful, we truſt that God will help us, and turn his Revenge 'upon the Deſtroyers of Churches, who have not only burnt them, but 'have alſo killed the Prieſts, and prophaned the Sacraments and all 'things Sacred, beſides the killing of the Weak and Impotent, and even 'Women with their Children ſucking at their Breaſts. And therefore '(ſays he) God forbid, that you, the Archbiſhop, ſhould fulminate your 'Excommunication againſt any, but ſuch as have done theſe things; ſo 'that we who have ſuffer'd them ought rather to hope for ſome 'Remedy and Comfort at your hands. And though it be hard to live 'in War and Danger, yet it is much more ſevere and unjuſt, (eſpecially 'for Chriſtians) to be utterly deſtroyed and brought to nothing, ſince 'we only deſire to defend our Own, being by neceſſity driven thereunto, and by the greedy Ambition of our Enemies.

'And ſince your Grace, (viz. the Archbiſhop) hath told us, That 'you would fulminate your Sentence againſt all that for Hatred or Gain 'endeavour to hinder Peace; Now it evidently appears, *who they 'are that make War upon theſe motives; whereas on our ſide, the fear 'of Death and perpetual Impriſonment, together with the conſtant 'Breach of all Promiſes, Grants and Charters, and in ſhort a moſt 'Tyrannical Dominion, have and do compel *Us to make War: All 'which we ſolemnly declare before God and your Lordſhip, humbly imploring your Godly and Charitable Help, to remedy theſe Miſchiefs. And then concludes with their earneſt Prayers, That he (the Archbiſhop) would do his utmoſt endeavour to procure this great end.

* Meaning, I ſuppoſe, King Edward and the Engliſh.

* i. e. the Welſh Prince and his Subjects.

Thus far, out of the Records of the ſaid Archbiſhop, faithfully Tranſcribed by Dr. Powel, in whom the Reader may find theſe things ſet down at large, if he thinks it worth while to peruſe them: But I have thought fit to recite theſe, that I may not be thought partial to our own Nation; a Fault which, I confeſs, moſt of our Engliſh Hiſtorians are too apt to fall into. But to return to the matter in hand.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXI.

Id. p. 371. [1]

[2] Ant. Brit. p. 198.

When the Archbiſhop could by no means perſwade the Prince and his Accomplices to agree to the Terms of Peace abovemention'd, ſo ſoon as he came to Oxford, he, at the King's Requeſt, declared them all Excommunicated which the Prince and his Party, being hitherto puffed up with Succeſs, did not much regard. It ſeems that during this Treaty there was a Ceſſation of Arms; for we find nothing further done this Year, ſince the raiſing of the Siege of Rothlan Caſtle.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXII.

[3] Annal. Wig. in Ang. Sacra. Tom. 1.

The King goes down to Worceſter, in order to renew the War, againſt Wales.

[4] T. W.

He comes to Rothlan Caſtle, and thence iſſues two extraordinary Writs.

Camp. Hiſt. 2d Vol. p. 7.

But in the beginning of the Year following, the King, finding all hopes of Accomodation grown deſperate, reſolved to proſecute the War with the utmoſt vigour; and to this end He came on Chriſtmas-Eve to the City of Worceſter, and there kept that Feſtival; but was in ſuch haſt, that, the day after, He went from thence to the Abbey of Kemſey, and perſued his Expedition with various Succeſs all the Summer following. For [4] my Author relates, That this Year the King loſt no leſs then Fourteen Enſigns, beſides the Lords Audley and Roger Clifford the younger, with ſeveral others of Note; ſo that He was fain to retire to the Caſtle of Hope for His own Security: And indeed He was ſo hard put to it by the Welſh Prince, that in Autumn following, being again return'd to the Caſtle of Rothlan, He from thence iſſued out Writs for holding two extraordinary great Councils; as alſo two Synods of the Clergy, both in the South and North of England, which was never known before, and ſuits not with our manner of holding Parliaments at this day. A Copy of which Writs I ſhall here give you at large, according to Dr. Brady's Tranſlation of them.

Rot. Wal. 11. Ed. 1. M. 4. Dorſ. N. 1.

The King to the Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, greeting. Whereas Llewellyn, the Son of Griffin, and other Welſhmen, his Accomplices, our Enemies and Rebels, have ſo often in the times of Us and our Progenitors, diſturbed the Peace of England, and do ſtill continue in the ſame Courſe; and for that by the Advice of our Great Men, and the whole Community of the Land, We propound finally to repreſs their Rebellion and Inſtability, ſo as it ſhall not be in their Power to diſturb the Peace of the Nation when they pleaſe, although that it ſeems to be a very great Charge, and a moſt difficult undertaking: We therefore command, that you cauſe to come before Us on the Octaves of St. Hillary (i. e. January the 20th) at Northampton, or before our Commiſſioners, all thoſe of your Bayliwick that have 20 l. a Year, and upwards, who are able and fit to bear Arms, and who are not at preſent with Us in our Expedition againſt the Welſh, and Four Knights if each County, for the Community of the ſame Counties, having full Power from them; and alſo of every City, Burgh, and Mercate Town, two Men for the Commons of the ſame, to hear and do things which on our behalf we ſhall cauſe to be ſhewn unto them, &c. Witneſs the King at Rothlan, the Four and twentieth day of * November, in the Eleventh Year of His Reign. The like Precept was ſent to the Sheriffs of all Counties in England, to cauſe to meet, &c. at Northampton, except to the Sheriffs of Torkſhire, Cumberland, Weſtmorland, Northumberland and Lancaſhire, who were by like Writs commanded to cauſe Orders of Men to meet at Tork.

The

* Note this was in Novem. 1282, and not in 1283, as Dr. B. p. 10. ſuppoſes it, for the 11th Year of this King is to be reckon'd from the 16th of Novem. 1272, from which to Novem. 1282. though there were but 10 Years Compleat, yet the King did from that day Commence the 11th Year of His Reign; though the Year of Our Lord was not then begun.

The like Precept was ſent to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to call all his Suffragans, Abbots, Priors, and other Governours of Religious Houſes, with the Procurators of Deans and Chapters of Collegiate Churches, to come before the King or His Commiſſioners, at the ſame time and Place, to hear and to do as before, and further to give their Counſel and Aſſiſtance happily to finiſh what he had begun to the Praiſe and Honour of God, and to the perpetual Peace and Tranquility of the whole Kingdom. This was Witneſſed as before.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXII.

The like Precept is ſent to the Archbiſhop, for the Clergy to appear before the King's Commiſſioners.

The like * was alſo directed to the Archbiſhop of York, and to the Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Deans, &c. and their Proctors, for the meeting of the Clergy of that Province at † York. It is evident from this Record, that theſe Aſſemblies were not Parliaments, but only ſeparate Colloquies or Treaties of the Clergy and Laity of both theſe Provinces, about giving further voluntary Aſſiſtance towards his War againſt Wales; but whether thoſe of the Laity then contributed any thing, I cannot find; tho' perhaps their Grants, being never Recorded, are loſt: But it is evident, that no Earls nor Barons were preſent at theſe Meetings, nor ever Received any Summons to be there; for moſt of them, as alſo the other Tenants in Capite, were ſtill attending upon the King in Wales, as the Writ ſeems to imply. I find nothing elſe done in Relation to the Welſh War, only that the King ſtill continued at Rothlan Caſtle, and other Places in Wales the remaining part of this Winter: But before theſe Councils or Synods could meet, the War was in a manner ended, though the King at firſt met with ill Succeſs; for [5] He having now rais'd a great Army, marched with it from Rothlan Caſtle towards the Iſle of Angleſey; in order to which, He built a large Bridge of Boats for the Tranſportation of His Army over the River Conway, and thereby poſſeſſed himſelf of that part of the Country toward the Sea-ſide, not being able to paſs further into the Mountainous parts of Carnarvanſhire, which (was then called Snowdun.) Whilſt the King remain'd ſtill at Conway, He thought it ſafeſt firſt to ſubdue the Iſle of Angleſey, to which end He ſent over by the Ships of the Cinque-Ports part of his Army by Sea, which, together with the Mariners Landing upon the Iſland, ſoon reduced it to his obedience, many of the Chiefeſt Men thereof Declaring for Him. [1] This being perfom'd, the next buſineſs was to tranſport this Army into the Continent, over the narroweſt part of the River Menay, oppoſite to Bangor, over which was then begun to be laid a Bridge of Boats or large Veſſels, ſo that ſome part of the Army would needs paſs over before it was quite finiſhed, to ſhew their valour againſt the Welſhmen, and to reap the Greater Honour, (being about 300 Men at Arms, under the Conduct of the Lord William Latimer and Lucas de Thony, Commander of the Gaſcoigne Forces) which the Welſh permitted them quietly to do. [2] But ſo ſoon as the Tide came in, and had flow'd up beyond that end of the Bridge which lay towards the Continent, ſo that they could not eaſily return, the Welſh taking hold of this Advantage, came running down from the Mountains with great Shouts and Clamours, and falling upon thoſe that were already paſt over, put them to flight; but they endeavouring to regain the Bridge, were either killed or drowned in the River; for the Water was ſo high, that they could not reach the Bridge; [3] only the Lord William Latimer eſcaped, whoſe Horſe being very ſtout, carried him through it

* Rot. Wal. Mem. eadem.

The like Writ ſent to the Archbiſhop of York.

†Note in both theſe Writs to the Archbiſhops, there was a Clauſe impowering them to Demand an Aid of the Clergy of their Reſpective Provinces.

[5] M. W. [illegible]. Annal. Wigorn.

The King raiſes an Army, and Marches with it towards the Iſle of Angleſey.

Id. T. W.

[1] Chron. Abing. Annal. Wigorn. in Ang. Sacra. 2d Vol.

[2] Dr. Ps. Chron. ib.

Near which He receives a a great Defeat and many Noblemen, and Perſons of Quality are ſlain or drowned.

[3] Id. ib.

Anno Dom.
MCCLXXXII.

[4]
An. Wig. ib.

ſo [4] that there were ſlain and drowned at this time no leſs than 15 Knights and 32 Eſquires, and about 1000 Common Soldiers: The Chiefeſt among the Gentlemen were Lucas de Thony abovemention'd, and two Brothers of Robert Burnel, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, the then Chancellor. This Defeat happened on the Sixth day of November; upon which the Engliſh were ſo much diſhearten'd, that they neither finiſhed this Bridge, nor yet proceeded farther againſt the Welſh on that ſide, till after the Death of Prince Llewellyn.

[5]
Contin. of Engliſh Hiſt. p. 9.
That this Defeat did not happen at the River Conway, as divers Writers ſuppoſe.

I cannot but obſerve a miſtake that [5] Dr. Brady hath committed in the Account of this Action, being led into it by his Author Mathew of Weſtminſter; who indeed ſays, That the King having built a Bridge over the River Conway, &c. many Noble Perſons of the King's Army who went over it, paſſing out of Angleſey to view and obſerve the Country, were ſo affright'ned with the Multitude and Clamours of the Welſh coming upon them, that haſtening to return from whence they came, they were drowned in their Retreat: Which could not be at that Place; for had the Dr. but conſulted his Map of Wales, he would have found that the River Conway (on which the Town of Aberconway ſtands) and the River Menay, (which parts Angleſey from Carnarvan-ſhire) are two different Rivers, above 10 Miles aſunder; and therefore it was impoſſible for any body to paſs immediately from Angleſey by a Bridge laid over the River Conway; and the Annals of Worceſter call it expreſly the Bridge of Angleſey, where the Engliſh received this defeat; but indeed divers of our Monkiſh Writers of this War, being ignorant of the true Situation of the Country, relate theſe Actions ſo confuſedly, that it is neceſſary to conſult more than one of them to diſcover the Truth.

[1]
T. Wal.
The Earl of Gloceſter's Succeſſes in South-Wales, as alſo thoſe of the Welſh Prince.

To return to the Hiſtory; [1] In the mean time the Earl of Gloceſter commanded another Army in South-Wales, where taking much Booty, he at laſt fought with the Welſhmen near Lhandilo Vawr, and gave them a Defeat: Yet on the King's ſide, Young William de Valence, His Couſin German, and five Knights more were ſlain. However, after the Earl's Departure, the Prince deſtroyed the Country of Caerdigan, and all the Lands of Rees ap Meredyth, who Served the King in theſe Wars.

Who is thereby encouraged to leave the Mountains, and march down with his Men into the Valleys.

[2]
Ant. Brit. p. 286.

[3]
M. W.
T. W.
Chron. Abing.

Theſe Succeſſes ſo far encouraged Prince Llewellyn, and the Welſhmen of his Party, and eſpecially the late Accident at the Bridge, that looking upon it as little leſs than a Miracle, they preſſed their Prince to act like a Man of Courage, [2] ſince it would not be long e're (according to Merlin's Propheſy (which ſome Welſh Fortune-tellers applied to him) That he ſhould wear the Crown of BRUTE, That is, obtain the ſupreme Dominion over all Britain. Whereupon the Prince leaving his Brother David to defend the Mountains, deſcended with his Army into the Valleys, to confirm and ſecure the Inhabitants of thoſe Parts in their former Allegiance to him; but not daring to encounter the King's Forces in North Wales, he marched from Snowdon into the Cantred of Buelt, which lay in Radnor-ſhire, hoping there to make War againſt the King by Diverſion in his own Territories: And when he had paſſed the River Wye, his Men chanced to meet with the Lord Edmund Mortimer and John Gifford, who marching that way with a great number of Soldiers, fell upon the Prince's Forces, and routed them, and preſently after ſlew the Prince himſelf, not knowing who he was: The manner of whoſe Death I ſhall give you more at large, from the Chronicle of Alingdon, and that of Wales, who relate it thus, viz. That the Prince having parted from his Army, went aſide into a certain Valley, attended but by one Eſquire, to diſcourſe with certain Lords of that Country, that had promiſed to meet him privately there, whilſt in the mean time his Forces, which he had left to ſecure the Bridge of Orewyn, were routed by the Lords Men abovementioned, though his Soldiers, who were ordered by him to keep that Paſs over Wye, called Pont-Orewyn, valiantly defended it againſt the Engliſh; yet when a certain Welſhman ſhewed them a Ford a little lower, over which a Party of them eaſily paſſing, fell upon the backs of the Prince's Men, that defended the Bridge, and beat them from it; then the Engliſh Forces being got over, one Adam (or as others call him Stephen de Francton) happened to meet the Prince by chance, as he endeavoured to return to his Forces, and not knowing who he was, perſued him, and run him through with his Spear. So ſoon as the Skirmiſh was over and the Welſhmen routed, Francton return'd to ſtrip the Body; but when he ſaw the Face, he knew it, and cutting off his Head, ſent it to the King, being then at the Abbey of Conway, who immediately ordered it to be convey'd to London. [4] Which News was ſo gratefull to the Citizens, that they met the Meſſenger who brought the Head, and conducted it into the City in Triumph, with the ſound of Trumpets and Horns, it being carried through Cheapſide upon a Launce, Crown'd with a Silver Chaplet or Circle, by which was fulfilled the Prediction of a Welſh Fortune teller, who foretold him that his Head ſhould ride down Cheapſide with a Silver Crown: And when the Citizens had ſatisfied their Eyes with this ſad Spectacle, the Head of this unfortunate Prince was ſet upon the Pillory in Cheapſide all that day, for all Perſons to behold it. [5] It was then ſet up on the Tower, firſt Crown'd with Ivy; which was done (I ſuppoſe) to rediculе the above-mention'd Propheſy, of this Prince's being to be Crown'd with the Crown of Brutus.

* Where he is ſurprized and kill'd by the Lord Mortimer's Men, with the Manner of it.

[4] Chron. Norwic. MS. in Bib. Cotton. His Head carried to London in Triumph, and ſet upon the Tower. Chron. Abing.

[5] M. W.

Such was the Fate of this inconſtant Prince, who was ſlain near Landweyr in Buelt on the Eleventh of December, being the laſt of the Britiſh Blood that enjoyed the Principality of Wales, which for many Generations had continued in this Family, and was certainly one of the moſt Antient and Noble in Europe.

Before I conclude this Year, I cannot but take notice of that notable Revolution that happened in the Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, about the latter end of which the [1] French were cruely Maſſacred, Men, Women and Children, all in one Evening, preſently after the Bells had rung to Veſpers, which was the Signal given for this bloody Execution. This was done by the Means and Contrivance of a Sicilian Gentleman, call'd John de Prochita, who came thither from Conſtantinople in the Habit of a Monk, to carry on the Intereſt of Peter King of Arragon, who laid Claim to that Crown in Right of his Wife; and who, [2] not long after the Blow given, arrived there with a Powerful Fleet, and driving out Charles of Anjou, then King thereof, made him retire into France; whereupon Pope Martin ſiding with the expell'd Prince, Excommunicated Peter and all his Adherents, and declared him deprived of the Kingdom of Arragon, which the Pope then conferr'd on Charles Son to the French King, though this Donation never took effect; but we may obſerve from this Tranſaction, that when once a conquering Nation, [1] Mezeray ad hunc Ann. The Maſſacre of the French in Sicily, and the great Revolution that happen'd thereupon.

[2] T. W.

Nation, by its Inſolent Carriage and Oppreſſion, becomes generally odious to the People, they will run any hazard to caſt off ſuch a Yoke.✗ But to return to England;

✗ And I must also obſerve, concerning this Quarrel between these two Princes, that it ran so high that they challeng'd each other to fight, & to decide their differences by a Combat between themselves in Person, & a hundred Knights on each side, which was agreed to and appointed to be fought near Bourdeaux on the first of June next ensuing, before the King of England, who was to be Judge, who had the victory, as appears by an Instrument of both these Princes under their respective Seals, which is published in R's Coll p. 226 to 234. But this Challenge never took any Effect as well because King Edward was engag'd in other Affairs & so could not be present at it, as also that the Pope forbad him by his Bull to give any Licence to the said Kings to fight at that Place or to be a Judge or Spectator of it himself, under Pain of Excommunication, as you will find by a Copy of this Bull published in R's Coll. p. 242: 243.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIII.

[3] M. W. After the Death of the Prince, the Welſh are wholly ſubdued.

King Edward continued ſtill in Wales, reducing the Country to His Obedience, which He was not long about; for [3] ſo ſoon as the Death of Prince Llewellyn came to be publickly known, the Welſh utterly diſpirited at the loſs, made no conſiderable Reſiſtance againſt the King's Forces in Angleſey; ſo that the Engliſh had now leaſure to finiſh their Bridge over the River Menay, and the King being come to His Army in Angleſey, eaſily paſſed over it into that Mountainous part of North-Wales, then called Snowdun; for Prince David not daring longer to defend it, quitted it and retired; and the Caſtle of that Name too was ſoon after Surrendred, with ſome other fortified Places in thoſe Parts.

[4] Chron. Abing.

Thus all Wales was ſubdued, [4] only the ſtrong Caſtle of Bere ſtill held out, which yet was not long after taken by the Earl of Pembroke; the Gariſon Surrendring to the King's Mercy for want of Proviſions, they were Pardoned their Lives.

[5] H. K. Prince David Flies, and is taken Priſoner.

As for David, who [5] after the Death of his Brother took upon him the Title of Prince of Wales, he endeavoured all he could to renew the War, and recover his loſt Principality; but it was to little purpoſe, for his Forces being ſoon put to flight, he was fain to conceal himſelf for a time, as well as he could; but at laſt being diſcovered by ſome of his own Countrymen, whom the King had employed as Spies, he was by them taken about the end of this Summer, and then brought to Him at Rothlan Caſtle; But He refuſed either to ſpeak with or ſee him, though the Prince earneſtly deſired it; the reaſon of which I ſuppoſe was, leſt He ſhould have, upon the Sight of him, been moved to pardon him, for his former Services. Thus was this unfortunate Prince preſently after ſent to Cheſter-Caſtle to be there kept until his Condemnation and Execution, which was at Shrewsbury in October following.

And is ſent to Cheſter Caſtle. C. J. Everſden. MS.

[1] Id. ib. C. T. Wi. The King Summons a great Council or Parliament to Shrewsbury, to conſider what was to be done with him.

For [1] the King would not put ſo great a Perſon to Death by the ordinary Forms of Juſtice; but about Michaelmas He cauſed to be ſummoned to that Town, all the Great and Wiſe Men of the Kingdom, as well of the Nobility, as of the Cities and Boroughs, to a Great or General Parliament, to conſult what was beſt to be done with Prince David; which paſſage in our Author, concerning the Summons of the Commons, as well as of the Lords, to this Parliament, is confirmed by the * Writs of Summons ſtill extant upon Record: The firſt of which is to the Lords, to meet the King at Shrewsbury on the morrow after Michaelmas-day: The Second Writ is directed to the Sheriffs of every County of England, 'To cauſe to be choſen two Knights pro Communitate ejuſdem Commitatus (i. e. for the Communalty of the ſame County;) as alſo a Third Writ directed to ſeveral Cities and Boroughs: The Names of many of them are entred upon the Roll, and though all are not there expreſſed, which then ſent Members to Parliament, yet there is a void ſpace left, for the entring of them, as appears by the Roll it ſelf, which I peruſed; ſo that it ſeems they were omitted only through the careleſsneſs of the Clerks. There is alſo a Fourth Writ which is directed to the Juſtices, and others of the King's Learned Council (as it is uſed at this day:) Each of theſe Writs have the ſame Preamble, and declare the ſame Cauſe for the Summoning of this Parliament,

* Rot. Wallie II E. 1. M. 2. Dors. ✗ both these Writs are printed at large in R's Coll: p. 247. to 249.

The Writs of Summons for that Purpoſe.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIII

liament. Then after a long Account of the late War with Prince Llewellyn, and his Death, and the taking of David his Brother Priſoner, with divers ſharp Invectives againſt his Treaſon and Ingratitude, the King ſummons them to the ſaid Place to give their Advice, what they ſhall think fit to be done with the ſaid Traitor.

I have been the more particular in the Account of theſe Writs, becauſe neither Mr. Pryn nor Dr. Brady (with all their Diligence) have taken any Notice of them; And in my Introduction have given the Reaſon, why the Dr. might not think fit to mention theſe Writs, nor yet what the very Authors he hath made uſe of relate concerning this Parliament at Shrewsbury; in which, as moſt of our Hiſtorians inform us, David being Judicially Condemned for Treaſon, by the King's Court of Peers, (in which He Himſelf preſided) John de Vaus, the Lord Chief Juſtice, pronounced the Sentence, which was, That he was Firſt to be drawn, then hanged, and his Bowels being burnt, his Body was to be divided into Four Quarters, and to be ſent to Four of the Chiefeſt Cities and Towns of England, viz. Briſtol, Northampton, York and Wincheſter; but his Head was afterwards ſent up to London, to accompany that of his Brother's on the Tower.

The Sentence of Condemnation againſt him.

Annal. de Burton in Bib. Ben.

This is the Firſt Example I can meet with of this manner of Execution done upon Traitors, which hath been ſince commonly continued, though indeed it was too ſevere upon a Man of Prince David's Character; who, notwithſtanding all the the Ingratitude laid to his Charge by the Hiſtorians and Records of that time, muſt be confeſſed to have loſt his Life in a Cauſe, that cancels all other Obligations, the Aſſiſting his Brother and Prince, and endeavouring (though in vain) to Aſſert the Laws and Liberties of his Country.

What may be alledged in his Defence.

I ſhall therefore paſs no further Cenſure upon the Actions either of this David or his Brother Llewellyn, ſince we are not fit Judges of thoſe Matters at ſuch a diſtance of Time; only if we might judge, by the Succeſs, it was what God had ordained ſhould come to paſs, for the Peace and happineſs both of the Engliſh and Britiſh Nations, which thereby ceaſing to make almoſt continual War upon each other, and being United at laſt by this happy Conqueſt, came by degrees to enjoy the ſame Laws and Liberties with their Conquerors.

I find no more done this Year in Wales, [3] but that immediately after the taking of Prince David Priſoner, * Rees ap Vaghan, a Great Nobleman of South-Wales, with his Accomplices, yeilded themſelves Priſoners to the Earl of Hereford, who at the King's Command ſent him to the Tower of London to be impriſoned. Then having commanded the Laws of England to be obſerved in Wales, and having built two ſtrong Caſtles in thoſe Parts, the One at Aber-Conway, and the Other at Caërnarvan, the King paſſed through all Wales, and dividing much of the Conquer'd Lands among his Barons,* reduced it under the Subjection of the Crown of England.

[3] T. Wal.

* Rees ap Vaghan, with his Accomplices, Surrender themſelves Priſoners.

*(but reserving the Maritime Castles for ye Crown)

This Year * there was given the King in a Parliament (which I ſuppoſe was held at Acton-Burnel in Shropſhire, in the Month of October) in Aid of a Thirteenth part of all Moveable Goods by the Laity, and a Twentieth by the Clergy, to defray the Charges of the late War againſt the Welſh; and then was alſo enacted the Statute of Acton-Burnel, the Sum of which you may find at the end of this Reign.

* Vid. Stat. of Acton-Burnel, 11 Ed. I.

A Parliament at Acton Burnel, and what was there done.

As

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIII.

The Quarrel that had like to have been between the King and the Pope, concerning the Tenths collected for the Holy Land.

[4] Ant. Brit. p. 200.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, I cannot but here take notice, of one thing that had like to have created a Quarrel between the King and the Pope, had not the former complied with his Demands: You are therefore to obſerve, that there had been Six Years Tenths Collected from the Clergy, and laid up in ſeveral Monaſteries to carry on the War in the Holy Land according to a Canon of the late Council of Lyons, by vertue of which, [4] the laſt Year Martin the Fourth, being newly made Pope, demanded this Money of the King, intending to diſpoſe of it himſelf, and for that end ſent over two Preaching Fryers into England, for the exportation and return thereof, by his Agents and Foreig Merchants.

*Clauſ. 10 E. I. M. 5.

And the Proceedings in that Affair.

But I muſt farther inform you, That at the ſame time that theſe Fryers came to demand this Money, * they brought alſo Letters from the Pope to the King, exhorting Him to reſume the Croſs, and to aſſign the time of the General Paſſage of the Chriſtians of all Nations into the Holy Land; and earneſtly preſſed the King for an Anſwer; who only wrote back by them to this purpoſe, That his Holineſs ſhould receive an Anſwer by Meſſengers of His Own. This was dated at Cheſter the Tenth of June, when the King was in his March againſt the Welſh.

*Claus. 11 E. I. M. 7.

It alſo farther appears by a * Bull of the Popes, on the Rolls of this Year, That the King had actually ſent two Clergymen there named, as Envoys to his Holineſs; and by theſe He deſired that the Tenths lately Collected might be Aſſigned to his Brother Earl Edmund, who was ready to undertake the Croſs, for the Succour of the Holy Land, at the time of the General Paſſage thither.

[5] Ibid.

The Pope moves the King again to go to the Holy Land.

Inſtead of anſwering this reaſonable [5] Requeſt, the Pope by his Bull utterly refuſed to grant it, but giving the King and His Brothe many fine Words, moved them to go in their own Perſons (as he ſuppoſed) for the Glory of God and their own Honour. This Bull is date at Orvieto, in the Second Year of his Pontificate.

*Clauſ. 10 E. I. M. 4 intus.

The King by his Writ prohibits the Money Collected for theſe Tenths, to be carried beyond-Sea.

† Nº 8.

But the King had then too much Work upon His Hands at Home, and was ſufficiently tired with His former Expedition to the Holy Land to go thither any more; neither did He think it convenient to let ſ great a Sum of Money be carried out of the Nation in Specie, having alſ lately had an occaſion to borrow ſome of it towards His Wars in Wales Wherefore He preſently iſſued out his *Writs to His Brother Edmund Earl of Cornwall, commanding him to call before him the Merchants o London, and order them not to tranſport, nor permit to be tranſporte any of this Money ariſing from the ſaid Tenths; and that if the Ea found any Merchant ſo doing, he ſhould cauſe him to be Arreſted, to gether with the Money. This bears Date the Four and twentieth of Ma in the Tenth Year of the King's Reign, being the Year before; an Dr. Brady hath given us a Copy of it in his † Appendix, to whic I refer the Reader for further Satisfaction. The like Writs we ſent to the Mayor and Sheriffs, and to the Warden of th Cinque-Ports.

*Rot. Cl. 11 Ed. 1. M. 7. Dorſ. de Decima.

[1] * Vid. Regiſt. Pecham. f. 66.

The King alſo ſent his Commiſſioners to certain Monaſteries whe this Money was kept, to take an Account how much it was; bu ſome of the Priors refuſing the King's Officers Admittance for that purpoſ they were for this Contempt Cited by the Sheriffs to give an Accou thereof themſelves before the King: But it ſeems it did not reſt here for as it appears by the Relation in the [1] Pope's *Letter, or Bull, th the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, concerning the King's detaining theſe Tenths, He is alſo charged with breaking open the Locks and Seals of the Places where this Money was kept, and removing of it whither He pleaſed, 'To the Great Offence of God, and High Contempt of the Apoſtolick 'See; whereas he ought not to have done it without his Holineſs's 'Leave, having ſent (as 'tis there ſaid) frivolous Letters in Excuſe: And 'in this Bull or Letter, he alſo Commands the Archbiſhop, by vertue 'of his Obedience, to go to the King, and Admoniſh Him on his Be'half, to reſtore the Money to the Places from whence it was taken, 'without any Defalcation, within the ſpace of a Month; and likewiſe 'he enjoyned the Archbiſhop to give him (the Pope) an Account what 'he did in this Affair, and what the King's Anſwer was. This Let'ter bears date at Viterbo, the Fifth of July this Year.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIII.

And ſeizes the ſame to his own uſe; upon which the Pope wrote an angry Letter to the Archbiſhop.

[2] But from the Archbiſhop's Reply to this Letter, we may diſcover the farther Proceedings, as alſo the Concluſion of this troubleſome Affair: For in the firſt Place he ſets forth, That he had Warned the King not only to reſtore the Money of theſe Tenths, but alſo to forbear all ſuch Actions for the future, leſt He ſhould fall under his Holineſs's Correction; and then that He ſhould not trouble, nor proſecute thoſe that had the ſaid Money in their Cuſtody; and laſtly aſſures the Pope, That the King having patiently heard all theſe Admonitions, and deliberated with thoſe about Him, anſwered thus;

[2] Id. ib. The Archbiſhop's Anſwer to it.

[3] 'That as to the firſt Point in the Pope's Letter, there was no 'Neceſſity of his ſending any ſuch Letters, nor from the Archbiſhop to 'him in this Caſe, whenas Two Months ſince He had Commanded the 'ſaid Money to be reſtored.

[3] Id. ib.

'To the Second, That He never intended any unjuſt things againſt 'the Church.

'To the Third, He wondered why it ſhould be required of Him, 'not to moleſt the Guardians of this Money, ſince it was never his 'purpoſe to Diſturb any Innocent Perſon, that had been concern'd 'about it.

When the Archbiſhop ſent this Account of his Proceedings to the Pope, he alſo advertiſed him, That it was affirm'd by ſuch Teſtimony as ought to be believed, that the King had reſtored all the Money; but of that he could not write him the preciſe Truth, without firſt conſulting thoſe that knew the Weight, Number, and Value of it. This Anſwer of the Archbiſhop's is dated the Nine and twentieth of November, being not long after the King's Summons to the late Meeting at Northampton. Dr. Brady hath been ſomewhat more large in this Relation, which is to be found in the Records; but what is here, is ſufficient to ſhew us the ſervile Submiſſion our King's were forced to pay to the Pope or Biſhop of Rome in thoſe Times.

[4] As to Foreign Affairs; Charles late King of Naples and Sicily, formerly expell'd by the King of Arragon, having again return'd into that Kingdom with a powerful Army, had made himſelf Maſter of Naples and Apulia; whereupon the Sicilians, under the Conduct of Peter of Arragon their then King, came before that City with Twenty ſeven armed Galleys, againſt whom Charles Prince of Achaia, eldeſt Son to King Charles, ſail'd out with a great number of Galleys to Fight them, but with ill Succeſs; for his Veſſels being worſted, and the day loſt, he was himſelf taken, and carried away Priſoner to Meſſina, from whence he was not long after removed into Spain.

[4] T. W. Charles King of Naples recovers that Kingdom from King Peter of Arragon, who takes his Son Priſoner.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIV

[5] King Edward goes into South Wales to ſettle that Country.

[1] Id. Ib. The Queen in the mean while is brought to Bed of a young Prince at Caernarvan.

[2] Id. A great Tourneament in Wales.

In the beginning of this Year, [5] the King leaving North-Wales, took a Progreſs into Glamorganſhire, to ſettle and view thoſe Parts; where being nobly received by the Earl of Gloceſter, then Lord of that Country, at his own Expence, He was from thence Conducted by him as far as Briſtol, where, and in Wales, He continued all the reſt of that Year: Beſides this, I find little elſe remarkable to have happened, only that the [1] Queen remaining ſtill at Caernarvan, and being great with Child, was there brought to Bed of a Young Prince upon St. Mark's day, (or Six and Twentieth of April) who, from the Place of his Birth, is called by our Hiſtorians Edward of Caernarvan, and ſucceeded his Father. But the Joy at his Birth was juſtly allay'd by the Death of Prince Alphonſus, the King's Eldeſt Son, ſoon after, who being a Youth of great hopes, and of about twelve Years of Age, deceaſed at Windſor on the Nineteenth of Auguſt following. [2] Alſo in the begining of this Month, many Earls, Barons and Noblemen of England, as well as from Foreign Parts, held a great Tourneament (which they call'd of the Round Table) at Newbin near Snowdun in Wales, as a Triumph for the Conqueſt of that Country.

[3] Mezeray ad hunc An.

In Foreign Parts I find nothing worth noting, only [3] Charles late King of Naples and Sicily deceaſed in Italy, without ever recovering his loſt Dominions, of all which Robert Count of Artois was appointed Protector by the Pope, during the Captivity of Charles Sirnamed the Lame, Eldeſt Son to the Deceaſed, on whom that Right devolved upon his Death; yet he remain'd ſome Years after a Priſoner to the King of Aragon, till he was reſtored to his Liberty by the Mediation of King Edward, as you will find in due time.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXV.

[4] T.W. A.W. The King kept his Criſtmas at Briſtol with great Solemnity.

We ſhall now return to England; where Peace being thus happily Eſtabliſhed by the Conqueſt of Wales, the King had little elſe to do than to enjoy the Benefit of it: Yet the better to ſettle his Affairs in thoſe Parts, [4] He kept his Chriſtmas at Briſtol with great Solemnity, no King before Him having done the like; here He alſo held a great Council with his Peers and Lords, which being ended, He returned in haſt to London, having been abſent from thence near three Years, and was there received with great Acclamations, thô He did not ſtay long there, being Summoned by the King of France to come over and ſerve him againſt the King of Arragon (with whom he was then in War) and that by vertue of his Tenure of the Dutchy of Guienne.

[5] Id. And being about to paſs over into France, his Journey is Stopt.

But though the King then intended to have gone over into France for that Purpoſe, [5] yet He went no farther than Canterbury; for there hearing of the Sickneſs of the Qneen his Mother, He returned and waited on her at Ambresbury, and ſent Meſſengers to the King of France, to excuſe his not coming over to him.

[1] Fabian Chron, ad hunc An. The King ſeizes the Liberties of the City.

About this time the [1] King being highly diſpleaſed with the City of London, did on the 25th of January, ſeize all her Liberties and Franchiſes into his own hands, and diſcharging Gregory Brooksby, the then Mayor, put in Stephen Sands as Cuſtos or Guardian of the City, who ſo continued till the Monday after Candlemas; and then Sir John Breton had the Charge of it delivered to him for the reſt of the Year. The Cauſe of his Diſpleaſure is not there ſet down; but my Author ſays, he found, in an old Book, That it was, becauſe the late

Mayor

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXV

Mayor took Bribes from the Bakers to connive at their ſelling Bread Six or Seven Ounces too light in the Pound Loaf; which being only the Offence of one Man, ſeems too ſlight a Cauſe for ſo ſevere a Puniſhment on the whole Body; eſpecially if we conſider that the City Liberties ſtood thus ſeized, and that She had no Mayor for Twelve Years enſuing: But you are to take notice, that notwithſtanding this Seizure, yet the Politick Body or Corporation of the City was not diſſolved, as it was for certain pretended Miſdemeanors in the time of the late King Charles the Second; but they enjoyed all Privileges of holding Courts, &c. (the Choice of a Mayor only excepted) as they had done before the ſaid Seizure.

[2] Id. Ib. Merchant Strangers firſt permitted to hire Houſes in London.

Alſo about the ſame time, [2] we find Merchant Strangers were firſt permitted to rent Houſes, and to buy and ſell their own Commodities themſelves, without any Interruption from the Citizens; for before this, they hired Lodgings, and their Landlords were the Brokers who ſold all their Goods and Merchandize for them; though my Author obſerves, That this Liberty tended much to the Damage of the City and Kingdom, by reaſon of the Deceits theſe Foreigners uſed in putting off their bad Wares, as well as ſelling them by falſe Weights; for which, upon an Information brought againſt them by the City, their Weights were deſtroyed, and the Foreign Merchants were after a ſevere Impriſoment made to pay a thouſand Pound Fine to the King. This deſerves our Notice, becauſe it ſhews us the reſtrained manner of Commerce in thoſe days, when Strangers managed moſt of the Trade, and that the Engliſh Merchants brought few Foreign Commodities into this Nation.

[3] T. W. Vid. the Printed Stat. of Weſtminſter the Second. A Parliament at Weſtminſter with the Laws there made.

[3] Then preſently after Eaſter the King Summon'd a Parliament at Weſtminſter, where, for a further Supplement to the late Statutes of Gloceſter, and to remedy many Oppreſſions of the People through the Defect of good Laws, He there made thoſe memorable Laws called the Statutes of Weſtminſter the Second, containing Forty nine Chapters, which being very long the Reader may find the Chief Heads of them at the end of this King's Reign.

[4] Id. Ib. The Death of William de Wickwaine Archbiſhop of York. The Abbey Church at Weſtminſter finiſhed.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, William de Wickwaine, Arch-Biſhop of York, died this Year, and was ſucceeded by John Romanus (or the Roman) an Italian by Extraction, but born in England. Alſo the Abbey-Church of Weſtminſter, having been Sixty ſix Years in Building, was now Finiſhed.

[5] Vid. Mezeray ad hunc An.

The ill Succeſs and Death of King Phillip of France.

I ſhall conclude this Year with ſome Foreign Affairs. King Philip abovemention'd was now unhappily engaged in a War, in the Pope's Quarrel, againſt Peter King of Arragon; whom the former having Excommunicated, beſtowed his Kingdom upon Charles, Second Son to King Philip, who thereupon marched into Arragon in order to Conquer it, where at firſt he met with very good Succeſs, taking Garonde in Catalonia and ſeveral other Places; but when his Fleet was beaten by the Spaniards, and his Army being in a Barren Country, without any Proviſions brought them by Sea, was thereby reduced to great Neceſſity, the King ſeeing He could do nothing more there, fell Sick either of the Contagion of the Air, or elſe of Diſcontent, ſo that He was forced to be carried in a Litter to Perpignan, where his Diſtemper daily encreaſing, either from the ill news He heard of the loſs of all thoſe Places He had lately Conquer'd, or elſe from the violent Agitation of the Journey, it coſt Him his Life the ſixth day of October, being not then Five and Forty Years old. He was a valiant, pious and juſt Prince, but too eaſie to be impoſed upon by thoſe who had evil Deſigns upon Him, as may appear by this raſh unfortunate Expedition. His Son Philip Sirnamed the Fair ſucceeded him: And [1] Pope Martin IV deceaſing this Year, was ſucceeded by Honorius IV. who was ſo decrepit, that not being able to ſtand or Walk, he was fain to be carried in a Chair, and in that Poſture alſo Sung Maſs at his Inthronization. *

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXV.

[1] Chron. Lanercoſt.

The Deceaſe of Pope Martin 4. who is ſucceeded by Honorius 4.

* Immediately after which he give King Edward notice of his Advancement by a Bull sent for that purpose, & by another dated in the Kal: May a few Days after the former; he exhorted the King again to undertake the Crusado, as he had promised to do within five years ensuing; but the Pope pressed him now to undertake it at or before Christmass. Vid: both these Bulls in R's Coll: p. 295 to 297. But altho in Consideration of this voyage the King had already receivd a Grant from the Pope of the Tenth of all Ecclesiastical Benefices of England, Scotland & Ireland, yet being hindred by more weighty affairs, he from Time to Time obtaind the Pope's Dispensation to delay it, till at last all thoughts of any such Undertaking was totaly laid aside; but as for the Bulls of Dispensation, they are published in R's Coll: p. 316 to 322.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVI

[2] T.W. T.Wi.

A great Council at London, to conſult about the Government of the Kingdom, during the King's abſence in France.

This Year, Fifteen Days after Eaſter, the King held a Colloquie or General Council of all the great Men of the Kingdom, both Eccleſiaſtical and Secular, at London, to conſult concerning the Government of the Kingdom in his Abſence, which He was now about to leave upon this occaſion: Philip the preſent King of France, not long after his Father's Deceaſe, had ſent his Ambaſſadors to King Edward to come over thither, and employ his Mediation for a Peace between Himſelf and the Kings of Caſtile and Arragon; wherefore ſo ſoon as this Treaty was ended, and the King had ordain'd his Brother Earl ~~Edmund~~ Guardian of the Realm in his Abſence, in Compliance to the French King's Deſires, He went over into France, being attended by divers Biſhops and Lords of Note, and was there honourably received by the King his Coſin and his Nobles at Amiens; and ſome time after He had done his Homage for his Dominions in France, He went with King Philip to a Great Parliament or Aſſembly of Eſtates, which he held at Paris, where King Edward laid claim to divers Lands unjuſtly detain'd from Him, and obtained Satisfaction concerning the ſame; though this Grant of the King of France and his Peers did not long continue in Force, as Nicholas Trivet and Thomas Walſingham both obſerve on this Tranſaction.

He goes over, and on what Occaſion.

The reſt of the King's Tranſactions in that Kingdom.

Yet the Annals of Waverly and Matt. Weſtminſter are more full in their Account of this Matter, and ſay, That the King being conducted to St. Germaines after He had ſtayed there ſome time, demanded all the Lands which his Grand-Father King John had loſt, and in conſideration thereof obtained ten thouſand Pounds Sterling of the King of France, to be Yearly pay'd ~~kept~~ at the Tower of London; together with ſome Arrears for Normandy, which was his Inheritance: But this, though related by our Hiſtorians, does not ſeem at all probable, ſince the King had already parted with all his Claim to Normandy to this King's Father and Grandfather.

[3] Vid. Mezeray ſub hoc Anno.

The French Hiſtorians differ from ours concerning them.

[3] But the French Hiſtorians give this quite another Face; for though they agree with the Engliſh, as to the Circumſtances of the King's going over, and his Reception in France, yet they differ about the Motives of his Voyage; for they report the pretended Cauſe of it was, to reconcile the Difference of the two Kings abovemention'd, but indeed and in truth it was to renew the former Treaties made with King Philip's Predeceſſors: And as to the other Buſineſs, the French Writers ſay quite contrary, viz. That when King Edward preſſed that He might have ſome further Conſideration for Normandy, and thoſe other Countries which both his Father and Himſelf had parted with, He could obtain nothing upon thoſe Points; wherefore taking his Leave of King Philip, he went to Bourdeaux, and there in a Solemn Manner He received the Ambaſſadors of the Kings of Arragon, Caſtile and Sicily, all Enemies to France, which gave no little Umbrage and Jealouſy to that King. We find no more at preſent King Edward did further in France, but that He ſtayed there the three enſuing Years to ſettle his Affairs in Gaſcoigne, which had been in great Diſorder, by reaſon that ſome of the Citizens of Bourdeaux would have betrayed that City to the French; but the King upon his Arrival having cauſed the Chief of thoſe Conſpirators to be hanged, thereby Eſtabliſhed the Peace of the Province.

The King goes to Bourdeaux, and there receives the Ambaſſadors from ſeveral Princes.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVI

In the mean time all things continued quiet in England, where there happened little conſiderable, [4] only Queen Eleanor the King's Mother, having for ſome Years before reſided in the Nunnery of Ambreſbury, now took upon her the habit of a Nun; yet had a Diſpenſation from the Pope to keep her Joynture, which was very conſiderable; and I ſuppoſe it was granted upon this Conſideration, that the Queen might thereby have the more to beſtow upon that Nunnery and other Monaſteries, which were often the Executors of dying Princes in thoſe Times.

[4] M. W. Queen Eleanor the Kings Mother dies.

As to Foreign Affairs, [5] Alexander the Third King of Scots on the Nineteenth of March, as he was going home to his Queen in the Night, was thrown off from his Horſe and taken up Dead, when he had Reigned Thirty Seven Yeats; whoſe untimely End was very much lamented (being but forty five Years of Age) for his Excellent Endowments both of Body and Mind: And now the Royal Line being almoſt extinct, there was like to be a Great Diſpute between ſeveral Competitors for that Kingdom; for the late King had lived to bury all his Children, Prince Alexander his Eldeſt Son deceaſing about three Years before his Father in the 20th Year of his Age, and Margaret (the laſt of them) died not long after ſhe was Married to Eric, King of Norway, by whom ſhe had only one Daughter called likewiſe Margaret, then but a Child, who was commonly called the Maid of Norway, and upon her Grandfather's Death was own'd for lawful Heireſs of that Kingdom.

[5] Hect. Boeth. Lib. 13. p. 191. whoſe Account of the Time of this King's Death is truer than Buchanan's, who Places it in 1285.

The deceaſe of Alexander 3d King of Scots, leaving the Princeſs of Norway his Heir.

Immediately after King Alexander's deceaſe, the Eſtates of the Kindom aſſembled at Scone to treat (as [1] Buchanan relates) about the creating a new King, and ſettling the Kingdom; which indeed was no more, but the appointing a Husband for this young Princeſs, as you will find by and by.

[1] Rer. Scot. L. 8 in Init.

An Aſſembly of the Eſtates of Scotland, about chooſing a Husband for their Young Queen.

The firſt thing this Convention did, was to appoint Six Governors, Biſhops and Earls (whoſe names I need not recite) each of whom were to preſide over their particular Provinces of the Kingdom.

And before this Convention of the Eſtates broke up, King Edward, being ſenſible that this Young Queen would be a very convenient Match for the Prince his Son, was reſolved to lay hold on this Opportunity; and [2] therefore ſent certain Ambaſſadors into Scotland to demand the Lady in Marriage: Theſe being admitted into the Aſſembly of the Eſtates, made them an Eloquent Speech, ſetting forth the great Advantages that might accrew to both Kingdoms by this Intermarriage. The Propoſals being thus made, the Ambaſſadors found the Eſtates not averſe from this Alliance; for King Edward had not long ſince ſubdued Wales, and was looked upon as a Prince of Great Valour and Prudence: Beſides the Young Queen was his Siſter's Daughter, and there had been a very amicable Correſpondence, maintain'd between the Two Crowns for above Seventy Years; and of the Two laſt Kings Alexanders, the Father had Married the Siſter, and the Son the Daughter of King Henry the Third;

[2] M. W. The King propoſes a Match between her and the Prince his Son.

ſo

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVI

ſo that there never had been ſo long a Peace between theſe Kingdoms, from the time of King William the Firſt.

Theſe were the Motives that highly promoted this Treaty; which yet advanced no farther than the bare Propoſal and Acceptance, till three Years after, when it was again renewed, as you will find in due time. *

* As for forreign Affairs I find nothing worth our Notice, only, that whilst King Edward continued at Paris he endeavour'd to mediate a Peace between the Kings of France and Arragon & in order to it being empower'd by both of them, he made a Truce between them & their Subjects to continue from the Feast of our Lady's Assumption until Michaelmas 1287. as appears by the King's Charter still extant. vid: R–s Coll: p. 330 to 332.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVII.

[3] Dr. P^s Chron. T. Wi.

Rees ap Meredyth Rebels in South-Wales, and on what Occaſion.

The King being ſtill in Gaſcoigne, England does not afford us many conſiderable Actions in his Abſence; the only thing that happened worth noting was, [3] the dangerous Rebellion that Rees ap Meredoc (or Meredyth) the moſt potent Nobleman of the Blood Royal that remain'd in South-Wales, raiſed this Year in thoſe parts on this occaſion: He having ſerved the King in his late Wars againſt Prince Llewellyn, was Knighted by Him, and promiſed more Lands and Preferments; which not being made good, he was inwardly diſcontented, yet did not expreſs it till the Lord Payne Tiptoft, Warden of the King's Caſtles adjoining to Rees's-Country, and the Lord Adam Plucknet, the King's Seneſchal, or Steward in Wales, cited the ſaid Rees (as they did other Gentlemen of the Country) to appear at the King's Court, which he, alledging his Antient Privileges and Liberties, refuſed to do; whereupon a great Quarrel aroſe between him and the Lords abovementioned, ſo that there were Sundry Skirmiſhes betwixt them, and many Men ſlain on both ſides, to the great Diſturbance of thoſe Parts. The King hearing of theſe things, wrote to Rees ap Meredyth, requiring him to keep the Peace till his Return; upon the Receipt of which Letter, Rees promiſed to reform and amend what he had done amiſs; but it proceeded no further then Words; for not long after, he took the Caſtles of Dyneover and Llanandovery, and burnt ſeveral Towns: Whereupon the King ordered his Brother the Earl of Cornwal, whom He had left his Lieutenant during his Abſence, to go with an Army into Wales against theſe Rebellious Attempts. [2] The Earl in compliance to the King's Commands, marched into Wales in Perſon, and beſieged Rees's Chief Caſtle called Droſlan, and made a Myne under it; but the Myners having put very weak Props to ſupport it, the Lord Stafford and the Lord William Montchenſey, with ſeveral other Knights and Eſquires, going into the Ditch to view the Myne, the Caſtle-Wall fell down upon them, and bruiſed them to Death.

The Earl of Cornwal Marches into Wales with an Army: but at firſt meets with ill Succeſs.

[2] As appears by ye King's Writs to the Barons & Tenants in Capite in the Kingdom which are entered on the Welsh Rolls [Rot: Wal: 15. Ed. 1 m. 10. d] & are published in R–s Coll. p. 343, 344.

[4] Id. Ib.

Rees makes ſeveral freſh Incurſions.

But though the Caſtle was after this quickly taken, yet this Succeſs ſignified little, becauſe Rees himſelf was not there; [4] who keeping in certain Woods encompaſſed with Bogs, from thence made Incurſions, and miſerably ſpoiled the adjacent Countries, ſo that the Earl of Cornwal not being ſo Effectually aſſiſted by the Earl of Gloceſter (the moſt powerful Nobleman of thoſe Parts) as he expected, having loſt a great many Men, and ſpent much Money in this Expedition, was fain to make a Truce with Rees, and then returned into England towards Michaelmas; after which about Chriſtmas following Rees again breaking the Truce, began to ſpoil the Neighbouring Country, whereupon the Lord Robert Tiptoft aſſaulted and took another Caſtle of his upon the River Tewy, with divers other Caſtles that Rees had gain'd before; but not being able to take the Traytor himſelf, he ſet a Price upon his Head; whereupon finding the Country no longer ſafe for him, he fled over into Ireland, and continued there privately by the Connivance of the Earl of Gloceſter in ſome of his Territories; and ſo this Rebellion ended for that that time. [5] But about Four Years after this Rees returning again into Wales, in order to make ſome freſh Diſturbance, was taken as he lay concealed among the Mountains, and being thence ſent to the King, then at Berwick, (or as ſome others ſay at York) was condemned to be Drawn Hang'd and Quartered.

Yet is at laſt forced to fly into Ireland.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVII.

[5] Chron. R f. But is ſome Years after taken and Executed.

But that we may alſo obſerve what was done this Year beyond Sea, I cannot here omit a great Deliverance, [1] which King Edward and his Queen had in Gaſcoigne; for while they ſat together diſcourſing in their Bed-Chamber, a Flaſh of Lightning ſtruck in at the Window, and paſſing between them, killed two of their Servants that were then waiting in the Room, yet without any prejudice to their Royal Perſons. After this, the King hearing of the Impriſonment of his Cozen Charles Prince of Achaia, Son to Charles late King of Naples, by Alphonſo King of Arragon his Competitor, took a Journey into that Kingdom, to procure the Delivery of his Kinſman.

[1] M. W. The great deliverance of the King and Queen from Thunder and Lightning. Id. Ib.

But this could not be agreed on till the beginning of the Year following, [2] by the Mediation of the King of England, upon theſe Conditions; That he ſhould in the Firſt Place be ſet Free, and Pay the King of Arragon a great Sum of Money for his Ranſom; Secondly, That he ſhould cauſe the Count of Valois to renounce his Pretentions to that Kingdom; Thirdly, That he ſhould Inveſt James King of Arragon with the Kingdom of Sicily; and Laſtly, That he ſhould make the King of Arragon's Peace with the Pope: All which if he did not perform within the Space of three Years, he was then again to deliver himſelf a Priſoner, and in the mean time to give his Three Sons, with Forty Noblemen, as Hoſtages for the true Performance of it. In the mean while King Edward, to accompliſh the Delivery of his Kinſman, generouſly paid the Sum of Thirty thouſand Marks for his Ranſom, and till the ſaid Prince's Sons (who had been promiſed) could arrive, the King ſent ſeveral Engliſh as Hoſtages for a farther Security; among whom I find (from the * Rolls in the Tower) that Sir John de Southwell was one, who had been ſome Years before Seneſchal of Gaſcoigne, and for this Service was alſo † Rewarded with the Government of Bourdeaux-Caſtle: He is look'd upon as Anceſtor of the Antient Family of the Southwells, ſometime of Norfolk and Suffolk, but now of Ireland; whoſe lineal Deſcendents are Sir Robert Southwell, at this Time Secretary of State, and Sir Thomas Southwell, one of the Commiſſioners of the Revenue of that Kingdom. I hope the Reader will pardon this Digreſſion, which my Eſteem for theſe two worthy Gentlemen obliges me to make. But, to return to our Hiſtory.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVIII.

[2] T Wal. Mezeray. The King procures the deliverance of Charles Son to the King of Naples, and on what Conditions. Fourty Noble Men delivered as Hoſtages for the true performance of them.

* Rot. Vaſc. 13. Ed. 1. M. 4.

† Eod. Rot. 17. Ed. 1. M. 13.

After the King's Return out of Arragon into Gaſcoigne, [3] He there again undertook the Cruſado at the Town of Blencford, and then Baniſhed all the Jews out of his Territories in thoſe Parts.

[3] T. W. The King undertakes the Cruſado, and Baniſhes the Jews from his Territories in France.

Little happened this Year conſiderable in England, only a [4] certain Eſquire called Robert Chamberlain, with ſeveral more of his Accomplices, pretending to hold a Tourneament at the Town of St. Botolf (commonly called Boſton in Lyncolnſhire) but indeed with a deſign to plunder the Rich Fair that was then held, came thither, the one part of them diſguiſed in the Habit of white Monks, the other [4] Id. Ib. T. W. Robert Chamberlain and his Accomplices Plunder the Fair at Boſton, and ſet the Town on Fire.

like

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXVIII.

like black Channons, and inſtead of Tilting, privately ſet the Town on Fire, that ſo they might in the mean time rob the Tradeſmen's Booths; which wicked Deſign they effected, and carried off a great many Rich Goods: But notwithſtanding the Townſmen's endeavours to quench the Fire, it burnt with that Violence, that it deſtroyed great part of the Town; [5] and which was much more ſtrange, this Chamberlain abovementioned was the only Perſon could be diſcovered to have a hand in that Wicked exploit; for which being Condemned to be Hanged, though at the Place of Execution he begged Pardon of the Merchants and Townſmen for the Injuries he had done them, yet would he never be brought to reveal his Accomplices: He was, it ſeems, a Man of ſome Subſtance, and had ſeveral Houſes of his own in that Town, in which were found after his Death, a great Share of the Booty which he and his Confederates had Stolen.

[5] H. K. Col. 2466.

[1] T. W. The ſtrange cheapneſs of Wheat this Year.

I ſhall only farther take notice of the [1] great plenty that was this Year in England, Wheat being now Sold in ſome Places for Twenty-pence, and in other Places for Sixteen-pence, and in others, but for Twelve-pence the Quarter: The Ounce of Silver being then worth Twenty-pence. This I take notice of, That ſo the Reader may compare the difference of the Price of Corn this Year, when it was cheapeſt, with ſome of the following Years, when it grew ſo dear that it cauſed a Famine, and was Sold at Ten, then Fifteen, and at laſt Twenty Shillings the Buſhel; a vaſt Price in thoſe days.*

* As to foreign Affairs I find Pope Honorius to have deceas'd at Rome in ye beginning of this Year, & Nicholas IV was elected in his Stead, who not long after his Coronation gave ye King notice of it by his Bulle dated 7º Kal: March, which you may find in R—'s Coll: p.355, to 357.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIX

[2] Annal. Waver. The King returns into England, after Three Years abſence in France. The King Summons a Parliament, where the Corruption of his Judges and other Officers is inquired into.

Nothing conſiderable happened in England this Year, [2] till the King's return out of France, when He was Solemnly received at London about the middle of Auguſt, having been abſent from England Three Years and Three Months: And ſo ſoon as He return'd, to ſupply his Coffers, emptied in the laſt Voyage, He took occaſion to look into the Corruption and evil Adminiſtration of Juſtice during his Abſence; and to this end Summoning a Parliament at Weſtminſter, and having Proclaimed, That all thoſe who had any thing to object againſt His Juſtices, Sheriffs, and other inferior Officers, ſhould come in and be heard, they were, upon due Examination of their Extortions, then Condemned in Parliament to pay to the King as follows, viz.

[3] Chron. de Dunſtable MS. in Bib. Cot. The Fines ſet upon ſeveral of the Judges for Corruption.

Firſt, [3] Sir Ralph Hengham, Chief Juſtice of the Higher Bench, Seven thouſand Marks; Sir John Loveton, Juſtice of the Lower Bench, Three thouſand Marks; Sir William Brompton, Juſtice, the like Sum; Sir Solomon Rocheſter, Juſtice of Aſſizes, Four thouſand Marks; Sir Richard Boyland, Four thouſand Marks; Sir Thomas Soddington, Two thouſand Marks; Sir Walter Hopton, Two thouſand Marks: The Four laſt were Juſtices Itenerants: Sir William Saham, Three thouſand Marks; Robert Lithbury, Maſter of the Rolls, a Thouſand Marks; Roger Leiceſter, a Thouſand Marks; Henry Bray, Eſcheater, and Judge for the Jews, a Thouſand Marks: And what is more remarkable, Adam de Stratton, a certain Clerk of the Court, was fined no leſs then Thirty two thouſand Marks of new Money, beſides Jewels, and Silver Plate: But Sir Thomas Wayland, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, (being found the greateſt Delinquent, and of the greateſt Subſtance) had all his Goods confiſcated to the King: [4] Nor did it at all avail him that to eſcape Puniſhment he had profeſſed himſelf a Friar Minor in the Monaſtery of Balwell, near St. Edmunds-Bury; for being fetched from thence, he was deprived of his Religious Habit, and Condemned to abjure the Realm, and nd loſt his whole Eſtate, both Real and Perſonal. Which Fines and Confiſcations being brought into his Exchequer, amounted to above One hundred thouſand Marks; which at the Rate (as Money goes now) omes to above Three times as much: Beſides which the King had then lſo granted Him by the Citizens and Burgeſſes a Sixth Part, and of the eſt of the Kingdom a Tenth of all their Goods. Then [5] the King made all his Juſtices to Swear, that they would receive no Bribe nor Preſent from any one, more than of Edibles, which they might take according to Law.

[4] Chron. Ædis. Chriſti Cant. in Bib. Dom. Sim. D'ews.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIX

[5] Id. ib.

The King makes the Judges take an Oath not to take any Bribes.

This was a vaſt Treaſure to be gotten out of the hands of ſo few Men, which how they could amaſs together in thoſe days, when Law-Suits eſpecially in Weſtminſter-Hall) had not multiplied to that degree they ave done ſince, may juſtly prove a matter of Wonder, and ſhews s the great Opportunities the Judges had in thoſe Times to enrich hemſelves by Bribery and Extortion; when their Power, before the Law became fixt and ſettled, was far more arbitrary than now; though hey could not eaſily come off when they were once accuſed in full Parliament.

I have here taken the more notice of this, that Men may not complain of the Age in which they Live, and believe it worſe and more corrupt in every reſpect than thoſe that went before; ſince my Author ays, That there were not any of thoſe Judges, or Officers, though counted among the Wiſeſt and moſt knowing Men of the Kingdom, whoſe Innocence ould bear a ſtrict Examination, or who could make any reaſonable Defence to hoſe many Accuſations that were then prefer'd aginſt them.

As for Foreign Affairs, I ſhall, from the Records in the Tower, give you an exact Account of the Treaty that was this Year reſumed between King Edward and the Eſtates of Scotland, concerning the Marriage of Prince Edward, the King's eldeſt Son, to the Daughter of the King of Norway, then Heireſs of Scotland, who was at that time in Norway with the King her Father: This Match being agreed on by the Scotiſh Eſtates, the Pope's * Diſpenſation was now procured by King Edward, That the Young Princes might inter-marry, although they were Couſin-Germans; which being obtained, King Edward † wrote to Eric, King of Norway, about this Affair, aſſuring him, That the Guardians, Great Men, Prelates, and the whole Community of the Kingdom of Scotland, had unanimouſly conſented to it: Upon which, that * King wrote to King Edward, and alſo ſent certain Commiſſioners named in the Record, to tranſact with Him, that by his Advice and Aſſiſtance the Young Lady, his Neice, might be obeyed as Queen and Heir of Scotland. Then the * King wrote to the Guardians of Scotland, to ſend Commiſſioners to treat with thoſe of Norway, about the Emendation and Peace of that Kingdom, and ordering the Eſtate of the Queen: And they ſent them accordingly, with whom he joined Commiſſioners of his Own; who all by name ſet down in this Inſtrument, met at Salisbury on the Twenry ſixth of October, where and when it was agreed;

An Account of the Treaty of Marriage between Prince Edward and the young Queen of Scotland.

* Rot. Pat. 17. Ed. 1. M. 3. Cedula juti de Facto Norwegiæ.

† Ib. M. 4. in Cedula.

* Ib. M. 3. 4.

* Ibm.

Firſt, That this Young Queen ſhould come into England, or Scotland, before the Feaſt of All-Saints next coming, if ſhe had no reaſonable Excuſe, free from any Contract of Mariage or Eſpouſal; for which the Commiſſioners of Norway did undertake.

† Ibm. The Conditions on which it was agreed.

Anno Dom. MCCLXXXIX.

Secondly, That if ſhe came into England, King Edward engaged, tha when Scotland was ſettled in Peace and Quiet, ~~that~~ ſhe might ſafely g thither and ſtay there, and if the Scots required it, He would ſend he thither free from all Contracts of Mariage, ſo as the Scots, befor they ſhould receive Her, gave good Security to Him and the King of Norway, that they would not marry Her without their Conſents.

Thirdly, The Scotch Commiſſioners likewiſe promiſed, for themſelves and their Nation, that they would ſecure it before ſhe came thither, tha ſhe might come and remain in Her Kingdom, as Lady, Queen and Heireſs of Scotland, and that concerning the Premiſſes, they would give all rational Security that the Commiſſioners of Norway ſhould appoint.

Fourthly, That if any of the Guardians, or Officers of Scotland, were ſuſpected, they ſhould be removed, and new ones put in their Places by the Commiſſioners of Norway and Scotland, ~~and~~ ſuch as the King of England ſhould appoint for that purpoſe; and if the Scots and Norweigans could not agree in this matter, then the Engliſh Commiſſioners, were to determine what was to be done; and not only in this, but in all matters whatſoever that ſhould happen, relating to the State and Reformation of Scotland.

[1] Ibm. An Aſſembly of the Eſtates to be held at Rokesburgh.

For the Performance of all which Conditions, [1] it was further agreed, that there ſhould be a Great Aſſembly of the Engliſh and Scots, at or near Rokesburgh, at Midlent next following, where the Scots were to give Security, for the performance of theſe things, and for the Settlement of Scotland, before ſuch as the King of England ſhould ſend thither.

To this Agreement in Three parts, Two in French for the Engliſh and Scots, and a Third in Latin for the Commiſſioners of Norway, the reſpective Commiſſioners ſet to their Seals; and it bears Date at Salisbury, on Sunday, the Feaſt of St. Leonard, (i. e. November the Sixth) 1289.

* Rot. Pat. 17 Ed. 1. M. 3. 4. It is Printed in Dr. Brady's Append. N. 9.

* Then King Edward ſent His Letters, bearing Date the ſame day at Clarendon, near Salisbury, directed to the Prelates, Great Men, and the whole Community of Scotland, requiring them to obey and be aſſiſting to the Guardians thereof, who were appointed, in the Name of his Couſin Queen Margaret, to govern that Kingdom.

Theſe Tranſactions are but ſlightly mentioned by any of our Hiſtorians, yet are extant on the Patent-Rolls in the Tower, from whence Dr. Brady hath tranſcribed the Subſtance of them; and I have alſo my ſelf compared them with the ſaid Rolls. Thus far proceeded the Treaty this preſent Year, and in the next ſhall be expreſſed the final Concluſion of it.

Anno Dom. MCCXC.

[2] T.Wi. An.Wav. The King Marries Two of His Daughters in one Year.

This [2] Year King Edward beſtow'd Two of his Daughters in Mariage, within a ſhort time after each other; Joan the Elder, Sirnamed of Acres, or Acon in the Holy Land, where ſhe was born, was Married in the beginning of May to Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloceſter, the Greateſt Nobleman of England, next thoſe of the Royal Blood; and in the beginning of July following, Margaret his Third Daughter was Married to John, Son to the Duke of Brabant, who graced the Solemnity with his own Preſence: Fifteen days after Midſummer, the King held a Par liament at Weſtminſter, where was enacted that notable Statute of Weſtminſter the Third, which is alſo called (from the firſt Words of it) Quia Emptores Terrarum; becauſe it chiefly relates to Purchaſers of Lands held by Knights Service.

He holds a Parliament at Weſtminſter, and the Statute then paſſed.

liament

Anno Dom. MCCXC.

But of other Affairs we find little worth noting, [3] except the Baniſhment of the Jews, who upon a General Complaint that was made againſt them by the Great Men and People of the Kingdom, for their Uſury and Extortions, had this Year their Eſtates ſeized for the King's uſe; having no more left them, than what would bear their Expences beyond-Sea, being not to return upon pain of Death: And we ſtill find upon Record * Two Writs with theſe Titles, the former De Judæis Regno Angliæ Exeuntibus, i. e. of the Jews going out of England; the Other De Paſſagio & Conductu Judæorum Angliæ, For the Paſſage and Conduct of the Jews of England; but whither theſe Wretches went, unleſs it were into the Low-Countries or Germany, I know not, for they were already Baniſhed out of France: But [4] many of them taking Shipping in the River Thames in a certain Veſſel belonging to one of the Cinque-Ports, were by the Wicked Maſter and Seamen, not only Plundered of all they had left them, but were alſo cruelly thrown over-board and drowned, which when the King heard, He cauſed a great number of thoſe Wicked Mariners to be Hanged.

[3] M. W.

The Jews are Baniſhed the Kingdom for their Extortion.

* Clauſ 18. Ed. I. M. 16. Pat. 18. Ed. I. M. 14.

[4] Chron. de Dunſtable. T. Wi.

Many of them robbed of all they had, and flung overboard.

But to give you ſome farther Account of the Baniſhment of the Jews; the old Manuſcript Chronicle of Abingdon, in the Cambridge Library, relates the manner of it ſomewhat otherwiſe, viz. As that it was done by Act of Parliament, at the ſame time when the Statute of Weſtminſter the Third was ordained, but yet they were not ſo ſeverely handled as the reſt of our Hiſtorians repreſent them; for that the King only ſeized their immoveable Goods (by which I ſuppoſe the Author means Leaſes and Mortgages) as alſo their Bonds and Securities for Money owing them; but as for their Jewels and ready Caſh, the King gave them leave to diſpoſe of them as they pleaſed: And this ſeems moſt likely; for otherwiſe if they had carried no Money with them, more than what would ſerve to pay their immediate Paſſage, how could the Marriners abovementioned have had ſuch a Booty of thoſe Jews they pretended to tranſport?

* Some other Accounts from MS. Hiſtorians, concerning the Baniſhment of the Jews.

However thus much is certain, That ſome time before their Baniſhment, at a Parliament held in the beginning of this Year, not long after the Feaſt of St. Hillary, there was a Statute made, Entituled, de Judaiſmo, by which the Jews were abſolutely forbid the taking any manner of Intereſt or Uſury for Money of Chriſtians, which Statute Sir Edward Coke, having publiſhed in his Second Inſtitutes, makes this Comment upon it; 'That the King did not directly expel them the Kingdom, but only 'prohibited them to put Money to uſe; which produced a Petition from 'them to the King, That they might have leave to depart the Land; 'a Requeſt eaſily granted unto them: Some will ſay it is all one in 'effect, whether one be Starved or Stabbed, Death inevitably falling 'from both, as here the Jews were Famiſhed, on the matter, out of 'England; Uſury being their Meat and Drink, without which they 'were unable longer to ſubſiſt: However this took off much from the 'Odium of the Act, that they were not immediately, but only indirectly, 'and conſequentially Baniſhed the Realm, or rather permitted a free Departure on their own Petition for the ſame.

The paſſing of the Statute de Judaiſmo, and when it was made.

P. 506, 507. Sir Edward Coke's Opinion concerning the Baniſhment of the Jews examined.

Anno Dom. MCCXC.

I cannot deny but this Account of ſo Learned a Man, may ſeem very probable; and I ſhould be likewiſe of his Opinion, could I find any good Authority for it; all our Hiſtorians unanimouſly agreeing in this, That the Jews did not depart voluntarily, but were Baniſhed by publick Edict, as the Writs for their being conveyed beyond-Sea do alſo expreſly declare.

[5] T. W. He exacts a Fifteenth of all moveable Goods, contrary to Law.

But though the King now got a vaſt Sum of Money by this Confiſcation of the Jew's Eſtates, yet was He not ſatisfied with it; [5] for preſently after Michaelmas, through the ill Advice of ſome of his Councellors, He iſſued out a Proclamation or Edict, whereby He exacted from all the People of the Kingdom, as well Clergy as Laity, the Fifteenth part of their Moveable Goods, which was alſo gathered with greater Severity than was wont, and gave all Degrees of Men a mighty Diſtaſt againſt his Government, though He was afterwards fain to retract all theſe Proceedings, as you will find in due time.

The Articles of the Marriage between Prince Edward and the Queen of Scots, agreed to by the Eſtates of Scotland, and what they were.

* Pat. 88 Ed. 1. M. 8. 9.

It is fit we now continue the Account we gave you laſt Year of the Treaty of Mariage, between Prince Edward and the Young Queen of Scotland; for the ſpeedy performance of which, a Great Council of the Guardians, Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, Barons, and the whole Community of Scotland being Aſſembled at Edenburgh, King Edward * confirmed to them certain Articles, that had been agreed on by ſpecial Commiſſioners on both ſides.

Firſt, That they ſhould have, uſe and enjoy all their Laws, Liberties and Cuſtoms, they had before enjoyed.

Secondly, That if Edward and Margaret ſhould dye without Heirs, the Crown ſhould revert to the next Heir of the Kingdom. *

* And that freely and abſolutely, without any ſubjection, ſo that by Reaſon of this preſent Agreement nothing ſhall accrue to, or be diminiſhed from that King or his Heirs in that Kingdom.

Thirdly, That the Kingdom of Scotland ſhould remain ſeparated, divided and free in it ſelf, from the Kingdom of England, without any Subjection, by it's true Bounds and Limits, as it had been before time. This was granted; yet with a ſaving of the King's Right, which He had before this.

Fourthly, That the Chapters of Cathedral, Collegiate, or Conventual Churches, might not be compelled to go out of the Kingdom, to ask leave to Elect or Preſent their Elects, or to do Fealty to the King of Scotland; nor that any Tenants in Capite, or other Perſons, ſhould be forced out of the Kingdom, to do their Homage, Fealty and Services, or proſecute any Suits, or other things which were uſed to be done there; but that they might be done in their uſual Places, before the Chancellor of Scotland and Vice-Roy.

Fifthly, That the Parliaments, for what concern'd Scotland, ſhould be holden within that Kingdom.

* Ibm. The King gives Bond of 100000 l. Sterling, to perform the Articles, and deliver up the Kingdom.

* The King was to Swear to the Obſervation of all theſe Articles; and the Commiſſioners farther promiſed, That He ſhould oblige Himſelf and his Heirs in a Bond of a Hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling, to make Reſtitution of the Kingdom in the Caſe aforeſaid; and the Forfeiture, if incur'd, to be paid to the Church of Rome, in Aid of the Holy-Land; and that He ſhould conſent, the Pope might conſtrain Him and his Heirs, by Excommunicating them and interdicting the Kingdom, as well to the Reſtitution, as Payment of the Money, if He did not obſerve it.

It was laſtly agreed and promiſed by the Engliſh Commiſſioners, That King Edward, at His own Charges, ſhould procure the Pope to Confirm theſe Articles within a Year after the Mariage of the ſaid Edward and Margaret; and that within the ſame time the Bull was to be delivered to the Community of the Kingdom of Scotland.

Anno Dom. MCCXC.

The King engages to procure the Pope's Diſpenſation for Marriage.

Theſe Articles and Conceſſions were Sealed by the Commiſſioners, on Tueſday before the Feaſt of St. Margaret, (that is, the Eighteenth of July) A. D. 1290; and the Letters Patents of Confirmation of this Agreement were Sealed with the King's Seal at Northampton, the Eight and twentieth of Auguſt. * The witneſses whereunto were Anthony Biſhop of Durham, the Biſhop of Carlile, John Earl of Warren, Henry Earl of Lincoln and others, as appears by the Articles of this Agreement still preserved in ye Exchequer, & are published in R—'s Coll. p. 482 to 484.

On the ſame day the King appointed (by his ſpecial Commiſſion) the Biſhop of Durham to be Lieutenant to Queen Margaret and his Son Prince Edward in Scotland, for preſerving the Peace and Government thereof, with the Advice of the Guardians, Prelates and Great Men, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of that Kingdom: And the Guardians and Noblemen of Scotland, with the Governors and Captains of the Caſtles and Fortreſſes, engaged themſelves by an Inſtrument to deliver them up, when their Queen and her Husband ſhould come into that Kingdom. This whole Tranſaction at large is to be found in the Patent-Rolls of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth of Edward I. in the Tower of London.

Rot Parl. 18. Ed. I. M. 9. Printed in Dr. B's. Append N. 10.

The King appoints the Biſhop of Durham, Lieutenant or Governor of Scotland.

Rot. Pat. 18. Ed. I.

The Scotiſh Governors of Caſtles, &c. engage to deliver them up to the Queen, &c.

Ib. M. 34. Ib. M. 89.

All which I have here ſet down, to let you ſee, That the Scots were then very cautious, and did as much as lay in their Power, to hinder their Country from being any way ſubjected to England, as may more plainly appear by the Second Article of this intended Marriage. Yet all this Treaty came to nothing, by reaſon of the ſudden Death of the Young Queen, who deceaſed ſome time this Autumn in her Voyage between Norway and her own Kingdom (or as Knyghton relates in the Iſle of Orkeney) by whoſe immature Deceaſe, there aroſe a mighty Contention between the Competitors for this Crown, which could no ways be decided by the Eſtates of that Kingdom; and therefore they agreed to refer the Judgement of this Great Controverſy to King Edward: Who, when He heard this News, preſently reſolved to go into Scotland, to compoſe and determine the Differences which He perceived would ariſe concerning the Succeſſion, being accompanied with his Queen Eleanor, who fell Sick and Dyed of a Feaver at Herdeby in Lincoln-ſhire in her Journey; at which great loſs the King being hugely afflicted, returned preſently to London to be preſent at her Obſequies, which He order'd to be perform'd with Great Magnificence; to this end, her Corps was removed to Weſtminſter by eaſy Journeys, and ſome time after buried in the Church of that Abbey with an Auguſt Solemnity, the King Himſelf being preſent in Perſon: He Ordered a handſom Tomb, with her Image upon it in Braſs, to be made over her Grave, which is ſtill to be ſeen at the Feet of that of her Husband, who alſo order'd ſeveral Croſſes of Stone to be erected to her memory, with her Arms engraven upon them, at thoſe Places where her Body had reſted, and where a Solemn Dirge had been Sung for her Soul; ſeveral of which Croſſes remain at this day, as at Northampton, Waltham, &c. as there were alſo (in the memory of thoſe ſtill alive) in Cheapſide, and at the Place, from thence called to this day, Charing-Croſs, though theſe two laſt were taken down by order of the Long Parliament, A. D. 1643. as Relicts of Popiſh Superſtition. I thought fit to ſay ſo much of this Princeſs, not

The Young Queen of Scots dies in her return home; upon which aroſe a great Contention between ſeveral Competitors for the Kingdom.

Anno Dom. MCCXC.

not only becauſe all our Kings and Queens ſince that time have been deſcended from her, but alſo becauſe ſhe was an excellent Wife, and by her moſt obliging Carriage had highly won the Affection of all the Nation. But by reaſon of this Accident, all things in Scotland remain'd for ſome time in the ſame State as before.*

* And I must here further observe, that upon this Submission of Scotland, the Inhabitants of ye Isle C. W. H. of Man, who had been for many years subject to that Kingdom, submitted to & put themselves under the Protection of King Edward, as appears by an Instrument under the Seals of the Chief Persons of that Island, in which they set forth, that the said Isle had for want of due Protection & defence, was become almost ruined & desolate, and therefore they thereby surrender their Bodies and Estates to Punishment and forfeiture, if for the future they shall rebell against his Dominion This bears Date at the Abbey of Rufsyn in the said Isle A. D. 1290. and is entered in a Book of the Exchequer & is published in R—'s Coll: p. 492, upon which Submission the King took Possession of it; but soon restord it again to the King of Scots as you'll find hereafter.

As to Foreign Affairs this Year, upon the Receit of the evil News of the City of Acon or Ptolemais, being taken by the Saracens, with a Great Slaughter of the Chriſtians, King Edward had ſome thoughts of making another Voyage to the Holy-Land, as appears by Pope Nicholas his Letters to the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln to that purpoſe, and in the mean while had for this end granted Him the Tenth of all Eccleſiaſtical Benefices in England, Scotland and Ireland, for the ſpace of Three Years, and that at their utmoſt value, for the carrying on this Holy War, or intended Cruſado; and though the King never went, yet He ſtill received the Money. But we ſhall now give a further Account of the Scotiſh Affairs, from the Great Roll concerning King Edward's Superiority over that Kingdom.

Anno Dom. MCCXCI.

Rot. de Superioritate, Regis in Scotiam 18 Ed I. p nes Cuſtod Record in Turre London.

The King being now reſolved to determine this Great Controverſy about the Succeſſion of the Crown of Scotland, as Supreme or direct Lord thereof, called a Parliament at Norham, on the Confines of Scotland, conſiſting of the Prelates, Nobility, Knights and others of both Kingdoms, who being all Aſſembled on the Tenth of May, at the Place abovementioned, Roger Brabançon, the King's Juſtitiary, in the Preſence of a publick Notary, and many other Witneſſes of great Quality, told them the Reaſon of the King's coming, and of their being there ſummoned together; which was, That He taking notice in what Confuſion their Nation had been ſince the Death of Alexander their laſt King and his Children, for the Affection He had for that Kingdom and all the Inhabitants thereof, whoſe Protection was well known to belong to Him, He was reſolved, for the doing Right to all that Claim'd the Kingdom, and Preſervation of the Peace thereof, to ſhew them his Superiority and direct Dominion out of divers Chronicles and antient Monuments, preſerved in ſeveral Monaſteries in England; yet that He would Uſe this Right, and do Juſtice to all, without any Uſurpation or Diminution of their Liberties; and further to Demand their Aſſent to, and Recognition of his ſaid Superiority and direct Dominion.

Ibm.

*
Rea
noh mini
Hei

Ibm.

The Juſtitiary having thus ſpoken in the King's Name, and the Biſhops and other Prelates, Earls, Barons, Great Men and Nobles of the Community of the Kingdom of Scotland there preſent, having underſtood his Meaning, they required time to conſult with ſuch of their ſeveral Orders as were abſent, which the King granted until the next day only.

Ibm.

When, it being the Eleventh of May, they met again in the Pariſh Church of Norham; and then they earneſtly preſſed the King to give them longer time to conſult with ſuch as were abſent, and to Anſwer his Demands concerning their Recognition of his Superiority and direct Dominion over the Kingdom of Scotland, which He ſaid was his Right. Then upon further deliberation, He gave them time until the Second of June next coming; and on that day preciſely they were to Anſwer his Demands, and if they had any Evidences, Writings or Antiquities to produce, which might exclude Him from the Right and Exerciſe of his ſaid Superiority and direct Dominion, or overthrow his Reaſons and Arguments for it, they were then to exhibit, and ſhew them; proteſting He was ready to allow them what the Law permitted, and to do what was juſt.

* And that they might the better underſtand his Title, and make their Objections againſt it if they pleaſed, the Biſhop of Durham was appointed to ſet it forth to all the Nobles and Prelates their preſent: It is true, the Declaration he then made, and Arguments he uſed, were wholy Hiſtorical, and had been ſearched for and taken out of the Chronicles of Marianus Scotus, William of Malmesbury, Roger de Hoveden, Henry de Huntingdon, Ralph de Diceto, and the Chronicle of St. Albans (that is) Matt. Paris, that lay then in ſeveral of the Abbies of England, being to this Effect; That the Scots had been Conquered by ſeveral of our Saxon Kings; that many of their Kings had ſubmitted and Sworn Fealty to them, done Homage, and received the Crown and Kingdom from them, and that the Scots had alſo ſubmitted, and been governed by ſuch Kings, as the Engliſh-Saxon Kings had placed in that Kingdom; That after the Conqueſt, the very ſame things had been done, ſubmitted to and complied with, in the Reigns of William the Firſt, and Second, Henry the Firſt, Stephen, Henry the Second, Richard the Firſt, King John, and Henry the Third.

* Ibm. The Biſhop of Durham is appointed by the King to declare his Title to the Superiority over that Kingdom.

The Subſtance of this Declaration, and from whence extracted.

This is the Subſtance of that Declaration, which you may find more at large in the Hiſtories of Matt. Weſtminſter, and Tho. Walſingham; and which the King then cauſed to be ſet forth to ſatisfy the Clergy and Nobility of Scotland: But to ſpeak the truth, though the Matters of Fact which are therein cited are righly enough ſet down, yet there is no mention made of any Homage or Fealty done by the Scotiſh Kings, for the whole Kingdom of Scotland properly ſo called, which (as I have ſhewed in the former Volume) extended antiently no farther then the Bridge of Sterling, which in the time of King Edgar was the Boundary between the Scotiſh and the Northumbrian Kingdoms. But I ſhall defer ſaying more upon this Subject, having already ſaid ſo much of it in my Introduction; only this is obſervable, That whatever Authorities are found in our Hiſtorians againſt this Homage now claim'd, there was no Notice taken of them in this Declaration of King Edward; and there was very good reaſon for it, becauſe had they been mention'd, they might have ſerved to ruin the King's Pretences to any Superiority over that Kingdom.

But ſince we have nothing left us that is Authentick concerning any Anſwer or Defence the Scotiſh Clergy and Nobility then made to the King's Demands, we muſt only rely upon what Accounts, we can find in our own Records, * where it farther appears, that after the King's Title to the Dominion of Scotland, had been declared and publiſhed on the Second of June, the Biſhops and other Eccleſiaſtick Prelates, together with the Earls, Barons and other Nobles of the Community of the ſaid Kingdom of Scotland, met right over againſt Norham-Caſtle, (where King Edward then was) in a Green Plain on the other ſide of the River Tweed; as did alſo all the Princes and Noblemen that claimed the Kingdom: Then the Biſhop of Bath and Wells was ſent to demand in the King's Name what they had done ſince at their laſt Meeting, and * whether they would ſay, propound, or ſhew any thing that could or ought to exclude the King of England from the Right and Exerciſe of his Superiorіry and direct Dominion over the Kingdom of Scotland; and

* Rot. de Super. Regis Angliæ, &c. Another Meeting of the Nobility and Biſhops of Scotland, together with all the Competitors to the Crown.

* Ibm.

Anno Dom. MCCXCI.

Who are all required to produce what they had to object againſt the King's Superiority.

* Ibm.

that they ſhould produce and exhibit it if they, believed it expedient for them; proteſting in the Name of the King of England, that he (the Biſhop) would favourably hear them, and allow what was juſt, and report what they ſaid to Him and his Council, that upon deliberation they might do what Juſtice required; but ſince they (though often deſired) had anſwered nothing, neither propounded nor exhibited any thing againſt it, therefore the * Biſhop, recapitulating what had been ſaid and urged for the King's Title, and what had been done at theſe ſeveral Meetings, in all which they had offered nothing conſiderable againſt it, declared to them the Biſhops, Prelates, Earls, Barons and others of the Community of Scotland, That the King would make uſe of his Right of Superiority and direct Dominion in Scotland, in deciding the Controverſy between the ſeveral Competitors for that Kingdom.

* Ibm.

Robert Lord Bruce firſt owns the King's Superiority, &c.

Then the * Biſhop beginning with Robert de Bruce Lord of Anandale, being one of the Cheifeſt Competitors for the Kingdom of Scotland, he demanded of him, in the Preſence of all the Eſtates of the Kingdom laſt mentioned, Whether in claiming the ſaid Right, he would anſwer and receive Juſtice before the King of England, as Superior and Direct Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland? Who openly and expreſly, in the preſence of all there preſent, anſwered, That he did acknowledge the King of England Superior and direct Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland; and that he would, before and from Him, as his Superior and direct Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland, anſwer, and receive Juſtice.

* Ibm.

As did alſo all the reſt of the Competitors.

Then * all the other Competitors there preſent, (viz.) Florence Earl of Holland, the Lord John Haſtings, Patrick of Dunbar Earl of Marche, William Veſcy, William de Roſs, Robert de Pinkney, and Nicholas de Soules, had the ſame Queſtion put to them, and made the ſame Anſwer.

† Ibm.

† John Baliol was then abſent; but upon his Proctor's Requeſt the Meeting was continued until the next day, the Third of June, to be in the Pariſh Church of Norham; when he gave the ſame Anſwer to the Third Queſtion.

And they did not only make this Recognition publickly in this Great Aſſembly, but alſo ſigned the following Letters Patents thereof to the King in the French Tongue, which was uſed at that Time, and which I have here tranſlated for the Benefit of my Engliſh Reader.

To all thoſe who ſhall ſee or hear this preſent Letter.

Rot. de Superior. Scotiæ. N. It is alſo Printed in Matt. Weſtminſter. The Charter of Submiſſion from all the Competitors, Acknowledging the Kings Right of Superiority.

'WE Florence Earl of Holland, Robert de Bruce Lord of Anandale, John Baliol Lord of Galloway, John Haſtings Lord of Abergavenny, John Comyn Lord of Badenaugh, Patrick de Dunbar Earl of Marche, John Veſcy, for his Father Nicholas Soules, and William de Ros, Greeting in the Lord: Whereas we intend to perſue our Right to the Kingdom of Scoland, and to Declare, Challenge, and Aver the ſame before Him that hath moſt Power, Juriſdiction, and Reaſon to try it; and the Noble Prince Edward, by the Grace of God King of England, &c. having informed us by good and ſufficient Reaſons, that to Him belongs the Sovereign Seigneury of

‘ the Land; We therefore Promiſe, that We will hold firm and ſtable ‘ his * Act, and that he ſhall enjoy the Realm, to whom it ſhall be ‘ Adjudged before Him. In Witneſs whereof we have here ſet our Seals to this Writing, made and granted at Norham, the Tueſday after the Aſcenſion, in the Year of Grace, 1291.’×

Anno Dom. MCCXCI.

* Viz. His Judgment or Sentence concerning that Matter.

× The Reader may alſo obſerve that the Original Charter in French containing all their Submiſsion is still preſerv'd in the Cottonian Library, under all their Seals, wch are still entire except one that is by accident broken off.

But I ſhall here relate what our own [1] Manuſcript Hiſtorians farther add, concerning the manner of obtaining this Submiſſion from the Scotiſh Noblemen, viz. That upon a Recital or ſetting forth of the Authorities out of the Engliſh Chronicles, Charters, and Papal Bulls, there was a ſhort and peremptory Day given them to return their poſitive Anſwer, what they would do; and when they ſeem'd diſſatisfied, and not willing to comply with the King's Demands, He was ſo far incenſed, that He Swore by St. Edward, (the greateſt Oath He ever uſed) That He would looſe his Life in the Proſecution of his Juſt Rights; and indeed, He had all the Militia of England then ready prepar'd to have fallen upon, and compel them, if they had then denied what He demanded; ſo that it was no wonder, if not only the Scotiſh Nobility, but all the Competitors to the Crown, either for Hope or Fear, made the abovemention'd Recognition of King Edward's Right to the Superiority over all Scotland.

[1] Chron. Abing. C. W. H.

An Account from ſome MS. Hiſtorians concerning the Force that was then uſed to procure the Aſſent of the Scotiſh Nobility.

This done, the King and his Council treated with the Prelates, Noblemen, and Competitors for the Crown of Scotland, about the propereſt Method how to proceed in this Buſineſs, as alſo about the Settlement of the State of the Nation; whereupon it was Agreed by the unanimous Conſent of the Noblemen and Prelates of both Nations, That * John Baliol and John Comyn ſhould chuſe Forty, and Robert de Bruce ſhould chuſe other Forty fit Perſons, their Names to be delivered to the King within three Days after, (viz. on the 5th of June,) and that He ſhould add Twenty four, more or leſs, who ſhould Hear and Diſcuſs the Rights of the ſeveral pretending Parties, and make a faithful Report thereof to Him; and then that He ſhould give the Definitive Sentence, by which they ſhould be all concluded.

Ibidem. Eod. Rot. The King ſettles the Method of his Proceeding in this Affair, with the Scotiſh Biſhops, Noblemen, and all the Competitors.

* Note, Theſe three had the moſt Apparent Right to the Crown.

Theſe things were diſpatched on the 2d or 3d of June; But becauſe by the Letters Patents of Recognition, or Inſtrument above-mention'd, the King had not ſufficient Power to put his ſaid Sentence in Execution, for whomſoever the Kingdom ſhould be adjudged, unleſs He (the ſaid King) were in Actual Poſſeſſion thereof; * the Competitors therefore came before Him on the 14th of June, and very many of the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, Knights, and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, and then had Poſſeſſion given Him of the Kingdom and Caſtles of Scotland by all the Competitors, with the Conſent of the Community of the ſame Kingdom, Nemine Contradicente, according to a certain Inſtrument or Writing, which being ſomewhat long, I ſhall only give you the Subſtance of it.

* Ibidem. The Competitors, and the Biſhops and Nobility, Conſent, that the King ſhall have Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom, till the Right be determined.

* It is another Charter from Florence Earl of Holland, and all the reſt of the above-named Competitors, reciting, That whereas they had already granted with one Aſſent, That King Edward, as Superior Lord of Scotland, ſhould Judge of, and Determine their ſeveral Rights and Titles, &c. then proceeds thus:

* Ibidem. The Competitors Grant another Inſtrument, declaring their Aſſent to it.

Anno Dom. MCCXCI.

But becauſe the ſaid King of England cannot accompliſh his Judgment, or put his Judgment in full Execution, ſo as to have it take Effect, without the Poſſeſſion or Seiſin of the ſaid Country, or the Caſtles thereof: We Will, Grant, and Aſſent, That He, as Sovereign Lord, to perform the Things aforeſaid, ſhall have Seiſin of all the Lands and Caſtles in Scotland, until Right be done to the Demandants; upon Condition, That before He be put in Poſſeſſion, He ſhall give ſufficient Security to the Demandants, and to the Guardians and Community of the Kingdom of Scotland, to reſtore both It and the Caſtles, with all the Royalties, Dignities, Seigniories, Franchiſes, Cuſtoms, Rights, Laws, Uſages and Poſſeſſions, and all manner of Appurtenances, in the ſame State and Condition, as they were when He received them; Saving to the King of England the Homage of Him that ſhall be King; ſo as they may be reſtored within Two Months after the Day the Right ſhall be Determined and Affirmed; and that the Profits of the Nation which ſhall be received in the mean time, ſhall be kept in the Hands of the Chamberlain of Scotland, that now is, and One to be joyned with him by the King of England; ſo as the Charge of the Government, Caſtles and Officers of the Realm may be deducted. In Witneſs whereof We have here ſet our Seals to this Writing, made and granted at Norham, on Wedneſday after Aſcenſion, in the Year of Grace, 1291.

When the King had thus obtain'd theſe Charters of Recognition of all the Competitors for the Crown, He ſent Authentick Copies of them, under his Privy Seal, to all the Chief Monaſteries in England, with Orders, That they ſhould be Enter'd in the Chronicles and Leiger-Books of their reſpective Houſes; divers of which are ſtill Extant in the Cottonian Library, where they that doubt the truth of it may conſult them; and our Authors have been ſo Exact as to give us a Copy of the Writs, whereby the Abbots and Priors of thoſe Religious Houſes were enjoyned to perform it: It bears Date the 9th of July, in the 19th Year of his Reign, A. D. 1297. being about ſeven Years after the Grant of that Charter, and ſeems to have been done about the time when the Pope began to queſtion the King's Superiority over Scotland: And that none may queſtion the Truth of it, the very Original of the Charter of Recognition is ſtill preſerved, with the Seals of all the Competitors Appendant to it, in the ſame Library, that great Repoſitory of Rarities of this kind. So much I thought fit to ſay in Confirmation of this Noble Record, to which I ſhall now return.

Chron. Abing. C. W. H.

* Ibidem.

* On the 5th of June, the Names of the Eighty Commiſſioners, Elected to Examine, Hear, and Report the Rights of the Competitors, were delivered to the King; and on the 6th, they were ordered to appoint the Place and Day for their Examination, and hearing the Petitions of the ſeveral Demandants, and Diſcuſſing their Right; and Berwick upon Tweed was the Place appointed for it, which the King accepted; but they not agreeing on the Time, the King, as Superior and Direct Lord of the Kingdom, by the Unanimous Conſent of the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms there preſent, appointed the 2d of Auguſt as a peremptory Day for the Competitors to propound their Titles.

The Time for Hearing of the Claims of the Competitors is put off till the 2d of Auguſt.

† Ibidem.

The Caſtles of Scotland delivered to the King, with the Guardianſhip of the whole Kingdom.

† Then on the 11th of the ſame Month, the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſcow, John Comyn Lord of Badenaugh, and James Seneſchal or Steward of Scotland, then appointed Guardians of the Kingdom, and all the Caſtellans, or Conſtables of Caſtles, delivered up their Guardianſhips and Bayli-

Anno Dom. MCCXCI.

Bayliwicks to the King of England, as Superior Lord; and when He had received them, He committed the Guardianſhip of the Kingdom to the ſame Perſons, to Govern it under Him, and in his Name; and preſently the Biſhops and Noblemen of Scotland, by the King's Command, choſe Alan Biſhop of Cathnes their Chancellor, and preſented him to the King, who allowed Him, and adjoyned Walter of Agmundeſham, his Clerk, to him, as an Aſſociate; and on the next Day they were both Sworn.

* Ibidem. Upon which, the Prelates, Noblemen, and Commons of Scotland Swear Fealty to King Edward as Superior Lord thereof.

These things being thus diſpatched, the Guardians and Competitors to the Crown, and all and ſingular the Biſhops and other Prelates, Earls, Barons, great Men, and the Communities of Cities and Burghs, that were there preſent, and that were bound to do and ſwear Fealty, had notice to do it on the Morrow, to the King of England, as Superior and Direct Lord of Scotland, in the ſame Place where they were at that time Aſſembled, on the Green Plain beyond the River Tweed within the Bounds of Scotland, which was then done, and they Sworn accordingly; after which, the King cauſed his Peace to be publickly proclaimed.

* Ibidem. Thoſe that ſtaid at Home are Sworn by Commiſſioners for that purpoſe.

From this 13th of June, to the 3d or 4th of Auguſt, all the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, Noblemen, Free Tenants, and all others that were bound, to do and ſwear Fealty to the Crown of Scotland, (and who were not then preſent) were (to ſave Expences and Labour) Sworn by Commiſſioners in all Parts of the Kingdom, and a very great number of their Names ſtand Recorded on this Roll; but in every Place, where they had Sworn, the King's Peace or Protection was proclaimed. The Form for taking the Oaths and Fealties of Abſentees was made by the Agreement and expreſs Conſent of all the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and other Noblemen of Scotland there preſent.

* It is also very remarkable yt so soon as the King had obtained the Custody of the Kingdom of Scotland during ye vacancy of ye Throne, yt he immediately issued out a Declaration setting forth, that ye Kingdoms of England & Scotland by Reason of the Supreme Dominion, which he had obtained over Scotland, being now, blessed be God, in a manner conjoyn'd, he therefore commanded the Justices of his Bench yt all writs of his should be thenceforth returnable before them, according to the respective Dates, & Places in the said Kingdom of Scotland: and yt they should noways allow any Exceptions, if any should be made, against such Returns. This bears Date at Berwick 3d July & is entered on the Rolls Vid: R—s Coll: p. 533.

Rot: Claus: 19. Ed: I: m. 6. d.

[3] T. Wal. f. 57. The Death of the Queen Mother calls the King to London.

[3] While the King was thus employed in Deciding this Controverſie, his Mother Queen Eleanor died about Midſummer; whereupon He immediately return'd into England to ſee Her Interred, and the Funeral was Solemnized with all due Honour in the Church of the Nunnery of Ambresbury, where ſhe had been Profeſſed, which being over, He went back again toward Scotland.

* Rot. de ſuper. Regis, &c. ut ſupra. But upon his Return all the Competitors, with the Auditors, or Commiſſioners, appear before Him.

* It alſo appears from the above-mention'd Record, that the King was arrived at Berwick by the 3d of Auguſt, on which Day, (according to his Appointment) all the Competitors for the Crown appeared before Him and his Council, in a great Aſſembly of the Prelates and Noblemen of both Nations; and with them the Twenty four Engliſh Auditors, or Examiners of their Titles named by the King, and other Fourſcore, who were choſen by Robert de Bruce and John Baliol, (being Forty for each of them) with ſuch others as would Conſent to the Election made by them, to Diſcuſs their particular Rights, and make Report thereof to the King.

† Ibidem. The Names of the Twelve Competitors for the Scotiſh Crown.

† There appeared no leſs than Twelve Demandants, who all put in their Claims for the Crown of Scotland, all Entred on this Roll, who Petitioned to have the Kingdom delivered to them; beſides the King of Norway, who by his Proctor and Meſſengers demanded it likewiſe, as Heir to his Daughter Margaret late Deceaſed; the others were, Florence Earl of Holland, Patrick de Dunbar Earl of Marche, William de Veſey, William de Ros, Robert de Pinkny, Nicholas de Soules, Patrick Galightly, Roger de Mandeville, John Comyn, John de Haſtings, John de Baliol, and Robert de Bruce.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCI.

* Ibidem. The Claims of the ſeveral Competitors being reported to the King, he puts off the Deciſion of it till the Year following.

[4] Chro. Abing.

* Their Petitions, with the Reaſons of their reſpective Claims, having been preſented, and ſhewn to the ſaid Auditors, they reported them to the King before the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, in the preſence of all and every of the Demandants, and of the Publick Notary; and then the King Aſſigned them, by their own Conſent, the Monday next after the Feaſt of the Holy Trinity, [4] which would be on the 2d Day of June, in the Year 1292. for the further proſecuting of their reſpective Titles and Claims: And in the mean while, having Ordained Governors for the Royal Caſtles of Scotland, He return'd into England, where He ſpent the reſt of the Year; but what He did till his Return into Scotland, I do not find.

† Ibidem.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCII.

The King comes to Berwick, and there upon a ſtrict Examination of the ſeveral Titles of the Competitors, finds that the Lords Bruce and Baliol had the beſt Right.

† The King being come to Berwick upon Tweed on the Day laſt mention'd, and the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms there aſſembled, with the Auditors of Claims that had been Elected by them, thoſe appointed by the King to Diſcuſs and Hear the Rights of the Parties Claimant, after an attentive and patient Hearing of all their Pleas, came to the King, and related what had been done; who, with the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, ſtrictly Examined them; and for that He found there would be great Delay, and much Time ſpent, to the manifeſt Peril and Danger of the Kingdom, it was ordered by the expreſs Conſent of all Pretenders, and by the Aſſent of the Prelates and Noblemen aforeſaid, That the Rights and Titles of Robert de Bruce and John Baliol ſhould be firſt Examined and Diſcuſſed, and that afterwards all others might proſecute their Claims if they thought fit.

* Ibidem. The King cauſes the Eighty Commiſſioners to take an Oath to give him true Advice. They alledg'd great Difficulties in giving their Judgment; whereupon the Deciſion is again put off till the Meeting of the next Parliament in October.

It is further Recited in this * Record, That the King, tho' He might, as Superior Lord of Scotland, have judged this Cauſe without the Aſſiſtance or Advice of the ſaid Eighty Auditors; yet, that He might do it with more Security and Prudence, He cauſed them all to appear and take an Oath, That they would truly Adviſe Him how, and by what Laws and Cuſtoms, He ſhould proceed to Judgment in this Caſe: But theſe Eighty Perſons pretended mighty Difficulties, and deſired that the Twenty four Engliſh, whom the King had appointed, might be added to them; and theſe Twenty four pretended as great or greater Difficulties, and therefore durſt not undertake the Charge, or conſult upon the Buſineſs before them, without the Advice of the Prelates, Nobles, great and wiſe Men of England that were abſent: Wherefore by the unanimous Aſſent of all there preſent, the King Aſſigned the Morrow after the Feaſt of the Tranſlation of St. Edward the Confeſſor, (that is, the 14th of October) for their further Proceeding in this Matter, in his Parliament to be held in the ſame Place.

† Ibidem. The Nobility of both Kingdoms being met, the King ask'd them, By what Laws or Cuſtoms he is to give Judgment in this Caſe?

† At that Day, the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms appearing at Berwick, as alſo the ſaid Auditors, the King asked them, (as He had done before?) By what Laws and Cuſtoms, Judgment was to be given in the preſent Caſe? And if there were found no Laws or Cuſtoms to proceed by, how then it was to be given; and whether otherwiſe, concerning the Kingdom of Scotland, than concerning Earldoms, Baronies, and other individible or impartible Tenures?

* Ibidem. And appoints that the Claims of Baliol and Bruce be firſt Heard.

* The King having received their Anſwers, ordered all the ſaid Auditors to repair to the Church of the Fryars-Preachers in Berwick, and favourably to hear John de Baliol, and Robert de Bruce, from Day to Day, what they had to ſay or propound. Robert de Bruce began firſt, ſhewing the Reaſons and Arguments for his Claim; in which he concludes thus, Quod quidem Regnum Scotiæ cum Pertinentiis dictus Robertus de Bruce Clamat tenere libere & in libertate de Domino Edwardo Rege Angliæ & de Corona Angliæ Jure hæreditario in perpetuum: After whom, John Baliol ſet forth his, in a long Plea, and anſwered all that Robert de Bruce had ſaid: Then the Auditors having related to the King what had been urged on each ſide for their reſpective Titles, they both perſonally appeared before Him, who asked them, If they had any thing further to ſay? They anſwered, No: Whereupon the King openly and publickly, before the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, his whole Council and the Auditors, Demanded of them, What Advice they would give Him; which of the two, according to what they had ſhewn, and ſet forth, had the true Right of Succeſſion to the Kingdom of Scotland? And the Force of all their Arguments on both Parts was drawn into this ſingle Queſtion; which I ſhall thus Tranſlate into Engliſh, without troubling you with the Latin Original.

Anno Dom. MCCXCII.

Upon Hearing their ſeveral Claims, the King demands Advice, which of theſe two Competitors had the better Title?

* Whether the more Remote by one Degree in Succeſſion, coming from the Eldeſt Siſter, ought, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of thoſe Kingdoms, to Exclude the Nearer by a Degree coming from the Second Siſter? Or whether the Nearer by one Degree Deſcending from the Second Siſter, ought, by the Laws and Cuſtoms of thoſe Kingdoms, to Exclude the more Remote by a Degree coming from the Eldeſt Siſter.

* Ibidem. Both their Claims are reduced into one ſingle Queſtion.

To which they unanimouſly Anſwered, without a Negative, That the more Remote by one Degree, Lineally deſcending from the Eldeſt Siſter, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of both Kingdoms, is to be prefer'd to the Nearer by one Degree coming from the Second Siſter, in every Hereditary Succeſſion of that Nature.

Now that the Reader may more clearly underſtand this Queſtion and Anſwer, it will be neceſſary for me to leave the Record a while, and to ſet forth the Pedegree of both theſe Noble Perſons.

The Pedigree of each of theſe Competitors.

Henry Prince of Scotland, Son to King David the Firſt, who Died before his Father, left Three Sons; Malcolm, Sirnamed the Maiden, (ſo called becauſe of his great Chaſtity and Averſion to Mariage) William, Sirnamed the Lyon, from his great Courage; and David Earl of Huntington. King William had but one Son, called Alexander the Second, who was Father of Alexander the Third, his only Surviving Iſſue, who Married Margaret Daughter to King Henry the Third of England, and Siſter to Edward the Firſt: By her he had Two Sons, viz. Alexander and David, who Died without Iſſue; and one Daughter, named Margaret, Married (as you have heard) to Eric King of Norway, by whom ſhe had one only Daughter, named alſo Margaret, late Queen of Scotland, who Dying without Iſſue, (as was ſaid before) the whole Line of William the Lyon failing, the Right of the Crown remain'd in one of the Grandchildren of the ſaid David, Earl of Huntington; but to which of them it belonged was a Difficulty ſomewhat hard to be decided.

Anno Dom. MCCXCII.

For this Earl David had Three Sons, Henry, and Robert, who Died young, and John, Sirnamed the Scot, Earl of Cheſter, who alſo Died without Iſſue; and Three Daughters, viz. Margaret, the Eldeſt Married to Alan, Lord of Galloway, by whom ſhe had One only Daughter, Dergovilla, who was Married to John Baliol, and by whom ſhe had John Baliol, One of the Competitors for the Crown, as is above-mentioned.

The Title of the Lord Haſtings.

The Pretences of Bruce and Baliol appear difficult to be decided.

His Second Daughter was Iſabel, Married to Robert Bruce, by whom ſhe had Robert her Son: There was alſo Adama a Third Daughter, Married to Henry Lord Haſtings, from whence all the Earls of Huntington of that Name are Deſcended. Now by this Pedigree, it appears, That tho' Robert Bruce, Son to Iſabel, Second Daughter to Earl David, was by his Mother's ſide one Degree nearer to Earl David, on whom the Right of the Crown would have Devolved had he been ſtill alive; yet John Baliol was Grandchild to Margaret, the Eldeſt Daughter to David, which ſhews the Reaſon of this Queſtion, and the Anſwer that was given to it; upon this old controverted Point among the Feudiſts, Whether the next in Blood, (tho' of a Collateral Line, eſpecially if a Male) ſhould not Succeed, before one more remote in the Right Line? Some holding One way, ſome the Other; thoſe of France and England maintaining a Right by Repreſentation in the Iſſue, where the Parent in whom it would have been was Dead; and by this Title it was, that King Edward the Third afterwards Claimed the Crown of France, which I mention to let the Reader ſee, that according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of both England and Scotland at that time, Baliol had the better Title, notwithſtanding what Hector Boethius, and other Scotiſh Writers, have ſaid to the contrary; but to return to the Matter.

Yet that Baliol had the better Title.

* Rot. de Superioritate Regis Angliæ, &c. ut ſupra.

Upon the Anſwer above-mentioned, (as 'tis in the * Record) the King cauſed the Cauſe to be again carefully Re-examined before the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, and Aſſigned to Robert de Bruce and John de Baliol, the 6th Day of November, to hear their final Sentence; which was judicially pronounced by the King Himſelf, with the Advice of the Noblemen and Prelates of both Kingdoms, the Auditors aforeſaid, and others of the Council; That the ſaid Robert ſhould not Enjoy any part of the Kingdom of Scotland by his Petition; but as for that of John Baliol there ſhould be nothing done upon it, until the other Competitors were heard.

Judgment is given againſt Bruce's Title, but that of Baliol's is again put off.

Then the King Commanded John Baliol, and the other Demandants, with the Auditors, to go to the ſame Place for the diſpatch of their Petitions.

† Ibidem. The Lord Haſtings puts in for a Third Part of the Kingdom.

† As for the Claim of John Haſtings, Son to Henry Haſtings, I ſhall only barely mention it; for when he found that being the Grandſon of the Youngeſt Daughter of Earl David, he could not Claim as Sole Heir, he then put in for a Third Part of that Kingdom, and gave this Reaſon for it, becauſe all the Lands that were held of the Crown of England, were Partible, and that ſince Scotland was ſo held, it ought to be divided in like manner; which was certainly a great miſtake, for the Law was then otherwiſe in England, as to Lands and Honours held by Knight's Service, eſpecially in reſpect of Females; as appears from the Caſe of the Siſters of the ſaid John Scot, Earl of Cheſter, upon whoſe Deceaſe without Iſſue, the Earldom, with the County, Devolved to the Crown, and the Siſters above-mention'd had no part of it allow'd them.

As

Ann. Dom. MCCXCII.

As for Robert Bruce, he again appeared; and ſince he could not Enoy the whole, he likewiſe Claimed a Third Part of the Kingdom, to e held by Homage of the King of England, as Superior Lord of cotland: So that if our Records may be credited, (as I ſuppoſe they eſerve) rather than the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, he would have been wellontented with a Third Part of the Kingdom of Scotland upon thoſe Terms, which (as they ſay) he afterwards denied to accept of the vhole. But Judgment was not given againſt either of them upon this Point.

* For altho' both their Arguments and Reaſons had been ſufficiently nſwered in the Defence of John Baliol, before the Auditors, which were elated to the King; yet He, willing to deliberate with his Council, nd the Auditors, upon theſe Things, farther enquired of them, Whether the Kingdom of Scotland was Partible among Females? Who ll Anſwered, It was not: Upon which Anſwer, The King appointed Monday next after the Feaſt of St. Martin, as the peremptory Day for ll the Competitors to hear their Judgments in his Parliament at Berick; intending in the mean time further to Deliberate and Examine heſe Matters with knowing Men of both Kingdoms, beſides the Auditors, nd Others of his Council, that ſo He might be fully inform'd, what n Juſtice ought to be done.

* Ibidem. The King demands, Whether the Kingdom of Scotland be Partible among Females? And is anſwer'd in the Negative.

* On the 7th of November, 1292. which was the Monday after the eaſt aforeſaid, the Nobles and Prelates of both Kingdoms, the Auditors, ther Great Men, and a great Number of the People, being met in the Hall of the Caſtle of Berwick, with the Publick Notary who Signed he Acts of the Court, all the other Competitors Claiming the Kingdom, viz. Eric*, King of Norway; Florence, Earl of Holland; William de Veſcy; Patrick, Earl of March; William de Ros; Robert de Pinkeny; Niholas de Soules, and Patrick Galightly; tho' they had ſufficient Notice nd Summons to be there, yet did not appear, but had withdrawn hemſelves, becauſe (I ſuppoſe) they found they were Excluded by he better Titles of the two laſt above-mentioned Competitors.

* Ibidem. The other Competitors renew their Claims.

* Note, He had now put in his Claim as Heir to the late Queen, his Daughter, tho it was not allow'd.

* Whereupon it was then Adjudged, and Judicially pronounced by he King, with the Conſent of the Noblemen and Prelates of both Kingdoms, That all theſe laſt mention'd Competitors ſhould obtain nothing by their Petitions: And becauſe John Comyn, and Roger de Mandeville, did not proſecute their Petitions, they had the ſame Judgment.

* Ibidem. All of them are ſet aſide by the King.

* But as to the laſt Petition of Robert de Bruce, whereby he Claimed the Third Part of the Kingdom for his Share, as of a Partible Inheritance; becauſe it appeared by his firſt Petition before the King, that he demanded the whole Kingdom of Scotland, he therefore did by that Acknowledge and Grant, That the Kingdom was Impartible, and one entire Inheritance; which Recognition and Conceſſion, he could not then deny; and for that it had been Agreed and Adjudged by the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Nobles, Great Men, and the whole Council of both Kingdoms, That the Kingdom ought to be Poſſeſſed by One Heir alone, becauſe of it's own Nature it was Impartible, as other Kingdoms; for theſe Reaſons therefore it was Adjudged, and Judicially declared by the King, That he ſhould gain nothing by what was ſet forth in his Petition.

* Ibidem. The Lord Bruce alſo Claims a Third Part of the Kingdom, but is denied.

† The

Anno Dom. MCCXCII.

† Ibidem.
* Ibidem.
The Right of Baliol again Examin'd.

† The ſame Judgment had John Haſtings, and for the ſame Reaſons, That he neither ſhould not obtain any thing by his Petition.

* But as to the Petition of John Baliol, who demanded the Whole Kingdom as his Right, the King cauſed it again to be Examined, and that for ſeveral Days, by the Council of both Kingdoms; and after a full Diſcuſſion, it was Found, Adjudged, and Agreed, by all the Noblemen, Prelates, Auditors, and Wiſe Men, of both Nations, That the Kingdom of Scotland was Impartible, and ought to remain to One Heir; and becauſe the King was Judge of the Right of his Subjects, by the Laws and Cuſtoms of both the Kingdoms, which was Approved and Affirmed by all the Noblemen and Prelates of both Kingdoms, and by the ſame Laws and Cuſtoms, in the Caſe before them; it was Agreed and judicially Declared in Favour of John Baliol, That the more Remote by Deſcent in the Firſt Line, was to be preferred to a Nearer in the Second Line, in the Succeſſion of an Impartible Inheritance; and ſince none of the Competitors denied him to be Heir of the Firſt Line, therefore he was to be preferred before all Others, as next Heir to the Kingdom of Scotland by Hereditary Succeſſion: Whereupon, the King of England, as Superior and Direct Lord of Scotland, Adjudged, That the ſaid John Baliol ſhould Recover and have Seiſin of that Kingdom, with all it's Appurtenances, according to the Form of his Petition, upon Condition, That he ſhould Rightly and Juſtly Govern the People ſubject to him, that none might have Occaſion to Complain for want of Juſtice; nor the King as Superior Lord of that Kingdom, upon the Suit of the Parties, be hindred to interpoſe his Authority and Direction, a Right which the King of England, and his Heirs always reſerved in ſuch Caſes, when He would make uſe of it.

And Judgment is given in his Favour.

Whereupon the King adjudges, That he ſhould Enjoy the whole Kingdom of Scotland, reſerving to Himſelf his Right of Superiority, &c.

* Ibidem.
And he has a Writ of Seiſin and Poſſeſſion delivered to him accordingly.

† Ibidem.

And * accordingly, King Edward gave him his Writ of Seiſin, or Poſſeſſion, for the Kingdom of Scotland, directed to William and Robert Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſcow, John Comyn, James Seneſchal or Steward of Scotland, and Bryan Fitz-Alan, his Guardians of the Kingdom of Scotland, to deliver Him Seiſin thereof, with it's Appurtenancies, Saving the Right of Him (the King) and his Heirs; dated at Berwick the 19th of November, in the Twentieth Year of his Reign; which indeed was a Miſtake of the Clerk, for it ſhould have been the Twenty firſt, He beginning his Reign † November the 16th, 1272. With this there were alſo other Writs of the ſame Date, directed to the ſeveral Caſtellans, and Governours of Caſtles in Scotland, to give him Poſſeſſion of them. *

* And about ye ſame Time, King Edward by his Writ directed to Walter de Huntercomb Guardian or Governour of the Isle of Man for delivering the Poſseſsion of the ſame to King John in like manner as it was enjoy'd by ye late King Alexander his Predeceſsor whoſe right Heir he is, ſaving to the King his Superiority &c. this bears Date at New-Castle upon Tyne ye 4th of Jan: this Year, & is enter'd on ye Rolls of Scotland [Rot: Scot: 21. Ed: I. m. 5] vid: R—'s Coll: p. 602.

* Ibidem.
And he then Swore Fealty to King Edward as his Liege Lord.

Whereupon he is put into Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom.
* Rot. de ſup. Scotiæ, m. 33.

* The next day being the Twentieth of November, A. D. 1292. in the very beginning of the Twentieth Year of the Reign of King Edward, being then at Norham, Baliol Swore Fealty to Him, as his Leige and Superior Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland. In Teſtimony whereof, He made to King Edward his Letters Patents of the ſame Date: His Oath of Fealty, and theſe Letters Patents are to be found both in Latine and French in this Record, as you will find by and by. This being perform'd, the new King John went into Scotland, and there was put into the actual Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom at the Monaſtery of Scone, * where on St Andrew's day he was placed in the Royal Throne, according to the Cuſtom of Scotland. Duncan, Earl of Fife, ought to have placed him therein; but being under Age, John de St. Johnſtown was deputed placed by King Edward, to perform that Ceremony in the Earl's ſtead; and He was alſo at the ſame time Crown'd King.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

Then on St. Stephen's day (being the Twenty Sixth of December, and the Twenty Firſt of King Edward's Reign) the King of Scots did Homage to Him at New-Caſtle, after this Form in French, but I will give it you in Engliſh, * My Lord Edward King of England, Superior Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland, I John King of Scotland, become Your Leige Man (or Vaſſal) for the whole Kingdom of Scotland, with it's Appurtenances; which Kingdom I claim and hold, and ought of Right to hold for Me, and my Heirs, Kings of Scotland, Hereditarily of You and Your Heirs, Kings of England; and ſhall bear Faith to You and Your Heirs, Kings of England, of Life and Limb, and Terene Honor, againſt all Men that may Live and Dye. And of this Homage, He made his Letters Patents of the ſame Date. This was Witneſſed by Sixteen Biſhops, the Judges, and the Greateſt Men of England, and Twenty of the ſame Quality of Scotland, who at his Requeſt put to their Seals. *

* Rot. eod.

King Baliol does Homage to King Edward at New-Caſtle, with the Form of it.

* Then King Edward by his Letters patents declar'd, yt it was not his Intention to demand any thing from any future King of Scotland after ye Death of ye present King John; but only Homage & Fealty & what belongs thereunto, & yt ye Right Heirs may enjoy it without any Contradiction from him or his Heirs

All which Tranſactions ſtill remaining upon Record in the Tower of London, may ſerve as a ſufficient Juſtification of the Sincerity of King Edward's Proceedings in this Great Affair, and that all things were tranſacted in the face of the World, and by the common Conſent of the Major part of the Auditors, or Commiſſioners that were appointed both by Bruce and Baliol to enquire into each of their Titles; and King Edward, having given Sentence according to the Major part of their Suffragans, it was alſo accepted of, and confirmed by the common Conſent of the Clergy, Nobility and Commonalty of Scotland: And therefore * Hector Boethius, and thoſe other Hiſtorians, are by no means to be credited, who relate, That the King uſed Violence to the ſaid Commiſſioners, to obtain their Votes; and further proffered Robert Bruce the Kingdom, upon Condition, he would own his Superiority over Scotland, and do Him Homage for it; whereas it plainly appears by the abovementioned Inſtrument, that was Sealed by all the Competitors that he owned King Edward's Seigneury, or Supreme Dominion over the Kingdom of Scotland, before ever he entred upon the Deciſion of that Controverſy; and therefore if John Baliol, did now do Him Homage for that Kingdom, it was no more then a Conſequence of that Right, which all the Competitors had already acknowledged, and which Bruce himſelf had been obliged to have performed, in Caſe the King had thought fit to have given Judgment in his Favour.

A breif Juſtification of the King's Proceedings in this Affair.

* Lib. 13. Buchan. Lib. 8. Leſlæ. Lib. 6.

With a Confutation of the Scotiſh Hiſtorians falſe Relations of it.

Not that I will Juſtify all that the King did in the beginning of this Affair, in ſo ſtrictly inſiſting upon his Supreme Dominion over all Scotland, which the Eſtates of that Kingdom, and the Competitors for the Crown, either could not or durſt not then contradict. But ſince I have ſaid enough concerning this Subject in my Introduction, I forbear any further mention of it here, and therefore ſhall proceed in our Hiſtory.

But this good Underſtanding between King Edward and his new Feudataries, the King and Nobility of Scotland, did not laſt long; for within Four days after the Homage done in a manner as you have heard; * upon a Complaint made to King Edward, by Roger Bartholomew, Burgeſs of Berwick, againſt ſome of his Officers or Judges, by Him deputed puted into Scotland: He preſently appointed his Juſtices there preſent, Auditors of the ſaid Complaint, (whereof Roger Brabazon, Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, was One) ſtrictly Commanding them, That they ſhould do quick Juſtice, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of his Kingdom; before whom and others of the King's Council, there was a Petition then Exhibited on behalf of the King of Scotland, by his Advice and Direction, by William Biſhop of St. Andrews, John Earl of Boghan, Patrick de Graham, Thomas Randolph, and other Great Men of that Nation, ſetting forth, That whereas the King of England and Superior Lord of Scotland, had lately * promiſed to the Noblemen and Prelates of that Kingdom, That He would obſerve the Laws and Cuſtoms thereof, and that Pleas of things done there might not be drawn out of it: They therefore beſeeched the King of England and his Council there preſent, in the Name of the King of Scotland, That He would pleaſe to obſerve his Promiſe, and command his Officers firmly to do the ſame.

* Ibm.

The King receives a Complaint from a Burgeſs of Berwick, who thereupon Orders Commiſſioners to hear it.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

Which is Petitioned againſt, by divers Noblemen, on behalf of the King of Scots.

* (Viz.) In the 8th Year of his Reign, in the Treaty of Mariage between his Son Edward and the Young Queen of Scotland, the 4th Article.

† Ibm.

The King's Chief Juſtice refuſes this Petition, and his Reaſons for it.

Whereupon † Roger Brabazon, the Chief Juſtice, anſwered this Petition as followeth: That it ſeemed unneceſſary and not to the purpoſe, for that it was manifeſt, and ought to be ſo, to all the Noblemen and Prelates of the Kingdom, That the King had performed all his Promiſes, and not acted contrary to any of them; and as to the Complaints concerning his Judges and Officers, lately deputed by Him, as Superior and Direct Lord of that Kingdom, and who did then repreſent his Perſon, the Cogniſance of all Complaints concerning them, belonged only to Him and no Other, and He had eſpecially reſerved it to Himſelf; as alſo, becauſe in Judgments of the Superior Lord, or of thoſe that repreſented his Perſon, no Subjects could pretend to them; and further ſaid, That if the King of England had made any ſuch Temporary Promiſes, when there was no King in Scotland, He had performed them, and that by ſuch Promiſes, He would not now be reſtrained or bound.

* Ibm.

The King makes Proteſtation, that He would not be bound by any Temporary Promiſes; and inſiſts on his Right of hearing all Complaints, as Superior Lord of that Kingdom.

* And the King of England made Proteſtation before all the Noblemen and Prelates of both Kingdoms then preſent, That notwithſtanding any ſuch Temporary Promiſes and Conceſſions, He did not take Himſelf to be bound thereby, His Proteſtations otherwiſe publickly made, remaining in Force; and that He intended, and would admit and hear all Complaints whatſoever, and all other Buſineſs touching the Kingdom of Scotland and it's Inhabitants, by reaſon of his Superiority and Direct Dominion, which He had, and of Right ought to have, in that Kingdom, as his Progenitors in their times had, if they Lawfully, and for Juſt Cauſes came before Him; and upon thoſe Complaints every where, and at all times, if He pleaſed, to do them Juſtice; and to uſe and exerciſe his Superiority and Direct Dominion, and to call the King of Scotland Himſelf, if it were neceſſary, and the Quality of the Cauſe required it, to appear before Him in His Kingdom of England.

From whence we may obſerve, that the King now openly declared, That He would not be ſtrictly tyed to the Conceſſions He had formerly made to the States of Scotland, farther than He Himſelf thought fit; and alſo that He would Advance his Real or Pretended Right to the Supreme Dominion of Scotland, to a higher Pitch than any of his Predeceſſors had indeed ever yet claimed or exerciſed; which produced a long and bloody War, as you will find anon. But to proceed to the reſt of the Relation in the ſame Record.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

* Ibm.

John King of Scotland, acquits King Edward of all his Promiſes, &c.

* i. e. The Articles of Mariage above-mentioned.

* Upon this Reſolution of King Edward, and the Anſwer of the Juſtices to the Petition, it is there recited, That John King of Scotland acquitted Him of all Promiſes, Bargains, Agreements, and Obligations He had made to the Guardians and others of the Kingdom, while by Reaſon of the Superiority of his Dominion, He held the Kingdom of Scotland in his Hands, and eſpecially the * Grant and Inſtrument made at Northampton the Twenty eighth day of Auguſt, in the Eighteenth Year of his Reign; in which the Promiſes and Grants ſet forth in the Petition were contained, with a Confeſſion, that they had been all perform'd, when He had adjudged and fully delivered the Kingdom to Him; which Releaſe or Acquittance was Sealed with the King of Scotland's own Seal, and confirmed with the Seals of the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and other Noblemen of his Kingdom, and is Dated the Second of January, 1293. being the Twenty firſt Year of King Edward's Reign, and the Firſt of John King of Scotland; but whether the Scots did this freely, or becauſe they durſt not do otherwiſe, is very much to be doubted.

* Rot. de Sup. Scotiæ, p. 154, 155.

The King's receiving the Appeal of Macduff, Earl of Fife, exaſperates the King of Scots, againſt King Edward.

[4] Ryley Placita Parl. f. 154, 155.

The King of Scots is again Summoned to appear before the King, with the Subſtance of Macduff's Complaint. Ibm. f. 157.

But that which exaſperated the King of Scots to that Degree as He never ſorgave it, was, that within a ſhort time after this Proteſtation and Releaſe, a troubleſome Affair began in Scotland, which being the Original of that unhappy War that not long after enſued, I ſhall therefore give you the whole Proceſs of this Cauſe, * from the above-cited Record, as alſo from * Ryley's Placita Parliamentaria; and Pryn's Third Volume of his Hiſtory of Papal Uſurpations: Macdulff, Earl of Fife, not long after brought a Complaint or Appeal for certain Lands, againſt John King of Scotland, before King Edward, as Supreme Lord of that Kingdom; who thereupon without any delay directed a certain Writ or Letter Miſſive to be delivered by the Sheriff of Northumberland, Summoning him to appear before the King on the Morrow after Holy Trinity, [4] wherever He ſhould be in England, to Anſwer what Macdulff had to ſay againſt Him: But the ſaid King not then appearing, King Edward directed another Writ to the Sheriff, to Summon Him to appear before Him in his Parliament at Weſtminſter, Fifteen days after Michaelmas, to anſwer as before. The Earl of Fife's Complaint was, That when King Edward was laſt at Berwick, He had Commanded William, Biſhop of St. Andrews, and his Fellow Guardians of the Kingdom of Scotland, that they ſhould do Right to Macdulff, concerning his Lands and Tenements of Rerys and Crey, of which he had been Diſſeiſed by the ſaid Biſhop as Guardian of Fife, of which according to the Precept he had recovered Seiſin by the Judgment of the other Guardians: After which, John King of Scotland Diſſeiſed him again of the ſame Lands and Tenements; and that he might not farther proſecute his Right, impriſoned him, and cauſed an unjuſt Judgment to be given againſt him, in contempt of the King of England, Superior Lord of Scotland, and to his own Great Damage.

[5] Ibm. f. 158.

The King of Scots appears before the King in Parliament.

[1] Ibm. Fol. 154, 155.

Upon which Summons, the King [5] of Scots appeared before the King and his Council in his Parliament, after Michaelmas, and denied all Contempt of the Lord the King, and ſaid, He had no Day to Anſwer the ſaid Macdulff; who replied, He had that very Day appointed him to Anſwer, [1] by the King's Writ delivered to him by the Sheriff of Northumberland at Strivelin, on the Morrow after St. Peter ad vincula, (that is, the 2d of Auguſt) which ſufficiently appeared by the Return of the Sheriff; and the King of Scots being asked, Whether he had the Writ delivered to him by the Sheriff? confeſſed it; and being then urged to Anſwer; * he ſaid, He was King of Scotland, and that he durſt not Anſwer to Macdulff's Complaint, or any thing that concern'd his Kingdom, without the Advice of his Subjects. Then Macdulff demanded Judgment againſt him, as Pleading nothing conſiderable: Upon which, † He was told by the King, That he was his Liege-Man, and had done Him Homage and Fealty for the Kingdom of Scotland, and was Ordered to come thither to Anſwer, or ſay, Why he would not, or ought not to Anſwer before Him; but he ſaid as before, That He could not, nor dare Anſwer to any thing that concern'd his Kingdom, without conſulting his People: Whereupon he was told, He might require another Day; he Anſwered, He would require none. It was then Agreed, That the Principal Plea belonged to the King, and that he made no Defence againſt Macdulff; * and becauſe he would not require another Day, nor ſhew Cauſe why he ought not to Anſwer, it was adjudged a Contempt and Diſobedience in him, in Eluſion of the King's Juriſdiction and Superiority; and that Three of his principal Caſtles of Scotland, ſhould be Seized into the King's Hands, and ſo remain till he had given Satisfaction for his Contempt and Diſobedience.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

* Ibidem. f. 158. But refuſes to Anſwer the Complaint of Macdulff, without the Advice of his Subjects.

† Ibid. f. 159.

* Ibid. His denying to Anſwer is adjudged a Contempt.

But before the Pronounciation of the Sentence, he came before the King and his Council, and made Supplication to the King with his own Mouth, and delivered it unto Him with his own Hand in Writing, to this effect.

Yet upon his Supplication he has longer time given him till the next Parliament to put in his Anſwer.

SIR,

I Am Your Liege-Man for the Realm of Scotland, and pray You, as to what I am come hither, and for which concerns the People of my Kingdom, as well as my Self, that You would forbear me, while I ſpeak with them, that I may not be Surprized for want of Advice; for that thoſe that are with me, will not, nor ought, to Adviſe me without Others of the Realm; and when I have Advice from them, I will Anſwer at Your Firſt Parliament after Eaſter, and will behave my Self towards You as I ought to do.

The King Adviſing hereupon, at the Inſtance of the Great Men of his Council, and with the Conſent of Macdulff himſelf, granted his Petition, and gave him a longer Day until his next Parliament after Eaſter, that ſhould be holden on the Morrow of the Holy Trinity. This is all that can be found in Ryley's Pleas of Parliament concerning this Caſe: And we ſhall defer giving you a further Account of this Affair until we come to the enſuing Year.

[2] In Bib. Cot. Claudius D. 6. The King of Scots withdrew himſelf from this Parliament without the King's leave, who thereupon orders his Eſtate in England to be Seized.

For a Supply and Illuſtration to this Record, I ſhall here add only what I find in a Manuſcript [2] Chronicle of this time written, by a Monk of St. Alban's, who gives a large and exact Relation of all theſe Proceedings with the King of Scots, (being much the ſame with thoſe upon Record in the Tower.) And this Author farther ſays, That juſt before that King came to this Parliament at London, the Scotiſh Nobility choſe Twelve Peers to Govern that Kingdom in his Abſence; and that not long after his Appearance at the ſaid Parliament, he withdrew himſelf from thence, without taking any leave of the King; which ſo incenſed him, that He cauſed all King Baliol's Eſtate in England to be Seized into his Hands. * vid: above

Having

* But I must here further observe, yt this Appeal of Mac:Duff's was not ye only one yt was brought against ye King of Scots about yt Time, for him to appear and answer before King Edward in his Parliament for neglect of Justice: for there is still on the Scottish Roll [Rot: Scot. 21. Ed. I. M. 4.] in the Tower a Writ of Summons from King Edward, to John King of Scotland, granted on a Complaint made by John Mason a Merchant of Gascoigne for a Debt of 2180: 17l. 8d. Sterl: due by Alexander late King of Scotland for Corn & Wine, which he had taken up of the said Merchant, and had made over the Customs of Berwick for the Payment thereof, and which being deny'd to be pay'd him by the present King John; he appeal'd to King Edward & had thereupon a Writ of Summons for the said King to appear at Westminster on the Morrow after our Lord's Ascension next ensuing to answer the said Mason concerning the Premisses &c. This bears Date at Kirkby 8th of March this year vid: R—'s Coll: p. 605. 606. and there is also to be found entered on the same Roll another Summons of ye like Nature on the behalf of Austrica Cousin & Heir to Magnus late King of Norway, upon a Claim she had made to King John of her Hereditary Right to ye Island of Man, which she was ready to prove & make out; but the said King having deny'd to doe her Justice, she had therefore appeal'd to King Edward as Superiour Lord of Scotland, since he was oblig'd to do Justice to all that requir'd it, in Pursuance whereof he summon'd yt King to appear before him 15 Days after Michaelmas, wheresoever he should be in England to answer the said Austrica, concerning the Premisses, & to do and receive what should appear just thereupon; & on which Day the King had also appointed ye sd Austrica to appear before him to receive what Justice should require in ye Premisses. This bears Date at Westminster June 15th vid: R—'s Coll: p. 608.

But since ye former of those Appeals fell of it self by reason yt Mason the Plaintiff did not pros & yt I do not find any Proceedings in Great Councils or Parliaments concerning this latter, I suppose Appeal of Mac Duff's to have been ye only one, yt was prosecuted with any vigour, and which unpro & severe Proceedings made King John repent of his former Submission to ye King of England as supreme Lord, & provok'd him to take those violent Courses as you will hereafter find he d

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

Chron. ad hunc An.

Having now done with the Scotiſh Affairs for a time, I ſhall return o thoſe of England; and for this purpoſe, give me leave to look back o the beginning of this Year, when (as Thomas Wykes relates) the King returning to London from his Scotiſh Journey, about a Month after Eaſter, came to his Parliament, which He found already Aſſembled, onſiſting of the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and a great number of Others f his Kingdom: By which laſt Expreſſion, I here underſtand the Repreentatives of the Commons, which would more plainly appear, were not he Writs of Summons to this Parliament taken off from the Clauſe Rolls; but I take this to have been the ſame Parliament as that laſt nention'd, and in which our Author tells us, The King conſulted with hem concerning the Peace of his Kingdom, and (as Hemingford alſo ells us) how to Manage the War with France, that a little before bean to break out.

Chron. MS. Walter Hemingford ad hunc An.

A Relation of the Cauſes of the War with France.

It is time we now relate the Original and Progreſs of this War, hich broke out this Spring upon a very ſlight Occaſion, and Thomas alſingham and other Writers give to this purpoſe: That a certain orman Mariner, quarrelling with an Engliſhman, who ſhould firſt take Vater at a Spring on the Coaſt of Normandy, the Norman being killed n the Fray, the reſt of the French Mariners follow'd the Engliſhman to kill im, who being defended by his Comrades, repulſed the Normans; and they hereupon made their Complaints to Philip King of France, who comanded them that they ſhould revenge the Death of their Companion pon whatſoever Engliſhmen they met with: From which raſh Comnand, there began firſt a deſperate Conflict between the Mariners of oth Nations; which afterwards ended in a War between the Kings of rance and England: For tho' our Writers differ in ſome Circumſtances n theſe Tranſactions, yet they agree in the Main, That not long after, ertain Norman Veſſels meeting with Six Engliſh, ſet upon them, and not nly took two of them, but Hanged the Men (together with ſome Dogs) pon the Main-Yard; at which barbarous Action the Inhabitants of he Cinque-Ports being grievouſly Provoked, and reſolving to be Reenged, ſailed out in purſuit of the French, whom not finding in he open Sea, they met with in the Haven of Swyne, in Flanders, and here Aſſaulting them, ſunk Six Veſſels, and carried away as many nore, with a great Slaughter of the French; after which followed ſeeral Petty Sea-Fights, with much Effuſion of Blood, till at laſt the ngliſh Ships routed a great French Fleet, and took about Two hundred nd forty Veſſels, all laden with Wine and other Merchandizes. But ome [3] of our Hiſtorians relate this Matter more particularly, viz. hat the Merchants of England having ſuffer'd many Loſſes and Injuies by the French, made their Complaints to the King, deſiring ſome Redreſs; who thereupon diſpatched Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, his Ambaſſador to the King of France; propoſing to Him, That ſince ſome Differences were riſen between them, they ſhould leave it to their reſpective Councils to conſider and agree upon ſome Expedient to Renedy them; but whilſt the Earl was expecting his Anſwer, it hapened that a great Fleet of Norman Veſſels being bound for Gaſcoigne o fetch Wines, fell upon, took and deſtroyed whatſoever Engliſh Veſels they met, together with their Men; Whereupon the Inhabitants f the Cinque-Ports ſetting out a great Fleet of Sixty Sail, conſiſting of he Ships of thoſe Ports and other Places, they ſail'd to meet the French in Chron. Abing. Chron. W. H.

Certain Norman Veſſels take ſix Engliſh, and hang the Men, for which the Seamen of the Cinque Ports take a ſevere Revenge.

[3] T. W.

The King ſends the Earl of Lincoln into France, but without any Effect.

A Fleet from the Cinque Ports ſet upon and deſtroy that of France.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

in their return, and finding them laden with Wines in the Port of St. Matthew in Britany, they ſet upon, took and deſtroyed the whole Fleet, together with above Fifteen Hundred Men, few eſcaping, but what got off in Cock-Boats. This done, The Engliſh return'd home with their Booty a little before Whitſontide. Matt. Weſtminſter relates this as only done by the King's Permiſſion, and not Command; and therefore that He would not meddle with any of the Booty.

The King of France is highly incenſed at it, and ſends to demand Reſtitution.

King Edward makes very fair Propoſals for an Accommodation, but they are refuſed by the French King.

This Victory, as it gave great Satisfaction to the Engliſh, ſo it as highly Provoked the French King and his Council, who preſently thereupon diſpatched Ambaſſadors to the King of England, demanding, Immediate Reſtitution of all the French Ships and Goods, if He intended to hold any thing in Gaſcoigne; wherefore the King taking Advice of his Council, ſent Richard Fox Biſhop of London, and ſeveral diſcreet Perſons to the King of France, with an Anſwer to this Effect: 'That ſince the King held his * Court, or Great Council, Subject to none whomſoever; if therefore any Perſons found themſelves Injured or Aggrieved by his Subjects, they might repair thither, and having ſet forth their Injuries, the King would thereupon order them a ſpeedy Relief; And that they might the more ſafely do ſo, the King would grant Letters of Safe-Conduct to all ſuch Complainants: But if this did not pleaſe the French King, then certain Arbitrators or Commiſſioners appointed by each Prince, ſhould conſider the Damages done and ſuffered by both Nations, and then Ordain what Satisfaction they ſhould make to each other; And the King of England offer'd to Bind Himſelf in an Obligation to ſtand to their Award, provided the King of France would do ſo likewiſe: But if any thing ſhould Occur of ſo great difficulty, that it could not be decided by theſe Arbitrators, then it ſhou'd be left to the Determination of both Kings; And in ſuch caſe, the King of England having firſt the French King's Safe-Conduct, would attend Him at any Maritime Town the King of France ſhould appoint; and there by mutual Conſent put an end to all Differences: And if the King of France ſhould not like this, That they ſhould then Agree, to refer it to the Pope, whoſe Intereſt it was to maintain Peace between the two Crowns: And ſince the Papal See was then Vacant, (for Pope Nicholas the Fourth had deceaſed the laſt Year) That it ſhould be then referred to ſome or all of the Cardinals, and after they had determined this Controverſie, the former Peace and good Correſpondence ſhould be renewed between the two Kings, and their Subjects.

* Curia ſua.

[5] T. W.
[1] T. W.
The King of France refuſes King Edward's Propoſal.
[2] M. W. T. W.
And ſends a Herald to Agen to Summon him to Paris, to anſwer for what he had done.

But the King of France refuſed all theſe reaſonable Propoſitions, [5] neither would He ſo much as Vouchſafe to return any Anſwer to King Edward's Ambaſſadors; but [1] being tranſported with Paſſion, preſently Summoned a Parliament, or Aſſembly of the Eſtates, wherein it was agreed, That no Engliſh Commodities whatſoever ſhould be brought into France, nor any French ones tranſported into England; by which means all Things of the Growth of that Kingdom became extreamly Scarce and Dear in this, which proved very detrimental to the Trade of both Nations. Nor was the King of France contented to ſtop there, [2] but He ſent certain Heralds to the City of Agen, belonging to the Dutchy of Acquitain, with Letters to Summon the King of England to appear at Paris at a certain Day prefixed, there to Anſwer the Injuries and Rebellions which He had committed: And King Edward not appearing pearing at the time appointed, the French King ſitting upon his Throne, did himſelf in Perſon give Sentence againſt King Edward, as Contumacious, and Adjudged all his Territories in France to be Seized, as Forfeited to the Crown; And for the Execution of this Decree He ſent Raowlle de Neſle his Conſtable into thoſe Parts, to reduce them to his Maſter's Obedience; but he found no great Succeſs at firſt; for King Edward had a little before ſent over John de St. John, a diſcreet, valiant, and experienced Commander, who ſo well Victualled and Gariſoned the Towns and Caſtles in Guienne, that they were able to reſiſt the Conſtable's Aſſaults. But King Edward ſtill endeavoured to pacifie the King of France by all means poſſible, and to that end, by his Letters, gave his Brother Earl Edmund, (who was then in France) full Power to make Peace with Him, upon ſuch Conditions as might prove ſatisfactory to the French King, and not be diſhonourable to Himſelf.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII

And ſends his Conſtable into Guienne to reduce that Province, but is prevented.

Yet the King ſtill deſires Peace by his Brother Earl Edmund.

But the Earl, after many Treaties held in vain about this Affair, was at laſt fain to return towards England without making any Agreement between theſe two Princes.

Who is fain to return towards England.

This is the Account which Nicholas Trivet, who lived and wrote near theſe times, gives us concerning the firſt Occaſion of this War, and from whom Thomas Walſingham has borrowed all that is conſiderable, word for word; and this ſeems highly probable, ſince it was not for King Edvard's Intereſt at that time to begin a War with France, whilſt the Scotch Affairs were yet very unſettled.

Therefore it is moſt likely, That King Philip, envying our Edward's Grandeur, in having thus obliged the King and Kingdom of Scotland to acknowledge his Superiority over them, was thereupon reſolved to take the firſt opportunity of humbling King Edward, by Seizing his Dominions in France, thereby to render Himſelf ſafe from that exceſs of Power, which by the nearer Dependence of Scotland upon the Crown of England muſt now neceſſarily accrue to Him.

But ſince William de Nangis, in his Chronicle of France, and Paulus Æmilius, in his Hiſtory of the French Kings, have given us far different Accounts of the Original and Progreſs of this War, I ſhall (that I may not be thought Partial) here alſo ſet down, what they have related concerning it: The former of whom places the beginning of this War under the Year before, and ſays, That Edward King of England, making great Preparations as if it were for the Holy Land, out of a preconceived Malice had by ſome of his Subjects of the City of Bayonne, (which joyned with ſome other Ships of King Edward's Dominions) in Hoſtile manner Aſſaulted the Subjects of King Philip of France belonging to Normandy and other Places, cruelly deſtroying many of the Men, and carrying the reſt, together with their Ships, Priſoners into England.

Ad hunc An. The Account the French Hiſtorians give of the Cauſes of this War.

And further, That ſome other Subjects of the King of England Aſſaulted Rochel, a Town of the King of France's, killing ſome of the Townſmen, and doing a great deal of Damage to it, which when King Philip had heard, He ſent to the King of England, and his Lieutenants in Gaſcoigne, that they ſhould ſend a certain number of thoſe Malefactors Priſoners to the City of * *Perig~~ux~~*ot, to ~~have ſuch Satisfaction~~ to receive such punishment from Him, as Reaſon and Juſtice required; but the King's reaſonable Demand being Contumaciouſly neglected, He thereupon cauſed all Gaſcoigne to be Seized by his Conſtable Raowlle de Neſle; and moreover cited King Edward Himſelf to appear at his Parliament at Paris.

* Perragorum.

whoever desires to see a fuller Account of the Causes, which the King of France suppos'd he had for begining ning War with King Edward may consult ye Original Declaration of ye King of France agst ye sa as it is published in R—'s Coll: p. 616. to 619. from ye original in ye Tower, wherein having re rovocations, as are above recited, he concludes with a peremptory Summons & Command to the King upon ye Penalties he might thereby incur, yt he should appear personally before him within twenty Days after Christmas, then and there to answer the sd Crimes yt had been ~~done~~ committed by ers & Subjects, & such other Matters as might be alledg'd against him, & to obey ye Law, & to doe & receive ould be justly determin'd in that Cause, & yt if he did fail to appear at ye Time appointed, he, ye King nes would proceed agst him notwithstanding. this bears Date at Paris 1293. And from hence you erve, yt as King Edward pressed ye King of Scots to own his Superiority by answering to his so King Philip by Way of Retaliation did ye like by King Edward, as his Feudatory for Territories he held in France.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIII.

Paulus Æmilius is more Brief in his Relation, and omitting the Injuries done to the King of France's Subjects in Gaſcoigne, imputes the beginning of the War to the Engliſh Ships taking ſeveral Prizes upon the Coaſt of Normandy; for which King Philip demanding Satisfaction, but not obtaining it, He cited the King of England as a Peer of France, as has been already ſaid; who not appearing upon Summons, the Conſtable of France (above mentioned) being ſent into Acquitain, took the City of Bourdeaux, and all the other Caſtles and Towns, except ſome few which were kept by ſtrong Engliſh Gariſons; but ſome of theſe the ſaid Conſtable, and Charles Count of Valois, the Kings Brother, afterwards reduced, which Actions though mentioned here, were not performed till the Year following. But to return to our own Affairs.

The Succeſs of the Conſtables Arms in Acquitain.

[3] T. W. Eleanor the King's Daugher married to the Earl of Barr.

In England nothing elſe happened conſiderable, only Eleanor, the King's eldeſt Daughter, was this Year married at Briſtol to Henry Earl of Barr, by whom he had a Son called Edward, and a Daughter Margaret, who was afterwards Married to John Earl of Warren and Surrey.

and in France Earl Edmund the Kings brother married Blanche Queen Dowager of Navarre & who bore him three sons viz Thomas and Henry successively Earls of Lancaster and one called John.

[4] An wig. Ang. Sacra Vol. 1. Archbiſhop of Canterbury deceaſing is ſucceeded by Robert Winchelſey

As to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, [4] John Peckham Archbiſhop of Canterbury (a Prelate of a moſt Monklike and Mortified Life) deceaſing in December laſt Year, Robert Winchelſey Arch-Deacon of Eſſex was, in the beginning of February following, Elected Archbiſhop by the Monks of Canterbury; but was not Confirmed by the Pope, nor Conſecrated, until September the next Year.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

[5] Chron. de Norwich in Bib. Cotton The King wanting Money Seizes all the Wool and Hydes that lay ready to be tranſported, giving the owners Tallies for them.

The firſt thing I find done this Year worth our Notice, is, That the King being much put to it, for want of Money to recover his Territories in France, and to ſubdue the Welſh-Men, [5] who were then in Rebellion, did about the end of July iſſue out Writs to all the Sheriffs of England, Commanding them to ſeize all the Wool and Tanned Hydes for the King's uſe, which were about to be Tranſported beyond Sea, and to give the owners Tallies for the Money due for them; the Form of which Writs (bearing date the Six and Twentieth of July) you may find in the Appendix. But this way of Proceeding being very Arbitrary and contrary to Law, created the King much ill will and diſcontent among his Subjects, to whom it was very Grievous.

[1] Id Ib. The King Summons a Parliament and Demands an Aid.

* Rot. Clauſ. 22. Ed. 1 *m.*6 dors. The Clergy granted a Moiety of their Goods though with great Difficulty.

* M. W.

Yet to give the Nation ſome Hopes of Satisfaction, He alſo about the ſame time (being then at Portſmouth) iſſued out other * Writs to Summon a Parliament to meet at Weſtminſter on the Twelfth of November, being the morrow after St. Martin. The Buſineſs was to conſult with, and demand an Aid of them, for the War now like to break out with France; And there was a Convocation alſo held about ~~the ſame time~~; wherein the Biſhops and Clergy gave a Moiety of all their Goods both Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal, as appears by the King's Writ for the Collecting of it, to be found in the ſame Author; who farther adds, That though the Biſhops ſeemed willing to grant it, yet the Major part of the Inferior Clergy ſtill ſtood it out; till the King hearing of it, ſent certain Knights into the Room * where the Procurarators of the Clergy were then aſſembled (being the Refectory of the Monks of Weſtminſter) where one of them, Sir John de Havering, thus accoſted them on the King's behalf; It is His Majeſty's Pleaſure, that you now grant Him half of your Revenues; and let him that dare contradict this, come forth and ſhew himſelf, that he may be known: Upon which

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

which the leſſer Prelates and Proctors for the Clergy being affright'ned at, hey immediately complied with the Kings Demands; and though much gainſt their Minds, || yet they were forced to give up their own to he King's Will; who, however, in gratitude for what the Clergy had ow done, granted them a particular Writ of Protection, the Form of which you may find in the Manuſcript Chronicle here cited.

|| Chron. Nor.

* John Everſden alſo agrees with theſe Authors in the ſubſtance of this Tranſaction, and relates, That the King in his Parliament at Weſtminſter, held the morrow after Michaelmaſs (which is a miſtake for ~~Martinmaſs~~) forced and violently induced the Prelates with their Clergy and * Religious, to yield up a Moiety of all their Goods both Spiritual and Temporal, according to a Rate or Taxation lately ſet forth, to be paid t three different Terms within one Year, amounting to no leſs than 80100 l. a vaſt Sum in thoſe days.

* Ad hunc An. MS. in Officio Armor.

* i. e. The Monks.

St. Matthews Day

Who thoſe Inferior Clergy then were that joyned with the Biſhops n granting this great Tax, appears by the King's Writ, recited in the Mandate of John the Roman Archbiſhop of York, to ſummon the Clergy o this Convocation, viz. 'The Dean and Archdeacons in their proper Perſons, and the Chapter of his Church by one Proctor, and the Clergy by two of the ſitting Proctors, ſufficiently impowered by the ſaid Chapter and Clergy, to be preſent with the King, and to treat, ordain, and act for them, according as ſhall be provided by the common Advice of themſelves and the reſt of the Prelates, Deans, Archdeacons and Proctors.

Regiſt. Johani Roman. Arch. Ebor. f. 27. Printed in Dr. Wake's Appendix to his State of the Church p. 21. 22.

This deſerves your particular Notice, as being the firſt Example of the King's Writ to Summon the Proctors of the Inferior Clergy, as well as the Deans and Archdeacons to a Convocation; but that they met at the ſame time with the Parliament, I very much doubt, notwithſtanding the Authority of the Manuſcripts here cited, ſince the Writs (which are ſtill extant) Summon them to meet on the Feaſt of St. Matthew, or 21ſt of September, whereas thoſe for the Parliament appoint it to meet at Weſtminſter on the morrow after Martinmaſs, which is above ſix weeks after the Time that the Convocation was to meet at the ſame Place.

But to come to Foreign Affairs; this ~~Summer~~ Earl Edmund, the King's Brother, and late Ambaſſador to France, being on his Journey towards the Sea-ſide in order to return home, had been recalled by a Meſſage from Joanna the Queen Conſort, and Mary the Queen Dowager, who proffer'd by their Mediation again to reaſſume the former Treaty of Peace between the two Kings: And then after ſeveral Conferences it was at laſt agreed, That for the Honour and Security of the King of France, who (as he pretended) had been much injured by the King's Officers in Gaſcoigne, Six of the King's ſtrongeſt Caſtles in thoſe Parts, (viz. Xainctes, Tallemund, Tourn, Pomerel, Penne and Mountflaunkon, ſhould be delivered up into the King of France's hands by way of Sequeſtration till Matters could be adjuſted; and that in all Cities and Caſtles of the whole Dutchy (except Burdeaux, Bayonne, and la Reole) one of the King of France's Officers ſhould be appointed there to preſide in his Name: And farther, That of thoſe Miniſters and Officers which belonged to the King of England in Gaſcoigne, the French King might chooſe which He would of them for Hoſtages for the due Performance of the Articles of Peace, that were to be made between them.

[2] Spring

T. W.

Earl Edmund is ſent for back to renew the Treaty with France.

Which ſeems concluded upon certain Conditions.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

[3] Id. Ib.

And theſe things being perform'd, the King of France was thereupon to recal both his Citation and Sentence, which had been given againſt King Edward at the Parliament at Paris; and then the King of England, firſt having obtain'd Letters of Safe-Conduct, was to go over to Amiens, and there, upon an Enterview with the King of France, a firm Peace was to be concluded between them, and then all Caſtles were to be reſtored, and the French King's Officers removed out of all the Cities and Caſtles, and the Hoſtages were alſo to be delivered upon the Interceſſion of One or Both of the Queens; which Articles being reduced into Writing, one part ſigned by the ſaid Queens was to remain with Earl Edmund, and the other part their Majeſty's were to keep, who promiſed the ſaid Earl on the behalf of the King of France, That the Conditions agreed on ſhould no ways be violated.

[4] N. T. T. W. King Edward agrees to the delivery of ſeveral Towns in Gaſcoigne into the French King's Hands. Who thereupon ſeems to confirm the Treaty ſet on Foot by the two Queens.

[4] King Edward being informed of theſe things by the Earl his Brother, He thereupon ſent him Letters Patents, directed to all his Officers in Gaſcoigne, commanding them, that in all Points they ſhould ſubmit to the King of France's Pleaſure.* Theſe Letters were to be tranſmitted into Gaſcoigne ſo ſoon as Earl Edmund thought it convenient; but though he had received them, yet he delay'd the ſending them thither, till he was aſſured that the French King would approve of what had been agreed upon by the two Queens; and therefore he deſired of them that Aſſurance of it from the King of France's own Mouth: Upon which King Philip gave the Earl a Private Audience in the Preſence of the Queen of Navarre, the Duke of Burgundy and other Perſons of great Quality; where He promiſed, upon the Word of a King, to perform and fulfil whatſoever the ſaid Queens had granted on his behalf; whereupon Sir Geoffry de Langly, a Servant of Earl Edmund's, was diſpatched into Gaſcoigne, with Letters to recal the Conſtable of France, who was then marched with an Army to invade that Province; and John de Lacy, a Clerk, was alſo ſent thither with the King's Letters Patents directed to his Officers for the purpoſes already mentioned. Then John de St. John, whom the King had made Governor of Gaſcoigne, being certified of this Agreement, and believing all Matters as good as concluded between the two Kingdoms, unwarily ſold all thoſe Stores which he had provided for the Towns and Gariſons in thoſe Parts, and preſently return'd into England.*

[5] M. W. T. W. The King of France changing his mind, is too hard for King Edward.

The King of France reduces moſt part of Gaſcoigne to his obedience.

[5] But whilſt King Edward kept his Eaſter at Canterbury, daily expecting the French King's Letters of Safe-Conduct for his Paſſage into France, King Philip on the ſudden changed his Mind, and not only denyed the ſaid Letters of Conduct, but alſo diſanulled the Revocatory Letters, which He had a little before ſent to the Conſtable to ſtop his Proceedings in Gaſcoigne; ſo that King Edward's Letters Patents to his Officers and Miniſters in Gaſcoigne, commanding them to ſubmit to the King of France, having been already delivered, it was no difficult matter for the Conſtable, who had now raiſed ſufficient Forces, to make himſelf Maſter of all the Cities and Caſtles in thoſe Parts; inſomuch that the whole Country was ſoon reduced under the French King's Obedience, and all the Officers of the King of England were immediately ſeized and ſent Priſoners to Paris. In the mean while Earl Edmund

* And indeed this Commission was much more ample than the former agreement made by Earl Edmund with that King; for in this King Edward reciting the Complaints yt had been made against the Disobedience & Trespasses committed by his General, & others his Subjects in Gascoigne agst his most dear Lord and Cousin ye King of France. He thereby empowers his sd. Brother to command his said Seneschal & other Officers in ye Dutchy of Guienne to obey his Brother in all Points. This bears Date Jan: 1st at Canterbury & is published in R–s Coll: p. 618. And in Pursuance of this Commission Earl Edmund not long after by his Letters directed to Sr. John St. John Lieutenant of Guienne & other Officers in ye said Dutchy, commanding them to permit such Persons as should be sent by King Philip to Sequester & take Possession of all Cities, Towns, and Castles within ye Dutchy, & yt all Bailiffs, Provosts & other Officers of those Places should surrender them to those, who should be sent according to the King of France's Letters Patents for yt Purpose: This Letter bears Date at Paris ye morrow after Candlemas-Day A.D. 1293. but according to our Acct. 1294. vid R–s Coll: p. 619. but how treacherous and ill advantage the said King made those Letters you will presently find.

* And a Peace was not that looked upon as certain with France, about this Time King Edward sent Letters to the Bishops in England, reciting, that whereas he intended suddenly to go over beyond Sea to con his Cousin the King of France, concerning a Peace to be made between them, that they should take his Subjects within their respective Dioceses to make publick Prayers to God to direct the King's to his Glory, and render his Endeavours profitable for the publick Good of the Kingdom: these terd on the Rolls [Rot: Claus: 22. Ed: I. M. 11.] & published in R–s Coll p. 626.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCIV.

Edmund moved the two Queens to put the King of France in mind of is Promiſe to ſend his Letters of Saſe-Conduct to the King of Eng-and, as alſo of the reſt of the Articles which had been lately agreed n betwixt them: But the French King ſent certain Knights to Earl dmund, with Directions in his Name, poſitively to deny that He knew f any ſuch Conditions or Agreements. Then the Earl perceiving how hat both his Brother and himſelf had been trick'd by the King of rance's fair Promiſes, return'd into England, and laid before the King nd his Council all that he had done in France: So that if this Relation e true, as it is moſt likely, ſince it is found in Nicholas Trivet's Chro-icle, and is from thence tranſcribed by Thomas Walſingham (though mitted by the French Hiſtorians, as being to their King's Diſhonour) hen King Philip is highly to be blamed for his Treachery and Breach of aith, and Earl Edmund deſerves the Character of a credulous and nexperienced Young Man; who would ſo far rely upon the King of rance's bare Word (without any thing to ſhew under his Hand and eal) as to ſend the King's Letters to his Officers of Gaſcoigne, to ſub-nit themſelves and their ſtrong Places to the King of France's Pleaſure, efore he had obtained the Letters of Saſe-Conduct for the King his rother to go over, and alſo to return in Saſety.

And denies the whole Agreement with Earl Edmund.

[1] Id. ib. The King Summons a Parliament, wherein it was agreed to recover the King's loſt Dominions.

[1] King Edward, upon his Brother's Return from France, having Summon'd a Parliament to meet at London, (as hath been already re-ated) it was there agreed by the Prelates and Great Men, That the Counties that had been thus ſeized by Treachery, ſhould be recovered by the Sword; and at this Meeting the Clergy granted a Moiety, the Citizens a Sixth part, and the reſt of the People a Tenth of all their Moveable Goods, as an Aid for the carrying on of this War: But the Chronicle of Norwich is more exact than any other, in relating the Proceedings of the Clergy at this Parliament.

[2] T. W. The King ſends Two Fryers Envoys to the French Court, to renounce his Homage to that Crown.

Ibm.

Not long after this, the King ſent Hugh de Mancheſter, a Preaching Fryer, and William de Gisborn a Fryer Minor (both Doctors in Divinity, and Diſcreet Perſons) as his Envoys to the King of France, with this Meſſage, That ſince He had violated all the Compacts that had been made between Himſelf and his Progenitors, as alſo thoſe Secret Treaties which had been concluded with the late King his Brother, King Edward did not therefore think Himſelf obliged (as King of England) to be any longer his Vaſſal for the Dukedom of Acquitain, and therefore renounced the Homage He had made Him. And William de Nangis ſuppoſes King Edward to have done this, not ſo much out of Generoſity, as Policy, becauſe of the hopes He had to regain the Country again by Conqueſt; and then He intended to hold it no longer as a Feudatary to the Crown of France.*

[3] Chron. Abing. C. W. H. T. W.

[4] Id. ib.

The Biſhop of Durham ſent Ambaſſador to the Emperor Adolf, to make a League Offenſive and Defenſive.

About the ſame time [3] the King ſent Anthony Beke, Biſhop of Durham, together with the Archbiſhop of Dublin, his Ambaſſadors into Germany, to the Emperor Adolph of Naſſau, with whom He entred into a Leage Offenſive and Defenſive againſt the King of France; and the better to confirm it, ſent Him over no leſs then Sixty Thouſand Marks (ſome Writers ſay a Hundred thouſand Pound) to begin the War, though the Emperor was never able or willing to perform this Agreement. And the King [4] likewiſe now ordered an Army of Twenty thouſand Foot and Five hundred Horſe, to be ſent into Gaſcoigne, over

* A Copy of this Renunciation of Homage & Fealty, setting forth the Reasons of it (viz) the unjust detaining of Aquitain, notwithstanding the private Treaties & Agreements made between King Philip & ye said Earl Edmund, besides other Injuries, is preserved in the Tower & published in R—s Coll: p. 620. and this also further appears by other Letters sent by Earl Edmund to the said Sr. John St. John, wherein he not only repeated ye Former Orders, but also yt he should choose twenty Person out of the Seneschals Bailiffs & other Officers of that Dutchy, who were to be sent Prisoners into France & also yt he should deliver up Xaintes, Talmond & several other Towns into that King's Possession; all which was executed accordingly as you may find in the Letter it self preserved in ye Exchequer, and published in R—s Coll: p. 620. But I find Earl Edmun ye King's Brother is not so much to be blamed as I believed at first; for I now find by a Charte ing of France's, whereby he entered into a new and private Treaty with that Earl, whereby it was agreed yt ndition King Edward would marry Margaret Sister to King Philip, the Dutchy of Aquitain (which was t in Sequestration till then) was to be restored upon the sd. Marriage: but this Treaty not then taking any Effe mention it & leave ye Reader to consult ye Original preserved in the Exchequer under the King of Broad Seal, bearing Date at Paris An: Dom: 1293. but according to our Account 1294. & is publish Coll: p. 622. to 626. seems yt ye King of France having once got Possession of the said Dutchy, being advised by his llors who were not for making Peace with England, flew off from this Agreement concern- Match, and Restitution of Aquitain; so that King Edward seeing fair Means would not prevail was forced to have Recourſe to his Sword, & altho' ſome years after this Match took Effect, & yt this Du again restored upon a Peace yet it was not till after a large Effuſion of Blood & Treaſure by both

[turn over]

So unhappy a thing it is for Subjects, when their Princes are once blinded with Ambition & Covetousneſs neighbours Territories, yt they will obſerve no Treaties or Agreements any further than they think conduce to their present Interest or Advancement of that falſe Notion of their own Glory in acqui does not belong to them.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

The King ſets out a great Fleet and Army againſt France.

which (at their being muſtered at Portſmouth) He appointed his Nephew John, Earl of Bretaigne and Richmond, General, ordering John de St. John and Robert Tiptoſt, two Valiant and Wiſe Commanders, to be his Aſſiſtants and Councellors. The King likewiſe at the ſame time ſet forth a Great Fleet, which He divided into Three Squadrons, under as many Admirals, viz John de Botecourt Commanded the Ships of Yarmouth and the North-Eaſt Coaſt; William de Laban, thoſe of Portſmouth and the Cinque-Ports; and a certain Knight of Engliſh-Iriſh Extraction, all the Iriſh and Weſtern Veſſels. But neither the King's Army nor his Fleet met with good Succeſs at their firſt ſetting forth; for the Fleet ſailing about Michaelmaſs from Portſmouth, was driven by contrary Winds, into the Haven of Dartmouth, and there waiting ſome days for a Wind, again ſet ſail about the beginning of October, and Landing at the Mouth of the River Garrone, they there took all the Towns upon that Shore, as far as Bourdeaux, and alſo the Town of Rions, that lies over againſt it; but could not repoſſeſs themſelves of the City of Bourdeaux, though the Land-Army was ſet down very near it; but they put Gariſons into Ryons, Blaye, and other Towns on that Coaſt, which they had made themſelves Maſters of; and ſo the Expedition ended for this Seaſon. But to return to our Affairs at home.

Whereby ſeveral Places in Gaſcoigne are recovered.

[5] Ch. Anon. in Bib. Cott. Ch. Sti. Ang. in Bib. Ben. MS.

The Veſſels of the Cinque-Ports, take a Fleet of Spaniſh Merchants.

About the ſame time likewiſe, [5] the Veſſels belonging to the Cinque-Ports, took a Fleet of Spaniſh Merchant Ships of Two hundred and eighty Sail, laden with ſeveral Rich Commodities, and bound for France: But the King of Caſtile, to whoſe Subjects theſe Ships belonged, was ſo enraged at it, That He preſently declared War againſt the King of England, which laſted a good while, to the great Damage of the Merchants of both Nations.

[1] Dr. Ps. Chron.

The Welſh Rebel, and on what occaſion.

I muſt now give you an Account of another Welſh Rebellion, which happened the beginning of this Summer, upon this occaſion; [1] the King having lately had a Great Subſidy granted Him for the War againſt France, Part of it was levied in Wales, as well as other Places, which put the Welſhmen into ſuch a violent Commotion, that they flew ſtrait to their Arms, ſeized one of the King's Captains or Officers, called Roger de Puleſdon, who was ſent down to gather this Subſidy, and immediately hanged him up, with ſeveral other Collectors, whom they had likewiſe taken. After they had done this, the Weſt-Welſhmen, choſe Maelgon Vauchan for their Leader, who ſpoiled the Countries of Caërdigan and Pembroke, and returned with a great deal of Rich Booty; whilſt they of Glamorganſhire, and the Southern Parts made one Morgan, a Welſh Nobleman theirs, who driving the Earl of Glouceſter out of the Country, they reſtored to him thoſe Poſſeſſions, which that Earl's Anceſtors had taken from his Predeceſſors. [2] In the mean while, the Men of North-Wales had ſet up one Madoc, of the Family of the late Prince Llewellyn, who with a good ſtrong Force came to Carnarvan, and ſlew there a great many Engliſh that had reſorted to the Fair; and then plundering the Town, retired to the Caſtle of Snowdun with Eighteen hundred Men; at which News the King being highly inſenſed, immediately recalled Earl Edmund, and Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, with great part of the Army, that were then upon their March for Gaſcoigne, and ordered them to go to North-Wales; but as they approached near the Caſtle of Denbigh, upon St. Martin's day, the Welſhmen met them with

[2] T. W.

The King ſends an Army thither, which is Defeated.

with a powerful Force, and giving them Battel, repulſed the Engliſh Army, and gave them at that time an entire Defeat.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

But the King's Forces met with better Succeſs in South-Wales, * into which He marched in Perſon, and being diſappointed by the Abbot of Stratfur, who promiſed to bring in the whole Country of Cardigan to the King's Peace, He in a Rage commanded that Abbey, together with the adjacent Country to be plundered and burnt. But not long after this, Morgan abovementioned, who call'd himſelf Prince of South-Wales, came in, and voluntarily ſubmitted himſelf to the King's Mercy, with Seven hundred of his Men, being introduced by the Earl of Warwick, who it ſeems had reduced him to theſe Terms

* Annal Wig. ad hunc Ann.

[3] H. K. ad hunc An.

The King marches againſt them in Perſon, and is at firſt reduced to great Straits.

All that I can find to have been done farther in Wales this Year, was, That the [3] King marched down in Perſon to thoſe Parts, towards he beginning of November, and paſſing over the River Conway, came to he Caſtle that bore that Name, which He had lately built; but his Army not being able at preſent to get over to Him, and the Welſhmen knowing it, took Courage, and beſieged the King in his Caſtle, and reduced Him to that neceſſity for want of Proviſions, That He had but one large Flaggon of Wine left, and He mixing ſome Water with it, diſtributed it amongſt all his Followers, ſaying generouſly, That in xtream Neceſſity, All things ought to be Common: But in a little while after he King's Army getting over, they reſcued Him, and put the Welſh to flight; and there the King continued till after Chriſtmaſs. After which the War was perſued with great Vigour all the reſt of the Winter, and till the Auguſt following, when Madoc being betrayed, and given up by his Countrymen, all Wales was again reduced under the Engliſh Dominion.

[4] M. W. T. W.

The King of Scots appears at the Parliament at Weſtminſter

I find little relating to the King of Scots this Year, [4] only that ll our Authors agree, That He was at the Parliament held at Weſtminſter ſometime after Whitſontide, where they reſolved to Aſſiſt the King o recover his loſt Dominions: And Matt. Weſtminſter further adds, That King John then granted King Edward the Revenue of all his Eſtate in England for three Years, towards carrying on the War with France; and that the reſt of the Nobility alſo promiſed an Aid according to heir Eſtates; whereby it appears that the King of Scots was yet (at eaſt outwardly) in the King of England's Intereſt.

And what was done further in Macdulff's Appeal, the Proceedings in which are again put off till the next Parliament.

And I ſuppoſe it is to this Parliament, that the Record de Superioritate Regis in Scotiam &c. ſo often cited, is to be refer'd, which further informs us what was done this Year, in the Appeal that Macdulff abovementioned had brought againſt King John, (viz.) That the Parliament not being holden on the Morrow after the Holy Trinity, as had been ppointed the laſt Year, becauſe the King was engaged in Wars lately raiſed againſt Him in divers Countries, the Suit between the King of cots and Macdulff, which was ſome time ſince begun before the King's uſtices in Parliament, was continued and Prorogued to the Parliament ext to be holden, and which was afterwards Summoned to be at t. Edmund's-Bury on the Feaſt of Martin in Winter (that is, the Eleventh f November) in the Three and twentieth of King Edward the Firſt; t ſince that falls out under the next Year, I ſhall defer ſaying any ning further of it till then.

I will

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

[5] C. N. T. W. The King ſeizes the Moneys hoarded up in Monaſteries and Churches.

Rot: Vas: 22. Ed: I. m. 4. d.

* This was held on 21st Sept. at Westminster this year, as appears by the King's writ of summons to ye Arch Bishop of York for that Purpose.

Upon which He promiſed the Clergy to make them Satisfaction; whereupon they Demand a Repeal of the Statute of Mortmain.

I will now come to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs. The King this Year took an Occaſion highly to diſoblige the Clergy, and it was thus; [5] being inform'd of great Sums of Money, that were hoarded up in ſeveral Monaſteries and Cathedrals, either for the Repairing of their Churches, or other Uſes, the King cauſed it all to be ſeized, and brought up to his Exchequer at London; which Action the Biſhops and Clergy ſo mightily reſented, that they remonſtrated againſt it in the next Synod or Convocation,* demanding Reſtitution of all that had been forced from them by the King's Officers; but He excuſing the Fact, by reaſon of the Neceſſity of his Affairs, promiſed to make them Satiſfaction, ſo ſoon as his Wars were ended; and to pacify them in the mean while, He offered to do any thing that they ſhould deſire, provided it were for the Advantage of the Church; whereupon the Biſhops conſulting among themſelves, demanded a Repeal of the Statute of Mortmain; but the Politick King not being willing to part with ſuch an excellent Law as that, put them off, by telling them that He could not repeal it without the Conſent of Parliament; and ſo they were fain either to be, or at leaſt to appear ſatisfied for that time.

[1] T. W. Chron. Lanc. A Parliament at Weſtminſter, where the King obtains a great Tax from the Clergy and Laity.

* Secularium militum.

Some while after this, viz. [1] on the Vigil of St. Matthew, or the Twentieth of September, a Parliament was called at Weſtminſter, wherein the King demanded of the Clergy a Moiety of all their Goods for one Year, as well their Eccleſiaſtical as Temporal Revenues; which, though it ſeemed very grievous to all there preſent, yet the Biſhops and Prelates being afraid of the King's Diſpleaſure, did at laſt agree to, and ſo He had it. But this, our Author ſays, they ought not to have done without the Pope's Conſent. In this Parliament too, the King had likewiſe granted him a Tenth part from the Community of the Counties, or * Knights of the Shires, and a Sixth part by the Citizens and Burgeſſes.

[2] Chron. Cotton. The Engliſh Army in Gaſcogne, reduce part of Arragon to his Obedience, and the Town of Bayonne is Surrendred to the Engliſh

I find nothing more done in France this Winter, except that [2] ſome of the Engliſh Army then in Gaſcoigne, being called in by the King of Arragon, recovered great part of that Province to his Obedience, and not long after (about the beginning of the Year following) the Town of Bayonne was Surrendred to the Engliſh, where they took Fifty Ships laden with Wine, which were ſent over to the King.

[3] M. W. Celeſtine the Fifth is choſen Pope, but reſigns after five Months, and is Succeeded by Boniface the Eighth.

As to the Affairs of Italy; [3] the Papal Throne having been void for above two Years, the Cardinals at laſt elected a certain Hermite, of great Reputation for Sanctity, called Peter de Murrone, who taking upon him the Name of Celeſtine the Fifth, after He had been Pope about five Months, being but a weak Man, was wheedled out of it, and perſwaded to reſign by Cardinal Benedict of Cajeta, whom He nominated for his Succeſſor and who was choſen Pope in his ſtead, upon Chriſtmaſs-Eve, by the Name of Boniface the Eighth, a Crafty and Violent Prelate, of whom we ſhall hear more hereafter.*

* As for other foreign affairs, I cannot but observe that King Edward this year strengthened his Interest abroad by making new Leagues & Alliances with several foreign Princes, viz: Adolph of Nassau King of ye Romans, & also with James King of Arragon which was offensive & defensive between them, & is still extant on the Roll. [Rot: all 22. Ed: I. m. 19] bearing Date 11th of ye Kal: Novemb: 1294. & both of these are published in R—'s Coll: p. 658, to 661. & 695 to 698.

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

[4] Chron. Cotton The new Archbiſhop of Canterbury being confirm'd, does his Homage to the King.

King Edward kept his Chriſtmaſs at Aberconway in Wales; about which time [4] Robert Winchelſey, Archbiſhop Elect of Canterbury, having been already Confirm'd and Conſecrated by Pope Celeſtine, now did his Homage to the King, and was ſent home with a favourable Reception, though he afterwards proved the moſt violent Oppugner of the King's Power and Prerogative, that had been ever ſince Thomas Becket's time. But to return to the Affairs of Wales.

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

[5] Dr. Ps. Chron.

The King marches into Wales, and is in great want of Proviſions.

The King, after ſome time ſpent at Conway, advanced further into Vales, where marching ſomewhat before his Army, the Welſhmen ſallying ut of their Faſtneſſes, took all his Carriages of Proviſions, ſo that He vas reduced to that Extremity, that for a few days He was forced o drink nothing but Water ſweet'ned with Honey, and eat Salt-Meats: But the reſt of his Army coming up to Him, He was quickly elieved by them.

The Welſh are routed by the Croſsbows, commanded by the Earl of Warwick.

The Iſle of Angleſey again reduced, and the Caſtle of Beaumaris built.

Madoc ſtill continues the War in South-Wales.

But he is at laſt taken Priſoner, and all Wales is ſettled in Peace.

[1] Chron. Cotton.

Whilſt the King thus remained in Snowdun, the Earl of Warwick earing that a great number of Welſhmen were got together in a Valley, etwixt two Woods, Selected a Company of choice Horſe-men with ertain Croſsbows, and Archers, who coming upon the Welſhmen in the Night, cloſed them in; but they pitching the ends of their Pikes on the Ground, and turning their Points againſt their Enemies, ſtood upon heir Guard, and kept off the Horſe-men; but the Earl having ſo well rawn up his Forces, that betwixt every two Horſemen, there was laced a Croſsbow, great part of the Welſhmen were overthrown and routed y the Croſsbow Arrows; then charging the reſt of them with a Squaron of Horſe, they made ſuch a Slaughter of the Welſh, as had not een for a long time before: So that the Country being now cleared, he King marched directly to the Iſle of Angleſey, and having again educed it, there built a ſtrong Caſtle called Beaumaris, from whence the Chief Town of that Iſland hath it's Name: Then having put to Death hoſe that Hang'd Roger de Puleſdon, and wholy broke the Power of he Welſh in thoſe Parts, by cutting down the Woods, and placing ariſons in the Sea-Coaſts, the King returned into England with a great eal of Honour. Yet in South Wales the War was ſtill continued by Madoc, who ſometime after marched with his Forces to Oſwaldſtrie, here the People ſubmitted to Him; and then meeting the Lord Strange, ith a Company of his Marchers (not far from Knockin) overthrew him, nd ſpoiled his Country; and ſhortly after He gave the Lords Marchers nother Overthrow: But yet they were nothing diſcouraged at his Miſchance, but muſtering up freſh Forces, met with Madoc, as he as coming towards Shrewsbury, upon the Hills not far from Caurs-Caſtle, here, after a ſharp Conflict, his Men were routed, and he at laſt taken nd ſent up Priſoner to the Tower of London; though ſome Authors re-te, That this Madoc was not then taken, but ſometime after he volun-rily ſurrendred himſelf to the King's Mercy, which he obtained upon his Condition, That he ſhould go in perſuit of Morgan the Leader of he Rebels in North-Wales, and not deſiſt till he had taken Him Priſoner, hich was done not long after; and Morgan being Beheaded at London, he [1] King took for Hoſtages about Five hundred of the Sons of he Chief of the Noblemen of Wales, who were ſent to divers Caſtles England, to be there ſafely kept; which being perform'd, the Country as ſo well ſettled in Peace, that we find no Inſurrection in Wales for any Years after.

[2] Ch. Abing. Ch. W. H.

The Treaſon of Sir Thomas Turbervill diſcovered.

About this time was diſcovered the Treaſon [2] of Sir Thomas Turberville, Knight of Note, who whilſt he was lately Priſoner in France, pro-iſed that King to betray One of the Cinque-Ports to Him, for the Land-g his Army in England; but when upon Turbervill's Return home, King dward refuſed him that Command (which he then deſired) of the Cinque-Ports, that Plot came to nothing; and his Treaſon being diſ-over'd by a certain Clergyman whom he employed as his Secretary,

to

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

to write a Letter to the King of France, wherein he invited Him to invade England, during the Abſence of Earl Edmund the King's Brother, who was ſometime before ſent over into Gaſcoigne with the Power of the Engliſh Forces; as Turberville was going towards Wales he was ſoon apprehended, and being brought back again to London, was there tryed and condemn'd to be hang'd and quarter'd; and he was Executed accordingly.

For which he is Condemned and Executed.

[3] Id. Ib.

Which utterly diſappoints the French deſigns upon England.

This Diſcovery and Execution had this good Effect, That it was a great means of diſapointing the Invaſion of the French that they deſigned about this time; for they arriving upon the Coaſt of England with a great Fleet of 400 Sail, hoped to have had one of the Cinque-Ports delivered up to them by Turberville, whom they expected to have found Guardian thereof; but their Deſign being fruſtrated by the King's not Truſting him with that Command, all they could do, was [4] to land not far from Dover, with ſome Forces, and then marching to that Town, they burnt a good part of it, plundering the Churches, eſpecially that of the Priory, wherein many of the Inhabitants had fled for Refuge: But ſome of thoſe that ran out of the Town upon the Approach of the French, joyning with the Militia of the Country, coming in to their Aſſiſtance, fought with ſo much Bravery, that they beat the French back to their Ships with the Loſs of a great many of their Men, who were either killed or taken Priſoners.

[4] Annal S. Auguſt MS. in Bib. Ben.

Yet they Land and Plunder Dover, and ſet it on Fire, but at laſt are repulſed.

And (as William de Nangis relates) there was ſo great an Army then on Board the French Fleet, as might have gone near to have conquer'd England, had not the Fleet been recalled through the Envy of the French Admirals. But this ſeems not at all probable; for had they been Guilty of ſuch a Miſcarriage, the French King would have made them pay for it with the loſs of their Heads. However, in Revenge of this petty Loſs, the Seamen of Yarmouth burnt the Town of Cherburgh in Normandy, whilſt the Mariners and Soldiers belonging to the Cinque-Ports Landing near Diepe, burnt the Towns and Villages adjoining, for near 20 Miles together along the Coaſt, and returned to their Ships; and not long after thoſe of Portſmouth took fifteen Spaniſh Ships laden with rich Commodities, being bound for Damm in Flanders, and brought them into Sandwich. But this ſmall Succeſs met with a very ill Conſequence, for it cauſed a long War between England and Spain, to the great prejudice of the King's Affairs.

Some Towns burnt by the Engliſh in Normandy.

But I ſhall now ſpeak of the Affairs of Scotland and France, which took up the reſt of this Year.

King Edward, as I have ſaid before, had Summoned a Parliament to meet at St. Edmunds-bury, on the Feaſt of St. Martin, or the Eleventh of November, and it laſted until the end of December following; * in this Parliament the Scotiſh Earl, [5] Macdulff, proſecuted his Plea afreſh againſt the King of Scots; who, inſtead of appearing in Perſon, ſent the Abbot of Abirbrothok, and ſome other Noblemen of that Kingdom, to King Edward, with Letters of Excuſe for his not coming to his Court either the two laſt Parliaments, at the Days aſſigned him, or now; wherein he gave ſome ſpecious Reaſons why he could not attend in his own Perſon.

The King Summons a Parliament, at which the Scotiſh King refuſed to appear.

[5] C. J. E.

* Rot. de Superior. Reg. Angl. in Scot.

But ſends an Abbot, and ſome Noblemen, with Letters of Excuſe.

But indeed, this* Abbot, and thoſe that came with him, brought not nly an Excuſe, but a Quarrel, and demanded of King Edward Satisaction for ſeveral pretended Injuries, Oppreſſions and Grievances, ſuained by the Scots from his Subjects: To whom, after good Deliberaion, this Anſwer was given, That the King of England, for certain Cauſes, was coming towards the North Parts; and that the King of Scots ſhould then have ſufficient Recompence to his own Content for all njuries could be proved done to the Scots by his Subjects of England: And alſo appointed him a Day in the ſame Parliament, when (by the Continuation and Prorogation of the Juſtices repreſenting his Perſon) He ſhould Appear and Anſwer to Macdulff, viz. the firſt day of March next ollowing, at New-caſtle upon Tine, who would expect his being there; and njoyn'd the Abbot and thoſe with him, to give notice to their King, that He ſhould then not fail perſonally to appear there, to Treat with the King of England about the Premiſſes, and other Things touching the State and Tranquility of both Kingdoms and their Inhabitants.

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

* Ibidem.

They alſo demand Satisfaction for ſeveral Injuries; and the King's Anſwer to them.

The King appoints another Day for the King of Scots Appearance.

While * the King was at the Parliament intent upon this Buſineſs, He had certain Information, That the King of Scots, with his Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Noblemen, Communities of Cities, and Towns, nd others of the Chief Inhabitants of the Kingdom, had made a private Confederacy and League with the King of France againſt Him, Sealed with both their Seals, and Counterchanged; for diſpatch whereof, the King of Scots, at the Inſtance of his Biſhops, Earls, &c. ſent four Procurators or Commiſſioners, viz. William Biſhop of St. Andrews, Matthew Biſhop of Dunkeld, John de Soules, and Ingraham de Umfreville. The Sum of this League was:

* Ibidem.

The King is inform'd, that the King of Scots, with his Prelates and Nobility, had made a Secret League with the King of France.

Firſt, 'That Edward, King John's Son, ſhould Marry the Daughter of Charles of Valois, Earl of Anjou, the King of France his Brother.

The Articles of this League.

Secondly, 'That the King of Scotland in the preſent War ſhould aſſiſt the King of France againſt the King of England and all his Confederates, as well by Sea as by Land, againſt the Emperor of Germany and others.

Thirdly, 'That He ſhould at his own Charge make War againſt the King of England, when He was employed in, or diverted by, War in other Places.

Fourthly, 'That as well the Earls, Barons, Prelates, and other Noblemen, as far as of Right they might, and alſo the Communities of the Kingdom of Scotland, ſhould, as ſoon as they could, ſend Him their Letters Patents, under their Seals, of their Conſent to theſe Things.

Fifthly, 'That if the King of England Invaded Scotland, the King of France was to make War upon Him in other Parts, by way of Diverſion; or if required, to ſend Forces into Scotland at his own Charges, until they came there.

Sixthly, 'That if the King of England went out of his Kingdom, or ſent many Forces abroad, the Commiſſioners promiſed, that the King of Scotland ſhould enter England with his whole Power as far as He could, making War in the Field, beſieging Towns, waſting the Countries, and by all poſſible ways deſtroying England.

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

Seventhly, ‘ That they ſhould not make Peace on either ſide, withou
‘ the Conſent of the other.

The League it ſelf, with the Procuratory Letters, are to be found a large in this Record, and in Hen. de Knyghton, Col. 2473.* and the Reader notice that the like copies of this League are preserv'd in the Exchequer & in R—'s Coll: p. 680, 681.

* Ibidem.

The King ſends two Abbots to the Scotiſh King, to warn him to Appear at the Parliament; and to deliver certain Caſtles in the mean while.

About * the prefixed time for the King of England's ſetting out fo his Journey to New-caſtle, He ſent the Abbots of New-minſter and Wellebec to the King of Scots, to give Him notice of the Adjournment of th Parliament, and the time of his coming thither; they alſo demanded in the King's Name, certain Caſtles in the Marches to be delivered, up to Him, for his Own and his Subject's Security from the preſent Dangers during the War with France, which when over, He ſhould receive again; and that He might have them without any difficulty, He ſent by thoſe Abbots his Obligatory Letters for the Performance of his Promiſe.

[1] H. K. Ib. Chron. Lan.

The Caſtles that the King demanded, which the Scots refuſe to deliver.

Our [1] Hiſtorians do alſo agree with the Record in this matter, and are in ſome Points more expreſs; as that the King, ſuſpecting the Fidelity of the King of Scots, demanded three of the ſtrongeſt Caſtles in his Kingdom, viz. Berwick, Roxburgh, and Edenburgh, to be delivered into his Hands, as Pledges for his Fidelity until the end of the French War: But the Scotiſh Parliament, then aſſembled at Edenburgh, refuſing to comply herewith, the King thereupon reſolved to ſubdue them by Force; and that they, much about the ſame time, choſe Twelve Peers of the Kingdom, to wit, Four Biſhops, Four Earls, and Four Barons, by whoſe Advice the King was to Govern, and by whom He was chiefly incited to make War againſt King Edward, as they did the Year following, when it came to an open Breach between the two Kingdoms.

[2] T. W. Chron. Lan.

Charles, the French King's Brother, with the Conſtable de Neſle, enter Gaſcoigne, and take Ryons, with ſeveral Officers.

Let us now ſee what ſucceſs the King's Forces had in Gaſcoigne this Spring. [2] Count Charles the French King's Brother, with the Conſtable de Neſle, having entered that Province about the middle of Lent with a powerful Army, they Beſieged Ryons and took it, being quitted by John Duke of Bretaigne, and the Lord Robert Tiptoft, by reaſon of a great Mutiny and Sedition that happened among the Soldiers; ſo that the Commanders abovemention'd retreating to Blaye by Water: all the Officers that remained in the Town, together with the common Soldiers, were without any difficulty taken, and ſent Priſoners to Paris. But in return, on the ſame day the Town of St. Severe was yielded up to the Engliſh, and Hugh de Vere made Governor of it; but he could not keep it long, for Count Charles, having burnt the Town and Caſtle of Ryons, preſently marched to Beſiege that Place, before it was ſufficiently Fortified; Hugh the Governor made a Gallant Reſiſtance, and held out a long Siege of Nine Weeks, during which time a great number of the French periſhed, both by Plague and Famine; yet at laſt, Proviſions failing in the Town, by the Mediation of the Counts of Artois and Foix, (who were then with Count Charles) the Governor obtained a Truce for Fifteen days, within which time, if he were not relieved, he was to Surrender the Place; and no Relief being ſent from Bayonne, (as was expected) the Town was Surrender'd, upon Condition, That the Gariſon might march out with their Arms and Baggage, and be ſafely conducted for two days march by the French Army: There were alſo good Conditions made for the Inhabitants that ſtaid behind. But to make ſome amends for theſe ill Succeſſes, [3] John de St. John, one of the King's Chief Commanders in Gaſcoigne, about this time fought the French,

The Town of St. Severe taken by the Engliſh,

Which is retaken after a long Siege by the French.

[3] Chron. Annon. in Bib. Cotton.

Sir John St. John routs the French, and kills 1700 of them.

French, and killed Seventeen hundred of them, and took Seven hundred Priſoners.

As to Eccleſiaſtical Matters, nothing happened remarkable, [4] but the Death of John Sirnamed the Roman, Archbiſhop of York, of Italian Extraction, a Learned Prelate, but withall ſordidly Covetous: and Henry de Newark, Dean of the ſame Church, was Elected in his room.

[4] H. K. The Death of John the Roman, Archbiſhop of York.

The [5] new Pope Boniface reſolving again to revive the Holy War, and to make all Chriſtian Princes agree to the carrying on of that great Deſign, ſent the two Cardinals of Alba and Preneſte to the King of France, commanding Him upon pain of Excommunication to make Peace with the King of England: But King Philip refuſing it, anſwered boldly, That the Pope had nothing to do about making Peace or War in his Dominions. [1] Then the ſame Legates came over into England with the like Meſſage; but King Edward being more Complaiſant, order'd the Biſhop of Durham to receive them with all due Reſpect; and the King, upon his Return from his Welſh Expedition, anſwered them to this effect, That He was inclinable enough either to a Peace or Truce, which the King of France ſhould think fit; but he was obliged, by his Oath to the Emperor, not to conclude either without his Privity and Conſent: Then the Legates, having deſired the King to perſwade that Prince to comply with their Propoſals, took their Leaves, and return'd into France.*

[5] Mezeray's Hiſt. Ad hunc An. Pope Boniface ſends his Legates to the King of France, commanding him to make Peace with England.

[1] T. W. The ſame Legates come over hither, and are kindly received, and reſpectfully anſwer'd by K. Edward.

* And yt the Pope now did his Endeavour to have made Peace between the two Kings, appears by ye Bulle of Pope Boniface entred on the Rolls [Rot: Al: 23. Ed: I. m. 10] by which he offerd to arbitrate all Differences between them not as Pope, but as a private Person, & yt in Order to it, a Truce should be agreed upon from the Feast of Epiphany last past, for one Year to come. this Bulle bears Date at Rome 12th of Augt. in ye first Year of his Pontificate, & is published in R—s Coll: p. 682. 683. But tho it did not then take Effect yet that this Truce was accepted on King Edward's Part, appears by his Letter to the Pope, dated some Time after the said Bulle, wherein he lets his Holiness understand yt to show his Obedience to his Mother the Church of Rome, he had offer'd his Holiness Legates, who were then with him, to make a Truce with the King of France by Sea and Land, till the Feast of All Saints next ensuing, provided the sd King would also agree to it, as appears by the Letter it self entred on ye Rolls [Rot: Claus: 23. Ed. I. m. 7. d] and is published in R—s Coll: p. 685 686.

This [2] Year was alſo remarkable for the Deceaſe of ſeveral Perſons of Quality, eſpecially the Lord Robert de Bruce the Elder, who had been a Competitor for the Kingdom of Scotland: He Died in that Kingdom, but was Buried in the Abbey-Church of Giſbourn in Yorkſhire, which his Anceſtors had Founded. This deſerves our notice, becauſe moſt of our Hiſtorians confound him with his Son of the ſame Name, who was ſome Years after Crown'd King of Scotland. [3] Alſo this Year Died Gilbert Earl of Gloceſter, who had Married Johanna the King's Daughter, and by her left a Son of the ſame Name with his Father: And for the Counteſs-Dowager, ſhe not long after privately Married an ordinary Eſquire, called John de Monthermer, who belonged to the late Earl her Husband, without the King's Conſent; for which, Monthermer was for ſome time kept in Priſon; but being at laſt ſet at Liberty, and obtaining the King's Favour, he was for his Valour created Earl of Gloceſter, during the Minority of Young Gilbert de Clare, the King's Grandſon.

[2] C. W. H. H. K. The Death of Lord Bruce the Father.

[3] Chron. Abing. As alſo of the Earl of Gloceſter.

[4] Open War being now broke out between England and France, King Edward, to ſee what the King of Scots would do, ſent to Him, deſiring his Aſſiſtance againſt the French; but the Scots return'd an Anſwer to this Effect, That neither they nor their King were obliged to Obey the Requeſts or Commands of the King of England, ſince they were now Abſolved by Pope Celeſtine from the unlawful Fealty and Homage King Edward had Extorted from them: Which when the King heard, He was much ſurpriz'd, and ſent them word, That ſince they would give Him no Aſſiſtance, He expected the Caſtles of Berwick, Edenburgh and Roxburgh, ſhould be put into his Hands by way of Caution to the end of the War, that they wou'd not take up Arms againſt him: But this was not only refuſed with great Scorn, but the King of Scots, now reſolved upon a War, [5] to be before-hand with England, Baniſh'd all of that Nation out of Scotland, and turn'd the Eccleſiaſticks there out of their Livings; and alſo Seized all the Goods of the Engliſh, which [4] Id. Ib. The King deſires Aſſiſtance from the Scots againſt France, which is by them refuſed.

[5] Chron. Lan. The Engliſh Baniſh'd out of Scotland, and their Eſtates Seiz'd.

Anno Dom. MCCXCV.

which were ordered to be kept in ſafe Places towards the Expence of, the War: But thoſe few Engliſh, who were permitted to ſtay behind, were forced to take an Oath to aſſiſt the Scots againſt their own Nation; which (as my Author well obſerves) was fooliſhly contrived; for how could a forced Oath oblige others, when the Scots themſelves had broke their Oath of Fealty to King Edward, on pretence that it was impos'd upon them, againſt their Conſents.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

* Rot. de Super-rior. in Scotia.

The King marches in Perſon againſt the Scots.

[1] T. W. Chron. Abing.

And again cites that King to appear at New caſtle; but without any effect.

Whereupon in February following King Edward began his Expeditio against the Scots; and it appears by the * Record abovementioned, that He was on the Firſt of March at New-caſtle, where, holding a great Council of his Nobility, He Cited by Proclamation the King of Scots to make his Perſonal Appearance on the Day laſt mention'd: [1] But He not obeying the Citation, nor ſending any one to excuſe his Abſence, after ſome Days ſtay there, the King, by the Advice of his Council, reſolved to march further againſt Him: and in perſuance thereof, proceeded as far as Banborough Caſtle, where He again cauſed the Scotiſh King to be Summon'd; but it had no other Effect than the former.

[2] Id. Ib.

Robert de Ros Rebels againſt the King, with the ill Conſequences of it.

But before I inform you what the King did in this Expedition, I cannot forbear mentioning an ill Accident that fell out, [2] whilſt the King remained at New-caſtle. It happened that a certain Knight there, called Robert de Ros, Lord of the Caſtle of Weark, for the Affection he bore to a Scotiſh Lady, whom he intended to Marry, Revolted from King Edward, and went over to the Scots: Whereupon, William de Ros his Brother, immediately gave the King notice of it, and deſired a ſufficient Gariſon to defend the Caſtle againſt the Scots: The King upon this ordered him a Thouſand Men; and he marching with them toward the Caſtle, quartered at a Village called Preſtfen, where Robert his Brother, with a great number of Scots, ſurprizing them in the Night, killed them all, except ſome few that eſcaped in the dark. When the King heard of this, tho' He was ſorry for the loſs of his Men, yet it gave Him this Satisfaction, That the Scots had firſt begun theſe Hoſtilities.

[3] C. W. H. H. K.

Divers Scotiſh Noblemen Submit to the King.

Then [3] the King went to the Caſtle of Weark, and there kept his Eaſter. Whilſt He was at that Place, there came over to Him divers Scotiſh Noblemen, who not only ſubmitted themſelves to Him, but alſo gave Him their Homage and Oath of Fealty: The Perſons were, Patrick Earl of Marche and Dunbar, Gilbert Umfreville Earl of Angus, Robert de Bruce the Elder, and Robert de Bruce the Younger, whoſe Homages and Submiſſions are ſet down at large in my Author; but ſeeing they are much the ſame with thoſe of the other Noblemen, whom I ſhall mention hereafter, and are ſtill Extant on the Rolls in the Tower, I purpoſely here omit them.

[4] T. W.

Some Scotiſh Noblemen raiſe Forces, invade England, and burn part of Carliſle.

Whilſt [4] the King kept his Eaſter at this Caſtle, ſeveral Scotiſh Earls and Barons, (the chief of whom were thoſe of Menteithe, Stratherne, Athol and Mar) having gathered an Army of Five hundred Horſe and Four thouſand Foot, marched out of Anandale over the River Salwarth, and entring Cumberland, not only deſtroyed the Inhabitants without diſtinction, but burnt all the Towns from Artereth as far as Carliſle, the Suburbs of which they alſo laid in Aſhes: And tho' the Town was ſet on Fire by a Spy that was there kept in Priſon, yet the Inhabitants making a vigorous Reſiſtance, it was not only ſaved, but the Scotiſh Army was alſo repulſed with ſome loſs.

In [5] the mean while, King Edward marching into Scotland on the other ſide, ſat down before Berwick upon Tweed, and on the 29th of March Summoned the Town and Caſtle to Surrender, offering the Gariſon and Townſmen a Free Pardon, with a Continuation of all their Liberties and Privileges: But they were ſo far from hearkening to the King's Offers, that they refuſed them with moſt opprobrious Language, and endeavoured to burn the Engliſh Fleet that was then lying in that Harbour; which ſo highly provoked the King, that He immediately commanded a General Aſſault to be made; and the Place being ſoon taken by Storm, the Engliſh gave no Quarter to any of them, but putting all to the Sword they met in their way, no leſs than Fifteen thouſand, as ſome, or, (as John Everſden, and Others, more probably relate) Nine thouſand Scots were there Slain; and for thoſe that were left, the King Baniſhed them the Town for ever. Then He ordered a deep Trench, fortified with Palliſadoes, to be caſt up between the Town and the reſt of Scotland, to hinder the Scots from approaching it, and ſpent ſome time in repairing the Fortifications of that important Frontier.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

[5] Chron. Cotton. Chron. Lan.

King Edward enters Scotland, and Beſieges Berwick.

Takes the Town by Aſſault, and puts 9000 Scots to the Sword.

[6] Chron St Alban. in Bib. Cot. Claud. D. 6.

Whilſt the King was thus employ'd, Baliol, being now reſolved to act aboveboard, and openly to defie King Edward, to that purpoſe ſent, by the Guardian of the Fryars Minors of Roxburgh, an Inſtrument, or Writing, containing a Renunciation of the Homage and Fealty, which himſelf and many of the Inhabitants of the Kingdom had formerly made, which being both in French and Latin, is thus Tranſlated.

Baliol ſends K. Edward a Renunciation of the Homage he had made him.

TO the Magnificent Prince Edward, By the Grace of God, King of England, John, By the ſame Grace, King of Scotland: Whereas You and Others of Your Kingdom have purpoſely and knowingly, by Your violent Power, notoriouſly and frequently done grievous and intollerable Injuries, Contempts, Grievances and enormous Damages againſt Us, the Liberties of Our Kingdom, as alſo againſt God and Juſtice, Citing Us at Your Pleaſure, upon every ſlight Suggeſtion out of Our Kingdom, unduly Vexing Us, Seizing Our Caſtles, Lands and Poſſeſſions in Our Kingdom unjuſtly, and for no fault of Ours, taking the Goods of Our Subjects, as well by Sea as by Land, and carrying them into Your Kingdom, Killing Our Merchants, and other Traders with You, and taking away Our Subjects and Impriſoning them: For the Reformation of which Things, tho' We ſent Our Meſſengers to You, yet they remain not only unredreſſed, but there is every day an Addition of worſe; for now You are come with a great Army upon Our Borders, to Diſinherit Us, and the Inhabitants of Our Kingdom; and proceeding forwards, have inhumanly committed many Slaughters, Burnings and violent Invaſions, as well by Sea as Land: We therefore not being able to Suſtain the ſaid Injuries, Grievances and Damages any longer, nor to remain in Your Fealty or Homage, Extorted by Your violent Oppreſſion, do hereby return them to You, for Our Self, and all the Inhabitants of Our Kingdom, as well for the Lands We hold of You in Your Kingdom, as for Your pretended Government over Us.

[7] T. W. Hen. de Knight. Col. 2477.

The Form of it.

We cannot tell the Exact time when this Letter was Writ, becauſe it is entered in our Hiſtorians without any Date; only Walſingham tells us in general, That it was ſent about the latter end of April, which is moſt probable, becauſe King Edward was then at Berwick; to which place all our Authors agree this Writing was ſent, and do alſo tell us,

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

That the King having recieved it, and accepted of King John's Renunciation, commanded his Chancellor, that it ſhould be enrolled in perpetuam Rei memoriam, as it remains on the Records of the Tower to this day; being in Latin, though it was Written Originally in French, as appears from Walter Hemingford's Manuſcript Hiſtory of this King's Reign, as alſo in the Abingdon Chronicle. But to return to the Hiſtory.

[2] Id Ib. The King ſends part of his Army to reduce the Caſtle of Dunbar. The Scots invade and waſt Northumberland.

About the ſame time [2] the King ſent great part of his Army to reduce the Caſtle of Dunbar, which had been betrayed to the Scots by the Lady thereof, in the Earl her Husband's Abſence; in the mean while the Scots, to divert the King's Forces from this Siege, under the Conduct of the Earls of Caſſiles and Menteithe, invaded the Borders of Northumberland, and killing all the Inhabitants they could meet with, burnt and waſted all Cokeſdale and Redeſdale, with all the Country lying Eaſtward of Tine; and then marching forward, burnt the Monaſteries of Henham and Lanercoſt, with the Nunnery of Lambſley, and ſo return'd into Scotland, through the Foreſt of Nicholay, with a great Booty.

[3] H. K. Dunbar Caſtle taken.

Notwithſtanding this, the Forces Royal, under the Command of the Earls of Surrey and Warwick, ſtill carried on the Siege of Dunbar-Caſtle; [3] and the King, having ſtayed at Berwick till the end of April, then marched with freſh Forces to their Aſſiſtance; but before He could arrive there, His Army had not only taken the Caſtle, but obtain'd a great Victory over the Scots: The manner of which was thus.

[4] Id. ib. The Engliſh Army obtain a great Victory over the Scots. [5] T. W.

King [4] John, finding this Caſtle which was then of great ſtrength and importance, like to be taken, having muſter'd up a great Army, marched to it's Relief; but being met with by the Engliſh Generals, who roſe from the Siege, and gave them Battel, [5] they wholy routed the Scots, and killed about Ten thouſand of them; which is much more probable then Knyghton's Account, that makes them above as many more; though none of any Note were there ſlain, except the Lord Patrick Graham.

[1] Ibidem. Divers Scotiſh Noblemen taken Priſoners at Dunbar. [2] Chron. Lan. [3] W. H.

Upon [1] this Victory, thoſe in the Caſtle of Dunbar ſeeing no further hopes of Relief, Surrendered it to the King's mercy, where were taken Priſoners, the Earls of Menteithe and Athol, the Lord Ros, One and thirty Barons more, beſides ſeveral other Perſons of Quality: [2] But as for the common Soldiers who were about 300, the King gave them all their Liberty, upon their promiſſory Oath not to take up Arms againſt Him any more. Upon [3] the loſs of this Battel, and the taking of Dunbar, the Scots were ſo diſpirited, that they fled beyond the Frith of Forthe, leaving no Forces behind them, but what were in Gariſons.

The Caſtle of Roxburgh Surrendred by the Steward of Scotland, who ſubmits and takes an Oath of Fealty to the King. [4] T. W.

After this, the King with his Army marched againſt the Caſtle of Roxburgh, which was held by the Seneſchal, or Steward of Scotland, who upon the approach of his Royal Army, thinking it in vain to reſiſt, ſurrendered the Place upon Good Terms, having the Lives, Eſtates and Liberties, of himſelf and thoſe that were with him, preſerved; upon which he was alſo admitted to make his Submiſſion, and take his Oath of Fealty to the King, as appears by an [4] Inſtrument under his Seal, which I ſhall mention farther hereafter. From thence the King went forward directly to Edenburgh, which was Surrendered without any Reſiſtance;

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

Reſiſtance: And as for the Caſtle, though it was counted one of the ſtrongeſt holds in all Scotland, yet that likewiſe was Surrendered after Eight days Siege, though our * Anonimous Chronicle does not attribute it to the Force of the King's Engins of Battery, but becauſe the Well in the Caſtle fail'd ſuddenly of it's Water, contrary to expectation; which ſeems to be the more likely Account.

The Town of Edenburgh, with the Caſtle, are Surrendred to the King.

* In Bib Cott.

[4] After this, King Edward marched forward to the Caſtle of Sterling, which, though very ſtrong, was preſently taken, the Gariſon having for fear deſerted it: Upon which unexpected Succeſſes, King John with his Nobility, ſeeing their Caſe now deſperate, thought fit by Meſſengers on purpoſe, to implore the King's Mercy, who thereupon [5] ſent Anthony Biſhop of Durham to treat with them; and he having agreed upon the Terms of their Submiſſion, brought the King of Scots along with him to King Edward, being then at a Place called Stroukatherack, without any State, only mounted upon a little Nag, with a white Rod in his Hand: Then being admitted into the King's preſence, He made his acknowledgment of his Offence, and beg'd Pardon by Word of Mouth, and went thence with the King to the Caſtle of Brechin.

[4] Id. H. K. Chron. Abing. in Bib. Cant.

King John, with his Nobility, implore the King's Mercy, which is granted.

[5] Hec. Boeth. L. 15.

But it is owing to the Records in the * Rolls of the Tower, that we find after what manner that King made this Acknowledgment, viz. ' That He ' by Word of Mouth acknowledged Himſelf heartily ſorry for the unlawful Confederacies He had made with Philip, King of France, againſt ' the King of England; He alſo then renounced all ſuch Confederacies ' and unlawful Contracts, made in the Name of Himſelf, his Son Edward, and the Inhabitants of Scotland, againſt his due Homage, and ' Fealty He had done to the King of England. This was done in the Church-yard of Stroukatherack, July the Seventh, before Anthony Biſhop of Durham, Humphrey Biſhop of Hereford, John Comyn Earl of Bouchan, the Lord Hugh le Diſpenſer, the Lord John Comyn the Elder, of Badenach, as Witneſſes eſpecially called for that purpoſe. * Then Three days after, his Majeſty coming to the Caſtle of Brechin, King John being ſtill with Him, in a more ſolemn manner abſolutely Surrendered Himſelf, together with the whole Kingdom of Scotland, and his Royal Dignity, with all Homages, and other Rights and Appurtenances thereunto belonging; as alſo all his Lands and Poſſeſſions, and Goods Moveable and immoveable, with a contented Mind and Freewill, into the hands of Anthony, Biſhop of Durham, who received them in the Stead and Name of King Edward. Theſe things were done at Brechin the ſame day, before a publick Notary, whom he commanded to publiſh and make an Inſtrument of them, in perpetuam Rei memoriam; the ſaid Biſhop of Durham, John Comyn of Badenach, the Elder, Bryan Fitz-Allan, Knights, and Alexander Kenedy, Clerk, Chancellor to the King of Scotland, being ſpecially called as Witneſſes thereunto.

* Rot. Scot. 24. Ed. I. Pecia. 8.

The manner of the Scotiſh King's Submiſſion

* Ibm.

King John Surrenders himſelf and his Royal Dignity into the King's Hands.

From which Records it plainly appears, that (though Dr. Brady takes no Notice of it) there were Two ſeveral Submiſſions of the King of Scots, the former made July the Seventh, wherein He renounced all unlawfull Confederacies againſt the King of France; and the Second was more large and Solemn, and contain'd a Surrender of his Kingdom, and Royal Dignity, &c. into the King's Hands.

Two ſeveral Submiſſions made by the Scotiſh King

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

Which laſt Submiſſion and Reſignation, together with a large Acknowledgment of his Offence in Confederating with the King of France, was reduced into a Charter, or Inſtrument, written originally in French, and is thus Tranſlated.

[1] H. K. Coll. 2481. See it alſo in Trivet, and Walſingham in Latin. The Charter of his Submiſſion and Reſignation.

JOhn, by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, to all that ſhall hear or ſee theſe preſent Letters, Greeting. Whereas We by evil and falſe Counſel, and Our own Simplicity, have greatly offended and provoked Our Lord Edward, by the Grace of God King of England, &c. to wit, for that being in his Faith and Homage, We have Allied Our Self to the King of France, who then was, and is now his Enemy, offering a Marriage between Our Son and the Daughter of his Brother, the Lord Charles, and Aſſiſting Him by War, and otherway with all Our Power, and furthermore by Our evil Counſel aforeſaid, We defied Our Lord the King of England, and put Our Self out of his Faith and Homage, and ſent Our People into England to Burn, Spoil, Plunder, Kill and Commit other Miſchiefs; fortifying the Kingdom [of Scotland*] that is his Fee (or Seigniory) againſt Him, putting Gariſons into the Towns, Caſtl and other Places, for which Tranſgreſſions Our Lord, the King of* England, having entered Scotland by force, Conquer'd and took it, notwithſtanding all We could do againſt Him, as of Right He might, as Lord of the Fee, ſeeing after We had done Homage to Him, We Rebelled againſt Him; We, being therefore yet Free and in Our own Power, do hereby Surrender unto Him the Land of Scotland, and the whole Nation, with all it's Homages: In Witneſs whereof We have cauſed to be made theſe Our Letters Patents. Dated at Brechin, the Tenth Day of July in the Fourth Year of Our Reign.

[2] N. W. T. W. Upon which the great Seal of Scotland is broke.

Which Inſtrument, though it is not Recorded upon the Roll, yet that it was then made, all our [2] Hiſtorians agree, Some of them having Tranſlated it into Latin, and Others giving it us in the French Original; and Nicholas Trivet (whom Walſingham Tranſcribes) relates, that this Charter being Sealed with the Great Seal of Scotland, it was forthwith broke, as being no longer of any uſe, the King taking that Kingdom into his own Government. ✗

✗ But it further appears from the Original under the King's ~~Seal~~ great Seal, and which is still extant, that this Charter was issued out at Kinkardon in Scotland the 2d of July in the fourth Year of King John's Reign.

The King takes a Progreſs into the fartheſt Parts of Scotland, without any Reſiſtance.

[3] T. W. C. W. H.

[4] Id. He removes the Stone to Weſtminſter-Abbey, on which the Scotiſh King's were wont to be Crown'd.

[5] N. T.

This Great Affair being thus happily ended, to the good Satisfaction of the King, and all the Engliſh Noblemen there preſent, He then reſolved to go a Royal Progreſs through the Heart of Scotland, to ſee if there were any left, that dur'ſt reſiſt Him; [3] and then ſending the Biſhop of Durham a day or two's March before, with a Detachment of Light Horſe, He followed in Perſon by eaſie Journies as far as the High lands: Then the King having paſſed through Murrey as far as Elgin, and found the whole Country in Peace, thought it needleſs to proceed any further, and ſo returned back by the Abbey of Scone, from whence, as a perpetual Monument of his Conqueſt, He ordered [4] that famous Stone to be taken, on which the Kings of Scotland were for many Ages wont to be Crown'd; and this being carried to Weſtminſter, [5] the King afterwards commanded it to be put into a Chair, wherein the Prieſts might ſit at Divine Service. From this Antient Authority of Nicholas Trivet, (from whom Walſingham has borrow'd it) we may obſerve, That though the King's of England have ſince that time thought fit to make uſe of that Chair to receive their Crowns, yet it was not at firſt intended by King Edward for that purpoſe, but only as a token of his Conqueſt over the Scotiſh King and Nation.

I can-

Anno Dom. MCCXCVI.

I cannot here omit that [5] Hector Boethius charges King Edward to have, at this time, burnt all the Scotiſh Records, abrogated their Laws, and alter'd even their Forms of Divine Service; and laſtly, removed their moſt Learned Men from their own Univerſities to that of Oxford; to all which Charges, having already made this King's Defence in my Introduction, I refer the Reader to it for farther Satisfaction. *

[5] L. 14. C. 7. Boethius's Calumny, of King Edward's having deſtroy'd the Scotiſh Records.

But to return to the Hiſtory. [1] From Scone King Edward return'd to Berwick in the beginning of Auguſt, where He held a Great Council or Parliament of the Great Men or Nobility, Clergy and Commons of Scotland, and where the Scotiſh Noblemen again renewed their Homage and Fealty to Him, much in the ſame Form with that of the Lord Steward of Scotland, upon the Surrender of Roxburgh Caſtle. But I will ſet down the Form of it as a Pattern for all the reſt, from the French Original in Henry de Knyghton, and the Bodleian Chronicle.

[1] Id. T. W. H. K.

* The King having thus ſubdued the Scots went to Abberdeen where ſeveral of the Scotch Clergy & nobility came in to him, and voluntarily renounced all confederacies with Philip King of France, and his Adherents, revoking ſuch as they had made to that Purpoſe. This Inſtrum.t was made in the Preſence of William Comyn Provoſt of the Church of St. Andrews, and Notary publick, dated at Aberdeen 15th June in ye 24th year of King Edwards Reign: and the like was done not long after by the Biſhop of Glascow, who had been a great Stickler for the late King John, as appears by his Inſtrument of Renunciation dated at Elgyn in Murrey 26th of June, both which are ſtill preſerved in the Exchequer, and are publiſhed in R—s Coll. p. 720. 721. as is alſo the oath of Fealty taken by the ſaid Biſhop. 24th Agust following vid: Ib: p. 722. 723.

TO [2] all thoſe that ſhall ſee or hear theſe Letters, We (ſuch and ſuch there named) ſend Greeting; For that we agree to the Faith and Will of the moſt Noble Prince, our Dear Lord Edward, by the Grace of God, King of England, Lord of Ireland, and Duke of Aquitain; we promiſe for us and our Heirs, upon the pain of Body and Eſtate, and whatſoever elſe we can Incur, that we will Aſſiſt and Serve Him well and loyally againſt all Perſons that may Live and Dye, at all times when required, or ſummoned by our Lord the King of England, or his Heirs; and we ſhall not know of any Damage done to Him or them, but we will hinder it to the utmoſt of our Power, and will diſcover it to them: And for the Performance of this, we bind Us and our Heirs, and all our Goods, and further have Sworn it upon the Holy Goſpels. In Witneſs whereof we have cauſed theſe Letters Patents to be made and ſealed with our Seals. Given at Berwick upon Tweed the Eight and twentieth day of Auguſt, in the Twenty fourth Year of the Reign of our Lord the King of England. Then follows the Form of the Homage which they then made to the King; but it having nothing in it Extraordinary, I therefore omit troubling you with it.

[2] Id. Col. 2488.

In much the like Form of Words did all the Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Monks, Parſons, Vicars, Abbeſſes, Nuns, Earls, Barons, Knights, Citizens, Burgeſſes, Aldermen, Communalties of Cities and Burghs, and other Commoners and Inhabitants in Scotland, ſome time after make their Homage and Swear Fealty to Edward King of England, as appears by Four large * Rolls, ſtill remaining in the Tower of London, with this Title, De Juramentis Homagii & Fidelitatis Edwardo Regi Angliæ nominatim Præſtitis, per unamquamq; inviduam Perſonam Regni Scotiæ, i.e. Of the Oaths of Homage and Fealty made to Edward King of England, by every individual Freeholder of the Kingdom of Scotland. All theſe were made according to the Form preſcribed in this Great Council at Berwick, and by the joint Conſent of the Prelates and Noblemen of both Kingdoms, according to the Form ſet down in † Henry de Knyghton's Chronicle.

*Rot. Scot. 24. E. I. Pecia 20, 21, &c.

† Col. 4832.

But the Reader may pleaſe to obſerve, That though theſe things were then drawn up by Andrew, the Publick Notary there preſent, who alſo atteſted what was then done, and which were alſo entred among the Records of this Year; yet were not theſe deliver'd to the Keeper of the King's Rolls, until the Four and thirtieth Year of his Reign; as it is entred at the end of the ſame Roll, Pecia 25. And the like Inſtruments

Vid. Finem. Rot. Scotiæ.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCVI.

ſtruments of Homage and Fealty ſtill remain with the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, in the Third Treaſury at Weſtminſter, with other things and Inſtruments in ſmall Boxes put up in Great Wooden-Cheſts: All which deſerves our particular Notice; ſince they do not only prove as Monuments of the entire Conqueſt and Submiſſion of the Scotiſh King and Kingdom at that time, but alſo ſhew the Partiality of all the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, who (I ſuppoſe) to conceal the Perjury of their Nobility and Gentry, paſs by all theſe Grand Tranſactions without taking the leaſt notice of them.

[3] T. W. The Earl of Surrey appointed by the King Governor of Scotland.

Then [3] the King appointed John Warren, Earl of Surrey and Suſſex, his Lieutenant or Governor of Scotland; Hugh de Creſſingham, Treaſurer; and William Ormesbey, Chief Juſtitiary thereof; and a little before his Departure ſent the late King John to the Tower of London, where He was to be kept in free Cuſtody, and decently attended: [4] But the Lord John Comyn, and the reſt of the Scotiſh Noblemen who had taken his part, being alſo ſafely convey'd into England, were only forbidden to paſs the River Trent, under Forfeiture of their Heads, until the War between England and France ſhould be ended.

[4] Id. H. K. King John with many Scotiſh Noblemen ſent Priſoners into England. The King upon his Return home pays and diſbands his Army.

Thus the King, having ſubdued and ſettled the Kingdom of Scotland, disbanded his Welſh Forces, and diſmiſſed the Iriſh, (very well ſatisfied) who had lately come over to his Aſſiſtance under the Earl of Ulſter; (Standing Armies being then a Terror, as well as a Burthen, to the Nation) and returned into England with great Glory.

[5] Id. Ib. * Rot. Claus. 23. E. I. M. 3. The King calls a Parliament at St. Edmundsbury, with the Subſtance of the Writ of Summons to the Archbiſhop or Clergy.

Not long after his Return, He held a Parliament at St. Edmundsbury, on the morrow of All-Souls or Third of November, as appears by the Writs of Summons, bearing date the twenty Sixth of Auguſt, in the Four and twentieth Year of His Reign, at Berwick upon Tweed. In that directed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, He tells him, 'That he, with the other Prelates and Clergy lately aſſembled at Weſtminſter, had granted the Tenth of their Rents and Benefices for the Defence of the Kingdom, until the Feaſt of St. Michael then next coming, which Grant was well accepted by Him, in hopes of a more plentitiful Aid from the Archbiſhop and others of the Clergy, and which they then promiſed ſhould be ſufficient for that end, unleſs in the mean time there was a Peace or Truce made between Him and the King of France; therefore He now enjoyned him to be preſent with the Prior, Archdeacons, and Procurators of the Clergy of the Church of Canterbury at Bury at the time appointed, to order the Quantity and Manner of the Subſidy that was then to be raiſed. The Writs to the other Biſhops and Abbots, &c. were like this; but thoſe to the Noblemen and Sheriffs were only in general to treat about the Dangers impending upon the whole Kingdom, and the Remedies to prevent them.

[1] T. W. The Laity grant the King a great Aid; but it is utterly refuſed by the Clergy becauſe of the Pope's late Bull, with the occaſion thereof.

In this Parliament the Citizens and Burgeſſes gave an Eighth Part of their Goods, and the reſt of the Laity granted a Twelfth part; but the Clergy nothing, by reaſon of a Conſtitution made the Year before, and publiſhed by Pope Boniface, by which, 'He forbad all Prelates and Eccleſiaſticks, as well Religious as Secular, to grant, as alſo all Emperors, Kings, Princes and other Temporal Lords, to take, any Taxes or other Payments from any of the Clergy, without the Conſent of the Papal See. This Bull bears date at Rome the Sixth of the Calends of March (i. e.) the Four and twentieth of February

this

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

this current Year, and was (as ſome of our Authors relate) ſecretly procured by means of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to hinder the King from demanding ſuch great and exorbitant Taxes of the Clergy as He had formerly done; though William de Nangis Aſcribes it to the Complaints of the Clergy of France, by reaſon of the Great Aids that King Philip had lately levied upon them for the War againſt the King of England; and perhaps both of theſe Occaſions may be true: But as for the Bull it ſelf, ſince it does not now concern us, I have not thought it worth while to tranſcribe it, and therefore ſhall refer the Reader that deſires further ſatisfaction to [2] Dr. Brady's tranſlation of it, and to the Latin in his Appendix, N. 17 truly tranſcribed from * Henry de Knyghton's Chron. But to return to the Hiſtory.

[2] Contin. Hiſt. of England. p. 41.

* Coll. 2489.

King [3] Edward, in hopes of a more ſatisfactory Anſwer from the Clergy, deferred this weighty Affair to the next Parliament or great Council that ſhould be holden at London, on the morrow after St. Hillary; (or Fourteenth of January next enſuing) but in the mean time, to humble the Clergy, and frighten them into a Complyance, He cauſed all their Barns, Granaries and Storehouſes to be ſhut up and ſecured, although the Archbiſhop had now ſent Copies of the Pope's Bull to be publiſhed in all the Cathedrals of his Province.

[3] Chron. Nic. Trivet. T. W. H. K.

The King Summons another Parliament at Weſtminſter, and in the mean while cauſes all the Barns and Storehouſes belonging to the Clergy to be ſhut up.

We ſhall conclude this Year with an Account of the War with France, which by reaſon of the King's being taken up in Scotland, was but remiſly managed, and for the moſt part with ill Succeſs; for very early [4] this Year the King having appointed his Brother Earl Edmund (with the Earl of Lincoln, who was joyned in Commiſſion with him) to command a powerful Army that was then to be ſent into Gaſcoigne, and in the begining of March a numerous Fleet of Three hundred and fifty Veſſels being now got ready to tranſport them, they took Shipping, and though they were at firſt bound for Gaſcoigne, yet in their Paſſage thither they landed on the Coaſt of Bretagne, and took the Town of St. Matthew, which had been deſerted by the Inhabitants, and burnt a great many French Gallies in the Harbour; and the Welſh Auxiliaries marching up into the Country, kill'd many of the People and burnt their Houſes: Then going on Board again, they ſailed to the Port of St. Gillemies de Boys, where they burnt about Thirty Gallies and other Veſſels; and then they ſail'd on to the Coaſt of Gaſcoigne, and landed at Blayes, which they took without much Difficulty, and then marching forwards they took the Town and Caſtle of Spare or Speare, (as Walſingham calls it) and after that, divers others: But when he approached near Bourdeaux, and had encamped at a Village called Rekall, intending there to refreſh himſelf and his Army, the French Gariſon in Bourdeaux ſallied out upon them on the ſudden, thinking to have taken them wholy unprovided; but they were diſapointed in their Expectations, for the Engliſh having had ſome Notice of their Deſigns, had put themſelves in as good a Poſture of Defence as the ſhortneſs of the time would allow, ſo that iſſuing out of their Camp, there began a fierce Conflict between them and the French, who were at laſt forced to return to the City, with a great Slaughter of their Men, the Engliſh perſuing them ſo eagerly, that two or three Engliſh Knights with ſome other Officers of leſs note, entring the City too raſhly in perſuit of the Enemy were taken Priſoners; ſo that the Engliſh having ſet fire to part of the Suburbs, were [4] M. W. Id. Ib. Chron. Abing.

The King ſends an Army into France, under the Command of his Brother Earl Edmund and the Earl of Lincoln.

The Engliſh defeat the French, and make them retreat in the City.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIV.

Earl Edmund falls Sick at Bayonne, and there dies.

forced to retreat, and Earl Edmund upon ſome urgent Occaſions went to Bayonne, where not long after he fell Sick, and his Illneſs being much encreaſed by Diſcontent at his late bad Succeſs, as alſo for want of Money to pay his Soldiers, he deceaſed, to the great grief of the whole Army, and loſs to the Engliſh Nation, being a Prince of ſignal Valour and Affability: His Body was carried into England, but not buried at Weſtminſter until about half a Year after, and that with great Solemnity, the King Himſelf being Chief Mourner at the Funeral.

[2] Pol. Verg.

The various Succeſs of the Engliſh Army after his deceaſe.

[3] T. W.

After this Prince's Deceaſe, [2] the Engliſh acted for a time on the Defenſive, fortifying their Gariſons and ſtoring them with Ammunition and Proviſions, whereby they might the better oppoſe ſo powerful an Enemy; yet not long after, [3] the Army under the Conduct of Henry Earl of Lincoln, who now commanded in Chief, undertook the Seige of the City of Aux; but after ſome time they were forced to raiſe it for want of Proviſions. About the ſame time the Earl of Artois, being ſent by the King of France into Gaſcoigne, took ſome ſtrong Places from the Engliſh; but in the mean while the Lord of Sully beſieged the Town of Burgh upon the Sea, in which the Gariſon obtained a ſhort Truce, until they could ſend to Blaye for Aſſiſtance, where none would undertake their Relief by reaſon of the great Danger of it, except Sir Simon Montacute, a brave and Valiant Knight, who ventur'd to Conduct a Ship Loaden with Proviſions through the middle of the French Gallies that lay there in wait to intercept him; whereupon the French General was forced to raiſe the Seige and return from whence he came. These things were tranſacted during the King's Expedition into Scotland the laſt Autumn. *

* I find further that this Year, the Pope again endeavoured by his Legates to have made a Peace between the Kings of France and England, and that the Latter seem'd very willing to it, and that he had returned his Answers to the Proposals made to him by his Holinesses Legates, who were still in France as appears by the King's Letters to them entred in the Rolls [Rot: al: 24. Ed: I. M. 10] and this Treaty went so far, that the King not long after sent a Letter to the Emperor Adolph, to give him notice that he (the King) had been prevailed upon by the Pope's Legates to send his Ambassadors to Cambray three weeks after Christmass; this Letter is preserved in a Miscellaneous Bundle in the Tower, and is also confirm'd by another Letter to the Bishop of Winchester, & other noblemen who were to be his Ambassadors there and is entred on the Rolls [Rot: Al: 24 Ed: I. m. 17] both which are published in R—s Coll: p. 698. to 701, 702, 703. But I do not find that these Ambassadors ever met, or that these Treaties came to any thing, because King Philip had such great Expectations from the King of Scots Success against England, that he would not agree to any reasonable Proposals.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

Walſingham Places this Wedding at Twelfth-tide; but he was miſtaken, for it will appear anon from a Record that He was then at Ipſwich.

[4] T. W.

Elizabeth the King's Daughter married to the Son of the Earl of Holland.

The King kept his Chriſtmaſs at Weſtminſter, and at the * ſame time [4] married Elizabeth His Seventh Daughter to John Son and Heir to the Earl of Holland and Zealand, whom not long after the Nuptial the King ſent home, together with his Bride, under the Conduct of Humphry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex: But this Match did not prove fortunate at all, by reaſon of the young Prince's Death ſome Years before his Father, without any Iſſue; ſome time after whoſe Deceaſe this Princeſs married the ſame Perſon that had conducted her over. But it is now time to come to Affairs of greater importance.

[1] Id. Ib.

The King holds a Parliament, where the Clergy perſiſt to deny him any aſſiſtance.

On the [1] Fourteenth of January, being the day after St. Hillary, the King held a Parliament, or rather a great Council of ~~the Biſhops~~, Earls and Barons at Weſtminſter, where I do not find any Commons Summoned to it; but nothing was done, becauſe the Clergy in Obedience to the Pope ſtill perſiſted in their former Stiffneſs, and abſolutely refuſed the King any Aſſiſtance towards his Wars, whereupon the Laity alſo refuſed to give any thing at that time, which might be the Reaſon why the King was not long after forced upon ſuch violent Courſes to raiſe Money as you will find by and by; and as an earneſt of what He would do, He not long after encreaſed the Cuſtom upon Wool, from half a Mark to Forty Shillings upon each Sack exported.

* Chron. MS.

† Col. 2491.

A larger Account of theſe Tranſactions from other Writers.

But to give you a larger Account of the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, ſince they are now ſo interwoven with the Civil, I ſhall from * Walter Hemingford and Henry † Knyghton's Chronicles, ſhew you the Tranſactions of the late Convocation, which was then held at St. Paul's Church for though

all

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

ll our Hiſtorians agree in this Refuſal of the Clergy, yet none of them re ſo expreſs in giving the Reaſons for it, as the two laſt mentioned uthors; and they tell us, That after the Clergy had refuſed to give he King any Aid, Robert Winchelſey, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſpake hus to the Biſhops then aſſembled with him in that Convocation; My ords, you know well that under Almighty God we have two Lords, a Spi itual and Temporal Lord; the Spiritual is the Pope, the Temporal our King; nd although we owe Obedience to both, yet greater to the Spiritual than the emporal: However, that we may pleaſe both, it were convenient to ſend eſſengers Expreſs at our own Charge to our Spiritual Father, to have his Leave grant the King ſome Aid, or at leaſt for Direction what we ought to do in nice and difficult a Caſe.

The Archbiſhop's Speech to the Biſhops about this matter.

This was all they then reſolved on; [2] only before the Convocation broke up, the Biſhops and Clergy deputed ſome of their own Body attend the King, being then at Caſtle-Acre in Norfolk, to acquaint Him ith their final Reſolution, and the Reaſons of it; which were ſo far om giving Him any Satisfaction, that they rather ſerved the more to xaſperate Him; inſomuch that He openly declared 'That ſeeing the Biſhops and Clergy had broken their Oaths of Fealty to Him, in denying Him that Aſſiſtance, which by the Tenure of their Lands they were bound to pay, He would be no longer obliged to protect them; and immediately gave Order that all the Clergy of what Degree ſoever ſhould be put out of his Protection, and further Commanded, that all the Lay-Fees of the Clergy, as well Secular as Regular, together with their Goods and Chattels ſhould be ſeized into his Hands by the Sheriffs, until they ſhould receive further Orders from Him: * Which Writs or Warrants to all the Sheriffs of England bear date at Ely the Twelfth of February in the Five and Twentieth ear of his Reign.

[2] C. Co.

The Biſhops and Clergy depute ſome to acquaint the King with their Reſolution, at which He is highly exaſperated, and thereupon put the Clergy out of Protection.

* Printed in Dr. B's. Append. N. 18.

Now that you may the better underſtand what was meant by being ut out of the King's Protection, I will tell you what our [3] Writers ay concerning this Matter, viz. That all Councellors, or Pleaders, were prohibited Pleading for Clergymen before any Temporal Judge; nſomuch that Sir John Mettingham, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, made this Declaration Publickly on that Bench, by the King's Order, in theſe Words: You, Gentlemen, that appear as Attorneys and Sol icitors for the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, and other Eccleſiaſtical erſons, tell your Maſters that for the future no Juſtice ſhall be done them in he King's Court, for any Matter of Injury they ſhall receive; yet neverthe eſs Juſtice ſhall be done to all Perſons that will demand it, or make any Complaint againſt them.

[3] M. W. H. K. An. de Waverly.

What that Term of being out of the Kings Protection then Signified.

But notwithſtanding theſe ſevere Proceedings, the Archbiſhop of Can terbury fearing leſt any of the Clergy might comply with the King's Demands, on the very day the abovemention'd Writs were publiſhed, He in his own Cathedral, at the Conſecration of the Biſhop of St. Aſaph, towards the end of his Sermon, denounced Sentence of Excommunication againſt all ſuch Clergymen, as ſhould give any thing to the King contrary to the Pope's late Bull: However all the Clergy were not ſo ſtiff as this Arch-Prelate; for the Biſhops of Norwich, Lincoln, Worceſter and Ely (whom in Contempt [4] Matt. Weſtminſter calls Shaveling Court-Prelates) prefer'd the King's favour before that of the Pope's, as

Ibm.

The Archbiſhop notwithſtanding denounces Sentence of Excommunication againſt all thoſe who ſhould give the King any Aid.

[4] M.W.&C.W.H.

did

Yet however divers of them Compound with the King's Officers, and pay a 5th part of their Eſtates. Whereupon they obtain the King's Writ of Protection.

* Vid. Dr. B's. Append. N. 19. where it is Printed at large.

did likewiſe ſeveral of the Inferior Clergy, who were content to compound, and pay a Fifth Part of their Eſtates to the King's Sheriffs, as was demanded; by which means they enjoyed all the reſt of their Revenues and Eſtates in Quiet: So likewiſe the Archbiſhop of York, with all his Dioceſs, as alſo the Biſhops of Durham and Carliſle, having deep Apprehenſions of the King's Diſpleaſure, ſoon complied with his Demands, and by the Payment of a Fifth part of their Benefices and other Goods, for the Defence of the Kingdom againſt Foreign Enemies, obtain'd the King's Writ of Protection for themſelves and their Churches, Tenants, Lands and Goods whatever, which (as thereby appears) were to be protected and defended from all Injury, Trouble and Damage, until the Feaſt of All-Saints next. * This Writ bears Date at Walſingham the Sixth of February, in the Five and twentieth Year of his Reign, and under his Privy Seal, and on the Eighteenth of the ſame Month paſſed the Great Seal by Warrant from the King.

Rot. Clauſ.* 24. Ed. I. from M. 22. to M. 26. Of which ſort a great many were granted.

† Append. N. 19. 20. 21.

We find alſo many other Protections of the like nature entred upon the * Roll of this Year, which were granted to divers Clerks of the Province of Canterbury, upon their Submiſſion to the King, being to the Number of above a Hundred and twenty. Beſides theſe Writs of Security and Protection to ſuch whoſe Lands were not ſeized, nor Goods taken, He alſo granted Writs of Reſtitution to thoſe, whoſe Lands and Goods had been ſeized upon their Non-Compliance with the Royal Demands: Of each of theſe † Dr. Brady hath given us divers Examples in his Appendix, Collected from the Records in the Tower, which thoſe that are curious in ſuch matters may conſult if they pleaſe.

* MS. in Bib. Cotton. The Deſign of their Writs, which ended in a Compoſition with the Clergy.

But the * Chronicle of Norwich, as well as the following Writs, inform us, That in perſuance of the King's Propoſals of Compounding for a Sum of ready Money with ſuch of the Clergy as were willing to comply with his Demands, certain Commiſſioners were appointed to go through all England, and to cite all Biſhops, Abbots, Priors and other Clergymen before them, and to let them know, on the King's behalf, that if they would, they might redeem their Eſtates out of his Hands for a reaſonable Compoſition, and thereby receive his Gracious Protection, provided they laid hold of this Offer before Eaſter following: Yet this had not (ſays my Author) much effect upon the greater or richer ſort of Clergymen of the Province of Canterbury, and particularly in Norfolk, where though many appear'd before the Commiſſioners, yet few Compounded and took out Protections, as they expected they would; ſo that the King, being inform'd of their Obſtinacy, iſſued out his Writs to the Sheriffs immediately to ſell the Goods of all ſuch Clergymen, who, having Benefices to the value of Forty Shillings per Ann. had not Compounded with his Commiſſioners, and taken out Writs of Protection: But this, though mention'd here, was not put in Execution until after Eaſter, when the time was elapſed wherein the King had allowed them to make their Compoſition.

The King grants Commiſſions to take Recognizances of ſuch Clergymen as had not ready Money.

And as for ſuch Clergymen as were willing to Compound, and had not ready Money to pay down, He gave Commiſſions to the Sheriffs and others, to take Recognizances of them for the ſeveral Sums which they had engaged to pay. Divers Inſtances of this Kind, with the manner of the Commiſſioners Proceedings upon them, are ſtill extant on

Anno Dom.
MCCXCVII.

the Rolls in the Tower; of which theſe following may ſerve for a fficient Proof.

The firſt of them is a * Writ or Commiſſion to Adam de Wells, and the Sheriff of Lincoln, reciting, That whereas He had conceived iſpleaſure and Indignation againſt ſome Clerks of Holy Church, re-ſing to give an Aid for Defence of the Realm, &c. yet being willing ow to do them a favour, He therefore Aſſigns him the ſaid Adam and e Sheriff, or One of them, to receive in his Name Recognizances om all Prelates and others of Holy Church, whomſoever, in the County foreſaid, according to their Eſtates, that will have his Protection in the orm that is ſent and enjoined by Him; and to certify to the Chancel-or the Names of thoſe that had made ſuch Recognizances, provided they ere made between this and Eaſter next. This bears Date at Cla-endon the Firſt of March, in the Five and twentieth Year of his eign.

* Rot. Pat. 25. Ed. I. p. 1. M. 12. Dr. B's. Ap. N. 22.

There is likewiſe a Second Writ or Commiſſion, directed to the ſame erſons, of the ſame Date, for the Apprehenſion and Impriſonment of nventers and Diſperſers of Falſe News, and Publiſhers of the Sentence f Excommunication againſt the King's Miniſters and Subjects, for exe-uting his Commands for the Profit of his Realm, or againſt Perſons f Holy-Church that have put themſelves under his Protection to ſave hemſelves and their Churches.

Another Writ to apprehend the Diſperſers of falſe News, and the Publiſhers of the late Sentence of Excommunication.

The like Writs were directed to ſeveral Knights-Bannerets and heriffs of † divers other Counties within the Province of Canterbury, s alſo to thoſe of the Counties of Lancaſter and Cheſter, within the Province of York; and alſo for North and Weſt-Wales, whoſe Names are eedleſs to be here recited.

† Vid. the particular Counties in Dr. B's. Contin. p. 47.

And with theſe Warrants or Commiſſions, there were likewiſe ſent certain * Inſtructions, how they ſhould Act; the Subſtance of which is, That hey were to take ſufficient Security of Lay-men to anſwer the Sums he Clergy had engaged for; and that thoſe Clergy-men who could ot find Lay-ſureties, were to bring to the Sheriff Goods to the Value f what they were to pay, to remain with him until they had paid it.

Commiſſioners appointed to compound with the Clergy-men that ſubmitted.

* Id p. 48.

They were alſo to take of every Prelate and Parſon of a Church, or Clerk Beneficed, double the Value of the laſt Aid to the King, for that the Buſineſs and the Neceſſity is now much greater than at that time. And Laſtly, they were to cauſe to be enrolled the Sums Recognized, and every Man's Name, with the Names of the Pledges or Sureties, nd ſend the Roll to the Exchequer, that ſo the Money may be Levied: And the ſaid Bannerets and Sheriffs, ſhall give to every Clerk, that hall have entred into Recognizance as aforeſaid, a Certificate under their Seals to the Chancellor, that ſo he may obtain the King's Protection.

Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners and Sheriffs, how much they were to take of every Clergy-man that Compounded.

Then follows a Commiſſion to the Coroners of each County, to Swear the ſaid Commiſſioners; the Form of which (being extant on the Roll) need not be here recited.

Vid. Dr. Brady's Hiſtory ib.

A Commiſſion to Swear theſe Commiſſioners, with the Oath they were to take.

That theſe Commiſſioners and Sheriffs Acted according to their Commiſſions and Inſtructions, appears by ſeveral of the Original Recognizances and Certificates, with the Seals annexed to them, yet remaining amongſt the Records in the Tower; upon which the Eccleſiaſticks and Clerks, had Protections granted them, and Writs for the Reſtitution of their Temporalities, Goods and Chattles: The Certificates were in divers Forms,

The Return of the Recognizances, ſtill extant on Record.

directed

Ann. Dom. MCCXCVII.

* Contin. of Hiſt. of Eng. p 49.

directed to the King's Chancellor, of which *Dr. Brady hath given u ſeveral Examples, as alſo of the Sum that was paid; to him therefor I refer the Reader, if he be curious after ſuch Niceties, which I omit as thinking them not very pertinent to our Hiſtory, ſince the only of I know can be made of them, is, to ſhew us the King's illegal Proceedings, firſt in putting the Clergy out of his Protection, and then making them pay Money to re-obtain it.

[4] W. H. C. Cotton All the reſt who refuſed to compound, remain excluded from the King's Protection.

[5] Chron. Ch. Roſ. And the Archbiſhop himſelf has his Horſes taken, and all his Goods ſeized.

But [4] as for the reſt of the Clergy who ſtood out, and refuſed to make any Compoſition, and take out the King's Writ of Protection, they remained wholy excluded from it, and were left to be injured and abuſed by every one that met them; they had often times their Horſes taken from them on the High-way, and [5] the Archbiſhop of Canterbury himſelf, reſolving to take a Journey to Court, on purpoſe to complain of theſe Injuries, had his Horſes ſeized by the King's Officers at Maidſtone; inſomuch that he was forced to borrow Horſes to make an end of his Journey: But though he uſed what Perſwaſions he could with the King, to encline Him to be more pitiful to the Clergy, yet it was all to no purpoſe; for looking upon him as the Chief Promoter of this Oppoſition, He treated him with the ſame or rather greater Severity than He did the reſt of the Clergy; for having had all his Goods, Plate, and Cattle ſeized, he was forced to diſmiſs his Family; and even his own Monaſtery of Chriſt-Church was forbid to receive Him; ſo that he was fain to board himſelf, attended by one Chaplain and Servant, with an ordinary Pariſh-Prieſt of his Dioceſs.

[1] C. Nor. The Monks of Canterbury debar'd of their Victuals.

And [1] for the Poor Monks of Canterbury, they were in a worſe Condition; for the Sheriff of Kent ſhut up the Doors of their Cellars, Kitchen and other Offices, ſo that having nothing to ſubſiſt of their own, they were forced to Live upon their Friends.

[2] Mezeray Hiſt.

* Confœderatio inter Regem & Comitem Flandriæ. Rot. Par. 25. Ed. I. Part. 1. M. 18.

I ſhall now return to ſome Civil Affairs, which, had it not been to break the Thrid of this Relation of the King's ſevere Proceedings with the Archbiſhop and his Clergy, ſhould have been related ſooner, ſince they happen'd at the beginning of this Year; when the King, being not at all diſcouraged with the Oppoſition of the Clergy, and firmly reſolved to carry on the War againſt France, thought fit to enter into a ſtrict Alliance Offenſive and Defenſive, with Guy Earl of Flanders, who was now highly provoked againſt the King of France, ever ſince he had been allured to Paris above a Year before, by ſeemingly very kind Letters from that King, where they were all made Priſoners; the Father and Mother were releaſed not long ſince, but the Daughter was ſtill detain'd there, with Deſign to prevent his Marrying her to Prince Edward, which would have proved very diſadvantageous to the French Intereſt; yet did not this hinder the King from proceeding in this Alliance agreed on towards the latter end of the laſt Year, but was not finiſhed untill the beginning of this, as appears by the League it ſelf, which is ſtill upon *Record in the Tower; wherein the King ſets forth by way of Preamble, and Complains, That He being a Peer of France, and in Homage to the High and Puiſſant King Philip, He had oppreſſed and uſed Him according to his own Will, contrary to Reaſon, Juſtice, and his own Deſert; and therefore becauſe He was ſo ſtrong and Powerful, as not to acknowledge any Superior, by Advice of his Prelates, Earls and Barons, He had made Alliances, and Covenants with his Friends, and particularly with the Earl of Flanders, with whom He entered into the following Articles, of which I ſhall only give you the Heads from the ſame Record in the Tower.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

The Articles between the King and the Earl of Flanders.

The Firſt and Second import, That a League Offenſive and Defenſive was now concluded between King Edward and the Earl of Flanders, and their Heirs, againſt the King of France and his Heirs and Confederates.

The Third is, That neither of thoſe Princes nor their Heirs, ſhould nake any Truce or Ceſſation of Arms with the King of France, without he Conſent of each other.

The Fourth, That the ſaid Earl might the better ſuſtain the War againſt the King of France and his Allies, King Edward granted for Him nd his Heirs, to the Earl of Flanders and his Heirs, every Year during he War, Sixty thouſand * Livres of Black Turnois or of other Current Money, at Two Payments, within the Earldom of Flanders; at every Payment Thirty thouſand Livers, the firſt to begin at Chriſtmaſs next enſuing, and the Second at the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt following.

* Four of theſe Livres made a Pound Sterling; ſo that this was after the value of 15000 l. Sterling.

The Fifth, That neither of the Princes ſhould purchaſe any Diſpenſation from the Pope, whereby the preſent Alliance might be Defeated; and if any ſuch were obtained, it ſhould not be made uſe of.

Then for the faithful Performance of this Agreement, King Edward Swore to the Earl of Flanders by his Proxies, the Lords Hugh le Deſpenſer, and Walter Beuchamp, Steward of his Houſhold; and urther agreed with the Earl of Flanders, That his Son Edward, when he was of Age, ſhould agree to and confirm this Form of Alliance and Confederacy; which was Dated at Ipſwich, and Sealed with his Seal on he Morrow of Epiphany, or the Seventh of January, in the Twenty fifth Year of his Reign.

Note, this was, according to our Account, beginning the Year at Chriſtmaſs, A. D. 1297. but 96, according to this Record, which does not begin the Year until our Lady-day; and I ſuppoſe this was Seal'd at Ipſwich, becauſe the King accompanied his new Son in Law and Daughter to the Sea-ſide.

Moreover, there were other more private Additional Articles granted y another Inſtrument of the ſame Date, (and entred on the ſame Roll) n which, beſides the Annual Payments already mentioned, King Edward vas alſo to give the ſaid Earl Three hundred thouſand Livres Tornois f the ſame Species with the former, which were to be paid at Three iſtinct Payments, according to the times therein limited and agreed on; which not being now material, need not to be ſet down.

Ibidem.

It * was alſo further agreed, That Edward, the King's eldeſt Son, ſo oon as he came of Age, ſhould Marry Philippe, Daughter to the Earl of landers, if the Match was not hindred by her Death, or any other ccaſion that might happen; but if ſo, then he ſhould Marry his other Daughter Iſabel: Neither was the King or any other to hinder it, or rocure any Abſolution of the Pope to the contrary. This is alſo Dated t the ſame Place, on the ſame day and Year as the former, and was ikewiſe ſworn to by the ſame Procurators abovementioned; becauſe, as the Record ſays, it was not uſual for Us (i. e. the King's of England) to wear in Our own Perſons; and therefore the ſaid * Lord Beauchamp to wear on his behalf. But it appears by the ſame Record, that theſe Oaths were

* Ibidem.

A further Agreement that Prince Edward ſhould Marry the Earl's Daughter.

* Monſieur in the French Original.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

were taken at Walſingham in Norfolk on Candlemaſs-Day, in the Chapel of our Lady (as ſhe was then called) of that Place, to whoſe Image the King had taken a Pilgrimage, to Implore her Protection at this difficult Conjuncture, when He had ſuch Warm Diſputes with the Clergy.

Several Biſhops appointed to Swear to theſe Articles on the King's behalf.

And it there farther appears, That Anthony Biſhop of Durham, Walter Biſhop of Cheſter, and the ſaid Hugh le Deſpencer, were alſo appointed to Swear on the King's behalf to all the Articles of the Mariage agreed upon between his Son and the Earl of Flanders his Daughter. This bears Date on the Tueſday after Candlemaſs-Day. But to return to our Engliſh Affairs.

[2] C W. H. H. K.

The King ſeizes all Mens Wooll and Leather, without paying for them.

The [2] King finding Himſelf diſappointed of any Aſſiſtance from the Laity, as well as the Clergy, was adviſed by certain Evil Counſellors to take ſeveral other Illegal Courſes to raiſe Money: One of which was to command all that had any Wooll or Leather by them, that they ſhould carry them to certain Towns near the Sea, by a Day appointed, where they ſhould receive ready Money for them by the King's Officers; but when theſe Commodities were brought thither, they Seized all the Wooll and Hides, without paying any Money for them, only gave the Owners Tallies to be paid when the King was able; nor were they contented with this, but they alſo exacted Forty Shillings upon every Sack of Wooll, as a Cuſtom, (inſtead of a Noble, which was the Antient Duty) and which they made the Owners Pay, tho' they received no Monies for their Commodities.

He alſo exacts Proviſions from each County for his Army.

The [3] King now reſolved upon his Voyage to aſſiſt the Earl of Flanders; but not having Money to Pay for Proviſions for the Victualling his Army and Navy, exacted of each County Two thouſand Quarters of Wheat, and as many of Oats, beſides large Quantities of Salted Meats of all ſorts, and that without Paying any thing for them: By which Oppreſſions the Affections of the People were then (as they always will be upon ſuch Occaſions) very much Alienated from the King, ſo that they were ready to receive any Impreſſions that ſhould be made to his Diſadvantage: And indeed theſe violent Proceedings were one main Cauſe of the great Diſcontents that appear'd in that Aſſembly, which met not long after; for the King ſome time before had * Summoned a Parliament, or rather great Council, to be held at Saliſbury on St. Matthias's Day, or 25th of February: No Writs are to be found for the Citizens and Burgeſſes; neither were any Iſſued out to the Biſhops, Abbots, and others of the Clergy; ſo this Parliament or Council was held without them, but with very indiferent Succeſs; for when the King there propoſed to his Barons, and other Military Tenants, That He intended to ſend them over to the Relief of his Forces in Gaſcoigne, they readily agreed to it, provided, That the King would go over with them in Perſon.

☞

* Rot. Pat. 25 Ed. I. M. Dorſ.

The Parliament at Saliſbury held without the Clergy, but without any good effect.

The great Men of the Kingdom refuſe to attend the King into Flanders, with a great Diſpute between Him and them.

* Col. 2493.

But Walſingham and Knyghton relate it ſomewhat otherwiſe: The former only in general, That at this Council the King asked the Great Men of the Kingdom to go over with Him into Gaſcoigne; which they refuſing to do, a great Difference aroſe between Him and them: Yet the * latter is more particular in his Relation, and ſays, That when each of the Great Men or Barons of the Kingdom began to Excuſe themſelves from this Voyage, the King grew ſo very Angry with them, that He plainly told them, They either ſhould go, or elſe He would gi

them

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

their Lands to thoſe that would: At which Words many of them being provoked, a great Difference aroſe among them. Then the Earl of Norfolk, Marſhal, and the Earl of Hereford, Conſtable, of England, excuſed themſelves, ſaying, Their Offices obliged them by their Tenure only to attend the King when He went abroad in Perſon, which they were ready to do. [4] But when the King again urged the Earl Marſhal to go without Him, he replied, Sir, I am ready to attend Your Perſon in the Front of the Army, as I am bound by Hereditary Right: To which the King reply'd, But you ſhall go with Others, and that without Me: The Earl return'd, I am not obliged to it, neither, Sir, will I go over without You: The King thereupon (being put into a violent Paſſion) broke out into theſe Words, By-God, Sir Earl, You ſhall either go or hang: To which he ſaucily replied, by the ſame Oath, Sir King, I will neither go, nor will I hang; and ſo he departed without taking any leave, and the Parliament was thereupon preſently broke up in Diſorder.

[4] Ch. Abing. C. W. H.

The Marſhal and Conſtable likewiſe refuſe it.

Whereupon the Parliament broke up in diſorder.

The Chronicle of Norwich is alſo very particular in the Account of the Tranſactions of this Parliament, wherein, it ſays, The Earl of Norfolk, Marſhal, and the Earl of Hereford, Conſtable, interpoſed themſelves, on the behalf of the Community, or General Body of the Realm; alledging, That neither they themſelves were obliged to perform their Offices at this time, nor were the King's Tenants in Capite bound by their Tenures to go over with the King, or perform any Service beyond Sea in that Expedition, for the following Reaſons.

The Reaſons of the Conſtable and Marſhal why they were not obliged to attend upon the King.

Firſt, Becauſe it ſeems to the whole Community, that the Notice given by the King's Writs for this Expedition was not ſufficient, ſince they do not aſſign any Place whither they were to go, ſo as they might know how to make due Proviſion for this Voyage.

Secondly, Becauſe it is commonly reported, That the King deſign'd to paſs over into Flanders; and if ſo, it ſeems to the whole Community, that they Owe no Service to that Country; becauſe, neither they themſelves, nor their Anceſtors or Predeceſſors, ever perform'd any Military Service there.

There were likewiſe other Reaſons then given againſt this Expedition; which ſince they relate to the late Illegal Taxes, and other Unjuſt Prizes or Takings of the Subjects Goods againſt Law, and are more largely mention'd in the Remonſtrance of their Grievances, which was ſent to the King a little before his Departure beyond Sea, I therefore forbear ſetting them down here. But notwithſtanding this ill Correſpondence between the King and theſe Great Men at this Aſſembly, it ſeems they agreed well enough how to proceed with the Clergy: For the * Anonimous Chronicle in the Bodleian Library relates, That the King, and his Barons and Knights there aſſembled, paſſed an Ordinance, That if the Clergy did not make their Peace with the King within a certain time then limited by the ſaid Barons and Knights, viz. before Eaſter, they ſhould loſe all that was already ſeiz'd by the King; and it ſhould not be Lawful for any one from thenceforth to have any common Dealings with them: Upon which, a great many of them began to make their Peace with Him.

* Inter Laud. K. 84.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

[5] H. K. Col. 2493.

The two Earls joining with other Barons, &c. raiſe Men, and hinder the King's Officers from taking the Wool and Leather in ſeveral Counties

[1] M. W.

Preſently after the breaking up of this Aſſembly, [5] the two Earls above-named having drawn over to their Party a great many of the other Earls, as well as Barons and Military Tenants, they encreaſed to the number of Fifteen hundred Horſe; ſo that the King was forced for the preſent to Diſſemble his Reſentments, and to let them alone: And when they return'd into their own Countries, they would not permit the King's Officers to take any Wool, Leather, or Provisions, contrary to Law, upon pain of their Lives. For [1] theſe Noblemen were ſo incens'd at theſe and other Oppreſſions, that they reſolved to hold a ſeparate Aſſembly or Parliament in the Foreſt of Wyre in the Marches of Wales, to conſider how to prevent thoſe Extortions.

* Contin. Hiſt. p. 55.

I have been the more particular in relating theſe Tranſactions that happened in this Great Aſſembly at Salisbury, becauſe they ſet forth the Original of the Differences between the King and thoſe Great Officers his Conſtable and Marſhal; as alſo of the Diſcontents and Grievances of the reſt of the Nobility: Dr. * Brady Erroneouſly making all theſe to have proceeded from a Treaſonable Combination between the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and thoſe Noblemen. I ſhall now return to the Hiſtory, and intermix ſome Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of great moment.

MS. Land. Anon.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury hearing of theſe ſevere Proceedings at the Council at Salisbury, went thither to the King, having firſt order'd another Convocation of the Clergy to be held upon Mid-Lent Sunday; and in the mean while publiſh'd a Sentence of Excommunication againſt all the Violators of Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, and againſt ſuch as in Contempt of the Pope's Conſtitution, ſhould ſeek to preſerve themſelves: In Oppoſition to which, the King publiſhed his Prohibition, dated Feb. 27. Upon the 7th of March the Archbiſhop came to Salisbury, and found the King at Maſs in the Cathedral: He received him with great Reſpect, and the next Day gave him a private Audience, with leave to ſay what he would. The Archbiſhop ſpake without any Interruption; and the King heard him patiently; and in Anſwer, told him, That if the Pope Himſelf, had (as the Archbiſhop) Temporal Poſſeſſions in England, He thought He might Lawfully take of them, for the Defence of his Realm and the Church of England: Adding, That this was a Cauſe in which He could dare to Die, ſince He thought He did nothing Unlawful in it, ſo great was the Neceſſity that then lay upon Himſelf and the Kingdom.

The Archbiſhop replied, That he did not ſee the Neceſſity was ſo great, as to Excuſe them from the danger of the Pope's Conſtitution, if they ſhould give his Majeſty any thing without his Licence; and then propos'd, That the Matter ſhould be laid before Him, and his Anſwer expected to it, which the King accepted of; and they thereupon agreed, That in the mean while they would on both ſides conſider what was ſafeſt to be done: But becauſe the Archbiſhop would come to no Concluſion before the Meeting of his Synod, it was farther reſolv'd, That He ſhould ſend ſome of his Council to it, to deliberate with the Prelates and Clergy what Courſe would be beſt to take. In the mean time, the Archbiſhop deſir'd the King to ſuſpend his Rigour againſt the Clergy, which He promiſed to do.

[2] M. W.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury met the Biſhops and Clergy the 26th of March in the [2] Convocation or Synod held at St. Paul's Church, to conſult what was further to be done to compoſe their late Differences with

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

with the King ; but it was all to no purpoſe ; for the Archbiſhop himſelf, and the major part of the Biſhops and Clergy, did not think it ſafe for them to grant the King any Aid without the Pope's Conſent, tho' two Lawyers, and two Fryars Preachers, came into the Aſſembly, (I ſuppoſe ſent thither by the King's Order) who argued, and endeavoured to prove, That the Clergy, in time of War, notwithſtanding the Pope's Prohibition, might lawfully Aſſiſt the King ; but it ſeems their Speeches had no Effect upon them ; ſo that the Aſſembly broke up, without coming to any other Concluſion, [3] than that the poorer ſort of the Inferiour Clergy, making great Complaints of their being like to be quite ruined, by reaſon that the King's Officers had ſeized upon all they had, the Archbiſhop and the reſt of the Biſhops conſented to connive at thoſe, who out of meer neceſſity ſhould comply with the King's Demands, and procure his Protection by Payment of a Fifth part of their Goods, according to the late Taxation of the Biſhops of Winheſter and Lincoln; which had that good effect, That moſt of the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, except it were ſome of the more Rich and Obſtinate, made their Compoſitions, and paid their Fines accordngly: But I ſuppoſe that which made them the more Compliant, was, That before the Meeting of this Aſſembly of the Clergy, the King had granted a * Commiſſion under his Great Seal to Hugh le Deſpenſer, and others of his Council, whom the ſaid Hugh ſhould think fit to nominate, who were thereby impower'd to attend the Synod on the Day of their Meeting, and ſerve them with the following Prohibition, which ſince it is very extraordinary, and the firſt of its kind, I ſhall here ſet down verbatim.

The Archbiſhop of Cant. holds another Synod to conſider what was farther to be done in this Exigency, but it breaks up without coming to any Concluſion.

[3] C. Nor. Chron. de Dunſtaple.

The King ſends the Synod a Prohibition.

* Rot. Pat. 25 E I. P. 1 M. 9.

[4] EDward, By the Grace of God, King of England, &c. To the Honourable Fathers in God, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Prelates, and to all thoſe of the Clergy, who at Mid-Lent next coming, are to meet at London, Greeting : We forbid you all, and every one of you, upon as much as you can forfeit to Us, That you, or any of you, do Ordain, or Cauſe to be Ordain'd, or Aſſent to any Ordinance in that Aſſembly, that may turn to the Prejudice, or Grievance of Us, or any of Our Miniſters, or thoſe that are in Our Peace, or Allegiance, and in Our Protection, or Adherents, or any of them. Given at Stirmiſter, the 21ſt Day of March, in the 25th Year of Our Reign.

[4] Ibidem. Vid. Dr. Brady's Appendix, N. 23.

The Form of it very extraordinary.

And [5] they were alſo at the ſame time forbidden to publiſh any Sentence of Excommunication againſt the King, his Officers, or thoſe that had obtained his Protection; wherefore, the Archbiſhop, finding there was no more now to be done, diſmiſſed the Synod with this dubious Sentence, Salvet unuſquiſque animam ſuam : Let every Man ſave his own Soul.

[5] M. W.

They are alſo forbidden to publiſh any Sentence of Excommunication.

Alſo about this time, after the breaking up of this Synod, the King, to ſhew his particular Devotion to Edward the Confeſſor, offered to the Crown, Scepter, and Throne, of the late King of Scotland, at that Saint's Shrine.

Not long after which, being on Progreſs into the Weſt of England, to view the Sea Coaſts, and to haſten his Naval Preparations, the King began now to remit his former Severity : For there hearing that great numbers of Rectors, Vicars, Prieſts and Clerks, had been lately impriſoned for Publiſhing the Archbiſhop's Sentence of Excommunication notwithſtanding the King's Prohibition to the contrary, as alſo for ſeveral other Miſdemeanors againſt Him; He iſſued divers † Writs, ſtill upon Record, directed to the Sheriffs of the ſeveral Counties of Devonſhire and Cornwall, commanding them to ſet at Liberty thoſe Prieſts and Chaplains therein named, for Publiſhing the Pope's Letter or Bull (containing the Sentence abovementioned.) Theſe Writs bear Date at Plimpton in Devonſhire the Five and twentieth of April; from whence it ſeems it appears, that the King began to grow weary of his Severity to the Clergy, and was willing to ſhew them ſome Favour.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCVII.

The King iſſues out Writs to ſet thoſe Prieſts at Liberty that had been impriſoned for Publiſhing the Sentence of Excommunication.

† Rot. Clauſ. 25 E. I. M. 18. 19.

* Ch. 25 E. I. M. 18. de Servitio & Navibus de Haſtings, Vid. Dr. B's. Ap. N 26.

He alſo iſſued out his Writs to the Cinque-Ports to provide the Service due to him.

But it is time to ſpeak of Matters of greater Moment. Whilſt the King continued at the Place laſt mentioned, being now reſolved to undertake his Voyage to Fland rs with all poſſible Expedition, He directed his * Writs or Warants to the Barons and Good Men of his Ports of Haſtings, Feverſham, Sandwich, Hithe, Wincehelſey, Romenhale, Dover and Rye; commanding them to have the whole Service of their ſeveral Ports that was due to Him, ready Armed and Equipped at Winchelſea, on the morrow of St. John the Baptiſt next coming, to go whither He ſhould Command them; and He required them further, That beſides their Service they ſhould fit out and arm all other Ships of Forty Tun Burthen or above, to be ready at the ſame Day and Place, to go with their other Ships into his Service; but that He would not hav this to be drawn into Example for the future.

† Rot. Clauſ. 25. Ed. I. M. 19. Dorſ.

As alſo to the Bayliffs and Inhabitants of other Ports, to ſet out Ships.

* Ibm. M. 19. 20.

On the ſame Day, and at the ſame Place, He directs his † Warants to the Bayliffs and Good Men of Yarmouth, and to the Mayors and Bayliffs of all Ports in England, the Occaſion being extraordinary, to arm and ſet out all the Ships (of Forty Tuns and above) of their ſeveral Ports, ſo as they might be at Winchelſea on the morrow of St. John Baptiſt.

The King alſo at the ſame time ſent out his Warants and Orders of the ſame Date to the Warden of the Cinque-Ports, and the Sheriffs of all Counties in which there were Sea-Ports, to repair to them, and take care the Ships ſhould be Armed and Equipped and ready at Winchelſea, at the time He had Commanded.

Theſe Records, though of no great Importance in themſelves, yet may be of ſome uſe to ſhew the Antiquity of the King's Prerogative, in requiring the Inhabitants of the Cinque-Ports, and other great Sea-Ports of England, to ſet out ſo many Ships of War upon any Invaſion or great and neceſſary Expedition abroad, yet without making it an Example for the future; but can by no means be a Precedent for what it was long after made uſe of, to make out the King's Prerogative to levy Ship-Money all over England.

* Rot. Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. 17. in Chedul.

All the Sheriffs of England are wrote to, to warn the Tenants in Capite to attend the King into Flanders.

* And ſince He alſo reſolved to raiſe a powerful Army to attend Him in this Expedition, * He wrote to all the Sheriffs of England, and to Reginald de Grey, Juſtitiary of Cheſter, to give notice to all thoſe in their ſeveral Bayliwicks or Counties, that had twenty Pounds per Annum or above, as well within Liberties as without, whether they held of Him in Capite or not, to provide themſelves with Horſe and Arms, and to be ready to go with his own Royal Perſon for the Defence of themſelves

hemſelves and the whole Kingdom, whenſoever He ſhould ſend for hem. This is likewiſe dated at Plympton.

Ann. Dom.
MCCXCVII.

And ten days after this, the King being now upon His Return out f the Weſt, He reinforced his former Warant by another * Writ, directed o the ſame Parties as the former; commanding them to Summon the id Military Tenants, as are mentioned in the former Writs, to be with Him at London, provided with Horſe and Arms as they ought to be, ight days after St. John Baptiſt, to paſs in Perſon beyond Sea, &c. This bears Date at Loders in Dorſetſhire the Fifteenth of May.

* Rot. Cl. 25. E. I. M. 15. Vid. Dr. B's. Ap. N. 27.

He likewiſe at the ſame time directed his † Precepts to the ſame Perſons, to Summon the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, and ther Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and alſo Widows, and other Women, within their Counties, that held of Him in Capite by Military Service, r Serjeanty, or of Wards in his Hands, or Tuition, to be at the ame time and Place, with their whole Service of Horſe and Arms, o paſs as aboveſaid.

† Ibm.
All Eccleſiaſtical Tenants are likewiſe Summoned.

The like * Writs He alſo ſent to Edmund Earl of Cornwall, and to Roger de Bigod, Earl of Norfolk and Marſhal of England; and to all ther Perſons therein named, being about an hundred and twenty wo, all Tenants in Capite.

* Ibm.
Writs of Summons ſent to all the great Tenants in Capite.
As alſo to all others of inferior degree.

But beſides theſe Writs laſt mentioned, the King alſo reinforced his ormer Writs to the Sheriffs of England, and Juſtitiary of Cheſter, commanding them to execute his former Writs of Summons, and to certify nder their Seals the Names of all ſuch as had Twenty Pounds per Annum, or above, of whomſoever they held it, in their ſeveral Bayliwicks r Counties. This bears Date at Portſmouth the Twenty-fourth of May, when the King reſolved to paſs over into Flanders.

Notwithſtanding all this Care, moſt of the Noble and Military Men of England did not obey this Summons; but the King was forced to put off his Expedition for ſome time longer, by reaſon of a great Rebellion of the Scots, which began in May on this Occaſion. [1] Hugh de Creſſingham, a Clergyman, having been appointed the King's Treaſurer in Scotland, executed his Office with great Pride and Covetouſneſs, o that he became extreamly hated by the People; to whom we muſt lſo joyn William de Ormesby, the King's Juſtitiary there, that had ealt very ſeverely with the Scots, Out-lawing and Baniſhing all thoſe who had refuſed to Swear Fealty to King Edward; which provoked hem to that degree, That theſe Out-laws, being now become very Numerous, conſpired together, and choſe one William Wallys their Captain; who (having been Out-law'd for killing an Engliſh Man) was a Man of great perſonal Courage, and excited them to take up Arms, as they immediately did; and falling upon the Engliſh on the ſudden, killed all they met without diſtinction, and drove the King's uſtitiary and other Officers out of the Kingdom. But that which gave the Scots better Opportunity to execute their Malice, was, That [2] the Earl of Surrey, whom the King had left his Lieutenant there, ot finding the Air of Scotland to agree with him, was then retired into the North-parts of England for his health, without leaving a ſufficient Force behind him to keep that Nation in Subjection; ſo that before ny Army could be raiſed, and ſent againſt them, divers of the Biſhops and Noblemen ſiding with Wallys, had formed themſelves into a Body, and

[1] H. K. Col. 2513.
The Expedition put off; by reaſon of a Rebellion of the Scots, with the occaſion of it.

The Scots under the Conduct of Wallys give the Engliſh a gre Defeat.

[2] C. W. H.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

and carried all before them, unleſs ſome Gariſons which were ſtill held out by the Engliſh.

[3] H. K. Col. 2515. The King orders the Earl of Surrey to march againſt the Scots.

So [3] ſoon as the King had notice of this Rebellion, He was much ſurpriſed at it; but becauſe He was now engaged to go over in Perſon to aſſiſt the Earl of Flanders, He immediately Commanded the Earl of Surrey, his Lieutenant, to raiſe the Militia on the North of Trent, and therewith to march into Scotland, to reduce that Country to his Obedience.

[4] Id. Ib. T. W. Upon his Approach the Scotiſh Commanders ſeem deſirous of a Treaty.

Then [4] the Earl having raiſed a ſufficient Force in the North parts (being himſelf not yet very well in health) he ſent his Nephew the Lord Henry Piercy before him into Scotland, who marching with his Army as far as Aire, heard the Scots were encamped at Irewin, about four Miles off, under the Command of the Biſhop of Glaſco, with the Lord Steward of Scotland, William Douglas, Andrew Murrey, and William Wallys, the Chief Promoter of this War. Theſe finding themſelves inferior in Forces to the Engliſh, began to be afraid, and ſeemed deſirous to make Peace with them, upon condition they might have their Lives, Limbs and Eſtates ſecured to them, and that all things might be pardoned and forgot; which Conditions appeared ſo reaſonable, that the Lord Piercy eaſily agreed to them; and the Articles being put into Writing, were ſent to the King to be confirm'd; and He being deſirous to ſee an end of this troubleſome Affair, that his Voyage in Flanders might not be retarded, confirmed them accordingly.

The Articles of Peace drawn.

[5] Ibid. William Wallys defies the Earl of Surrey.

Then [5] the Earl of Surrey went preſently into Scotland, to ſee theſe things put in execution; which however the Scots never meant to perform. For though they were to give Hoſtages for their future Obedience, yet they ſtill defer'd it until William Wallys with his Scotiſh Men had marched off from this dangerous Paſs; and taking Advantage of the Earl of Surrey's Remiſsneſs, reinforced their Army, and then bidding the Engliſh General Defiance, renewed the War, and refuſed to lay down their Arms until all their Antient Laws, Cuſtoms and Privileges ſhould be confirmed to them by the King; inſomuch that the Biſhop of Glaſco and the Lord William Douglaſs being aſhamed of theſe Delays, leſt they might be thought Traytors in joyning with their Country-men, yielded themſelves Priſoners to the Earl of Surrey. ✗

[1] H. K. ib. Wallys Plunders the Biſhop of Glaſco's Houſe.

The Scots [1] thus making frivolous Excuſes and Delays, trifled away the time until the latter end of the Summer; when Wallys, to be revenged on the Biſhop of Glaſco for leaving him, fell upon the Biſhop's houſe and plundered it of all the Goods, and carried away his Family Priſoners. But for the reſt of Wallys's Actions, I ſhall ſpeak more of in due time.

The different Accounts of Hiſtorians concerning this Wallys.

I muſt here obſerve the great Partiality of the Engliſh, as well as the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, in their Accounts of theſe Tranſactions; the former making this Wallys no better than a common Thief, or High-way-man, whereas the other repreſent him (as he really was) a Man of Quality, Son to a Knight of the ſame Name, who being of a Publick Spirit, reſolved to lay hold on the firſt Opportunity to reſtore his Country-men to their Antient Liberties; and to this end excited and joyned with the Noblemen of Scotland to take up Arms, as hath been already related: So likewiſe the Scotiſh Hiſtorians conceal their Countrymen's ſubmitting themſelves as I have mentioned before; and
on

✗ And not only these two, but also Robert Bruce Earl of Carrick (who some Years after made himself King of Scotland) together with Steward, or Seneschal of Scotland & John his Brother, as also Sr. William Douglas above mentioned came in and submitted themselves to Sir Henry Piercy & Sir Robert Clifford, chief Commanders of the Kings Army in Scotland, as appears by the original Instrument of their Submission being in French under their Seals, bearing Date the 9th Day of July this year, & is preserved in the Exchequer vid: R–'s Coll: p. 774. where you will also find an Obligation of the Bishop of Glascow and James Stuart who became bound for their Lord Robert Bruce, till he should give his Daughter Margaret as Hostage for his Fidelity:

And not long after the Earl of Atholl and divers other Noblemen of Scotland were deliver'd out of Prison, upon several Bishops, Earls and great Men of England undertaking on their Behalf, that they should go over with the King & serve him against the King of France as appears by the Instrument it self entred on the Rolls. vid: R–'s Coll: p. 775.

on the other hand the Engliſh give but a ſlight Account of the great Defeats they then received. But to return to England.

Anno Dom MCCXCVII

[2] John Everſden relates, That the King, on the Octaves of St. John Baptiſt, held a Parliament at Lincoln; where the former Differences between Him and the Earls and Barons were again renewed: But that muſt needs be a miſtake; for it appears by certain * Writs, dated at London the 24th of May, That the King Summoned all the Military Tenants of England to meet Him there the Sunday after the Octaves of St. John Baptiſt, which is almoſt the very time when this Parliament muſt have met at Lincoln; and therefore all that this Author mentions concerning this Parliament is a Miſtake; and indeed he is the only one that ſays any thing concerning this Meeting: But this is certain, That on the Octaves aforeſaid, or Eighth of July, the greateſt part of the Militia or Tenants in Capite of England met the King at London according to His Summons, in order to attend Him into Flanders. In this Aſſembly of Military Tenants, the Earl of Norfolk, then Marſhal, and the Earl of Hereford, Conſtable, being required to do their Duties in muſtering the Army, excuſed themſelves, and requeſted Him to appoint ſome others of his Houſhold to do that Service, and ſo retired to their reſpective Dwellings: But of this Tranſaction you will have a more particular Account in that Declaration, which the King not long after iſſued concerning it; but He was not for all that diſcouraged from his intended Expedition, but on the Five and twentieth of July * wrote again to all his Sea-Ports, to ſend their Ships to Winchelſea with all the ſpeed they could.

[2] C. I. E. ad hunc An.

The King is ſaid to have held a Parliament at Lincoln; but it is a miſtake.

* Printed in Dr. B's. Append. N. 27, 28.

M. W.

The King meets the Militia of England, when the Conſtable and Marſhal refuſe to muſter them.

* Rot. Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. 9. Dorſ.

The King being thus at Variance with theſe Two Great Officers of the Kingdom, it no doubt made Him the more deſirous, before He went away, to be reconciled to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; wherefore He now wrote to all Sheriffs of Counties in a * Writ for that purpoſe, to reſtore to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops all their Lay-Fees, with the Goods and Chattels found upon them, and in Particular to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury all his Lay-Fees, together with his Oxen, Carts, or Waggons, and all other his Goods and Chattels, being in the ſame State they were then in when they were ſeized. This bears Date at Weſtminſter, the Eleventh of July.

The King deſires to be reconcil'd to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops.

* Rot. Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. 21. pro Arch. Cant. de Laic. Feod. reſtituend. Vid. Dr. B's. Append. N. 29.

And iſſues out a Writ to reſtore their Goods.

And that He might extend his further Favour to all the reſt of the Clergy, that had ſubmitted and were reconciled, He not long after gave a General * Protection to all thoſe that had not received it before, and wrote to the Sheriffs of London, and others, ſetting forth, That at the Requeſt and Prayer of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and other Biſhops and Prelates of his Kingdom on behalf of the Clergy, they ſhould maintain and defend all the Clergy in their Bailiwicks, their Tenants, Lands, Goods, Rents, and all other their Poſſeſſions, not permitting them to receive any Injury or Moleſtation, in their Perſons or otherwiſe, though they had not actually taken out his Letters of Protection. Witneſs the King at St. Pauls, London, the Thirty firſt of July.

* Rot. Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. 9. Vid. Dr. B's. Append. N. 30.

He further Grants a General Protection to all the reſt of the Clergy.

The Reaſon of theſe his Proceedings was (as Walter Hemingford's Manuſcript Chronicle, and Henry de Knyghton expreſly tell us) becauſe ſeveral of the Great Men of England being now met at London, in order to go over with the King, ſome of them ſeemed not well ſatisfied, but plainly told Him, that it would not be convenient for Him to go over, until He had firſt reconcil'd Himſelf to his Spiritual Father the

The reaſon of theſe Proceedings.

Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and his Other Great Men, who had lately oppos'd Him; whereupon the King coming more to Himſelf, and ſeeing that this was a juſt Requeſt, and according to Reaſon, He immediately ſent for the Archbiſhop, and laying aſide all former Reſentments, received him again into Favour, committing the Prince his Son to his Care and Conduct, the Lord Reginald de Gray being joined with him, to be his Chief Councellors during the King's Abſence.

Ad hunc An.

The King asks Pardon of the People for what He had done contrary to Law; with his Speech before his Departure.

This is alſo confirm'd by Matt. Weſtminſter, who relates this matter more at large, viz. That the ſaid Archbiſhop having about the beginning of July recover'd the King's Favour, and having his Temporalties reſtor'd, accompanied Him to the Great Hall of the Pallace of Weſtminſter; where before the Prince his Son, the Archbiſhop, and the Earl of Warwick, He asked Pardon of all the People that ſtood round about Him, with Tears, Saying, That He had Govern'd them, not ſo well as became their King: And for that part of their Eſtates, which they had either given Him, or which his Miniſters had extorted from them, He had only taken it to this end, that they quietly enjoying the Reſidue, He might more Powerfully ſubdue all thoſe that thirſted after the Blood of the Engliſh: Further adding theſe Words; Behold, I am ready to expoſe my Perſon for your ſakes; and I only deſire that in my Abſence you would look upon Me as if I were preſent, and if I return, I will reſtore whatever has been taken away; but if I do never come back again, you may Crown My Son King. Upon this the Archbiſhop burſting out into Tears, engaged for the King, That all theſe Things ſhould be faithfully perform'd; and all the People there preſent holding up their hands, vowed their Fidelity to Him: In which Point the former Author is more exact, and ſays, That all the Great Men, and People there preſent, promiſed an entire Fidelity to Him and his Son; and then the King took his Leave of them, and deſired their Prayers. Whereupon ſome Prayed for Him, whilſt others curſed Him in their Hearts (as my Author truly obſerves) and which is very natural when the People are under an Apprehenſion that the Princes deal not ſincerely, but comply meerly to ſerve a preſent Turn.

T. W. ad An. 1298.

The King being thus reconciled to the Archbiſhop on the laſt day of July, and having received all the reſt of rhe Clergy into his Protection, on the firſt of Auguſt held a Great Council or Parliament (as Walſingham calls it) at London; but what was done there ſeems not of any great Conſequence; only our Author ſays, That He again openly received the Archbiſhop into Favour, and then Commanded all the Great or Noble Men there preſent, to ſwear Fealty to Prince Edward his Son, and to recognize him for right Heir of the Kingdom. The King alſo there again excus'd Himſelf for his late illegal Exactions, imputing them to the Neceſſities of the preſent War. Our Author alſo makes the Two Earls, the Conſtable and Marſhal, to have before withdrawn themſelves from this Aſſembly, refuſing to attend Him into Flanders. But notwithſtanding that Walſingham calls this Meeting a Parliament, yet it was certainly no more then a Great Council of his Earls and Barons; for there are no Writs of Summons to be found on the Rolls for any Parliament at this time, and indeed it was needleſs, for it appears by the ſame *Rolls, that the King's Son held a Parliament on the Morrow after Michaelmaſs-day following.

---

* Rot. Clauſ. 25. Ed. I. M. 6. Dorſ.

It is time now to intermix ſome Eccleſiaſtical Affairs with ſo much of Military and Civil; and therefore I ſhall obſerve, That though the King's preſent Uſage of the Clergy was very favourable, yet it did not meet with a ſuitable Return; for at the Feaſt of St. Laurence, or Tenth of Auguſt, the Archbiſhop held another Synod of all the Clergy at London, to treat again about granting the King an Aid, which He had ſo often required of them; but He now met with no better an Anſwer than before, they ſtill alledging, That they durſt not do it without the Pope's Licence, which the King had not yet obtained, nor deſir'd, as I can find; and they were ſo far imbolden'd (I ſuppoſe by the late Differences between the King and the Marſhal and Conſtable) that they ordered the Sentence of Excommunication to be publiſhed in all Cathedrals and other Places of Note, againſt all ſuch as had taken any Goods belonging to Clergymen; and further declared, That whatever Prelate or Eccleſiaſtical Perſon ſhould contribute any thing to a Layman by way of Talliage, or under any other Name or Title, ſhould be liable to all the Penalties in the Pope's late Bull.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

I E. C. N. The Archbiſhop holds a Synod at London, about granting the King an Aid, but is again refuſed.

[5] Then at the breaking up of this Aſſembly, the Archbiſhop, Biſhops, and the reſt of the Clergy deputed the Biſhops of Exeter and Rocheſter to wait on the King, to propoſe certain Articles to Him, on their and the Clergy's behalf.

[5] Id. ib. The Archbiſhop and Biſhops depute ſome to go to the King, and propoſe ſome Articles on the Clergy's behalf; with his Anſwers to them.

The Firſt was to excuſe themſelves, that they could not now grant Him any Aid out of their Revenues. To this the King Anſwered, That ſince they either could not, or would not do it, He had been forced (being in ſuch great Straits for Money) to take ſome of their Goods by his Royal Authority; yet it ſhould be done with that Moderation, as that they ſhould have no cauſe to complain of Oppreſſion.

The Second Requeſt was, That He would give them leave to ſend to the Pope for his Licence to grant his Majeſty an Aid. But this the King did not approve of at that time.

The Third was, That He would give them leave to publiſh the late Sentence of Excommunication againſt all Invaders or Takers of Eccleſiaſtical Goods. This the King expreſly forbad them to do, at their Peril; and before they went away, cauſed his Letters of Prohibition to be delivered to the Biſhops there preſent, and ordered the like to be ſent to the Archbiſhop and the reſt of them that were abſent; but theſe not being then ſent, I ſhall give you a further Account of them hereafter.

[1] The King having given them theſe Anſwers with great mildneſs, took his Leave of them, and began his Journey towards the Sea-ſide: But notwithſtanding the King's Prohibition, the Archbiſhop did not forbear to denounce the abovementioned Sentence of Excommunication in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury; yet with an exception to the King and his Sons: But however this did not allay his Reſentments againſt this Proceeding, eſpecially at ſo unſeaſonable a Time.

[1] Id. ib. The Archbiſhop renews the Sentence of Excommunication.

[2] x Then the King having left London, went to Winchelſea, there to take Shipping for Flanders; but the Earls of Norfolk and ~~Suffolk~~ did not go to take their Leaves of His Majeſty, but abſented themſelves with those x note that before his departure he offred the Chair in which the King of Scotland were crowned together with the Crown of Scot and scep[illegible] at the Shrine of St Edward the Confessor in the Abbey church of Westminster where the Chair is to be seen at this day. this the extracts out of william de Rishangers [illegible] this in Leylands collectan vol. II. p 460.

[2] M. W. H. K. Col. 2511. The King goes to the Sea-ſide, but the Conſtable and Marſhal do not take their Leaves of Him.

Hereford

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

The King beſtows their Offices upon others.

The Declaration thoſe Earls thereupon made.

thoſe of their Party, until their Petitions for the eaſe of their Country ſhould be redreſſed in Parliament; becauſe the King, for their not complying with his Demands, had already beſtowed the Execution of their Offices upon Others, which they took very ill; but however thoſe Earls declared, they ſought not their own Intereſt, but that of the whole Kingdom; and farther told thoſe Mediators that went between the King and them, That it was not themſelves alone, but the whole Nation which was oppreſſed above-meaſure with unjuſt Exactions and other Taxes, and that they were not dealt withall according to the Liberties of Magna Charta; but when they perceived the King's Mind unmoveable at that time, they again diſpatched other Meſſengers to Him, being then either at Winchelſea, or Odymer, a Town near it, to beſeech Him, That He would Amend and Reform certain Articles they then ſent Him; proteſting, That if He would pleaſe to correct them, and alſo confirm the Charter of Liberties, they would all be ready to follow Him, even to Death it ſelf. The Declaration being Written in the French Tongue, is here thus Tranſlated verbatim.

The ſaid Remonſtrance at large.

*In the French Remonſtrances.

[3] H. de Knighton Coll. 2511. ib. & Tho. Walſing. ad hunc An.

'Theſe [3] are the * Remonſtrances which the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, 'Abbots, Priors, Earls and Barons, with the whole Communalty of 'the Kingdom declare to our Lord the King, and humbly praying, 'That, as ſuch, He would redreſs and amend them for his Own Honour, 'and the Good of his People.

'In the firſt Place, it ſeems to the whole Communalty of the Realm, 'That the Summons which was ſent them, by the Writ of our Lord 'the King, was not ſufficient, becauſe there was no certain Place therein 'ſpecified, whereunto they were to come; for according to that, they 'were to make Proviſions, and ought likewiſe to Adviſe whether 'they were obliged to perform this Service or not; becauſe it is commonly 'reported, That our Lord the King will paſs into Flanders, and 'the whole Communalty do believe, that they ought not to perform 'any ſuch Service, for that neither They, their Predeceſſors, nor Anceſtors, 'ever did any Service in that Country; and if ſuch Service were due, 'either there or any where elſe, yet they have not Power to do it, ſince 'they are already ſo much grieved with divers Talliages, Aids and 'Seiſures, to Wit, of Corn, Oats, Malt, Woolls, Oxen, Cows and 'Salted Fleſh, without any Money paid for them, that they can ſcarce 'bear any more; and that there are many that cannot get their Livings, 'nor Till their Grounds; ſo that the whole Communalty of the Nation 'find themſelves very ſenſibly grieved that they are not Govern'd 'according to the Laws and Uſages of the Kingdom, by which their 'Anceſtors were uſed to be Govern'd, and that they have not their 'Franchiſes which they were wont to have, but are willfully diſpoſſeſſed 'of them; by reaſon of which they find themſelves intolerably 'oppreſſed.

'And farther the Clerks and Lay-Perſons feel themſelves grieved, 'becauſe they uſed to be Govern'd according to the Articles contained 'in Magna Charta, the which are now wholly ſlighted, to the great 'Damage of the People. Wherefore they pray our Lord the King, That 'He will amend theſe things, for his Own Honour, and the Benefit of 'his People.

* Beſides this, the Communalty of the Land find themſelves very much grieved at the Aſſize, or Law of Foreſts, which is not obſerved as it uſed to be; neither is the Charter of Foreſts of late obſerved, but Attachments are made at Pleaſure, contrary to Law, and otherwiſe than it ought to be.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

* Ibidem.

† Furthermore, the whole Communalty find themſelves extreamly grieved with the Cuſtom upon Wool, which is too hard, 40 s. a Sack being taken upon Wool * whole or entire, and upon Wool ready Carded Marks; ſo that the Cuſtom that is paid of the Wool of England, is near half of the value of the Land from which it ariſes.

† Ibidem.

* De lana fracta.

And becauſe the Communalty of the Land deſire the Honour and Safety of our Lord the King, as they ought, it does not ſeem good to them that He paſs over into Flanders, unleſs He could be more aſſured for Himſelf and People of the Flemings; and alſo becauſe the People of Scotland, who had already began to Rebel whilſt He was here in England, would not be afraid to do worſe when they were once aſſured that He was gone beyond Sea.

Ibm.

The [4] aforeſaid Earls having ſent theſe Petitions to the King by ſpecial Meſſengers, He received them at Odymer, being then preparing to go beyond Sea; And his Anſwer to them, was, That He had not then a full Council with Him, part of them remaining at London, and the reſt being gone already into Flanders; and without them He could not make any Satisfactory Anſwer to their Demands: And then He bid them tell thoſe that ſent them, That He ſhould have been much better pleaſed if they would have gone with Him; but ſince they would not, He deſired they would do no prejudice to Him nor his Kingdom in his Abſence; and He hoped that if by God's favour He ſhould return they would Peaceably receive Him into his Kingdom.

[4] T. W.

The Remonſtrance deliver'd to the King, with his Anſwer to it.

This Declaration is without any Date; but we may eaſily find, by the following Anſwer the King made to it, That it was but a few Days before his Departure, ſince whilſt He continued in England, He iſſued out another Declaration, which is upon Record in French, and was ſent to all Sheriffs to be publiſhed, containing the Cauſes of the Controverſy between the King and the Conſtable and Marſhal, and the Reaſons of their refuſing to do their Duty, their Withdrawing from Court, and their Denial to return when ſent to; as alſo his Appology for taking ſo many Aids from his People, contrary to Law, to this effect, viz.

*' Whereas the King always deſires the Peace, Quiet and good Eſtate of his People and Kingdom, after his Voyage which He is now making, &c. and that all Occaſion, by which the ſaid Peace and Quiet may be diſturbed, ſhall be wholy taken away; becauſe at this time there may be ſuch Reports raiſed amongſt the People, as may cauſe them to behave themſelves otherwiſe toward their Sovereign Lord than they ought, eſpecially ſince the Earl of Hereford and Earl Marſhal have lately withdrawn themſelves from Him, or for other Matters; Therefore, for that He would have the Affairs of his Realm uniform and quiet, He makes known, and would that all ſhould know the Truth of what follows.

* Rot. Pat. 25. Ed. I. P. 2. M. 7. Vid. Dr. B's. Append. N. 31. where it is Printed in French.

The King's Anſwer, containing a Narrative of all the Proceedings.

'Lately, when a great part of the Military Men of England, ſome upon Requeſt, others by Summons of the King, came to London, His Majeſty being willing to provide for their Diſcharge and the ſettling of their Expences, and

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

‘ that they might know what they were to perform, ſent to the ſaid Earls, ‘ (as Conſtable and Marſhal of England) to attend Him for that purpoſe. ‘ The Earl of Hereford came, but Monſieur John Segrave excuſed the ‘ Earl Marſhal, That by reaſon of Sickneſs he could not come, and ‘ therefore had ſent him in his ſtead: Then preſently by their Aſſent, ‘ they were ordered to make Proclamation in the City of London, That ‘ all thoſe that were come thither, either by Summons or Requeſt, ‘ ſhould on the Morrow appear before the Conſtable and Marſhal to be ‘ enrolled, in order that they might know in what manner and how ‘ many of them ſhould or would Serve the King in that Voyage beyond Sea. The ſaid Earls then told the King they would perform the ‘ Order, as they had received it in Writing; but the ſame day toward ‘ the Evening, they ſent the King a Meſſage in Writing, by Sir John ‘ Eſturmis, Knight, in this Form; For that, Dear Sir, You Commanded the ‘ Marſhal by the Conſtable, and by Order in Writing, That he ſhould cauſe it to ‘ be publiſhed in the City, that all ſuch as were come by Your Majeſty's Summons or Requeſt, ſhould be on the Morrow by one of the Clock before the Conſtable ‘ and Marſhal at St. Pauls, and that they ſhould enroll ſo many Horſe and Foot, ‘ and then inform You of it: Your ſaid Conſtable and Marſhal do now pray ‘ You to Command ſome other of Your Houſhold to do it; for that, Sir, You ‘ know well, that ſome are come upon Requeſt, and not Summons; yet if they ‘ do this they ſhould enter upon Duty, and do Service: Wherefore they pray the King to Command ſome others in their Places.

‘ Upon receipt of this Meſſage, and Counſel thus taken, the King ‘ thinking they might have done it unadviſedly, ſent Monſieur Geoffrey de ‘ Geneville, Monſieur Thomas de Berkley, Monſieur John Tregoz, Conſtable ‘ of the Tower, and Guardian of London, Roger Brabazon, and Monſieur ‘ William de Bereſford, to Adviſe them better, and that they might ſo ‘ order things, as ſhould not turn to the prejudice of the King ‘ nor of their own Eſtate; and if they would not be otherwiſe adviſed, ‘ that then they ſhould ask them, If they would avow the Letter ſent, ‘ and the Words contained in it: Which they owning, the King, being ‘ acquainted with it, and adviſing with his Council, put in the Place ‘ of the Earl of Hereford, Conſtable, Monſieur Thomas de Berkley; and ‘ in the Place of the Earl Marſhal, Monſieur Geoffrey de Geneville, as they ‘ deſired: Whereupon they withdrew themſelves from the King and ‘ Court; and ſoon after the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and many other ‘ Biſhops, came to the King, beſeeching Him, that they might ſpeak ‘ with the Earls, which the King conſented to; whereupon they ſent to ‘ them to know, where they might come and ſpeak with them; in Return to which Meſſage, they let them know by Letters, That they ‘ ſhould be at Waltham the Friday on the Morrow of St. James: Accordingly they went thither; but the Earls came not, but ſent ‘ Monſieur Robert Fitz-Roger and Monſieur John de Segrave, Knights, who ‘ ſaid, the Earls could not then come, for ſome Reaſons: On Sunday ‘ following, the Biſhops and Two Knights came to the King at St. Alban's; and at their Requeſts the Knights had Letters of Safe-Conduct ‘ given them for the Earls to come to ſtay with and return from the ‘ King; yet they never came, and now 'tis given out, That the Earls ‘ offered to the King certain Articles for the common Profit of the ‘ People, and that He utterly refuſed them: Of which the King knows ‘ nothing; for they never propounded, nor cauſed to be propounded, any thing to Him, nor doth He know why they are retired; amongſt which Articles, 'tis reported, there were certain Grievances, which the King underſtands well, as the Aids that He often demanded of the People, by reaſon of his Wars in Gaſcoigne, Wales, Scotland, and other Places, which could not be maintain'd, or his Kingdom defended, without the Aſſiſtance of his People; whereof He thinks often, that He ſhould ſo much grieve and burthen them, and Prays they would have Him excuſed; and if it pleaſe God, to give Him leave to return from his Voyage, He would have all Men know, That according to his great Deſire, and the Will of God, and to the Satisfaction of his People, He will amend all things whatever, as He ought; and if He doth not return, He will order his Heir to do it as well as if He had Return'd Himſelf: For He knows well, that no Man is ſo much bound to the Kingdom, or to love the People, as He Himſelf.

‘ thing

Anno Dom.
MCCXCVII.

'But that on the other ſide there is great Neceſſity for his going to Aſſiſt his Allie the Earl of Flanders; and his going over is of that immediate Conſequence, by reaſon of the Danger his Friends beyond Sea are in, That if He ſhould loſe them, the Kingdom might be in great Jeopardy: And therefore they (the People) ſhould have a Confirmation of the Great Charter of the Liberties of England, and of the Charter of the Foreſt, if they would grant Him an Aid or Gift, ſuch as was neceſſary for Him at this time; and the rather, for that upon his going over, a laſting Peace might enſue; and if He had refuſed thoſe Articles, or any thing elſe in Hatred and Deſtruction of his People, contrary to the Common profit of the Realm, or that He had done otherwiſe againſt the ſaid Earls than is here expreſſed, He deſires no Man to believe Him; for theſe are the true Steps and Proceedings, that have been followed even to this very time: Therefore He puts them in Mind, what Dangers and Wars may ariſe from Rumours, Stories and Reports, raiſed between the King and his People, &c. Concluding, that this Declaration is publiſhed with a Deſire for all his good People to Pray that his Voyage might be proſperous, and have a good Effect, to the Honour of God, of Himſelf, of them and his Kingdom, and that a Durable Peace might follow. This was Given at Odymer (near Winchelſea) the Twelfth day of Auguſt; being but Eight days before his Embarking for Flanders.

Dr. Brady places this Record a little before the late Declaration, made by the Biſhops, Earls and Barons, of their Grievances; but I muſt beg his Pardon, if I am not of his Mind; for had the King then iſſued out, or ſent them any ſuch Declaration as this now recited, it is very probable, that they would have taken Notice of it, and returned ſome Anſwer thereunto, ſince it ſo highly reflects upon the late Carriage of the ſaid Conſtable and Marſhal, and juſtifies the King in his illegal impoſing the Aids abovementioned. It is therefore moſt likely, that the King, not being then willing to grant the abovementioned Requeſts, Politickly ſet forth this Declaration to juſtify (or at leaſt to Colour) his Proceedings, and to pacify the People in his Abſence.

One

* Nor was the King content with this, but to prevent any Attempts that might be made of the like Nat
Writs directed to all the Sheriffs of England, reciting, that whereas he had heard certain evil Reports Discord might arise between himself, and his Prelates, Earls Barons, & other great Men, tending to the the Realm, and Disturbance of the publick Peace; therefore he commands the said Sheriffs dili and find out the said Disturbers of the Peace, who spread those Reports above mentioned; or should der the Execution of his Commands, or should issue out or publish any Sentence of Excommunication ministers or Subjects, or any that are aiding to them in the Execution of his Commands, or against any Holy Church who have put themselves under his Protection to save & defend themselves & their Churches, ~~and~~ against all others, who by their artifices shall act any thing whereby the Peace of the Kingdom may be disturbed, or the Execution of his Commands any ways hindered; and further commands the said Sheriffs to apprehend all such as should be found any ways culpable of the Premisses, and to keep them close Prisoners till they had received his further Commands. this is entered on the same Roll, [Rot: pat: 25 Ed: I. p. 1. m. 12]

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

Rot. Clauſ 25. Ed. I. M. 8. Dorſ. Prohibitio Regis contra Excommunicationem. Vid. Dr. B's. Ap. N. 32.

The King ſends a Prohibition to the Archbiſhops, not to publiſh the ſaid Sentence.

And paſſes over into Flanders with a powerful Army.

[5] C. W. H. H. K.

He Lands at Sluice, goes to Bruges, and from thence to Gaunt.

One of the laſt things I can find the King to have done before his Departure, was, That He ſent *Letters to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, forbidding them to publiſh all ~~other~~ Sentences of Excommunication againſt his Officers, for taking the Grain and other Goods of the Clergy; ſince that would tend to the great Prejudice of his Crown, the Scandal of his People, and (as it might happen) to the Deſtruction of the Church and Subverſion of the Kingdom; and therefore Commanded them, by the Oath of Fidelity in which they were bound to Him, not to publiſh any ſuch Sentence againſt the ſaid Officers, whether Clerks or Laicks.* This bears Date at Winchelſea, about Two days before the King's going beyond Sea: For it appears by the Cloſe-Roll of this Year, that the King paſſed into Flanders on the Twenty Second of Auguſt; though Matt. Weſtminſter ſays, it was the day following, on the Vigil or Eve of St. Bartholomew: But which day of the Two it was, is not very material; only thus much is certain, [5] That He carried over with Him a Potent Army, conſiſting of Fifteen thouſand Horſe and Fifty thouſand choice Foot, of which Thirty thouſand were Welſhmen. So ſoon as the King landed at Swyne (now Sluice) in Flanders, He went from thence to Bruges, which Town He intended to have fortified, if the People would have permitted Him; but finding them inclinable to give it up to the French, He thought it not very ſafe for Him to ſtay there; and therefore, at the Earl of Flander's Invitation, He marched with his Army to Gaunt, where He Quartered all that Winter, yet performed little or no Action, only ſome part of his Army went out and ſpoiled that part of the Country that had Surrender'd to the French, and Plundered the Town of Dam, and killed Two hundred of the French that lay there in Gariſon, contrary to the Articles; at which the King being terribly provoked, He ordered the Ring-leaders of that Cruelty to be executed immediately.

[1] Id. Ib.

The King of France, upon the King's arrival, retreats.

[3] T. W.

The King is diſſappointed of the Aſſiſtance He expected from the Emperor.

[4] Id. M. W.

The Diſcontented Earls and Barons, immediately upon the King's departure, forbad the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer, to Levy the late Tax.

(2) * For the King had this Summer wrote several Letters to him to hasten his March with his Army to the Assistance of the sd Earl, as appears by the Letters ent: on the Roll [Rot: Pat: 25 Ed: I. p. m. 7. Rot: all: m. 12, 13.] the reason of which Failure you will presently find.

And indeed his going over proved very ſeaſonable for the Earl of Flanders: [1] For the King of France had now taken great part of his Country; but upon the News of his Arrival, He thought fit to retreat as far as Courtray: But Our Edward was utterly defeated of the Aſſiſtance (2) He expected from the Emperor Adolph, which He much relied on: * [3] But this Diſappointment was occaſioned by the Pope's having lately wrote to ſeveral Princes of Germany, to engage them in a War with the Emperor, That ſo they might hinder Him by all means poſſible from making any upon France: And thus all things remain'd till the Year following. But we ſhall now look back into England, and ſee what was done there during the King's Abſence.

1. [4] On the very day of his Departure, the diſcontented Earls and Barons came to the Exchequer and forbad the Treaſurer and Barons thereof, to cauſe the Sheriff to Levy the Eighth Peny of the Laity, lately granted; telling them, That they never agreed to it, and that Taxes could neither be impoſed nor exacted without their Aſſent. * And Walter Hemingford farther adds, That they prevailed with the Citizens of London (as their good Friends and Confederates) to ſtand by them, to defend and Recover their Liberties of the Great Charter. Then the Earls and Barons, to ſhew a Good Example, cauſed it to be publickly proclaim'd, That none of their Servants ſhould preſume to take any thing, though never ſo ſmall, from their Owners, without Paying for it, upon pain of loſing their Right Hands, nay their very Heads, if the Cauſe required it;

(3) But as to this particular circumstance concerning the Earls Marechal & of Hereford coming into the Exchequer for the Ends above mentioned, appears by a Letter of the Treasurer & Barons of the Exchequer, wch was then sent to ye King in those words. Sr. on Thursday before the Feast of St. Bartholomew at the Hour of three, the Earl ~~[illegible]~~ Marechal, and Earl of Hereford with my Lord Robert Fitz Roger, Sr. Alleyn John de Segrave, Sr. Henry de Tyeys, Sr. John Lovel, and many other Baronets and Bacholers [i.e.
came to the Bar of your Exchequer, and the Earl of Hereford said, that he was charged to spe of the Earl Mareschal, and others who were there, & for the whole Communalty of the Realm as well that they and the said Communalty felt themselves grieved in two things; one of which Grievances certain Articles, which they had already remonstrated to the King, related to certain things done by us the Barons and Officers of the Exchequer without the particularly the levying the Utime (i.e. ye 8th Penny upon moveable Goods) and the taking that in the writs issued for levying the Utime, it was contained that the Earls, Barons, Knights had granted the said Utime, as they and their ancestors had done in former Times; whereas the sd was not granted by them, nor by the sd Communalty, and they further said, it would put every man in that as to be taxed at Will; and yt if ye said Ntime shd be so levyed, it would turn to the Disinherison of them their Heirs; and it was said openly by all the ~~Past~~ rest afterwards, that such Taillaige & taking of Wools unsufferable, neither would they in any manner suffer it, so they pray'd us that these things might be redressed, and departed without staying for an Answer. ~~and therefore, Sir, we desire to know your Pleasure on this Matter, so we~~ ~~Sir, our Lord, a happy and long Life and increase of your Honours, written at Westminster the Thursday~~

~~the King by Robert Ywelin~~

Ann. Dom. MCCXCVII.

it; which being done, they all of them return'd Home in Peace, without doing Injury to any Man. But to return to the Affairs of Scotland. * The King being now ready to go over beyond Sea thought fit to recall the Earl of Surrey and appoint Bryan Fitz Allen Guardian of Scotland in his Stead as appears [Rot. Scot: 25 Ed: I. m. 8] by the [5] Commission on the H. K. T. W. Rolls, being dated at Odimer the 14 August, but before he could go thither to take Possession of his command, an accident fell out which broke all the King's measures, and hindered the new Lieutenant from ever going thither at all, which was thus &c.

The Scots reinforce their Army under the Conduct of William Wallys.

[5] It was ~~now~~ the latter end of August, when the Scots taking advantage of the weak Conduct of the Engliſh, for the Earl of Surrey Lieutenant of Scotland had been very remiſs in preſſing thoſe People to deliver up their Hoſtages as they had agreed, which gave them time to Rally and Reinforce their Army under the Command of William Wallys, who had now drawn his Forces near Sterling, where the Engliſh then lay; againſt whom the Earl abovemention'd marching with all his Army, that conſiſted of above Forty thouſand Men, and getting to the River Forthe, on the other ſide of which the Scots lay encamped on a Hill, the Engliſh Generals, contrary to the Advice of a wiſe and Valiant Scotiſh Knight called Richard Lundy, would needs paſs their Army over this River near Sterling (to fall upon the Scots) by a weak and narrow Bridge, where only two Men could go on Breaſt: So early in the Morning, after a great Part of the Engliſh Forces had paſſed over it, led by Hugh de Creſſingham (the King's Treaſurer for Scotland) the Bridge happened to break, either by the weight of thoſe that followed, or elſe through the Treachery of a Scotiſh Carpenter, who had a little before been employ'd to mend it, and inſtead of that, had on purpoſe half cut through the main Beams of it: But upon the breaking of the Bridge, when the Scots perceived the Van of their Enemies cut off from the Rear, they took this Opportunity immediatly to fall upon the Engliſh that were on their ſide, and putting them to flight, killed or drowned a great many of them to the number of near Five thouſand, as they endeavoured to repaſs that River, together with Hugh Creſſingham their Leader; who though he was a Clergyman in Orders, and Rector of divers Churches, had contrary to his Function marched into the Field compleatly Armed. This unhappy defeat happened the Eleventh of September being Friday.

The Scots put the Engliſh Army to the Rout at paſſing a Bridge and kill 5000 Men.

[1] Id. Ib. C. W. H.

When [1] the Earl of Surrey (who was now come into the Field and ſtood on the other ſide of the River) ſaw this unfortunate Accident, he immediatly fled, with the Remainder of his Army, to Berwick; where he ſtay'd not long, but leaving Sir Marmaduke Twenge a Gallant Knight, Governor of it, and promiſing him a ſpeedy Aſſiſtance, he return'd into the South of England to give the Prince an Account of his ill Fortune: But the Engliſh not long after deſerted the Place, becauſe it had not been ſo well fortified as it ought to have been, by building a new Wall, through the Covetouſneſs of Creſſingham the late Treaſurer; therefore ſo ſoon as the Engliſh Army was gone, Wallys eaſily took that Place, with all the Towns in Scotland that were in the Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh, whom he either killed or drove out of the Kingdom; but as for the Caſtles of Edinburgh and Roxburgh they utterly diſmantled them, becauſe they thought they could not keep them, as alſo that they might not be any more Harbors to the Engliſh; they alſo deſtroyed Haddington, and moſt Towns of Note in the South of Scotland, for the ſame Reaſons.

The Earl of Surrey flies to Berwick, which is alſo deſerted.

Wallys kills or drives all the Engliſh out of Scotland.

But before I conclude this ſad Relation, I think it neceſſary to let you know that the * Anonymous Chronicle (ſo often cited) imputes the loſs of this Battel near Sterling to a miſunderſtanding between the Earl of Surrey the Kings Lieutenant, and this Hugh Creſſingham, who was joyned

* in Bib. Coton.

The occaſion of the Loſs of the late Battel.

The King likewise sent the Prince ~~another~~ privy seal of the same Date to the Chancellour commanding him by the Advice of the Barons of the Exchequer to issue forth such Letters as should be expedient for the taxing of the said Ntime through the whole Realm, so that it might not be for the Prejudice or Disinherison of the People or their Heirs, nor be drawn into for the Time to come, vid: Record: in Turre Trin: 34 Ed: I. Rot: 28th. see it published original French in Maddox's History of the Exchequer Chap. 22. p. 614. given you this late Record to let you see, that notwithstanding the Remonstrance of the and Noblemen above mention'd, the King was resolved to have the said Tax & Imposition levyed for this Time only, but that being contrary to Law it should not be drawn into ple for the future.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

in Commiſſion with him; for the former ſtaying too long in the Caſtle of Sterling, exerciſing ſome new raiſed Men, or (as others relate) overſleeping himſelf that Morning, and not coming into the Field ſo ſoon as he ought to have done, it made Creſſingham paſs over the River at this Place, in order to fight the Scots, before the Earl could come up to joyn him with his Forces, and was a main Cauſe of the Loſs of the greateſt Part of his Army: The Earl himſelf made a ſhift to eſcape with a few of his Men to Berwick (as you have heard;) but as for Creſſingham, the Scots hated him ſo mortally, for his Covetouſneſs and Cruelty, that finding his dead Body after the Battel, they flead it, and made Girts and other Furniture for their Horſes with his Skin.

Creſſingham being ſlain, the Scots flea his dead Body.

[2] H. K. Coll. 2519. The Scots invade Northumberland, ſpoil all the Countrey, and deſtroy the Inhabitants.

[2] Nor did the Scots under their Commander William Wallys reſt contented with this Victory; but falling upon Northumberland at the beginning of this Winter, they lay'd all the Countries waſt between the Rivers of Tine and Derwent; however they could not take the City of Carliſle, though they had Summoned it; for the Scots not being provided with Engines to batter it, were fain to let it alone unattempted. But they turn'd aſide through the Foreſt of Inglewood, as far as Cockermouth, near the River Derwent, and deſtroyed all the Country before them, not ſparing either Age or Sex; and they intended to have done the ſame in the Biſhoprick of Durham, had they not been informed by their Scouts (though untruly) that the Country was well provided with Forces to reſiſt them; and therefore having done what miſchief they could, they return'd home.

[3] Id. Ib The Gariſon Sallies out of New-caſtle, and put a Stop to the Scots.

But they met with worſe Succeſs in Northumberland; [3] for not long after they marched toward New-Caſtle, intending to beſiege that Place; but the Gariſon hearing of it, put themſelves into a poſture of Defence, reſolving to Fight them if a good Opportunity offered; and for that purpoſe ſallied out of the Town, yet durſt not march too far, becauſe they were much inferior in Number to their Enemies: However, the Scots ſeeing their Reſolution, did not care to engage with them, but contented themſelves with dividing the ſpoil they had already taken, and return'd into Scotland.

[4] Id. ib. The Gariſon of Carliſle make an Incurſion into Anandale.

In revenge of theſe Hoſtilities, [4] a little before Chriſtmaſs the Townſmen and Gariſon of Carliſle made an Incurſion into Anandale, where they had a ſharp Diſpute with the Inhabitants of that Vale, but at laſt having put them to the Rout, killed a great many of their Men, and burnt about ten Villages, they return'd home on Chriſtmaſs-Eve with ſeveral Priſoners, and a conſiderable Booty. This was the Sum of the War during this Winter.

[5] Id Col. 2522. Upon this ill News the Prince, Guardian of the Kingdom, calls a great Council or Parliament.

But it is now time to return to England, and ſee what paſſed there in the mean time. So [5] ſoon as the Prince, whom the King had left Guardian of the Kingdom, had heard the ill News of the late Defeat of the Engliſh Army, the Councellors that the King had left to adviſe him, perceiving the great Danger the Kingdom was in, perſwaded him to be reconciled to the Two Earls, the Conſtable and Marſhal, as alſo to call a great Council of the Lords, Biſhops and Abbots; in complyance with which Advice, he on the Ninth of September iſſued out Writs to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons, &c. to meet on the Morrow after St. Michael at London, to conſult with him and thoſe of his Council concerning the urgent and arduous Affairs of the Kingdom. But though at the end of the Writ of Summons directed

to

Anno Dom MCCXCVII.

o the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, there appear no more Names entred pon the Roll, than the Archbiſhop himſelf and Six other Biſhops, with wenty three Abbots and Priors, and only the Earls of Hereford and orfolk with Eight Barons; and though no Writs are now extant that ere ſent to the Commons, yet that this was a Common Council or arliament of the whole Kingdom, and not a particular Council of iſhops, Abbots and great Lords, will appear from the following eſtimony of Two unqueſtionable Manuſcript Authors of that time, s alſo from the great Tax which the Clergy, Lords and Commons, ranted to the King at this Parliament when they met.

That this was a Parliament, notwithſtanding no Writs are extant for Summoning the Commons.

~~But~~ In the interim, [5] a little before this Parliament could meet, he Earls of Hereford and Norfolk, with the other Diſcontented Earls and arons of their Party, held a Council at Northampton, to conſult about he Means how the late Grievances might be redreſſed; ſo that when he Parliament met at London, to conſider of making up all Breaches etween the King and his People, the Earls and Barons abovementioned could not, without ſome difficulty, be brought to appear at London, until it was agreed, by the common Conſent of the Prince and his ouncil, that the Great Charters ſhould be confirm'd, and divers other rticles that were added to it ſhould be granted; and then they readily met the reſt of the Eſtates of the Kingdom in Parliament, whom ur [1] Author thus reckons up, viz. the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ith the Prelates and Clergy, the Earls and Barons, and the Knights of hires, and the Repreſentatives of the Cities and Boroughs. ×

[5] C. J. Everſden. The diſcontented Earls and Barons hold a Council at Northampton, and at laſt agree to come to London.

[1] C. Norwic. The Eſtates that met at this Parliament.

× And ye King now to sweeten all things against the ensuing Parliament, issued out certain Writts to all the Sheriffs in England, giving them notice, that notwithstanding the King for ye urgent necessity of his Kingdom, had for ye good & safety thereof leavyed an eighth Part of the Goods of all Laymen throughout the Kingdom, yet, that he now granted & confirmed for himself & his Heirs the great Charter of ye Liberties of England, together with the Charter of Forests, & was also ready to grant to all and singular Persons of the said Kingdom his Letters Patents, that the said eighth Part shall not tend to the Prejudice, servitude, or Disinheritance of any Person, or be drawn into Custom or Example for the future, and further commands them to cause to be elected out of each County two Knights with full Power from ye Community of ye same, to appear before his beloved son Edward his Lieutenant in England, so that they appear at London on the Octaves after Michaelmas at furthest, there to receive ye said Charters of Confirmation, for & on the behalf of the said Community, and to do what else shall be thought convenient to be ordained by the said Prince and his Council. This bears Date at St. Pauls the 15th. Day of December this year and the Reader may take notice, that these Writs were also Writts of Summons for ye Knights of hires to appear in Parliament, altho' thro' the straitness of ye Time they had not forty Days notice f it; and this further appears by the Return of the Writs, with the Names of the several Knights, & ir Manucaptors endorsed by the Sheriffs on the backsides of these Writs: & that these Writs are not nly found in a loose Bundle in the Tower, but are also entred on the Rolls & published in R— oll: p. 790.

But though the Diſcontented Earls and Barons were at laſt perſwaded o obey the Prince's Summons, yet did not they think it ſafe to apear unarmed, but were attended with five hundred Horſe, beſides a reat many choſen Foot; nor would they enter the City before they ad Liberty to place their own Guards at all the Gates; and then y the mediation of the venerable Father, Robert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, there was an Agreement made between the King and them, n Condition He would confirm the Charter of Foreſt and the Great harter, with ſome other Articles added to it, which are now entred in ur Statute-Books, under the Title de Tallagio non concedendo, being the ame with that in Knyghton and Walſingham, and which is Printed in ir Edward Coke's Second Inſtit. though he miſplaces it in the hirty fourth Year of this King, but is to be found upon the Statute Roll 25 Ed. I. M. 38. with this Memorandum at the end of it, That his Charter or Confirmation was ſealed in Flanders, with the King's reat Seal, at Gaunt, the Fifth day of November, in the Twenty fifth ear of his Reign.

[2] H. K. Col. 2523. The diſcontented Lords come thither with a great Retinue.

The Statute de Tallagio non concedendo, firſt paſſed. Fol. 532.

The Effect [3] of which Statute is, That the King ſhould for the uture impoſe no Talliage, Aid or Tax on his Kingdom without the onſent of the * Great Men thereof; and who theſe were, I refer You o the Statute it ſelf, ſet down at large at the end of this Reign. And t the ſame time there was alſo a Pardon paſſed before the Prince nd his Council, and ſealed with their own Seals, ‘for Humphry de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk and Marſhal of England, the Lord John de Ferrars, with all other Earls, Barons, Knights and Eſqs; and all thoſe who had been of their Society and Confederacy; as alſo to all ſuch Military Tenants as having Twenty Pounds in Lands per Annum, had fail'd to go over with ‘the [3] H. K. Col. 2523. The Effect of this Statute.

* Magnatorum.

A General Pardon alſo paſſed with it; and the Effect thereof.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

‘ the King into Flanders: And it alſo remits to them all Rancor and ‘ Ill-Will, which the King might have concealed by reaſon thereof, and ‘ Pardons them all Tranſgreſſions done againſt him to the paſſing of ‘ this Charter; and then concludes with a Clauſe, That the Archbiſhops ‘ and Biſhops of England ſhould twice in the Year denounce Sentence ‘ of Excommunication againſt all thoſe that ſhould preſume to tranſgreſs ‘ them.

This Pardon and the Statute abovementioned both confirmed at Gaunt by the King.

* Rot. Stat. 25 E. I. M. 28.

This Pardon (of which I have only here given you an Abridgment) was twice paſſed, once before the Prince, dated the Tenth of October, and is that which is cited by our Hiſtorians in Latin; but the other (which is alſo entred on the Statute * Roll in the Tower) being in French, bears date at Gaunt the ſame day with the Statute de Tallagio non concedendo; of which laſt I need ſay no more here, ſince the Reader may find it at large at the end of this King's Reign. But to proceed to the reſt of this Relation concerning the Pardon.

[4] H. K. 2524. The Prince promiſes to procure his Father's Confirmation of this Pardon.

When [4] Prince Edward had by his Letters Patents Pardoned the ſaid Earls and all their Adherents, he promiſed alſo to procure his Father's Confirmation of it; and the King's Councellors who were then preſent engaged alſo to ſee the ſame performed. Then the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Archbiſhop elect of York, with other Biſhops, the Earls of Cornwal, Surrey and Oxford, as alſo the Lords, John Gifford, Henry de Piercy, with divers other Clerks and Laics, all ſwore, for the greater Security of the Matter, That they would preſerve the ſaid Earls, with their Adherents, ſafe and indempnified againſt their Lord the King.

[5] Id Ib. The ſaid Earls agree to go over into Flanders, or elſe to march againſt the Scots.

And it [5] was alſo further agreed, That if they ſhould receive ſuch a favourable Anſwer from the King, by the Feaſt of St. Nicholas (being the Sixth of December next enſuing,) as ſhould confirm all that had been done now, then the ſaid Earls ſhould either go over to the King into Flanders, or elſe march againſt his Enemies in Scotland. Things being thus ſettled and concluded on, expreſs Meſſengers were ſent to the King with theſe Charters; his Secretaries alſo wrote to Him, that if He deſired to preſerve his Honour with his Eſtate and Kingdom, He ſhould ſend back thoſe Inſtruments under his Great Seal: Which Letters when the King had received, He was in a great Strait, (being unwilling to grant ſo much at once) but after three days Conſideration, thought it beſt for Him to do it; and ſo, that He might retain the Hearts and Affections of his Subjects, He conſented to confirm all thoſe Charters which had been ſent Him over; which He then did by his Charter in French, bearing date the ſame day with the Statute and Charter abovementioned, and which, being never before Printed, you ſhall find in the Appendix faithfully tranſcribed from Walter Hemingford's Manuſcript Chronicle, and compar'd with the Roll in the Tower.

The King confirms both the Statute and Pardon, though with ſome difficulty.

[1] Id. Ib.

Which are again confirmed in the next Parliament, wherein a great Tax is given.

Theſe [1] Charters being ſent over, were received with great Satisfaction, all Men rejoicing to ſee this happy Day of Unity and Peace between the King and his People: But the Manuſcript Chronicle of Norwich relates, That the aforeſaid Charters and Statutes were then again confirmed, in either the ſame, or another Parliament, that met at St. Edmundsbury for that Purpoſe; in which the Great Men and Commons gave the Ninth part of their Goods; But the Archbiſhop of Canterterbury, with the Clergy of that Province, a Tenth; and the Archbiſhop and Clergy of York, only a Fifth part of their Goods, becauſe

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

cauſe they were moſt expoſed to the Incurſion of the Scots: Yet this is further to be noted, That the Wool which had been already taken from the Clergy and Laity was to be reckoned as part of the ſaid Tax. And at the ſame time, this Parliament took off all illegal and exceſſive Cuſtoms upon Wool and Leather, which had been impoſed by the King.

[2] Id. ib.

I cannot but here obſerve, [3] That the Tenths were now given by the Clergy without the Pope's Licence; yet our Monkiſh Writers have found a Salvo for this, and tell us, That though they were not to give the King any Aid to make Foreign Wars or Invaſions, without waiting for the Pope's Licence; yet were they not debar'd, by his late Bull, from granting Aids for the neceſſary Defence of the Kingdom againſt the Common Enemies, the Scots, that were then ready to invade it: Which Diſtinction, how reaſonable ſoever it may be in it ſelf, yet what way they could then take upon them to make it, I do not underſtand, ſince the Pope's Prohibition is very ſtrict and expreſs, That no Prelate whatſoever, Eccleſiaſtics, &c. ſhall Pay or Grant to Pay any Taxes or Impoſitions ſo much as an Half, &c. or any part or Portion whatever, of the Revenues of their Church or Goods, to Laymen, under the Name of an Aid, Aſſiſtance, Loan, or Gift, or under any other Pretence or Colour whatſoever, without the Authority of the ſame See. This I obſerve, to ſhew the Reader, That the late Refuſal of the Archbiſhop and Clergy to Aſſiſt the King, was rather out of Wilfulneſs than any real Cauſe.

[3] Id. ib. In which alſo the Clergy give a Tenth, without the Pope's Leave.

Not long after the King had thus confirm'd the Charters abovementioned, He ſent over particular Letters to the Earls and other Great Men then in England, commanding them, That as they valued his Honour, and that of the whole Kingdom, they ſhould, under the Command of the Earl of Surry, his General, march into Scotland, to repreſs the Inſolence of that Nation: And He prefixed the Octaves of St. Hillary, as the day on which He would have them meet at York; and that in the mean while, they ſhould prepare themſelves for that Expedition. He alſo at the ſame time, wrote Letters to the Great Men of Scotland that had continued firm to his Intereſt, That they ſhould not fail to appear at the Parliament which He intended ſhould then be held at York. And thus all things remain'd in the ſame State, both in England and Flanders, for the reſt of this Winter.

[4] H. K Col. 2525. The King Writes to all the Nobility to march forthwith againſt the Scots.

I cannot find any Military Matter worth noting, to have been done by the King whilſt He lay at Gaunt this Winter, [5] only that the Citizens thereof being diſcontented at the Quartering of his Soldiers that committed many Diſorders, took the Advantage, whilſt He rode out of the City to take the Air, and ran to their Arms; and ſhutting the Gates againſt Him, fell upon the Engliſh Gariſon in the Town, and ſlew many of them; but they being at laſt too hard for the Citizens, not only defended themſelves, but ſetting open the Gates, let in the King, who Heading his Men, ſoon quieted that Sedition, though not without great hazard of his Perſon from the Arrows which the Townſmen ſhot at Him: And preſently after Candlemaſs, a much worſe Commotion happened between the King's Soldiers and the Townſmen; for [1] theſe watching their Opportunity, ſhut up the Gates, and would not let any more of the Engliſh enter the Town; then falling upon thoſe that were in their Quarters, ſlew a great many of them: But when [5] C. I. E. A great Inſurrection in Gaunt, againſt the Engliſh, which is quell'd by the King's Soldiers.

[1] Chron. Abing.

Ann. Dom. MCCXCVII.

when the King heard of this Aſſault, He preſently Commanded his Men to their Arms, and was immediately attended by a ſtrong Party; in the mean while, the Foot who were encamped without the Town, hearing the noiſe within, and ſuppoſing not only their Fellow Soldiers, but the King Himſelf to be in Danger, they preſently marched to the City, and ſetting fire to the Gates, entred by force, and routing thoſe they found in the Streets, Plunder'd their Houſes, until at laſt they forced them to yield, and to be at quiet; and had it not been for the Earl of Flanders's Interceſſion, much greater Miſchief might have been done: But the Tumult being over, the King, to give the Townſmen ſome Satisfaction, was pleaſed to cauſe ſeveral of his Men to be Executed by Martial Law, for breaking into Houſes, and Plundering them, contrary to his Orders; and alſo Pay'd them a great Sum of Money for the Loſſes they had ſuſtain'd. I have placed theſe Two Actions, being of the ſame nature, together, though the latter of them did not happen until the beginning of the Year following, according to our Account.

The King makes the Townſmen Satisfaction for their loſſes.

But to come to Matters of greater moment: I find no Action between the King's Army and that of France this Winter; for His Majeſty being now weary of this War in Flanders, into which He had been imprudently drawn by the Perſwaſions of the Earl (who was not able to give Him any conſiderable Aſſiſtance) and alſo finding the War in Scotland to have proved very unfortunate, it made Him reſolve to agree to the Propoſal which the Pope had ſome Months before made, and declared by his own Authority, for a Truce during the ſpace of Two Years, under pain of Excommunication upon all ſuch as would not ſubmit to it; though ſince the Pope's Power in making this Truce had been proteſted* againſt by the King of France (as denying his Superiority in Temporals) and the King of England had not hitherto ſubmitted to it, yet now being weary of the War, [2] He took an Opportunity to uſe the Mediation of William de Hotton, a Friar Minor, then Archbiſhop elect of Dublin, who being well acquainted with the King of France, under pretence of going to the Pope about his own Affairs, had obtain'd that King's Letters of Safe-Conduct, to come ſecretly and to treat with Himſelf and his Council; and the Biſhop ſo well managed this Affair, that at laſt he prevailed with Him to conſent to appoint certain Commiſſioners to treat with Others, to be ſent from the King of England, about a Truce; which being agreed to, there met at Tournay, for the King of France, the Duke of Burgundy, the Count of St. Paul, the Earl of Bretaign, the Lord de Neſle, and the Biſhop of Auxerre, with ſome others; and for the King of England, Anthony Biſhop of Durham, with divers other Noblemen and Biſhops, whom my Author does not mention; and theſe, after ſome Treaty, agreed upon a Truce for Two Years, viz. from the Feaſt of Epiphany next enſuing, to the ſame Feaſt again; but with this Proviſo, That if, at the Expiration of the ſaid Truce, a perfect Peace were not concluded between the Two Kings, the Money depoſited by them, as a Caution for their true Performance, ſhould be return'd; and that in the mean while, both Princes ſhould ſtand to the Award of the Pope, and ſend their Ambaſſadors to him on purpoſe about this Affair; the effect of which Ambaſſy we ſhall find anon.

The King grows weary of the War in Flanders.

The Pope propoſes a Truce between the Kings of England and France, which the latter proteſts againſt.

Vid.* this Proteſtation in a Treatiſe, Entituled Procès des Libertes, d Egliſe Gallicane, Ch. 7. f. 95.

[2] H. K. 2525, 2526. Chron. Abing.

The Commiſſioners appointed for the Treaty meet at Tournay, and agree upon it, with the Conditions of it.

But that our Hiſtorian is miſtaken, in ſuppoſing this Truce to have een made at firſt for two Years, appears from the * Inſtrument it ſelf, ill preſerved among the Records of the Tower, wherein it is only ſtiled Sufferance, or Forbearing all Acts of Hoſtility by Sea and Land, beween the King of England and his Allies on the one part, and the King f France and his Allies on the other, until the Feaſt of Epiphany; for e Dutchy of Aquitain, and for the Earldom of Flanders, and all other arts, until the Octaves of St. Andrew, (or the 7th of December) dated n the Feaſt of St. Denis, (that is the 9th of October) in the Year of Grace 1297. in which there are alſo the Names of the Engliſh Confederates, that is ſo ſay, The King of Almain, or Emperor, the Earl of Flanders, the Earl of Savoy, the Earl of Bar, the Duke of Brabant, the Earl of Holland, the Earl of Montbeliard, with many other great Lords f Burgoin, Aylmain, Brabant, Holland, Gaſcoigne, and Arragon, whoſe Names being now to us unknown, I omit. By this Truce, all Trade nd Commerce was to be exerciſed as before.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVII.

A fuller Account of this Treaty from the Records in the Tower.

* Vid. Bundle of Writs of Privy Seal in the Tower. It is Printed in Pryn's 3d Volume of Papal Uſurp. P. 757.

This * Inſtrument being encloſed in Letters under the Privy-Seal, dated at Gaunt the 15th of October, in the 25th Year of his Reign, was ſent to his Son, enjoyning him to ſee it kept in all Points through the Realm; and to that purpoſe, on the 20th of October, He ſent it to all Ports in England to be Proclaimed, and ſtrictly obſerved in all it's Articles, as appears by the † Writ ſtill upon Record in the Tower.* Not long after which, by the ſame Commiſſioners on both ſides, this Truce was prolonged until Lent next following: The Inſtrument whereof being Sealed with their Seals, and dated at Grolingues Abby near Courtray in Flanders, November 23. 1297. is to be found in the Bundle of Writs above-mentioned.

* Ibidem. Printed in Pryn's Hiſtory of PapalUſurp.

The Truce is Proclaim'd in England.

† Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. Dorſ. in Cedula.

* And the Ratification of the said Truce on the King of France's Part, being almost in the very same Terms with that of King Edward's, bears Date on the Feast of St Dennis An: Dom: 1297. is entered on the Rolls [Rot: Aleman: 25. Ed: I. m. 19.] & is published in R—s Coll. p. 795. 796.

King Edward keeping his Chriſtmaſs at Gaunt, on St. Innocent's Day, (or 28th of December) being the 26th Year of his Reign, there came to Him the Maſter of the Order of Preachers, and the General of the Friars-Minors, who had been lately with the King of France about the ſame Buſineſs, and beſought, on the Pope's behalf, That both the Kings would ſend their Commiſſioners to Rome, with full Powers to treat of Peace; the Pope, promiſing, (not as a Judge, but kind Mediator, and in Prejudice to neither) to endeavour to ſettle Peace and Tranquility in both Nations, and reſtore the former Friendſhip between the two Kings: And becauſe that could not be accompliſhed without a longer Truce, therefore the Pope by theſe Meſſengers publiſhed again a two Years Truce, which he had declared under pain of Excommunication and Interdict of both the Nations; which tho' it was then refuſed (as hath been already obſerved) yet now both the Kings therein concern'd were not only willing to agree to it, but not long after ſent their Ambaſſadors to Rome, and by them referr'd all Differences between them to Boniface the VIII. as Benedict of Cajeta, not as Pope, but as a private Perſon, as will appear by his own Inſtrument or Bull, containing the Terms of the Peace he had made between the two Kings, which you will find more at large hereafter. But it is time to return to the Affairs of England.

Anno. Dom. MCCXCVIII.

T. W.

Whilſt the King is at Gaunt, the General of the Fryars Minors comes to the King from the Pope, to propoſe a Peace, wherein he offers himſelf to be Mediator.

Which Propoſal is agreed to by both Kings, who ſend their Ambaſſadors to Rome about it.

The King having order'd the Prince his Son to Summon a great Council of the Nobility at York, (which my Author calls a Parliament, tho' the Commons did not meet there) the Barons, Great Men, and Tenants in Capite, met accordingly, on the Octaves of St. Hilary, ſo that

[3] H. K. Col. 2525.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVIII.

A great Council at York, where, beſides the Conſtable and Marſhal, there is a vaſt Concourſe of the Nobility; and the great Charter is again Confirm'd, and Sentence of Excommunication Denounced againſt all that ſhould Infringe it.

that there was a great Appearance: For beſides the Conſtable and Marſhal, who were now reſolv'd to act againſt the Scots, there were alſo the Earl of Warren and Surrey, (the King's General) the Earls of Glocester and Arundel, and many other Earls and Barons, who after ſome Deliberation were all of Opinion, That for the Satisfaction of the common People, the King's late Confirmation of the Great Charter, and that of Foreſts, ſhould be firſt Read and Publiſhed, together with the Additional Articles abovementioned. This being perform'd, the Biſhop of Carliſle was commanded to Denounce (in his Pontificalibus) Sentence of Excommunication againſt all Violaters thereof, which gave an entire Satisfaction to the People.

[4] Id. Ib. A General Muſter of the whole Army appointed at New-caſtle, in order to march againſt the Scots; where appears a vaſt Force. The Scots upon the approach of the Engliſh retire further into their Country, having Deſerted Berwick. The King ſends Orders to the Earl of Surrey not to Fight the Scots till he comes over.

[4] But the Scotiſh Noblemen (who had been Summon'd thither) neither coming nor ſending any to appear for them, the Engliſh Nobility appointed, That within Eight days, there ſhould be a General Muſter of the whole Army at New-caſtle upon Tine, that ſo they might march from thence againſt their Enemies: Which being done at the Time and Place appointed, the Engliſh Army at this Muſter appeared to be Two thouſand choice Horſe well Armed, but of Light Horſe more than Two thouſand five hundred, and of Footmen, (taking in the Welſhmen) above One hundred thouſand. Then the Prince, with all the Noblemen abovementioned, marched againſt the Scots; who, ſo ſoon as ever they heard of the Approach of the Engliſh on their Borders, raiſed the Siege of Roxburgh-Caſtle, where the Biſhop of Glaſcow was at that time kept Priſoner, and retired further into the Country. Then the Engliſh Commanders, after they had relieved that Caſtle, went on as far as Kelſo, and from thence they turn'd aſide to take in Berwick, which they found quite deſerted by the Scots. But in the beginning of Lent, whilſt they ſtayed there to refreſh their Men in order to march again into Scotland, they received freſh Orders from the King by an Expreſs, commanding the Earl of Surrey, and the reſt of the Great Men with him, not to proceed farther in that Expedition; ſince, having now ſettled his Affairs beyond Sea to his Satisfaction, He intended (God willing) to come over into England with all poſſible ſpeed, and would then march with them in Perſon againſt the Scots. Upon the Receipt of theſe Letters, the Great Men abovementioned only retain'd about Fifteen hundred ſelect Horſe and Twenty thouſand Foot, ſending all the reſt to their own Homes; and with theſe Forces the Commanders ſtaid at Berwick, waiting for the King's Return, being in a Poſture to reſiſt their Enemies.*

*And if we look beyond Sea, it further appears, that both Kings being now weary of the War, in Order to a more sedate Treaty of Peace, prolonged ye said Truce for themselves and their Confederates, from Friday before the Purification of our Lady, until the Feast of Epiphany next ensuing, as appears by a Copy of the King of France's Letter still extant on the Rolls [Rot: Al. 27. Ed: I. m. 9] vid: R—'s Coll: 804, 805. And it further appears from ye same Rolls, that the King by certain Letters directed to the Pope lets his Holiness understand, that he earnestly desir'd, that all Discords and Quarrels between himself and the King of France might be speedily compos'd, and to apply such Remedies thereunto as his Holiness should judge most convenient, that he had sent the Arch-Bishop of Dublin and the Earl of Sa with two other Noblemen to lay that Affair before his Holiness.
And at the same Time the King wrote likewise to the Colledge of Cardinals to further it as mu they could: Both those Letters bear Date at Ghent 1297. but it should be —98 according to ye English Account of that Time, vid: R—'s Coll: p. 808. 809.

[5] M. W. The King having ſettled his Affairs in Flanders returns into England.

And He [5] in the mean time having concluded the Truce with the King of France, and ſettled his Affairs in Flanders, took Shipping, and landed at Sandwich the 21ſt of March, being received by the Nobility, and all ſorts of People that met Him there, with loud Rejoycings and Acclamations.

And to gain the good Will of the People, iſſues out a Commiſſion concerning the value of the Proviſions and Commodities that had been taken up for his Fleet.

Preſently after his Landing, to make good the Promiſe He had made upon his going into Flanders, and to Endear Himſelf the more to his People, He iſſued out his Commiſſions to Two Knights, one appointed by the King, and the other by the Inhabitants of the Countries, and one Clerk, with one Religious Perſon to be aſſigned by the Biſhop of the Dioceſs; who were to enquire, by the Oaths of Lawful Men of every County, in what manner, and how much Wool, Wool-fels, Leather, Grain, Beaſts, Fleſh, Fiſh, or other Goods, had been wrongfully and illegally taken from the Clergy and Laity, for Victualling and Setting

Anno Dom. MCCXCVIII.

Setting out his Fleet, or for other Matters, [illegible]nce the War with France: But whether the King ever made any su[illegible] Satisfaction to his Subjects, in perſuance of his Enquiry, I no where find. ×

× But I must there observe, that Mat: of Westminster, whose authority I follow in this Relation, is mistaken in making one of ye Knights appointed Commissioner for the Purpose above mentioned to have been chosen by the Counties, for they were both nominated by ye King as appears by this Commission entered on ye Rolls of this year [Rot: pat. 26. E. I. m. 21] bearing date April 4th & in which it is expressly recited, that the King before his Passage into Flanders having a great desire to redress the Grievances of his Subjects, therefore to bring the business to a due Effect, he had appointed the two Persons named in that Commission to make the said Enquiry and to return it up to ye King Vid: R—'s Coll: p. 815.

Immediately upon the King's Arrival, * He iſſued out Writs of Summons o the Militia of the Nation, to meet Him at Carliſle on Whitſon-Eve, with heir Horſe and Arms to go againſt the Scots, whoſe Power was now become ormidable, and their Forces Numerous: And beſides this, on the Tenth of April, He Summoned all the Earls and Barons, Two Knights of every hire, Two Citizens of every City, and Two Burgeſſes of every Burgh, to meet and treat with Him at York the Whitſontide following, about certain rduous Affairs, that concern'd Him and the whole Kingdom. [1] And arther, He ſent his Summons to all the Great Men of Scotland of his Party, That if they continued in their Allegiance to Him, they ſhould ot fail to meet Him there at that Time without any Excuſe; otherwiſe they ſhould be eſteemed as Enemies, and be dealt with accordingly.

* Rot. Clauſ. 26 Ed. I. M. 5. Dorſ.

The King iſſues out Writs for the Militia of the Nation, to meet Him at Carliſle, to go againſt the Scots.

[1] C. W. H.

The Parliament being met, the Earls, Conſtable and Marſhal, fearing a Change in the King's Mind concerning the Charters of Liberties nd the Perambulations of Foreſts, becauſe they had been confirmed nder the Great Seal whilſt the King was beyond Sea, and not in England, plainly told Him, That unleſs He would now Ratify them anew, they hould go no further with Him: Whereupon ſince the King's Affairs required Diſpatch, and that the ſettling of theſe things as they ſhould be, ould take up too much time, therefore the Biſhop of Durham, the arls of Surrey, Warwick and Gloceſter, took upon them to Swear on His ehalf, That He ſhould perform what they deſired at his Return from at Expedition; with which Engagement the Earls, Barons, and Great Men being very well ſatisfied, and all Jealouſies for the preſent removed, ey marched againſt the Scots with great Courage and Chearfulneſs: ut as for the Scotiſh Nobility, they neither came, nor ſent any Excuſe hy they did not obey the King's Summons. But I ſhall now give you e Particulars of this Summer's Expedition.

[2] Id. ib.

The Conſtable and Marſhal inſiſt to have the Charters of Liberties, and of Perambulations of Foreſts, confirmed before they would march with Him; whereupon, certain Biſhops and Lords Swear on the King's behalf, That He ſhall do it after his Return.

[3] the King leaving York, marched forward, and met the reſt of his rmy that waited his coming at Berwick, having ſent the greater part his Forces before a nearer way, which were order'd to join Him at oxborough by Midſummer; at which time muſtering his Army, He found e had 3000 choice Horſe, or * Men at Arms, beſides 4000 light armed orſemen; but as for the Foot they made about 80000, moſt of whom ere Iriſh or Welſhmen: Then the King Advanced by eaſie Marches ith the whole Army, ſpoiling and burning the Country as they went, ntil they came to a Place called Temple's-Town, lying near the Sea, here He expected the coming up of his Fleet with Proviſions for s Army; but the Wind being croſs and high, the Fleet could not t to them for ſome time, inſomuch that they were put to great aits for want of Victuals; which the Scots underſtanding, they ſtened all they could to come and take them thus unprovided; but e Wind chopping about on the ſudden, the Ships got to them ſonably enough to defeat the Enemies Deſigns.

[3] Chron. Abing. H. K.

The King coming to Roxborough, muſters his Army.

* Note, Men at Arms, always ſignify Armed Cap-a-pé.

The King being come into Scotland, is in great want of Proviſions, by reaſon his Fleet came not to Him.

Whilſt the King ſtayed there, it was told Him that many of e Scots were in the Caſtle of Drilington, and in Two other neighuring Caſtles, which the King had paſſed by, and that they undered the adjoining Country: He thereupon ſent the Biſhop of [4] Id.

He ſends to take in certain Caſtles.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVIII.

Durham to beſiege and take in thoſe Caſtles; who finding that of Dri-lington to make a ſtouter Reſiſtance than he expected, and that his Men had nothing to eat, but ſuch Pulſe as they gather'd in the Fields, he ſent to the King to know His further Orders: Wherefore ſuppoſing that the Biſhop was now weary of the Siege, He ſent thither a Courageous Knight, called Sir John Marmaduke, whom He commanded, Not to See his Face till thoſe Caſtles were taken: But in the mean while the Engliſh Army receiving Three Ship-loads of Proviſions, they took freſh Courage, and aſſaulting that Caſtle, took it in three days; and preſently after, another Party took in the reſt of thoſe Caſtles.

The Engliſh Army recieve ſome Proviſions.

[5] Id. ib.

Yet by reaſon of the Fleets not coming, there ariſes a grievous Famine in the Camp, till ſome Ships came in with Proviſions.

Yet notwithſtanding this Succeſs, the reſt of the Ships with Proviſions, being kept back by contrary Winds, could not come up; which cauſed ſo grievous a Famine in the Camp, That the King was about to return to Edinburgh, when ſome of them came in with Proviſions (though not the Grand Fleet, which was ſtill kept back;) however the hopes of the Scots were thereby diſappointed. Then all things being ready for their Departure, the King left Temple's town, and took his way towards a Town called Fawkirk, giving Order for his whole Army to follow Him; and after Two days March, approaching near that Place early in the Morning, they ſaw the Scots afar off on the ſide of a Hill, drawing up their Men in order of Battel, being placed in Three round Bodies, conſiſting of Lances; and in the Spaces between them were placed their Archers, and ſomewhat behind ſtood all their Horſe; which being much inferior to the Engliſh, [1] William Wallys their General, aſſiſted by ſome of the Scotiſh Nobility, was reſolved to Fight on Foot; but for their better Security, they ſtrengthned the Front of their Army with certain Paliſado's ſtuck in the Ground and tied together with Ropes. Before the Battel, Wallys made them a ſhort Speech, of which we have no more than this: I have brought you to the King; hop (i. e. run) if you can, or dare. Then, upon a Signal given by the King, the firſt Battalion boldly attacked the Scotiſh Army, whoſe Horſe being few and weak, firſt gave ground, and ran away, leaving the Foot to ſhift for themſelves; and the Palliſado's ſoon broken afterwards, the Engliſh fell in upon the Scotch Foot with that violence, that the Lances, not able to bear the gauling of the Engliſh Arrows, firſt gave Ground, and then were utterly put to Flight; in which, and in the Battel it ſelf, Walſingham ſays, Sixty thouſand of them were ſlain, which is indeed incredible; but Everſden and the Norwich Chronicle are more modeſt, and do not reckon above Fifteen thouſand, which I take to be the trueſt Account, though Nicholas Trivet reckons them at Twenty thouſand: But of the Engliſh, though ſome were ſlain, we do not find how many; yet no Perſon of any Note is mentioned, except Adrian Le Say, Maſter of the Knights-Templars, who was killed in the eager perſuit of the Enemy. As for Wallys, and the remainder of the Scotch Army that eſcaped, they ſaved themſelves by the benefit of the Night, flying to their wonted Retreats, the Woods and Mountains. Sometime after the Scotch Forces rallied again, and having burnt the Town of Sterling, retired into the North, beyond the Fryth, or River that runs under that Place.*

[1] T. W.

The King Fights the Scotiſh Army, lead by Wallys, and gives them an entire Defeat.

The vaſt number of the Scots then Slain.

And but very few of the Engliſh.

* I must not here omit a passage that plainly shews the invincible Courag of this King, that just before the battle above mentiond, ~~the~~ his being frighted at the sudden shouts of the Soldiers, flung the King was just ~~ready~~ geting up, and when he was fallen, striking at him of his ribs; notwithstanding which accident, and the paine he must dured, he immediately mounted another horse, and did not omit to Army to the battle, in which he plays the part of a valiant general. Hemingii Histor. ad hunc annum. publisd in Lelands Collectan: vol: 385

Anno Dom MCCXCVIII.

But the [2] Scotiſh Hiſtorians do extreamly leſſen this Victory, and will not own above Ten Thouſand Men to have been then loſt on their ſide; and they aſcribe this Defeat to a Quarrel that happened among the Generals, who ſhould command in Chief; and that the Lord John Comyn envying Wallys's Reputation, withdrew himſelf from the Battel, together with all his Military Tenants or Feudataries: And as to William Wallys, they further relate, That ſo ſoon as he got to Perthe he diſmiſſed the Remainder of his Army, and though he never acted any more as a General, yet with a flying Party of his Followers, did not fail to infeſt the Engliſh whenever any Opportunity offer'd.

[2] Hect. Boeth. L. 16. Buchan. L. 9.

The different Account the Scotiſh Hiſtorians give of it, and the occaſion of this defeat.

King Edward having obtained this great Victory, treated his Priſoners, and all the Scotiſhmen He could light on, with due Severity, and then ſent over His Army on the other ſide the Frythe, which burnt and laid waſt moſt of the Towns there as far as Perth, ſpoiling all the Country round about, and taking the Homages and Fealties of thoſe Scotiſh Gentlemen that would come in and ſubmit to Him*:* But whilſt the King deſigned to have marched farther, He was defeated of that Intention, becauſe the Country being utterly waſted, and his Fleet with Proviſions not arriving as was expected, it cauſed ſo great a Scarcity in his Camp, that forced Him to retire through the Foreſt of Selkirk toward England, taking by the way the Caſtles of Ayer and Loughmaban in Anandale; and from thence He came to Carliſle, where the Earls of Hereford and Norfolk, being diſcontented that the King had done ſeveral things without their Privity, pretended their Horſes and Men were quite tired and worn out, and ſo took their leaves of Him and returned home*:* But as for Himſelf He went to Durham, where He held a great Council in the beginning of September, in which He beſtowed on ſeveral great Men of England and Scotland the Eſtates of ſuch Scotiſh Noblemen as had late rebelled againſt Him. I ſhall here only obſerve, That for want of a timely ſupply of Proviſions, the King loſt the faireſt Opportunity He ever had yet of totally reducing that Nation, there being no Enemies left in the Field to oppoſe Him. After this He removed to Tinmuthe, and from thence to Cottingham near Beverly, where He kept his Chriſtmaſs.

[3] Chron. Ab. The King marches further into Scotland, and burns and ſpoils the Country.

Yet is at laſt forced to return into England for want of Proviſions.

He holds a great Council at Durham where He beſtows the Eſtates of the Scotiſh Noblemen, his Enemies, upon thoſe that had ſerved him.

But [4] to put all theſe Northern Affairs together, the Scots, notwithſtanding their late loſſes, now took advantage of the King's Departure, and again taking heart, raiſed a freſh Army, and choſe the Lord Comyn for their Governor; who by Advice of a great Council of the Nobility, ſent Envoys to the Pope and King of France, and by their Mediations they ſometime after obtained a Ceſſation of Arms till the Summer following; which, being but ill obſerved by the Engliſh, the Scots took the firſt Opportunity to break, as you will find under the next Year.

[4] Buchan. L. 9. The Scots again take heart, raiſe another Army, and ſend Envoys to the Pope and King of France to interpoſe for 'em, who obtain a Ceſſation of Arms for a time.

To make an end of this Year with ſomething concerning England, I find nothing to have happened here remarkable, but the Death of two great Perſons, viz. Humphery de Bohun Earl of Hereford, and High Conſtable of England, who died ſoon after his Return from the Scotiſh Expedition; as did alſo Guy Beuchamp Earl of Warwick.

The Death of the Earl of Hereford.

As to Foreign Affairs this Year, [5] Adolph of Naſſaw, Emperor or King of the Romans, was Depoſed by the Electors and German Princes, and [5] Mezeray's Hiſtory of France ad hunc An. The Emperor Adolph is depoſed by the Electors, and Albert of Auſtria choſen in his room, who fights Adolph, and kills him in a Battel.

Anno Dom. MCCXCVIII

Albert Duke of Auſtria Elected in his Room, who craftily beſtowed great part of the Money, which he had lately received from the King of France to corrupt the Princes of the Empire, and by their Suffrages ſo purchaſed, he obtained that Dignity for himſelf. But the Emperor Adolph was a Prince of too great a Spirit eaſily to part with his Crown; ſo the two Competitors coming to a pitch'd Battel on the Second of July near Spire, Adolph (though he fought with admirable Bravery, yet) being betrayed by his Commanders, there unhappily loſt his Life; and ſo that Diſpute was put to an End.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIX.

having kept his Christmass at Codingham castle 27 Ed. 1 near Beverley and ~~[illegible]~~ ~~after being~~ returned &

Rot. Clauſ. M. 18. Dorſ. [1] T. W.

The K. holds a Parl. where he communicates the Articles of the Peace he had made with the K. of France.

King Edward being return'd out of the North, not long after Chriſtmaſs * held a Parliament at London on the firſt Sunday in Lent, [1] where He cauſed to be read before them the Pope's late Inſtrument or Award, which he had made and Publiſhed between the Kings of France and England the laſt Year, which (ſince it is very long and now become obſolete) I ſhall only give you the Heads of.

Firſt, After a Repetition of the Laſt Truce which had been already agreed upon, it farther recites, That whereas the ſaid Kings had by their Ambaſſadors and Procurators compromiſed unto him Benedict of Cajeta, as a Private Perſon (and not as a Pope) to be an Amicable Compoſer and Arbitrator of all Wars, Controverſies, Differences and Cauſes, whatever moved between them; he did therefore award and Pronounce,

Pronuntiatio P Bonifacij. Turre London 25 Ed. I. N. 758

The Articles of the Peace.

I. That there ſhould be a firm and ſtable Peace between the two Kings.

II. That the ceaſing of all Hoſtilities, by the Truce lately made and confirmed between the Two Kings for the Space of Two Years, ſhould be inviolably obſerved.

III. That the King of England ſhould Marry Margaret the King of France's Siſter, and endow her with Fifteeen thouſand Pounds Tournois (i. e. 3750 l. Sterling) per Annum.

IV. That Iſabel, the Daughter of the King of France, not then Seven Years old, ſhould in convenient time be Married to Edward the King of England's Son, who was then Thirteen years of Age, with the Dower of eighteen Thouſand Pounds Tournois per Annum.

V. That all Goods on either ſide, Ships eſpecially, taken before the War, and then not embezeled or deſtroyed, ſhould be reſtored; and if deſtroyed and not to be found, then either King to make Satisfaction at the Requeſt of each other.

VI. That all the Lands, Vaſſals and Goods, which the King of England had in France before the War, which He is to have reſtored to Him by Vertue of this Compromiſe, He ſhould have and enjoy under ſuch Conditions and Security as ſhould be awarded by the Pope.

VII. That all the Lands, Vaſſals and Goods, which the King of France was then poſſeſſed of, that were the King of England's before the War, and thoſe the King of England was then poſſeſſed of, ſhould be put into the hands and Poſſeſſion of the Pope, and ſo to remain till the Kings themſelves agreed about them, or he ſhould order what was therein to be done, without prejudice to the Lands, Vaſſals and Goods of either of the Kings, as to the Poſſeſſion, Detention or Property of them.

This Sentence or Award was dated at the Pope's Palace in Rome on the Twentieth of June 1298. *

* The original Instrument of this Award is preserv'd in the Tower, and you may see it at large in R—s Coll: p. 821, to 826. yet notwithstanding this Award of the Pope, (with which the King of France seem'd at first to be very well satisfy'd) ~~with~~, yet upon some Pretences he delay'd restoring the King's Territories in France till the Year ensuing, as you will find hereafter.

These

Anno Dom. MCCXCIX.

These [2] Articles being openly read in Parliament, all the Clergy and Laity gave their Conſent to them. This done, the Earls, Barons and Prelates, demanded the Confirmation of the Charters of Liberties, and of the Foreſts, with the Deforeſtations then made. The King thereupon confirmed the former; but refuſed that for Preambulation of Foreſts, being unwilling to part with ſo much Land out of his Foreſts as they demanded; [3] and thereupon to avoid farther Importunity, a great Contention ariſing about it, the King departed privately from London; upon which all the Eſtates of Parliament looking on themſelves as ſlighted, return'd home in great Diſcontent and Anger.

[2] T. W. After which the Earls, Barons, &c. demand a further confirmation of the Charters he had promiſed to confirm; which the King refuſing, and leaving the Parliament privately, it breaks up in Diſcontent.

Walſingham relates, That in this Parliament the King being then deſired to confirm the Charters as He had Promiſed in Scotland, He after ſome delay conſented with a Salvo Jure Coronæ, i. e. Saving the Rights of His Crown; upon which the Earls and Barons returned Home, very much diſpleaſed, as they had Reaſon, ſince by Vertue of that Clauſe the King might have avoided all thoſe Charters whenever He pleaſed, by pretending that whatever He did not think fit to obſerve, was contrary to his Prerogative or Rights of the Crown.

[3] C.Roſſin Bib.Cot. Walſingham gives a more probable Account of it.

But at laſt, when He ſaw they would not be otherwiſe ſatisfied, He called another Parliament, to meet at London Fifteen days after Eaſter, (as appears by a * Record of this Year,) and in that (as Nicholas Trivet and T. Walſingham relate) the King confirmed the ſaid Charters, without any ſuch Clauſe as before mentioned; and further iſſued out a new Commiſſion to Three Biſhops, Three Earls and as many Barons, to make a freſh Perambulation of Foreſts, that upon any doubtful matters ariſing they might ſettle and declare them according to Juſtice, Equity, and good Conſcience.

He calls another Parliament, and again confirms them without any Saving Clauſe.

* Rot. Clauſ. 27. Ed. I. M. 18. Dorſ.

To give you ſome Account of the Affairs of Scotland: In the latter end of this laſt Year, [4] the Lord John Comyn, Governor of Scotland, having ſent Envoys to the King of France, by his Interceſſion and that of Margaret his Siſter, now like to be Queen of England, he obtained a Truce for the Scots, then in Arms, for Seven Months: But Buchanan tell us it was not well obſerved on the Engliſh ſide; for they kept thoſe Ambaſſadors Priſoners, whom the Governor was ſending to Pope Boniface on their behalf.

[4] Buchan. ib. The Scots, by the Mediation of the French, obtain another Truce.

Wherefore ſince the Scots perceived they could not obtain a Peace, unleſs they would wholy ſubmit themſelves to the Tyranny of the Engliſh, rather than they would undergo it, they reſolved to run all Hazards whatſoever; and in the beginning of this Summer they renewed the War, and once more drove the Engliſh out of all Towns and Caſtles, except thoſe of Roxborough and Berwick. *(

Yet they not long after again renew the War.

* But altho' the Scots were left out of the late Peace ~~intended~~ ~~[illegible]~~ between the two Kings, yet it seems they met so good an Interest at the Court of Rome, that not long after the Pope sent a monitory Bull to King Edward, that he should desist from making any further war upon Scotland, that a general Peace being concluded he might the better joyn his Forces with other Christian Princes in making war against the Infidels in the Holy Land, as appears by the Original of this Bull, which is still extant, and is publish'd in R— Coll: p. 827 828. But it seems King Edward took little Notice of it; ~~but~~ for as soon as the said Truce expir'd he again renew'd the War against them.

But to repreſs theſe Inſolencies, and again to reduce Scotland to its Obedience, King Edward by His * Writs Summoned the Militia of the Kingdom to meet Him at Carliſle on the Vigil of Pentecoſt, to go with Him into Scotland againſt his Enemies; and to ſettle ſuch Engliſh, as He had given their Lands to, in the quiet Poſſeſſion of them. In the mean time He received a Meſſage from the Pope, which was, That He was ſending his Nuncio to Monſtrevil in Picardy, where there ſhould be a Treaty to determine all differences that remain'd between Him and France, in perſuance of his former Award. This Meſſage was communicated to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the other Biſhops, Earls and Barons

The King again Summons his Militia to go againſt the Scots.

* Brevia Regis. in Turre London, 27. Ed. I.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIX.

The King puts off their meeting for a time.

[4] Chron. Sti. Alban. in Bib. Cot.

He holds a great Council at Weſtminſter.

rons, who thereupon adviſed Him to remain in the South until this Treaty ſhould be over, by reaſon of thoſe Debates that might happen in it, which ſhould require ſpeedy Advice and Reſolution: And therefore He wrote to all the Sheriffs of England, to make Proclamation, That the Militia ſhould not meet at Carliſle until the firſt of Auguſt. This bears Date at Stabeneth (now Stepney) the Seventh Day of May this Year. In the mean while the King [4] held a great Council of his Nobility at Weſtminſter, concerning the Scotiſh Expedition, and went about Midſummer to St. Albans, to implore the Aſſiſtance of that Saint in His intended War againſt the Scots; and from thence the King ſent his Writ or Letter, directed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, deſiring him to give order to his Suffragans that publick Prayers ſhould be made in all their Churches for the ſame purpoſe; and ſince many of the Nobility and People were ſtill diſſatisfied, that the Perambulation and ſetting out the Bounds of the Foreſts were not finiſhed ſo faſt as they deſired, the King ſent out * Writs to the Sheriffs of all Counties, to proclaim, and give notice, That the Commiſſioners for the ſaid Perambulation ſhould meet at Northampton at Michaelmaſs next, with full Power to proceed in that Buſineſs without Delay. This Record bears Date at Lewis the Five and twentieth of June.

* Brevia in Turre. 27 Ed. I. Printed in Pryn's 3d Vol. f. 809.

He gives notice, That the Commiſſioners for the Perambulation of Foreſts, ſhould meet at Northampton. Brevia Parl. Printed in Pryn, f. 810.

And ſets out a Proclamation, to give Reaſons why theſe Perambulations had not been done ſooner.

But this not being thought ſufficient, ſince it was reported and noiſed abroad, That the King did not intend to obſerve Magna Charta, nor the Charter of Foreſts, nor that He would ever ſuffer the Perambulations to be made, and their Boundaries ſet out; therefore the ſame day He iſſued forth another Proclamation, which was to give the Cauſes and Reaſons why theſe Perambulations, &c could not be made ſooner, and to let the World know, That He had been too rudely Treated, and not in due manner deſired to do theſe things; and that thoſe who raiſed theſe Reports, were malicious People, who deſigned only to foment Differences between Him and his Subjects, and to diſturb the Peace of the Nation: Dated the ſame Day, and at the ſame Place with the former Writ. But this Trouble the King might have avoided, by cauſing the Commiſſioners to have diſpatched this Buſineſs ſooner; and it was well if this Declaration now met with the Effect for which the King deſign'd it.

Nothing elſe happening conſiderable this Summer, I ſhall therefore give you an Account of ſome Matters relating to Foreign Affairs.

* Rot. Alman. 27 Ed I. M. 11 intus.

The Kings of England and France agree to deliver up each others Dominions, according to the Pope's Award.

The Execution of the Pope's Award, or Sentence between the Two Kings, was ſtill delayed, neither of them being forward to deliver their Poſſeſſions, &c. in Gaſcoigne, into his hands, according to his late Award. But King Edward reſolving to make Peace if He could, * ſent the Biſhop of Vicenza to the King of France, before whom, with the Conſent of the King of England's Commiſſioners, it was agreed, That both the Kings ſhould voluntarily perform that Article; and King Edward thereupon Authorized ſeveral Commiſſioners to deliver the Poſſeſſion of his Lands, Vaſſals and Goods, into the hands of the Biſhop, who was to receive them in the Name of the Pope, as a private Perſon, and as Benedict of Cajeta. This Inſtrument bears Date at Weſtminſter, the Twenty ſecond of April, 1299. the Seven and twentieth Year of Edward I. and in May following, Prince Edward made the Earl of Lincoln his Proxy, to contract the Eſpouſals with Iſabel the King of France's that this Agreement did not then produce a firm and lasting Peace between the two Kings appears, for, that about Midsummer following the said Bishop, being the Pope's Nuncio, coming to reul and there meeting with the Ambassadors of both Princes, who then agreed to all such Articles as id Nuncio should award, & they thereupon again confirm'd the former Sentence made by the Pope as vate Person concerning the Marriages of both the said Princesses; and it was then agreed and provided Dowrie or Jointure each of them were to enjoy; and it was further agreed that if either of the Marriages did not take Effect thro any Failure of ye King of England, or his Son the Prince, that then e present or future Right, that they had or might Claim to any Territories in France sh:d thereby become forfeited to the King of France & yt all ye Subjects & Vassals of ye said Territories should be absolved of all Homage, Fealty or any obligation whatsoever to ye sd King or his Son; so yt thereupon all the Subjects & Communities of ye Towns thereof shall swear Allegiance to ye King of France and his Successors as their lawful Lord & Sovereign & ye Procurator of ye King of France agreed on his behalf, yt he sh.d perform all things contained in ye said Award relating to his said Daughter and Sister, and if ye former shall not be deliv.d to be married to the Lord Edward, Son to ye King of England within four months after she becomes of years fit for marriage, she being demanded by ye King of England or his Son, ye King of France does thereby engage to forfeit the Sum of 100000 Livres in Gold to ye sd King of England or his Son; then follow ye Names of certain Earls & Barons of both Kingdoms who were to take an Oath on their Masters behalf, yt ye sd Marriages should be faithfully & duly performed according to the Popes Sentence.

rance's Daughter, as appears upon the ſame Roll, though they were ot then performed, nor long after this time.(1)

Anno Dom. MCCXCIX.

While the Biſhop of Vicenza was in France, he ſollicited for the Reaſe of John Baliol, late King of Scots, by the King of France's Mediaon to the Pope, who gave it in Charge to the Biſhop his Legate, to ove King Edward's Ambaſſadors upon it; they granting his Requeſt, the King's Conſent, obtained his Liberty, and he was * delivered to e Biſhop at Whitſand in France, by Robert de Bourgherſh Knight, onſtable of Dover Caſtle, the King's Proxy, upon Saturday before St. Mary Magdalen's Day (or Twentieth of July) upon Condition, That e Pope might direct and order what he pleaſed, only as to his erſon and the Eſtate he had in England, as King Edward might ave done, if He had been Perſonally with Him in England, ſaving Him and his Heirs, Kings of England, the Kingdom of Scotland, the eople and Inhabitants, and all the Appurtenances to that Kingdom: being alſo there read, and rehearſed before his Delivery, and in his own Preſence, and in that of the Biſhop of Vicenza, That he ad committed many Inhuman Treſpaſſes and Treaſons againſt his overeign Prince King Edward, contrary to his Homage and Fealty, &c. d that the Pope ſhould not ordain nor direct any thing in the ingdom of Scotland concerning the People or Inhabitants, or any ing appertaining to the ſame Kingdom, on behalf of John Baliol, his Heirs, &c. And upon theſe Terms, the Biſhop, in Name of, and the Pope's Proxy, received him from the King's Commiſſioner on the id Saturday abovementioned, A. D. 1299. and 27th of Edward I. ertainly at this time the Pope underſtood not that Scotland was his igniory, though he claimed it the Year after. Then follow some Conditions of less Moment, as for ye releasing of all Prisoners taken ~~[illegible]~~ on either Side & particularly for ye Delivery of John Balliol late King of Scots, who was to be delivered to the sd Legate who was also to see ye Articles of this Agreement ratifyed by both Kings with other particulars needless to be here recited & for wch I refer ye Reader to the Original Instrument preserved in ye Tower, or to the Copy thereof published in R-'s Coll: pp. 848 to 844. ~~and~~ it bears date at Monstreul ye Friday before Midsummer An: D: 1299.

The late King of Scots is ſet at Liberty; with the Conditions of it.

* Brevia 26 27 Ed. I. in Tur. Printed in Pryn. ib. 779. and Dr. B's. Append. N. 36.

Yet it is moſt likely, That this was procured by John Baliol's own ollicitation, ſince He was willing to go any where, rather than into his own Country, He having voluntarily, and of his own Accord, (without the Privity of King Edward) in an *Inſtrument drawn up by publick Notary, the Year before, renounced his Right to Scotland, d reſolved never to come there again, or to have any more to do with it; becauſe (as He ſaid) He had found ſuch Malice, Fraud, Treaſon, and Deceit in the Scots, That they had deſigned to Poyſon Him. This likewiſe appears by an Inſtrument upon Record, drawn up in the Preſence of Anthony Biſhop of Durham, whom He there Deſires, make King Edward acquainted with the Premiſſes. (2) see below

* Printed in Dr. B's. Append. N. 37. and in Pryn's 3d Vol. f. 665.

Baliol renounced his Right to Scotland, before his Diſcharge.

After this, in [5] the beginning of September, the Lady Margaret, Siſter to the King of France, was Conducted to England, by the uke of Burgundy and Earl of Bretaign, to whom King Edward was Married on the Twelfth of this Month, in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, by the Archbiſhop. The Wedding was kept with great Splendour, and much Foreign Nobility were at this Solemnity: But though the King's Expectations were very great from this Match, et neither His own nor the Nation's were at all anſwered by it, y more (as I may ſay) than they have been by ſome other Matches, at have been ſince made, between our Kings and other Ladies of the oyal Family of France.

[5] T. W.

The King is Married to the King of France's Siſter. But I cannot but here observe yt King Edward's Territories now in France remained still in ye Pope's Hands by way of Sequestration, nor is there any Time mentioned in those Articles for their Restitution: nor were they wholy restored till about four years after as you will find in due Time.

The Mirth and Jollity of this Wedding being over, [1] the King eld a Parliament at York on Martin-maſs (or Eleventh of November)

[1] * Ibm.

The King holds a Parliament, in order to carry on the War againſt Scotland, which is put off for a Time; and the reaſon of it.

(2) and not long after all Matters of Dispute between the two Kings being to ow ended; they thereupon confirmed and ratifyed under both their Great Seals, the foresaid reement made at Monstreul, & King Edward confirmed the his Part on ye 14th Day of July d King Philip did the like on the Day of the Invention of Holy Cross or the Day of August this year as appears by the original Instrument still extant, which are published in s Coll: p. 846. to 853.

Anno Dom. MCCXCIX.

[2] C. W. H.

[3] Chron. Lan. The Nobility are diſcontented, that the great Charter was not duly obſerv'd.

to adviſe how He might beſt carry on the Scotiſh War: And when was broke up, the King, in order to perſue his Deſign, went as far Berwick with his Army, intending to Relieve Sterling Caſtle, whic was at that time beſieged by the Scots. But the Noblemen who we then with the King, informing Him, [2] That beſides the want of Forrag the Boggy and low Grounds were impaſſible in this Winter Seaſo He alter'd his Reſolution, and ſo ſent to the Beſieged, being in wa of Victuals, bidding them Surrender the Caſtle upon Condition th their Lives and Limbs ſhould be ſafe; and ſo this Expedition ende But another Reaſon of it's being put off, is alſo given by our [3] Autho who relates, That the Nobility being diſcontented, found fault that th Charters had not been duly obſerved ſince they were confirm'd; where upon they taking their Leaves, and withdrawing themſelves into Engla the King was forced to give over all farther Action for that Seaſo After which He remain'd at Berwick till Chriſtmaſs was over, whi the Queen ſtayed at Windſor; but He did nothing more in thoſe Par all that Winter. Nor do I find any thing elſe conſiderable to have hap pen'd this Year, except the Deceaſe of Henry de Newark, Archbiſho of York, a Prelate no ways Remarkable, either for any great Vert or Vice. He was Succeeded by Nicholas de Corbridge, a moſt Learne Divine, and General Scholar.

The Deceaſe of Henry de Newark, Archbiſhop of York.

Anno Dom. MCCC.

The King returns from Scotland, and reſtores the Liberties of the City. Fabian's Chron. ad hunc An.

* Rot. Clauſ. 28. Ed. I. M. 17. Dorſ.

He holds a Parliament at Weſtminſter, with the Statutes there made.

The King having kept his Chriſtmaſs at Berwick, and delivered th Government of Scotland to John de St. John, and others joined in Com miſſion with Him, returned into England about Candlemaſs; and comi to Wincheſter, He ſent for the Citizens of London, and then reſtor their Liberties, after they had been kept Twelve Years in his Hand But before He left Scotland, He iſſued out his * Writs, Dated at Berwi on the Nine and twentieth of December, for the calling a Parliamen to meet Him at Weſtminſter on the Second Sunday in Lent; in whi all the Eſtates being aſſembled, the Great Charter of the Liberties England, and that of Foreſts, with the Statute of Wincheſter, at th Requeſt and Interceſſion of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Ea Marſhal and all the Barons, were renew'd and confirm'd, and new Statute made for the better explaining them, called Articuli ſup Chartas, or Articles upon the Charters, which are Printed among th Statutes at Large, and in Coke's Second Inſtitutes. f. 537.

[5] Chron. St. Alban. in Bib. Cotton.

The King did all He could, with the Biſhops and Noblemen, to avoid paſſing theſe Statutes; but could not prevail.

But though our Printed Hiſtorians do not mention it, yet a [5] Ma nuſcript Author of that time relates, concerning this Tranſaction, Th the King was at firſt loth to grant this Requeſt of the Archbiſho and Barons, and therefore to avoid it, tryed to work upon each of th Lords apart, ſome by fair Words and Promiſes, and others by Preſen to put off this Buſineſs 'till the next Parliament after Michaelmaſs; a therefore now deſired no more Aid of them, than a 20th part their Goods; and through theſe ſubtile Methods He prevailed wi greater part of them: Yet notwithſtanding this, the Biſhops, and ma of the moſt conſiderable Noblemen, ſtill perſiſted in their firſt Dema of having the Charters Confirm'd, and that the Biſhops and Earls ſhou alſo put their Seals to them; at which Propoſals the King, much offe ded, asked them, If they took Him for a Deceiver? Whereup the Lords deſiſted for a few days from their Petition; yet at laſt th King being prevail'd on, by the Perſwaſions of ſome that were no abo out Him, went into Weſtminſter Hall, and there confirm'd the greater harter, with the Articles upon it, which He cauſed to be read before l there preſent, and then ordered his Great Seal to be put to it; d Speaking in Engliſh, commanded the Archbiſhop, if he knew e ſaid Articles to be Defective in any Point, That he ſhould declare , and they ſhould be preſently amended: And then He permitted the rchbiſhop and Biſhops to denounce all thoſe Excommunicated that ould preſume to break or infringe the ſaid Charters, or any thing herein contain'd. This Prudent Act was very Seaſonable, and quieted e Angry Minds of the Nobility, eſpecially the Earl of Warwick, d the Lord Walter Beuchamp, Steward of the King's Houſhold, ho were like to have gone into their Countries to have raiſed orces to compel the King, had He not voluntarily agreed to do .

Anno Dom. MCCC.

The Archbiſhop denounces Sentence of Excommunication, againſt all thoſe that ſhould infringe the great Charters, which quiets the Minds of the diſcontented Noblemen.

Not long after His Majeſty, the better to obtain the good Will of is People, [1] prohibited all thoſe Foreign baſe Coins called Crocards nd Pollards, that were of a * mixed Mettle, from being any longer urrent; which proved a great Eaſe and Satisfaction to his Subjects, ho had loſt much by them. I have no more to add concerning theſe rticles on the Charters, but that it being provided by the † Statute it lf, That for the better Obſervation thereof, in all Caſes where ere was no Remedy at Common Law, there were Three Knights to e choſen in every County, Summarily to hear and determine, from day o day, all Matters concerning ſuch as had offended againſt the ſaid harters, (the King's Miniſters not excepted) without allowing any elays otherwiſe allowable by the Common Law: And theſe likewiſe ad Power to puniſh Offenders, by Impriſonment, Ranſom and merciament, according as the Fault required.

[1] C. W. H. T. W.

The King calls in the baſe Money and Pollards. call'd Crocards.

* Note, they contain'd a little Silver, but much more Copper.

† Vid. the Stat. at large, ad hunc An.

Commiſſioners appointed to hear and determine all Complaints concerning the breach of the great Charters.

To the ſame purpoſe the King likewiſe Iſſued his * Writs to the heriffs, Coroners and Commons of all the Counties in England, to huſe Three Knights to be at York on the Morrow of Aſcention, to eceive his Inſtructions accordingly: Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, he Seven and twentieth of March, in the Eight and twentieth Year of is Reign. He alſo ſent out other Writs to all the Sheriffs in England, y which He Commanded them to read the ſaid Charters, and Publiſh hem Four times in the Year, viz. on the firſt County-days after aſter, St. John Baptiſt, Michaelmaſs and Chriſtmaſs; and as much as n them lay to ſee them firmly holden and kept in all their Articles. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, the Eight and twentieth of March he ſame Year.

* Rot. Clauſ. 28 Ed. I. M. 11. Dorſ.

Writs iſſued out to chuſe three Knights of each County, to receive the Sheriffs Inſtructions.

Then within leſs than Three Weeks after, (to the end that the People night be more ready for his Service, and willing to Aſſiſt Him with ubſidies upon occaſion) He directed his † Writs to all the Sheriffs f England, reciting, That whereas He had by his ſpecial Grace nd Favour granted the Articles upon the Charters, ſo much to their dvantage, He Commanded them to proclaim them in the County-Court, and in all Burghs and Mercate Towns within their Counties r Bayliwicks, and to cauſe them to be firmly obſerved, and performed. Witneſs the King at St. Albans, the Five and twentieth of pril.

† Ib. M. 7 Dorſ.

The Articles upon the Charters, are commanded to be Proclaimed in every County.

Anno Dom. MCCC.

* Ib. M. 8 Dorſ. Other Writs iſſued out to the Commiſſioners of Perambulations of Foreſts, to receive the King's Inſtructions about them.

‡ Contin. Hiſt. Eng. p. 68.

And to ſatisfie the Minds of the People, He had, about a Fortnigh before, directed his * Writs to ſeveral Commiſſioners in all Counties, where there were Foreſts, to make Perambulations, and to receive In-ſtructions about them on the morrow of the Feaſt of Aſcenſion; with a Charge that through their neglect they might not remain undone. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, the Firſt of April.

Dr. † Brady, from a Clauſe in the foregoing Writ, reciting, That the King had granted the Charters abovementioned out of his ſpecial Grac and Favour (which Words are put in different Characters) would fain inſinuate, as if the Nation had no other Right to theſe Charters than the King's meer Favour and Grace; and therefore thus proceeds in his Relation concerning this Affair: Yet all theſe Writs and Commiſſions did no ſatisfy the Earls, Barons, and Others; for they ſtill murmured, and pretended that the Perambulations of Foreſts would not be really made, or duly performed. Wherefore Walſingham relates, That the King held another Parliamen at Stamford, to which the Earls and Barons came with great Force, and with Intent, as 'twas ſaid, to Extort the full Execution of the Charte of the Foreſt, then delayed; to whoſe Will the King condeſcended, and granted what they demanded.

But the Doctor places this great Council under a wrong Year: And tho' the word Extort is here made uſe of by the Monkiſh Writer, yet is it not to be taken in ſuch a Senſe, as if they had no Right to demand a freſh Confirmation and due Execution of thoſe Charters, ſince they were but the ſame his Father, Grandfather, and Himſelf, had ſo often Sworn to obſerve, and had been ſo well paid for; and had not the Execution of them been put off from time to time, it had been very great folly in the Nobility and People of the Kingdom ſo eagerly to have inſiſted upon the Performance of his Grant.

Co 2*d. Iſtit. Artic. ſup. Chartas. p* 569.

About this time He alſo ſent the Statute of Wincheſter to be agai Proclaimed, with Command to all the Sheriffs in England, as it had been Confirmed and Renewed, (in the 17th Article upon the Charters) that they ſhould ſee it firmly obſerved and kept, in al and ſingular its Articles. Witneſs the King at Stamford, the Second of May.

* Rot. Pat. 28 Ed. I. M 14. Printed in Pryn's 3d Vol. p 884. The King at the Requeſt of the Biſhops Earls, &c. Iſſues out another Commiſſion for the Perambulation of Foreſts.

Then Eight Days after, the King being at St. Edmund's Bury *, at the Requeſt of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others there preſent, and to quiet their Minds, He the ſecond time renewed his Commiſſion to Three Knights, and others, to be Elected in each County, to ſee the Articles of the Great Charter, the Charter of the Foreſt, and Statute of Weſtminſter, well obſerved; and to puniſh all Offences againſt them, not puniſhable by the Common Law of the Realm; and this by ſpeedy Juſtice, and quick Proceedings upon Complaints from day to day, without allowance of ſuch Delays as the Common Law admitted; yet with a Saving to the Common Law, that it might not thereby receive Prejudice, or any Plea to be holden before theſe Commiſſioners, that might be determined by it. Witneſs the King at St. Edmund's Bury, Decimo die Maii, A. R. 28.

Other Writs to the Sheriffs to be Aſſiſtant to the Commiſſioners.

There are likewiſe Two other Writs upon the ſame Roll and Membrane, dated the ſame Day and at the ſame Place, to the Sheriffs of every County, to be Aſſiſtant to theſe Commiſſioners, ſo often as they ſhould give them Notice, and to impower them to Swear them in a full County-Court, well and faithfully to Execute their Office.

When

Anno Dom. MCCC.

When the King had thus ſettled and compoſed the diſcontented Spi-its of his Nobility and People, by theſe Gracious Conceſſions, having lready Summon'd all his Earls, Barons, and Military Tenants to meet Him at York on Midſummer-Day, He there held another Parliament, or Council; [2] where his intended Expedition againſt the Scots was at rſt oppoſed by ſome of the Earls and Barons, who pretended that hey were not Bound by their Tenures to attend Him thither; but they ere ſoon Confuted, and put to Silence, from divers unqueſtionable Teſtimonies extracted from the Chronicles of Marianus Scotus, William of Malmesbury, and Roger Hoveden: And being now ſatisfied that they ought o attend the King in this Expedition, He immediately marched with powerful Army into Scotland; and about the beginning of July, when He ame in ſight of the Scotiſh Army, and found they declined Fighting, and etreated into the Country, He quietly encamped in Anandale, and here Beſieged and took the Caſtle of Loghmaban without any oppoſition: Then advancing farther, He did the like by the ſtrong Caſtle of Caerverock, which after ſome Reſiſtance, was taken by a Mine, and ſur-endred to the King's Mercy; into which He preſently put a ſtrong Gari-on. From thence He marched into Galloway, where the Biſhop of that Dioceſs came, to the King, on the behalf of the Scots, to Treat of Peace; ut without any effect. Then a few days after, there came to him the arl of Bouquhan and the Lord Comyn of Badenagh, and Treated with the ing; but it ſoon broke of, becauſe of the unreaſonable Demands of e Scotiſh Nobility; who required, That He ſhould permit John Baliol, d his Son, peaceably to Reign over them; and that He ſhould again eſtore them to their Eſtates, which He had already beſtowed on di-ers Engliſh Noblemen; declaring, That if He would not agree to this, ey would Defend themſelves to the utmoſt; and ſo upon his not ranting their Deſires, they parted in great Wrath.

He Summons all His Military Tenants to meet Him at York.

[2] C. J. E.

Where ſome at firſt oppoſe his Expedition into Scotland. Chron. Anon. in Bib. Cotton. Claud. D. 6.

He Marches into Scotland, and takes divers Caſtles, whereupon the Scots ſend to treat of a Peace, but without any Effect, their Demands being unreaſonable.

Then the King marched forward to the River Swyney, where He ſtaid me Days, till He could bring up Proviſions for his Forces from the hips. Here the Scots again appear'd encamped on the other ſide e River, to ſtop his Paſſage: Whereupon He ſent over ſome Ar-hers, who beat back the Scots with their Arrows; Yet the King fear-g ſome Ambuſh by reaſon of their ſo ſpeedy Retreat, ſent the Earl of Warren to recal and bring back thoſe that were paſſed over; but they eing the Earl coming towards them, imagin'd he had been come to eir Relief, and again vigourouſly aſſaulted the Scots, who were then rawn up not far off. During their Engagement, another part of e King's Army, ſeeing the danger of their Countrymen, likewiſe aſſed the River to their Aſſiſtance, and were followed by Prince Edward ith his whole Battalion; which the King obſerving, and ſeeing the anger of an Ambuſh was over, order'd a Charge to be Sounded, and reſently paſſed the River Himſelf with the reſt of his Forces; which ſo on as the Scots obſerved, they fled to their Bogs and Mountains; how-er many were killed in the Perſuit. And here the King had given em an entire Defeat, if the Welſh Foot, who were moſt uſed to ſuch ugh and difficult Places, had done their Duty; but yet, the gliſh obtain'd an undiſputed Victory.

[3] Id. Ib.

The King marches farther into Scotland, and gains the Paſs over the River Swyney.

After which, the King marched with his Army to the Siege of Ster-g-Caſtle, which held out Three Months, notwithſtanding all the

The King takes Sterling Caſtle after a long Seige.

Ann. Dom. MCCC.

King's Forces could do, and the Aſſault of divers Battering Engines rear'd with infinite Charge and Labour; yet the Governor William Olivant, was at laſt forced to Surrender it for want of Victuals, tho' upon advantageous Articles, which were not well kept with him.

[4] In Bib. Bodl. The manner how it was reduced.

But the [4] Eveſham Chronicle (which Fabian follows) relates, That the King then fright'ned the Beſieged into a Surrender, by cauſing two pair of large Gallows to be erected before it; and commanded Proclamation to be made in the hearing of thoſe within, That if they did not yield up the Caſtle by a certain Day therein prefix'd, they ſhould be all hanged without Mercy: Whereupon, the Scots conſidering the Strength of the King's Forces, and their own Weakneſs, thought beſt to Surrender that Caſtle to Him, before the time was quite elapſed of their being received to Mercy.

The King is notwithſtanding forced to return home for want of Money and Proviſions, as alſo for other Reaſons.

[5] In Bib. Cotton.

After theſe Succeſſes, the King deſigned to have marched farther into the Northern Parts, and to have reduced the whole Kingdom to his Obedience, but He was fain to return homewards for want of Money and Forage, and a ſufficient number of Foot; to all which, the nameleſs [5] Chronicle already cited, adds, That the Earls, and Barons, being weary of theſe Delays, and having loſt their Horſes, and ſpent all their Money in this Service, deſired leave to go home: At which, the King being much perplex'd, held a great Council of War with the Noblemen about Him, who were all of Opinion, That the Summer being far ſpent, He ſhould for the preſent diſmiſs the greater part of his Army; which the King agreeing to, that He might do the beſt He could to ſecure that Country, put good Gariſons into the Caſtles He had gained, and immediately returned home. But He had alſo a good Pretence for this Reſolution, by reaſon of the Pope's unexpected interpoſing himſelf on behalf of the Scotiſh Nation; to underſtand which, I muſt let the Reader know, [1] T. W. The Scots prevail upon the Pope to take their Part; with their Complaints to him.

That about the beginning of this Year, [1] the Scots believing all things Saleable at Rome, had ſent their Envoys thither, and richly preſented Pope Boniface, moving him for his Judgment and Aſſiſtance againſt the Engliſh, making lamentable Complaints, and repreſenting to him the afflicted State of their Country, and the Uſurpation of the King of England upon them, and his moſt Tyrannical Proceedings with them, contrary to all Right and Equity; proteſting, they never knew of any Sovereignty He had over them, but that they were a free Kingdom of themſelves, and as ſuch He had dealt with them at firſt upon the Death of their laſt King Alexander, both in the Treaty of the Marriage for his Son Edward with Margaret the Heireſs of Scotland, and alſo after her Deceaſe, for the Deciſion of the Title to the Crown; wherein He ſought by their Conſents to be made Arbitrator, as indeed He was, howſoever afterward they were conſtrained to give way to his Will; yet what ever they yielded unto, was only becauſe they were otherwiſe unable to reſiſt; as alſo ſeveral other things needleſs to be here repeated.

Whereupon the Pope orders the Archbiſhop to go to the King with his Bull in their Favour.

Upon the Receipt of which Letters, the Pope ſo far complied with their Deſires, That he ſent over a Nuncio into England, and appointed the Archbiſhop of Canterbury his extraordinary Legate, ordering him to go with the Pope's Brief or Letter, and deliver it with all ſpeed to the King, which was to this Effect:

Firſt,

Anno Dom. MCCC.

Firſt, '[2] His Holineſs laid Claim to the Sovereignty of the Kingdom of 'Scotland, as belonging to the Church of Rome by a full and perfect 'Right; and then Requires and Exhorts the King, in the Name of God, 'to Diſcharge out of Priſon, and Reſtore to their former Liberty, all 'Biſhops, Clerks, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons; and to remove all 'his Officers, whom by Force and Fear He had appointed to govern 'that Nation under Him; and willed Him, if He pretended any Right 'to the Kingdom of Scotland, or any part of it, not to omit ſending 'to him Commiſſioners fully inſtructed, within ſix Months after the 'Receipt of his Letters, He being ready to do Him Juſtice, as his Be'loved Son, and inviolably to obſerve his Right, if He had any; Refer'ring and Reſerving to the Cognizance and Determination of the Ro'man See, all Queſtions, Strifes and Controverſies whatſoever, between 'the ſaid King and the Kingdom of Scotland, and the Prelates, Clerks, 'and Secular Perſons thereof, which then had been, were, or might be, 'for the future: Decreeing it void, if any thing ſhould be attempted to 'the contrary. This was dated at Anagnia, the 5th of the Calends of July, or the 27th of June, A. D. 1300. * The Original of this Brief is still preserv'd in ye Tower, & is publish'd in R—s Coll: p. 844, 845.

[2] Id. Ib.

The Effect of it.

The Pope takes the Appeal of the Scots, and declares he will hear the Differences between them and the King.

What the Archbiſhop did in perſuance of this Bull, appears in * Matt. Weſtminſter, who has given us a full Relation of it from this Prelate's own Letter, or Report to the Pope of all his Proceedings in this Affair; where he declares, That he was very well pleaſed with the Employment his Holineſs had entruſted him with; and to ſhew his ready Obedience to his Commands, lets him know, That he made what haſt he could to attend the King at that time in Scotland, and came to Him the 25th of Auguſt, being then at Dinner in his Camp near the Abbey of Dazquer. He appointed him the next Day for the Delivery of the Pope's Letters and Meſſage, which was done accordingly; and the Letters preſented to the King, before Prince Edward his Son, the Earls, Barons, and a great many Knights of his Army, who cauſing them publickly to be read, were attentively heard by them all: Then the Archbiſhop (as himſelf in his Letter to the Pope relates) perſuaded the King, by all Ways and Means he could think of, to Obey and Comply with every thing contain'd in the Brief; which done, he withdrew by the King's Command, whilſt He conſulted with his Great Men; and being called in again had this Anſwer: That having received the Pope's Admonition, concerning the State of the Kingdom of Scotland, it was the Cuſtom of England, That in ſuch weighty Affairs, all whom theſe Matters concern'd ought to be Adviſed with; and the preſent Buſineſs of Scotland having relation to the State and Right of the Kingdom of England, there were many Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Great Men, not then with Him in the Army, concern'd in it, without whoſe Advice He could not Anſwer fully: Therefore that He intended, as ſoon as He could, to Conſult and Deliberate with the abſent, as well as preſent, Great Men, and by their common and joynt Determination, ſend his Holineſs an Anſwer by Meſſengers of his Own.

* Ad hunc Annum.

The Archbiſhop readily obeys the Pope's Orders, and goes into Scotland to the King, and delivers the Brief.

The King conſults with his great Men, and returns the Archbiſhop a prudent and gallant Anſwer.

This is the Archbiſhop's own Account in * his Letter to the Pope of this Tranſaction with the King; but Walſingham, (as alſo ſome Manuſcript Chronicles of that time) ſay, The King return'd the Pope a much much bolder Anſwer to this Meſſage, by the Archbiſhop, viz. That He would for no cauſe whatever ceaſe to defend his Right againſt the Scots both by Words and Actions. Yet this is certain, That the King, for the Reaſons already given, as alſo that He might not be thought obſtinate in oppoſing the Pope's Commands, immediately (being near the end of Auguſt) made a Truce with the Scots till Whitſontide following; and then returned into England about the beginning of September. *

* Matt. Weſt. ut ſupra.

Anno Dom. MCCC.

Other Writers make the King to return the Pope a bolder Anſwer.

* Which is confirmd by a Record in French enter'd on ye Rolls of this year [Rot: pat 28. E. I. m. 3.] wherein ye King declares that the said Truce was granted to the People of Scotland at the Intercession of ye King of France, this Declaration bears Date at Dumfreez ye 30th. of October, vid: R—s Coll: p. 368 369.

* Rot. Clauſ. 28. Ed. I. M. 3. Dorſ. Printed in Pryn's 3d Vol. p. 884.

The King Summons divers learned Clerks to attend him at the Parliament at Lincoln, and for what Purpoſe.

* Ib.

He writes likewiſe to the Chancellors of both Univerſities, for the moſt knowing Men in the Civil-Law.

Ib. Printed in Pryn, p. 885.

The King, that He might be the better prepared to return the Pope an Anſwer to his late Letters, ſo ſoon as He came to Roſe-Caſtle in Cumberland, ſent out his * Writs of Summons, bearing date the Six and twentieth of September, directed to certain of His own Clerks, and to ſeveral Deans of Cathedral Churches, as alſo to Archdeacons, Officials, and others that had the beſt Reputation for Antiquaries and Lawyers in thoſe times, to come to the Parliament at Lincoln, for that He would have ſpecial Conference and Treaty with them and Others of His Council, concerning the Right and Dominion He and His Anceſtors had over the Kingdom of Scotland; and to the ſame purpoſe He * Wrote to the Chancellors of both Univerſities, to ſend to this Parliament the moſt experienced and knowing Men in the Civil Law, who were alſo ſent accordingly: And further He directed His Writs to ſeveral Deans and Chapters, and Abbots, and Priors, and their Convents (being the chiefeſt of the Nation) to ſearch their Archives, and ſend to this Parliament Extracts from all ſuch Chronicles in which was to be found any thing concerning his Sovereignty over the Kingdom of Scotland, or that might make good his Title to it: And what theſe Perſons ſo Summoned did in perſuance of theſe Writs, you will find hereafter.

The main Ends of this Parliament at Lincoln.

* Rot. Clauſ. 28. Ed. I. M. 9. Dorſ.

But though this might be one End of the King's Summoning this Parliament at Lincoln, yet it was not the chief Deſign of that Meeting, but rather to put an end to the the long depending Differences about the Foreſts, and for receiving the Returns of the Perambulations of them, and hearing and determining all juſt Claims and Exceptions concerning them, which appears by the Kings * Writ dated the ſame Six and twentieth of September, at Roſe-Caſtle in Cumberland: But the Writ being very extraordinary (though it be ſomewhat long) I ſhall here give you the Subſtance of it.

The Subſtance of the Writ of Summons to this Parliament.

After a Recital, 'That the King had granted the Charter of the 'Foreſt, and had aſſigned Commiſſioners, in every County where there 'were Foreſts, to make Perambulations, and to report them to Himſelf 'before any Execution was done thereon, that His Own Oath, the 'Right of the Crown, his Reaſons and Claims, as well as thoſe of 'all Others might be ſaved; and though the ſaid Commiſſioners had 'already returned to Him what they had done, yet becauſe the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Great Men of the Kingdom, in whoſe 'Preſence He would have his Own and the Reaſons of all others 'propoſed and heard, were not then preſent with Him; ſince 'there were Others who were bound with Himſelf to obſerve and 'maintain the Laws and Rights of his Crown; and farther, that 'thoſe who ought to propound their Reaſons concerning this 'Matter, had no notice of it, without whoſe Advice, a good End 'could not be put to it: Therefore becauſe this Buſineſs might 'be diſpatched without Delay, He was willing to have a Con'ference

Anno Dom. MCCC.

‘ ſerence and Treaty with the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Great Men aforeſaid, and others of the Community of the Kingdom, concerning this Affair, and other Arduous Matters touching Himſelf and the State of the Kingdom; He therefore commanded and firmly enjoyn'd him the ſaid Sheriff of Cumberland, to cauſe to appear before the King at his Parliament at Lincoln, on the Octaves of St. Hillary next coming, Two Knights of his County, viz. Thoſe who came for the Community of the Country by his Precept to the laſt Parliament, and alſo the ſame Citizens and the ſame Burgeſſes, for all the Cities and Burroughs within his Bailiwyck; and if any of them were Dead, or infirm, then to cauſe others to be choſen, and come in their ſtead, ſo that they might be preſent at the Day and Place aforeſaid, with full Power to hear and do what ſhould be then ordained for the Common Profit of the Kingdom.

Then the Writ concludes with a Clauſe of allowing the Knights and Citizens reaſonable Expences in coming to, ſtaying at, and returning from the Parliament; and with a farther Command to the Sheriffs, to make Proclamation in their Counties, That all thoſe who would put in any Exceptions againſt the ſaid Perambulations, ſhould appear before Him, and exhibit them in Parliament. Witneſs the King at the * Roſe the Six and twentieth of September, in the Eight and twentieth Year of his Reign. The like Writs were ſent to all other Counties of England, beſides Cheſhire and the Biſhoprick of Durham.

* i. e. the Caſtle ſo called.

This Writ Dr. Brady hath miſplaced in the laſt Vol. of his Hiſtory, putting it before the King's Expedition into Scotland this Summer, whereas it was not iſſued until the Autumn after his Return: And ſince the Doctor, in his Introduction to the Hiſtory of England, hath drawn ſome Arguments from this Writ, to prove that the King might antiently have cauſed what Members He pleaſed to be return'd to Parliament, having I hope, fully anſwered thoſe Reaſons in my ~~Introduction~~ Appendix, I need ſay nothing farther to it; yet I have thought fit to Print the foregoing Writ Verbatim from the Record in the Tower, for the Reader's better Satisfaction, as you will find in the Appendix. p. 214. 215.

P. 69.

This is the Subſtance of the Writ of Summons in Engliſh, wherein the Reaſons are given why the Perambulations could not be received and conſidered ſooner: And the Writs to the Biſhops, Earls, and Barons, were in the ſame Form and Words, as to the Reaſons of it, as thoſe to the Commons.

*The King then wrote alſo to the Commiſſioners, that had made the ſaid Perambulations, to be at this Parliament, and bring with them thoſe Perambulations, and all things that concern'd them.

* Ibm.

But I ſhall defer the ſaying more of this great Parliament, till the beginning of the next Year, and conclude this with ſome Foreign Affairs. [4] King Edward having now quite Deſerted the Earl of Flanders, and left him to ſhift for himſelf, he was reduced by the King of France to that Extremity, That he was forced to ſurrender himſelf and his Two Sons to Charles Count of Valois; and theſe Young Princes being brought to Paris, were ſent from thence and kept cloſe Priſoners at Compeigne.

[4] T. W. The Earl of Flanders being reduced to great Extremity, is forced to ſurrender himſelf and Sons to the King of France.

I muſt not here omit one thing conſiderable that happened alſo in England, viz. That upon the Death of Edmund Earl of Cornwall without Iſſue, on the Firſt of October this Year, That great Earldom fell to the King.

as for foreign Affairs, I find little worth noting to have been transacted this year, more than ing Edward finding the Pope remiss in putting an End to the Differences that remained between the King nd & himself concerning the Restitution of Gascoigne, he then sent over the Bishop of Winchester, & some other adors to Rome there to treat and conclude all Points necessary for a full & perfect Peace & Concord: as appears by s Letter to the Pope bearing Date ye 15th of April this year, as also by other Letters directed Amadeus Earl y, & Henry Earl of Lincoln, & others there mentioned, who were added to the former Ambassadors, because d been present at divers former Treaties, & were well instructed in all Points relating to this: this bears Rose Castle ye 26. of September, & is entred on the Roll [Rot: alman 28. E. I. m. 8.] and published in
: p. 864. to 866.

As

Ann. Dom. MCCC.

H. K. M. W. Pope Boniface ordains the firſt Jubilé.

* W
by Gra
W Ro
[Rot: whose claus
Tru to the Scot force of 7
clau
Dat
30th
R-s

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; [5] Pope Boniface this Year ordain'd the firſt Jubilé, wherein all Pilgrims that came to Rome, were to receive a Plenary Indulgence and Remiſſion of their Sins. This was appointed to be once in a Hundred Years; but by divers ſucceeding Popes, it was afterwards altered to Fifty, and then to Five and twenty Years, as it remains at this Day.

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

[1] Ch. St. Albani. in Bib. Cotton. The King meets the Eſtates in the Parliament at Lincoln and the Speech that was then made to them by the King's Secretary, on his behalf.

He deſires an Aid from them, who thereupon ſet forth their Greivances.

The [1] King kept his Chriſtmaſs at Northampton, with his Queen and Children, being attended with a numerous Appearance of his Nobility and Biſhops. Then after Three Weeks there ſpent in this Feſtival Solemnity, the King removed to Lincoln, where He met the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons and Commons in Parliament, according to his late Summons. At the opening of this Aſſembly, Roger de Brabaſon, the King's Chief Clerk or Secretary and Privy Councellor, made them an excellent Speech on the King's behalf, to this effect. 'His Majeſty has 'ordered me to let you underſtand, That whatever He hath done in his 'late Wars, hath been perform'd by your joint Conſent and Allowance; 'but that lately, by reaſon of the ſudden Incurſion of the Scots, and 'the Malicious Contrivances of the French, the King had been put to 'ſuch extraordinary Expences, that being quite deſtitute of Money, He 'therefore deſired a Pecuniary-Aid of them, to wit, a Fifteenth of their 'Temporal Eſtates. Whereupon the Nobility and Commons began to murmur, both by reaſon of the late frequent Payments of Tenths and Fifteenths, as alſo becauſe they had been ſo often diſappointed of the long expected Perambulation of Foreſts: They alſo complain'd of the wrongful and violent Oppreſſions that had been generally committed by the King's Officers, and required that the Ancient Liberties contain'd in Magna Charta ſhould be better obſerved, and that the Deforeſtations, which the King had ſo often promiſed, ſhould be now concluded and ſet out.

[2] Id ib. Ch. Roſ. The King at laſt gives a Gracious Anſwer to their Complaints. Rot. Preambulationis Foreſtar. 29 Ed. I. in Turre. A. D. 1301. The Bounds of Foreſts now ſettled.

Theſe [2] and divers other Articles they earneſtly deſired of the King; who delayed his Anſwer for ſome days, but finding they would not deſiſt, nor would upon any other Terms aſſiſt Him in his Neceſſities, He at laſt ſent them this Gracious Anſwer, That He was ready to Grant and Confirm whatever they could in reaſon ask or deſire. Then the * Perambulations of the Foreſts, (the main Buſineſs for which this Parliament was called, according to the Purport of the preceeding-Writ) were exhibited therein; and the King heard and confirmed them with this Clauſe; That whatever by theſe laſt Perambulations was Deforeſted, ſhould remain ſo; and what was then allowed to be Foreſt, according to the Metes and Bounds then ſet out, ſhould be ſo for ever. Theſe Letters Patents, or Confirmations of all the Perambulations, bear Date at Lincoln, the Fourteenth of February, in the Nine and twentieth Year of his Reign.

* Rot. Clauſ. 28 Ed. I. M. 7. 8. Dorſ.

† Rot. Peram. Foreſt. 29 Ed. I. ut. ſupra.

The Parliament grant the King a 15th of their Moveables.

* Then the King alſo confirm'd the Great Charters of Liberties and Foreſts, and commanded them to be ſent down and Proclaim'd in all the Counties of England; by which Gracious Conceſſions, He ſo far obliged both the Nobility and Commons, † That they readily granted Him a Fifteenth part of all their Moveable Goods to be paid by the Feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing: But the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Clergy would grant nothing out of their Temporal or Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, without the Pope's Licence.

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

And preſently after this Parliament was riſen, the King iſſued out freſh * Writs to all Sheriffs for the Election of Three Knights, or other ſufficient Freeholders of each County, for the Enquiry into, and Puniſhing all Offences againſt the Great Charter and that of Foreſts; and that for the due Performance thereof, they ſhould meet the King at York the Morrow after the Feaſt of the Lords Aſcenſion, to perform thoſe things, which He ſhould then enjoin them for the due Obſervation of the ſaid Charters. Dated at Weſtminſter the 26th of March.

* Rot. Clauſ. 25 Ed. I. M. 7. Dorſ.

I muſt here take notice of what is omitted by moſt other Authors, viz. That Matters did not go ſo ſmoothly at this Parliament, as is commonly ſuppoſed; for the ſaid [3] Chronicle of St. Albans informs us, That the Great Council of the Nobility, being continued (after the Commons were riſen) till towards the latter end of Lent, they began to fall upon ſeveral raſh and imprudent Projects and Demands; as, That the Chancellor, Chief-Juſtice, and Treaſurer, ſhould be choſen and appointed by the Community of the Kingdom; which ſo far provoked the King, That He return'd them this reſolute Anſwer, I perceive You would at Your Pleaſures make Your King truckle to You, and bring Him under Subjection. Why have You not asked the Crown of Me alſo; whilſt at the ſame time You look upon That as very fit and neceſſary for your ſelves, which you grudg Me that am Your King: For it is lawful for every one of You, as Maſter of his own Family, to take in, or turn out what Servants he pleaſes; but if I may not appoint my Chancellor, Chief-Juſtice, Juſtitiary, and Treaſurer, I will be no longer Your King; yet if they, or any other Officers ſhall do You any Wrong or Injuſtice, and Complaint be made of it to Me, You ſhall then have ſome Reaſon to Complain if You be not Righted. This ſo reaſonable Anſwer of the King's, made thoſe aſhamed that were for theſe Alterations, and though ſeveral of them deſired Trouble and Diſturbance, rather than Peace and Quietneſs, yet the Major part of the Nobility ſeeing theſe Deſigns to be vain and frivolous, humbly begged the King's Pardon for their Preſumption.

[3] In Bib. Coton.

A great Council of the Nobility fall upon ſeveral Raſh Projects.

The King's reſolute Anſwer to them.

Whereupon they deſiſt from further deſiring them.

Then He being deſirous to obtain the Good-Will of his Nobility, with an affable though Majeſtick Countenance, of his own Accord [4] promiſed faithfully to obſerve all the Liberties contain'd in the Great Charter. It was alſo then and there agreed, That Four and twenty Knights ſhould be choſen out of the whole Kingdom, who ſhould be obliged upon Oath to diſtinguiſh the New Foreſts from the Antient ones, and that all thoſe, that were found to be made Foreſts ſince the firſt Coronation of King Henry the Third, ſhould forthwith be diſforeſted. After this, the King cauſed the Sentence of Excommunication to be again renewed and denounced againſt all Violators of the ſaid Great Charters, which He Himſelf by Means of evil Councellors had too much violated before: Upon which all Jealouſies and Ill-Will being for the preſent removed, the Great Men relying on the King's Word, were contented with what He had done.

[4] Id. Ib.

The King's Gracious Promiſe to maintain all their Liberties.

24 Knights are appointed to diſtinguiſh the new Foreſts from the old ones, and the former to be diſforeſted.

After the Tranſacting and Settling theſe Great Affairs, the King not being willing to make any direct Anſwer to the Pope's late Brief, wherein He required Him to ſubmit all his Differences about the Kingdom of Scotland to his Holineſs's Judgment, and to ſend Meſſengers for that purpoſe to Him; therefore the King, to avoid and

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

The King orders the Pope's late Brief to be read before the Earls and Barons.

* F. 885.

They order a bold Letter to be writ in Anſwer to it.

The Subſtance thereof.

† See divers Copies of this Letter in M. W. T. W. and Dugdale's Summons to Parliament, being Tranſcribed from the Original Record in the Exchequer.

extricate Himſelf out of this Difficulty, ordered the ſaid Brief to be read to the Earls and Barons Aſſembled in ~~Parliament~~: Whereupon there aroſe great Debates amongſt the Lawyers, how, or after what manner this Bull or Letter ſhould be anſwered, as appears by part of an old Parliament-Roll in the Tower, of the Nine and twentieth of this King, truly Printed in Mr. Pryn's * 3d Volume of Papal Uſurpations. The Reſult whereof, upon hearing the whole matter, was, That the Earls and Great Men of the Kingdom forthwith ordered a bold but ſenſible Letter to be Written to the Pope in all their Names, there being then above One hundred preſent, as alſo on the behalf of the Community of the whole Kingdom, which was Writen in Latin, to this effect.

Firſt, † They begin with a Compliment, wherein they tell his Holineſs, ‘That though the Holy Roman Church doth (as they firmly hope and believe) always proceed with that Judgment and Caution, as to prejudice None, but to preſerve the Rights of all particular Perſons Inviolable, yet that in a General Parliament now lately held at Lincoln by their Serene Lord King Edward, He there ſhewed and declared to them a Bill, or Letter, which He had lately received from his Holineſs, about certain Matters highly concerning the State of the Kingdom; which being read and underſtood, it was found they contain'd divers things very wonderful and never heard of before.

‘Then they proceed to let Him know, That it was Notorious to theſe parts of the World, that from the very firſt Original of the Kingdom of England, the Kings thereof, in the times of the Engliſh-Saxons, enjoyed the Superior and Direct Dominion of the Kingdom of Scotland, and alſo continued in Poſſeſſion of the ſame, during all Succeeding Generations.

‘And further declared, That in Temporals, the Kingdom of Scotland by no manner of Right whatever belonged to the Church of Rome at any time; That it was an antient Fee or Feudal Right of the Crown and Kings of England, and that the Kingdom and Kings of Scotland have been Subject only to the Kings of England, and to no other; and, That the Kings of England, concerning their Rights in that Kingdom, or other Temporalities, have never anſwered, nor ought to anſwer, before any Eccleſiaſtick or Secular Judge, by reaſon of their Royal Dignities, and Cuſtom to the contrary in all Ages: And to ſignify to Him, That having diligently conſidered his Letters, it was, and for the future ſhould be the common, unanimous, and unſhaken Reſolution of all and every one of them, That their Lord the King, concerning his Rights in Scotland, or other his Temporal Rights, ſhould in no wiſe anſwer Judicially before Him, or ſend Proxies or Commiſſioners to Him; eſpecially when it would manifeſtly tend to the Diſinheritance of the Crown of England, and Dignity Royal, and to the notorious Subverſion of the State of the Kingdom, to the Prejudice of their Liberties, Cuſtoms, and Paternal Laws, which by their Oaths they were bound to Obſerve and Defend, and which by the help of God they would maintain with their whole Force or Power; nor would they permit the King to do ſuch ſtrange and unheard of things, if He ſhould attempt it. Wherefore they Reverendly and humbly beſeech his Holineſs, favourably to permit the King in Peace to poſſeſs his ‘ Rights, Liberties, Cuſtoms and Laws aforeſaid, without Diminution ‘ or Diſturbance. In Witneſs whereof, they put to [1] their Seals (being ‘ One hundred and four in all) for themſelves and the whole Community ‘ of the Kingdom. Dated at Lincoln the Twelfth of February, A.D. 1301. ‘ In the 28th of Edward I.

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

[1] See alſo a Copy of this Epiſtle with the Seals Appendant, engraven, and Printed at Oxford 1678.

From which notable Monument, we may obſerve what Opinion the Earls and Barons of the Kingdom then had of the King's Superiority and Dominion over Scotland, as alſo that the Pope had no Right or Title to any Sovereignty over that Kingdom; therefore had nothing to do to Summon King Edward to make his Defence for that Matter, before a foreign Tribunal.

I can find nothing farther done before the breaking up of this Great Council, than that the King, the better to ſatisfy his Nobility and Commons, now iſſued out new Letters-Patents under his Great Seal, for the ſtrict Obſervation of both the Great Charters; wherein, reciting his late Grant and Confirmation of them, He thus concludes, We will and Grant, for Our Selves and Our Heirs, That if any Statutes ſhall be made contrary to the ſaid Charters, or any Article therein contain'd, they ſhall be amended by the Common Council, in the manner as they ought, or elſe ſhall be annulled. This bears Date at Lincoln, the Twenty-eighth of February, A. R. 29, and is extant in the Tower under the Great Seal, which we have Publiſhed and Printed in the Appendix to this Volume, becauſe Dr. Brady has not thought fit to take any notice of it

This Charter (I ſuppoſe) was made not long after the Diſſolution of this Great Council of the Nobility; which though it continued to ſit and do Buſineſs, as the Community or General Body of the Kingdom, as I grant, Dr. Brady hath ſufficiently proved in his † Introduction to Engliſh Hiſtory, yet that they acted thus not only by their Own Authority, but by the Order and Delegation of the Commons themſelves, I hope I have as ſufficiently made out in my ~~Introduction~~. Appendix 13.

† P. 153.

But though the Deans of Churches, and other Delegates from the moſt conſiderable Abbies, had now brought Extracts from their ſeveral Chronicles to the late Parliament at Lincoln, which being there Reported, had fully ſatisfied the King and Eſtates of the Kingdom, concerning his Claim to the Sovereignty and Dominion over Scotland; yet were not theſe Teſtimonies drawn into any Form, until above Two Months after; and then the King, to give all due Reſpect and Satisfaction to the Pope, by the Advice of his Council, caus'd a [2] long Epiſtolary Declaration to be drawn up, directed to Pope Boniface, ‘ Setting forth from divers Chronicles of England, remaining in ſeveral ‘ Abbies, the Superiority and Dominion of the Antient Engliſh Kings ‘ over thoſe of Scotland, with the ſeveral Homages which the latter ‘ had at any time made to the former; and it then proceeds to give a ‘ Brief Account (from the Records and Memorials taken of this ‘ Tranſaction) of the Vacancy of the Throne, upon the Death ‘ of Margaret late Queen of Scotland, and the Diſputes that had ariſen ‘ thereupon, among the ſeveral Competitors to the Crown; which had ‘ been, by the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, Barons, and other Noblemen ‘ and Commons of that Kingdom, voluntarily refer'd to His Determination, as Supreme Lord, and which had been alſo acknowledged ‘ and ſubmitted to by each of the Competitors to that Crown, and ‘ that in vertue thereof, He had declared John de Baliol Lawful King of [2] The King's Declaration to the Pope, of his Right to the Dominion over Scotland. Vid. this Declaration in M. W. ad hunc An.

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

‘ of Scotland: And then proceeds to give an Account of the Rebellion ‘ of the ſaid King John and all the Eſtates of Scotland, and their In-‘ vaſion of England, and Depredations there committed contrary to ‘ their former Oaths of Homage and Fealty: And laſtly ſets forth the ‘ King's Conqueſt of Scotland, and the Surrender of the ſaid King John
‘ of his whole Right to the Kingdom, and the King's Poſſeſſion of the ‘ ſame by thoſe Titles; and that notwithſtanding their having again done ‘ Homage, and ſwore Fealty to Him, acknowledging Him for their ‘ King and Supreme Lord, they had yet ſeveral Times ſpoiled, waſted,
‘ and Invaded England. And ſo concludes with a Caution to the Pope, ‘ That He would pleaſe not to give Credit to the falſe Inſinuations and ‘ Suggeſtions of the Scots; and humbly deſires, that His Holineſs would ‘ have a Paternal Care of His Royal Rights and Dignities. This is Da‘ ted at Kemſey, the Seventeenth Day of May A. D. 1301.

Vid. the late Addit. to Cambden's Britan. p. 525.

All which plainly ſhews, that tho' this Epiſtle to the Pope be placed before that of the Barons in our Hiſtorians, yet it was written above two Months after, tho' no doubt the Subſtance of it was agree'd on in the late Parliament at Lincoln: But as for the Place, from whence this abovesaid Letter is ſaid to bear Date, I know none of that Name, but an Antient Seat or Mannor of the Biſhops of Worceſter, where before the Conqueſt, and many Ages after, they had a Place upon the Severne, about Three Miles from that City; but it hath been long ſince demoliſhed, ſo that the Ruins are not diſcernable. But to ſay ſomewhat further concerning this Declaration.

As for the Force of theſe Teſtimonies, or Authorities, which then ſatisfied the King and his Great Council of the Juſtice of his Claim to the Sovereignty over Scotland, I ſhall ſay nothing to them here, having already written ſufficiently on that Subject in my Introduction, to prove, that when they are duly weighed and conſidered, they do not make good the Point for which they are alledged.

[1] M.W. T.W.

* Vid. Dr. P's Chron. ad hunc An.

I find nothing elſe of Moment to have happened before the King's Expedition into Scotland; but [1] that He created Edward His Eldeſt Son Prince of Wales and Earl of Cheſter, * and not long after ſent him thither, where he received the Homages of all the Great Freeholders of that Principality, with which the Welſh-Men were very well pleaſed, he being born at Carnarvon in their own Country.

[2] T. W. Chron. de Lan.

The King makes another Expedition againſt the Scots, but with no very good Succeſs.

[3] C. Abing. in Bib. Cantab.

The late Truce with the Scots being ended at Whitſontide, [2] the King again renewed the War about Midſummer, and muſtering up his Army, [3] divided it into two ſeveral Bodies, one of which He kept himſelf, and the other He put under the Command of Prince Edward his Son, who with other Noblemen enter'd Scotland by the Weſtern Borders, whilſt the King ſtay'd ſometime at Berwick, and then followed the reſt of his Forces; but the Scots would not engage with either of theſe Armies, but fled before them as they had done formerly; only watching their Opportunity, they took ſome Plunder from the Engliſh; and the Military Men, who followed the King in this Expedition, loſt abundance of their Horſes, through the Scarcity, of Forrage as well as the Severity of the Weather, which was ſo extream, that many of his Army likewiſe periſhed for want of Victuals; ſo that all the King got in this Expedition was the taking the ſtrong Caſtle of Caerlaverok after a long Seige; but the King wiſely conſidering that whatever He had gain'd in Summer mer He ſtill loſt in the Winter, by Reaſon of His Abſence, He now reſolved to paſs that Seaſon in Scotland; wherefore He winter'd at Linlithgo and other Places, and by that means humbled the Scots more than ever He had done before: Yet could He do no remarkable Exploit againſt them this Winter, for the Reaſons already given.

Anno Dom. MCCCI.

He therefore reſolves to Winter in Scotland, and renew the War next Spring.

As for Civil Affairs, I find little now done, only this Autumn He appointed his Procurators and Ambaſſadors to the Pope, Walter Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, Amadeus Earl of Savoy, Otto de Grandiſon Knight, Gerard Archdeacon of Litchfield, to deſire his Holineſs ſpeedily to put an end to all Differences between Him and the French King, and to compleat the long defer'd Treaty of Peace, according to the Form of his late Sentence or Decree, by Vertue of the Compromiſe made unto Him: But the Pope was not then at leaſure to perform it, nor could the Commiſſioners at that time go. Theſe Procuratory Letters are dated at Glaſco the Four and twentieth of Auguſt, in the Nine and twentieth Year of his Reign. But this Ambaſſy proved wholy ineffectual as you will ſee by and by under the next Year.*

* Rot. Pat. 29. Ed. I. M. 2. Int. & Clauſ. eod. An. M. 2. Dorſ.

The King ſends Ambaſſadors to the Pope, to deſire him to finiſh the Treaty of Peace between him and the King of France.

*And ye Pope was now grown so indifferent in ye Kings Concerns, that in ye begining of this year, instead of determining the differences between ye two Kings concerning the Territories of Gascoigne, yt he wrote a Letter to ye King to perswade him that he should not let this opportunity slip of recovering ye Holy Land by ~~force~~ of Arms only for the consideration of so small a Territory as was in Dispute, but that he should rather yield it to the King of France for the present, as being a rash young Man, who since is by evil Counsellors and Flatterers was too obstinate & partial in his own Concerns; but then to sweeten the King the Pope concludes with putting him in mind of his six years aid from ye Clergy, wch Pope Nicholas his predecessor had granted the King might raise upon them for three years longer for ye Succour of ye Holy Land, of wch he gave ye King one moiety for his own Occasions, reserving ye other moiety towards ye Burdens & Necessity of ye Church; ye Bull you may see at large in R—s Coll: from p: 868. to 870.

Anno Dom. MCCCII.

Whilſt the [4] King thus wintered at Linlithgo, He there received Letters from the King of France, to deſire Him, that He would grant the Scots another Truce until the Feaſt of All-Saints next enſuing; to which Requeſt, though much againſt the King's mind, He was forced to yield, becauſe of His late Mariage with that King's Siſter:* So having in Compliance to his deſires concluded a Truce with the Scots abovemention'd, and appointed Guardians for that part of the Kingdom which remain'd in his Poſſeſſion, He return'd into England.

[4] T. W. C. W. H.

The King receives Letters from the French King, to deſire Him to grant the Scots another Truce; which He does.

So ſoon as He came to Durham, the firſt thing I find He did there, was, to renew his late Ambaſſy to the Pope. For the King finding the Earl of Savoy and Otto de Grandiſon (who had been Commiſſioned, for that purpoſe, and were beſt acquainted with the Differences between him and the King of France,) could not be perſuaded, though I know not for what Reaſon, to undertake that Embaſſy to the See of Rome; He therefore, by a freſh * Commiſſion, appointed only Two of the four former Ambaſſadors, viz. 'The Biſhop and Archdeacon of Litchfield, to hear and receive in his Name the Pope's Sentence or Determination, concerning thoſe things that were not already declared and 'determined between the two King's in Vertue of a Compromiſe made 'by both of them to the Pope, as a Private Perſon.

The King upon his return from Scotland appoints other Ambaſſadors to the Pope, upon the former Buſineſs; and the reaſon of it.

* Rot. Clauſ. 30. Ed. I. M. 15. Dorſ.

This Letter or new Commiſſion was directed to the Pope, to give Him Notice of the Refuſal of the firſt Two Commiſſioners, viz. the Earl and Knight; and is dated at Darlington, in the Biſhoprick of Durham, the Fifth of March, in the Thirtieth Year of Edward I.

Then the King return'd into the South-Parts of England, [5] and in Mid-Lent following held a Parliament or rather Great Council at Stamford. Nicholas Trivet ſuppoſes this Aſſembly to have been held at London; but all the reſt of our Hiſtorians ſay it was at Stamford; but whereever it was held, they all agree in the Tranſactions of it. The Great Men were again much diſturbed that the late Perambulations of the Foreſt had not been ſo well obſerved as they ought to have been; and [1] when ſome high and threatning Speeches were there made, the King fearing the Diſpleaſure of his Nobility, appeas'd their angry Mind's with gentle Words; and being well adviſed by his Councellors, promiſed that the above-

[5] T. W. C. Nor.

The K. calls a great Council at Stamford, where the great Men are much diſturbed, that the bounds of the Foreſts were not obſerved.

[1] Chron. Abing. ad An. 1301.

This is also confirmed by an Instrument still extant, in which it is expressed, that it had been lately agreed by ye Plenipotentiaries of both Kings at Angiers, that at the st of the King of France King Edward had granted ye Scots a Truce until 15 Days after Easter next ensuing, & which is thereby renew'd till the Feast of St Andrew yt shall be in ye Year 1302.
is further agreed yt during ye sd Truce, & in Order to a firm & lasting Peace, yt all Lands, Territories & Possessions, that en taken from ye Scots since ye Arrival of ye Envoys of ye King of France to King Edward, or yt shall be taken by him ye Ratification of this present Treaty, should be put into ye Hands of ye King of France till ye Feast of All Saints yt Year; condition yt ye said Lands, and Territories should be restor'd to King Edward or his Son, in case ye sd Treaty ce should take no Effect, with divers other Articles, which for brevity's sake I omit: But which ye Reader may large in R—s Coll: p. 892. to 894. & may observe that this Instrument was ratifyed by both Kings in Jan: ensuing, as you may find in the same Coll: p. 895, 896.

Anno Dom. MCCCII.

abovementioned Perambulations ſhould be forthwith Finiſhed, Settled and Diſpatched, as indeed was done not long after.

From whence we may take notice, That notwithſtanding all the King's fair Promiſes and Orders lately made at Lincoln, (as has already been mentioned) they were not obſerved with that Sincerity on the King's part, as the Nobles and Commons of the Kingdom then hoped they ſhould have been; ſo it juſtified the Earls and Barons Jealouſies of the Reality of the King's Intentions. I find nothing elſe to have been tranſacted in this Aſſembly (for I cannot call it a Parliament as ſome of our Hiſtorians do, becauſe indeed it was no ſuch thing, according to the Senſe of our Times) which plainly appears by This, that there is no Summons to be found to the Commons, either on the Patent, or Parliament-Rolls of this Year.

T. W.

The King being now returned to London, thought fit to ſend the Earl of Lincoln, and the Lord Hugh le Diſpencer, his Ambaſſadors to the Pope. Their Buſineſs was to ſet forth the Injuries that had been done to the King and Nation by the Scots, and to deſire his Holineſs not to give any farther Ear to the falſe Repreſentations of thoſe Traytors and Murtherers, who had ſo much impos'd upon his Prudence. But the Pope, being ſtill prepoſſeſſed by the Scots, not only commanded the King not to moleſt them, but as Polydore Virgil relates, he alſo demanded, on the behalf of the late King Baliol, a full Reſtitution of all his Eſtate in England; which the King was by no means willing to part with.

[2] Annal. St. Auguſt Cant. ſub hoc Anno.

The Earl Marſhal makes King Edward Heir of all his Eſtate, and delivers up his Marſhal's Rod on certain Conditions.

For want of ſomewhat more conſiderable, I will here inſert a remarkable Story concerning a particular Perſon, as being the firſt that had fallen out of this kind, viz. [2] in April following, Roger Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, and Marſhal of England, having no Iſſue, and but One Brother, named John, whom he did not care for, Conſtituted King Edward his Heir of all his Eſtate; delivering alſo unto Him the Marſhal's Rod, upon Condition to have it render'd back to him, provided he ſhould have any Children; as likewiſe to have a thouſand Pounds from the King in preſent, and a thouſand Pounds per Annum during his Life.

* Rot. Clauſ. 30. Ed. I. M. 13. Dorſ.

This Relation is further Confirm'd and Illuſtrated by a * Record in the Tower, by which the ſaid Earl granted, and quiet claimed for himſelf and his Heirs to the King and his Heirs for ever, all his Caſtles, Mannors, Lands, and Tenements in England and Wales, with their Appurtenances, except the Mannors and Advowſons, therein expreſly mentioned; the Names of which being many, and not now material to be known, I omit. This Charter concludes with a Clauſe, That neither He nor his Heirs, nor any one in his Name, ſhould have any Right or Claim in theſe Eſtates. This Grant was dated at the Abbey of St. Johns in Colcheſter, the Twelfth of April in the Thirtieth of Edward I.

He alſo, by another Deed dated at the ſame time and Place, made a Grant to the King of all his Goods and Chattles, in, and upon thoſe Caſtles, Towns and Mannors; except ſuch as are therein excepted.

And further, by another Deed of the ſame Date, He remitted and quiet claimed, for Him and his Heirs, to the King and his Heirs for ever, all the Right, Honour and Authority He had by the Name of Earl Marſhal in the County of Norfolk, and the Marſhalſea of England, with every thing thereunto belonging; the Reaſons of which Grants are variouſly reported by our Hiſtorians: For Matt. Weſtminſter (though he miſtakes the Year, placing this Tranſaction in the 33d of this King) ſays, That he now cunningly circumvented the Earl-Marſhal, by laying again to his Charge a certain Conſpiracy which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and this Earl, with divers other Earls and Barons, had been engaged in, whilſt the King was in Flanders; which Charge the Earl not being able to gain-ſay, he humbly beg'd the King's Pardon, and for the obtaining of it, was forced to make the King Heir to all his Eſtate, and it was that that ſaved him his Life, and alſo obtained for Him a thouſand Pounds per Annum for the ſame Term.

Anno Dom. MCCCII.

[1] But another Antient and more Credible Authority, viz. the * Chronicle of Abingdon in the Cambridge and Bodleian Libraries, gives us a truer Account of this Traſaction; the Sum of which is, That this Earl, having much exhauſted his Eſtate by his taking part with the Barons againſt the King, had borrowed a great Sum of Money from his Younger Brother John, a Rich dignified Clergyman, and Rector of many Churches, who now demanded ſpeedy Payment of his Brother, without giving him any time to raiſe it; which ſo extremly provoked him, that he went immediatly to the King, and made over to Him all his Honours and Eſtate, upon Condition that he ſhould reinfeof him of the ſame during Life, and ſhould alſo ſettle a Penſion of a thouſand Marks per Annum for the ſaid Term, together with a ſufficient Sum of Money to pay his Debts: All which Conditions being agreed to by the King, He thereupon had the Eſtate convey'd over to Him accordingly.

[1] * Ad hunc An. A better Account given of the Reaſon of this Action in the Abingdon Chronicle.

I [2] have been the more particular in this Tranſaction, to warn the Reader of Dr. Brady's Miſtakes in his late Hiſtory, ſince He might (as well as I) have ſearched the Manuſcripts here cited, and not blindly have followed the ſingle Authority of Matt. Weſtminſter, in aſcribing this Earl's Surrendring his Honour and Eſtate to the King, to a Cauſe ſo unworthy his Generoſity, as his calling him to an Account for an Action done ſo long before, and for which he had already received his Charter of Pardon under the Great Seal, and that too confirm'd by an Act of Parliament.

[2] Cont. Hiſt. 2d Vol. p. 75.

And perhaps [3] it was in imitation of the late Surrender of the Earl Marſhal, that Humphry de Bohun, Conſtable, and Earl of Hereford (Son and Heir to that Humphry, who with the former oppoſed King Edward in the Five and twentieth year of his Reign) did alſo this Year grant all his Caſtles, Towns, Mannors, Lands and Tenements, Knights-Fees, Advowſons of Religious Houſes and Churches, Hundreds, Honours, Liberties, and all their Appurtenances in England and Wales, to the King and his Heirs for ever, without Exception or Reſervation of any thing to himſelf; and all the Right, Honour and Dominion he had as Earl, in the Counties of Hereford and Eſſex, and to the Conſtableſhip of England. This * Grant is dated at London the Eighth of October, in the Thirtieth of Edward I. which Eſtates and Honour, upon his Mariage with Elizabeth the Seventh Daughter of this King Edward, and Widdow to John Earl of Holland and Zealand, were regranted by the King's † Charter to this Earl about two Years after.

[3] M. W. Humphry de Bohun, the Conſtable, makes a like Reſignation of his Eſtate to the King upon certain Conditions.

* Rot. Clauſ. 30. Ed. I. M. 5. Dorſ.

† Rot. Clauſ. 32. Ed. II. M. 16.

What

Anno Dom. MCCCII.

What Reaſon this young Earl had thus to convey his Eſtate and Honour to the King, I cannot find in Sir William Dugdale's Baronage, or any other Author.

[4] T. W. C. Ab. Pat. 30. E. I. M. 15.

After [4] the Feaſt of All-Saints, the King having ſome time before made the Lord John de Segrave Governor of Berwick, He now alſo appointed him Guardian of the Kingdom of Scotland, notwithſtanding his late ill Succeſs there; and ſent him thither with a conſiderable Army, and freſh Orders to proſecute the War, as ſoon as the Seaſon would permit him, as you will find by and by. *

* I find ye King was the more encouraged in this Proceeding, because ye Pope being now better satisfyed of ye turbulent Temper of ye Scots, sent this Year two Bulls into Scotland ye one to ye Bishop of Glascow blaming him for being the chief Incitor of ye Troubles between ye King of England & ye Scots & commanding them for ye future to study and promote Peace. The other was directed to ye rest of ye Scottish Bishops, being much to ye same Purpose with the former, exhorting & charging them for the future to instruct their People to be quiet, & yt they (ye Bishops) should do their Endeavour to promote Peace, lest otherwise he should be provoked to apply some severer Remedies to this Distemper. These Bulls bear Date at Anagnia in ye 8th year of his Pappacy, as you may find in R—s Coll: p. 904, 905.

[5] Id. M. W. Mezeray's Hiſt. ad hunc Ann. The Flemings take Arms, and drive the French out of Flanders. And give them an entire Defeat.

I ſhall now paſs to the Affairs of Flanders and France. [5] The Flemmings, ſince the late Impriſonment of their Earl, having been cruelly oppreſſed with Impoſts and Taxes by their French Governor, James Chaſtillion, were now reſolved to bear it no longer; but chooſing Guy Earl of Namur, Son to their Impriſoned Earl, for their Leader, together with William, Son to the Count de Juliers, they took up Arms, and with one conſent either killed or expelled the French Gariſons out of all the Towns of Flanders; only Courtray remain'd in the hands of the French, but was beſieged by the Earl of Namur; upon which Revolt the King of France raiſed a great Army, and made Robert Earl of Artois General thereof, who preſently marched with Ten thouſand Horſe, and Forty thouſand Foot to the Releif of Courtray. The Flemmings, tho' they were ill armed, and had neither Cavalry, nor many Noblemen or Gentry of their Party, yet were not at all affrightn'd, but encamping themſelves as ſtrong as they could, expected the French between Courtray and Bruges, where they falling upon them, a Bloody Fight enſued, in which by a total Rout of the firſt Aggreſſors, the Flemings obtain'd a Compleat Victory, with the Slaughter of Twenty thouſand Frenchmen, together with the Earl of Artois their General, and above Twenty Earls and Great Lords of that Nation. This Battel was fought on the Ninth of June, and may ſerve as a laſting Admonition to Generals, not to deſpiſe the Weakneſs of an Enemy; as alſo to Princes, not to deal too Rigorouſly with a Conquer'd People; ſince the deſire of Liberty oftentimes produces greater Courage in the Oppreſſed, than either Emulation or the deſire of Victory can do in thoſe that had before ſubdued them.

[1] Id. ib. The King of France raiſes another Army againſt them, but does nothing, and for what Reaſon.

This [1] Defeat ſo much provoked the French King, that he was reſolved to march in Perſon againſt the Flemings, at the Head of an Army of a Hundred Thouſand Men, had he not been informed by his Siſter the Queen of England, that if he hazarded another Battel, he would be in danger of being betrayed by his own Subjects: This, and the Great Rains that fell that Autumn, made him retire to Paris, after he had marched as far as Doway.

[2] M. W. King Edward ſends Envoys to the French Court, to know whether that King would continue the Truce any longer, with his Anſwer to them.

This War, though troubleſome enough to the French, would yet have proved much more ſo, had not King Edward ſtrictly obſerved the Truce lately made with his Brother of France; which being now almoſt expired, He [2] ſent certain Envoys to the French Court to receive that King's final Reſolution, and to know whether He pleaſed to have Peace or War. His Anſwer was, That He could not conſult of ſuch Arduous Matters, but in an Aſſembly of the Twelve Peers, who being moſt of them then abroad, on publick Affairs, were not expected back till ſome days after: But ſo ſoon as they could be Aſſembled, their Anſwer was, That they could conclude nothing concerning a Peace or Truce, unleſs their Confederates the Scots were preſent. Upon which, the Ambaſſadors return'd. Then the King Summoned a Parliament at Weſtminſter, wherein the dilatory Anſwers of the French were reported, as alſo the late Victory of the Flemings; together with a freſh Propoſal from the former, That if the King of England would come over in Perſon into France, there would be no doubt but the Two King's would make ſuch an Agreement between them, as ſhould be grateful to both Kingdoms. But I do not find they came then to any poſitive Reſolution concerning it; but when the King had Summoned another Parliament at the Feaſt of St. Edward, that Propoſal was not approved of; but on the contrary, agreed by the Common Council of the Kingdom, That the King ſhould not go over at the Command or Suggeſtion of the King of France.

About the beginning of this Year, the King of France, willing to leave the Scots out of the Treaty, and conclude a ^ laſting Peace with England without them, King Edward * thereupon gave his Letters Patents or Commiſſion to Amadeus Earl of Savoy, Henry de Lacy Earl of Lincoln, and Otto de Grandiſon, or any Two of them, to prolong the Truce between Himſelf and the King of France, their Kingdoms and Subjects; and afterwards to ſettle a firm and perpetual Peace between them, their Heirs and Succeſſors, againſt all Perſons, but the Pope and Church of Rome. But this Commiſſion, by ſome means or other, proving ineffectual, a Second was granted to the ſame Perſons, (only the Biſhop of Worceſter was then added to it,) bearing Date the Second of March; by vertue of which, theſe Ambaſſadors, together with the Dukes of Burgundy, Bretaign, and others for the King of France, concluded a firm Peace between the Two Kings and their Realms, (the Scots being wholy left out of the Treaty;) and for the Confirmation of which, the King granted his Letters Patents, and Sealed them at St. John's-Town, or Perthe, in Scotland, the Tenth of June, A. D. 1303. in the Thirty firſt Year of his Reign. All the Procurations, Patents, and other things concerning this Peace, and the Articles themſelves, are in a particular [1] Roll in the Tower. *

Upon this Treaty and Peace that followed it, all Gaſcoigne was entirely reſtored to King Edward, with all its Rights and Liberties, as He poſſeſſed it before the beginning of the War; and all Priſoners on both ſides were releaſed; and the Earl of Lincoln was made the King's Lieutenant there.

Not long [2] after, William Wallys again heading the Scots, took up Arms againſt King Edward; to oppoſe whom, in the beginning of Lent, the Lord John de Segrave, Guardian of Scotland, (having Winter'd at Berwick) reſolved to march into that Kingdom, and wholy to reduce it to the King's Obedience; but when early in the Morning they came near to Edinburgh, the Engliſh Generals divided the Army into Two Battalions, whereof the Firſt conſiſting of Three hundred Men at Arms, was Commanded by the Lord de Segrave himſelf, and the Second by his Brother, a very Valiant Soldier. Theſe Battalions marched about Four Miles diſtant from each other; but not being aware of an Ambuſcade that the Scots had laid for them in the way, they had like all of them to have fallen into it: But when diſcovered, the Lord Segrave was adviſed by his Officers to retreat to the next Battalion that was then coming up; but he thinking that to be a

Anno Dom. MCCCII.

A Propoſal that King Edward ſhould go over into France, and there agree all matters in difference.

Which is not approved of by the next Parliament.

Anno Dom. MCCCIII.

being

* Vid. 3d Vol. of Pryn's Papal Uſurp. p. 1029.

The King appoints the Earl of Savoy, and others his Commiſſioners, to prolong the Truce with France, or to make a laſting Peace.

Who treat with thoſe of France, and make a firm Peace between the Two Kings, the Scots being excluded.

[1] M. W.

Upon which all Gaſcoigne is entirely reſtored to the King.

[2] Id.

T. W. Chron. Abing. ad An. 1302.

The Scots again take Arms, and the Lord Segrave marches againſt them.

* All which Commissions for several Treaties which at last ended in an absolute Peace ye Reader may see in R—s Coll: p. 905 to 908. 913. And all which are still preserved on the Rolls of this year [Rot: al: 31. E. I. m. 2] the principal Articles are concerning the entire Delivery of all Cities, Towns & Castles, and other Appurtenances therein mentioned, belonging to ye Dutchy of Aquitain which were then in the Possession of ye King of France should be immediately delivered to ye King of England according to ye Form of this present Agreemt. and ye said King was also to meet ye King of France at Amiens by the Feast of the Nativity of our Lady next ensuing to do Homage to ye King ~~[illegible]~~ for the said Dutchy, without any other Conditions than yt ye Procurators of ye sd Treaty shall swear Fealty on ye Soul (yt is on ye behalf) of King Edward, and yt thereupon the said Procurators should receive Letters of Restitution & Investiture of all the said Territories according to ye said Agreement. these being ye principal Heads thereof: as for ye Rest I refer ye Reader to ye Record itself or else ye Copy published in R—s Coll: p. 923, to 926.

Anno Dom. MCCCIII.

But is through his own raſhneſs defeated.

Diſparagement to his Valour, raſhly declined it; and ſo the Scots proving too hard for him, he was taken Priſoner, with about Twenty of his Men, beſides ſeveral others who were killed; and ſo the ſecond Diviſion coming up, were likewiſe routed, and Robert le Coſter, a moſt Valiant Officer, who then Served under the King of England, was killed. Whilſt this Engagement happened, Sir Robert Nevill, (that commanded a Third Diviſion) was at Maſs with his Men (it being the firſt Sunday in Lent;) but on a ſudden, hearing that the Scots had the better of it, and had taken the General Priſoner, He preſently made haſt to the Aſſiſtance of his Countrymen, where he behaved himſelf ſo gallantly, that he reſcued the Lord Segrave, and ſeveral other Priſoners, and ſo procured an honourable Retreat for Our Forces, though not without conſiderable loſs on the Engliſh ſide.

[3] Chron. Cotton.

A different Account of this or a like Action from the Cotton Chronicle.

But the Anonimous Chronicle, ſo often Cited, gives us ſomewhat a different [3] Relation of this, or ſuch another Defeat, which happened on the firſt Sunday in Lent, at Roſlyn in Lothyan, and proceeded from the Careleſneſs and ill Diſcipline of Ralph the Cofferer, One of the King's Chief Commanders, and Treaſurer for Scotland, who ſuffered the Soldiers to ſpend the Night before the Engagement in Drinking and Roaring; and the Scots having intelligence of it from their Spies, fell upon the Engliſh by Surpriſe; by which means they marching out of their Camp in ſeveral ſmall Detachments, without any good Order or Conduct, great part of the Army was there loſt, together with their Commmander, whom my Author ſays was a Clergyman, fitter to hold a Pen than a Sword.

Though the Author of this Relation tells us the Fight happened on the ſame day with the former, yet ſince he mentions a quite different Commander, and ſince other Circumſtances are in this, which are not in the others, as alſo that the Lord Segrave is not at all mentioned; it makes me ſuſpect it was not the ſame Engagement with that before-mentioned, and may be alſo miſplaced in Point of Time.

[4] T. W.

The King reſolving to march in Perſon againſt the Scots, Summoned his Militia to meet Him at Roxburgh; in the mean while the Scots beſiege the Caſtle of Sterling.

[5] C. Roſ. M, W.

And force the Gariſon to Surrender.

[4] When the King had received this Ill News, He reſolved, ſo ſoon as poſſible, to march Himſelf againſt the Scots, and to that end Summon'd his Militia by Proclamation, to meet him at Roxburgh on Whitſunday following. [5] But in the mean while, the Scots laid cloſe Siege to the Caſtle of Sterling, and being not able to take it by force, they hoped to do it by Famine: But the Gariſon managed their Store of Proviſions ſo cautiouſly, that the Scots, tyred out by the length of the Siege, retired. The Beſieged at laſt were reduced to great want of Proviſions, which made them ſend a Meſſenger to the King, (who was then on his March) to let Him know their ſad Condition, and to deſire ſome ſpeedy Relief. But the Meſſenger proving a Traytor, inſtead of going to the King, went over to the Scotiſh Commanders, and acquainted them with the true State of thoſe in the Caſtle: Whereupon the Scotch-Men preſently return'd to the Siege, and preſſed the Gariſon ſo hard, that within Three Days they were forced to deliver up the Place to the Lord John de Soules, upon Condition to have their Lives ſaved, and to be Conducted to their Lord, the King of England. When the Scots had got this Place, they new Victualled and Mann'd it with a very ſtrong Gariſon.

Then

[6] King Edward, as ſoon as He had entered Scotland, thinking it loſs of time then to lay Siege to Sterling-Caſtle, reſolved firſt to take in other Places; and He began with the ſtrong Caſtle of Brihan, which was Gallantly defended by Thomas Mayle the Governor; ſo that notwithſtanding the King battered it with great Stones, it proved to be without any effect. One Day, as the Governour was ſtanding upon the Wall, and watching where a Stone hit againſt it, in Deriſion, he wiped the Place with a Towel that was then in his hand: But ſome Days after, this Preſumption of his was ſufficiently chaſtiſed; for a Stone from an Engine hitting him on the Breaſt, he was taken up Dead; which Accident ſo confounded the Defendants, that they quickly ſurrendered the Caſtle to the King. And not long after, ſeizing the Abby of Dumfermling, He cauſed it to be Burnt, all except the Church, and ſome Cells for the Monks; becauſe there being then many large Buildings in it, the Scots uſed to Fortifie it, and Sallying out from thence ſpoiled the Neighbouring Country.

Upon [1] this, the King finding no Army to oppoſe Him, went by eaſie Marches through the whole Kingdom of Scotland, as far as Cathneſs; and in his return from the North, Beſieged Sterling-Caſtle, but without any Succeſs.

Then He ſpent his Winter at the Town of Dumfermling: But before the end of the Year, moſt of the Scotiſh Noblemen being no longer able to reſiſt Him, and fearing He ſhould again Winter among them as He had done before, ſent Mediators, and humbly craved his Peace and Pardon, and that they might be permitted to Compound for their Eſtates with thoſe to whom they had been given; both which the King granted. Matt. Weſtminſter ſays, The Great Men of Scotland, as well Earls as Barons, being wholy reduced and overcome, ſubmitted themſelves to the Will of the King of England; who admitted them to his Grace and Mercy, impoſing upon them Pecuniary Mulcts or Compoſitions, and appointing them certain Days and Years for the Payment of it. The Articles of which Agreement you will find in the beginning of the next Year. *

* But I cannot here omit a Matter which tho' of no great Moment, yet made a great deal of Noise, viz. yt during ye King's Absence in Scotland certain Monks of the Abbey of Westminster combining with some other Malefactors, yt lived in ye Town, found Means to break into ye King's private Treasury in ye said Abbey, & carried off a great Summe of Money which was there reposited, whereof ye King being informed, was highly incensed and issued out Writs of Enquiry to Ralph de Sandwich and others his Justices, charging them to enquire by ye Oathes of good & sufficient Men of London & Middlesex & Surrey who might best know ye Truth of ye Matter of Fact, & might discover the Malefactors, who if they were discovered & taken should be kept in safe Custody. This Writt bears Date at Linlithgo in Scotland ye 7th Day of June & is entred on ye Rolls of this year — [Rot: Pat: 31. E. I. m. 21] vid: R—s Coll: p. 930, 931.

France not affording us any more Affairs of Moment, we muſt be forced to look back as far as Italy; where you are to underſtand, [2] That the Quarrel between Pope Boniface, and the King of France, was now riſen to that heighth, that the latter having accuſed the former of Hereſie, Schiſm, Magick, and other Enormous Crimes, the Pope in Revenge declared him Excommunicated and Deprived of his Kingdom; which he offer'd to beſtow on any, whoſoever would Seize it: For the French King had juſt before ſent Nargaret his Lieutenant-General into Italy, to Seize upon the Pope's Perſon, who had then retired, and fortified himſelf in Anagnia: But the French General, joyning with the Colonna's, (whom the Pope had before Degraded from being Cardinals) together with ſome Noblemen of that Country, that were his Enemies, by their means gain'd the People of that City, [3] and ſo without any difficulty entered it: And having forced the Palace, ſeized upon the Pope's Perſon, and plundered him of all his Jewels and Treaſure to a very great value; and not only ſo, but they almoſt Starved him, thinking thereby to have forced him to reſign the Papacy; but notwithſtanding this ſevere Treatment, he was reſolute againſt it. Then Four Days after, the Citizens taking Compaſſion of his Holineſs, drove the French out

Anno Dom. MCCCIII.

[6] Id.

The King Beſieges the Caſtle of Brihan, but in vain.

But at laſt has it Surrendred to him, and by what Accident.

And burns the Abby of Dumfermling.

[1] Id.

The King Beſieges Sterling-Caſtle without any Succeſs.

Moſt of the Scotiſh Nobility at laſt Submit to the King upon certain Conditions.

[2] Mezeray, hunc An.

An Account of the great Quarrel between Pope Boniface and the King of France.

[3] T. W.

The Pope is ſeized and plundered of all his Treaſure by the French General and the Colonna's.

And we find further that these Writts of Enquiry had so good an Event, yt it appears by another Writt directed to Roger Brabazon & William Berisford & other Justices, yt whereas Robert Abbot of Westminster & twenty two Monks of that Monastery, together with thirty two Laymen their Confederates, whose Names are there particularly set down, had been accused & committed to Prison for breaking into his sd Treasury, & carrying away ye Summ of 100000 li, & yt they denying ye Fact had petitioned for a speedy Tryal; he therefore appointed ye sd Justices to hear & try ye said Fact, by ye oaths of such Knights & other Evidence of ye Counties of Middlesex & Surrey, by whom ye Truth might be best discovered: the Sheriffs of London & Middlesex were likewise empowered to return ye sd Inquest accordingly. This Writt is likewise entred on ye Rolls Vid: R—s Coll. p. 938. But what was ye Issue of this Tryal I do not find. For all that Mat: of Westminster (who was a Monk of this Abbey) relates of it is no more, than that ye King's Treasury being robbed, only ten Monks of Westminster were imprisoned upon Suspicion & yt People were very apt to believe their Innocence not being then cleared which whether it ever was or not I cannot say.

Anno Dom. MCCCIII.

He thereupon getting to Rome, deceaſed ſoon after.

out of Town, and reſtored him to his Liberty: Who thereupon ſtraight retiring to Rome, fell Sick either of his late ill Uſage, or elſe of Vexation for his great Loſſes, and there deceaſed of a Fever the 12th day of October; And Nicholas, Cardinal of Oſtia, a Fryar-Preacher, was Elected in his ſtead, and took the Name of Benedict XI. who like a Prudent Prelate, immediately compos'd all the Quarrels of his haughty Predeceſſor with the King of France, and not long after Abſolved Him from the Excommunication, which He then lay under.

Anno Dom. MCCCIV.

The firſt thing I find to have been tranſacted in the beginning of this Year, is, The Conditions of Peace which the King made by certain Noblemen appointed as Commiſſioners to Treat and Agree on his behalf with the Chief of the Nobility of Scotland, that had been lately in Arms againſt him, but were now deputed by the reſt to make the beſt Terms they could for them and their Eſtates, as appears upon Record in the Tower, and here Tranſlated from the French Original.

The Terms given to, and accepted by, the Lord John Comyn, his Aydants and Aſſiſtants, were as follows:

The Articles of Peace and Agreement between King Edward and the Scotiſh Noblemen lately in Arms. Printed in Ryley's Placitæ Parliament. f. 369, 370.

'Theſe are the Things Agreed on with Monſieur Richard de Burgh 'Earl of Ulſter, Monſieur Aymer de Valence Seigneur de Montignak, 'Monſieur Henry de Piercy, Knights, and John Benſtede, Clerk, on the 'part of our Lord King Edward; and John Comyn of Badenagh, for himſelf and his late Aſſiſtants of Scotland, as well thoſe that were out of 'it, as within it: For the Faithful Keeping and Obſerving whereof, 'the ſaid Earl, the Lords Aymer, Henry, and John de Benſtede, in the 'Name of the King, and the ſaid John Comyn, Monſieur Edmund, 'Comyn de Kilbride, Monſieur John de Graham, Monſieur John de Vaux, 'Monſieur Godfry de Roos, Monſieur John de Maxwell the Elder, Monſieur 'Peter de Prendregyſt, Monſieur Walter de Berkeley de Kerdaau, Monſieur 'Hugh de Erth, Monſieur William de Erth, Monſieur James de Roos, 'and Monſieur Walter de Rothevan, Knights, for themſelves, and all 'their Scots-Aſſiſtants, who would be in the Peace and Faith of the 'King, were Sworn to the Articles following.

Firſt, 'It was agreed, That all manner of People of Scotland, who 'came into the Peace of the King with the ſaid John Comyn, (except the 'Perſons after named) ſhould be received to the Conditions following, to wit, Their Lives and Limbs or Members ſhould be ſaved: 'They alſo to be Free from Impriſonment, and not to be Diſherited, 'except for their Ranſom or Fine, and the Amends for their Faults only 'committed againſt the King.

Secondly, 'Thoſe under Age were to have the ſame Conditions, as to 'the Saving of their Lives and Limbs, and Acquittal from Impriſonment, 'and Diſheritance.

Thirdly, 'For their Ranſom, and all other Things, it ſhould be as 'the King ſhould order in his next Parliament; and the Eſtabliſhment 'of Scotland was to be as it ſhould be then and there Ordained.

Fourthly, 'All the ſtrong Holds now in the King's, or his Friend's 'Hands, ſhould Remain ſo, and the Charge of keeping them ſhould be 'Defrayed out of what belonged to the Owners, or in other convenient manner, by thoſe who had the Cuſtody of them, or to whom 'they were delivered.

Fifthly,

Anno. Dom. MCCCIV.

Fifthly, ‘The Priſoners on both ſides were to be ſet Free, except Monſieur Peter de Morham, and his Father.

Sixthly, ‘That the Hoſtages for the Payment of the Ranſoms of Priſoners on both ſides ſhould be Releaſed.

‘The Perſons excepted, were Robert Biſhop of Glaſcow, Monſieur James the Steward of Scotland, John Soules, Monſieur David de Graham, Monſieur Alexander de Lindſey, Monſieur Simon Fraſer, Thomas du Boys, and Monſieur William de Wallys; concerning all whom it was agreed, That the Biſhop, as to his Body and Temporalties, the Seneſchal, or Steward, and John Soules, ſhould have the ſame Conditions with the Commons; (that is, Have their Lives and Limbs ſafe, be free from Impriſonment, and not Diſinherited) but yet with Two Years Baniſhment out of Scotland, beyond the River Trent: That the Steward's Caſtles ſhould be in the King's Poſſeſſion during his Exile, and he to be at the Charge of keeping them. Concerning Monſieur David de Graham, and Monſieur Alexander de Lindſey, it was agreed That they ſhould have the ſame Conditions with the former, and be Baniſhed Scotland for Half a Year, David beyond the River Tweed, and Alexander beyond Trent. As to Monſieur Simon Fraſer, and Thomas du Boys, it was agreed alſo, That they ſhould have the ſame Conditions, but be Baniſhed the King's Dominions for Three Years, and alſo out of the Dominions of the King of France, unleſs in the mean time they could find Favour. But as to William Wallys, he was to Submit himſelf wholy to the Mercy of the King.

Further it was agreed, ‘That the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Dunkeldin, the Earl of Boughan, (i. e. John Comyn) the Seneſchal, or Steward of Scotland, Monſieur John de Soules, Monſieur Ingelram de Humfreville, and the other Perſons of Scotland, who were abroad, and the Confederates of John Comyn, ſhould come to the King's Peace within Fifteen Days after Eaſter next, every one according to his Quality, at Dumfermling, to do Homage, and Swear Fealty to Him.

And be it known, ‘That the aforeſaid Earl of Ulſter, and the Lord Aymer, Henry, and John Benſtede, promiſed in Good Faith, to uſe their beſt Endeavours with the King, to Ratifie in all Points this Accord by his Letters Patents, ſo ſoon as John Comyn, and others, that ſhould come with him, had done their Homage, and Sworn Fealty in due manner. In witneſs whereof, one Part of the Indenture, which was to remain with the King, was Sealed by John Comyn, Edmund Comyn, John de Graham, John de Vaux, and Others; and the other part was Sealed by the Earl of Ulſter, Aymer, Henry, and John Benſtede: Dated at Stratborde the Ninth Day of February, in the Thirty ſecond Year of the King.

The Title of The Record is, Forma Pacis Scotiæ in Adventu Johannis le Comyn & aliorum, i. e. The Form of the Peace of Scotland, upon the Submiſſion of John Comyn, and Others.

Yet notwithſtanding theſe Capitulations, Sir William Wallys, and a conſiderable Party of the Scots, ſtill refuſed to ſubmit, and held ſeveral ſtrong Places in Scotland againſt King Edward, which obliged Him ſo ſoon as his Affairs at home would give Him leave, and that the Seaſon of the Year would permit Him, to make another Expedition againſt them:

Yet Sir Will. Wallys and divers other Scots Men refuſe to ſubmit, and hold ſeveral Places

Anno Dom. MCCCIV.

[4] T. W. C. Abing. The King makes another Expedition against the Scots, and renews the Siege of Sterling-Caſtle, tho' a long time in vain.

The King encourages his Soldiers by a ſhort Speech.

them: [4] Wherefore leaving Dumfermling, He went in Perſon, and renewed the Siege of Sterling-Caſtle, which ſtill held out, battering it with Engines, that caſt Stones of Two hundred Pounds weight, with which the Walls were ſo ſhaken, that they fell down in divers Places; yet notwithſtanding the Beſieged defended it gallantly with their warlike Engines, which killed many of the Engliſh; and King Edward Himſelf was in great danger of his life from ſeveral great Stones and Arrows that were then ſhot at Him. But at laſt a huge Breach being made in the Walls, the King commanded the Ditches to be filled up with Faggots and other Materials, in order to make a General Aſſault: And the Signal being ready to be given, the King, to encourage his Soldiers, made them a ſhort Speech; wherein He ſets forth the Juſtice of his Cauſe, and that the Earls and Barons of Scotland, notwithſtanding their ſo often doing Homage and Swearing Fealty to Him as their Supream Lord, yet had ſeveral times Rebelled againſt Him, and He had as often Subdued them; ſo that there being no more Places left untaken, but this Caſtle, which was held out by an inconſiderable Fellow, He hoped they would now make ſo vigorous an Aſſault, as ſhould redound to their Own and the Nation's Honour.

[5] Ibid. The Beſieged being afraid of a general Aſſault, offer to Surrender, upon Conditions, which the King will not admit of.

[1] C. Rof. K. W. Wherefore they at laſt yield to Mercy.

When [5] the Beſieged found they were juſt going to be Aſſaulted, and knowing there was no hope of Relief, they offer'd to Surrender the Place, upon Condition to have their Lives and Limbs preſerved: But the King would by no means conſent to it, but was reſolved they ſhould wholy ſubmit themſelves to his Mercy; but they could not be brought to that, till they found they were unable to hold out any longer; and then they accepted his Offer, and Surrender'd themſelves, together with the Caſtle, on St. Margaret's Day, or the Twentieth of July: And then [1] they all came out of it, Bare-footed, and with Ropes about their Necks, confeſſing themſelves worthy of Death, but with Tears implored the King's Mercy; which ſo prevail'd upon his good Nature, That He gave them all their Lives, but ſent William Olyfant the Governour, with above a Hundred Perſons of Quality more, to divers Caſtles of England, there to be kept Priſoners. *

[2] Ibid. The King having ſettled Scotland, leaves the Lord Segrave Governor there.

The [2] King having taken this Caſtle, which was the only Place left that could any ways moleſt Him, ſpent the reſt of this Summer in Scotland for the Settling the Affairs of that Kingdom; which when He had perform'd, and appointed Governours over the Caſtles, and other ſtrong Places, to ſecure the Peace thereof, and had made the Lord John Segrave, again, Guardian or Lieutenant of the whole Kingdom, He return'd into England a little before Winter.

[3] Ch. Abing. The King removes his Courts from York to Weſtminſter.

When [3] He came to York, He order'd his Courts of King's Bench and Exchequer, (which had been held there for near Seven Years) to be removed from thence to the Antient place at Weſtminſter. Then the King went to Lincoln, where He ſpent the greateſt part of the Winter.

[4] Id. Ib. The King lays a Talliage upon his Cities and Boroughs of Antient Demeſne.

I find nothing elſe the King did which was conſiderable this Year, [4] but that upon his Return out of Scotland, being in great want of Money, He impos'd a Talliage of the Sixth Penny, according to a due Valuation of their Goods, upon his Demeſne Cities and Boroughs.

Some of our Hiſtorians do alſo date the Writ or Commiſſion of Trayl-Baſton from this Year: But I rather incline to follow Matt. Weſtminſter, and others, who place it under the next.

* All which Proceedings do more evidently appear by an Instrument made thereof by a publick Notary, at ye Command of King Edward, bearing Date ye 24th of July, at ye said Castle of Sterling, where by ye Governour thereof & twenty five othr Chief Men of that Garrison submitted themselves to ye King's mercy, & it thereby also appears, yt ye Earls Barons, & Communities of ye Burroughs of Scotland, who had been engaged in ye late Rebellion (as it is there call'd) being reduc'd by Force of Arms to a sense of their Duty, divers of them came before the King and acknowledging him for their Supreme & Liege Lord, offer'd to make him satisfaction for what they had done, by assisting him in the Siege of the said Castle, as you may find in the Instrument it self in the Custody of the Chamberlain of ye Exchequer, and is published in R- Coll: p. 950, to 952.

I ſhall

Anno Dom. MCCCIV.

[5] M. W. The Deaths of ſeveral great Perſons.

I ſhall now conclude with the [5] Deaths of ſome Perſons of great Note; as Thomas de Corbridge, Archbiſhop of York, to whom Succeeded William de Grenfeld, Doctor of both Laws; alſo John de Warren, Earl of Surrey, now deceaſed, who was ſucceeded by his Grand-ſon of the ſame Name: He ſome time after Married Eleanor the King's Grand-daughter by her Mother the Counteſs of Barr.

[1] Ib.

[1] In Italy, Pope Benedict the Eleventh, having ſat little above a Year, deceaſed at Peruſiam on the Seventh of July; upon whoſe Death the Cardinals, being ſhut up in the Conclave, could not agree about the choice of a new Pope until the Year following.

[2] C. N. T. The King of France routs the Flemings.

As to Foreign Affairs, the [2] King of France had this Year much better Succeſs over the Flemings than He had the laſt; for He now routed their Forces in a pitch'd Battel, wherein William Earl of Juliers was ſlain: Whereupon the Two Cities of Liſle and Doway were not long after Surrender'd to the French. And having now very much humbled the Flemings, King Philip, to reduce them to his own Terms, ſent to his Brother of England, to deſire Him to debar them from having any Commerce with England, as He had already done by the Scots.

And we further find yt ye King did not stand altogether neuter in this war against ye Flemmings, but assisted his Brother of France with twenty ships raised by the Cinque Ports, which were to serve him for four months this summer, as appears by certain Writs, dated ye 9th of April, directed to the Mayors & Bailiffs of ye several Cinque Ports there mentiond, a copy of which is entred on the Rolls [Rot: Claus: 32. E. I. m. 12. d] & is published in Rym: Coll: p. 943. and yt the King also complyed with the King of France's Request of forbiding all Commerce with them, appears by anothr. Writ upon the same Roll, directed to all ye Sheriffs of England & Officers of the Cinque Ports, commanding them to cause to be proclaimd within their several Precincts, yt all merchants of England should immediately withdraw themselves, & their Effects out of Flanders.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

[3] M. W. Chron. Abing. The King holds a great Council, wherein He iſſued out the Commiſſion of Trayle-Baſton. The Original of that Commiſſion.

King Edward [3] kept his Chriſtmaſs at Lincoln with great Joy and Magnificence, for his late Succeſs over the Scots, being attended by a conſiderable number of his Earls and Barons; and I ſuppoſe it was in this Council or Parliament, That a new Writ or Commiſſion was iſſued out, which though it was only of Oyer and Terminer, yet was commonly called Trayle-baſton, of which Name I ſhall ſay more by and by; but the occaſion of it was this: The King and his Nobility, finding the Nation very much diſturbed by Thieves, Murtherers, and other diſturbers of the publick Peace, iſſued out this Commiſſion to ſeveral Juſtices appointed in each County for that purpoſe, who were to enquire concerning all Felonies, Breaches of the Peace, and other Offences; as alſo againſt Intruders into other Folk's Lands, who for fear were forced to convey them to the Intruders; as alſo againſt thoſe, that were hired to beat Men, and would afterwards for a double Reward Cudgel thoſe that had hired them.

[4] Chron. Abing. The manner how the Commiſſioners were to proceed.

But to ſpeak of this Writ. Theſe [4] Commiſſioners or Juſtices were to proceed according to their Commiſſion; by which they were appointed to enquire, by a Jury of Twelve Knights and other Lawful Men of the County, concerning the ſaid Offences; who were to return their particular Inquiſitions, with all their Proceedings, under their Seals, to the ſaid Juſtices: By Vertue of which, many Felons and other Offenders were taken; ſome of whom were hanged, and others fined, according to the nature of the Offence; by which means the Kingdom was not only clear'd of Offenders, but the King, by the many Fines and Forfeitures of Offenders, very much encreas'd his Revenues.

The Original of the Word Trayle-Baſton, from a Manuſcript Chronicle.

But this way of Proceeding being looked upon as too quick and ſevere, it was in the Reign of Edward the Third quite laid aſide, and is now grown ſo obſolete, that it is ſcarce known from whence the Word Trayle-baſton (which Signifies in old French, draw the Staff) is derived; but though it is commonly attributed to the Speedineſs of the Proceſs, which was diſpatched almoſt in as little time as a Man could draw, or let fall a Staff, yet this Signification ſeems forced; and I rather Incline to the Authority of the Eveſham Chronicle in the

Bodleian

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

Boaleian Library, which derives it from a certain Inſtrument, antiently belonging to a Shoemaker, wherewith they uſed to beat their Apprentices, called a Trayle-baſton, (but is now out of Uſe) and of which the Author ſays, That the King in his Return out of Scotland was told this Story, concerning thoſe who then made it a Trade to take Money to beat other Men. That a certain Wicked Perſon, having hired ſome of thoſe Ruffians to beat another Man, whom he durſt not meddle with himſelf, they met with him, and cudgel'd him very ſeverely; but he happening to know One of them, found out who it was that had hired them; whereupon deſiring them to ſpare him, he promiſed them, if they would beſtow as many more Blows on him that ſet them on Work, he would reward them double, which they agreed to: So, in their Return, they met with the Man that firſt employ'd them, who asking them, Whither they had done as he had order'd them? they anſwered Yes, and that they were to receive as much more for the like Buſineſs; ſo One of them being a Shoemaker, crying out Trayle-baſton, they all fell upon him, and cudgel'd him twice as much as they did the other. At which Story the King at firſt ſmiling, was reſolved to ſecure his People for the future from ſuch Malefactors; and therefore He appointed certain Officers on purpoſe to Puniſh them, who were ever after called Commiſſioners of Trayle-baſton.

* The Reader may see a more authentic Copy of this Writ in ye Tower, bearing Date 6th of April [Rot Pat: 33. E. I. p. 1. m. 8. d.] vid: R: Coll: p. 956.

The Subſtance of the Writ, whereby theſe Commiſſioners acted.

I ſhall here, from the above-cited Chronicle of Abingdon,* give you the Subſtance of the Writ, by which theſe Commiſſioners acted; and it is directed to Two Gentlemen of Yorkſhire therein named, and firſt recites, 'That whereas very many Malefactors and Diſturbers of the Peace 'wander about, committing Murthers, Robberies, and burning of Houſes, 'with other Villanies both by day and night in the ſaid County, 'to the great Danger of the Inhabitants, as alſo of thoſe that paſs 'through the ſame; from which worſe Events may eaſily happen, 'unleſs ſome ſpeedy Remedy be appointed for the ſame; wherefore the 'King, being reſolved to prevent their Malice and Wickedneſs, had 'appointed thoſe Perſons named in the ſame Writ, to enquire by the Oaths 'of certain Lawful Men of the ſame County, concerning ſuch Malefactors, 'their Receivers and Partakers; as alſo concerning thoſe who have made 'any Bargain with them, for Gifts, or Rewards, to beat, wound, or 'evil intreat, or kill any Perſons, at Fairs, Markets, or other Places; 'as alſo concerning thoſe, who being ſworn in Inquiſitions at Aſſizes, 'have for Fear of them forborn to Indict or give their Verdicts againſt 'Malefactors; and to enquire of thoſe that have given them any 'Gifts, and how much and what they are; and who have received, 'as alſo who any ways favour or maintain ſuch Malefactors; and that 'they cauſe them to be arreſted and committed to Priſon by the 'Sheriff of the ſaid County: And then commands them to cauſe ſtrict 'Inquiſitions to be made at certain Times and Places, to be by them 'appointed, concerning all Miſdemeanors; and, if occaſion be, to Raiſe 'the Poſſe Commitatus, to Seiſe ſuch Malefactors that ſhall be thus Preſented and Indicted, and Commit them to Priſon; and alſo by the 'Sheriff to ſeiſe the Goods and Chattels of all ſuch as ſhall flee after 'their Indictment, and keep them for the King's uſe: Then gives 'a Power to the Sheriffs, That at certain Days and Places, to 'be appointed by the ſaid Commiſſioners, they cauſe as many Knights, 'or others as they ſhall think fit to be return'd, to enquire concerning ‘ing the Premiſſes, and that they cauſe all ſuch as they ſhall find ‘Guilty by ſuch Inquiſitions, to be arreſted and kept in Priſon as ‘aforeſaid, without delay; and that the ſaid Sheriff and whole Body ‘of the County be aſſiſting to the ſaid Commiſſioners, whenever ‘there is occaſion on the Behalf of the King. In cujus rei Teſtimonium, &c.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

There alſo follow in French certain Articles for the ſaid Commiſſioners to enquire upon. The Firſt is, concerning thoſe, who having got into Poſſeſſion of the Lands of other Men, and cannot maintain the ſaid Force againſt the Right Owners by Law, deliver the ſaid Lands or Tenements into the hands of Great Lords, to be by them maintained in the ſaid firſt Wrong: The reſt of them being to the ſame purpoſe, as thoſe contain'd in the Commiſſion it ſelf, I omit. * By Vertue of theſe Commiſſions, the Commiſſioners of Trayle-baſton, conſtantly ſitting in all Counties of England, and many Perſons being found Guilty by the Inquiſitions of Lawful Men, they were return'd under their Seals to the ſaid Commiſſioners; and ſeveral being thereupon Indicted, and found Guilty, were taken and executed: Inſomuch that divers others fearing the like Treatment, left their Houſes and Farms, and fled into Scotland, and there joining with the King's Enemies, did a great deal of miſchief to the Engliſh, by the Inrodes they made in thoſe Parts.

The Articles upon which they were to enquire.

* Id. ib.

So ſoon as the King return'd to London, He there held a † Parliament in Lent; at which, on the Five and twentieth Day of March, [2] He enjoyn'd the Biſhop of Glaſco, Robert Bruce (Earl of Caric) afterwards King of the Scots, and John de Mowbray, (being the Chief of the Scotiſh Nobility, who had been concern'd in the late Wars againſt the King) That they ſhould treat among themſelves, and agree upon a Day and Place, for a Parliament to be called, to conſult about the State of the Kingdom and People of Scotland, and who are fitteſt to be entruſted with the Government thereof; as alſo concerning the Number and Quality of the Scotiſh Nobility that ſhould come to it.

† Ro: Clauſ 33 Ed. I. *M.*3. Dorſ. Vid. Ryley's Placit Parliament, 243, 244.

[2] The King holds a Parliament, and adviſes with the Scotiſh Nobility, when and how to hold a Parliament for Scotland.

Their * Advice and Anſwer to theſe Articles were return'd to the King the day following, to this effect, That a Parliament could not well be Aſſembled in Scotland before Midſummer, the Place to be where the King pleaſed; That as to the Perſons, Two Biſhops, Two Abbots, Two Earls, Two Barons, and Two for the Commons, were a ſufficient number, if the King thought fit; and concerning the Perſons that were to take care of the Kingdom, they thought the preſent Guardians and King's Miniſters, with the Community of the Kingdom, were ſufficient for that Purpoſe. Which Things being read before the King and Council on the Six and twentieth of March, He thereupon willed and granted, That the day of the Parliament's Meeting ſhould be Three Weeks after Midſummer, and that it ſhould be at London, and that Ten, who ſhould be choſen by the whole Community, might come to the Parliament at London, for the whole Community of Scotland, and that the Cuſtody of the Nation ſhould be as they had ſaid.

* Ibidem. Their Anſwer to the King's Demands.

Theſe alſo [3] Petitioned the King, that thoſe who ſhould be elected to come to this Parliament, for the ſaid Community, might have their Charges and Expences born by them. And his Anſwer was, That He would would order that thoſe Ten, who ſhould be choſen to come to the Parliament for the whole Community of Scotland, ſhould have their Expences paid them by the ſaid Community, &c.

[3] Vid. Pryn's Regſt. of Parliament Writs, p. 22, 23.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

[4] Vid Ryleys Append. ad Placit Parli. p. 503 508. Printed alſo in Pryn's 3d Vol. 1053. & Dein ad 1056. Clauſ. 33. E. I. M. 13. Dorſ. Ten Commiſſioners are choſen to repreſent all the Eſtates of Scotland, in a great Council of England. *Their Names being now of no Uſe are omitted, but the Reader if he pleaſes may find them in the Roll and in Print. Theſe ſettle all things relating to the Government of Scotland.

However this [4] Parliament (as appears by the ſame * Record) was Prorogued from Three Weeks after the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, to the Feaſt of the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, or Fifteenth of September; at which time and Place abovementioned came the Scots Commiſſioners, who were there choſen by the Commonalty of Scotland, viz the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Dunkelain, the Abbots of Cowper and Menros, the Earl of Boughan, Monſieur John de Mowbray, Monſieur Robert de Keth, Monſieur Adam de Gourdon, Monſieur John de Inchemartin; but Earl Patrick, who was choſen by the Commonalty to be the Tenth, came not; and therefore by Command of the King, Monſieur John de Monteith was aſſigned in his ſtead. Theſe, with Twenty Engliſh Biſhops, Abbots, Earls and Barons, who were all ſworn by the King's Command, treated about the Eſtabliſhment of Scotland, and appointed the King's Lieutenant or Guardian, the * Chancellor, Chamberlain, Judges and Sheriffs of the ſame, all by Name, as well of thoſe that were born in Scotland as of the Engliſh: They likewiſe ſettled the Coroners, Conſtables of Caſtles, and alſo ordered all things concerning the Laws and Uſages of Scotland, and the Peace and Diſturbers thereof, as alſo concerning the Government. The Title to this Great Record, is, The Ordinance made by the King for the Eſtabliſhment of Scotland; which being very long, and now obſolete, I have here only given you the Subſtance of it.

[5] In Bib. Cotton. This Record is further confirmed by a Manuſcript Chronicle, which ſets forth the whole Proceedings of the Council.

[5] The Manuſcript Chronicle of Rocheſter (from whom Matt. Weſtminſter hath Word for Word tranſcribed the Relation of this Affair, as he has done many other things) may ſerve to explain and confirm this Record; for it relates, That on the Octaves of St. Mary's Nativity (or Sixteenth of September) there was a great Council aſſembled at the New-Temple in London, conſiſting of ſome of the Nobility of England and Scotland, at which were preſent the Biſhop of Cheſter, with the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſco, and Four Earls, Two for each Nation, beſides many Barons of the ſame; all theſe conſulted for about Twenty Days what was beſt to be done to ſettle the Peace of Scotland for all future times; and then theſe Scotiſh Commiſſioners (who were ſent hither by the Community of the whole Kingdom) together with certain of the Engliſh Biſhops and Noblemen, agreed, that certain Juſtices ſhould be appointed by Two and Two, who ſhould in their particular Provinces preſerve the Peace of the Country, decide Differences, and prevent Quarrels: All which being concluded on, the ſaid Commiſſioners came before the King, and there read the Ordinance they had now made, which He approv'd of, and confirm'd. Then all the Scotiſh Biſhops, Earls and Barons there preſent, ſwore on the Holy Goſpels for themſelves and their Heirs, as alſo for the whole People of Scotland, preſent and to come, That all Men, of what Rank and Condition ſoeve, ſhould for the future faithfully obſerve the ſaid Ordinance.

* Now called Richmond. The King upon this Settlement expreſſes great Clemency to the Scotiſh Nobility.

Theſe things were tranſacted at the Mannor of * Sheen, upon Thames; at which the King was ſo highly ſatisfied, in hopes of a firm and laſting Peace, that He farther expreſſed his Clemency to the Scotiſh Nobility and Gentry, who had rebelled againſt Him, and for their Offences

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

fences were to pay the full value of their Eſtates in Two, Three, or Four Years (according as their Fines had been ſet) each of them ſhould have their times of Payment enlarged to as long again, wherein they were to pay their Compoſitions, each Man's Eſtate and Condition conſidered; ſo that in the mean time he might have whereof to live according to his Degree and Quality. Then the Scotiſh Commiſſioners abovementioned, having taken their leaves of the King, return'd Home with great appearance of Joy and Satiſfaction.

And King Edward, not long after, did by his Letters Patents confirm theſe Articles (here mentioned by our Hiſtorian) as appears by the enſuing Charter, Tranſlated from the French Original in * Ryley's Placita Parliamentaria.

* p. 366.

The Form of the King's Charter of Pardon to the Scots Noblemen, who had been in Arms againſt him.

EDward, by the Grace of God, King of England, Lord of Ireland, and Duke of Aquitain, to all that ſhall ſee or hear theſe Letters, Greeting. For the perpetual Memory of the things under-written, We let you underſtand, That the People of Scotland, after they were in Our Homage and Ligeance, and bound to Us by Oath of Fealty, and by their Charters or Writings, as ſtrongly as We and Our Council knew how to order and direct, by evil Councel aroſe and made War againſt Us; committing Robberies, Burnings, Murthers, Felonies, and many other Evils and Miſchiefs, according to their Power, in Our ſaid Land of Scotland, and alſo in part of England, contrary to their Homages, Fealties and Ligeances aforeſaid; and afterwards many of them return'd to Our Faith and Obedience, and were received to Our Peace and Favour: And at laſt John Comyn Lord of Badenagh, and the Others of his Party, came alſo, and were received to our Peace and Faith, ſo as for their Ranſoms and Amends for their Treſpaſſes and Outrages againſt Us, and for the Eſtabliſhment of Scotland, they ſhould be at our Ordinance and Pleaſure. Notwithſtanding theſe Contempts, Treſpaſſes, Outrages, and Diſobediences of the People of Scotland towards Us, have been ſo great and heavy, as there cannot ſufficient Amends and due Satiſfaction be made for them at any time; and though We cannot ſuffer ſuch Crimes to paſs without ſome Puniſhment: Yet ſeeing thoſe People have behaved themſelves well and loyally ſince Our laſt being in thoſe Parts, and for the Hopes We have of their good Behaviour, and Service for the Future, being willing to do them ſpecial Grace, We have Granted, and do hereby Grant, That their Lives and Limbs ſhall be ſafe, and that they ſhall be free from Impriſonment, and not be diſinherited: Saving to Us always the Lands, Tenements and Lordſhips, the Demeſnes and Appurtenances of the Royalty of Scotland, (which John Baliol, late King thereof, gave away and alienated,) to do Our Pleaſure with them. And We alſo do hereby Pardon and Releaſe to the People aforeſaid, that have ſubmitted and received our Peace and our Faith, the Crimes committed againſt Us, the Anger, Rancour, and all manner of Ill-Will We any ways had againſt them; ſo as they ſhall be bound to pay what is ordered by Us and Our Council, according to Our Decree and Determination, which follow in this Form.

The ſeveral Fines or Compoſitions that thoſe Noblemen were to Pay for their Eſtates.

Firſt, We Order and Decree, That John Comyn, and the Others with him, who came in to Our Peace and Faith upon the Covenants granted them, ſhall, to make Amends for the Crimes by them Committed, pay three Years value of their Lands and Rents, toward the Building of new Caſtles in Scotland, for Security of the Nation and preſerving the Peace, or to other uſes as We ſhall think fit: And We farther Pardon the ſaid John Comyn, and David Graham their Exiles, and remaining out of Scotland, according to the Covenant aforeſaid.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

Further 'tis ordained by Us and our Council, That the People of Scotland, who ſubmitted to Us before John de Baliol, ſhall Pay only the Rents of Two Years of their Lands; except thoſe that can ſhew themſelves acquitted by Our ſpecial Grant or Deed.

The ſame Order was made concerning Adam de Gourdon, and Simon de Fraſer, Knights, and therefore the Decree concerning them need not be repeated.

Further, We Decree and Determine, That the Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, and the Clergy of the Kingdom of Scotland, except the Biſhop of Glaſco, ſhall Pay as their Ranſom, and for their Crimes, the value of their Rents and Lands for one Year; except thoſe that can ſhew by ſpecial Deed, or other Manner, that they ought to be Diſcharged.

The Biſhop of Glaſco was to be diſcharged upon the ſame Terms with John Comyn in all Reſpects; as alſo to his Baniſhment, which was remitted.

Further, That Ingelram de Umfrevil, becauſe he made his Submiſſion but a little while before theſe Letters were granted, ſhould pay Five Years Value, &c. And that William de Baliol, and John Wychard, ſhould Pay for the ſame Reaſon Four Years Rent.

Further, That Hugh de Adroſſan, John de Gourley, John de Naper, and John de Makilgoigny, who were of the Retinue of the ſaid William, Ingelram and John, ſhould Pay Three Years Value.

Further, for the time and manner of Payment of theſe Compoſitions or Fines, the King's Lieutenant and Chamberlain of Scotland ſhould make a reaſonable and juſt Extent of the Lands of the Offenders, according to the preſent Value of the Lands; and according to that Extent the Compoſition or Fine was to be levied and paid every Year, at the uſual time of Payment, half the Value; and ſo from Year to Year till the whole was paid: And other half of their Lands and Rents ſhould remain to them for their Support and Maintenance.

And 'tis to be known, That Our Will is not, that this Determination ſhould extend to, and be underſtood of ſuch Perſons of the Scots as were Priſoners upon this occaſion; nor of ſuch as have not ſubmitted to Our Peace or Faith. In Witneſs whereof we have cauſed theſe our Letters Patents to be ſealed at Weſtminſter the 15th of October, in the 33d Year of Our Reign.

The Title of this Patent is, Forma pacis Scotiæ, The Form of the Peace of Scotland. ✱ The original Charter is still preserv'd in the Exchequer, & is publi in R—s Coll: p. 968, 969.

[4] M. W. The Scotiſh Clergy though all Sworn to this Ordinance yet did not obſerve it, and why.

This is the Effect of the Articles concluded on in the Great Council abovementioned, conſiſting of all the Engliſh Nobility, and the Deputies of thoſe from Scotland, [4] which ſat Twenty Days, and in that time drew up and agreed on the abovementioned Ordinance; for the perpetual obſervation of which, all the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls and Barons of Scotland, preſently after took a Solemn Oath, though it proved to no great purpoſe, ſince moſt of them not long after, caſting off their Allegiance to King Edward, fell into a freſh Rebellion, and ſet up a King of their own, as you will find anon; ſo impoſſible a thing it is for a Foreign Prince totally to ſubdue a Free and Warlike Nation, as long as their Nobility and Gentry keep their Eſtates (as now they did) and were ſo far from thinking it an Obligation to enjoy them upon the Terms agreed on by the abovementioned Articles; that looking upon that as too great an Impoſition, they choſe rather to take up Arms, than quietly to pay it. But to return to the Affairs of Scotland.

rather

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

Sir William Wallys Taken and Executed.

Sir William Wallys (the Scots late Champion) was not ſo much as mentioned in this Agreement; and which, as it may be ſuppoſed, he would never have accepted of, ſince he looked upon himſelf as irreconcileable to King Edward and the Engliſh Intereſt: But the Reaſon why he was not at all mention'd, is, That about the middle of Auguſt preceding, He had been taken Priſoner by ſome of King Edward's Officers in Scotland, [5] being betray'd by one Sir John Menteth, his ſeemingly familiar Friend, and [1] being ſent up to London, was there Tryed and Condemned by certain Noblemen appointed for that purpoſe, to be Hang'd, Drawn and Quarter'd, his Bowels and Privities being firſt cut out whilſt He was yet alive; all which was executed upon him with the utmoſt ſeverity; his Head was fixed upon London-Bridge, but his Four Quarters were ſent into Scotland, and placed over the Gates of as many of the Principal Cities of that Kingdom. This was the end of that great Champion of the Scotiſh Nation, and who is celebrated even to this day in their Songs, Poems and Hiſtories; but as he may be commended for his Valour, ſo his Memory is highly odious to the Engliſh for his barbarous Cruelty, ſince all our Engliſh Writers (among other remarkable Inſtances thereof) relate, That beſides the Killing of Infants Sucking at their Mothers Breaſts, and Burning to Death a great Number of Engliſh Schole Boys in Schools and Churches, he alſo forced many Engliſh Men and Women, whom He had taken Priſoners and ſtripped ſtark naked, to Dance and Sing before Him, whilſt certain Tormentors that guarded them, pricked them forward with ſharp Pikes, to make them march which way they had a Mind to. ✗

[5] T. W. Buch. L. 9.

[1] M. W.

✗ I must not omit somewhat tho a ~~most~~ less publick concerne, that the Ld. Nicolas Segrave, one of the cheif Barons of England, being this year accused, and then upon arrested of high treason upon the testimony of another Kt. whose name is not mentioned. Segrave (there being no other witness against him) proffered to justify himself by Duel, but the King not admitting of it, Segrave thereupon followed his accuser beyond sea that he might fight him, wch being done without the Kings license he was again seized as a Traytor, yet at last he with some difficulty he was ~~again~~ pardoned and again received into the Kings favour. Continuator. Chron. Gervas. Dorob. ad hunc an.

The King calls the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to Account for what he had formerly acted againſt him.

I ſhall conclude this Year with ſome Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, concerning the King's ſevere Proceeding about this time with Robert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, whom, his Affairs being now ſettled, He thought fit to queſtion for eſpouſing the Party of the Diſcontented Nobility againſt Him, both before and after his going into Flanders; beſides which, the King laid Hainous Crimes to his Charge; as, That [2] he ſhould have entred into a Confederacy to Dethrone Him, and ſet up his Son Prince Edward; which though my Author makes him to have confeſſed, yet it is not at all probable he ſhould do it, there being no direct Proof againſt him; and that thereupon being ſeverely rebuked by the King he fell down at his Feet, and humbly begged his Pardon, calling the King his Lord, which he never did before in Speech or Writing. Thus (ſaid He) this Proud Prelate hated of both God and Men, who with his Pride had Blackened the Prieſthood and Clergy of England, and exerciſed an unheard of Tyranny over the People, now taken by the King in his own Wickedneſs, conſcious of it, and affright'ned with the Fear of Puniſhment, as he lay proſtrate before the King, committed himſelf and his Goods to his Mercy.

[2] Will. Thorne. Script. Col. 2004.

Why William Thorne's Account is not much to be credited concerning the Archbiſhop.

This is William Thorne's Account of this Tranſaction between the King and the Archbiſhop, againſt whom he having a particular Pique, upon the Account of [3] his having invaded certain Rights and Priviledges belonging to the Abby of St. Auguſtin Canterbury, between whoſe Abbot and this Archbiſhop there had been long and frequent Diſputes about them; therefore this Writer (though cited by Dr. Brady) may be very well looked upon as too much prejudiced [3] Ib. Col 2003.

against

I must not here pass by a thing very material relating to Scotland, being omitted by our Historians, that the King not long after his granting his above said Charter of Pardon, did by a Commission directed to the Bishop of St. Andrews and other Scottish noblemen constitute and appoint his dear Nephew John Son to the Duke of Brittaigne Guardian or Governour of Scotland, who continued so till toward the End of this Reign, this Commission is entred on the Roll [Rot: Pat: 33. E. I. m. 4] and is published in R–s Coll: p. 970.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

againſt the Archbiſhop; who (though he had behaved himſelf too haughtily againſt the King, yet that he was Guilty of any ſuch Deſign againſt Him, could never be proved; for had it been ſo, He would certainly have taken a more ſevere Courſe (if not with the Archbiſhop) yet at leaſt with the reſt of the Noblemen who had been found to have a hand in it.

* Rot. Rom. 34 Ed. I. M. 10. The King complains of him to the Pope; upon which he is ſuſpended ab Officio, &c.

Yet thus much is certain (ſince it appears upon * Record) That not long after the King ſent a large Complaint againſt him to the Pope, and Proſecuted him in his Court for diſturbing the Peace of the Kingdom, and cauſing often Commotions in it, defending and encouraging Rebels, and intending to Diſinherit Him: For which Crimes, at the Inſtance of the King, he was Cited by the Pope to his Court; and was there ſuſpended from the Execution of his Office, until he ſhould purge himſelf of what was objected to him by the King.

† Ib. M. 5. N 9. Upon which the Pope deputes certain Perſons to execute his Archiepiſcopal Offices, and receive the Rents.

Upon this Suſpenſion, † the Pope deputed certain Perſons to Adminiſter the Spiritualities and Temporalities of the Archbiſhoprick, and receive the Profits to his Uſe. As to the laſt the King wrote to him, it was to the manifeſt prejudice of his Crown and Dignity, and therefore He had cauſed them to be Seized, as He might Lawfully, and was bound to do by his Royal Right, and according to the Cuſtom of the Kingdom; yet though the Profits of the Temporalities belonged to the Crown during the Suſpenſion, for the particular Affection He had to his Perſon, He was willing and granted, That the Guardian thereof ſhould Pay them to ſuch as he ſhould aſſign to receive them.

But though the Archbiſhop went not long after to Rome, where he remain'd in Diſgrace, and under Suſpenſion during the ſhort Remainder of this King's Reign; yet in the beginning of the next, he was, by the Pope's Interceſſion, not only reſtor'd to the Temporalities of his Arch-biſhoprick, together with his Perſonal Eſtate, which had been ſeized into the King's hands, but was alſo re-inſtated in his former Favour at Court, as you will find hereafter, when we come to that Reign. ✝

✝ And the King having now the Pope for his Friend procur'd him to grant his Bull of Dispensation from the Oath he had formerly taken to observe the Additional Articles relating to the Liberties of Forrests, which as this Bull sets forth had been extorted from him by ye great Men or Nobles of the Kingdom whilst he was in Flanders, that being contrary to his Prerogative and therefore ye Pope thereby prohibits all Arch Bishops, Bishops, and other Ecclesiastical Persons under Paine of suspension, and if they continue obstinate for the Space of a month of Excommunication, and if they were Lay Persons under Pain of the last Sentence, if they shall presume to attempt any thing in Prejudice of this Bull of Dispensation and Revocation, yet further declares, that it was not his Intent thereby to take away any Rights of the Subjects of the said Realm granted by the said King or his Predecessors, before the s.d last Concession. this Bull is dated at Lyons 4th Kal: Feb. the first year of his Pontificate, is published in R—s Coll: p. 978, altho' there is a mistake in the Title prefixed before it, wherein it is called the Pope's Absolution from all Oaths & Excommunications concerning ye Observation of the Magna Chart Charter of Forrests; whereas it appears by the Purport of the Bull it self, that this Absolution was no further than to the Articles therein mentioned. as appears further by another Bull much to ye Effect, directed to the Bishop of Worcester in Order to be published by him, which you may like w in R—s Coll: p. 979. And I suppose ye Reason of this 2d Bull was, because the former ~~being~~ [illegible] Arch Bishop of Canterbury, who having been a great Promoter of these Additional Arti either refuse or delay the Publication of the said Bull.

[4] T. W. Mezeray ad hunc An. The Death of Benedict, and the Election of Clement the 5th.

I ſhall conclude this Year with ſome Eccleſiaſtical Affairs abroad. Pope Benedict XI. Deceaſing in Italy in the beginning of July laſt Year, having enjoy'd the Papacy not full Eight Months, after his Deceaſe the Cardinals being ſhut up in the Conclave, continued ſo for near Eleven Months more, until at laſt the Italian Cardinals, averſe to the French Intereſt, agreed to elect Berteran de Got, Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, a Gaſcoigner, and a Subject to the King of England, which happened very much for his Advantage. This Pope took the Name of Clement V. and was ſo far from going into Italy, as the Cardinals that had choſen Him deſired, that He forthwith Commanded them to Lyons, to aſſiſt at his Coronation, which was there perform'd on the 14th of November with great Pomp: The King of France attending upon Him in Perſon, led the Reins of his Mule's Bridle for a few Paces, and then left that Office to be perform'd by his Brother Charles Duke of Anjou, and the old Duke of Bretaigne, but with very ill Succeſs; for as they marched thus in Proceſſion from the Church where the Pope had been Crown'd, toward the Palace to Dinner, it happened that an old Wall, overcharged with People, that were got upon it, fell down juſt as the Pope paſſed by, and thereby overwhelmed the Duke of Bretaigne, and preſſed him him to Death, and killed Two or Three other Perſons of Great Quality that walked by his ſide; but the Duke of Anjou eſcaped, though grievouſly bruiſed. I do not find the Pope Himſelf had any Perſonal hurt, only his Triple Crown was beaten from his Head, and his Preſervation was accounted little leſs than a Miracle, though this was looked upon as a very ill Omen, and ſeem'd to portend the great Schiſms and miſchiefs that happened to the Roman See, by this Pope's tranſlating it from Rome to Avignon.

Anno Dom. MCCCV.

The Pope Eſcapes a great danger by the fall of an old Wall.

[5] M. W. The King ſends Ambaſſadors to the Pope, with a Noble Preſent of Gold Plate.

So ſoon as King Edward had Intelligence of the new Pope's Succeſſion to the Pontifical Throne, [5] He forthwith diſpatched the Biſhops of Litchfield and Worceſter, with the Earl of Lincoln, as his Ambaſſadors, to Congratulate Him; and alſo preſented his Holineſs with a Noble Service of Plate, both for his Chamber and Table, all of beaten Gold; which ſo wrought upon his Holineſs's Affection, that in return, He granted the King a Tenth out of all Eccleſiaſtical Benefices in England for Two Years, towards the Relief of the Holy-Land, though it was diverted by the King for his own private Occaſions.

This Pope alſo, remembring that Charity begins at home, firſt of all reſerved to Himſelf the Firſt-fruits of all Eccleſiaſtical Benefices in England, as well Biſhopricks as others; which continued down to the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, who firſt annexed them to the Crown, as they remain at this day: But He was induced to this (as my Author ſays) through the Covetouſneſs of the Engliſh Biſhops, who were content to ſubmit to this Innovation, upon Condition that they might enjoy the Profits of all vacant Benefices that were in their Gift for the ſpace of One Year next enſuing.

[1] M. W. T. W. The Pope ordains Anthony Biſhop of Durham, Patriarch of Jeruſalem.

But before I quit [1] this Subject, I muſt take notice, That One of the firſt things this new Pope did after his Acceſſion to the Throne, was, That He ordain'd that Warlike Ambitious Prelate, Anthony Beke, Biſhop of Durham, Patriarch of Jeruſalem, with a Diſpenſation for him to reſide there; ſo that this was a meer Titular Dignity, for which he paid the Pope (who then wanted Money) a round Sum: But though our Authors ſay, That his Holineſs thus advanced him for his Magnificence and Spirit, it was rather from his extream Pride, becauſe as a Patriarch, he would carry his Croſs before the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, as he did upon his Return home, to the great Mortification of both thoſe Prelates.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

[2] M. W. The great Inſurrection of the Scots, under Robert Bruce.

[3] Boeth. Buchan. With a Relation of the whole Deſign, and his Eſcape.

This Year begins with a moſt dangerons Inſurrection of the Scots; [2] which was begun and headed by Robert Bruce Earl of Carick, Son to him of the ſame Name, who formerly pretended to the Crown of Scotland; but what the Father had done openly, the Son now privately deſign'd and carried on: Of which Plot (as the [3] Scotiſh Hiſtorians relate) King Edward having had ſome notice, charged him with it; but he boldly denying it, and there being no direct Proof againſt him, he had time to make his Eſcape; for an Engliſh Peer (moſt likely the Earl of Gloceſter his Brother-in-Law) ſent him privately Twelve Sterling Pence, and a Pair of Spurs, which he interpreting to be a Symbole of ſpeedy Flight, preſently left London; and having had his Horſes ſhod backward to avoid being followed, he rode from thence into Scotland, where, ſo ſoon as he arrived, he reſolved to take upon him the Title of King; and knowing there was none ſo able to hinder him

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

[4] T. W. Ch. Ab.

He meets the Lord Comyn at Dunfreis, whom refuſing to join with him, he Murthers in the Church; and then takes the Caſtle, and makes the King's Juſtices Priſoners.

from it, or promote him to it, as [4] John Comyn Lord of Badenagh, being One of the moſt potent Men of that Kingdom, he immediately charged his Two Brothers, Thomas and Neele, to deſire a Meeting with him in the Cloyſter of the Franciſcan-Friers at Dunfreis; where, upon Conference, the Lord Comyn refuſing to join with him in the Deſign to make him King, he in Revenge Stabbed him with his Dagger: Then Comyn finding himſelf wounded, immediately fled out of the Cloiſter into the Church for Sanctuary; but One of the Bruce's Brothers, and others of his Retinue, fearing he ſhould recover, followed him thither, and murthered him on the Eleventh of February, at the very Altar. When Robert Bruce and his Accomplices had thus killed the Lord Comyn, he preſently mounted the Horſe of the Party ſlain, and went with his Confederates to the Caſtle of Dunfreis, where the King's Juſtices were then Siting, with a few Engliſh attending them, and ſurprizing them on the ſudden, they ſurrender'd themſelves to his Mercy, to whom He gave his Safe-Conduct to carry them out of the Kingdom.

[5] Lib. 9. H. Boeth. L. 14.

The Account the Scotiſh Hiſtorians give of this Buſineſs.

But ſince [5] Buchanan, and the reſt of the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, differ very much from ours in their Relation of this Action, Varniſhing it over with a much better Colour, than (I doubt) it deſerves, I ſhall therefore give you their Account of it. Firſt of all, they ſuppoſe that King Edward had not long before (to keep them firm to his Party) ſometimes made Bruce, and ſometimes Comyn believe, That He would make them Kings of Scotland, having each of them a Pretence to it; but when they found themſelves at laſt both deluded by the King, they entered into a joint Confederacy, and Comyn yielded up his Right to the Kingdom unto Bruce, upon Condition, That ſo ſoon as he ſhould be made King, the other ſhould have all Bruce's private Patrimony made over to him, which was very great. This Agreement was Signed and Sealed by both Parties, and not long after, Bruce went into England, to Speak with the King about ſome particular Matters; but ſo ſoon as he was gone, Comyn, to ingratiate himſelf with King Edward, and thereby to obtain the Kingdom for himſelf, diſcover'd the whole Conſpiracy, and at the ſame time ſent him the Agreement under his Seal: When the King had received this Notice, and had full Confirmation of it, He openly taxed Bruce with it, and appointed him a Day for his Trial; yet however he only took his Parole of Honour, that he would not depart from Court, and did not Impriſon him, until he had alſo ſeiſed his Brethren; but Bruce having Intelligence of the King's Intentions to take him off, by an Earl (whom Buchanan calls Comitem Gomeriæ, though by the way, there was at that time no Earl of this Title in England) he made his Eſcape, as hath been already related; and ſo ſoon as ever he came into Scotland, he by Accident met a Meſſenger with Letters from Comyn to the King of England, which he ſeized, and in them found how he had adviſed Him to put Bruce to Death. He was ſo much enraged at this Treacherous Dealing, of One whom he took for his Friend, That he immediately rode away to Dunfreis, and there meeting Comyn in the Church abovemention'd, and producing the Letter he had ſo lately taken, accuſed him of Treachery and Falſhood; but the other confidently denying it, Bruce was ſo exaſperated, That he ſtabbed him in the Belly with his Dagger; and Two of his Friends fearing that he had not ſufficiently done his Buſineſs, immediately ran into him and finiſhed the Work; after which, they all made their Eſcape as faſt as they could.

in

Ann. Dom. MCCCVI.

The Improbability of their Relations.

This Account, though plauſible enough, yet is attended with this Improbability, That none of the Engliſh Hiſtorians of that time mention any of theſe Circumſtances, but do all agree in the Relation of Comyn's Death, and the Cauſes of it, as is ſet down before; though I grant that the Continuator of * Fourdon relates this Action much in the ſame manner as Boethius and Buchanan have done, but he lies under the ſame ſuſpition of Partiality to his Country, as thoſe Two Authors that follow him: And indeed the Circumſtances of the Story are very improbable, as theſe Scotiſh Hiſtorians relate them; for is it likely, That King Edward, having made Three Expeditions into Scotland, and been at ſuch Charge and Trouble to ſettle that Kingdom, having not long before made the Clergy and Nobility thereof Swear Fealty to Himſelf, ſhould now ſeem willing to part with that Crown to another? Or that either Bruce or Comyn ſhould be ſo ſtupid as to believe Him, had He ever made any ſuch ſeeming Propoſition? Therefore it was not likely, that Comyn ſhould diſcover this Plot to the King, ſince he did thereby not only betray his own Guilt, but alſo his Weakneſs in doing it, without any Certainty to obtain the Crown himſelf. But I ſhall leave it to the Impartial Reader, to judge which of theſe Two Relations he thinks moſt probable, and ſhall proceed to that which is moſt certainly acknowledged by both ſides.

* MS. in Bib. St. Ben. Cantab.

The Lord Comyn being thus taken off, [1] Bruce having already made the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſco, with ſeveral Earls and Barons, Privy to his Deſign, drew them over to his Party; who, notwithſtanding they had moſt of them Swore Fealty, and done Homage more than once to King Edward, yet they with their Tenants and Followers preſently took up Arms; and there not being ſufficient Forces of the Engliſh then left in Scotland to reſiſt them, on our Lady-day the Biſhops abovemention'd, with Five Earls and ſeveral Barons of that Kingdom (beſides a great Multitude of the common ſort of People) aſſiſted at the Coronation of Robert Bruce, in the Abby Church of Scone: But he not thinking this ſufficient, on [2] Palm-Sunday following, had the Crown ſet upon his Head by the Counteſs of Bouquhan, Siſter to the Earl of Fife, to whom this Office belonged by Hereditary Right; which Ceremony was then believed to be ſo neceſſary, That this Counteſs not only ſtole away from her Husband for that end, but alſo carried off all his War-Horſes along with her; for which Fact you will e're it be long find her expos'd to ſufficient Shame.

[1] Chron. Abing. M. W.

Many Biſhops and Noblemen join with Bruce, who now makes himſelf King of the Scots, and has the Crown ſet upon his Head by the Counteſs of Bouquhan.

[2] T. W.

So ſoon as this Solemnity was over, the [3] new King and thoſe of his Party did what they could, (by receiving the Homages of ſuch as would come into Him, by ſeizing of Caſtles, and driving out the Engliſh,) to ſettle Him in his new Government; and though He did Wonders, conſidering the ſmallneſs of his Forces, yet by reaſon the whole Family of the Comyns, who were then, together with their Dependants, very powerful, oppoſed them with all their Might, and that moſt of the ſtrongeſt Places in Scotland ſtill remained in the hands of the Engliſh, as alſo becauſe ſeveral of the chiefeſt of the Nobility as yet continued Neuters, to ſee what Succeſs this new King might meet with; it was no wonder if his Forces were eaſily broken and ſubdued, as you will find in due time.

[3] Buchan. ib.

The great difficulties the new Scotiſh King met with at firſt; and the Reaſons of them.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

But this preſent Defection of the Scots, as well as a more general One the next Year, upon the Death of King Edward, will ſufficiently teach us, That no Promiſes or Oaths whatever, (when extorted by Force or Fear) though never ſo Solemnly made, will, or can oblige a free People to become Subject, and give up their Antient Laws and Liberties, to a Foreign Prince: So that it appears King Edward had indeed behaved Himſelf with more Clemency than Policy toward the Scotiſh Nobility and Gentry, that had been in Arms againſt Him, whom He admitted to compound for their Eſtates according to the Rates He had impos'd upon them; which was ſo far from being thought an Obligation, that it rather encouraged them again to rebel, to avoid the Payment thereof.

[4] M. W.

The King obtains the Pope's Abſolution of his late Oath for Deforeſtations, which gives a general Diſcontent.

* Par. ſecunda, P. 67. Edit. 1556.

Yet to give the People ſome Satisfaction, He publiſhes an Ordinance for the Regulation of Abuſes in the Swainmote-Courts.

† Rot. Stat. 35 Ed.I.M. 13,14.

* Ibidem.

† Art. 5.

* Second Vol. p. 84.

But it is time to return to the Affairs of England: Where ſome time before the King had made this further Advantage of the Pope's Favour, That He thereby obtain'd his Bull, abſolving Him from his late Oath for Deforeſting (or laying out of his Foreſts) all ſuch Lands as did not truly belong to them. [4] This Bull being publiſhed on Eaſter-day, gave a general Diſcontent to the whole Nation, ſince the King therein followed the Evil Example of his Father, who obtain'd the Pope's Abſolution from his Oath, to the Proviſions or Statutes of Oxford: And indeed this Act of the King's was looked upon ſo much the worſe, as being directly againſt Law, and the Antient Charter of Foreſts; beſides His own late Conceſſions. But then, to give the People ſome Satisfaction, and to ſtop their Mouths from Clamour, He not long after made and publiſh'd that Ordinance of the Foreſt now upon Record, and Printed in * Totel's Magna Charta, chiefly intended to regulate ſeveral Abuſes committed in the Swainemote-Courts, and to prevent divers Treſpaſſes committed in the King's Foreſts; which Ordinance bears Date at Weſtminſter the Eight and twentieth of May, in the Thirty fourth Year of his Reign: And at the ſame time with it, He alſo iſſued out a Writ, or Letter, enter'd upon the ſame † Statute-Roll with this Ordinance, and of the ſame Date; wherein He expreſſed Himſelf much troubled in Mind for the Clamours of the People, who, as He there ſays, were much oppreſſed, impoveriſhed, and injured by the Officers of his Foreſts; and therefore deſiring to obviate theſe Oppreſſions and Grievances, which He could not paſs by without great Scandal or Offence, and to provide for the Peace and Tranquility of the Kingdom, He had iſſued the aforeſaid Ordinance of the Foreſts. * This Writ or Letter was ſent into every County of England, with Command to the Sheriffs to cauſe them to be read, and the Ordinance that came with it, to be Proclaimed in a full County-Court. But how Gracious ſoever the King's Promiſes now might be to ſatisfy the Minds of the People, yet it is certain, That by this Ordinance He diſſannull'd the former Charter concerning Deforeſtations of thoſe Places which had not been antiently Foreſts, as appears by this very † Ordinance it ſelf; therefore this Action will not bear that Gloſs which * Dr. Brady puts upon it in his Hiſtory: But we ſhall now return to the Affairs of Scotland.

So ſoon as the King received the ill News of the late Defection of the Scots, immediately (till He could provide a greater Force) [5] He ſent to relieve the Gariſons of Berwick and Carliſle, thereby to ſecure the Engliſh Borders on that ſide from any Invaſion. In the mean while the new Scotiſh King, finding the Men of Galloway utterly refuſe to join with thoſe of his Party, He in Revenge fell in upon them, and deſtroyed their Country, beſieging One of their Chief Noblemen in his Caſtle, till he could be relieved by the Gariſon of Carliſle. But as for [1] King Edward, till ſuch time as He could go in Perſon, He in the beginning of the Spring diſpatch'd Americ de Valence Earl of Pembroke,* the Lords Robert Clifford, and Henry Piercy, into Scotland, with a ſmall Army, to put a ſtop to all new Inſurrections, and to Protect thoſe that continued ſtill in their Allegiance; and alſo gave full Power to the Earl, as Guardian of Scotland, to receive thoſe to Mercy and Pardon who would come in and ſubmit themſelves, excepting thoſe who had a hand in the Murther of the Lord Comyn, as appears by an *Original Charter (ſtill preſerved) under the Great Seal. And for augmenting the Forces neceſſary for this Expedition, † He cauſed it to be publickly Proclaimed all over England, That as many as were obliged to be made Knights, either by Paternal Succeſſion, or for their Eſtates, ſhould appear at Weſtminſter on the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, where they were to receive all the Military Ornaments (except for their Horſes) from the King's Wardrobe; ſo that Three hundred Young Gentlemen, the Sons of Earls, Barons, Knights, &c. had Scarlet Cloth, fine Linnen, and Belts embroidered with Gold, diſtributed to them according to their Quality: And becauſe the King's Palace was not able to receive them, they were fain to cut down the Apple-trees in the Orchard of the New-Temple, London, wherein theſe intended Knights pitched their Pavillions, and kept their Vigil in the Church belonging to the ſame; whilſt in the mean time the Prince of Wales, by his Father's Order, did the like in the Abby-Church of Weſtminſter, with certain Young Noblemen of the higheſt Quality. On the Morrow after, the King knighted the Prince in the Palace, and made him Duke of Aquitain; who, ſo ſoon as he had received this Honour, went to the Abby-Church, there to confer the ſame upon his Companions; but He found the Crowd ſo great, That He was forced to ſtand upon the High-Altar to perform the Ceremony of knighting them.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

[5] Chron. Lan. Upon the News of the Defection, the King ſends to ſecure the Engliſh Borders.

[1] T. W. The King ſends the Earl of Pembroke into Scotland with an Army.

* Whom he had now appointed his Lieutenant in Scotland, & therefore ordered all Persons who had any Goods or Lands in ye Northern Counties & Borders of Scotland to be ready to assist him with their Horses and Arms as appears by a Writ of this Year, entered on the Roll, & is published in R—s Coll: p. 980. and it further appears that about this time ye King issued out Writs bearing date the fifth of April, to ~~meet~~ all Tenants in Capite to meet him at Westminster on the Morrow after Trinity Sunday in order to the granting him an Aid for the making his Son a Knight, as appears by the Writs of Summons [Rot: pat: 34. E. I. m. 15. d] entered on the Rolls vid: R—s Coll. p. 986, 987.

* Penes, D. Le Neve, Vice-Remem. Scac.

† M. W. The King Summon's all to be made Knights, That by Birth or Eſtate, are obliged to it. The mighty appearance of thoſe that came in for this purpoſe. The Prince is knighted by his Father, with the manner of that Ceremony.

Then [2] the Prince coming before the King with this Noble Retinue, He made a Solemn Vow in their Preſence, That He would go into Scotland in Perſon, to Revenge the Death of the Lord John Comyn, and to puniſh the Perfidy of the Scots; adjuring the Prince and all the Great Men there preſent, by the Fealty they owed Him, That if He happened to Deceaſe before his Journey, they ſhould carry his Corps with them into Scotland, nor ſhould bury it until ſuch time as their new King had obtain'd the Victory over that perfidious Uſurper and his perjured Nation. Upon which, all the Nobility there preſent, promiſed in good Faith to be always ready to march with the Prince, and perform His Majeſty's Commands, whether He Lived or Died. Then the King having commanded them to meet Him at Carliſle Fifteen Days after Midſummer, ſent them Home for a time to provide all things neceſſary for this Expedition. ℥ And about the same Time ye King invested his Son with the Dutchy of Aquitain, the Isle of Oleron, and Territory of Agen to him & his Heirs Kings of England as appears by the same Roll; vid: R—s Coll: p. 988.

[2] Id. ib. The Solemn Vow the King made in the Preſence of the Prince, and the reſt of the Young Knights.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

[3] T. W.

An Account of the Actions of the Scotiſh King during this time. He Challenges the Earl of Pembroke to a Battel, which he not daring to undertake, marches out, ſurprizes the Scots, and puts them all to the Rout.

[4] Chron. Abirg.

Their King makes his eſcape to the Caſtle Kentyre, but does not continue long there, but flies to the Weſtern Iſles.

In the mean while, [3] the New Scotiſh King, Robert, having made a Progreſs about that part of Scotland that acknowledged Him, and received the Homages of a great many of the Nobility, and thereby raiſed a conſiderable Army, marched towards St. Johnſtown in order to take it: To prevent which, Americ de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, arrived there a little before with his Forces; but the King of Scots having the greater number of Men, was ſo confident of the Succeſs, as to ſend the Earl a Challenge to come out to fight him; which he preſently anſwered, and appointed it the next day; yet finding himſelf far inferior in number, he thought it not ſafe to come to a pitch'd Battel; and therefore, by the general Conſent of all the Officers in the Gariſon, it was thought the wiſeſt Courſe to be before-hand with the Scots: So [4] preſently marching out, they ſurprized them as they were that Evening providing their Suppers, and ſetting upon them in their Camp near Methſen, (a Place adjoyning) ſlew a great number of them before they could put on their Arms; ſo that the Scotiſh Soldiers being raw and unexperienced, preſently fled, and left their Camp and Bagage behind them. In the perſuit, many were killed, and more taken Priſoners; and the King Himſelf had like to have been one of the number, tho' He behaved Himſelf very gallantly, having been thrice diſmounted from his Horſe, and as often remounted by Simon Freyſell, a Valiant Warriour, by whoſe Aſſiſtance He eſcaped to a Caſtle in the Iſle of Kentyre: As for the reſt of the Army, they fled to the Woods and Mountains. Then the Engliſh General, preſently after the flight having cauſed all the Priſoners of Note to be forthwith Executed, marched againſt the Caſtle abovementioned, ſuppoſing the Scotiſh King to have been there: But when he had Beſieged and Taken the Place, he found himſelf miſtaken; for He was fled a little before to the Weſtern-Iſles, where He lay conceal'd until after King Edward's Departure out of Scotland.

[5] Id. Ib. M. W.

King Robert's Lady and Brother taken in the Caſtle laſt mentioned; as was alſo the Earl of Athol not long after.

Then [5] the Earl of Pembroke took that Caſtle, wherein were King Robert's Lady, and Neele Bruce his Brother, with ſome other Perſons of Quality, who were all ſent Priſoners to Berwick: And not long after, the Earl of Athol was taken, who had likewiſe eſcaped from that Caſtle before the Siege. And then the Engliſh Army, ſcouring the Country, pick'd up all Fugitives that had fled from the Fight.

[1] Scal. Chron. MS. in Bib. Ben.

The King ſends the Prince his Son, with divers Noblemen, and a ſufficient Army, into Scotland, where he takes divers Caſtles, and Noble Perſons Priſoners.

This Battel was fought about Midſummer, not long before King Edward's Arrival; ſo that there was little left for Him to do, but to enjoy the Fruits of the Victory. But [1] before He received the News of it, He ſent away his Son, the Prince, attended by the Earls of Lancaſter and Hereford, with a ſufficient Army againſt the Scots; who entring that Kingdom without any Reſiſtance, paſſed the Mountains, and aſſaulted the ſtrong Caſtle of Kildromney, and took it; in which were the Lord Seaton, and his Lady, Siſter to King Robert, who were ſent Priſoners to Dumfrees; where he was not long after Hang'd and Quartered, for having killed one of the King's Sheriffs.

The King enters Scotland Three Weeks after Midſummer, and is well received by thoſe Scotiſh Noblemen who continued firm to Him.

Then the King, about Three Weeks after Midſummer, marched in Perſon into Scotland, where He was honourably received by as many of the Scotiſh Nobility as had not been engaged in the late War, whilſt the reſt fled out of the Country. King Edward being come to Dumfrees, the Prince, who was now return'd from the High-lands, came to St. John's-town with his Forces; after whoſe Departure, King Robert being now in the Mountains of Athol with a ſmall Company, ſent Meſſengers to the Prince to try if He could obtain any Favour by Treaty, offering to come to him upon a Safe-Conduct: But this Propoſal came to nothing; for the King, when He heard of it, was very much incenſed, that any one ſhould preſume to hold Correſpondence with that Traytor (as He call'd him) without his Knowledge: Then the Prince, not to give the King any Cauſe of Suſpicion, went to him to Dumferling. Where [2] the Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſco, with the Abbot of Scone, being taken Priſoners not long before, with Armour under their Surcoats, were preſented to the King as the Chief Promoters of the late Rebellion: But being Church-Men, the King durſt do no more to them than ſend them Priſoners to ſeveral Caſtles in England; the Biſhop of St. Andrews to that of Wincheſter, he of Glaſco to Portceſter, and the Abbot to Mere-Caſtle in Wiltſhire, where they were all ordered to be put in Fetters, and kept cloſe Priſoners, and none permitted to ſpeak with them, as appears by the ſeveral * Writs or Warrants to the Sheriffs of each County, who were charged to keep them ſafe, under Penalty of Forfeiting their Goods and Lands. Theſe Writs are upon Record in the Tower; and that to the Sheriff of Hampſhire, is Printed in Dr. Brady's † Appendix to his laſt Volume.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

King Robert offers to Treat with the Prince; at the News of which, the King is very much diſpleaſed.

[2] M. W. The Biſhops of St. Andrews and Glaſco, with the Abbot of Scone, taken, and ſent cloſe Priſoners to England.

* Rot. Clauſ. 34 Ed. I. M. 6. N 38. Printed in Pryn's firſt Vol. f. 1124.

† N. 38.

Then [3] the King, having ſettled Scotland as well as He could in ſo ſhort a time, return'd into England, and took up his Quarters in the Abby of Lanercoſt near Carliſle: From whence He ſent certain Juſtices to Berwick, who ſat in Judgment upon Neele de Bruce, and thoſe that were taken with him, who were all Condemn'd, and accordingly Executed as Traytors ſoon after. As for the Wife of King Robert, being Siſter to the Earl of Ulſter, ſhe was ſent Priſoner into England, and there kept divers Years in cloſe Cuſtody, tho' civilly treated according to her Quality: But the Counteſs of Bouquhan, who had put the Crown upon King Robert's Head, did not eſcape ſo well; for tho' being a Woman, the King thought it beneath Him to put her to Death, yet to deter others from the like Preſumption, He was reſolved to make her a publick Example, by ordering her to be put in a Wooden-Cage, ſhaped like a Crown, and ſo to be hung out from the Walls of Berwick for all that paſſed by to gaze upon and reproach her. As for the Earl of Athol, who had now forfeited his Life, by a ſecond Rebellion, he was ſent to London, and not long after Condemned, and publickly Executed on a Gallows 50 Foot high. Then the King caus'd a ſtrict Inquiſition to be made by Perſons of Credit; and whoever were found Conſenting or Aiding to the Murther of the Lord Comyn, or that were Aſſiſting at the Coronation of Robert Bruce, and thereof Convicted, were immediately Executed; But thoſe who were not involv'd in thoſe Crimes, and had only been in Arms, if they voluntarily Surrendred themſelves, were only committed to Priſon. The chiefeſt of whom were * James Lord Stewart of Scotland, who coming in, and acknowledging his Fault, ſubmitted himſelf and his Eſtate to the King's Mercy; and not having been concern'd in either of the abovementioned Actions, was Pardoned and Reſtored to his Eſtate, though upon this Condition, That if ever he, or his Heirs, ſhould again take up Arms againſt the King and his Succeſſors, or be found Aiding or Adviſing any of his Enemies, they were then to forfeit their Bodies, Lands, Tenements, and all they had: And the Biſhops of England and Scotland were alſo Authorized thereupon to paſs Sentence of Excommunication againſt him, and [3] Chron. Lan. M. W. The King returns to England, and Quarters at the Abby of Lanercoſt; from whence he ſent Juſtices to Berwick, who Condemned Neele Bruce, and the reſt of the Scots, to be Executed; with the odd Puniſhment of the Counteſs of Bouquhan.

The Earl of Athol Executed, and all thoſe who had any hand in the Murther of the Lord Comyn, or aſſiſted at Robert Bruce's Coronation.

* Rot. Clauſ. 34 Ed. I. M. 3. Dorſ.

Yet ſome ſubmitting, are received to Mercy.

Anno. Dom. MCCCVI.

and his Heirs, and put all their Lands under an Interdict. This is the Subſtance of this Lord's Charter or Patent, which he Sealed and Delivered to the King in the Priory at Lanercoſt, before two Notaries, and other ſufficient Witneſſes, on the Twenty third of October, 1306. as appears by the * Roll of this Year.

* Printed in Ryley's Placit. Parliament. p. 511, 512. Pro Rege de Fidelitate Jacobi Seneſchalli Scotie.

And there is alſo enter'd upon the ſame Roll and Membrane, the King's Directions to the Guardians and Juſtices of Scotland, (given at the ſame Place) how they were to proceed againſt, and puniſh the ſeveral ſorts of Offenders that had been engaged in the late Rebellion, in theſe Words:

† Id. ib p. 510. De Ordinatione pacis in Terra Scotiæ publicanda.

The King's Sentence how thoſe that were in the late Rebellion ſhou'd be dealt with.

* The manner of the Scotiſh Outlawry, which they call, puting to the Horn.

† It was Agreed by the King and his Council, That the Guardian of Scotland ſhould cauſe to be proclaimed, in all Cities, Burghs, and Mercate Towns, and in all other Places where he thought fit, That all ſuch who were againſt the King in the laſt War, and were not come to his Peace; and others, who had committed Felonies and other Crimes, for which they ought to loſe Life or Member, and were not taken, ſhould be Apprehended by any Perſons wherever they came; and to that purpoſe were to levy Hue and Cry, with * Horn and Mouth, and perſue them with Force, from Town to Town, and Country to Country, until they render'd themſelves, or were taken Dead or Alive; and that thoſe who neglected to do this, ſhould loſe all their Goods, and be Impriſoned during the King's Pleaſure: The Guardian was likewiſe to enquire after the Receivers of ſuch Perſons, that they might have ſuch Juſtice as they deſerved.

It was then likewiſe Accorded, That all thoſe who were Guilty, and Abettors, of the Death of John Comyn, ſhould be Drawn and Hang'd; and thoſe that Adviſed and Aſſented to it, and thoſe who after the Fact, knowingly and willingly, or freely received them, ſhould have the ſame Judgment.

And thoſe that were guilty of his Death, that were, or ſhould be taken by force, in this War againſt the King, ſhould be Hang'd, or have their Heads cut off, and their Receivers to have the ſame Judgment.

And all that were againſt the King in the War at any time, as well before, as in, and after the Battel of Metſen, thoſe who were the moſt notorious and dangerous of them ſhould be put in Priſon where the King ſhould appoint, and not to be releaſed but by his Order.

And thoſe who willingly were of the Party of Robert Bruce, or were Aiding, Adviſing, Procuring, or Perſwading the People to Riſe contrary to Law, and were thereof convicted, whether Clerks or others, ſhould be Impriſoned during the King's Pleaſure.

And it was Ordain'd, That the People of Scotland, who were forced to Riſe againſt the King in this War, ſhould be Fined, as the Guardian ſhould ſee Cauſe, and according to their Offence. And for the greater Authority, and Execution of this Agreement, the King cauſed it to paſs under His Seal of Scotland, and bears Date at Lanercoſt.

[4] C. W. H. The Actions of King Robert Bruce after his Return from the High-lands.

But it is now time to look back, and ſee what hath been doing in Scotland; where about Michaelmaſs King Robert had the Courage to Sally out of his Retreat in the Weſtern-Iſles, with ſome of thoſe Iſlanders in his Company, as far as to the Caſtle Kentyre; and thence ſent privately ſome of his Men into his Earldom of Carrick, to raiſe ſome Rents among his Tenants: Of which, the Lord Henry Piercy receiving Intelligence, preſently marched that way with ſome Forces, either to hinder, or take them Priſoners: But it ſeems the King had notice of his Deſign, and coming upon him on the ſudden, ſurprized and killed many of his Retinue, and plunder'd him of all his Plate, and other Bagage; ſo that the Lord Piercy himſelf was forced to take Refuge in the Caſtle Kentyre, and there to remain until ſuch time as the King could ſend Forces to relieve it.

And when they came up, they not only forced King Robert to quit the Siege, but purſued Him ſo cloſe, that He was obliged once more to flee, and (as the [5] Scotiſh Writers relate) was, in his way out of Athol into Argyleſhire, ſet upon by the Comyns at a Place called Dalree: And there his Forces being put to the Rout, he was fain to ſhift for himſelf, and again to retire into the Weſtern-Iſles; where he lay for ſome time conceal'd with only One or Two Followers, Faring and Lodging very hard with ſome of the High-landers, until he had found an Opportunity to Sally out from his Faſtneſs the next Spring; and then raiſing freſh Forces, ſurprized the Engliſh Commanders, and defeated them, as you will find hereafter.

I find nothing elſe to have been acted in Scotland this Year; [6] but that Thomas and Alexander, Two other Brothers of King Robert, together with an Iriſh Prince, and ſome other Scotiſh Noblemen, having Invaded Galloway, were taken Priſoners in a Skirmiſh, by one Donal Macdoile, a Nobleman of that Country, who carried them to the King, and He preſently ordered them all to be Executed; ſo that King Robert loſt Three Brothers in leſs than Three Months time, beſides his Wife, who was kept a Priſoner.

As to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, I find nothing conſiderable; but that the Pope having now transfer'd the Place of his Reſidence from Lyons to Bourdeaux, and being there inform'd by the King's Letters of the Death of the Lord Comyn, He, by a Bull directed to the Archbiſhop of York and Biſhop of Carliſle, ordered them to pronounce Excommunication againſt Robert Bruce, and all his Accomplices, until they made Satisfaction, and deſerved Abſolution, for the Death of John Comyn; as appears by the Bull it ſelf upon * Record in the Tower. This Authority ſufficiently confutes Buchanan's Relation, who makes Robert Bruce not to be Crowned, until he had received the Pope's Abſolution for the Murther of that Nobleman in the Church of Dumfrees; but this was a ſmall Error in One, who makes no difficulty to put the beſt Gloſs upon all Things done by his Countrymen, be they true or falſe. (1)

The King having by a * Writ, dated at the Abby of Lanercoſt, the Third Day of the precedent November, ſummoned a Parliament to be held at Carliſle on the Octaves of St. Hillary, and then returned to Carliſle, the City where he kept his Chriſtmaſs, and then at the time appointed met the Eſtates of the Kingdom. This Parliament (as appears by the Form of the Writs) was called for the Settling and Eſtabliſhment of Scotland, and for other great Affairs concerning the King and the Eſtates of the Kingdom of England; yet what was done concerning Scotland, I do not find: (2) But as for the Buſineſs of this Kingdom, it was (beſides the Hearing divers Petitions, and Diſpatch of many private Cauſes) chiefly relating to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; therefore I ſhall refer the Reader for what I have ſaid upon this Subject to the latter end of this Reign.

Anno Dom. MCCCVI.

[5] Lan. Ib. Boeth. Ib.

[6] Id. Ib. Chron. Lan.

The Taking and Executing two of K. Robert's Brothers.

* 34 Edw. I. Printed in Pryn's 3d Vol. p. 1122.

A Confutation of Buchanan's miſtake.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

* 34 Ed. I. M. 2. Dorſ.

[1] M.: W.

The King Summons a Parliament at Carliſle, and the Intent of it, with what was tranſacted therein.

(1) As for Ecclesiastical Affairs I must observe, that this year, he found ~~so much~~ great Favour from ye Pope for leviing of a tenth upon all Ecclesiastical Benefices, & Revenues in England Scotland, Ireland & Wales to continue for two years under a Pretence of Relief for ye Holy Land, the the least Part of it was put to that use, a great Part of it being granted to Prince Edward towards his late Charges & Expences besides 4000 that was to be payd Queen Margeret the King's consort, and one fourth Part of the whole wt was to be reserved for his Holinesses own use, as appears by the Bull it selfe published in R—'s Coll: p. 1006 to 1008. And further to acquire the Pope's Favour in seconding his Resentments against the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, he sent a letter dated at Bradeby on the Borders of Scotland on the 17th of Sept: in which he lett his Holiness know, that altho' he had seized the Temporalties of the said Arch Bishop into his own Hands, & might retaine ye same by the Special Right of his Crown, yet he was willing to lett his Holiness receive them during the said suspension, & yt they should be receiv'd by whomsoever his Holiness should depute to receive ye same. this Letter is entered on the Rolls [Rot: Rom: 34. E. I. m. 5.] vid R—'s Coll. p. 1020.

(2) Only that whilst they continued at Lanercost he wrote to the Pope acquainting him with the traiterous Revolts of the Bishops of St Andrews & Glascow in taking up Arms against him contrary to their Oaths, & being now his Prisoners he desired the Pope to deprive them for these Crimes & put in others more able, and fit Persons in their Rooms, and for the Bishoprick of St Andrews he recommends William Comyn Brother to the Earl of Boghan, and for Glascow, Geoffery de Mowbray his own Chaplain: this Letter is entred on the same Roll, & is publishd in R—'s Coll: p. 1025.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

[2] Id. Ib. M. W. T. W.

The K. being informed of the too great Familiarity between the Prince and Piers Gaveston, order'd him to be Baniſhed; and for what Reaſon.

[3] Chron. Cot. MS. cited in Fabian's Chronicle. Annal. S. Aug. In Bib. Ben.

But to ſpeak of ſome Affairs of leſs Moment, tranſacted in the time of this Parliament [2] at Carliſle: The King being inform'd of the too great Familiarity there was between the Prince and Piers de Gaveſton, and what a powerful Influence he had over him, order'd the ſaid Piers in a Great Council of the Nobility to be Baniſhed the Kingdom. But though Dr. Brady either could not, or would not tell us the Reaſons why Gaveſton was at that time Baniſhed, yet he might have found them in Matt. Weſtminſter, and the Chronicle of Adam Meremouth, who all agree that it was for giving the Prince ill Councel, and leading him into ſeveral looſe and debauched Courſes, ſo as in his Company to break the Park of [3] Walter Langton Biſhop of Cheſter, then Chancellor, and killing his Deer; who complaining to the King of theſe looſe Courſes of the Prince, He cauſed moſt of his Servants to be turn'd off; nor would He admit him to come into his Preſence for ſome days, till he had asked his Pardon for what he had done: But how ſeverely the Prince, when he came to be King, was revenged upon the Biſhop for this Action, you will find in the beginning of his Reign.

*Clauſ 35. Ed. I M. 13. Dorſ. Printed in Dr. B's. Append. N. 43.

† That was to be A. D. 1307.

But to ſay ſomewhat more particularly of the Manner of Gaveſton's Baniſhment; it appears by a *Record in the Tower, That on the Twenty ſixth day of February the King, for certain Reaſons, commanded, that ‘Piers de Gaveſton ſhould by May-day † following, take Shipping at Dover to go into Gaſcoigne, and never to return without the King's Leave, or being recalled by Him. And for the Performance of this Order the ſaid Piers, at the Day and Place aforeſaid, made Oath upon the Body of God (i. e. the Conſecrated Hoſt) the Old Croſs, and the King's other Reliques; and the Prince of Wales made Oath in like Manner, that he would not Relieve, Retain, or Permit the ſaid Piers to be with him contrary to this Order, unleſs he was recalled by, and had Leave from his Father to return: And for his Subſiſtence beyond Sea, ſo long as he ſtay'd there, he had allowed him an hundred Marks Sterling per Annum out of the Revenues of Gaſcoigne, with this Condition, That the King might encreaſe or diminiſh this Penſion as He ſhould think fit. This was done at Carliſle.

An Account of Gaveſton's Birth and Education.

But ſince the Perſon abovementioned will make ſo great a Figure in the next Reign, it may not be amiſs to give you this farther Account of him in this; That he was the Son of a Gaſcoigne Gentleman, and had been bred up by the King's Order with his Son the Prince from his Childhood, and being a handſom well humour'd Young Man was beloved by him above all his other Servants; but he was, as he grew in Favour, ſo Haughty and Inſolent in his Temper, that he incur'd the hatred of all the Chief Men of England, who never deſiſted until they had his Head, as you will find hereafter. But to return to Matters of Greater Moment.

[4] M. W. T. W.

The Pope ſent a Cardinal to finiſh the Treaty of Mariage between the Prince and the Daughter of France; with the King's Anſwer thereunto.

Whilſt [4] the King was holding his Parliament at Carliſle, a Cardinal named Petrus Hiſpanus, becauſe he was a Spaniard, but by his Title Cardinal of St. Sabine, being ſent from the Pope to deſire Him to finiſh the Treaty of Mariage between his Son the Prince, and the Daughter of the King of France, according to the Award or Appointment of the late Pope Boniface; to this Meſſage the King breifly anſwer'd, That He was at all times ready to fulfil whatſoever had been before Ordained, provided the King of France would perform what was ſtill to be done on his part; for though He had reſtored all Gaſcoigne, yet ha-having given away the Caſtle of Mauleon (part of that Province) to a certain French Knight, King Philip either would not, or could not make him ſurrender it to the right Owner; and therefore it was upon that Account He had hitherto delay'd the Conſummation of the Mariage: Then the Cardinal return'd to London, expecting the King of France's Anſwer concerning it; and all other Differences were looked upon to be ſo near a Concluſion, that [4] about Midſummer the King ſent the Prince to London, there to lye ready to go over into France upon the firſt Signification that King Philip had perform'd what He had promiſed, and what was then expected from Him.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

[4] M. W.

Sometime [5] before this, King Edward being allarm'd with the late Succeſs of the Scotiſh King, had ſent his Writs or Letters into England, whereby He ſummoned all thoſe that owed Him Service to be ready at Carliſle with their Horſes and Arms within Fifteen days after Midſummer.

[5] Ib.

The King Summons all that owed him Service to be ready at Carliſle.

But to return to the Affairs of Scotland. About the end of the laſt Winter, the [1] King of Scots leaving the Weſtern High-lands, where He had hitherto lain abſconded, and having raiſed ſome Forces there, conſiſting of the High-land Scots and others that came in to Him, paſſing over the Frith of Cluyd, He took the Caſtle of Innerneſs; the Fame of which Action gave freſh Courage to the Scots in thoſe Parts, who coming to Him in great Numbers, preſently made up ſo conſiderable an Army, that in a ſhort time He took moſt of the Caſtles in the North of Scotland, which He preſently demoliſhed, not having then ſufficient Forces to Man them; and thus He proceeded, carrying all before Him, into the Inner Parts of Scotland, until He came to the Place where the Eske falls into the Plains of Mar; and there John Comyn, Earl of Bouchan, having got together all the Engliſh and Scots in thoſe Parts that were fit to bear Arms, marched out againſt King Robert, whom finding ſtrongly encamped, the Earl though he was ſuperior to Him in Number, yet durſt not aſſault Him in his Trenches, and therefore marched off to reinforce his Army: In the mean while the King of Scots going ſometimes forward and ſometimes backward, and never ſtaying long in a Place, for fear of being ſurpriſed or engaged againſt his Will, took in all the weaker Places in the Low-Lands, and thereby highly raiſed the Spirits of thoſe of his Party. This is in ſhort the Account which the Scotiſh Hiſtorians give of their King's Succeſs this Summer.

[1] Boeth. Buchan. Ib.

The Actions of King Robert Bruce after his leaving the High-Lands.

He takes all the Weaker Places in the Low-Lands.

This is likewiſe confirmed by our Engliſh [2] Hiſtorians, who tells us. That preſently after Eaſter King Robert having reinforced his Army by the Acceſſion of a Great Number of Scotiſh-men, who choſe rather to venture Death it ſelf than to be ſubject to the Engliſh Laws and Puniſhments, He with theſe and ſome High-landers, marched againſt thoſe Noblemen King Edward had left to Govern and Defend thoſe Parts during his Abſence. The firſt that Bruce engaged with, was Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, whom He put to flight, yet killing but few of his Men; and three days after He did the like to Ralf de Monthermer, Earl of Gloceſter, yet with the Slaughter of a great many on both ſides, and then beſieged him in the Caſtle of Ayre, till King Edward hearing of it, ſent Forces to releive him, as you will hear by and by.

[2] C. W. H. M. W.

King Robert having reinforced his Army, marches againſt K. Edward's Lieutenants, and routs the Earls of Pembroke and Gloceſter.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

[3] Id. ib. Chron. Abing. John the Brother of William Wallys taken and Executed at London.

In the mean while [3] King Edward continuing ſtill at Carliſle, preſently after Eaſter John Wallys, Brother to William (lately Executed) was brought thither Priſoner, whom the King ordered to be ſent to London, there to receive the ſame Sentence his Brother had done before. Yet notwithſtanding, theſe ſevere Executions did not at all deter Bruce's Adherents from their former Undertakings, but rather made them more deſperate, ſince they knew they could but die.

[4] Id. Ib. The King's Army being come to Carliſle, he ſends part of it into Scotland to releive the Earl of Glocester. Upon their Approach King Robert raiſes the Seige.

King [4] Edward being highly incenſed at theſe Proceedings, only waited for the Arrival of his Army to proſecute his Revenge, which being come to Carliſle three Weeks after Midſummer, according to the late Summons, He preſently ſent great part of them away before to raiſe the Seige of the Caſtle of Ayre, wherein the Earl of Glocester then was (as hath been before related.) But King Robert upon the approach of theſe Forces left the Siege, and with a flying Army of about Ten Thouſand Foot, retired into his wonted Coverts, the Bogs and Mountains, where He continued all this Summer, till after the King's Death, and that he heard of the Departure of the new King into England. But now to return to the Affairs of England.

[5] Id. Ib. Ab. The King is taken with a violent Dyſentery.

[1] C. Jo. London.

[2] C. W. H. Of which in a few days he deceaſes at Burgh upon the Sands.

Not [5] long after the Prince's Departure, the King was taken with a violent Flux or Diſentery, which obliged Him to keep his Chamber, inſomuch that He was reported Dead: But though He was very ill, yet He gave Orders for his Army to march towards Scotland; and on the Third of July He left Carliſle to begin his Journey thither, but He was not able to March above two Miles a day; ſo that when He came to a ſmall Town called Burgh upon the Sands, He found Himſelf to grow worſe and worſe, and ſtaying there, took his laſt Bed: [1] Where being put in mind of his latter End, He piouſly broke forth into this memorable Ejaculation; O Lord ! if thou thinkeſt it good for theſe thy People to have me here continue longer with them, I am ready to venture my Life for them; but if Otherwiſe, thy Will be done: [2] Then a few days after, whilſt his Servants were going to lift Him up in his Bed, to give Him ſomewhat to nouriſh Him, He expired in their Arms, the Seventh day of July, being Friday, in the Sixty Eighth Year of his Age, having Reigned 34 Years 7 Months and 6 days.

His Commands to the Prince before his Death.

Walſingham ſuppoſes, That Prince Edward was now return'd to his Father, being ſent for a little before his Death, and that He gave him many good Inſtructions and Commands; as to be Merciful to thoſe in Diſtreſs; not to make haſt to be Crown'd, before he had revenged himſelf of the Injuries done to his Father by the Scotiſh Nation; and not to Bury his Body, but to carry it about with him into Scotland, till he had ſubdued his Enemies; to love his Brethren, and to be kind and reſpectful to the Queen his Mother in Law; and never to repeal the Baniſhment of Peirs Gaveſton. And that ſince the King Himſelf could not go in Perſon to the Holy-Land according to his Vow, he ſhould ſend his Heart thither with a Noble Retinue. Laſtly, that upon Pain of Damnation the Money which He had provided for that end ſhould be expended upon no other uſe. But this young Prince obſerved none of theſe his Father's dying Commands, as you will find in his Reign.

Yet it is uncertain whether he made any ſuch Speech.

Yet that the King ever made the Prince his Son any ſuch Speech as is here recited is very doubtful; for I find it in no other Author, only the Chronicle of Rocheſter and Matt. Weſtminſter relate that Injunction concerning the carrying of his Body about till Scotland was again redu-

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

duced. But if the King gave the Prince any ſuch Directions, it muſt be rather before his Sickneſs; for that he was not preſent at his Death, the Abingdon Chronicle (written by an Author of that time) affirms; with which that of Lanercoſt expreſly agrees, and farther adds, That thoſe about the King concealed his Death for ſome time, till the Prince his Son, and Divers other Great Men of the Kingdom, could arrive; and that many were impriſoned for ſaying the King was dead. But on the Eleventh day after his Deceaſe, ſo ſoon as the new King was come, with Divers Noblemen and Biſhops, they all ordain'd that (notwithſtanding the King's late Injunction) his Body ſhould be carried into England by the Biſhop of Cheſter or Coventry, the late Treaſurer, and to remain at the Abby of Waltham until they could give further Orders about his Funeral, which was to be ſolemnized before the Eighteenth of October following. Then his Body was carried in great State to Weſtminſter, where Anthony, Patriarch of Jeruſalem, with ſome other Biſhops, perform'd the Sacred Offices. Sometime after, there was a plain Tomb of gray Marble erected over his Grave, which continues to this day, being behind the Altar, at the Head of that of his Father, King Henry the Third, with this ſhort Inſcription on the out-ſide of it. EDWARDUS PRIMUS, SCOTORUM MALLEUS, HIC EST, 1308. PACTUM SERVA.

Upon the Arrival of the Prince, orders are taken about the late King's Funeral.

and his body was long after preserved without corruption in Bees wax poured into the Coffin, which was often renewed in the following Kings' [illegible] as you may find by the frequent orders for it, still extant in the Close Rolls and which you may find in Rot. Claus. V. VI. VII &c.

The Tomb and Epitaph placed over his Grave.

MS. in Offic. Herald.

Since we have concluded the Glorious, though troubleſom Reign of this Great Prince, I ſhall now give you a Character of his Diſpoſition, with a brief (but no partial) Account of his Life and Actions, from John of London, a Monk of Canterbury, who lived in the Reign of this King, and his Son Edward the Second, and it is very likely knew Him perſonally; and he thus deſcribes Him. He was very tall, exceeding the common Size of Men; his Legs were long, which as they made Him have the better Seat on Horſeback, ſo it gave occaſion to his Enemies the Scots to give Him the Nick-name of Long-Shanks; He was alſo Broad-cheſted and ſtrongly made; His Hair was Flaxen in his Youth, Brown in his middle Age, and in his old Years grizled; yet He was never bald, or his Eyes dim; ſo that had it not been for this ſudden Diſtemper that carried Him off, He might have lived to an extream Old-Age: In one thing He particularly reſembled his Father, That the Eyelid of his left Eye almoſt covered the Pupil; yet the whole Air of his Face beſpoke Him a Man of Wiſdom and Courage.

K. Edward. I. his Character from the Authors of thoſe times.

He ſo much deſpiſed all outward Pomp, that from the day of his Coronation He never again wore His Crown, and unleſs upon great Feſtivals and Solemn Occaſions never uſed Purple, Scarlet, or Rich Fur in his Garments, but commonly appeared in a Plain Coat, and in Winter with one lined with ſome ordinary Fur; and being once asked by a Monk why He did not go more Royally attired? He replyed, Prithee why do'ſt ask? Will Clothes make me e're the Better?

As for his Recreations, He loved Hawking and Hunting above all Others, which He frequently uſed whenever his Civil or Military Affairs would give Leaſure; and when He was in his Pallace, He employed Himſelf in the great Affairs of his Kingdom, looking into the Corruptions of thoſe whom He had appointed his Judges and Miniſters, often taking his Progreſs through ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, on purpoſe to receive the Complaints, and redreſs the Grievances of his Subjects.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

To conclude, no Prince could be more ſharp and diſcerning in Council, none more powerful in natural Eloquence, none more undaunted in Dangers, and more cautious in Proſperity, nor leſs caſt down in all the Adverſe Accidents of Human Life.

In his Converſation, He was able to give wiſe and ready Anſwers to the moſt difficult Queſtions that were propoſed to Him, in either Politicks or Civil Matters. When He ſat as a Judge on nice and doubtful Caſes, He ſtill gave Judgment without reſpect of Perſons, defending the Poor, and all ſuch as had ſuffered any Wrong or Injuſtice: Thoſe He once loved He always advanced; and thoſe He once hated He ſeldom received into Favour: None was more Magnificent in his Bounties, or knew when to give more opportunely. In ſhort, He was a moſt prudent Law-Maker; and ſhewed in all his Actions that none knew better how to ſuſtain the Honour and Dignity of a King, with the Humility and Condeſcention of a Private Perſon. I need not mention his great Prudence and Magnanimity in War, ſince his Victory over the Rebellious Barons in his Father's time, as alſo his Conqueſt of Wales and Scotland ſufficiently declare it; and how much He was beloved by his Subjects, and his Death regretted by all ſorts of Men, appears by the ſeveral Lamentations, which the ſame Author ſuppoſes were made by all Orders and Degrees both of the Clergy and Laity, beginning with the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and then proceeding to the Earls, Barons and Knights, and ending with the Lamentations of the Husbandmen and Tradeſmen, each Degree expreſſing wherein this King had been kind to and watchful over them, and wherein they were moſt ſenſible of his Loſs; which being very pathetical, I refer the curious Reader to peruſe, if he thinks fit.

I ſhall now, from the Hiſtory of his Reign, make ſome Obſervations upon his Failings and Imperfections; the Chiefeſt of which ſeems to have been his immoderate Ambition, by which (if the Welſh Hiſtorians may be credited) their Prince Llewellyn and his Subjects were oppreſſed to that Degree, that being forced to take up Arms to defend their Laws and Liberties, it gave the King an Occaſion (which He had long deſired) of making an entire Conqueſt of that Country.

So likewiſe his Wars with Scotland, (which cauſed the Effuſion of ſo much Bloud and Treaſure,) ſeem to have proceeded from the ſame Cauſe; for could He have been contented with that Homage and Submiſſion which John Baliol had made Him upon his Admiſſion to that Kingdom, and not ſo roughly cited Him to appear, and make his Defence in the Parliament of England, upon the Complaint of the Earl of Fife his Subject, King Edward might have obliged that King and his Dependants to have continued his Friends and Feudataries, and to have remain'd always firm to his Intereſt; whereas by thus exaſperating that Prince, and forcing him to take Arms, and confederate with the King of France againſt Him, as it gave our Edward an Opportunity of ſubduing that King, and ſeizing his Kingdom, ſo it alſo gave the Scots an Occaſion (being thus provoked by the too great Severity of the Engliſh Government) again to take up Arms, and make Robert Bruce their King, and thereby entailed an unfortunate War upon the two Kingdoms for many Generations.

Anno Dom MCCCVII.

Another Fault of this Prince, was the great Difficulty He made in confirming the Great Charters, and granting the Statute de Tallagio non concedendo, and the Deforeſtations of thoſe Woods that had been taken into the Antient Foreſts contrary to Law; which coſt Him a great deal of Trouble and Diſpute with his Nobility and People, to the no ſmall Prejudice of his Affairs both at Home and Abroad: And which was worſe than all this, in the latter end of his Reign, He obtain'd the Pope's Bull of Abſolution from the Oath He had made to obſerve the late Perambulations of Foreſts, and reducing them to their Antient Bounds, upon pretence that it was got againſt his Will; and yet at the ſame time could complain to the Pope againſt the Scots, for obtaining the like Abſolution from their Oath to Himſelf, upon their alledging, That it was unjuſtly obtain'd from them by Dureſs and Compulſion. Thus Princes (as well as ordinary Perſons) are often ſo tranſported by Self-Love, That they judge of their own Actions by one Rule, and of thoſe that are any ways ſubject to them, or under their Power, by another.

The Iſſue of King Edward I.

BY his Firſt Wife, Eleanor, Siſter to Alphonſo, King of Caſtile, and Daughter of Ferdinand the Third, and his only Child by Joanna his Second Wife, Daughter and Heir of John Earl of Pontive, or Ponthieu, he had John his eldeſt Son, as alſo Henry and Alphonſo, who all died Young.

Sandford's Geneal. Hiſt. p. 130, 138. Walſ. Mezeray. Mat. Weſt. Sandford. ut. ſup.

His Fourth Son by Her was Edward, born at Caërnarvan in Wales, (called therefore Edward of Caërnarvan) on St. Mark's day, or Five and twentieth of April, in the Twelfth Year of his Reign, A. D. 1284. who Succeeded Him by the Name of Edward II.

Walſing.

By the ſame Queen He had Nine Daughters: Eleanor, Married to the Earl of Bar in France. The Second was Joanna of Acres, or Acon, in the Holy-Land, ſo called becauſe ſhe was there born, firſt Married to Gilbert of Clare, Earl of Gloceſter, and afterwards to Ralph Monthermer, without her Father's Conſent: She lived happily with him many Years, and died in the ſame Year with the King her Father. The Third was Margaret, Married to John Duke of Brabant. The Fourth and Fifth died in their Childhoods. The Sixth was Mary, a Nun at Ameſbury. The Seventh was Elizabeth, Married to John Earl of Holland, Zealand, and Lord of Frieſland, who dying without Iſſue, She was afterwards Married to Humphry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford. * Beatrix and Blanche, the Eighth and Ninth, died likewiſe in their Childhoods.

Sand p. 139, 140, 141. Walſ. Hypod. Neuſt.

* Sandford ut Supra 144.

Iſſue by His Second Wife, Margaret, Siſter to the King of France, Daughter to Philip III. Sirnamed The Hardy.

THomas de Brotheron, born at a ſmall Village of that Name in Yorkſhire, (from whence he was ſo called) on the Firſt of June, A. D. 1300. † He was created Earl of Norfolk, by his Half-Brother King Edward II. on the Sixteenth of December, in the Sixth Year of his Reign, and had then Granted unto him all the Caſtles, Mannors, and Land, in England, Wales, and Ireland, which Roger Bigod lately poſſeſſed, except thoſe his Sandford p. 205.

† Dugd. Baron. 2d part. p. 63.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

his Widow had in Dower; and in the Ninth of the ſame King, was made Earl-Marſhal of England.

Ibm. p. 91.

Edmund of Woodſtock, born there on the Five and twentieth of Auguſt, A. D. 1301. and was created Earl of Kent in the Fifteenth Year of Edward II.

Sandford ut. ſup.

Eleanor, his Tenth and only Daughter by this Queen, died in her Childhood.

Taxes in this King's Reign.

Rot. Pat. 4 Ed. I.

IN the Fourth of his Reign, A. D. 1276. the King in Parliament, had a Fifteenth Granted Him by the Earls, Barons, Great Men and Community of the Kingdom; and by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Suffragans, a Subſidy of their Goods (not ſaid how much) as a free Gift only, not to be urged or drawn into Example.

T. W. Hiſt. Ang. ſub. An. 1277.

In the Fifth of his Reign, the Laity gave Him the Twelfth Part of their Goods, towards carrying on the War in Wales.

Ib. An. 1283.

In the Eleventh of his Reign again, toward the War againſt the Welſh, the Laity gave Him a Thirtieth, and the Clergy a Twentieth Part of their Goods.

Int. Communia de Term. Mich. Rot. or. N. 5.

In the Eighteenth of his Reign, He had a Fifteenth of all their Moveable Goods, Granted by the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons, and all Others of the Kingdom or Government, as appears by the Chequer-Roll in the Ninteenth of Edward I. with the King's Remembrancer.

In the Two and twentieth of his Reign, the Prelates and Clergy granted the Moiety or Half of their Benefices, and Goods, to be taken One Third Part at the Feaſt of All-Saints next coming, a Second Third Part Fifteen days after Eaſter, and the Third Third Part Fifteen days after St. John Baptiſt then next coming.

Rot. Clauſ. 22. Ed. I. M. 6. Dorſ. de Militibus eligend. & mittendis ad Concilium.

In the ſame Year, at a Parliament or Great Council holden on the Twelfth of November at Weſtminſter, when Four Knights were Summon'd from every County, to conſult and conſent to ſuch things as the Earls, Barons, and Great Men ſhould Ordain, for Themſelves and the Communities of the Counties; upon the ſame day they met, viz. the Twelfth of November, and they gave the King a Tenth Part of all their Moveable Goods, &c. as appears by the Writ or Commiſſion for appointing Aſſeſſors, Taxors, and Collectors for the ſame Tenth.

22 Ed. I. M. 6. Dorſ. in Cedula.

And in the ſame Month, after the Sixteenth day thereof, the Guardian, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and whole Community of the City of London, Granted a Sixth Part of their Moveable Goods, as a Subſidy toward his War. The Writ or Commiſſion by which the Taxors and Collectors were appointed, bears Date the Six and twentieth of November, 23 Ed. I.

Int. Record. de An. 23 Ed. I. Rot. 73. de ſexta Parte Regi conceſſa in London.

In the ſame Month, and about the ſame time of it, there were Commiſſioners appointed to ask, require, and effectually induce in Perſon, the Men of all his Demeſne-Cities and Towns in all the Counties of England, by all ways they ſhould ſee expedient, to grant a Sixth Part, as London had done, That it might ſhew Example to others of his Demeſne-Towns.

A Parliament was Summoned to meet the Sunday after St. Martin, or Eleventh of November: The Writ bears Date the Third day of October; however it met not then, but was Prorogued before Meeting to the Sunday before St. Andrew, or Thirtieth of November; by a Writ dated the Second of November at Odimer. The Clergy in this Parliament gave the King a Tenth; the Earls, Barons, Knights, and Others of the Kingdom*, gave an Eleventh; and the Citizens and Burgeſſes, and other Good Men of his Demeſnes, gave Him a Seventh of their Moveable Goods; and the Warrant for the appointment of the Taxors and Collectors, bears Date the Fourth of December.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII

Rot. Clauſ. 23 Ed. I. M. 4. Dorſ. Ib. M. 2.

* Alii. de Regno.

In the Four and twentieth, the Earls, Barons, Knights, and Others of the Kingdom, gave a Twelfth Part; the Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Tenants of his Demeſnes, gave an Eighth Part.

Int. Communia de Term. St. Mich. 25 Ed. I Rot. N. 5. Penes Remem. Reg.

The Clergy gave nothing, by reaſon of an Inhibition the Archbiſhop had obtain'd from Pope Boniface; which Inhibition, or Bull, he cauſed to be publiſhed at this time in all the Cathedrals. See more of this matter in the Hiſtory.

Mat. Weſt.

In his Five and twentieth Year, He had an Eighth of all the Laity, and a Tenth of the Clergy, for the Confirmation of the Great Charter, and the Charter of the Foreſts. † Walſingham in his Hiſtory ſays, the Laity gave a Ninth, (which agrees not with the Cloſe-Roll, which ſays an Eighth) the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury gave a Tenth, and the Clergy of the Province of York a Fifth.

25 E. I. M. 6 Dorſ.

† Sub. Anno. 1297.

In the Nine and twentieth of his Reign, upon his Confirmation of the Perambulations of the Foreſts, the Laity gave Him a Fifteenth of their Moveables in the Parliament held at London, which they ſhould have at Michaelmaſs next coming. Robert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, would grant nothing for the Clergy without the ſpecial Licence of the Pope.

Rot. Peram. Foreſt. 29 Ed. I. in Turre.

*In the Thirty ſecond of his Reign, He being then in Scotland, as appears by the Dates of the Commiſſions at Dumfermlyn and Strivelin, to ſeveral Commiſſioners to Tax, Taliate, or Aſſeſs Taliage on Cities, Burghs, and on his Demeſnes in Cities and Burghs, either Capitation by Poll, or in Common, according to their Faculties and Wealth, as it might turn moſt to his Advantage.

* Rot. Pat. 32. E. I. in Cedula.

†In the Thirty third Year, the King having Summoned a Parliament at Weſtminſter, to raiſe Money for the War againſt the Scots, there was given Him by the Clergy, Nobility, and Knights of the Shires, the Thirtieth Penny of all their Moveable Goods; and at the ſame time, the Citizens and Burgeſſes gave a Twentieth part of the ſame Eſtates. In this Parliament alſo, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Other Tenants of his Demeſnes, Petition'd, That they might have Leave to Taliate their Tenants of the ſame Demeſnes, as He had Taliated them; and it was granted.

† Rot. Clauſ 33 Ed. I. M. 9. Dorſ. Ryley's Placit. Parl. f. 246 to 265.

About this time *He had a Fifteenth granted to Him in Parliament.

* Ibm. f. 260.

In the Four and thirtieth Year, the King intending to Knight his eldeſt Son, Summoned the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons, and Other Great Men, to be before Him and his Council on the Morrow of Holy-Trinity, to treat of, and grant an Aid upon that occaſion. He alſo ſent to all the Sheriffs of England, to cauſe to come before Him and his Council Two Knights of every County, and of every City Two Citizens, and of every Burgh One or Two Burgeſſes, Int. Communia Term. S. Trin. 34 Ed. I. N. 40. Penes Remem. Printed in Mr. Petyt's Append. to his Rights of the Commons, &c.

as

Anno Dom MCCCVII.

as the Burgh was greater or leſs, &c. Theſe ſame Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Other Great Men, and alſo the Knights of Shires, Treating deliberately upon this Matter, and conſidering there was an Aid due as aforeſaid, and that many Burthens were incumbent upon the King, by reaſon of his War in Scotland, unanimouſly granted to the King for themſelves and the whole Community of the Kingdom, a Thirtieth Part of all their Temporal Moveable Goods, &c. for a Competent Aid toward the Knight-hood of his Son, and alſo for an Aid toward his Expences, which He was to be at in the War.

Ibidem.

Alſo the Citizens and Burgeſſes of Cities and Burghs, and Others of the King's Demeſnes, aſſembling together, and treating about the Premiſſes, conſidering the Burthens incumbent upon the King, &c. unanimouſly granted unto Him, for the Cauſes aboveſaid, a Twentieth Part of their Moveable Goods.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Aids, granted this King by the Pope, we find in the Chronicle of Lanercoſt, That A. D. 1391. (being the Eleventh of this King's Reign) Pope Nicholas the Fourth granted Him the Tenth of all Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, according to their true Value, upon Oath, throughout all England; to be received for the ſpace of Six Years next enſuing, for the Relief of the Holy-Land againſt the Turks.

8 JA 56

AN ABSTRACT OF THE Principal Laws, ENACTED In the Reign of King Edward I.

I Shall begin with that remarkable Body of Laws, Entituled, The Statute of Weſtmiſtner the Firſt, ſo called, becauſe made there at his Firſt Parliament held after his Coronation, on the Octaves of Eaſter, in the Third Year of his Reign, by the Aſſent of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons, and all the Commonalty of the Realm being thither Summoned.

CHAP. I.

In the Firſt Chapter, after the King's willing and commanding the Peace of Holy-Church, and of the Land, to be well kept in all Points, and that common Right be done to all Men, without reſpect of Perſons: He then proceeds to forbid all Great Men to oppreſs any Religious Houſes or Monaſteries, by Eating or Lodging in them without their own Conſent: Which Statute, ſince it is now obſolete, by the Diſſolution of Abbies and Monaſteries, I have only given you this ſhort mention of it.

CHAP. II.

That a Clerk, when taken as guilty of Felony, and demanded by the Ordinary, ſhall be delivered to him according to the Priviledge of Holy-Church, on ſuch Peril as aforetime has been accuſtomed. And the Biſhops are hereby admoniſhed, not to deliver any Indicted of ſuch Offence, without due Purgation.

CHAP. III.

That nothing be demanded, taken, or levied by the Sheriff or others for the Eſcape of a Thief or Felon, till it be adjudged an Eſcape by the Juſtices in Eyre, upon ſuch Penalties as are therein provided.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning Wrecks; 'tis provided, That if a Man, or any Living Creature, eſcape out of a Ship, ſuch Ship, and all that is in it, ſhall not be adjudged Wreck; and that the Goods therein, upon Suit, and Proof made by the Owner, within a Year and a Day, ſhall be forthwith reſtored to him; otherwiſe, if the time be lapſed, they ſhall remain to the King.

CHAP. V.

That no Great Man nor Other, by force of Arms or Menaces, upon great Forfeiture, ſhall diſturb any from making free Elections.

CHAP. VI.

* Salvo Contenemento.

That no City, Borough, nor any Man, be amerced without reaſonable Cauſe, and according to the Quality of the Perſon, and Quantity of his Treſpaſs; That is ſay, every Freeman ſaving his Freehold, &c.

CHAP. VII.

This is now obſolete, but the Purport of it is, That no Conſtable, nor Caſtellane, ſhall exact any Prizes or Duties of any but ſuch as be of their own Town or Caſtle.

CHAP. VIII.

† Beau-Pleader.

The next is, againſt taking any thing for † fair Pleading, as had been prohibited in the time of King Henry the Third, his Father.

CHAP. IX.

That all Perſons ſhall be ready at the Summons of the Sheriffs, and Cry of the Country, to perſue and arreſt Felons; and thoſe that will not ſo do, and thereof be attainted, ſhall be grievouſly Fined to the King, with other Clauſes relating to Lords of Franchiſes, Bailiffs, Sheriffs, &c.

CHAP. X.

That through all Shires, ſufficient Men ſhall be choſen Coroners, of the moſt Diſcreet Knights, who may beſt attend upon that Employment; and he ſo choſen not to demand nor take any thing of any Man for doing his Duty, upon Pain of great Forfeiture.

CHAP. XI.

Whereas many had been indicted, and found guilty of Murther, by favourable Inqueſts taken by the Sheriffs and the King's Writ de Odio & Atia, were bayled, till the coming of the Juſtices in Eyre; this provides, That for the future, ſuch Inqueſts ſhall be taken by Lawful Men choſen by the Oaths of Twelve Men, (of whom Two at leaſt to be Knights) as ſhall be unſuſpected of having any Affinity with the Priſoners.

CHAP. XII.

Notorious Felons, who refuſe Lawful Tryal, ſhall ſuffer ſtrong and hard Impriſonment; but not thoſe that are taken upon ſlight Suſpition.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

None ſhall raviſh, or take away by force, any Maid within Age, either by, or without her Conſent, nor any Wiſe or Maid of full Age, nor any other Woman, againſt her Will: But this is to be proſecuted whithin Forty Days, or the Party loſes their Action.

CHAP. XIV.

The Acceſſory in an Appeal, ſhall not be outlawed before the Principal be attainted; how-be-it, none ſhall intermit to commence their Appeal at the next County, as well againſt the Acceſſory as againſt the Principal: But the Exigent againſt thoſe ſhall remain, until the other be attainted by Outlawry, or otherwiſe.

Court

CHAP. XV.

Enacts, what Perſons are not repleviable, or baylable by Common Writ, or without Writ, viz. Perſons outlawed, ſuch as have abjured the Realm, Approvers, and ſuch as be taken with the manner, Priſon-breakers, Thieves, openly defamed and known Appellees by Provers, (during the Life of ſuch Provers) Houſe-burners, Counterfeiters of the King's Seal or Coin, Excommunicate Perſons, manifeſt Offenders and Traytors.

CHAP. XVI.

None ſhall drive a Diſtreſs out of the County, or diſtrain wrongfully, or out of their Fee, on Pain of being grievouſly Puniſhed, according as the Statute of Marlebridge, Cap. 4. has provided in that Caſe; or more grievouſly, if the manner of the Treſpaſs ſo require.

CHAP. XVII.

If Beaſts be driven into a Caſtle or Fortreſs, and there withholden againſt Pledges offered, and not ſuffered to be replevied by the Sheriff, or other of the King's Bailiffs, (after convenient notice to the Detainer, &c.) the King for the ſaid Treſpaſs, and Deſpite, ſhall cauſe the ſaid Caſtle or Fortreſs to be demoliſhed; and (after the firſt demand made by the Sheriff or Bailiff) the Plaintiff ſhall recover double Damages againſt the Lord, or the Detainer; or, if the Detainer be not able, then of the Lord only.

CHAP. XVIII.

Gives Remedy againſt common Fines and Amercements, by providing, That from thenceforth ſuch Sums ſhall be aſſeſſed by the Juſtices in Eyre before their departure, by the Oaths of Knights and other honeſt Men, upon all ſuch as ought to pay them.

CHAP. XIX.

The Sheriff, having received the King's Debt, upon his next Account ſhall diſcharge the Debtor thereof, on Pain of Forfeiting Treble to the Debtor, and to make Fine at the King's Pleaſure. Further the Sheriff, if alive, or, if dead, his Heirs, ſhall anſwer all Moneys, which he, or thoſe he employs, receive: And if any other that is anſwerable to the Exchequer by his own Hands ſo do, he ſhall render Treble to the Plaintiff, and make Fine as before. And upon Payment of the King's Debt, the Sheriff ſhall give a Tally to the Debtor, and the Proceſs for Levying the ſame ſhall be ſhewed him upon Demand without Fee, upon Pain of being grievouſly puniſhed.

CHAP. XX.

Treſpaſſers in Parks or Ponds ſhall give Treble Damages to the Party grieved, ſuffer Three Years Impriſonment, be Fined at the King's Pleaſure, and give Surety never to offend again in the like kind. And if they can't find Surety, they ſhall Abjure the Realm, or being Fugitive, ſhall be Outlaw'd.

CHAP. XXI.

Guardians ſhall keep the Lands of Wards without Deſtruction, according to Magna Charta, C. 4. & 5. And ſo ſhall Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks, and all Spiritual Dignities be kept in time of their Vacation, or being Void.

CHAP. XXII.

This is concerning Female-Wards, and the Age whereat they ſhall be Married by their Guardians; But all Wardſhips being ſince taken away, we need mention no more of it.

CHAP. XXIII.

That in no City, Town, or other Place, any Foreign Perſon (who is in this Realm) ſhall be Diſtreined for Debt, unleſs he be Debtor or Pledge. And whoever does it, he ſhall be grievouſly puniſhed, and the Diſtreſs be delivered to him by the Bailiffs of the Place, or elſe by the King's.

CHAP. XXIV.

That if any Eſcheator, Sheriff, or other Bailiff of the King's, do, by colour of his Office, without ſpecial Warrant, Diſſeiſe any Man of his Freehold, &c. it ſhall be in the Diſſeiſee's Election, whither the King ſhall, upon Complaint, cauſe it to be amended, or the Diſſeiſee will Sue by Writ of Novel Diſſeiſin; but if the Diſſeiſor be Caſt, he ſhall Pay Double Damages, and be grievouſly Amerced beſides.

CHAP. XXV.

No Officer of the King ſhall maintain Plea of Lands, or other Things, to have part thereof, or other Profit by Covenant between them made, on Pain of being puniſhed at the King's Will.

CHAP. XXVI.

No Sheriff, nor other the King's Officer, ſhall take any Reward to do his Office, but ſhall be paid by the King; and if he do ſo, he ſhall pay Double, and be puniſhed at the King's Will.

CHAP. XXVII.

No Clerk ſhall take any thing for Delivering of Chapters, but only thoſe of the Juſtices Errants in their Eyres, and they to take but 2 s. and he that exacts more ſhall pay Treble as much as he hath taken, and loſe the Service of his Maſter for One Year.

CHAP. XXVIII.

No Clerk of the Kings, or any Juſtice, ſhall receive the Preſentment of any Church, for which any Debate is in the King's Court, without his ſpecial Licence, on Pain to loſe the Church and his Service: Nor ſhall any Juſtice or Sheriff's Clerk take part in any Suits, or uſe Fraud, whereby common Right may be Delayed, on Pain to be puniſhed as aforeſaid, or more Grievouſly, if the Treſpaſs require it.

CHAP. XXIX.

If any Serjeant, or Pleader, do Act, or Conſent to, any Deceit in the King's Court, to Beguile the Court or Party, upon being * Attainted, he ſhall be Impriſoned for a Year and a Day, and not ſuffered to plead in that Court any more: And if he be no Pleader, at leaſt he ſhall be Impriſoned for a Year and a Day) And if they deſerve greater Puniſhment, it ſhall be at the † King's Pleaſure.

* i. e. Convicted.

† i. e. According to the Judgment of his Court.

Officers, Cryers, and Marſhals of Juſtices in Eyre, ſhall not take Money, otherwiſe than they ought to do, on Pain to Pay the Treble thereof to the Complainants.

CHAP. XXX.

This provides Remedy againſt taking Exceſſive Tolls in Market-Towns, belonging either to the King, or Others, under the Penalties therein mentioned.

As alſo againſt Citizens or Burgeſſes, for taking more for the Charge of Murage of their Town than they ought by their Grant from the King or his Father; by loſing their Grant, and being grievouſly Amerced to the King.

CHAP. XXXI.

Is to Remedy the unjuſt taking of Victuals, &c. by way of Purveyance for the King's Uſe, Without Paying for them; and appoints certain Penalties upon thoſe that do ſo: But this being now grown obſolete, it is enough barely to mention it.

CHAP. XXXII.

That no Sheriff ſhall Countenance Barretors, or Stewards of Great Lords (unleſs they be Attorneys for their Lords) to make Suit, nor give Judgments in the Counties, &c. if not eſpecially required by the Suitors and their Attorneys; and if any do ſo, the King to puniſh both the Sheriff and Tranſgreſſor.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXIII.

None is to Tell or Publiſh any Falſe or Scandalous News or Tales, whereby Diſcord may ariſe betwixt the King and his People, or the great Men of his Realm, on pain of Impriſonment until he bring forth the Author.

The Reader here may take notice, That upon this Statute, another Act was founded in the 2 Ric. 2. cap. 5. commonly know by the Name of Scandalum Magnatum, which we ſhall further ſpeak of in its due place.

CHAP. XXXIV.

None (except the King's Miniſters) ſhall within a Liberty Arreſt any Perſon paſſing through the ſame, and holding nothing thereof, for any Contracts, Covenants, or Treſpaſſes made or done out of ſuch Liberty, ou pain of paying double Damages to the Party grieved, and a grievous Fine to the King.

CHAP. XXXV.

25 Ed. III. Stat 5. cap. 11.

Concerning reaſonable Aid to make the King's Eldeſt Son a Knight, and to Marry his Eldeſt Daughter, how much ſhall be taken from the King's Tenants for each kind, &c. But this is now taken away by the Statute of Wards and Liveries, 12 Car. 2. Cap. 24.

CHAP. XXXVI.

If any be Attainted (i. e. Convicted) of Diſſeiſin done in this King's time, with Robbery of Goods, or otherwiſe, the Diſſeiſee, by Aſſize of Novel-Diſſeiſin, ſhall recover his Seiſin and Damages, and the Diſſeiſor ſhall make Fine, whether he be preſent or not; but if preſent, he ſhall be committed.

CHAP. XXXVII.

An Attaint is granted in Plea of Land, Freehold, or any thing touching Freehold, when the King ſhall ſee it neceſſary.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Seiſin of one's Anceſtor in a Writ of Right ſhall be from the time of King Richard I. In an Aſſize of Novel-Diſſeiſin and Nuper obiit, from Hen. III. his Voyage into Gaſcoigne: And in a Mort-d'Anceſtor, Coſinage, Ayel, and Nieſe, from the Coronation of Hen. III.

CHAP. XXXIX.

In Writs of Poſſeſſion, Intruſion, &c. whereby Land is demanded which ought to Deſcend, Revert, &c. if the Tenant vouch to Warranty, and the Demandant counterplead him, and aver by Aſſize, or by the Country, (as the Court ſhall award) that the Tenant or his Anceſtor (whoſe Heir he is) was the firſt that enter'd after the Death of him of whoſe Seiſin he demands, the Averment ſhall be receiv'd, if the Tenant will abide thereupon; but if not, he ſhall be compelled to another Anſwer, unleſs his Warrantor be preſent, who ſhall immediately enter into the Warranty: And the Demandant alſo may have the like Exception againſt the Vouchee, as he had againſt the firſt Tenant.

CHAP. XL.

The Champion of the Demandant ſhall not be compell'd in a Writ of Right to Swear, that he, or his Father, ſaw the Seiſin of his Lord, or his Anceſtor, and that his Father commanded him to Deraign the Right; but his Oath ſhall be kept in all other Points.

CHAP. XLI.

In a Writ of Aſſize, Attaints, and Juris-Utrum, after the Tenant has once appeared in Court, he ſhall not be Eſſoin'd.

CHAP. XLII.

Parceners, or Tenants jointly Enfeoffed, ſhall not Fourch by Eſſoin, that is, they ſhall have but one Eſſoin among them, at one day, as if they were one ſole Tenant.

CHAP. XLIII.

An * Eſſoin of Ultra Mare ſhall not be allowed, but made a Default, if the Demandant can prove that the Tenant was within the Four Seas, the Day of the Summons, and Three Weeks after. But this is only to be done before Juſtices.

* i. e. An Excuſe for being beyond Sea.

CHAP. XLIV.

That if the Tenant or Defendant make Default after the firſt Attachment returned, the great Diſtreſs ſhall be Awarded: And if the Sheriff make no ſufficient Return, he ſhall be Amerced. With other Clauſes how Returns ſhall be duly executed.

CHAP. XLV.

That one Plea ſhall be decided by the Juſtices of the King's Bench, before another Matter be Arraigned, or Plea Commenced; but their Eſſoins ſhall be Entered, Judged and Allowed: Yet let none preſume to abſent himſelf at the Day appointed him.

CHAP. XLVI.

If a Writ of Novel-Diſſeiſin be Purchaſed, and the Diſſeiſor Die before the Aſſize be paſſed, the Heir ſhall have his Writ of Entre ſur Diſſeiſin againſt the Heir of the Diſſeiſor. The like Writs ſhall the Heir of the Diſſeiſee have, in caſe he Die, &c. And here Nonage of the Heir of the Diſſeiſor or Diſſeiſee ſhall not prejudice either of their Rights in Aſſize. The ſame Proviſion ſhall extend for the Right of Prelates, and other Religious Perſons, whether Diſſeiſees, or Diſſeiſors. And if the Parties come to an Enqueſt, and that paſſes againſt the Heir of the Diſſeiſee, he ſhall have an Attaint Gratis.

CHAP. XLVIII.

This prevents all Abuſes of the Chief Lords by their making Feoffments of the Lands of their Wards to their Diſheritance. But Wardſhips being ſince taken away, I only touch upon it.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLVII.

In a Writ of Dower, (unde nihil habet) the Writ ſhall not abate by the Exception of the Tenant, that ſhe has received her Dower of another before the Writ purchaſed, unleſs he can ſhew, that ſhe received part of her Dower of himſelf, and in the ſame Town, before the Writ purchaſed.

CHAP. XLIX.

This Chapter or Article, contains a Saving to the King of the Rights and Prerogatives of his Crown.

CHAP. L.

Aſſizes of Novel-Diſſeiſin, Mort-d'Anceſtor, and Darrein preſentment, ſhall be taken in Advent, Septuageſima, and Quareſme, or Lent, as well as Enqueſts, and that at the ſpecial Requeſt of the King made to the Biſhops.

As for thoſe that paſs under the Title of Statutes, ſuch as that of the Extent of a Mannor, and that of the Office of a Coroner, made, as the Book ſays, in the Fourth Year of this Reign; they being at beſt but Ordinances paſſed by the King and his private Council, I only mention the Titles of them.

Statut. de Bigamis.

But for that of Bigamy, ſince I find in the Firſt Chapter of it theſe Words, (Concordatum eſt per Juſtitiarios & alios Sapientes de Concilio Regni) I will agree with my Lord Coke, That it was no Ordinance, but an Act made by Authority of Parliament.

Second Inſtit. p. 267, 268.

The Four firſt Chapters whereof being now out of Date, I ſhall ſay nothing of them, but come to the Fifth, which gives Name to this ſet of Laws.

CHAP. V.

In perſuance of a Decree made in the Council of Lyons, by which all Perſons that had been twice Married (called Bigami) were excluded the Benefit of their Clergy; this Act declares, That whether they were Bigami before, or after the Decree, they ſhall not be delivered over to the Prelates, but Juſtice ſhall be Executed upon them as upon other Lay-People.

CHAP. VI.

The laſt Chapter concerning Warranty, being only about Matters of Form, and of little Uſe, I refer to the Statute-Book.

The Statute of Glouceſter, made the Sixth of Edward I.

This Act, the Preamble ſays, was made to prevent the great Miſchiefs, Damages and Diſheriſons, which the People had before ſuffered through Default of the Law in divers Caſes. And therefore in CHAP.

CHAP. I.

Damages are given in Aſſizes of Novel Diſſeiſin, as well againſt the Alienee of the Diſſeiſor, as againſt the Diſſeiſor himſelf; ſo that every one ſhall anſwer for his own time. And as for the reſt of the Chapter, concerning the Damages that a Diſſeiſee ſhall recover in Writs of Entry and Novel Diſſeiſin againſt him that is found Tenant after the Diſſeiſor; as alſo thoſe that ſhall be Awarded in Aſſizes of Mort d'Anceſtor, Coſinage, Ayel and Beſayel; and thoſe Coſts and Damages that ſhall be recovered by the Demandant; ſince they are Caſes now obſolete, or at leaſt but ſeldom occur, I only touch upon them.

CHAP. II.

This is in Favour of Infants; when they are to Sue for their Inheritance, that an Enqueſt ſhall paſs for them notwithſtanding their Nonage, and that without any Limitation of Time.

CHAP. III.

Whereas before this Statute, the Heir of Tenant by Courteſie was Debarred of his Inheritance, by reaſon of the Warranty of his Father deſcending upon him; this Act provides, That where Tenant by Courteſie aliens his Wife's Land, his Son having no Aſſets by Deſcent, ſhall not be Barred from Recovering the Land by a Writ de Mort d'Anceſtor of the Seiſin of his Mother, altho' the Father had obliged himſelf and his Heirs by his Deed to Warranty. The reſt is too tedious to be here inſerted.

CHAP. IV.

This Chapter, concerning Free-Farmers not paying Eſtovers for Two or Three Years together, in lieu of Rent, being now obſolete, I ſhall ſay no more of it.

CHAP. V.

An Action of Waſt is maintainable againſt Tenant by the Courteſie, in Dower, for Life, or Years; and the Party Attainted thereof ſhall loſe the thing Waſted, and recompence Thrice ſo much as ſuch Waſt is Taxed at. And as for Waſt done in the time of Wardſhip, Mag. Char. C. 4. ſhall be Obſerved; and beſides, the Guardian ſhall recompence the Heir for the Waſt done, if the Wardſhip loſt do not amount to the value of the Damages before the Heirs full Age.

CHAP. VI.

This is concerning the Right of an Heir to recover by a Writ of Mort d'Anceſtor: But it is now out of uſe, and therefore I only mention it.

CHAP. VII.

If a Woman alien her Dower in Fee, or for Life, the Heir, or he to whom the Land ought to revert after her Death, ſhall immediately Recover by a Writ of Entry in the Chancery.

CHAP. VIII.

The chief Matter in this is, That none ſhall have Writs of Treſpaſs before Juſtices, unleſs he will Swear, That the Goods taken away were worth Forty Shillings at leaſt: There are ſeveral other Rules concerning Pleas in Treſpaſs, which ſince they relate only to Matters of Practice, I refer to the Statute.

CHAP. IX.

This takes away all Writs of Enquiry for the Death of a Man, whether he was Slain by Miſfortune, or in his own Defence, or otherwiſe, without Felony; and preſcribes a better Courſe for the ſpeedy bringing to Tryal all ſuch Offenders, by keeping them in Priſon till the coming of the Juſtices in Eyre, or Gaol-Delivery; who having put them upon their Country, and upon finding it Per Infortunium, or, Se Defendendo, the Juſtices making ſuch Report to the King, He † ſhall take them to his Grace.

† i. e. Pardon them.

CHAP. X.

The Husband and Wife being Impleaded in the King's Court, ſhall not † Fourch by Eſſoin, no more than Parceners, or two that hold in Common. Vid. Weſtminſt. I. Cap. 42.

† i. e. Prolong an Action.

CHAP. XI.

Provides againſt the Fraud or Colluſion of the Tenant of a Freehold within the City of London, that he ſhall not by a feigned Recovery defeat the Title of him that holds under him for Term of Years. But this being particular as to that City, I enlarge no more on it, but leave thoſe concerned to the peruſal of the whole Chapter.

CHAP. XII.

Gives Remedy to a Tenant in London, Vouching a Foreigner to Warranty, to have a Writ out of Chancery, to Summon his Warrantor before the Juſtices at a certain day, and another Writ to the Mayor, &c. to Surceaſe the Matter before them, till the Plea of the Warranty be determined in the Bench: Then the Plea to be returned into the City, &c. which I paſs by further mentioning for the ſame Reaſon. But there is a Correction of this Chapter in the Statute-Book, which immediately follows the Statute of Mortmain, to which I refer the curious Readers for their better Satiſfaction.

CHAP. XIII.

When a Plea is moved in the City of London by Writ, the Tenant ſhall make no Waſt or Eſtrepement of the Land, hanging the Plea; or if he do, the Mayor, &c. ſhall cauſe it to be kept at the Suit of the Demandant. The ſame Law to be obſerved throughout the Realm.

CHAP. XIV.

Provides Remedy for Diſſeiſees in London, viz. Damages by Recognizance of the ſame Aſſize, whereby they recovered their Lands; and the Diſſeiſors to be Amerced before two Barons of the Exchequer, who are to reſort into the City to do it. And the Amerciaments to be Levied by Summons of the Exchequer to the King's uſe.

CHAP. XV.

The Mayor and Bailiffs (now the Sheriffs) of London, before the coming of the Barons, (after Candlemaſs Term) ſhall enquire of Wines Sold againſt the Aſſize, and preſent it to them when they come, and the Defaulters to be Amerced; whereas they were wont to tarry till the coming of the Juſtices in Eyre. Obſolete.

Then follow certain Expoſitions made upon ſome of the Articles of this Statute of Glouceſter abovemention'd, which you may ſee in Raſtal, &c.

A Statute forbidding bearing of Armour, made 7 Edw. I.

THis provides againſt Men's coming to Parliaments, Treaties, and other Aſſemblies, with Force and Armour; and declares, as the Senſe of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and the Communalty of the Realm in Parliament, That it belongs to the King to prohibit all ſuch Force, and all other Force againſt the Peace, and to puniſh Offenders therein according to Law: And herein every Subject is bound to be Aiding.

But this being the King's Writ Directed to the Juſtices of his Bench, commanding them to cauſe theſe Things to be Read before them, and Enrol them in their Court; it ſeems doubtful, whether it was not rather a Declaration of the Parliament of the Antient Law in this Point, than any new Statute concerning it.

The Statute of Mortmain, made 7 Edw. I.

IF Lands be any way alienated in Mortmain to a Religious Perſon, or other, the King or other immediate Lord, may enter within a Year after ſuch Alienation; and if ſuch Lord neglect it, the next Lord to him may enter within half an Year after; and if all the mean Lords (being of full Age, within the four Seas, and out of Priſon) neglect to do it, after the Year the King may enter upon thoſe Lands.

The New Statute of the Exchequer, otherwiſe called, The Statute of Rotland, made 10 Edw. I.

Note, This was not a Statute but an Ordinance, ſays Plouden, P. 209. a. But the L. C. J. Coke is of another Opinion, 2 Inſtit. 551.

PRovides, that from thenceforth the Bodies of Shires ſhall not be written in ſeveral Rolls, but in a certain Annual Roll by themſelves, which ſhall be Read every Year upon the Accounts of Sheriffs.

There are alſo ſeveral other Articles, which ſet forth the Rules appointed for the manner of the Sheriff's paſſing their Accounts of the King's Revenue to the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer; which not being of general Uſe, I ſhall forbear ſpeaking further of them: But come to

The Statute of Acton Burnell, made 13 Edw. I.

AND this Statute, ſince it only provides a Remedy for Merchants to Recover their Debts by Recogniſances in London, York, or Briſtol, (then the Three great Capital Cities of Trade in England) and not for the People of the Kingdom in general: I ſhall not mention any more of it, but refer the Reader that has a mind to peruſe it, to the Statute it ſelf; and ſo paſs on to that other great one, called,

The Statute of Weſtminſter the Second, made in the ſame 13th Year of Edw. I. This is likewiſe known by another Name, viz. The Statute, De Donis Conditionalibus, being that remarkable One that firſt Created Eſtates-Tail, and Ordained,

CHAP. I.

THat the Will of the Givers of Lands (according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed) ſhall be from thenceforth obſerved; ſo that they to whom the Land was given under ſuch and ſuch Conditions expreſſed in the Statute, ſhall have no Power to alien that Land ſo given, but it ſhall remain to their Iſſue after their Death, or revert to the Giver, or his Heirs, if Iſſue fail; Nor ſhall the Second Husband of any Woman have any thing of the Land given upon Condition, (after the Death of his Wife) nor the Iſſue of ſuch Second Husband and Wife ſhall ſucceed in the Inheritance; but immediately after the Death of the Husband and Wife, unto whom the Land was given, it ſhall return to the Iſſue of the Giver, or his Heirs.

And a new Remedy is provided in this new Caſe, by a Writ of Formedon in Deſcender, which is therein ſet down at large.

This Act ſhall extend only to Gifts that are hereafter to be made. And a Fine hereafter to be Levyed upon ſuch Lands, ſhall be void in Law; neither ſhall the Heir, or Reverſioner (tho' of full Age, within England, and out of Priſon) need to make their Claim.

This Part concerning Fines has been quite altered by ſeveral ſucceeding Statutes, as 4 H. VII. C. 24. & 32 H. VIII. C. 36. which, if I live ſo long, I ſhall particularly take notice of, under thoſe Reigns.

CHAP. II.

Provides, That where, upon Replevins, Lords cannot obtain Juſtice in Counties, and other Inferiour Courts againſt their Tenants, when ſuch Lords are Attached at their Tenants Suit, a Writ of Recordare ſhall be granted them to remove the Plea before the Juſtices, where Juſtice ſhall be done them; and the Cauſe ſhall be inſerted in the Writ, viz. Becauſe ſuch a Man Diſtrained in his Fee for Services and Cuſtoms due to him.

The Reſt of the Statute only preſcribes the Rules how to recover in ſuch Actions, and gives Directions to Sheriffs and Bailiffs what to do therein, under the Penalties there mentioned, and what other Remedies the Plaintiffs may have in caſe of default, for which I refer you to the Act.

CHAP. III.

A Writ of Entry (called Cui in vita) is given to the Wife for the Recovery of her Land, loſt by the default of her Husband in his Lifetime; and during his Life, ſhe ſhall alſo be admitted to defend her Right, provided ſhe come in before Judgment.

The like Priviledge is given to the Reverſioner, where the Tenant in Dower, by the Curteſie, for Life, or by Gift, doth loſe by Default, or wilfully yield up the Land.

CHAP. IV.

The Wife ſhall be endowable as well where Land was recovered againſt her Husband by Default, as by Covin; ſo that albeit the Land was loſt by the Husband's Default, yet that ſhall be no good Allegation for the Tenant, but he muſt then proceed, and ſhew his Right, otherwiſe the Wife ſhall recover.

The reſt of the Act ſhews, how Tenants in Dower, Frank-mariage, &c. when they loſe their Land by Default, may vouch the Reverſioner, if they have any Warrant: With ſeveral Directions what Plea and Proceſs they ſhall make uſe of for the Recovery of their Right.

CHAP. V.

Uſurpations of Churches during Wardſhip, Particular Eſtates, Coverture, or Vacancy, ſhall not bar the Heir at full Age, the Reverſioner, or Remainder-man in Poſſeſſion, the Feme diſcovert, or a Spiritual Perſon in Succeſſion, from having the Writ of Advowſon poſſeſſory, viz. Quare Impedit, or an Aſſize of Darrein Preſentment, as their Anceſtor or Predeceſſor might have had, if the Uſurpation had happened in their time: But before this Act, they were (in ſuch Caſes) put to their Writ of Right of Advowſon: The reſt of the Statute is taken up in preſcribing Forms of Pleadings, and Proceſs in Darrein Preſentment, Quare Impedit, and other Caſes of like Nature, whether by Coparceners, or any other ſort of Patrons.

CHAP. VI.

As the Tenant ſhall loſe the Land in demand, where the Vouchee diſchargeth himſelf of the Warranty; ſo ſhall the Warrantor loſe, where he denieth his Warranty, if found on Tryal againſt him that he is ſo bound. And where an Enqueſt is depending between the Tenant and the Warrantor, and the Demandant will require a Writ to cauſe the Jury to come, it ſhall be granted him.

CHAP. VII.

This is only concerning the Writ of Admeaſurement of Dower by a Guardian; but the Heir at full Age ſhall not be barred by that Suit, where it is Proſecuted by Colluſion, &c.

CHAP. VIII.

Shews what Remedy the Plaintiff ſhall have in a Writ of Admeaſurement of Paſture, upon the Second overcharge, if the Paſture was admeaſured before the Juſtices; and what remedy there is if the Admeaſurement were made in the County; and how to prevent Fraud in the Sheriff.

CHAP. IX.

Provides what Remedy the Chief Lord ſhall have againſt the Meſne-Tenant for Rent or Services: But this is now obſolete and wholy out of uſe, partly by taking away Tenures, and eſpecially by the Chief Lords parting with their Rent and Services of ſuch Tenants; and therefore it is needleſs further to enlarge upon it.

CHAP. X.

Any Perſon may make a general Attorney to Sue in all Pleas, during the Circuit of Juſtices in Eyre: Howbeit, that ſhall not excuſe the Party from being put upon Juries and Aſſizes before the ſame Juſtices.

It likewiſe preſcribes within what time Juſtices in Eyre, or Itinerant, ſhall appoint all Writs to be delivered in to them; and then the Sheriff ſhall certifie the Chief Juſtices in Eyre how many Writs he hath, and what they concern: Of which we need ſay no more in this Place.

CHAP. XI.

Servants, Bailiffs, or other Accountants, that are found in Arrears by Auditors aſſigned by their Maſters, upon the Teſtimony of the ſame Auditors, ſhall be committed to the next Jayle, and there remain in ſafe Cuſtody at their own Coſts, until they ſhall have ſatisfied their Maſters. The reſt gives remedy to the Accountants, if they find themſelves aggrieved by the Auditors, by appealing to the Barons of the Exchequer, who are to do Juſtice therein; and alſo what Proceſs ſhall go out againſt the Accountant, if he flies or will not come to Account.

CHAP. XII.

Upon a falſe Appeal by Malice, the Appealor ſhall ſuffer a Years Impriſonment, make fine to the King, and recompence Damages to the Appellant at the diſcretion of the Juſtices. But if the Appealor is not able to Pay Damages, and an Abettor (through malice) is found by the ſame Inqueſt, ſuch Abettor ſhall alſo be puniſhed by Impriſonment and Reſtitution of Damages, as before.

CHAP. XIII.

Sheriffs, Bailiffs of Franchiſes, and others that take Enqueſts of Malefactors, ſhall do it by at leaſt Twelve Lawful Men, who ſhall put their Seals to ſuch Inquiſitions; and the ſaid Officers ſhall impriſon ſuch Malefactors. If they impriſon any without ſuch Enqueſts, the Party grieved, ſhall maintain an Action of falſe Impriſonment againſt them.

CHAP. XIV.

The Proceſſes in an Action of Waſt ſhall be Summons, Attachment and Diſtreſs; and if the Defendant appear not upon the Diſtreſs, a Writ of Enquiry ſhall be directed to the Sheriff to enquire of the Waſt; upon return whereof, the Court ſhall proceed to Judgement, according to the Statute of Glouceſter Cap. 5.

CHAP. XV.

If an Infant be * eloigned, ſo that he cannot ſue Perſonally, his Prochein Amy ſhall be admitted to ſue for him.

* I. e. taken away or kept conceal'd.

CHAP. XVI.

Appoints (where an Inheritance deſcends to an Infant of the Father's ſide, that held of One Lord, and the Mother's ſide that held of another Lord) which Lord ſhall have the Mariage of ſuch Infant. But this is now taken away by the Statute of 12. Car. II. C. 24. That deſtroyed Wardſhips.

CHAP. XVII.

In the Circuit of the Juſtices, an Eſſoin de malo lecti, lieth not for Lands in the ſame County, unleſs the Party be Sick indeed; for if at the Inſtance of the Demandant, it be proved by Enqueſt that the Tenant is not Sick, the Eſſoin ſhall be turned to a Default. But ſuch an Eſſoin ſhall not lie in a Writ of Right between Two claiming by One Deſcent.

CHAP. XVIII.

He that recovers Debt or Damages in the King's Court, may at his choice have a Writ to the Sheriff of Fieri facias of the Lands and Chattels of the Debtor (except Oxen and Plough-Beaſts) and the Moiety of his Land, by a reaſonable Extent, till the Debt be levied; and if he be ejected out of the Land, he ſhall have an Aſſize, and afterwards a Writ of Diſſeiſin, if need be. And this laſt Writ is called an Elegit.

CHAP. XIX.

The Goods of an Inteſtate, dying in Debt, ſhall be diſpoſed of by the Ordinary, to diſcharge it. But ſince at this day, Letters of Adminiſtration are uſually granted either to ſome of the Kindred, or Creditors, I ſhall here no more enlarge upon it.

CHAP. XX.

In Writs of Coſinage, Ayel and Beſayel, the Tenants Anſwer, That the Plantiff is not next Heir of the ſame Anceſtor, by whoſe Death he demandeth his Land, ſhall be admitted and enquired; and according to the ſame Inquiſition, the Juſtices ſhall proceed to Judgment.

CHAP. XXI.

A Ceſſavit is hereby given to the Chief Lord againſt his Freehold-Tenant, that with-holds his accuſtomed Service per biennium. It is likewiſe maintainable by the Heir of the Demandant, againſt the Heir or Aſſignee of the Tenant.

CHAP. XXII.

An Action of Waſt ſhall be maintainable againſt One Tenant in Common, againſt another of Wood, Turf, Land, Fiſhing, or the like; and when the Cauſe comes to Judgment, the Defendant may chuſe either to take his Part in a certain Place (to be ſet out by the Sheriff with a Jury) or grant to take nothing, but as his other Pernors do: And if he chuſe to take his Part in a Place certain, the Place waſted ſhall be aſſigned for his Part. See the Writ in the Statute.

CHAP. XXIII.

Executors ſhall have a Writ of Account, and like Action, and Proceſs in the ſame Writ as their Teſtator ſhould, if he had lived.

CHAP. XXIV.

A Writ of Nuſance ſhall be grantable, as well againſt the Alienee, as againſt the Party that firſt made it: When it is againſt the Party himſelf, it ſhews how the Writ ſhall run; and how to be altered, when it is againſt the Alienee. In like manner, a Parſon of a Church may recover Common of Paſture by a Writ of Novel Diſſeiſin; ſo his Succeſſor ſhall have a Quod permittat againſt the Diſſeiſor or his Heir, though there never was ſuch a Writ granted out of the Chancery before. The next Clauſe gives the Clerks of Chancery a Power to frame a new Writ, where the Law has not expreſly provided one before, or the Plaintiffs may adjourn it till the next Parliament.

CHAP. XXV.

An Aſſize of Novel Diſſeiſin, ſhall lie for Eſtovers of Wood, Profits to be taken in Woods, Corrody, and other Proviſions; and the like Proceſs for other things. Which being now out of uſe, I ſhall forbear mentioning more of it.

The ſame Writ ſhall likewiſe be had, if any holding for Years, or in Ward, alien the Fee; and both the Feoffors and Feoffees ſhall be taken for Diſſeiſors; but if the Parties Die, the Remedy ſhall be by Writ of Entry; with other things relating to Proceſs, needleſs here to be further inſerted.

CHAP. XXVI.

In Writs of Rediſſeiſin, double Damages ſhall be awarded, and the Rediſſeiſors ſhall not be repleviable by the Common Writ. And the like Remedy is provided for thoſe that have recover'd by Default, Reddition, or otherwiſe, without Recognition of Aſſizes or Juries.

CHAP. XXVII.

An Eſſoin ſhall be allowed the next day after Enqueſt taken; but none at any of the other days following, nor after day given, Prece partium.

CHAP. XXVIII.

In Aſſizes after Appearance, the Demandant ſhall not be eſſoined.

CHAP. XXIX.

A Writ of Treſpaſs, ad audiendum & terminandum, ſhall not be granted, but before the Juſtices of either Bench, or Juſtices in Eyre, unleſs it be for ſome heinous Treſpaſs, which requires ſpeedy Remedy: But a Writ to hear and determine Appeals before Juſtices aſſigned, ſhall not be granted, but in a ſpecial Caſe, and for a Cauſe certain, and that at the King's Command.

CHAP. XXX.

Two Juſtices ſhall be aſſigned, before whom and no other, Aſſizes of Novel diſſeiſin, Mort d'Anceſtor and Attaint, ſhall be taken; and ſhall aſſociate with them, One or Two of the Diſcreeteſt Knights of the County for that purpoſe. And certain Days are therein appointed for their ſitting: Which way of Tryal is now become quite obſolete, ſince the conſtant coming of the Juſtices of Aſſize and Jayl-delivery into the ſeveral Counties, for the diſpatch of all Buſineſs of that nature.

CHAP. XXXI.

When the Juſtices will not allow a Bill of Exception upon Prayer, if the Party impleaded tender the ſame unto them in Writing, and require their Seals thereunto, they or one of them ſhall do it. And if, upon Complaint thereof to the King, the Exception ſo Sealed be not found in the Roll, the Juſtice ſhall be ſent for, and if he cannot deny his Seal, the Court ſhall proceed to Judgment according to the Exception.

CHAP. XXXII.

Eccleſiaſtical Perſons are hereby debar'd from taking Land in Mortmain by way of Colluſion, without the King's Licence; and therefore each mean Lord hath Six Months given him to enter after the Lord next before him, until it come to the King.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The Priviledges of ſetting up Croſſes upon Lands, uſed by the Knights-Templars and Hoſpitalers, to defend the Tenants againſt their Chief Lords, are hereby taken away, and the Lands forfeited in like manner as thoſe aliened in Mortmain.

CHAP. XXXIV.

If a Man raviſh a Woman Married, Maid, or other, without her Conſent, either before or after, he ſhall have Judgment of Death.

And where a Woman, of what quality ſoever, is raviſhed, albeit ſhe conſent after, yet he, upon being attainted thereof, ſhall have like Judgment as before; and here the King ſhall have the Suit.

As alſo of Women carried away with the Goods of their Husbands, the King ſhall have the Suit for the Goods ſo taken away.

But if ſhe willingly leaves her Husband, and goes away, and continues with her Advowterer, ſhe ſhall be barred from her Dower, unleſs her Husband be willingly reconciled to her, and ſuffer her to dwell with him.

CHAP. XXXV.

Gives a Penalty againſt thoſe that ſhall raviſh or carry away Wards, either Male or Female: But Wardſhips being now taken away by the Statute of the 12th of Charles II. Chap. 24. I ſhall ſay no more of it.

CHAP. XXXVI.

None ſhall procure any to diſtrain another to make him appear at the County-Court, or any other inferior Court, on purpoſe to vex him, and put him to Charge and Trouble; on pain to make Fine to the King, and to pay to the Party grieved treble Damages.

CHAP. XXXVII.

No Diſtreſſes ſhall be taken, but by Bailiffs ſworn and known; on pain to reſtore Damages to the Party grieved, and to be grievouſly fined to the King.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

No more Jurors ſhall be Summoned in One Aſſize, than Twenty four; Old Men above the Age of Seventy, or Sick, or diſeaſed, or that live out of the County, ſhall not be put on Juries of Petty-Aſſizes. There is alſo appointed what Land Jury-men ought to have, to qualify them to be impanelled: But this has been ſince altered by later Statutes, and therefore is now become obſolete.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Is to prevent the ill Execution and falſe Return of Writs by Sheriffs and their Bailiffs, with the Penalties they ſhall incur for the ſame: But this relating wholy to matters of Proceſs, I ſhall leave thoſe concerned to conſult the Statute at large.

CHAP. XL.

The Suit of a Wife or her Heir, after the Death of her Husband, ſhall not be delayed by the Minority of the Heir, who ought to warrant the Land.

CHAP. XLI.

If Lands are given to Religious Houſes or Hoſpitals, for Alms or any other Pious uſe, and they are alienated by the Donees, the King, if He be Founder, may ſeize them for his own Uſe; with other things, which now ſignify nothing to us.

CHAP. XLII.

Contains an Account of ſeveral antient Fees of Marſhals, Chamberlains, Porters of Juſtices in Eyre, and Serjeants bearing a * Verge before the Juſtices at Weſtminſter.

* i. e. a Rod or Mace.

CHAP. XLIII.

Hoſpitalers and Templars ſhall draw none into Suit before the Keepers of their Priviledges; neither ſhall their Keepers cite any, to the prejudice of the King or his Crown.

CHAP. XLIV.

Appoints what Fees the Vergers, before the Juſtices of Common Pleas in their Circuits, and alſo the Chirographers and Clerks, writing Writs Original and Judicial, ſhall take; but theſe are ſince altered by other Statutes.

CHAP. XLV.

Writs of Execution ſhall be within the Year, as alſo all things Recorded before the King's Juſtices, (whether Contracts, Covenants, &c.) and after the Year a Scire facias ſhall be awarded; whereupon, if Satisfaction be not made, or good Cauſe ſhewn, the Sheriff ſhall be commanded to do Execution.

CHAP. XLVI.

The Statute of Merton ſhall not only bind the Lords Tenants, but Neighbours alſo, that claim Common of Paſture as appurtenant to their Tenements; but if any claim Common by ſpecial Feoffment or Grant for a certain number of Beaſts, or otherwiſe, which is due to him of common Right, he ſhall recover the ſame according to the form of ſuch grant; with other things, for which I refer to the Statute.

CHAP. XLVII.

Appoints when Salmons ought not to be taken, nor young Salmons with Nets or other Engins at Mill-pools; and the Penalties for ſo doing, for the Firſt, Second and Third Offence.

CHAP. XLVIII.

In what Caſes view of Land ſhall, and ſhall not be granted; which is now in great meaſure grown out of Date.

CHAP. XLXIX.

No Chancellor, Treaſurer, Juſtices, or any of the King's Council, Clerks of Chancery, Exchequer, &c. ſhall receive any Church, or Advouſon, Land or Tenement, in Fee by Gift, by Purchaſe to Farm, by Champerty or otherwiſe, ſo long as the ſame thing is in Plea; nor ſhall take any Reward thereof, on pain of being puniſhed at the King's Pleaſure, both Buyer and Seller.

CHAP. L.

And in all theſe Statutes, where the Law faileth, leſt Suitors ſhould depart from the King's Court without Remedy, new Writs ſhall be provided in their Caſes. 2. Inſtit. 485.

The Statute of Wincheſter, made the ſame 13th of Edw. I.

CHAP. I.

THat upon a Robbery committed, freſh Suit or Hue-and-cries ſhall be made in all Counties, Markets and Fairs: With ſeveral Directions therein preſcribed for the more eaſy Apprehending of ſuch Felons, and other Particulars now grown obſolete; for which I refer to the Six Chapters in the Act.

The Statute of Merchants, made likewiſe at Weſtminſter, the 13th of Edw. I.

THis Statute was only made for the farther Explanation and Confirmation of that of Acton-Burnell, made in the Eleventh Year of this Reign; the Purport of which I have there given you, and therefore I ſay no more of it.

The Statute of Circumſpectè agatis, made alſo the ſame 13th of Edw. I.

THis being only to except ſeveral Offences, in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, from having any Prohibitions brought in the Civil Courts againſt them; and it being alſo doubtful, whither it be an Act of Parliament, or only a Writ directed to the Judges, how to proceed in Caſes of that nature; I will ſubmit to my Reader, to determine as he ſhall think fit.

The Statute de Quo Warranto, made the 18th of Edw. I.

THis Act was to prevent the Abuſe of the King's Officers from bringing this Writ againſt his Subjects, for Lands or Liberties ſuppoſed to be detained from the Crown; and therefore limits thoſe Writs to be brought within a certain Time, and according to certain Methods therein preſcribed. But this is now become obſolete, and there is no need of ſaying any farther of it.

There alſo follows (what is called) a New Statute of Quo Warranto, made likewiſe very ſoon after, to explain the former: But this ſeems only to be a Declaration of the King and his Council, and no real Statute.

The Statute of Weſtminſter the Third, made the 18*th of* Edward I.

IN all Feoffments to One and his Heirs, the Feoffee ſhall hold his Land of the Chief Lord of the Fee, by the ſame Services and Cuſtoms as the Feoffor held before.

And if the Feoffment be made of Parcel, he ſhall hold of the Chief Lord according to the quantity of the Land; and the Feoffor ſhall be ſet free for that part.

The reſt is to prevent ſuch Lands from coming into Mort-main.

The Statute de Judaiſmo, made the ſame Year of 18 Edw. I.

THE Jews were hereby prohibited from taking any Uſury for Money; which very much facilitated the total Expulſion of them not long after. Co. 2d Inſtit. p. 506.

The Statute de modo Levandi Fines, made likewiſe the ſame Year.

THis Statute (as it is here called, though it looks more like a Rule of Court) preſcribes the antient manner of levying of Fines, and the force and effect of them: But it is now altered and taken away by ſeveral ſubſequent Statutes.

The Statute of Vouchers, made the 20th of Edw. I.

THis is to prevent the Frauds that were uſed by Vouchers to Warranty; and therefore it is commanded, That whatſoever Tenant do vouch, and the Demandant will aver, That neither the Vouchee nor his Anceſtors had ever any thing in the Land, ſo as to make a Feoffment with Warranty, his Averment ſhall be admitted, whether the Party vouched be abſent or preſent, without any Reſpect had thereunto.

The Statue of Waſt, made the ſame 20th Year,

PRovides, That an Action of Waſt ſhall be maintainable by the Heir, for Waſt done in his Anceſtor's time, as well as for that done in his own.

The Statute of defending Right, made the 20th of Edw. I.

THis is to remove the Abuſes occaſioned by a Statute formerly made by this King, concerning a Stranger's pretending Right to Lands in queſtion between Two other Parties, before Judgement, by a Collateral Title; and therefore provides, That before ſuch Stranger be received, he ſhall find ſufficient Sureties (as the Court will award) to ſatisfy the Demandant the Value of the Lands ſo to be recovered, from the day that he is ſo received, till final Judgment be given for the De-Demandant. And if the Demandant recover, the Defendant ſhall be greivouſly amerced; and if he have not whereof to ſatisfy, he ſhall be imprisoned at the King's Pleaſure; but if he can prove his Right, he ſhall be acquitted.

The Statute of Perſons to be put in Aſſizes, [of the ſame Year.]

NOne ſhall be Impannell'd to ſerve out of their proper Counties, unleſs they have Land worth 5 l. per Annum at leaſt; nor within the County, unleſs they have Land worth 40 s. per Annum.

But this Statute does not extend to Juries taken before Juſtices Errant, nor to Corporations; but that they may do as in times paſt.

The Statute of Treſpaſſers in Parks, made the ſame Year.

NO Foreſter, Parker or Warrener, ſhall be queſtioned for killing a Treſpaſſer, who (after the Peace cryed unto him) will not yield himſelf; ſo it be not done out of ſome other former Malice.

The Statute upon the Writ of Conſultation. 24 Edw. I.

WHen the Chancellor or Chief Juſtices (upon ſight of the Libel) conceive that the Plaintiff cannot have Remedy in any Temporal Court, the Plaintiff ſhall have a Writ of Conſultation, viz. the ſaid Chancellor or Chief Juſtice ſhall write to the Eccleſiaſtical Judges, before whom the Cauſe depends, that they proceed therein notwithſtanding the King's Prohibition.

A Confirmation of the Charters of the Liberties of England, and of the Foreſt, made 25. Edw. I.

BY the Firſt, Second, Third and Fourth Chapters the Great Charters are confirm'd, and all Judgments given againſt them ſhall be void; they ſhall be read in all Cathedral Churches, and Excommunication pronounced againſt the Breakers of them.

By the Fifth and Sixth, no Ayds, Tasks, nor Prizes, formerly given by Conſent of Parliament for the Maintenance of the King's Wars in Foreign Parts (and which were feared might turn to the Bondage and Slavery of the People, by reaſon of their being found in the Rolls) ſhall hereafter be drawn into a Cuſtom; nor ſhall any ſuch be taken, but by the Common Aſſent of all the Realm; Except antient Aids and Taxes.

And the Seventh and laſt Chapters releaſe the Maletolt, or Grievous Impoſition of 40s. on every Sack of Wooll, ſo that none ſuch for the future ſhall be taken, but by Common Conſent in Parliament; Saving the old Cuſtoms on Wools, Skins and Leather.

Then follows the Sentence of Excommunication pronounced by the Biſhops againſt the Breakers of theſe Articles.

The Statutes of Fines Levied, made 27. Edw. I.

CHAP. I.

IT is no good Exception to a Fine, That before or at the time of the Fine levied, the Demandant or his Anceſtors were not ſeized of the Land contained in the Fine, or of ſome part thereof.

Fines ſhall be openly read at Two certain days in the Week, according to the diſcretion of the Juſtices; and in the mean time all Pleas ſhall ceaſe.

CHAP. II.

This only relates to the Office and Duty of Sheriffs, in receiving the Iſſues upon Recognizances and other Accounts, and whom they ſhall return for Main-Pernors and Jurors.

CHAP. III.

Ordains in what manner Juſtices ſhall take Aſſizes in all Shires, and deliver the Jayles; and make Enquiry if Sheriffs or any other have let out by Plevin Priſoners not repleviable; and to puniſh them in all things according to the Form of the Statute lately made at Weſtminſter.

CHAP. IV.

Enqueſts and Recogniſances determinable before Juſtices of either Bench, ſhall in Vacation be taken before any of the Juſtices before whom the Plea is brought, being aſſociate with one Knight of the ſame County where ſuch Enqueſt ſhall Paſs, unleſs they require great Examination. And ſuch Juſtices ſhall proceed therein notwithſtanding the Statute of 21. E. I. de ponendis Aſſiſis.

An Ordinance for Purchaſing of Liberties, 27. Edw. I.

THoſe that would obtain Licenſe to make a new Park, and Men of Religion that would amortize Lands or Tenements, ſhall have Writs out of Chancery to enquire into the Value thereof; and that Enqueſts of ſuch Lands as are yearly worth above 20l. ſhall be returned into the Exchequer; That if they paſs, he that purchaſed them ſhall make Fine for ſuch Amortiſements: With other Matters needleſs to be here mentioned.

There is alſo another Statute in the 34th Year of this King, to prevent amortiſing of Lands without the Conſent of the Meſne Lord: But it is now out of Uſe.

The Statute for Perſons appealed, made 28. Edw. I.

THIS is to direct the Manner of Proceeding againſt Perſons appealed (that is accuſed) of any Crimes.

Arti-

Articles upon the Charters made the ſame Year.

CHAP. I.

THE Great Charter, and that alſo of the Foreſt, ſhall be fully obſerved: And they ſhall be read Four times in the Year in a full County Court; there ſhall be three Knights, or other Subſtantial Men choſen by the Commonalty in every County, to hear and determine Plaints concerning the Charters, without ſuch Delay as is uſed at the Common Law; but they ſhall not in their Proceedings prejudice the Common Law, or the Charters themſelves, &c.

CHAP. II.

If a Purveyor be attainted for having taken any thing without Warrant, he ſhall be ſent to the next Jayl, and ſuffer as a Felon, if the Value of the Goods do ſo require.

CHAP. III.

The Stewards and Marſhals of the King's Houſhold ſhall not hold Plea of Freehold, Debt, Covenant or Contract, but only of Treſpaſs done within the Houſe or Verge, or of Contracts and Covenants, when both Parties are of the Houſe; and the Plea of Treſpaſs ſhall be determined before the King's Departure from the Verge where the Treſpaſs was committed, and therefore the Plea thereof ſhall be ſpeedy, de die in diem: And if the Plea cannot be determined in time, the Plaintiff ſhall then have Recourſe to the Common Law.

The Steward ſhall take no Cogniſance of Debt, or other things, but of the People of the ſame Houſhold; and if any thing be done contrary to this Act, it ſhall be holden as void.

In caſe of Death within the Verge, where the Coroner of the County is to make view, He, together with the King's Coroner, ſhall do his Office: And what cannot be done by the Steward before the King's Departure, ſhall likewiſe be left to the Common Law.

CHAP. IV.

Common Pleas ſhall not be holden in the Exchequer, contrary to the Form of the Great Charter.

CHAP. V.

The Chancellor and the Juſtices of his Bench ſhall follow the King, ſo that he may have always near him ſuch as be Learned in the Laws, to order Matters that ſhall come to the Court.

CHAP. VI.

No Writ concerning the Common Law ſhall be awarded under any of the Petty Seals.

CHAP. VII.

The Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle ſhall not hold Plea of any Foreign County within the Caſtle-Gates, except it concern the keeping of the Caſtle, neither ſhall he diſtrain the Inhabitants of the Cinque-Ports to plead elſewhere, or otherwiſe, than as they ought, according to the Form of their Charter, confirmed by the Great Charter.

CHAP. VIII.

The People of every County ſhall have Election of their Sheriff, where the Shrievalty is not of Fee. But this was altered by the Statute of 14 Ed. II. de Vice-comitibus.

CHAP. IX.

None ſhall be impanelled, but as is ordained by Statute, and they ſhall be next Neighbours, moſt ſufficient and leaſt ſuſpicious; and if the Officer do otherwiſe, he ſhall anſwer double Damages to the Party grieved, and be grievouſly amerced to the King.

CHAP. X.

Againſt Conſpirators, falſe Informers, and Imbracers of Enqueſts, the King hath provided a Writ in the Chancery; and the Juſtices of either Bench and Juſtices of Aſſize ſhall upon every Plaint thereof award Enqueſts thereupon without Writ, and do Right without Delay.

CHAP. XI.

None ſhall take upon him any Cauſe in Suit, with an Intent to have part of the thing ſued for; neither ſhall any upon any ſuch Covenant give up his Right to another, on pain that the taker ſhall Forfeit to the King ſo much of his Lands and Goods as do amount to the Value of what he hath purchaſed for ſuch Maintenance, to be recovered by any that will ſue for the King in the Court where the Plea hangeth.

CHAP. XII.

Beaſts of the Plough ſhall not be diſtrained for the King's Debt, ſo long as others may be found, on ſuch pain as is elſewhere ordained by Statute (viz. de diſtrictione Scaccarii, 51 H. 3.) nor ſhall the great Diſtreſſes be taken for his Debts, nor driven too far: And if the Debtor can find convenient Surety for ſome time, whereby to agree for the Demand, the Diſtreſs ſhall in the mean time be releaſed; and he that doth otherwiſe ſhall be grievouſly Puniſhed.

CHAP. XIII.

The Commons of every County ſhall chooſe ſuch Sheriffs as ſhall not charge them, nor put any Officer into Authority for Rewards or Bribes, nor lodge too oft in one Place, nor with poor Perſons, nor Men of Religion.

CHAP. XIV.

Bailiwicks and Hundreds ſhall not be let to Farm at too great Sums, whereby the People may be over-charged with Contributions to ſuch Farms.

CHAP. XV.

The Summons and Attachments of Plea of Land ſhall contain Fifteen days Notice, unleſs in Attachment of Aſſizes in the King's Preſence, or before the Juſtices of the Common Bench, or Pleas before Juſtices in Eyre, during the Eyre.

CHAP. XVI.

Such Execution ſhall be done upon thoſe that by Precept from the King make falſe Returns of Writs (by which means Right is delayed) as is ordained by the Statute of Weſtminſter II. Cap. 39.

CHAP. XVII.

The Statute of Wincheſter ſhall be again ſent into every County, to be read four times in the Year, and to be kept as ſtrictly as the Great Charters, on the pains therein limited: And for the better obſervance of it, the Knights aſſigned in the Counties to redreſs things done againſt the ſaid Charters, ſhall be charged with this, and have hereby their Warrant for it.

CHAP. XVIII.

An Action of Waſt is Maintainable againſt Eſcheators and Subeſcheators for Waſt by them committed in the Lands of Wards. But this is now out of uſe.

CHAP. XIX.

When Lands are wrongfully ſeized into the King's hands by the Eſcheator or Sheriff, and after it be out of his hands, becauſe he cannot juſtly hold it, the mean profits ſhall be fully reſtored to him who ought to have the Land, and who hath ſuſtained the Damage.

CHAP. XX.

None ſhall make or cauſe to be made any Veſſel, Jewel or other thing of Gold or Silver, except it be of good and true Allay, viz. Gold of a certain Touch, and Silver of the Sterling Allay or better; and none ſhall work worſe Silver than Money: With ſeveral other Appointments for Goldſmiths to obſerve, upon pain of Impriſonment and Fine at the King's Will. Saving the Right and Prerogative of the Crown in all things.

A Statute of Eſcheators, made 29 Edw. I.

WHere upon Enqueſts taken by Eſcheators concerning Ward-Lands ſaid to be held of the King, and it is found to the contrary; ſuch Eſcheators ſhall immediately amove their hands from them. But this being much to the ſame purpoſe with the 19th Chapter of Artic. ſuper Chartas juſt above, and now become obſolete, I need to make no further mention of it.

The New Statute of quo Warranto, made 30 Edw. I.

COntaining the Form of a Writ to be directed to the Sheriff to permit all Men to enjoy all ſuch Liberties as they had before, and of a Proclamation, that ſuch as claim Liberties ſhall ſhew to the Juſtices (at the firſt Aſſizes when they come into thoſe parts) how they hold of them. But theſe being now of no great uſe, I have only touched upon this Statute.

The Statute of Protections, made 33 Edw. I.

I Queſtion much whether it deſerves this Title or not, for it ſeems to me more like a Writ than a Statute; but the Subſtance of it is, that a Challenge ſhall be entred againſt a Protection of the King's Servant; and if the Country paſs againſt him that caſt the Protection, it ſhall turn to a Default if he be Tenant; and if he be Demandant, he ſhall loſe his Writ, and alſo be amerced to the King.

There is likewiſe a Statute called the Definition of Conſpirators and Champertors, made the ſame 33 Year of Edw. I.

WHich gives not any Remedy, but refers that to the Common-Law, becauſe it conceived it to be an Offence and Injury Puniſhable at the Common-Law; therefore here it only determines what ſhall be ſaid a Conſpiracy, which poſſibly was ambiguous before. But the Statute of Conſpirators that immediatly follows in the ſame Year, appoints the Puniſhment of three Years Impriſonment, and a Fine at the King's Pleaſure, for ſuch Offenders.

An Ordinance of Enqueſts, made the ſame Year.

IF one Challenges a Juror for the King, he ſhall forthwith aſſign a Cauſe certain, which ſhall preſently be tryed at the Diſcretion of the Juſtices: And if he do not alledge a good Cauſe, or it go againſt him, the Enqueſt ſhall be forthwith taken.

An Ordinance of the Foreſt, made the ſame Year.

THoſe whoſe Woods are dis-afforeſted, ſhall be quit of the Charge of the Foreſt, but then they are to have no Common there; howbeit, ſuch as are willing to return their Woods into the Foreſt, ſhall only enjoy Common and other Eaſements there, as they did before.

An Ordinance for Meaſuring of Land, made the ſame Year.

IT ſets forth the Quantity of Perches in Length and Breadth, which ſhall go to an Acre of Land. For which I refer the Reader to the Ordinance it ſelf.

The Statute of Jointenants, made 34 Edw. I.

THIS appoints how they ſhall Plead, and be Impleaded in Aſſizes of Novel-Diſſeiſin, Mort d' Anceſtor, and other Actions; and what Puniſhments thoſe ſhall have that are proved by an Aſſize to bring malicious Pleas.

Then follow Articles of Inquiſition upon the Statute of Wincheſter, made in the time of King Edw. I. for which I refer you to the Book it ſelf.

The Satute concerning certain Liberties granted by the King to his People, commonly called, Stat. de Tallagio non concedendo.

THIS Statute is not enrolled under this Year of 34, but in that of 25 Edw. I. M. 38. when indeed it was made.

CHAP. I.

The King herein declares, That no Talliage or Aid ſhall be levied by Him or his Heirs, without the Will and Aſſent of Parliament.

CHAP. II.

That None of his Officers ſhall take Corn, Leather, Cattel, or any other Goods of any of his People, without the good Will and Aſſent of the Party to whom ſuch Goods belong.

CHAP. III.

That nothing ſhall hereafter be taken of Sacks of Wool, by colour or occaſion of Maletolt.

CHAP. IV.

That all Perſons ſhall have their Laws, Liberties and Free-Cuſtoms, as fully and entirely as they had uſed them when they enjoyed them beſt. And if any Statutes had been made, or Cuſtoms brought in, contrary to them, or any Manner of Article contained in this Article, they ſhall be void.

CHAP. V.

~~That~~ The King Pardons the Conſtable and Earl Marſhal of England, and all others concerned with them, that refuſed going along with Him into Flanders, all Offences they had done againſt Him, to the making of this preſent Charter.

CHAP. VI.

Ordains, that all Archbiſhops and Biſhops for ever ſhould read this Charter twice in the Year in their Cathedral Churche's, and Ecommunicate all the Violaters of it. And then this Charter was ſealed by the King, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, &c. who all took a voluntary Corporal Oath for the more firm obſervation of it, it ſo nearly concerning the Laws, Liberties and Free-Cuſtoms of their Country.

As for the reſt of the Statutes that were made at Carliſle in the Thirty fourth Year of this King's Reign, ſince they chiefly relate to Eccleſiaſtical Matters, I ſhall refer the further treating of them under that Title, which you will find at the end of this Reign.

HAVING given you as brief an Abridgment as I could, of the moſt conderable Statutes of this King's Reign that are now in Force, either for altering or interpreting the Common-Law where it was doubtful; I ſhall now from the 6th Chapter of the Manuſcript Treatiſe of the late Learned Lord Chief Juſtice Hales (Entituled, his Hiſtory and Analyſis of the Laws of England) proceed to give you the Grounds and Reaſons of making ſeveral of them; with a Brief View of the whole Body of the Law as it ſtood at that time, and an Account likewiſe of the Manner and Forms of Pleadings then in uſe.

We have brought down our Hiſtory of Laws in the laſt Volume to the Reign of King Edward I. who may be truly ſtiled our Engliſh Juſtinian; for in his Reign the Laws attain'd a very great Perfection, the Pleadings ſhort indeed, but excellently good and perſpicuous: And although for a time ſome of thoſe antient Imperfections and inconvenient Rules ſtill obtain'd, as for Example in Point of Deſcent, where the Middle Brother held of the Eldeſt, and Died without iſſue it deſcended to the Youngeſt, upon the Pretence of that old Rule in the time of Henry the II. Nemo poteſt eſſe Dominus & Hæres, and is more than once mentioned by Glanville; yet the Laws never in any one Age ſince his time have received ſo ſudden and great an Advancement, nay I think I may ſafely ſay, that all the Ages ſince his time have not done ſo much in reference to the orderly Settling and Eſtabliſhing of the Diſtributive Juſtice of this Kingdom, as he did within the ſhort Compaſs of the 35 Years of his Reign; eſpecially about the firſt Thirteen Years thereof. Indeed many penal and proviſional Statutes in relation to the Peace and good Government of this Kingdom have been ſince made; but as to the Adminiſtration of the Common Juſtice between Party and Party, and the accommodating of the Rules, and alſo of the Methods and Orders of Proceeding, He did the moſt of any one King ſince the Conqueſt, and left the ſame as a ſtable fixt Rule and Order of Proceeding, very little differing from what we have now, I mean as to the main Subſtance and Principal Contexture thereof. It were the Buſineſs of a Volume to ſet down all Particulars; I ſhall therefore give you ſome ſhort Obſervations touching the ſame.

I. Firſt, He perfectly ſettled the Great Charter and Charter of the Foreſt, not only by a Practice conſonant to them, but alſo by that Solemn Act, 25 Ed. I. Stiled Confirmationes Cartarum.

II. He eſtabliſh'd and diſtributed the ſeveral Juriſdictions of Courts within their proper bounds; and becauſe this has ſeveral Heads, I ſhall ſub-divide it, though not preciſely following Order of time.

I. He check'd the Encroachments and Inſolence of the Pope and Papal Clergy, by the famous Statute of Carliſle.

II. He declared the Limits of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, by the Statutes of Circumſpecte Agatis, & Articuli Cleri; the latter of which, though publiſhed in the Time of Edward II. yet was compil'd in the beginning of this King's Reign.

III. He perfectly Eſtabliſhed the Limits of the Court of Common Pleas, putting in Uſe that Article of Magna Charta, Communia Placita non ſequantur Curiam noſtram; and in Expreſs Terms Extending that Law to the Court of Exchequer, by the Statute of Articuli ſuper Cartas. Cap. 4. 'Tis true, That upon my firſt Reading of the Placita de Banco of this King, finding very many Appeals of Death, of Rape and Robbery, I doubted whether the ſame were not held at leaſt by Writ in the Common-Pleas; but upon better Enquiry, I found that many of the Records before the Juſtices Itinerant, were enter'd and fil'd up among the Records of the Common Pleas, which might occaſion that Miſtake.

IV. He Eſtabliſhed the Extent of the Juriſdiction of the Steward and Marſhal, Vid Articuli ſuper Cartas, Cap. 3.

V. He ſettled the Bounds of the Inferiour Courts, not only of Counties, Hundreds and Courts-Baron, but all others, which He kept within their Proper and Narrower Bounds: And ſo gradually the Common Juſtice of the Kingdom came to be Adminiſtred by Men knowing in them, and ſitting in the Great Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and alſo before Juſtices Itinerant; as alſo by that excellent Statute of Weſtminſter I. Cap. 35. Beſides this He kept the Courts of great Men within their due Limits under ſeveral Penalties, wherein ordinarily very great Encroachments and Oppreſſions were exerciſed. The Third General that I obſerve, is, That He did not only explain, but excellently well enforce the Statute of Magna Charta, by that of de Tallagio non Concedendo, made 25 Edward I. notwithſtanding it is placed without any certain Year in our Printed Statute Books.

VI. He provided againſt the Interruption of the Common Juſtice of the Kingdom, by Mandates under the Great or Privy Seal, by the Statute of Articuli ſuper Cartas, Cap. 6. which notwithſtanding the Statute of Magna Charta Cap. 29. were formerly too frequently in Uſe.

VII. He ſettled the Forms, Solemnity, and Efficacy of Fines, confining them to the Courts of Common Pleas, and Juſtices Itinerant, whoſe Records were in antient times commonly removed to the King's Bench, after their Circuits ended, whereby One common Repoſitory for the Great Aſſurances of Lands might be kept, which He did by the Statute of the 18 Edward I. de Modo levandi fines.

VIII. He ſettled that Great and Orderly Method for the Safety and Preſervation of the Peace of the Kingdom, and Repreſſing of Robberies by the Statute of Winton.

IX. He ſettled the Method of Tenures, to prevent multiplicity of Meſnalties which grew to a great Inconveniency,and was remedied by the Statute of Quia Emptores Terrarum.

X. He ſettled a ſpeedier way for Recovery of Debts, not only for Merchants and Tradeſmen, by the Statute of Acton-Burnel and de Mercatoribus, but alſo for other Perſons, by granting an Execution of the Moiety of Debtors Lands, by Elegit.

XI. He ordered an effectual Proceſs for the Recovering Advouſons and Preſentations to Churches, (which was formerly extreamly lame and defective) by the Statute of Weſtminſter II. Cap. 1.

XII. He made that great Alteration in Eſtates, from what they were formerly, by the Statute of Weſtminſter II. Cap. 1. whereby Eſtates of Fee-ſimple Conditional at the Common Law were turn'd into Eſtates Tayl, not removeable from the Iſſue according to the ordinary Methods of Alienation; and upon this Statute, and in order to the Qualifications thereof, are the Superſtructures of thoſe Statutes I have now mentioned.

XIII. He Introduced a quite new Method in the Laws concerning Wales, and in that of their Adminiſtration, by the Statute of Rothland.

XIV. In Brief, partly by the Learning and Experience of his Judges, and his own wiſe Interpoſition, He ſilently and without noiſe abrogated many evil and inconvenient Uſages, both in the Courts of Juſtice at Weſtminſter, and in the Country. He alſo rectified, and ſet in order the preſent Method of Collecting his Revenues into the Exchequer, and removed the obſolete and burthenſome Parts thereof out of Charge, and by the Statutes of Weſtminſter I. and Weſtminſter II. as alſo of Gloceſter, Weſtminſter III. and Articuli ſuper Cartas; whereby He removed almoſt all that was either grievous or unpracticable out of the Law and the Courts where it was adminiſtred, and ſubſtituted ſuch apt, ſhort, but effectual Remedies and Proviſions, as by length of time, and the experience of their Convenience have ſtood ever ſince without any great Alteration; and being Incorporated with, became in a manner part of the Common Law it ſelf: So that (as before I ſaid) the very Scheme and Model of the Common Law, eſpecially in Relation to the Adminiſtration of Common Juſtice between Party and Party, as it was highly rectified, and ſet in a much better Order than his Predeceſſors left it to Him, ſo the Meaſure which we are to take, for the true Stating the Law of England, as to what it now is, ought to be taken and eſtimated by what it was when this King left it. Before his time it was rude and unpoliſh'd, in Compariſon of what it was after its Reduction; and as it was thus poliſh't by Him, ſo it hath hitherto continued the ſame without any great or conſiderable Alteration, abating ſome few Additions ſucceeding Times have made, which are for the moſt part in the Subject-matters of the Law, and not ſo much in it's Rules or ways of Adminiſtration. But as I have already obſerved ſome of thoſe various and Great Acceſſions to the Perfection of the Law under this King, ſo I ſhall now give you ſome of thoſe Repoſitories where theſe may be found; and they are of the following kinds.

pa t

I. Acts of Parliament in the time of this King, full of excellent Wiſdom, Perſpicuity, and yet Brevity; whereof enough is ſaid before.

II. The Judicial Records of the times of this King. I ſhall not mention thoſe of the Chancery, the Cloſe, Patent and Charter Rolls, which yet very much Evidence the Learning and Judgment of that time: But I ſhall only mention the Rolls of Judicial Proceedings, in the King's Bench, Common-Pleas and Eyer; of all which I have read over very many, and obſerve they are in the firſt Place, Written in an Excellent hand, and Secondly the Pleadings very ſhort, but perſpicious, , u and that neither loſe nor perplex the Matter, either through any Impropriety, Obſcurity or Multiplicity of Words; but they are clearly and orderly digeſted, repreſenting effectually the Buſineſs they intend.

III. The Rule and Reaſon of the Law, according to which they proceeded (which is many times expreſly delivered upon the Record it ſelf) very clear and rational, ſo that their ſhort, pithy Pleadings and Judgments do far better render the Senſe of the Buſineſs, and the reaſon of it, than the long intricate formal Pleadings, that are often unneceſſarily uſed in later Times.

IV. Of the Terms and Years of this King's time, only a few broken Caſes remain, and are reported and Collected by Fitz-Herbert; but we have no ſucceſſive Printed Terms and Years of this Reign, except ſome few antient Manuſcript ones, though not running through the whole time of this King; but what remain are very good and brief: The Judges then ſpake leſs, or the Reporters were not ſo ready handed, as to take all they ſaid; hence their Brevity makes them the more obſcure; but yet in thoſe Deciſions and brief Interlocutions between the Judges and the Pleaders, there appears a great deal of Learning and Judgment, There are ſome of thoſe Reports in the Library of Lincoln's-Inn, which though broken and imperfect, yet are the beſt I have met with of that kind.

V. The Law-Tracts which were written in the time of this Wiſe and Excellent Prince, ſeem to be of Two kinds, viz. ſuch as were but only the Works of Private Perſons, and had not any great Authority, but yet contain much of the Law then in Uſe; ſuch were Fleta, the Mirrour of Juſtices, Britton and Thornton; or elſe they are Sums or Abſtracts of ſome particular Parts of the Law, as Novæ Narrationes, Magna Hengham, Parva Hengham, Aſſiza de Baſtardia, &c. By all which, compar'd with Bracton, there ſtill appear a Growth and Perfecting of the Law into a greater Regularity and Order. And thus much may ſerve for the ſeveral Periods of the Growth of the Common Law, until the time of Edward the Second incluſively. I ſhall be the ſhorter in what follows, becauſe the ſame things are more obvious, and the Books and the Reports of the enſuing times give us a ſufficient Account of the Proceedings of the Law herein. Secondly, becauſe it began to grow more Voluminous, every King's Reign, nay almoſt every Year encreaſing thoſe Torrents by continual Acceſſions of new Rivolets, till it is now ſwell'd (as I may ſay) to a large and immenſe Ocean.

Church Affairs during this King's Reign.

*P. 100.

DOctor Brady having in his laſt * Volume given us an Account of divers Eccleſiaſtical Matters, from the moſt approved Authors and Records of that time, I ſhall here make bold to tranſcribe his Relation of them, together with ſuch Additions of my own, as I have collected either from our Hiſtorians, or other Records: Thoſe of the Doctors are as follows, viz.

Ant. Brit. f. 189. God. de Præſul. Angl. p. 137.

Not long before the Death of Henry III. the Monks of Canterbury, by his Licence, having choſen William de Chillenden, their Sub-Prior, for Archbiſhop, the Pope perſuaded him, as a Perſon not fit for that Place, to wave the Election and make way for Robert Kilwardeby, a Friar-Minor, (who for Eleven Years had been the Collector of the Pope's Monies or Revenues in England) to be Archbiſhop, by his ſpecial Proviſion, without the Monks Election, the King's Licence, or ſo much as his Approbation; contrary to his Prerogative, the Antient Rights of his Crown, the Laws of the Realm, and Liberties of the Church.

Rot. Clauſ. 1. Ed. I. M. 11. Dorſ. Printed in Pryn's 3d Vol. f. 122. Dr. B's. Append. N. 44.

But to prevent for the future the like Practices of the Pope, within leſs than a Month after the Death of Henry the Third, King Edward being then in the Holy-Land, the Guardians of the Kingdom and Council, in his Name, by their Proctors, before they granted the new Archbiſhop his Temporalties, made publick Proteſtation, for the Vindication of the Prerogative and Rights of the Crown, againſt theſe Proviſions of the Pope; ſhewing that Cathedral Churches, when void, were by Right and Cuſtom, wont to be filled by the Canonical Election of the Chapter, the King's Leave having been firſt asked and obtained: And that after the Election, the Elect ought to be preſented unto the King, That He might object againſt him, if He had any thing reaſonable to propound; but that the omiſſion of this ſeemed to the King and his Council to be a great Prejudice to Himſelf and the Church of Canterbury, whoſe Patron and Defender He was, and eſpecially if this ſhould be made an Example in other Churches, That the Pope paſſing by theſe Uſages, where there could not be found any Fault either in the Matter, or Form of the Election, nor had to expreſſed in his Letters, yet ſhould aſſume a Power of providing for the Church; wherefore leſt for the future the Roman Church ſhould proceed to do the like, or if it ſhould do it, that the King might not receive Prejudice, or be bound to reſtore the Temporalties of any Church ſo provided for, the King of his ſpecial Grace, grants them to this Archbiſhop for the preſent; and then Iterus Bernardus, the King's Procurator and Clerk, made Proteſtation in his Name and Stead, That this Grant of the Temporalties ſhould not be drawn into Example for the future: This Proteſtation was made and read at Weſtminſter in St. Stephen's Chappel on the Vigil of St. Lucy the Virgin, (i. e. the Twelfth of December) in the Preſence of Fryar Robert de Kilwardeby, the Archbiſhop Elect, the Biſhop of Exeter, Walter de Merton, Chancellor of England, John de Chiſtal, Dean of St. Paul's, R. Burnel, Arch-Deacon of York, and many others. A. D. 1272.

And on the ſame Day, the ſaid Archbiſhop having given ſufficient Teſtimony of his Affection to the King, and taken the Oath of Fealty to Him, had for that time, out of his eſpecial Grace, his Temporalties granted by the Lieutenants or Guardians of the Kingdom; and ſo that Difference was for the preſent made up.

Pat. 1. Ed. I. M. 20. Int.

Then after Six Years, this Archbiſhop Kilwardeby being made Biſhop of Porto in Italy, and Cardinal, Abdicated his Archbiſhoprick; upon whoſe Ceſſion, the Pope (notwithſtanding the Monks had before Elected the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, then Chancellor of England) made John Peckham, another Preaching-Fryar, Archbiſhop, and Conſecrated him at Rome. He was Born in Suſſex, of obſcure Parents, and had his firſt Inſtitution in the Monaſtery of Lewis.

Ant. Brit. f. 192.

This Archbiſhop, with the Biſhops and Clergy, (endeavouring to put in practice the Canons of Archbiſhop Boniface, made at Lambeth, 45 of Hen. III. A. D. 1261.) held a Synod at Reading the Seventh of this King, on the Third of the Kalends of Auguſt, or Thirtieth of July, A. D. 1279. in which, ſeveral Sentences of Excommunication were enjoyned to be publiſhed, contrary to the Royal Prerogative, and Laws of the Land; which ſo troubled the King, that He Convened the Archbiſhop before himſelf and his Council in the Parliament held at Michaelmaſs next following; wherein He made an open Revocation of ſuch Articles as appeared to be againſt the Rights of his Crown.

Spelm. Council, 2d Vol. f. 305.

Clauſ. 7 Ed. I. M. 1. Dorſ. Printed in Dr. B's. Ap. N. 45.

In the Eighth of King Edward, this Archbiſhop and his Suffragans, holding a Council at Lambeth, the King fearing from their late Canons and Proceedings at Reading, that they might preſume to Conſtitute ſomething therein againſt his Crown and Dignity, appointed Roger le Eſtrange, and Hugh Fitz-Otto, Steward of his Houſhold, his Commiſſioners, to go to them, and Appeal againſt any ſuch Proceedings: So that in this Synod, they only confirmed the Conſtitutions of Otto and Ottobone, formerly the Pope's Legates in England.

Spelm. Vol. 2. f. 327.

Pat. 8 Ed. I. M. 10 Int. Vid. Dr. B's. Ap. N 46. * Cod. Anon.

Next Year, the ſame Archbiſhop called a Council at Lambeth; but the King ſuſpecting the Loyalty of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, directed his Writ to them, Commanding them, upon their Oaths of Fealty they had taken, to be faithful to Him, and defend his Rights, and the Rights of his Kingdom, as much as they could; and enjoined them by vertue of ſuch their Oath, and under pain of loſing their Temporalities they held of Him, That they ſhould in that Council do nothing againſt Him, his Kingdom, and the Rights or Laws which his Predeceſſors and He had uſed by antient and approved Cuſtom, nor to do, aſſent to, or attempt any thing againſt them.

Pat. 9 Ed. I. M. 6. int. Da. B's. Ap. N. 47.

Yet in this Synod, notwithſtanding this Inhibition, they renew'd the Canons of the former Council of Lambeth, holden under Archbiſhop Boniface, thô ſuſpended by the King's Appeal to the Pope about it: And notwithſtanding his Revocation above-mention'd, (of ſome of the Canons and Sentences of Excommunication made at Lambeth and renewed at Reading about Two Years before in open Parliament) He renewed them again in this Council; As that, Againſt ſuch as procured or obtained Prohibitions againſt Proceedings in Spiritual Courts; that, Againſt the Infringers and Oppoſers of Eccleſiaſtick Liberty; that, Againſt ſuch as took any thing out of, or from the Houſes, Mannors, or Lands of Eccleſiaſtick Perſons againſt their Wills; that, Againſt ſuch as took or removed any Perſons or Goods out of Sanctuary, and hindered any Victuals to be brought to ſuch Perſons; and laſtly, Againſt ſuch as denied to Execute the King's Writs for taking the Excommunicates, or hinder'd the taking of them, or unjuſtly procured their Liberty; being moſt of them thoſe very Things He had formerly renounced, and promiſed not to put in Practice for the future.

Spelm. ut ſup. f. 3289.

This Council ended on the Sixth of the Ides, or Tenth of October; and he wrote the King a Letter about Church-Liberty, not long after, wherein he tells him, 'That for a long time, and very antiently, there 'had been great Diſſention between the King and Great Men of England, 'and the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Clergy of the ſame, concerning the 'Oppreſſion of the Church, againſt the Decrees of Popes, the Conſti'tutions of Councils, and Sanctions of Orthodox Fathers, in which the 'higheſt Authority, the Greateſt Truths and Sanctity did conſiſt: And 'therefore beſeeched the King, that there might be an end put to thoſe 'Diſſentions; which could not otherwiſe be done, than by his being 'inclin'd to cloſe with thoſe Three great Points from whence the Ca'nons were collected, and ſubmit his Crown to that of Chriſt; for that 'the Eccleſiaſtick or Church Liberties were the Jewels of his Spouſe. 'He tells Him further, That by the expreſs Precept of the Law He was 'bound to obey the Pope; That the Determination of every Controverſy, 'that could not be determined by Inferior Judges, belonged to Him; 'That Catholick Emperors ſubmitted all their Laws, and aboliſhed all 'ſuch as were contrary to them: Laſtly he told Him, That no Oath 'could bind to the Keeping or Performance of ſuch things as were 'repugnant to Eccleſiſtick Liberty; and if He had taken any that might 'any way excite his Conſcience againſt the Church, he would abſolve 'Him from it: And concludes, That he firmly believed, He could not 'provide for the Safety of his Soul, or the Stability of his Kingdom, 'unleſs He cloſed with what he propounded. This Letter is dated at Lambeth the 4th of the Nones or 2d of November 1281. in the 9th of Edw. I.

Spelm. Concil. Tom. 2. f. 341. Ex Vet. Cod. MSS. in Regiſtro Principali Arch. Cant. (nuncupato) Peckam, f. 97.

But this Epiſtle prevailed not upon the King, nor ended the Controverſies about the Regalia, or Rights of the Crown, and Liberties of the People between the Secular and Eccleſiaſtick Powers: And whatever the Pretences of the Archbiſhop, Biſhops, and Clergy were, for the Advancement of Holineſs and Religion, the Deſign was purely Dominion, whether the King or they ſhould have moſt Power, even in Temporals; for from the firſt to the laſt Year of his Reign, they endeavoured to Incroach and Uſurp upon the Temporal Juriſdiction, notwithſtanding all Prohibitions, Attachments, Informations, and Suits againſt them; the Records of which would ſwell into a Volume, if they were all collected from thoſe in the Tower only of this King's Reign *: And always when the King's Neceſſities urged Him, or that He was fatigu'd, or diſappointed in his Wars, they took the Advantage of promoting Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, (which was any thing they pleas'd to call ſo) againſt the Rights, Royalties, and Prerogative of the Crown, and never wanted ambitious, deſigning, diſcontented, or poor, Noblemen or Gentlemen, who had made themſelves ſo by their own Luxury, (and pretending to

what

* As the Reader may ſee in Pryn's ſecond Volume of the Hiſtory of Papal Uſurpations, &c.

what was then called Sanctity, ſeemed to be more Holy and Religious than others) to joyn with, and aſſiſt them, in hopes to make themſelves great, and repair their broken Fortunes, or ſucceed in the Places of others, and become Governours and Regulators of the Nation, and Miniſters of State under the Church Power.

Thus far I have faithfully tranſcribed from Dr. Brady an Impartial Account of the Incroachments of the Pope and Church of Rome, in thoſe days, upon the Civil Power and Liberties of the Engliſh Nation: I ſhall now from my own Collections proceed to ſet forth ſome other material Alterations in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs in this King's Reign; who being a wiſe and magnanimous Prince, and finding the Clergy, whilſt divided from the Laity, and indeed from one another in their Synods and Councils, very untractable and hard to be dealt with, in reſpect of Pecuniary Aids, or Supplies towards his Wars, reſolved to reſtore the old Cuſtom, uſed before the Conqueſt, and for above Eighty Years after, of bringing the whole Body of the Clergy to appear Nationally in Parliament, as a part thereof, which He partly effected, by inſerting into the Writ of Summons to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, that remarkable Clauſe of Præmunientes, which is ſtill continued to this day: Whereby they were obliged to warn the Priors and Chapters of their Churches, and the Archdeacons, and all the Clergy of their reſpective Dioceſſes; the Archdeacons and Priors in their proper Perſons, and the Chapters and Clergy by two fit Proxies, with ſufficient Power from them to be preſent with the King, there by all Means, to Treat, Ordain, and do, together with Him, and other Prelates and Peers, and other Inhabitants of the Kingdom, ſo as to obviate the Dangers recited in the ſaid Writ: Which was different from the Summons which the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York uſed to iſſue out before by their own Metropolitical Authority for the ſaid Perſons to meet in an ordinary Synod or Convocation; as any one may ſee, who will take the Pains to compare both thoſe Forms: For that Clauſe in the Writ, beginning with the Words, Ad Tractandum, &c. is the very ſame with that directed to the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, and gives the Inferior Clergy the like Powers.

* See the firſt Writ Extant of this kind, Rot. Clauſ. 23 Ed. I.

When theſe Writs firſt began is hard to determine, ſince the Writs of Summons from the beginning to the Three and twentieth of this King's Reign are loſt; but that they were Iſſued out before that Year, appears by a Writ of Summons entred in the Regiſter of Henry Prior of Canterbury of the Two and twentieth of this King; but tho' we cannot aſſign the exact time, yet we may come ſo near it as to affirm, That it was ſome time after the Conſtitution of the Council or Synod held at Reading, in the Seventeenth of this King, and mention'd in his Reign under A. D. 1279. and ſeems moſt likely to be begun, when the King was put to it for Money to carry on his Wars againſt Wales, or Scotland: But as to the Alterations that were made in this King's laudable Inſtitution under his too eaſie Son and Succeſſor, we ſhall give you a like Account, when we come to the end of his Reign.

All things as to Eccleſiaſtical Matters continued in the ſame Condition until the Thirty fourth Year of this King, when at the Parliament held at Carliſle, where there were great and general Complaints in this Parliament, of the great Oppreſſions exerciſed by the Pope, and his Clerk, upon the Liberty of the Church of England, of which a Schedule being dropt in this Aſſembly by an unknown Hand, (which our Author has given at large) it ſo far incenſed them, that preſently certain bold Petitions were exhibited by the Earls, Barons, Great Men, and Community of the whole Kingdom of England, on behalf of that Crown; as alſo of thoſe of the Lands of Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, and the whole Community aforeſaid, concerning divers new intollerable Grievances, Oppreſſions, Injuries and Extortions, done to, and brought upon the ſaid Earls, Barons, Great Men, and Community, by the Authority and Command of the Pope; and particularly by Mr. William de Teſta, his Clerk, or Nuncio, or by his Commiſſaries, Miniſters or Vicegerents, in his Name. The Articles or Heads of theſe Petitions or Complaints were,

Firſt, The extravagant number of Proviſions, granted by the Pope, of the beſt Spiritual Preferments, given to Italians, or other Foreigners and Non-Reſidents, to the great Prejudice and Diſinheritance of the Founders, Benefactors, and their Succeſſors, and to ſuch as had the Right of Advouſon, and the Gifts of ſuch Preferments.

Secondly, The Rents and Revenues of Religious Houſes, which the Pope intended to apply to the uſe of divers Cardinals.

Thirdly, Concerning Firſt-Fruits of Vacant Benefices, reſerved to the Pope, a thing never heard of before; concerning the Collection whereof, he had lately iſſued forth divers hard and ſevere Orders, much prejudicial to the King, Kingdom, and whole Engliſh Church.

Fourthly, About the Peter-Pence; That they were not taken according to the firſt Grant, but exacted to treble the value.

Fifthly, Concerning Legacies given to Pious Uſes; That they were wickedly demanded, and exacted by Authority of the Apoſtolick See, and converted to other Uſes than the Teſtator or Donor intended.

Sixthly, Concerning Debts, the Abuſe was, that Creditors went to the Pope's Clerks, and offer'd them half the Debt, more or leſs, to get the reſt; who preſently cauſed the Debtors to be Summoned and Diſtrained to Anſwer before them, to the open Diſheritance of the King and his Crown.

Seventhly, Concerning indiſtinct Legacies, (i. e. ſuch as were given in general, and not in particular Words) tho' approved by the Civil and Canon Law, yet the Pope's Clerks impiouſly appropriated to themſelves, or converted them to their own Uſes, contrary to the Deſign of the Deceaſed.

* Ryley's Placit. Parl. f. 376.
† Ib. 379

There are two Copies of theſe Petitions; one in * French very full and large; the other in † Latin, which concludes thus: All theſe things tend to draw the Money out of the Kingdom, the manifeſt deſpoiling of the Church, the enriching of Strangers, and impoveriſhing the Natives, unleſs God will ariſe and diſſipate his Enemies, ſo as by the Secular Prince and his Council, with the Conſent of the Noble and Great Men, ſuch great Wickedneſs may be repreſſed.

† Ibidem.

Upon † which Articles of Oppreſſions, Grievances, Extortions, and Injuries, William de Teſta, the Pope's Nuncio, was called into full Parliament, and Convicted thereof; nor could he any ways excuſe himſelf, but by ſaying, He did theſe Things by Authority of the Pope. 'And becauſe theſe 'Practices, if ſuffer'd, manifeſtly tended to the Diminution of Divine 'Worſhip, the Robbing of the Engliſh Church, the Prejudice, Hurt 'and Diſheriſon of the Crown, Power, Juriſdiction and Dignity Royal 'of England, the Deſtruction of the whole Community, and perpetual 'Subverſion of the State of the Kingdom, and the Laws and Cuſtoms 'of the ſame, from whence greater Dangers in proceſs of time might ‘ enſue; therefore they having at laſt conſidered theſe Miſchiefs,

‘ by Aſſent of the King, and whole Council in Parliament, it was Provided, ‘ Agreed, Ordained, and Judged, That the premiſed Grievances, Oppreſſions, ‘ Injuries and Extortions, ought not to be permitted in the ‘ Kingdom and Lands aforeſaid. And Maſter William was in the ſame ‘ Parliament forbidden to do any thing contrary to this Proviſion, Agreement ‘ and Judgment, by himſelf or any other whatſoever: And he was ‘ enjoyned to revoke and make void whatever had been done by him, ‘ his Commiſſaries, Miniſters, Vicegerents, Adherents and Aſſiſtants, and ‘ ſafely to keep within the Kingdom the Money levied upon this Account, ‘ until the King, by Advice of the Council aforeſaid, ſhould otherwiſe direct.

And for the greater Evidence of the Matter, it was Ordain'd and Agreed by the King and Council aforeſaid, That Experienced Meſſengers ſhould be ſent to the Pope, from the King and whole Community, to notifie and ſet forth to him theſe Grievances, Oppreſſions, Extortions and Injuries: And a Letter was drawn up accordingly in the Name and behalf of the Clergy* and Laity, full of Sharpneſs and Reflection upon the Pope, his Miniſters and Nuncio's, with this Title in the Margin; Littera à Regno Angliæ, The Letter from the Kingdom of England to the Pope.

Ibidem.

* Clerus & Populus.

At the ſame time Writs were ordered to be directed to all the Sheriffs of England, to enquire, by the Oaths of lawful Men of the County, after the Names of the Miniſters and Commiſſioners of William de Teſta, who had committed theſe Grievances, Extortions, &c. and the Names of ſuch as had cauſed any one to be cited before himſelf, or Commiſſaries, being diſcover'd, to attack them by their Bodies, ſo that they might appear before the King Eight Days after Holy Trinity, wherever He was in England; to anſwer to Him or any others that would complain, and to do and receive what the King's Court (the Court of King's Bench now, which then was always with the King) ſhould Adjudge and Ordain. Witneſs the King at Carliſle, the Twenty ſecond of March, in the Five and thirtieth Year of his Reign.

Ibidem. f. 282, 283.

The Prince of Wales as Guardian of Scotland, and the Juſtice of Ireland, were alſo commanded to ſee this Proviſion, Agreement, Ordinance and Judgment, inviolably obſerved in thoſe Lands or Countries under their Government.

Ibidem.

Yet notwithſtanding all theſe new Ordinances, their Severity was very much mitigated; for after the Receſs of the Parliament, the King at the Requeſt of the Biſhop and Cardinal of St. Sabine (who came lately from the Pope into England, and was then at Carliſle) commanded the Chancellor not to Seal their Writs to the Sheriffs, &c. And * farther for the Reverence He had to the Apoſtolick See, and Affection He bore to Pope Clement gave William de Teſta and Peter Amalmeni, the Pope's Clerks and Nuncio's, their Commiſſaries and Miniſters, a Protection to go through the whole Kingdom for the Diſpatch of the Buſineſs of the Church of Rome. Witneſs the King at Carliſle the 4th of April in the ſame Year of his Reign.

Ibidem.

* Ibidem. & Parl. 25 Ed. I. M. 10. inſus.

He alſo granted to them, as much as He might or could lawfully, to Collect or keep to the Uſe of the Pope, the Firſt Fruits of all vacant Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, with Cure and without Cure, in the Kingdom, for Three Years; which were reſerved by the Pope to himſelf, notwithſtanding the late Prohibitions in Parliament; ſo as they meddled not with the Revenues of Abbies or Priories, nor carried the Money out of the Kingdom, but by way of Exchange. This Licence or Diſpenſation was dated the ſame day at Carliſle.

Parl. 25 Ed. I. M. 19. Printed in Ryley, f. 383.

Ibm. Ryley, f. 384.

And farther, the King then gave them a Diſpenſation to execute their Offices, as the Pope's Clerks and Nuncio's, and as the Clerks and Nuncio's of former Popes had done in times preceeding, notwithſtanding any former Prohibition by Him made; provided they did nothing againſt his Crown or Dignity, or any of his Subjects, any manner of way. This is likewiſe dated the ſame Day, at the ſame Place.

Ibm.

Laſtly, He gave them leave by way of Exchange, and by Aſſiſtance of Merchants, to transfer all the Money ſo collected, which rightly belonged to the Church of Rome, or to the Pope; ſo as they tranſported not any Coined Money, or Silver in the Maſs, by themſelves, or others. Dated at the ſame Place and Time.

Ryley, Ibm. Dr. B's Ap. N. 42. Ryly ib. p. 385

Under Pretence of theſe Letters, Grants and Diſpenſations, the Pope's Clerks aforeſaid, not having Reſpect to the late Prohibitions in Parliament, returned to their old Trade and former Practices; and being oppoſed in their Proceedings by many of the Kingdom, by reaſon of thoſe Prohibitions, they Petitioned the King's Council holden at Weſtminſter in the Feaſt of Holy Trinity laſt paſt, and exhibited Letters, &c. and becauſe it was found, (or at leaſt was interpreted) that by them the King had revoked nothing of the former Ordinance made in Parliament, nor granted any thing a-new to the ſame Clerks by the ſaid Letters, only that they might have and receive the Firſt Fruits of Vacant Benefices, as far as He could grant them, He thereby forbad them to do or attempt any thing that might turn to the Prejudice of his Crown and Royal Dignity, or any other of his Subjects: And it being found alſo, that every of the Grievances aforeſaid were in Prejudice of the King and his Subjects, it was by Command of the King (being ſtill at Carliſle) farther agreed in the ſame Council, That the ſaid Clerks ſhould not Act any of the ſaid Grievances, nor have the Firſt Fruits of Benefices of the Patronage of the King or others, becauſe it would turn to the Prejudice of Him, his Crown and Dignity. Whereupon the ſaid Clerks underſtanding this Agreement, would not any further proſecute their Petitions, or appear to receive their Anſwer; and therefore there was a further Prohibition made, That whereas there had not been a full Deliberation had upon their Petitions, they ſhould not attempt any thing any way prejudicial to Him, his Crown and Dignity, the Noblemen and People of his Realm. Witneſs the King at Carliſle the Seven and twentieth day of June, in the ſame Year.

The Statute of Proviſors made at Carliſle, 35 Ed. I. cap. ult.

This Prohibition was ſerved upon them by the Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs of London; and afterwards if the ſaid Clerks endeavoured to have been Relieved againſt this Prohibition, it was then in vain; for the King died not long after, ſo as nothing further was done in this Matter.

But as for the particular Statutes that were made in this Parliament, ſince they wholy relate to Eccleſiaſtical Matters, I ſhall here inſert them under this Head; and they are as follow.

Firſt, That Remarkable Statute, Entituled, De Aſportatis Religioſorum, or againſt the carrying away or tranſporting of the Goods of Religious Perſons; and was intended to prevent for the future the great Talliages and Tributes impos'd upon the Engliſh Monaſteries by Foreign Abbots; who being the Heads and Superiors of their Orders, had impos'd many inſupportable Burthens and Oppreſſions upon the Monaſteries in England, as their Dependents; which being become intolerable, had been not long before complain'd of, not only by the Religious Orders themſelves,

* but alſo by the Great Men of the Kingdom, who complain'd, That by theſe means what had been Charitably given to Pious Uſes, and the Encreaſe of Divine Worſhip, was turn'd into a wicked Tribute, not pleaſing to God: Wherefore by the Advice of the Earls, Barons and other Noblemen, and the Commons of his Kingdom in his Parliament at Weſtminſter, in the Thirty third Year of his Reign, He Ordained and Determined, That no Abbot, Prior, or any other Religious Perſon of what State, Condition, or Order ſoever he was, under his Power and Dominion, ſhould pay any Rent or Impoſition charged upon them by their Superiors, the Abbots and Priors of Religious Houſes or Places in Foreign Parts; nor that they ſhould go beyond Sea to viſit ſuch Monaſteries under any pretence whatſoever, ſo as the Goods or Revenue of their Monaſteries might any way by Exchange or Merchandize be conveyed out of the Kingdom, upon pain of grievous Puniſhment to ſuch as ſhould do contrary to this Statute in Contempt of the King's Prohibition.

The King farther forbad all Abbots, Priors, and Maſters of Religious Houſes, &c. abroad, under whoſe Subjection the Houſes of the ſame Order were in his Dominions, to impoſe any Payments or Burthens upon them, under Forfeiture of all they had in his ſaid Dominions; yet the King hereby declared, That it was not his Intention to exclude the ſame Foreign Abbots and Priors, &c. from their Office of Viſiting, concerning thoſe things which belonged to the Regular Obſervance and the Diſcipline of their Order; provided that ſuch Viſitors took nothing from the ſaid Monaſteries, Priories or Houſes they thus viſited, or carried any hing out of the Kingdom, but their moderate and reaſonable Expences.

Theſe Ordinances and Statutes, though they were made the 34th of Edw. I. at the laſt Parliament, yet the Publication and Confirmation f them was ſuſpended until this Parliament at Carliſle, that ſo they ight proceed with more mature Deliberation; after which, and upon full Debate with the Earls, Barons and other Nobles and * Commons f his Kingdom, by their unanimous Conſent He Ordained and Determin'd, That this Statute ſhould take Place from the Firſt day of May ext coming; and then it was ſent to all the Sheriffs in England, to be ubliſhed as a Law made for the Common Benefit of the People, and Melioration of the State of the whole Kingdom. Witneſs the King at Carliſle the Twentieth day of March in the Five and thirtieth Year of is Reign.

Then followeth upon the ſame Roll, as alſo in our Printed Statute ooks of later Editions, (for it is omitted by Raſtal and all other old nglish Collections of Statutes) that notable Act, which was then made prevent the Abuſes and Oppreſſions committed by the Pope and Court f Rome, concerning their unjuſt and unneceſſary Proviſions for ſupplyg of Biſhopricks, Abbies and other Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, before they ecame vacant; for which I refer you to the Statute it ſelf, which being ry long, I ſhall here Abridge it.

Firſt, it is therein recited, That it appears upon the Joint Petitions of e Earls, Barons and Commons, that Holy Church in this Nation had en founded in the State of Prelacy by the King's Predeceſſors and ogenitors, as alſo of the Earls, Barons and their Anceſtors, to inform e People in the Holy Faith, and for Prayers, Alms and Hoſpitality, to ſaid, done and kept in the Places where the Churches were founded, the Souls of the Founders and ~~their Heirs, and~~ all Chriſtians; and at certain Poſſeſſions and Lands in Fee and Advouſons, to a very great

* Vid Statute of Carliſle, Printed in Ryleys placit 1 Parliament f 312. and Cokes 2d Inſt. f. 580.

* Communitatibus.

great Value, were aſſigned to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors and other Houſes of Religion, and the reſt of the Parties abovementioned; and that they in the time of Vacancy of ſuch Prelacies and Houſes, as Lords and Advouees, (or Patrons) had, and ought to have the Preſentments and Collations of all Manner of Benefices of the Advouſon or Patronage of ſuch Prelates, to give them to ſuch Engliſhmen,* who had Offices or Places under the King and the Great Men abovesaid, for their Knowledge and Advice, when they had occaſion to make uſe of them: Yet that the Pope that then was, had appropriated to Himſelf the Gifts of ſuch Poſſeſſions and Benefices by his Proviſions and Reſervations, and gave and granted away Dignities, Prebendaries and Churches, to ſuch as never reſided in England, and to Cardinals and Others, as well ſtrangers as Engliſhmen, who could not reſide here; as if He had been true Patron and Advowee of Right, as He was not: By which things, if they ſhould be ſuffer'd, within a ſhort time there would be no Benefice in the Gift of ſuch Prelates, but by ſuch Proviſions would come into the hands of Strangers contrary to the Will and Intent of the Founders; and ſo the Elections of Archbiſhops and Biſhops would fail; Prayers, Hoſpitality and Alms, which ought to be perform'd, would ceaſe; and the King himſelf, and other lay Patrons, in times of Vacancy, would not only loſe their Preſentments and Collations, but the Goods or Wealth of the Nation would in great Meaſure be carried out of it, to the Undoing of the State of the Church of England, and the Diſinheriting of the ſaid King and his Crown, and the Nobles of the Realm, and to the Deſtruction of the Laws and Rights of the Kingdom to the great Oppreſſion of the People, and Subverſion of the State of the whole Kingdom, and expreſly contrary to the Will and Ordinance of the firſt Founders.

* i. e. were of the King's Council or in other Civil Imployments.

Wherefore by the Aſſent of the Earls, Barons, Nobles and Commonalty, conſidering entirely the Errors and Dammages aforeſaid, in the ſaid Parliament of Carliſle it was Provided, Ordained and Decreed, That the forenamed Grievances, Oppreſſions, Damages and Errors, from thenceforth ſhould not be ſuffer'd to be done in any manner; whereupon his ſaid Grandfather by his Writs had forbad all ſuch whom it concern'd to attempt or do any thing that might turn to the Blemiſhing of his Royal Dignity, or in Prejudice of the Nobles or his People; and further He Commanded all Sheriffs by his Writs, That if by Enqueſts taken any could be found doing to the contrary, they ſhould take their Bodies and bring them ſafely before Him at a certain day, there to Anſwer as well Himſelf as Others that would complain againſt them, and to do and receive farther what the Court ſhould award in this Caſe.

But King Edward dying immediatly after the making of this Statute, and his Son's Reign being for the moſt part taken up with Civil Diſſentions, this Act was never put in Execution during his time, nor yet i that of Edward the 3d, till his 17th Year; when it was with ſome alterations revived: But this alſo proving ineffectual, it was farther enforced and confirmed the Year following; but yet it was never execute ſo ſtrictly as it ought to have been, all his Reign.

8 JA 56

The end of the Reign of King Edward I.

THE General Hiſtory OF ENGLAND BOTH Eccleſiaſtical and Civil.

VOL. III. BOOK X.

Containing the Reign of King Edward II.

THE unexpected Death of King Edward the Firſt, in the beginning of his Expedition againſt the Scots, as it proved an irreparable Loſs and Grief to his own Subjects, ſo it was of very great Advantage and Satisfaction to their Enemies; who thereby, not only got time to breath d recruit their weak and ſcattered Forces, but alſo, within a few ears after, were enabled wholly to caſt off the Engliſh Yoke: For dward the Second, his Eldeſt Son, who was between three and four d twenty Years of Age, ſucceeding the King his Father, obſerved ne of thoſe Injunctions which he had left him; and although his De- e of having his Body carried about into Scotland, ſeem'd no other- ſe than the doting Fancy of an Old Man upon his Laſt Bed, and ſo ight be thought of no great moment, yet certainly a vigorous proſe- tion of the War againſt that Nation, would have been a matter of e higheſt importance, both for his own Honour, and the Security of s Kingdom: But the New King, inſtead of going in Perſon againſt em, as he ought to have done, were it but in obedience to his Dying ther's Commands, only made ſome faint Offers towards a War; 1.] for immediately returning to Carliſle, to make freſh Proviſions r his Scottiſh Expedition, [2] there came to him Patrick Earl of Dun- r, who quitting King Robert's Intereſt, ſubmitted himſelf, and did s Homage to King Edward. Then on the firſt of Auguſt, the New

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

The great Loſs that the Death of the late K. Edward now proved to the Nation.

His Son obſerves none of his Injunctions.

[1.] Chron. de Lanercoſt, in Bib. Cott.

The Earl of Dunbar ſubmits himſelf to King Edward 2d.

[2.] Annal. Monaſt. S. Auguſtin.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

King began his March towards Scotland, having already ſummon'd all the Nobility of that Kingdom to meet him at Dunfrees, and do their Homage; whereupon ſeveral of them, more for fear than love, came thither to him, and perform'd that Duty: But when he had put his Army into three Diviſions, as if he would have immediately perſued the Enemy; upon Pierce Gaveſton's Arrival from France, being over-joy'd to ſee him, He not only called him Brother, and preſently made him Earl of Cornwall,* and Lord of the Iſle of Man, (to the great grief and mortification of all the Nobility) but was ſo wholly taken up with this Favourite, as that if there were no more Buſineſs to be done, all farther thoughts of carrying on the War by himſelf in Perſon, were laid aſide, and it was left to be managed by his Lieutenant, being contented with thoſe outward formal Submiſſions of ſome of the Scottiſ Lords: He then appointed Aymeric de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, Guardian of the Kingdom, or at leaſt that part of it that remain'd under hi Obedience (as appears by the * Charter or Commiſſion under th Great Seal) and went back again into England.(2)*

But not long after his Departure [3.] King Robert leaving his Re treats in the Mountains, marched down into Galloway, attended by hi Brother, the Lord Edward Bruce, with a powerful Army, and mad all the Inhabitants of thoſe Parts pay great Contributions to avoid burn ing and plundering.

But to return to our own Affairs: One of the firſt things I find th New King perform'd after his coming to the Crown, (and before hi Father could be buried) was, [4.] his Arbitrary and ſevere Proceed ing againſt Walter de Langton Biſhop of Cheſter (as my Author cal him) but indeed of Litchfield and Coventry, late Treaſurer of Englan and Executor of his Father's Teſtament; for he cauſed him to be cloſe ly impriſoned in Wallingford-Caſtle,(4) and all his Goods to be ſeized, an exacting a ſtrict Account of his Treaſurerſhip, appointed certain Juſti ces to enquire into all his Actions(5) and he had utterly ruined him, i the Pope had not interceded on his behalf; but he having heard hi Charge, he ſo fully anſwered whatſoever was objected againſt him, tha nothing blameworthy could be faſtened on him; ſo that upon his Ho lineſs's(6) Mediation, he was reſtored to his Goods, and the King's ha Favour. This did not fall out till about three Years after, But not t make a Breach in this Relation, I have choſe to put it here altog ther. As for the occaſion of this Biſhop's Diſgrace, it was ſaid that in th late Reign, he had given the King, when Prince, ſome Reprimands fo divers foul Irregularities which he had been guilty of, and had al endeavour'd to reſtrain him in his Extravagant Expences, and loo way of Living; which being imputed to his Servants, who had too gre an influence over him, (as the Chronicle of St. Auguſtine's Abby r lates) the King not only made him turn away ſeveral of them, but fo bad him his Preſence for ſome Days.

But indeed the main Reaſon of the Biſhop's Diſgrace, was, becauſe h was ſuppos'd to have had the Chief hand in the Baniſhment of Pier Gaveſton, for whoſe Return the King had now obtained the Pope's D ſpenſation, from the Oath he had made to his Father to the contrar And his Kindneſs to his Favourite did ſo highly encreaſe every day, th beſides the Lands belonging to the Earldom of Cornwall, which we then in the Crown, [5.] he gave him alſo the Wardſhip of the Perſo an

He makes as if he would have carried on the Wars againſt the Scots in his own Perſon, but upon the arrival of Pierce Gaveſton leaves it to his Lieutenant.

* Vid. Charta. Penes Remem. Reg. in Scacc.

[3.] Chron. de Laner. MS.

King Robert returns into Galloway, and makes the Inhabitants pay him great Contributions

[4.] T. W.

His Arbitrary Proceedings againſt the Biſhop of Litchfield, the late Treaſurer, and for what Cauſe.

Id. ib. T. W.

The King obtains a Diſpenſation from the Oath he had taken, that Gaveſton ſhould never return.

[5 Chron de Lan.

* Tho it is here say'd that upon Pierce Gavestons arrival out of France he made him Earl of Cornwall; yet it is a mistake: for he was created Earl in his absence, with ye Grant of divers Mannors, Castles, Towns, Hundreds, as appears by ye Original Charter of Edward II. entered on ye Rolls in ye Tower. [Rot. Cart. 1. Ed. 2. m. 24 vid. Rs 3d Vol, 1, 2, 3, 4.] which is witnessed by six Earls, and Adomar, or Americ de Valence ye King's Cosin; bearing Date at Dumfreys ye 6th of Augt. about a Month after ye Death of ye King his Father.

(2) yet this Earl did not long continue in ye Employmt. for a little before Michaelmas following, ye King revoked yt Commission, & conferred yt great Trust upon John of Bretaigne, Earl of Richmond, as appears by ye Letters Patents thereof. [Rot. Pat: 1. Ed. II. m. 20. Rs Coll: ib. p. 10]

(3) After that of York.

(4) As appears by ye King's Commission to the Sheriff of Northampton for yt Purpose [Rot: ~~Pat~~: Fin. 1. Ed. 2. m. 16. R's Coll: p. 11.]

(5) with strict Orders yt they should condemn him to make Satisfaction to all he had injured out of his temporal Estate, then seized in the King's Hands, as appears by ye Writt it self directed to Roger le Brabazon & his Fellow Justices.

(6) and was at last restored to his former Dignity of Ld Treasurer of England, in which he continued for some Time, as appears by ye Kings Letters Patents for yt Purpose dated at York 14. Martij A. R. 5 [Rot. Pat: 5. Ed: 2. pt. 2 m. 15. R's Coll. p. 310.] and this I suppose ye King did to ingratiate himself with ye Pope, & ye rest of ye Bps with whom yt Prelate was in great Esteem.

(1) and beſides what ye King had beſtow'd upon
* Pierce Gaveston in England, he alſo gave him ye County, or Earldom of Gaure, with divers Caſtles, Mannors, & Territories in Aquitain, as appears by ye King's Letters Patents dated 1. Jan. at Langley.
[Rot. Pat. 1. Ed. II. m. 5.

Anno Dom. MCCCVII.

d Eſtate of Gilbert Earl of Gloceſter, then a Minor; (1) ſo that the King's ondneſs was ſo great, that he could ſcarce be ever ſeparated from m as long as he lived; though it was very ſuſpicious, that his Dutiful egards to the King were chiefly for his own Intereſt; [1.] ſince he had e Confidence, through the King's Indulgence, to take the Treaſure d Jewels of the Crown, and deliver them to certain Foreign Mer-ants, to be tranſported abroad for his own Uſe. And Walter Hem-* ford farther relates, That he beſtowed upon him all the Money ich the late King had hoarded up, amounting to a hundred thou-d Pounds. (2)

[1.] Chron. MS. de Eveſham, in B i. Bodleian.

* In Chron. MS. in Bib. S. Trin. Cantab.

(2) For it ſeems, yt
Walter Reynolds,
Biſhop elect of Worcester, whom the King had made Treaſurer in the Room of him of Coventry and Litchfield was more com-plaiſant, than to put a Stop to any Grants (tho' never ſo exorbitant) that the King ſhould make to his Favourite.

Then * fifteen days after Michaelmas the King held a Parliament at orthampton; for the Proceedings [1.] of which, we muſt be behold-to our Hiſtorians, ſince we have no Records of it left upon the lls: and they [2.] inform us, that the King did here again confirm Pierce Gaveſton, the Title of Earl of Cornwall; and it was then likeiſe ordain'd, that the Coin of the late King Edward, though much diiniſhed in Weight, ſhould ſtill paſs currant, as formerly, upon pain Life and Members: And at the ſame time the Clergy gave the King
Fiſteenth; and the Laity, together with the Citizens and Burgeſſes, Twentieth Part of all their Movables; to which an Anonymous* Maſcript Author likewiſe adds, how the King farther ordain'd, That ſtrict Peace ſhould be preſerved in his whole Kingdom, and that the atute of Weſtminſter, which was made for that end, ſhould be obſerd in all its Articles: And moreover, appointed the day of his Father's neral to be on the Friday before the Feaſt of All-Saints, next coming; which divers Perſons of both the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, d ſeveral other Countries, out of curioſity reſorted. But I need ſay no ore of this here, having already mentioned it under the former Reign.

* Rot Clauſ. 1 Ed. 2. M 11. dorſ.

[2.] Chron. de Lan.

The K. calls a Parliament at Northampton; with the Tranſactions of it.

* In Bib. Bodleian. int. dig. p 170.

Not long after [3.] the King beſtowed his Niece Margaret, Siſter to e Earl of Gloceſter, on his Favourite the New Earl of Cornwall, who on the Wedding-day held a great Tournament at Wallingford; where ough he appeared in great Splendor, yet (as my Author ſays) he s ſtill encompaſſed with ſo great a Troop of Knights, his Partakers, at there was no faſtening ſo much as the Stroke of a Lance upon him, hich was a great blot to his Honour. Upon this Marriage, the King en alſo beſtowed upon him the Honours of Tickel and Berkhamſtead, ith divers other Lands; which encreaſed the Hatred and Envy of all e Nobility, to ſee a Man of Ordinary Birth, and no Extraordinary ualities, by the Partial Favour of his Prince, to obtain ſuch great Hours, as well as Eſtate.

[3] Id. Ib.

The King marries his Neice, Siſter to the Earl of Gloceſter, to the new Earl of Cornwall.

The reſt of this Winter being only ſpent in Feaſtings and Jollity, I ſs over; but in Scotland the King's Forces met with better ſucceſs than uld be expected, the ill poſture of his Affairs conſidered; [4] for, the rl of Pembroke having ſurrender'd his Commiſſion of General, and turning into England, the King beſtowed the Government of Scotland on John Earl of Bretaigne, who raiſing a freſh Army, marched againſt e Scots, and engaging with their King Robert about Martinmaſs, put m and his Forces to flight, ſo that he was fain for ſafety, to have reurſe to his wonted Receſs, the Bogs and Mountains. This Action is e more remarkable, becauſe I find it not mentioned in any other Wri, either Scottiſh or Engliſh; yet it is certain, he ſoon recruited his rces, and recover'd his former State; for not long after [5.] he, together

[4.] Id. Ib.

John Earl of Bretaigne obtains a Victory againſt the Scottiſh King, and makes him again fly into the Mountains.

[5] Chron. de Lan.

gether with the Lord Edward his Brother, entred Galloway, and made all the Inhabitants pay him a great Ranſom or Tribute to eſcape plundering, &c. (1)

[1.] King Edward kept his Chriſtmas at the Mannor of Wye (belonging to the Abbot of Battle-Abby) with great magnificence and Luxury; as being a Prince, who much more Minded his Pleaſures, than any Serious Buſineſs. After that Solemnity was over, (2) he reſolved immediately to paſs beyond Sea, in order to marry ~~the Daughter of the King of France~~, and by his * Commiſſion appointed, his Favourite the Earl of Cornwall, his Guardian or Lieutenant of the Kingdom during his Abſence, with a very large Power of granting to all Cathedral and Conventual Churches Licenſe to chuſe Paſtors (that is, Biſhops and Abbots) and of giving his Conſent and Confirmation to ſuch Elections; as likewiſe taking the Fealties, and reſtoring the Temporalities to ſuch Elected Perſons; as alſo of beſtowing all Prebends and Benefices belonging to the Crown; and laſtly, of diſpoſing of all Lordſhips, receiving the Fealties of ſuch Wards as held of him in Capite, when the Heirs were of full Age, and thereby giving him full Authority ſo to do. This Patent bears date at Dover, the 18th of January, and is upon Record in the Tower; which though Dr. Brady hath cited, and publiſh'd in his Appendix, yet he hath not thought fit truly to recite all the Particulars contain'd in this Commiſſion, as he ſhould have done.

So ſoon as the [2.] King had paſſed this Commiſſion, he immediately took Shipping, and went over to Bologne, to meet Philip King of France; and when he had perform'd his Homage to him for the Dutchy of Aquitain, and Earldom of Ponthieu, on the five and twentieth of January, he married Iſabella his Daughter, there being then preſent no leſs than four Kings, viz. Philip, Father to the young Princeſs, the King of Navarre his Son, the King of the Almans or Romans, and the King of Sicily, not to mention the two Queens of France and Navarre, beſides a great Number of the Nobility of both Nations; inſomuch that there was never ſeen a more magnificent Wedding: And it was indeed a wonder, how ſo ſmall a Town as that, ſhould be able to receive and lodge ſo many great Princes at one and the ſame time. (3)

After [3.] the Marriage Solemnity was well over, the King with his New Queen returned into England, where upon his Landing, all the Great Men of the Kingdom that had not accompanied him into France came to congratulate them; but he ſhewed to none there preſent ſuch high Marks of his Favour, as he did to the Earl of Cornwall; which ſtirred up the Envy and Hatred of the Nobility to that degree, that not long after it broke out againſt him.

For [2.] the day before the Coronation, the Earls and Barons being aſſembled, (who were all summon'd to this Solemnity) conſulted together concerning the State of the Kingdom; and as the beſt Means for its Settlement, they then beſought the King, That he would pleaſe to remove Pierce Gaveſton from his Preſence and Councils; and upon his Denial, they reſolved to put a ſtop to his Coronation; which the King underſtanding, He ſo far comply'd, as to promiſe them bonâ fide, that in caſe his Coronation might not be deferr'd, He would yield to whatever they ſhould require of him in the next Parliament. This Paſſage is omitted by Dr. Brady, tho' ſet down at large by Walſingham (whom he commonly cites); but what his Reaſon was for this Omiſſion, he beſt knew.

Then

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

[1.] T. W. The King prepares to paſs over into France, to marry that King's Siſter, and leaves the E of Cornwal Lieutenant of the Kingdom.

[2.] T. W. King Edward goes over to Bologne, and there having done his Homage, marries the Lady Iſabella.

[3.] Chron. Abing. The King returns into England, and ſhews the Earl of Cornwal ſo great Favour, as makes the reſt of the Nobility contrive his Ruin.

[2.] T. W. The Earls and Barons deſire the King to remove P. Gaveſton from his Preſence, and Councils; otherwiſe threaten to hinder his Coronation.

---

* Rot. Pat. Ed. 2. part 2. M. 28. printed in Dr. B's Appen. to his 2d. Vol. n. 49.

(1) As appears by the King's Writt to the Sheriffs of London, commanding them to provide Artillery and Provisions, for all which they were to be allowed [Pat. 1. Ed. II. pt. 1. m. 20. R— out of their Accounts to be sent to Berwick, and thence further into Scotland to put a Stop to the Burnings, and Devastations of Robert Bruce and his accomplices. This bears Date at Westm. October 5.

(2) He now reassumed the Thoughts of speedily consummating his Marriage with the Daughter of ye King of France; and to this End he by his Commission (still upon Record) [Rot: Rom: 1. Ed. 2. m. 11. R's Coll: p. 20, 21] appointed Anthony Bp. of Durham, John Bishop of Norwich, the Earls of Lincoln, Pembroke, & two ~~other~~ Barons therein mentioned his Procurators, and special Ambassadors, giving them, or any four of them full Power of agreeing and contracting Matrimony between ye King, and Isabella, Daughter to ye King of France. This bears Date at London on Novem: 6th [Vid. R—'s Coll. p. 21.] and by another Commission of ye same Date to ye same Purpose, he gives them Power to assign the sd. Lady a Jointure or Dowrie, and to swear on the King's behalf to perform it. Also by anothr. Commission of ye same Date ye sd. King grants the sd. Parties full Power to contract Matrimony with ye said Princess pr. verba de presenti; all which Preliminaries being now performed he resolved &c.

(3) But this Difficulty is easily solved if we suppose yt the greatest Part of ye Retinue of those Princes were lodg'd in Farm Houses, or else in Tents and Pavilions without ye Town, tho' it was ye winter. This appears from ye King's Writt [Rot. Pat: 1. Ed. 2. pt. 1. m. 4. R—'s Coll: p. 43] or Letter on ye Rolls, directed to all his faithful Subjects, commanding them not to injure but to be aiding, & assisting to Elias de Alamb[illegible], who was appointed to transport all Materials for erecting Tents at Bologne in Order to this Solemnity. This bears Date at Westminster Decem. 14.

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

Then [3.] on the 25th of February, the King with his new Queen were Crown'd at Weſtminſter with mighty Pomp, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, being Authorized to perform that Solemnity by a ſpecial Commiſſion from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was then at Avignon: There were preſent at this Coronation the Lord Charles, and the Lord Lewis of Clermont, Brothers to the King of France; the Dukes of Brabant, and Earl of Savoy, with divers other great Lords and Ladies of both Kingdoms: And that which was moſt taken notice of at this Solemnity, was, That the [4.] new Earl of Cornwall carried the Crown of St. Edward: This, together with the ſplendid Garb he then appeared in, above the reſt of the Nobility, ſerved to provoke them more againſt him than ever.

[3.] Id. ib.

The K. and Q. are Crown'd at Weſtminſter; at which P. Gaveſton incurs greater Hatred.

* And it is very remarkable yt ye Form of ye Coronation Oath then taken by ye King is ye most ancient we have now extant, an old copy of which was in the Custody of ye laborious Mr. Petit Keeper of the Tower Records: and is published in R—'s Coll: 3d. vol. p. 63.

[4.] Chron. S. Aug. in Bib. Bened.

I find nothing elſe worth noting under this Year, [5.] but that our Author places the Tournament which Pierce Gaveſton held at Wallingford, preſently after the King's Coronation; whereas the nameleſs * Author above-mention'd, places both that and his Marriage with the Earl of Gloceſter's Siſter, before that time, as I have already obſerved. But whenever it was, it is agreed on all hands, that he by the means of thoſe Foreign Knights that took his part, was then too hard for the Chief Noblemen of England, who are there named; viz. the Earls of Hereford, Pembroke, Lancaſter, and Surrey; who being all highly provoked by their late Affront, as alſo for ſome Nicknames, and other ſcurrilous Language he had given them, from that time forward conſpired how they might ruin this Inſolent Favourite.

[5.] T. W.

* In Bib. Bod.

Gaveſton holds a great Tournament.

But the Chronicle of St. Auguſtin's * in Canterbury, (already cited) gives a different Account of this Tournament, and the Conſequences of it; which he ſays was held at London preſently after the Coronation; when the King, being concern'd for the ſafety of his Minion, becauſe the Earl of Lancaſter, and the reſt of the diſcontented Barons were of the contrary Party, commanded the Gates of the City to be ſhut all the day, that none of the Engliſh or French Lords (of whom there were many now come over) ſhould go out to hold the Tournament, according to their appointment: Which ſo diſpleaſed theſe French Noblemen, that they immediately return'd home. Upon which the Favourite became ſo inſolent, that the Earls of Lincoln, Hereford, and Pembroke, not being able any longer to endure it, got together their Retinues, and broke into the New Temple (where he then lodged), but he having had ſome Intimation of their Deſign, was before retired to Wallingford Caſtle; and not thinking himſelf ſafe there neither, went to the King (who was then at Windſor) for his greater Security: But the Earls above-mention'd, with other Barons of their Party, not finding the Favourite where they expected him, were reſolved to ſeize him whereever they could; ſo meeting at Ware, they went from thence to Northampton, and iſſued out Summons to the reſt of the Barons to come thither to a Treaty or Council, which they intended to hold there concerning the great Affairs of the Kingdom; threatning thoſe who ſhould neglect to come in to them, with no leſs than the plundering and deſtroying of their Houſes and Eſtates. So that the King, not having any Forces to oppoſe them, was forced to ſummon a Parliament to meet fifteen days after: Which being met accordingly, [1.] divers Articles were laid to the Charge of this Favourite; as, abuſing of the King's Ear, by obtaining immoderate Grants for himſelf; his imbezzling the Trea-

* In Bib. Ben.

Another Relation of this Tournament.

The Earls of Lincoln, Hereford, &c. not able to endure this Favourite's Inſolence, reſolve to ſeize him; which he avoids by flying to Wallingford Caſtle.

The diſcontented Lords hold a Council at Northampton.

The K. forc'd to ſummon a Parl. where divers Articles are laid to his Charge.

[1.] Chron. John Triclow, cited by Stow.

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

[2.] Chron. S. Aug.

Treaſure of the Kingdom, and taking the beſt Jewels of the Crown to his own Uſe. Then [2.] the King hoping to divide the Barons, and take off ſome of thoſe that had been leaſt provoked, offer'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of Durham, with the Earls of Lancaſter and Hereford, that he would refer all Differences to them, and confirm whatſoever they ſhould judge moſt fit to be done on this Occaſion: But theſe Biſhops and Lords would not undertake the Odium of that Arbitration, but ſaid, they would act nothing without the general Conſent of all the reſt of the Barons, who would not be ſatisfied with any thing leſs, than that the Earl of Cornwall ſhould immediately quit the Kingdom: Which the King delaying to grant, they were about to take Arms; But fearing the evil Conſequence of a downright Denyal, [3.] after great Diſputes between the King and the Great Men of the Kingdom, he was at laſt forced (though much againſt his Will) to agree to the Baniſhment of his Favourite out of England for ever: All the Kindneſs he could then obtain for him, being only that he might go over and continue in Ireland: Which Sentence was paſſed againſt him about the Feaſt of Aſcenſion, and he had time given him until the day after that of St. John Baptiſt (or Five and twentieth of June) for his going over.

[3.] Contin. Nich. Trivet in Bib. Offic. Herald.

The King is forced to conſent to his Baniſhment.

A difference among our Hiſtorians concerning the time of his Baniſhment.

There is, I confeſs, ſome difference amongſt our Hiſtorians, both in Print and Manuſcript, about the time of this Tranſaction: Walſingham (whom Dr. Brady follows) places the firſt Baniſhment of Pierce Gaveſton under 1311 (as it is falſly put in the printed Copies), and makes his firſt Baniſhment into Ireland, and that into Flanders, to have happen'd all in the ſame Year, which is a great Miſtake: For the [4.] Annals of Worceſter, written by a Monk of that time, place his going over into Ireland under this Year; as do alſo Ranulph Higden's Polychronicon, and Adam Murymuth's Manuſcript Chronicle of this King's Reign: And though it does not directly ſay that he was baniſhed this Year, yet ſets down his Return from Exile under the next. But to put this matter out of doubt, I ſhall give you the Authority of an Antient * Chronicle in the Bodleian Library, (often cited by Sir William Dugdale in his Baronage of England) ſuppoſed to belong to the Abby of Eveſham.

[4.] In Angl. Sacra, Vol. I.

* Int. Laud. K. 84.

This Chronicle (under this Year) relates, That the King holding his Parliament at London about the Feaſt of Aſcenſion, was by certain * Letters ſent from the Pope, as alſo at the general Requeſt and Importunity of the Barons, forced to conſent that Pierce Gaveſton ſhould quit the Kingdom the Morrow after Midſummer-day, and never to return more. And the Continuator of Nicholas Trivet's Chronicle farther adds, That the Earls of Lincoln, Gloceſter, Hereford, Warwick, Arundel, Pembroke and Warren, with many Barons and Great Men who had met at the New Temple in London, were not only content with this his Baniſhment, but fearing leſt the King ſhould procure his Return, cauſed him to make theſe following Letters-Patents under his Great Seal.

* Vid. Rot. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 2. m. 8. dorſ. Yet it is proved to have hapned under this Year.

[5.] Id. ib. The King's Letters Patents for his Baniſhment.

[5.] 'Edward, by the Grace of God, King of England; To all who 'ſhould ſee theſe preſent Letters, Greeting, &c. We make known unto 'you by theſe Preſents, That from this time unto the day that the Lord
'Pierce Gaveſton is to abjure and depart our Kingdom (to wit) on the 'Nativity of St. John Baptiſt next enſuing, we ſhall as far as in us lies
'do nothing, nor permit any thing to be done, whereby the Baniſh-
'ment of the ſaid Lord Pierce may be any ways hinder'd or retarded;
'but that according to the Form that hath been ordain'd by the Prelates,
'Earls,

Anno Dom.
MCCCVIII.

arls, and Barons of our Kingdom, and confirm'd by Us with our free onſent, it may be fully perfected. In Teſtimony of which we have uſed theſe our Letters to be made Patents. Given at Weſtminſter the ighth day of May, in the firſt Year of our Reign. *

* This Declaration being in French is also entered on the Patent Roll of this year, with this Difference from that now cited, that instead of Nativity of St John, it is the Morrow after that Festival which was appointed for his Departure.
[Pat. 1. Ed. 2. m. 3. R.'s Coll. p. 89]

[1.] Id. ib.

[1.] Theſe Letters were read in the Preſence and Audience of the eat Men of the whole Kingdom, on the day above-mentioned: But s was not thought ſufficient; for at the ſame time the Archbiſhop of terbury, with the other Biſhops and Prelates of the Church, being mbled in a Synod, thunder'd out their Sentence of Excommunication inſt the ſaid Pierce Gaveſton, if he ſhould remain in England beyond day prefix'd; and againſt all ſuch as ſhould preſume to adviſe, aſ- , ſuſtain, receive, or adhere to him, or do any thing whereby his ſaid ſage over ſhould be hinder'd; with the like Clauſe againſt all who uld favour, adviſe, or procure his Return.

But ſince this Sentence is expreſs'd at large in the ſaid Chronicle of eſham, and that it is no where elſe to be found, as well as the King's claration above-mention'd, I ſhall from the above-cited Author give the Subſtance of it, and the Proceedings thereupon: Being to this ect.

The Ordinance of the King, Biſhops, and Peers, concerning the ſame matter.

' That whereas Edward King of England had ſummon'd the Prelates, arls, Barons, and other Great Men of the Kingdom, to his Parliament Weſtminſter, Fifteen days after Eaſter, to do and ordain thoſe things hich ſhould be for the Honour of God and Holy Church; who all eeting at the ſame place, and divers great Diſſentions then ariſing, the Trouble of the ſaid Kingdom; of which it being found and ap- aring, that the Lord Pierce Gaveſton was the chief Occaſion; erefore by the Will of the King, and the Conſent of the Pre- tes, it was ordain'd, That the ſaid Lord Pierce ſhould depart the ingdom on the Morrow after the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt next com- g, not to return any more into the ſame: And that the Archbiſhop Canterbury, and the Prelates there preſent, for the better obſervance the ſaid Ordinance, were deſired by the King, the Earls and Ba- ons, to publiſh the Sentence of the Greater Excommunication againſt l Tranſgreſſors of it, to this purpoſe.

The Sentence of Excommunication pronounced by the Archbiſhop and Biſhops againſt all ſuch as ſhould hinder Gaveſton's Departure.

'The ſaid ABp, by the Aſſiſtance of his Brethren the Biſhops, in com- liance with the deſires of the ſaid King and Lords, and for the Tran- uility of the Kingdom, do hereby admoniſh and exhort Pierce Gaveſton, hat on the day above-mention'd he do depart the Kingdom, according the Tenor of the ſaid Ordinance and Proviſion; and further com- nands him, on pain of the Greater Excommunication, then immediate- to be pronounced againſt him, That he do not preſume to ſtay in ngland beyond the ſaid day, or to enter into it any more after his eparture: With the like Sentence againſt thoſe who ſhould give any vour, Conſent, or Counſel for his Return, or for his Stay here beyond e ſaid day, or ſhould receive him if he ſo return'd; the Perſons of e King and Queen his Wife only excepted: Yet with Licenſe to the id Pierce quietly to remain here, or to paſs through the Kingdom, gether with his Family, until the day appointed for his Baniſhment, ithout any hurt or prejudice to be done to him from the ſaid Earls, arons, or other Great Men their Adherents.

' And farther, the ſaid Archbiſhop publickly prohibits all Perſons hatſoever, to do, procure, or accept any thing, whereby the Premi-

' ſes

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

'ſes may be rendred ineffectual, under pain of the Greater Excommunication: And moreover commands all the Biſhops of his Province to 'cauſe this preſent Sentence to be publiſhed throughout their Dioceſes. This Sentence bears Date in a Synod held at Oxford the nineteenth day of May, Anno Dom. 1308.

[2.] Ib.

The King accompanies his Favourite as far as Briſtol; who thence paſſes into Ireland.

Then [2.] the King, not daring, for fear of the Cenſures of th Church, any longer to retain his Favourite with him, bore him Company as far as Briſtol, from whence he went over into Ireland, with his Lady and Siſter; the King having aſſign'd him the whole Government of that Countrey for his Maintenance, beſides a great deal of Treaſure which was there ſpent.* Yet to give this Favourite his due, he gain'd much Love and Reputation there, by his great Courteſy and Liberality, and by making War againſt the O Brians and other Rebellious Iriſh, with good Succeſs: And it had been happy for his Maſter, as well as himſelf, if he had ſtill continued in that Kingdom.

* And it appears by yt Kings Letters Patents bearing Date at Reading yt 2d June [Pat. 1. Ed. 2. m. 3. Rls Coll. p. 93] directed to all Arch Bishops, & all other Degrees of Men in yt Kingdom, yt he now appointed Pierce de Gavestone Earl of Cornwall his Ld. Lieutenant in yt Kingdom with full Power to present to all Churches & Benefices, and yt they shd be as obedient to him as to the King himself.

[3.] Chron. de Lanercoſt.

The Scots invade Galloway, and ſubdue that Country.

In [3.] the mean while the Scots made this uſe of the Diſſentions between the King and his Nobility, that their King Robert, with his Brother the Lord Edward, again entred Galloway, and killing many of th Gentry and other Inhabitants, wholly ſubdued that Country to his Allegiance.

But ſince I find no other Civil Affairs of Moment to have happen'd this Year, I ſhall now give you an Account of the Eccleſiaſtical.

[4] Chron. N. T.

The Pope ſends into England, in favour of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

[4.] Robert ABp of Canterbury having been for above theſe two Year ſuſpended ab Officio & Beneficio by the Pope's Authority, and alſo cited to Rome, there to anſwer to what ſhould be laid to his Charge on th late King's behalf (as hath been already related in his Reign) upon his Death, obtain'd ſo much Favour of the Pope, as that he ſent over into England to the preſent King, to know if he would proſecute the Accuſation that had been laid by his Father againſt him. To which th King return'd this Anſwer, That he neither knew of, nor intended to charg him with any Crime, but look'd upon him as his Good Father, and Lawf Paſtor; whom he much deſir'd to ſee in England, that he might agai feed and govern his Flock. At this Meſſage the Pope's Diſpleaſur was not wholly abated, but he gave Orders to his Nuncio William d Teſta, who had been ſole Adminiſtrator both in Temporals and Spiritu als of that Archbiſhoprick during his Abſence, That he ſhould reſtor to him all the Arrears of the Rents and Revenues thereof, that ha been received while he was abroad, [5.] ſo that he became Richer tha ever he was before; and thus what was deſign'd for his prejudice, turn at laſt to his advantage. Then the Archbiſhop having taken his Leav of the Pope, with great Acknowledgments for his Favour and Juſtic left Rome, and arrived in England about the latter end of March.

Upon the K.'s withdrawing the Accuſation againſt him, he is reſtored to his Archbiſhoprick.

[5] Chron. Adam Murymuth's MS. in Bib. Herald.

The Order of Knights Templars diſſolved by the Pope. With a brief Hiſtory of them.

[1.] Matt. Paris, f. 67.

The next matter of Moment I find to have happen'd this Year, the Diſſolution of that Great and Wealthy Order of the Knights Templars; which tho it began the laſt Year in France, yet was not proſec ted in England until now. But before I give you the Reaſon of its Di ſolution, I ſhall ſet down a ſhort Account of its Original: This Ord had its Riſe in the Holy Land, A. D. 1118. [1.] by the Favour of Bal win King of Jeruſalem, who aſſign'd them part of his own Palace, ne the South Gate, adjoining to the Temple of the Lord, from whenc they were called Templars. Their firſt Profeſſion was, for the Remiſſio of their Sins, to guard the Highways for the ſafety of Pilgrims, an ſuc

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

ſuch as came to viſit the Holy Sepulchre, and to defend them from Thieves and Robbers: And it is reported by the ſame Hiſtorian, that in the ſpace of One hundred and twenty ſix Years, they obtain'd no leſs than Nine thouſand Mannors in Chriſtendom. This great Increaſe of theirs in Revenues and Riches, as well as their Neglect and Non obſervance of the firſt Inſtitution of their Order, procured them Envy; their Luxury, Pride, and moſt horrid and deteſtable Crimes, which were reported, and objected to them, raiſed the general Hatred of Chriſtendom againſt them: So that within Sixty three Years after, viz. A. D. 1307. (when they were then poſſeſſed of Sixteen thouſand Lordſhips) on the Twelfth of October laſt paſt, by Command of Philip King of France, and with the Conſent of Pope Clement the Fifth, all the Templars in France were ſecured, their Houſes, Lands, Poſſeſſions, Goods, Treaſure, Church-Ornaments, and Writings ſeized on, and delivered to certain Guardians, under whoſe Cuſtody and Adminiſtration they remained for ſome time.

Id. p 615.

Mezeray ad hunc Ann.

Theſe things were tranſacted the laſt Year in France; and now in England (by the like Authority of the Pope) it was * ordain'd by the King and his Council, [1.] 'That all the Templars in every County 'in England, Scotland, Ireland, Weſt-Wales, North-Wales, and Earldom 'of Cheſter, but more particularly thoſe in England, ſhould be attach'd 'on Wedneſday next after the Feaſt of Epiphany (or Sixth of January) 'and that all their Lands, Tenements, Goods, and Chattels, as well Ec'cleſiaſtick as Temporal, with their Charters, Writings, and all Muni'ments, ſhould be ſeized into the King's hands; that their Goods and 'Chattels ſhould be inventory'd and appraiſed, and Indentures made of 'them in the preſence of the Guardian or Maſter of every Place, and in 'the preſence of two lawful men, whereof one to remain with the 'Guardian, and the other with the Sheriff; the Live Stock to be kept 'upon the Premiſes, and the Lands to be plowed up and ſown to the 'beſt advantage: That the Bodies of the Templars ſhould be kept ſafe 'in convenient places, other than their own, but not to be put in vile 'and baſe Priſons, unleſs the King ſhould order otherwiſe; and that 'every one according to his Condition ſhould receive a competent 'Maintenance from theſe Goods.' There is alſo contain'd in this Record the manner how this Ordinance was put in execution.

* Rot. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 2. m. 12. dorſ.

[1.] H.K. col. 2531.

The Knights-Templars order'd by the K and Council to be ſeiz'd all over England.

* whose Bulle for this affair is still preserved, & is printed in R—'s Coll. 3d. vol. p. 30.

Some time before this, the [2.] chief Crimes laid to the Charge of the Knights Templars being Hereſy, their Cauſe was removed from the Secular Courts in France, to the Pope himſelf; wherefore many of the principal Templars were carried to Poictiers, where the Pope then was; and being there interrogated concerning the Articles laid to their Charge, Seventy two of them confeſſed, that at their Reception into the Order, they denied Jeſus Chriſt, beſides many other Crimes, which were ſo horrible, that the Pope would not inſert them in his Bull; yet their Depoſitions were taken in writing, before the Biſhop of Præneſte and two Legates ſent into France, beſides three Cardinals. Upon this there was alſo by that King's Command, a Commiſſion granted to the Pope's Inquiſitor, and certain Gentlemen of the Country, to examine the reſt of the Knights-Templers upon the Articles laid to their Charge; of whom One Hundred and Forty confeſſed, that at their being admitted into the Order, they were made to deny Jeſus Chriſt, and ſpit three times upon a Crucifix that was preſented to them; and tho'

[2] P. Putean. de la Condemnation des Templars, p. 8, 9, 10, 11, & deinde.

The Proceedings againſt them in France.

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

A great many of them confeſs the Crimes laid to their Charge.

tho' they forſwore the Carnal Uſe of Women, yet owned that it was Lawful whenever they pleaſed, to have Carnal Knowledge of each other; with divers other Particulars ſo very abominable, that it were nauſeous to relate them: Beſides which, (as ſome of them confeſſed) they Adored a Wooden Head gilt, with a great Beard; which was only brought forth at their General Chapters.

* Ad A. D. 1311.

[3.] P. Patean. ib. p. 38, 39, & dein. The reſt of the Proceedings againſt them in France.

Much the ſame Crimes were alſo laid to the Charge of the Knights-Templars, ſome time after, in England, as * Walſingham relates; who tho they confeſſed the Common Fame or Report, yet denied the Matter of Fact; of which you will hear more hereafter. But [3.] as for thoſe in France, the Author firſt cited tells us, the Grand Maſter James de Molay, or Mauleu, and Hugh de Peraldo, being examined among the reſt, confeſſed the ſame Crimes; and there were but Three of the whole Number, who affirm'd they had never ſeen any Ill in the Order. Yet nevertheleſs a freſh Examination of this Affair was ordered by the Pope, before certain Biſhops and other Clergymen, appointed by him as Commiſſioners for that purpoſe; who having cauſed the great Maſter of the Order, with his Superiors and the reſt of their Brethren, to be brought before ſome of them at Paris, Penzard de Gyriac one of the Superiors told the Commiſſioners, that the Templars in many Places had been grievouſly Racked; that all they had confeſſed was for Fear of Death, and that ſome of them died amidſt their Torments.

[4] Ib p. 47. The Sentence that was given in a Council in France againſt them.

[4.] And not long after, a Provincial Council of the Clergy of the Province of Sens being held at Paris, the Cauſe of the Templars was there again heard, and after a long and tedious Proceſs, divers of them were ſentenced, ſome to Penance, others to end their Lives between Four Walls; and Fifty Nine of them being degraded were deliver'd over to the Secular Power, and by that condemned to be burnt alive; the Chief of whom were the Great Maſter and ſeveral other Superiors of the Order; who at their Execution declared themſelves Innocent, and all that had been laid to their Charge was falſe; to the great Aſtoniſhment of all there preſent.

[5.] Ib. Four of the Knights offer to juſtify their Order.

Beſides theſe [5.] there were Four more of the Chief Knights who offered to defend their Order, and by their Procurators averr'd, that the Articles ſent by the Pope were deteſtable and wicked Lies, made and forg'd by ſome falſe Brethren and Enemies to the Order. And that the King of France firſt, and then the Pope had been deluded and impos'd upon by theſe men. That the Brethren of the Temple that had confeſſed and told ſo many Lies, had done it for fear of Death and Torments; as being hired and ſuborned ſo to do. And laſtly, they proteſted againſt whatſoever the Fugitives or Apoſtates from their Order, who had been caſt out for their Wickedneſs, ſhould depoſe againſt them, and whatever thoſe their Brethren that were impriſoned, as alſo thoſe that were corrupted by Money, Promiſes, or terrified by Fear of Death, ſhould confeſs to the Prejudice of their Order. Theſe and many other things contain'd in the Reaſon and Article of Defence deliver'd in Writing to the Pope's Commiſſioners, the Reader may find at large in my Author cited in the Margin. But they all proved of none effect; for Pope Clement by his Bull wholly diſſolved the ſaid Order, and about Eleven Years after procured his Sentence to be confirm'd by a General Council held at Vienne in Dauphine; as ſhall be mentioned more at large hereafter.

Anno Dom. MCCCVIII.

[1.] X. Script. Col. 1730. n. 10, 20, 30 Tho. Stubbs's Juſtification of the Templars.

But however guilty divers particular Members of this Order might have been, yet it is next to incredible to believe, that they ſhould almoſt all of them be ſo; not only of denying Chriſt, but of falling into direct Idolatry: And as for thoſe in England [1.] Thomas Stubbs in his Account of the Acts of William Greenfield, then Archbiſhop of York, gives this very ſhort Account of it. That at the Provincial Synods held at London and York, before the Archbiſhop and Biſhops of thoſe Cities, the Templars were ſolemnly cited and examined by the Pope's Apppointment, upon certain Articles framed againſt them; to which they gave competently Satisfactory Anſwers; and tho' they were accuſed of many Crimes, yet nothing was found for which the Order might ſeem juſtly to be diſſolv'd. So that it is very probable, the Pope and King of France envying the Riches, as well as Magnificence and Pride of this Order, might agree together to diſſolve it, that ſo they might ſhare their Wealth and great Revenues between them. And as the Pope had all their Moveable and Perſonal Eſtates, ſo the King of France hoped to have poſſeſſed himſelf of their Real: For * Walſingham gives us this ſhort Account of the whole Matter; That Philip King of France thought to have made one of his Sons King of Jeruſalem, to obtain for him all the Rents and Revenues of the Knights-Templars; therefore upon this Occaſion he cauſed many of them, and the Great Maſter of the Order, to be burnt in his own Kingdom, and procured the whole Order to be diſſolved in the Council of Vienne: But he miſſed of his Purpoſe; and the Pope not without a great Sum of Money gave them to the Hoſpitallers: But of this more hereafter. In the mean time (I hope) what I have here ſaid will not ſeem tedious to any Curious Reader, who perhaps may be deſirous to know the Beginning, Progreſs, and Diſtinction of this Great Military Order, which in former Ages, made ſo great a Figure, not only in Europe, but in Syria and Paleſtine.

* Ad. A. D. 1311. Walſingham's Account why the K of France was ſevere againſt them.

As for the Affairs of Scotland, I find nothing conſiderable done there, [2.] But that about the latter End of this Year, King Robert, during the Diſſentions between the Barons and King Edward, returned from his Faſtneſſes in the Mountains; and becauſe Edward was not as yet in a Condition to march againſt the Scots, he ſent about Chriſtmas the Earl of Glouceſter with ſome other Noblemen to make a Peace with King Robert; but all they could then procure was a Truce, to continue no longer than till the Feaſt of All-Saints next enſuing.

[2.] Chron. Wal. Hemingford in Bib. S. Trin. Cantab. The K. & Barons deſire Peace of the K of Scots, but obtain only a ſhort Truce.

Anno Dom. MCCCIX.

[3.] Chron. Lan. K. Robert is abſolved by the Pope's Nuncios for the Murther of L. Comyn; and the Pope alſo ſent Nuncios to him, commanding him not to moleſt K. Edward, who is forc'd to make a Truce with him.

In the Beginning of this Year, the Scots obtain'd ſo much Favour at Rome; [3.] that in Lent there came certain Nuncio's from the Pope (who had ſometime before abſolved King Robert for his Murther of the Lord Comyn) to King Edward, to require him not to moleſt the Scots any further; and he likewiſe ſent other Nuncio's to the Scottiſh King, to order him to keep the Peace, and on that condition he ſhould quietly enjoy whatſoever he had won from the Engliſh in Scotland. But he did not at all regard thoſe Propoſals, but went on Conquering more Places in Scotland during the greateſt Part of the enſuing Summer, when there was another Truce concluded between him and King Edward for ſome Months. But the King had then other Affairs in his Head: For being very Melancholy for want of Pierce Gaveſton's Company, which he had been for ſome time deprived of, ſent for him over from Ireland in Autumn; and he returning into England about the beginning of September, the King upon the News of it was ſo

Anno Dom. MCCCIX.

[4] Chron. S. Aug.

P. Gaveſton returns into England, which diſcontents the Engliſh Nobility.

well pleas'd, that he took a Journey as far as Cheſter to meet him, and brought him along with him into the South Parts of the Kingdom; where he Adviſed and Govern'd as entirely as he did before: [4] Which was ſo highly ſtomach'd by the Nobility and Clergy, that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury would not be preſent in any Parliament this Year, not only upon this Account, but becauſe the King at that time ſtill unjuſtly detain'd Walter Biſhop of Coventry cloſe Priſoner at York, for the Reaſons already mentioned, contrary to the Rights and Privileges of the Church at that Time.

† Rot. Clauſ. 2 Ed. 2. m 4. in Scedula.

* Eod Rot.

A Parliament after Eaſter, wherein the K. confirms Magna Charta.

[5] C. W. H.

* Eod. Rot.

And it appears from the † Rolls of this Year, which is alſo mentioned in Hemingford's Chronicle, that there were ſeveral Parliaments, or Great Councils then held; which are not mentioned in our Printed Hiſtorians; as particularly, * that Parliament at Weſtminſter in the Beginning of Lent, which was afterwards Adjourned till a Month after Eaſter; [5] wherein the King confirm'd the Great Charter, and that of Foreſts; in Conſideration of which the Lords and Commons then Granted him the Twenty Fifth Penny of all their Perſonal Eſtates: Yet they would by no means agree that Pierce Gaveſton ſhould be Earl of Cornwall, or continue in England.

× But I since find by ye Patent Rolls of this Year, [Pat. 3 Ed. 2. m. 43. d. & R—'s Coll. p. 147, 148.] yt ye King during ye sitting of this great Council, issued out his general Summons to all Earls, & Barons to be ready with their Horses & Arms at New Castle upon Tyne on Michaelmas Day next ensuing in Order to march against ye Scots; but why those Summons took no Effect you will see in ye next Page.

Another great Council at Stanford, where the Lords are more favourable.

[5] C. W. H.

* Rot. Clauſ. 3 Ed. 3. m dorſ.

And not long after this, another * Great Council or Parliament was held at Stanford on the Twenty Sixth of July, to Suppreſs the Malice of the Scots; tho' I do not find any thing done in perſuance thereof [5.] only that the King ſo far prevail'd with the Major Part of the Nobility there preſent, that they were content Pierce Gaveſton ſhould enjoy the Earldom of Cornwall during his Life; and this I ſuppoſe he procured by giving Gracious Anſwers to thoſe Articles of Grievances which had been preſented to him in the Laſt Parliament at Weſtminſter, tho' he did not promiſe to ſee them Redreſſed till this at Stanford.

[1.] C. W. H.

The K holds a Council at York, to which the Noblemen of the oppoſite Party refuſe to come.

[1.] After this the King held a Council of ſome of the Nobility of his Party on the Eighteenth Day of October, at York, but to this Meeting the Earls of Warwick, Lancaſter, Oxford, Lincoln and Arundel refuſed to come, becauſe Pierce Gaveſton appear'd there as Earl of Cornwall: Which ſhews that either theſe Lords were not preſent, or elſe did not agree to what the reſt of the Barons had done juſt before.

Walſingham, as alſo Hemingford, place the Marriage of Pierce Gaveſton with the Siſter of the Earl of Gloceſter, preſently after his Return out of Ireland, and the late Council at Stanford, in which they are miſtaken; for the two Manuſcript Chronicles in the Bodleian Library, do more rightly place it the Autumn before the King's Coronation, when not long after he held that great Tournament at Berkhamſtead, already mentioned. But however, we may thus far believe Walſingham's Authority, that this Favourite had then ſo great an Aſcendant over the King, that he preſum'd to deſpiſe and reproach the Great Men of the Kingdom; and ſo powerfully wrought upon the Eaſineſs of his Nature, that without ever taking the Advice of the Great Lords of his Council, He acted all things by the ſole Influence of this Favourite; whoſe Indiſcretion as well as Covetouſneſs was ſuch, as to leave the King's Coffers ſo bare of Money, that He had not ſometimes wherewithal to defray the uſual Expences of his Family: and the Queen herſelf was ſo ſtraiten'd for her neceſſary Allowance, that ſhe was forced to write Letters of Complaint to her Brother the King of France; tho' all (it ſeems) to no purpoſe.

Gaveſton deſpiſes the Great Men of the Kingdom, and tranſacts all things without their advice.

At [2.] which the Earls and Barons were ſo enraged, that they plainly told the King, that unleſs he would baniſh Pierce Gaveſton, they would all riſe againſt him as a Perjur'd Prince; whereupon, by the Advice of his Favourite, he ſent for Aid into Gaſcoigne to the Earl of Foix and the Viſcount of Henoy; who as they paſſed with Three hundred Horſe through France, were ſet upon by that King's Order, and ſome of them kill'd, and others impriſon'd; which broke the Neck of that Deſign.

About the ſame time likewiſe, [3.] the Abbot of St. Denis, who was ſent Legate from the Pope, to demand the Legacy that the late King Edward had bequeath'd for the Holy Land, did earneſtly beſeech the King to remove Pierce Gaveſton from his Preſence; but it met with no effect. After which, the King hoping to divert this diſcontented Humour of his Barons, ſummon'd a Great Council to meet at Northampton, determining from thence to march into Scotland: But the Barons coming to this Aſſembly well armed and appointed, the King ſent them word he would not be there; yet at laſt he went as far as Stony-Stratford, whither came to him from the Barons, the Earls of Warwick and Clare, who requeſted him to come thither for his own Honour, and the Good of the Realm; ſo at length he was prevail'd upon to go thither, tho but in an ordinary Garb, and the Barons met him without any Arms: At laſt they agreed, and were outwardly made Friends, tho our Author does not tell us upon what Terms; but it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe that it was upon the King's Promiſe to give them all due Satisfaction concerning their Demands againſt the Earl of Cornwall, and for the Redreſs of thoſe other Grievances they complain'd of in the former Parliament. But I much doubt whether the Council ſaid by our Author to meet at Northampton, were any other than that mentioned by Hemingford to have been at Stanford; ſince the Cauſes and buſineſs of their meeting ſeem to be much the ſame.

Anno Dom. MCCCIX.

[2.] Chron. de Dunſt. cited by John Stow.

The King rather than part with him, ſends into Gaſcoigne for aſſiſtance.

[3.] Id. ib.

The Pope's Legate in vain beſeeches the K. to part with him; yet at laſt he calls a Council at Northampton; where he promiſes the Barons Satisfaction.

As for the Affairs of Scotland, the Scots having at the Inſtigation of the King of France broke the Truce which they had not long before concluded with the King (as appears by a Writ of Summons to a Parliament laſt Year) and having lately made ſeveral Incurſions into England, the King reſolved upon an Expedition in Perſon againſt them, and went as far as York for that purpoſe; as appears by his † Writs of Summons for a Parliament (dated there the 26th day of October precedent) which he intended ſhould meet at that City on the day after the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin, next. However, this Expedition was now put off, by reaſon of the Domeſtick Diſcontents of his Nobility: So that all the King did the reſt of this Year, was, That [4.] about Allhallontide he ſent the Lord Seagrave with ſufficient Forces to guard the Eaſt Marches near Berwick, and at the ſame time diſpatch'd away the Lord Clifford with another Detatchment,x to defend thoſe about Carliſle: So that acting only upon the defenſive, they did no more than conclude a Truce with the Scots till Chriſtmas, if the King ſhould conſent to it. Whereupon the Lord laſt mention'd went to him, to receive his Directions about it; and he agreeing to it, the Truce was afterwards prolong'd till Midſummer enſuing; for the Engliſh could not conveniently invade Scotland before that time, for want of Forage; and thus all things continued in the ſame ſtate between the two Kingdoms during all the reſt of this Year.x(2)

The

The Scots break the Truce; whereupon the K. ſummons a Parl. at York, but to little purpoſe.

* Rot. Clauſ. 2 Ed. 2. m. 5. dorſ.

† Clauſ. 3 Ed. 2. m. 17. dorſ.

[4.] Chron. de Lanercoſt.

The K. ſends the Lords Seagrave and Clifford to defend the Marches; who only conclude a ſhort Truce with them.

(1) x (whom he had lately appointed his General & commander in Chief of all the other Forces. [Rot. Scot 3o. Ed. 2. m. 44. vid. R's 3. Vol. p. 161.]

x I can find no more relating to the Affairs of Scotland, but this, hat in September Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glocester was appointed General of all ye King's orces; against King Robert Bruce, & ye Scots his accomplices; as appears by ye Commission Rot Scot: 3d. Edw. 2. R—'s Coll. p. 175] extant on ye Rolls of this Year. But what he did in Proecution of this Power I do not find: therefore I suppose ye subsequent Treaty hindred all further Proceedings at yt. Time

But I must not omit taking notice, that this Truce was made at ye Intercession of the King of France, as appears by the Commission granted by ye King [Rot. Scot. 3. Ed. 2. m. 12. Coll: p. 192.] to Robert de Umfreville, Earl of Angos, and others to treat with those of Scotland, concerning a Truce or Forbearance of Arms. This bears Date at Westminster ye 29th of Novbr.

Anno Dom. MCCCX.

[5.] T. W. *Clauſ 3Ed 2. m. 16. dorſ. The diſcontented Lords reſolve to drive Gaveſton out of the Kingdom.

The [5.] King having kept his Chriſtmas at Windſor with great Magnificence, not long after held a * Parliament at London, viz. at Candlemaſs, which (as I have ſaid above) had been appointed to meet at York: But now the Diſcontents of the Lords and Great Men of the Kingdom broke out more violent than ever; for Pierce Gaveſton ſtill continued his wonted Courſes, in taking of Bribes for the diſpatch of Buſineſs at Court, which Money he tranſported by Foreign Merchants beyond Sea: Whereupon the Great Men with other Faithful Subjects of the Kingdom, finding the King every day more and more to dote upon this Favourite, and that he cared for no man's Company, nor would follow any other Perſon's Counſel but his, ſo that no Affairs could be diſpatch'd without his Advice and Conſent; they were ſo highly provoked to ſee a Raw Young Man, and a Foreigner, without either Virtue or Wiſdom, preferr'd before and rais'd above them, not only in the King's Favour, but alſo in the Great Offices and Employments of the Kingdom, that they conſulted together, and reſolved to drive him out of it, leſt he ſhould bring in more of his Countreymen, and by their Aſſiſtance annull and deſtroy the Ancient Laws and Cuſtoms of the Nation.

[1.] Id. ib. To which end the Nobility in Parl. addreſs the K. to let them draw up Articles for the Government of the Kingdom.

And [1.] this Animoſity againſt him increaſed to ſuch a height, that according to the Cuſtoms of the Engliſh (when reduced to any great Straits) they reſolved they would firſt addreſs themſelves to the King, upon this as well as other Grievances; and therefore the Earls and Barons being now aſſembled in Parliament, in a great Body (yet without any Noiſe or Violence) attended him, and remonſtrated the Evil State of the Nation, and humbly beſought him to uſe their Advice in the Great Affairs of the Kingdom; and further preſſed him earneſtly, That he would give them Power to draw up certain Articles which ſhould be of great Advantage to the Realm, and Church of England. The King hereupon ſuſpecting what they chiefly aimed at, either that they would demand a further Confirmation of the Great Charter, and that of Foreſts, or elſe (which he was moſt afraid of) that they would inſiſt upon the Baniſhment of P. Gaveſton, would by no means at firſt comply with their Requeſt: But at length being overcome by their Importunities, and fearing to be made to do it by Force, he gave them Authority to chuſe a Committee of ſo many of their Body, who ſhould have Power to make Ordinances for the Good Government and Reformation of his Houſhold and Kingdom; both which were then very much out of Order, through the Profuſion and Miſmanagement of his Officers: And accordingly he granted his Patent or Commiſſion, as follows:

Which the K. at laſt complies with.

Rot. Pat. 3 Ed. 2. m. 16 indorſ. printed in Royly's Plac. Parl. f. 526. & in Dr. B.'s Append. n. 50. The K.'s Licenſe to the Lords of Parl. and others to chuſe Commiſſioners to ſettle Affairs.

The King, to all thoſe who ſhall ſee or hear theſe Letters; Greeting: Whereas to the Honour of God, and for the Good of Us and our Realm, we have of our Free Will granted to the Prelates, Earls, and Barons of our Realm, That they may chuſe certain Perſons of the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, and others whom they think fit to call to them, during the time of their Power, that is, to the Feaſt of St. Michael next coming; and from that Feaſt for a Year then next following, to ordain and ſettle the Eſtate of our Houſhold, and of our Kingdom, according to Right and Reaſon. And we grant by theſe our Letters, to ſuch as may be choſen by the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, whoever they ſhall be, full Power to ordain (or ſettle) the State of our Houſhold, and of our Kingdom aforeſaid, in ſuch manner, as that their Ordinances be made to the Honour of God, to the Honour and

Proſit

ofit of Holy Church, and to the Honour and Profit of Us, as well as of our ople, according to Right and Reaſon, and the Oath which we made at our ronation. And we will, that thoſe who are ſo choſen, and all under our minion, and of our Ligeance, ſhall obſerve and keep the Ordinances ſo to made, in all Points; and that for the better Obſervation of them, y may bind themſelves, and ſwear to one another, without being queſtid by Us or our Friends: And if peradventure it ſhall happen, that part thoſe who ſhall be ſo choſen to make the ſaid Ordinances, ſhall be hinder'd Death, Sickneſs, or other reaſonable Cauſe, (which God forbid) ſo as y cannot perfect the ſaid Ordinances, then it ſhall be lawful for ſuch as preſent to proceed by themſelves, or call ſuch other to their Aſſiſtance, ſhall be moſt for the Honour and Profit of Us and our People. In wits of theſe things, we have cauſed to be made theſe our Letters Patents.
ven at Weſtminſter the 16th day of March.

Dr. B's Appendix, n. 51. An Inſtrument made by the Nobility to the King, concerning the Commiſſion aboveſaid.

The day following, the Prelates, Earls and Barons, or at leaſt as ma-of them as were then in London, ſeal'd an Inſtrument to the King, herein, after they had repeated this Grant and Commiſſion, they ant and promiſe for them, their Succeſſors and Heirs, that the Grant ich their moſt dear Lord the King, had now made, as aboveſaid, uld not at any other time be drawn into Cuſtom or Uſage, nor turn he prejudice of the King, or his Heirs, or of them, their Succeſs, or Heirs, nor to the Damage of any one, againſt Right and Rea-
; nor that the Grant aforeſaid may in other manner be intended, claimed but properly from his Courteſie, Free Will, or Pleaſure;
d that the Power of the ſaid Ordainers, as to making the Ordinan-
, ſhould not continue longer than the time limited. In witneſs hereof they put their Seals to theſe their Letters Patents; Given at ndon the 17th day of March, in the Year of Grace 1309. and the ign of the Lord the King, the Third.

The Prelates and Lords loſt no time after they had their Commiſſi-
; * for within three days the Ordainers were choſen by them and orn, being theſe under writren.

* MS. Clauſ. p. 2. in Bib. Cot. f. 295.

The Lords Ordainers are choſen; and their Names.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

e Biſhops of	The Earls of	Barons.
London,	Gloceſter,	Hugh de Ver.
Saliſbury,	Lancaſter,	William le Marſhall,
Chicheſter,	Lincoln,	Robert Fitz Roger,
Norwich,	Hereford,	Hugh Courtenay,
St. David's,	Pembroke,	William Martin,
Landaff.	Richmond,	John de Grey.
	Warwick, Arondel.

* Their Oath was this, as 'tis tranſlated from the Old French.

* Ib. The Form of the Oath theſe Lords were to take.

Will make ſuch Ordinance as ſhall be moſt to the Honour of God, the Honour and Profit of Holy Church, and to the Honour of our Lord the g, and the Profit of Him and his People, according to Right and Rea-
, and according to the Oath which our Lord the King had taken at his Coronation;

Anno Dom. MCCCX.

ronation ; I will not forbear for any Man, Rich or Poor, neither for Love nor Hatred, nor any other thing ; but will make ſuch Ordinance, in Form above ſaid. * Then after the Form of taking this Oath, 'tis farther noted in Latin, That the ſaid Oath was made, and taken in the Form aforeſaid, according to the King's Will and Special Command; Dated on Friday the 20*th of* March, in the Year of our Lord 1309; in the Third Year of the Reign of King Edward, the Son of King Edward, at Weſtminſter, in the Painted Chamber of the ſaid King.

* Ib.

But what theſe Commiſſioners did in perſuance of his Commiſſion, you ſhall know in due time ; only the Reader may here obſerve, that the King's Commiſſion for the making theſe Ordinances, as well as the Ordinances themſelves, bear date Anno Dom. 1309 ; but according to our Account (in which we follow Walſingham and others of our Hiſtorians, who begin their Year at Chriſtmas day) theſe Tranſactions muſt be put under Anno Dom. 1310, and not within the Year 1309, according to the Date of thoſe Records, which according to the Law Terms, begin the Year at Lady-day.

* MS. in Bib. Dom. Sim. Dew's.

A Convocation held with this Parliamet, to which the Achbiſhop of Canterbury refuſes to come, and the reaſon why.

As to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs tranſacted in this Parliament, I cannot omit taking notice, that the Author of the * Manuſcript French Chronicle of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury relates, That King Edward having ſummoned a General Parliament at Weſtminſter, which I ſuppoſe wa the ſame with that above-mentioned, when there was alſo a Convocation of all the Clergy both Superior and Inferior held at th ſame time: And William de Greenfield, Archbiſhop of York, coming u to this Parliament, with his Croſs born before him, Robert Archbiſho of Canterbury, with his Suffragans, refuſed to come thither, whilſt th ſaid Archbiſhop thus bore his Croſs ; and though the King ſent to him the Earls of Gloceſter and Lincoln, with other Noblemen, to try if the could any ways compromiſe this Difference, yet the Archbiſhop of Ca terbury remaining reſolute in his Demand, that his Antagoniſt ſhoul firſt lay by his Croſs, the King was at laſt fain to diſmiſs the Archbiſhop of York from any farther Attendance at this Parliament, and the the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with his Biſhops, came thither, an treated with the King and Great Men concerning the Publick Affairs o the Kingdom. I take notice of this, that you may obſerve how highly jealous the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the reſt of the Biſhops o his Province, then were of permitting any thing to be done by th Archbiſhop of York, that ſhould ſhew ſo much as an Equality betwee the Two Metropolitans. But to return to Civil Matters : I ſhall fa no more of the Parliament and Convocation above-mentioned, b that it was the ſame in which Hemingford relates the King had grante him the Twenty-fifth Penny of all Men's Eſtates ; and in which Conv cation the Pope exacted no leſs than three Tenths of the Clergy.

[2.] C. W. H. The King reſolves upon another Expedition againſt Scotland, and to that end ſummons all his Military Tenants.

[2.] King Edward being much incenſed at the late Succeſs of the Ki of Scots, who had now broke the Truce, and done a great deal of m chief on the Borders, was reſolved to repreſs his Inſolence, hoping wit all, by that means, to divert the Diſcontented Humour of his Nobili againſt his Favourite Gaveſton; and that if he got the Victory in th Expedition, he ſhould thereby render them and the Lords Ordaine whom he had appointed to reform the State of the Kingdom, more ea and favourable to him and his Favourite; wherefore he raiſed a great A

m

my, and order'd all his Military Tenants to be ready with Horſe and Arms by the middle of Auguſt; and beſides them, the Earls of Glocester, Surrey, and Cornwall, with the Lords Piercy and Clifford, and divers other of the Great Men that attended him; and then he appointed the Earl of Lincoln to be Guardian of the Kingdom during his Abſence; but the Earls of Lancaſter, Pembroke, Warwick, and Hereford, refuſed to go along with the King; not only out of Hatred to Pierce Gaveſton, but becauſe they had been conſtituted (together with the Biſhops and other Great Men) Ordainers for making the new Ordinances that were then on foot for the Reformation of the State of the King's Houſhold, and other Grievances: And the Archbiſhop in the beginning of November held a Provincial Synod at St. Paul's, with the Biſhops of his Province; where, in the preſence of the Lords Ordainers, he (being in his Pontificalibus) declared all thoſe Excommunicated, who ſhould preſume to reveal the Ordinances they were then making, or any part of them, till they were all finiſhed and publiſhed by common Conſent, as alſo all thoſe who ſhould hinder the making of them; Becauſe it was all their Intentions to ordain ſuch things as ſhould be for the Honour of God, the Exaltation of the Church, the common Benefit of the Kingdom, and the Peace and Proſperity of all the People in general.

Anno Dom. MCCCX.

The Earls of Lancaſter, Pembroke, &c. refuſe to go with him, and why.

The ABP holds a Synod, where he declares all thoſe Excommunicated, that ſhould reveal the Ordinances, till they were all finiſh'd.

[3.] In the mean while the King marched into Scotland with his whole Army, and meeting with no Oppoſition (for King Robert was again retired into his Faſtneſſes) he ſpoil'd and burnt all the Country before him, which way ſoever he marched, as far as the Frith; and Winter now approaching, he return'd to Berwick, where he reſided with his Queen, and the Great Men that ſtill attended him all that Seaſon. But [4] ſo ſoon as the King's Army was retired out of Scotland, King Robert and his Men came out of their Retreats, and entring Lothian, did much miſchief in thoſe Parts, to all that own'd the King of England: Who thereupon with great part of his Forces again entred Scotland, and perſued them, but in vain; for they quickly retired where they had lurked before; upon which his Majeſty, with the Earl of Cornwall, ſtaid at Roxburgh to ſecure thoſe Parts, whilſt the Earl of Gloceſter lay at Norham with ſufficient Forces to defend the Borders.

[3.] Id. ib.

The K marches into Scotland without oppoſition, K. Robert being retired into his Faſtneſſes.

[4] Chron. de Lan.

But when the K. was retired, he comes out again, and does much miſchief.

Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

[5.] About the beginning of March the King undertook another Expedition into Scotland; and though he found no more Reſiſtance than he did the laſt Year, yet Forage and other Proviſions failing, he was forced to go back again to Berwick, without doing any thing conſiderable: Yet ſometime [1.] after, he ſent the Earl of Cornwall with the Flower of his Army to St. Johnſtown, to ſtop King Robert's Progreſs, who (they heard) was raiſing great Forces: The Earl having paſſed the Frith, marched a great way into the Countrey, and behaved himſelf very well in this Expedition; though it had but a ſmall effect, becauſe the Scots again retired into their Bogs and Mountains: In the mean while the King continuing at Berwick, ſent the Earls of Gloceſter and Surrey into Scotland by another way; who marching into the Great Foreſt of Selkirk, again reduced thoſe Parts to the King's Obedience. But it is time for us now to return to England.

[5] C. W. H.

The K. again enters Scotland without Reſiſtance, but returns for want of Forage.

[1.] Chron. de Lan.

Yet ſends the E. of Cornwall thither with the Flower of his Army, upon which the Scots again retire.

[2.] Whilſt the King continued in Scotland, the Earl of Lincoln, whom he had left Guardian of the Kingdom in his Abſence, deceas'd; whereupon the Earl of Lancaſter, having married his Daughter and Heir, came near Berwick, to do his Homage for that Earldom, but

[2.] Id.

Upon the E of Lincoln's deceaſe, the E of Lancaſter attends upon the K. to do his Homage.

Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

would not go to the Town it ſelf to perform that Duty, becauſe it was within the Kingdom of Scotland; but deſired that the King would paſs over the River Tweed to receive it: Which He a great while refuſed to comply with; till hearing the Earl was about to return with Two hundred Horſe he had brought with him, and fearing his Diſpleaſure, he was at laſt perſuaded to go as far as Hagerſton (a Town Four Miles from Berwick) and there receive his Homage; which being done, the King and the Earl kindly diſcourſed together, and ſeemed outwardly to part Friends; for there had been, and ſtill was a great Difference between them, by reaſon of Pierce Gaveſton, whom (though he appeared there) the Earl would not ſo much as ſalute; but this Ceremony being perform'd, he return'd home.

[3. Id. ib. The Lords Ordainers having finiſh'd their Ordinances, deſire the K. to return and confirm them.

The [3.] King had now ſpent great part of this Summer in proſecuting the War againſt the Scots (tho he went not againſt them any more in Perſon after his Expedition in March); and the Lords the Ordainers, (who had been employ'd for near Two Years in framing Ordinances for the Reformation of the King's Houſhold and the Kingdom, according to the Power given them by his Charter) having finiſhed theſe Ordinances, ſent Meſſengers expreſs to deſire he would return into England to hold a Parliament, wherein they might be publiſh'd and confirm'd: Whereupon he iſſued his * Writ of Summons, bearing date the Sixteenth Day of June, for a Parliament to meet on the Sunday before the Feaſt of St. Lawrence, or Tenth of Auguſt following; before which time, the King (though unwillingly) left Scotland, and returned to London: Where the Parliament being met, the Lords Ordainers brought in the Ordinances they had made and agreed on; which being drawn up in Form of a Charter or Grant from the King, were openly read and publiſhed, to this effect: Firſt, After a long Preamble, they recite the Commiſſion formerly made, whereby they were empower'd to ſettle and redreſs the Abuſes of his Houſehold, &c. And then ſays, That the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the other Lords Ordainers there named, had agreed on certain Articles; which were introduced with theſe Reaſons:

* Clauſ. 4 Ed. 2. m. 1. dorſ. The K. ſummons a Parl. for that end.

The new Ordinances read in Parl. with the Effect of them. Rot. Ordin. Parl. 5. Ed. 2. n. 1.

The Reaſons of theſe Ordinances.

Inaſmuch as the King being deceived by Evil Counſel, the Countries of Gaſcoigne, Ireland, and Scotland, were in danger to be loſt, and the Realm of England to be ruined by Oppreſſions, Prizes, and other Deſtructions; Therefore the ſaid Lords above-mention'd have Ordain'd as follows:

* See theſe Ordinances in French, in Dr. B.'s Append. n 52.

1. '* That Holy Church ſhall have all its Franchiſes, as it had before, and ought to enjoy.

2. 'That the King's Peace ſhall be kept throughout the Realm, ſo as any man may ſafely go, come, and ſtay any where, according to the Law and Uſage of the Realm.

Ib. n. 3.

3. 'And we farther Ordain, That for the Payment of the King's Debts, and for the bettering and more Honourable Maintenance of his Royal Eſtate, nothing of Lands, Rents, Franchiſe, Eſcheat, Ward, Marriage, Office or Bailiwick, ſhall be given to any of the Ordainers, during the time of their making their Ordinancs, nor to any other Perſon, without the Advice and Aſſent of the Ordainers, or the greater part, or Six of them at the leaſt; but that all things may be improv'd to the Honour and Profit of the King, and Advancement of his Eſtate.

4. ‘That the Cuſtoms ſhall be received by Subjects of the Realm, and not by Strangers; that the Iſſues and Profits of them, and all other Things ſhall come entirely into the Exchequer; and be deliver'd thence by the Treaſurer and Chamberlains, to maintain the King's Houſhold or Court, and otherwiſe for his Profit; that he may live of his own, without taking any other things than of Antient Time have been due and accuſtom'd.

5. ‘That the * Merchants Aliens and their Goods be Arreſted, until they have given Account of the Cuſtoms, and other Profits and Iſſues of the Realm, they had received ſince the Death of King Edward, the Father of this preſent King, before the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer, and others to be joined with them by theſe Ordainers.

* Note, Theſe were certain Foreign Merchants, who had farmed the King's Cuſtoms.

6. ‘That the Great Charter ſhall be kept in all its Points; and that the Ordainers, and ſuch as they ſhall call to their Aſſiſtance during their Power, ſhall declare all obſcure and doubtful Points in it.

Ib. n. 7.

7. ‘That the Crown having been ſo impoveriſh'd and diſmembred by divers Gifts, &c. we do likewiſe Ordain, That all Gifts granted to the Damage of the King, and diſtreſs of the Crown, after the Commiſſion to them made, as of Caſtles, Towns, Lands, Tenements, Offices, and Bailiwicks, Wards, Marriages, Eſcheats, and Releaſes whatſoever, both in Gaſcoigne, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, and England, ſhall be repeal'd, and are hereby declar'd repeal'd; without any re-granting to thoſe that had them, unleſs by Common Conſent in Parliament; or if any ſuch Gifts or Releaſes ſhall hereafter be made, without Aſſent of his Baronage in Parliament, until the King's Debts be fully paid, and his Eſtate advanced, they ſhall be held for Null, and the Procurer ſhall be puniſh'd in Parliament by Award of the Baronage.

8. The Eighth Article being much the ſame with the Fourth, I therefore omit it.

9. ‘And whereas the King ought not to engage himſelf in War againſt any, nor go out of the Realm, without the common Aſſent of his Baronage, for the many Dangers that might enſue to Him and his Realm, we do further Ordain, That henceforward the King ſhall not go out of his Kingdom, nor make War upon any one, without the common Aſſent of his Baronage, and that in Parliament; and if he ſhall do otherwiſe, and cauſe his Service to be ſummon'd, the Summons ſhall be Null and Void: But if it happen that the King ſhall make War upon any one, or go out of the Kingdom with the Aſſent of his ſaid Baronage, and that then it ſhall be neceſſary to appoint a Guardian over the Realm, he ſhall be appointed by the common Aſſent of his Baronage in Parliament.

10. ‘That there ſhall be no Prizes nor Takings for the King, but ſuch as are due of Antient Right; that none under Colour of Purveyance, ſhall take to the Uſe of the King, or any other, Corn, Goods or Merchandiſe, from any one againſt his Will, according to * Magna Charta, without paying the true Value for it; under Pain of being perſued by Hue and Cry; and if taken, ſhall be committed to the next Gaol, there to undergo the Common-Law as a Thief and a Robber.

* Cap. 9.

11. ‘That no New Cuſtoms or Maletolts, levied ſince the Coronation of Edward I. or Inhancements of the Old, ſhall be taken of Merchants, notwithſtanding the Charter made by the King to the

Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

'Merchant-Strangers, contrary to the Great Charter, and the Franchiſes of the City of London, without the Aſſent of Baronage, &c.

12. 'To the Honour of God, and Holy Church, We moreover ordain againſt ſuch as ſhall maliciouſly procure Prohibitions and Attachments againſt the Ordinaries of Holy Church, in caſe of Correction of Sin, and other things purely Spiritual, which belong not to the Lay-Court: In that Caſe, the Juſtices ſhall award Damages to the Ordinaries; and if the Plaintiffs have not wherewithal to pay them, they ſhall be committed to Priſon, ſo long as the Grievance ſo maliciouſly procured ſhall require it; ſaving the Eſtate of the King, his Crown, and other Rights.

13. 'That becauſe the King hath been Guided and Counſelled by Evil Counſellors, We likewiſe ordain, that all ſuch be removed from the King; that ſo neither They, nor any ſuch, ſhall be near him, or hold any Offices under him; but that other Fit Perſons ſhall be put into their Places: And in like manner it ſhall be done to his Menial Servants, and the Officers of his Houſhold.

14. 'And foraſmuch as many Evils have happen'd by ſuch Counſellors and Miniſters, We therefore ordain, that for the future the King ſhall make the Chancellor, Chief Juſtice of the One Bench, and the Other, the Treaſurer, Chancellor and Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Steward of his Houſhold, Guardian of the Wardrobe, Comptroller, and a Fit Clerk to keep the Privy Seal, with the Juſtices of the Foreſts on this ſide, and beyond Trent; and the Chief Clerk of the Common Bench, by the Advice and Conſent of his Baronage; and that in Parliament: And if it ſhall happen, and be neceſſary to chuſe any ſuch Officers, when there is no Parliament; then the King ſhall do it by the Advice of the Council he had about him, until there ſhould be a Parliament; and ſo it ſhould be for the future concerning ſuch Miniſters, when Need requir'd.

15. 'That all Governors of Ports and Caſtles upon the Sea, ſhall be placed and made according to the Form aboveſaid.

16. 'And for that the Countries of Gaſcoigne, Ireland and Scotland, were in Danger to be loſt for want of good Miniſters, We alſo ordain, that good and ſufficient Officers ſhall be placed there according to the Form of the Article (that is, the 14th) above.

17. 'That Sheriffs ſhall from thenceforth be named by the Chancellor, and Treaſurer, and ſuch of the Council as ſhall be preſent; and if the Council be not preſent, then by the Treaſurer, Barons of the Exchequer, and Juſtices of the King's Bench; and that ſuch only ſhall be choſen, as have Lands to anſwer the King and his People for their Doings, and no others to have Commiſſions under the Great Seal.

18. 'That the Guardians and Officers of Foreſts ſhall undergo juſt Tryals for their Grieving the People, Oppreſſions, and Miſdemeanors, by reaſon of ſuch Offices, notwithſtanding they have Grants of them for their Lives.

19. 'The XIXth directs the Manner of Tryal of Treſpaſſes of Vert and Veniſon in the Foreſts, according to the Charter of the Foreſt, and Declaration of King Edward I. which is there recited, and need not be more particularly mentioned here.

Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

'20. Whereas it has been found by the Examination of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Knights and other good People of the Realm, that Pierce de Gaveſton had evil counſelled the King, and had prevailed upon him to do amiſs in divers manners; that he defrauded the King of his Treaſure, and ſent it beyond Sea; that he had taken to him Royal Power and Dignity, in making Alliances with certain People upon Oath, to live and die with him againſt all Men; That he had put from the King Good Officers, and placed about him thoſe of his own Covin and Party, as well Strangers as others; that he had eſtranged the King's Heart from his Liege People, inſomuch that he deſpiſed their Counſels; that he had cauſed the King to grant Lands, Tenements and Offices to himſelf and his Heirs, and divers other people, to the great damage and injury of the King and his Crown; that he had cauſed Blank Charters to be ſealed with the Great Seal, in Deceit and Diſinheritance of the King and Crown, and had maintained Robbers and Murtherers, and had cauſed the King to pardon them; and that King Edward the Father of the preſent King had ordered him to abjure the Realm of England for ever; and had likewiſe directed, that his Son the preſent King ſhould for ever forſwear his Company; and that for ſeveral Reaſons, as the nouriſhing of Concord between the King and his People, and the eſchewing many Perils and Diſcords, we do hereby ordain, by virtue of the Commiſſion of our Lord the King to us granted, That the ſaid Pierce ſhall be for ever baniſhed the Realm of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, and all the King's Dominions, either on this ſide, or beyond the Sea, between that time and the Feaſt of All-Saints next enſuing, (having Dover aſſigned him for his Port to paſs from, and no other;) and if he ſhould be found in England, or any other part of the King's Dominions beyond that day, then he ſhould be treated as an Enemy to the King and Kingdom.

'21. We ordain, That Emery, and thoſe of the Company of Friſcombaud, ſhall render an Account of the Treaſure they had received, as they were order'd, within the Quindene, or fifteen days after St. Michael, or otherwiſe the Bodies and Goods of that Company, which were found in the Power of the King, ſhould be arreſted, and Emery declared and holden the King's Enemy, and uſed as ſuch, if he were found within the King's Dominions, either on this ſide, or beyond the Sea.

These were Lombard Merchants who had receiv'd and tranſported the Money, &c. delivered to them by Gaveſton, and not for renting the King's Cuſtoms, as Dr. Brady vainly ſuppoſes.

'22. And foraſmuch as Sir Henry de Beaumont, to the damage and diſhonour of the King, had received of him the Kingdom of Man, after it had been ordered otherwiſe by theſe Ordainers, beſides other Rents, Lands, Franchiſes and Offices; and becauſe he had given Evil Counſel contrary to his Oath, we therefore ordain, That he ſhall be outed the King's Council for ever, and ſhall not come near his Perſon, unleſs he be ſummon'd to Parliament; or in time of War, if the King will have him, unleſs by Common Aſſent of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls and Barons in full Parliament; and that all his other Lands ſhall be ſeized into the King's hands, until he ſhall be ſatisfied the full value of what he had received of thoſe Lands ſo given him by the King, contrary to this Ordinance; and if he ſhall contend againſt this Ordinance, then for ever to be diſinherited of all Lands of the King's Gift.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXI.

23. That whereas it was found by the Examination of the Prelates, 'Earls and Barons, that the Dame de Veſey had procured the King to give to Sr. Henry Beaumont, her Brother, divers other Lands, Franchiſes and Offices, to the damage and diſhonour of the King, and open diſheriſon of the Crown: It is farther ordained, That ſhe ſhall go to her Houſe within fifteen days after St. Michael next coming, without ever returning to Court, to ſtay there: And for all theſe things aforeſaid, and for the Caſtle of Bamburgh, belonging to the Crown, we ordain, that it ſhall be retaken into the King's hands, and ſhall not be given to her or any other, without the pleaſure and good-will of the King.

'24. That Acquittances ſhall be allowed for Debts paid, and Acounts made in the Exchequer; and if the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer allow them not, or make them not in due form, the Plaintiffs ſhall have Remedy upon Petition in Parliament.

'25. For that Common Merchants, and many other people are received to plead in the Exchequer, Pleas of Debts and Treſpaſs, by reaſon they are avowed by Officers of the Place more than before, which ought not to be, whereby Accounts and other things touching the King are often delay'd, and the People much grieved; it is therefore ordained, That for the future no Pleas ſhall be holden in the Exchequer, but ſuch as concern the King and the Officers of the Exchequer, and their Menial Servants; and if any be received by Avowry of the Place, to plead therein contrary to the Form aforeſaid, ſuch as are impleaded ſhall have their Recovery in Parliament.

'26. Alſo, for that the People are much grieved, that the Marſhal and Steward hold many Pleas which belong not to their Office, be it ordained, That they ſhall not hold Plea of Frank-Tenement, or Debt, or Covenant, or Contract, nor Common Pleas of the People, but only Debts and Treſpaſſes of the Court, or King's Houſe, within the Verge, and Contracts, and Covenants of ſuch as belong to the Court, and no others; and that they ſhall be ſpeedily pleaded from day to day, and ended before the King paſſed out of the Limits of the Verge where the Treſpaſs was done; and if Pleas be held otherwiſe, they ſhall be null, and ſuch as ſhall be grieved, ſhall have redreſs by Recovery of Damages in the King's Bench, by Writ out of Chancery.

'27. And for that before this time many Felonies had been committed within the Verge, and ſuffered to go unpuniſhed, becauſe the Coroners of the Country were not permitted to enquire of ſuch Felonies, but only the Coroners of the Houſhold, who were partial; it is there fore ordained, That the Country Coroners without the Verge ſhall be joined with them in the Caſe of Murther, &c.

'28. And whereas the People had been much grieved, that ſome Perſons combined together to kill and rob them, by reaſon the King through Evil Counſel gave them their Pardons againſt Law; it is ordain'd, That for the future no Charters of Pardon ſhall be granted for any manner of Felony, but in Caſe, where the King could do it by his Oath, Proceſs of Law, and the Cuſtom of the Land; and if any others were granted, they ſhould be void.

29. And

Anno Dom.
MCCCXI.

'29. And inaſmuch as many people are delayed of their Demands in the King's Court (i. e. Bench) becauſe the Parties alledge, they ought not to anſwer the Demandants without the King's Conſent; and alſo many of the People are grieved by the King's Officers againſt Right, of which Grievances they can have no Redreſs but by frequent Parliaments; for remedy hereof be it ordained, that the King hold a Parliament once every Year, or twice, if there be need, and in convenient place; and in thoſe Parliaments, the Pleas which had been ſo delay'd, and thoſe wherein the Juſtices ſhould be of divers Opinions, ſhould be recorded and determined; and in the ſame manner Bills (i. e. Petitions) ſhould be delivered and ended in Parliament, according to Law and Reaſon.

'30. The Money ſhall not be altered without great occaſion, and then by Common Advice of the Baronage in Parliament.

'31. All Statutes made in amendment of the Law, and for the profit of the People by the King's Anceſtors, ſhall be kept and maintained as before, and as they ought to be, according to Law and Reaſon, if they are not contrary to the Great Charter, the Charter of the Foreſt, or theſe Ordinances; and if ſo, then to be null and void.

'32. That the Law, or Common Right, be not delay'd by Letters of Privy-Seal; and ſuch Letters to be void, if procured.

'33. Contains an Interpretation of the Statute of Acton Burnel.

'34. Concerns the Caſe of Appellants or Appealors, and the Sheriffs and Gaoler's Practices thereupon, now almoſt antiquated.

'35. That no Man be appealed of Felonies maliciouſly, or outlawed in the Countrey where he had no Land or Tenements, nor put to death, or diſinherited by ſuch Suit or Outlawry, he rendring himſelf to the King's Priſon, &c.

'36. For the abatement of Appeals in Suits, and ſlight Caſes in Murther and Robbery, if the Appellees are acquitted, they ſhall recover againſt the Abettors and Appellants according to the Statute.

'37. Is againſt Protections for the delay of Suits, as well in Pleas of Land, as of Debts and Treſpaſſes, by ſuch as feigned themſelves in the King's Service; that the Plaintiff or Demandant diſcovering the Deceit, ſhall have Damages awarded him at the diſcretion of the Juſtices, and the Tenant of the Land ſhall be adjudged to Priſon a Year and a Day for cheating the King and Court; and if the Deceit be found in a Plea of Debt, or Treſpaſs, upon Attaint, the Defendant ſhall be puniſhed to the King, and pay Damages to the Plaintiff.

'38. Alſo it is ordained, that the Great Charter of Franchiſes, and the Charter of the Foreſt of King Henry, the Son of King John, ſhall be holden in all Points; and if there were any thing doubtful in them, they are to be declared next Parliament after this by the Baronage, Juſtices and other Sages of the Law; and this was to be done after this manner, becauſe it was not in their power for want of time to do more.

'39. That the Chancellor, Treaſurer, Chief Juſtice of the one Bench, and the other, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Treaſurer of the Wardrobe, Steward of the Houſhold, all Juſtices, Sheriffs, Eſcheators, Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

‘tors, Conſtables, Enquirers into any Matter whatſoever, and all other Bayliffs or Officers of the King, ſhall be ſworn when they enter into their Offices, to keep and obſerve all the Ordinances made by the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, Choſen and Aſſigned for that purpoſe, and every one of them, without doing any thing to the contrary.

40. ‘Alſo it is Ordained, That in every Parliament there ſhall be aſſigned one Biſhop, two Earls, and two Barons, to hear and determine all the Complaints of thoſe that will impeach the King's Miniſters, whoſoever they are, for doing any thing contrary to theſe Ordinances, to the King, and to the Complainants, according to their Directions.

41. ‘Laſtly, It is Ordain'd, That the Ordinances abovesaid ſhall be maintain'd and kept in all their Points; and that the King ſhall cauſe them to be put under his Great Seal, and ſent into every County of England, to be publiſhed and firmly obſerved, as well within Franchiſes as without; and in like manner the Warden of the Cinque Ports ſhall be ſent to, to publiſh and command them to be kept through his whole Juriſdiction.

Theſe Ordinances were publiſhed ſome time this Autumn; and though the exact Date be omitted in the Record, yet it is likely they were paſſed in Parliament by the end of September, or beginning of October; as appears by the King's Confirmation of them, which follows upon the ſame Rolls, to this Effect:

Ib. The King's Confirmation of theſe Ordinances.

‘Theſe Ordinances being ſhewed to Us, and publiſhed on Monday before the Feaſt of St. Michaël laſt paſt, We do Agree unto, Accept, Confirm, Will and Grant, for Us and our Heirs, That all the ſaid Ordinancs, and every one of them, made according to the Form of our Letters Patents, ſhall be publiſhed, and hereafter firmly obſerved and kept. In Witneſs whereof We have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent. Given at London the Fifth Day of October, in the Fifth Yea of our Reign.

* Ad huncAn. Walſingham's Miſtakes rectified, concerning the Time of theſe Tranſactions.

I muſt here obſerve, That * Walſingham hath committed ſeveral grea Miſtakes in his Relation of the Tranſactions of this Year; as firſt, i making the King to have kept his Chriſtmaſs at Weſtminſter, when h was then indeed in Scotland; and in placing the Parliament, in whic theſe Proviſions were confirm'd, preſently after that time; whereas i appears by the Writs of Summons, that the King did not return from his Scottiſh Expedition till after Midſummer; nor did the Parliamen meet till the beginning of Auguſt, and the Proviſions were not Confirm'd by the King until the beginning of October: Tho * he is no miſtaken in that he farther adds, concerning what was done in thi Parliament, when the King not only confirm'd the aforeſaid Proviſion under his Great Seal, but alſo took his Corporal Oath for their Obſervation; and that then the Archbiſhop of Canterbury with his Suffragan pronounced Sentence of Excommunication againſt all ſuch as ſhoul preſume to act contrary to the ſaid Proviſions: Which done, all the Articles therein contain'd being recited to be according to the Tenor o Magna Charta, and for the common Good of the Church and Kingdom were publickly read in St. Paul's Church, before all the Prelates, Peers and Commons of the Land, and the King himſelf was there preſent. The follows a Repetition of the Subſtance of theſe Proviſions; in which thi Autho

* Id ib. Who alſo takes an Oath to obſerve them; and Excommunication pronounced againſt all thoſe that ſhould infringe them.

uthor is right enough, except in making the Baniſhment of Pierce aveſton into Ireland, to have been now order'd, whereas he had been ere near Two Years ago; and being ſince return'd, was now again aniſh'd from all the King's Dominions; and in Obedience to that Sen-nce, about the beginning of November he paſſed over into France: Of hom you will hear more by and by. But to return to more weighty ffairs.

Anno Dom. MCCCXI.

Gaveſton being again baniſh'd, paſſes over into France.

After theſe Articles had been thus ſolemnly confirm'd, ſeveral of e Prelats, Earls and Barons, who thought it had been a very long ſſion, therefore made it their Requeſt to the King, That they might tire into their own Countries; whereupon, by their Advice and ſſent, He prorogu'd the Parliament unto Friday next after the Feaſt of ll-Saints, at Weſtminſter, and ſo gave leave to moſt of the Prelats, arls and Barons, in the mean time to go home, commanding them to eet again at the time and place aforeſaid; and farther ordered the Bp. of Canterbury, that he ſhould give notice to the Deans and Priors Cathedral Churches, as alſo to the Abbots and Archdeacons in their wn perſons, and the Clergy of the whole Province, by their Proctors, be again preſent in Parliament, eight days after St. Martin; dated London the eighth day of October.

Rot. Clauſ. 5 Ed. 2. M. 25. Dorſ.

The Parliament prorogu'd till after Martinmas; as was alſo the Convocation.

By virtue of which Prorogation, the Archbiſhop (without doubt) ok the longeſt time, as did others of the Prelats, Earls and Barons, ho delay'd their coming until the Clergy ſhould meet; ſo that it is ery likely there was a farther Adjournment of this Parliament to me day in November, though the Writ is not extant; for on the 28th that Month, the King iſſued out his * Writs to Gilbert of Clare, arl of Gloceſter and Hereford, Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, Humphry Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, Adomar de Valence, Earl of embroke, Guy Beuchamp, Earl of Warwick, and Edward Earl of Arun-el; ſignifying to them, that He was inform'd they were coming to his Parliament, (which was continued at Weſtminſter,) with orſe and Arms, after an undue manner, which would hinder the iſpatch of the Buſineſs in Parliament, that concern'd Him and the tate of the Kingdom, would affright the people, and diſturb the Peace; herefore He commanded them upon their Faith and Homage, not to ome in ſuch a terrifying manner, but only as they uſed to come in His ather's time, without Arms; nor to attempt any thing elſe which ight diſturb the Peace.

Ib. M. 22. Dorſ.

The King iſſues out his Writs, commanding ſeveral Noblemen therein mentioned, not to come to Parliament with Horſe and Arms.

What ſhould be the reaſon of their thus offering to come armed, I do ot find; only it is probable that they found the King reſolved not to bſerve the late Ordinances: for ſo much is certain, that this Parliament as ſoon diſſolved, [1] and the Buſineſs left undiſpatched, by reaſon Pierce Gaveſton; who in obedience to the late Sentence, ent over into France, (as has been already ſaid) yet not thinking imſelf ſafe there, becauſe that King hated him on the Queen his aughter's Account, he went from thence into Flanders, where be-g alſo uneaſie, and relying upon the King's Favour, and his Alliance the Earl of Gloceſter (and being, I ſuppoſe, underhand encouraged the King Himſelf)* he reſolved once more to venture into England; and .] therefore being accompanied with ſome of his Friends and Fol-wers, arrived here a little before Chriſtmas, and preſented himſelf to e King, who received him with all the joy imaginable, though much to

[1]. T. W.

Pierce Gaveſton returns, notwithſtanding the late Ordinance.

* For it appears upon Record that he had the Kings [2]. C. Eveſ. Protection & safe conduct for his coming over. [Rot. Pat. 5. Ed. 2. p. 1. m. 15. R–s Coll p. 278.]

Vol. III. Ii the

Anno Dom. MCCCXI

And is received by the King with great ſatisfaction.

* Comp. Hiſt. p. 112.

the diſcontent and vexation of the Great Men of the Kingdom; who would not have endured ſuch an open Affront to their Authority, had they been permitted to continue their Seſſion any longer; and therefore to prevent their meeting, it was neceſſary to ſend them home under a pretence of the near approach of Chriſtmas Holy-days, but indeed it was the ſudden coming over of this Minion, that cauſed this haſty Diſſolution; *though Dr. Brady does not mention the true Cauſe thereof.(1) ^ But before I conclude this Year, I ſhall ſay ſomewhat more of the Affairs of Scotland.

(1). But notwithstand-ing ye King was so awed by ye Earls & Barons, yet he durst not at first keep his Minion with him, so yt he was forced to skulk up & down from one castle to another, insomuch as ye King was prevaild upon by ym to issue out his Writt or Commission [Rot. Pat: 5. Ed. 2. pt. 1. m. 7] to Hugh de Court-ney, & William Martyn for his apprehension if he shd be found within the Counties of Cornwal, Devonshire, Somersetshire, & Dorsetshire. dated 30th November.

[3.] Chron. Lan.

The King of Scots raiſes an Army, invades England twice, plunders the Country, and returns home.

When [3.] King Robert heard that the King of England was returned home with moſt of his Forces, he thereupon rais'd a great Army, and about the middle of Auguſt entred England by Solway-Frith, and having burnt and plundered the Country of Gilleſland, and great part of Tindale, after eight days ſtay he return'd into Scotland, with a good Booty, without any oppoſition: Nor did he reſt contented with this, but in the beginning of September entred again by Redeſdale, and burnt and ſpoil'd all thoſe parts as far as Corbridg, killing many of the people; then turning aſide into Tindale, he deſtroy'd whatever was left before, and after fifteen days ſtay, returned home. And it ſeems the Scotiſh Army was ſo powerful, that the Wardens of the Marches were not able to defend themſelves with thoſe ſmall Forces that were left them, ſo that the reſt of the people of Northumberland, fearing another Scotiſh Invaſion, ſent Meſſengers to that King, offering Two thouſand Pounds in ready Money, to obtain a Truce but till Candlemas following, which was granted them upon thoſe Terms.

The Marches not being able to defend themſelves, thoſe of Northumberlrnd pay him Money for a Truce.

[3] Id Ib.

The Knights Templars confeſſing their Crimes, are confined to Monaſteries, there to do Penance during their Lives.

* Ribaldi.

C. W. H.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, I find nothing conſiderable, [3.] but that there was this Year held a Provincial Council at London, wherein all the Knights Templars, who were before impriſon'd, were now judicially accuſed of Hereſie, and other moſt enormous Crimes, but tho' they all deny'd the Facts, unleſs one or two raſcally * Fellows, yet at laſt moſt of them, ſeeing they could not eſcape, whilſt the Pope and King were their Enemies, confeſs'd, they found they could not clear themſelves canonically of the Crimes laid to their charge; and thereupon they were all condemned to be confin'd to ſeveral Monaſteries, there to perform perpetual Penance, where the moſt part of them behaved themſelves without Offence. * Alſo this Year deceas'd that ambitious Prelate Anthony Beke, Biſhop of Durham, a Patriarch of Jeruſalem, and was ſoon ſucceeded by Richard de Beaumont, a Monk of that Church, and one of a Noble Family.(2) x

(2) x I have nothing else to add as to Ecclesiastical Affairs, only that ye Pope having summoned a General Council at Vienne in Dauphine for ye confirmation of his Decree concerning the Dissolution of the Order of Templars, & the Disposal of their Lands & Revennues. the King & Clergy of England sent yr Ambassadors, & Procurators to it, as appears by his Commission [Rot: Rom. 4 Ed. 2. m. 23. in Sced:] granted to Otto de Grandison for that Purpose: as also by the King's Licence [Rot. Claus: 5. Ed. 28. R-'s Coll: p. 276.] or commission to Bishop of Worcester, then his Treasurer to go thither as one of the Proctors for the clergy of England concerning Pierce Gavestons Return.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

[4] T. W.

The King keeps Chriſtmas with Pierce Gaveſton at York, to the great diſcontent of the Queen, &c.

The King had made a Secret Proteſtation againſt this Ordinance before he confirm'd.

The King (I ſuppoſe) to avoid the Complaints and Reproaches of his Great Men, concerning the Return of Pierce de Gaveſton, [4.] remain'd ſtill in the North, and kept his Chriſtmas with him and certain Foreigners at York, being extremely pleaſed, that He had again recover'd his Beloved Favourite; but the Queen and the whole Court were very much grieved and concern'd at it, becauſe they now ſaw the King irreclaimable, for He was reſolved to juſtifie his Minion's Return by colour of Law; and therefore though the Lords had ſo ſolemnly adjudg'd him to Baniſhment, and that Decree was likewiſe confirm'd by the King Himſelf upon an Oath, yet it ſeems at the ſame time, when He confirm'd thoſe Ordinances, He had entred a private Proteſtation againſt 'em to this effect, viz. That if they contain'd any thing to his damage or prejudice, or contrary to the Commiſſion granted to the Ordainers, all ſuch ſuch things ſhould be looked upon as not granted or confirm'd by Him; further reſerving to Himſelf in that Proteſtation, Power by Good Advice of the ſaid Ordainers and Others, to correct and amend the ſame; as is more at large contain'd in a publick Inſtrument made of this Proteſtation; which, as Dr. Brady well obſerves, was never enter'd on the Parliament Roll, nor ever made publick, till ſome time after, viz. in the ſixth Year of this King's Reign, and then it is found enter'd on the *Patent Roll: Nor indeed would the Prelats and Great Men of the Kingdom have ever admitted ſuch a Proteſtation, for that would have made the King ſole Judge of what was to His damage or prejudice, and conſequently then it would have been in His power to correct or alter it as He pleaſed, not only by the Advice and Conſent of the Ordainers, but any others whom He had a mind to chuſe.

Anno Dom MCCCXII

*Rot. Pat. 6. Ed. 2. Part 2. M. 20. intus. printed in Ryley's Plac. Parl. f. 541.

And, I ſuppoſe, it was by virtue of this ſecret Proteſtation, that whilſt He continued at York, He publiſhed a Declaration to juſtifie what He had done in receiving Gaveſton (which is ſtill upon * Record in the Tower) directed to the Sheriff of Yorkſhire; reciting, That whereas the Lord Pierce Gaveſton Earl of Cornwal, was lately baniſh'd from the Realm, contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms thereof, which He was bound by the Oath He had taken at his Coronation, to obſerve and maintain, and that the ſaid Earl had been during his Exile, faithful and loyal, but was now returned into the ſaid Realm at His Commandment, being ready to ſtand to Right before Him (i. e. the King) againſt all Men who ſhall challenge and demand it, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom aforeſaid; wherefore He held him for a good and lawful Subject within His Fealty and Peace, and ſhould always hold him for ſuch; and therefore commands the Sheriff by His Royal Power or Prerogative, that he likewiſe eſteem him as ſuch; and that he cauſe this Declaration to be publiſhed through his whole Bailywick: Given at York the eighteenth of January.

* Rot. Clauſ. 5 Ed. 2. M. 15. Dorſ. printed in Dr. Brady's Appen. N 53.

The King iſſued out a Declaration juſtifying his receiving Gaveſton, and the reaſon of it.

The like Letters were ſent to all the Sheriffs of England; and on the ſame Roll is entred, That the Form of this Writ was made by the King Himſelf; and the Seal with the Writs delivered to the * Clerk to ſeal them, at the day and place therein appointed; and that as ſoon as they were ſealed in the King's preſence, He took them into His Hand, and laid them on His Bed: This is left untranſlated by Dr. Brady, but I have thought fit to take notice of it, becauſe it diſcovers to us, how that theſe Writs were drawn up by the King, and ſealed without any one's advice or privity, except Gaveſton's and the Clerk's that tranſcribed them, and he that put the Seal to them.

*In the Record he is called le, Spigurnel (i.e. the Sealer of Writs in old French.

Theſe Writs ſealed in the King's preſence, without any being by, but the Clerk and Gaveſton himſelf.

But I cannot forbear taking notice, that the Dr. is miſtaken in his Tranſlation of part of * this Record thus, That ſeeing he (viz. Gaveſton) had in the Inſtrument of Exile no other Appellations, but of Good and Loyal, he had return'd at his Commandment: Which is directly contrary to the Twentieth Article of the above recited Ordinances, wherein he hath ſuch things laid to his Charge, as by no means could conſiſt with thoſe Appellations: But the Reader may ſee the true Reading in the Margin, with the miſtaken one made by the Doctor.

* In French thus, En le quel Exil, il fu non, autre que bon & leal & meiſmes celui Counte par noſtre maundement, &c note where the Dr. for non autre hath here put nome autre, which is not Senſe, nor Grammar.

Then on the ſame Roll with the former Writ follows another to the Sheriffs of thoſe Counties where the ſaid Pierce Gaveſton had Lands, to reſtore them with the Profits they had received, ſince they had ſeized them, into his Hands: Theſe were dated two days after the former.

Another Writ to reſtore Gaveſton to the poſſeſſion of his Eſtate.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

5] T W.

The Lords being highly diſcontented at Gaveſton's Return, and the breach of the late Ordinances, the King iſſues a Declaration to ſatisfie the people's Minds.

But to perſue to our Hiſtory: So [5]. ſoon as the Lds. and Great Men knew of the return of this Favourite, and of the King's ſtrange Indulgence to him, they could not forbear openly declaring, That the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom were not obſerved, nor the Ordinances lately made, regarded, but openly violated and broken at his pleaſure; wherefore to obviate the Effects of ſuch Reports and Clamours, the King iſſued forth a Declaration, which He commanded and firmly enjoined the Sheriffs of all Counties to proclaim in full County Court, in all Cities, Boroughs and Market Towns, and other places, where they ſhould think expedient; ſetting forth, That it was his great care and main deſire, His Peace ſhould be every where obſerved, and that all the approved Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, uſed in the time of his Progenitors, and alſo all the Ordinances lately made to the honour of God, and Holy Chuch, and his Own, to the profit of Him and the People, which were not to the damage or prejudice of Him, or his Crown, or contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms aboveſaid, ſhould be maintained and kept: Witneſs the King at York, the Twenty ſixth Day of January.

He writes to the Mayor and Common Council of London to ſecure the Peace of the City.

And not long after, fearing ſome Diſturbance from the Lords, He wrote to the Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of London, to ſecure the City; ſo that by the meeting of the Prelates, Earls, Barons or any others, there might happen no hurt or danger, either to Him or the City: Witneſs the King at York, the eighth day of February.

This Declaration and Order not availing, the King (as He ſaid) being reſolved to preſerve the Rights of His Crown and Dignity Royal, the Peace and Tranquility of Holy Church, and the whole People committed to his Charge in all things, wrote to this purpoſe to all Sheriffs (the neareſt to the place where He was) to ſignifie this His Will and Pleaſure to all people, ſo ſoon as poſſible, leſt by contrary Reports it might be ſuſpected, He could not do it; and commanded them to make Proclamation thereof by Themſelves and their Deputies once a Week, in all Cities, Burghs, Mercat-Towns, and other places in their Counties: And that his Intention might yet be more plainly known, He directed the Sheriffs to come and attend upon Him, and every one to bring with him a Perſon of Credit, whom He could truſt, to hear what he had farther to ſay to them, that ſo they might acquaint the people with it, as He ſhould there openly enjoin them: Witneſs the King at York, the Twenty fourth day of February.

The King appoints certain Commiſſioners to reviſe the late Ordinances.

This way likewiſe proving ineffectual (for it ſeems the people were but little edified with all theſe Declarations, ſo long as they ſaw the late Ordinance thus apparently broken; wherefore the King meant to take another Courſe, and proceed amicably and fairly with the diſſatisfied Biſhops and Barons; and according to the Power reſerved in the late Proteſtation He made when He confirmed the Ordinances, He appointed new Commiſſioners, viz. the Biſhop of Norwich, Guy Terr, John de Crumberwell, Hugh de Audley, William Deyncourt, Henry Spigurnell, Henry le Scrope, Knights, (the two laſt of which were Juſtices) and Thomas de Cobham, Robert de Pickering, Walter de Thorp, Gilbert de Middleton, John Frauncеys, and Andrew Briggs, Clerks, or ſo many of them as could be preſent, to treat with the Prelates, Earls and Barons who had made the Ordinances (upon which were grounded all the late Diſputes and quarrelling with the King) to correct and reform by their

Good Advice, all ſuch things in them, as they thought were pejudicial and injurious to Him, or contrary to the Form of the Commiſſion granted to them, if any ſuch were. Witneſs the King at Tork, the 18th day of March.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

But the diſcontented Prelates, Earls and Barons, who were then at London, excuſed themſelves from treating concerning the ſaid Ordinances, in the abſence of the King, and therefore * ſent Him this Anſwer, That in his Preſence, whenever He pleaſed to call them together, they would treat upon the ſaid Ordinances, and ſhould be ready to do all things according to the Proteſtation He had made, and alſo according to the Proteſtation they made at the time of publiſhing thoſe Ordinances : And thus things remain'd ſtill in the ſame State as they were.

* Pat. 6. Ed. 2. Part 1. m. 20. intus printed in Ryl. Plac. Parl. f. 541.

The diſcontented Bps. and Barons refuſe to meet or treat with them, unleſs in the King's preſence.

But laying aſide Records, we ſhall now from our Hiſtorians give a more exact account of the Actions of the diſcontented Earls and Barons, upon the coming over of Gaveſton: [2.] So ſoon as the Report of it was ſpread throughout the Kingdom, the Great Men being mightily provoked at it, met and conſulted together what Courſe to take, to put an end to that Diſturbance they foreſaw muſt riſe about him ; and tho' they were very loath to raiſe a Civil War againſt the King, yet when they had conſidered the danger on both ſides, and found that ſo long as this Favourite lived, the Kingdom could have no peace, nor the King any Money, nor yet the Queen enjoy his Conjugal Affection, as ſhe ought ; therefore when they had for ſome time maturely weighed all the Circumſtances of this Affair, both preſent and future, they at laſt reſolved to endure the worſt that could happen, rather than thus to be ſlighted and contemned by a Foreigner ; to prevent which, they choſe for their Leader, Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, the firſt Prince of the Royal Blood, as being Son to Edmund, who was younger Brother to the late King Edward, a perſon very remarkable for his Valour and Probity; who beſides his natural averſion to Arbitrary Power, was the more encouraged to engage in this Cauſe, by the Dying Speech of his late Father-in-Law, the Earl of Lincoln; which (as my [3] Author relates) was to this effect, That ſince God had bleſſed him with a greater Eſtate than any Nobleman in England, therefore he was bound the more to honour him; and now ſince he ſaw the Church of England, that was wont to be free, brought into Servitude by the Oppreſſions of the * Romans, and the unjuſt Exactions of our Kings ; and the People alſo which were wont to enjoy many Liberties, were brought into the ſame Condition by divers Tallages and Taxes unjuſtly impoſed on them, he therefore adjured him, by the Bleſſing of God and his own, that whenever he had an Opportunity, he ſhould free and defend the Church and People from ſuch Oppreſſions for the Honour of God; that tho' he ſhould pay all due Honour and Reverence to the King, that was his Lord, yet ſhould he cauſe him to remove from his Court Evil Counſellors and Strangers, and effectually to obſerve the Tenor of Magna Charta, and the other Articles (i. e. the late Ordinances) demanded by, and granted to the Clergy and Laity ; and that in order to the accompliſhing theſe things, he ſhould contract a ſtrict Alliance with Guy Earl of Warwick, who better underſtood them than any other. Having ended this Speech, he took his leave of the World ; and after his Funeral, the Earl of Lancaſter entred into a Confederacy for this purpoſe with Humfry de Bohun Earl of Hereford, Adomer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, Guy Beuchamp, Earl of Warwick, the Earl of Arundel and other Barons, too many to be here recited;

[2.] T. W.

[3.] Id. ib.

* i. e. The Court of Rome.

Anno Dom MCCCXII.

ted; but as for the Earl of Warren and Surry, who at firſt inclined toward the King, he was brought off to their Party by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who now undertook to relieve his Holy Mother the Church from Oppreſſion, and recover the due Liberty of the Kingdom.

[4] Id. ib.

[4.] The Earl of Lancaſter, being choſen Captain General by all that undertook this Cauſe, before they took up Arms, by Common Agreement ſent to the King then at York, a very reſpectful and humble Meſſage, beſeeching Him either to deliver Pierce Gaveſton to them, or elſe as it had been already ordained, command him to avoid the Kingdom. The King took ſmall notice of their Supplications, and reſolving not to grant them (ſo great was this Minion's power over Him) He for his ſecurity carried him from York to New-Caſtle upon Tine; upon which News, the Earl of Lancaſter and the Confederate Lords having already raiſed an Army, march'd towards that place; not that they intended (ſays my Author) any injury to their Lord the King; but only to ſeize Pierce Gaveſton, and judge him according to the Laws and Ordinances lately made; and though the King had ſecured that Town by a Gariſon, yet durſt they not ſtay there; but leaving the Queen at Tinmouth, not far off, (notwithſtanding ſhe was great with Child, and beſought Him with Tears not to quit her Company) He took a Veſſel, and ſailed with his beloved Gaveſton to Scarburgh, where He placed him (as He thought) ſecure enough, with Henry de Beaumont, a Frenchman, whom He made Governor of it; and having given farther Orders for the victualling and defence of the Caſtle, in caſe it ſhould be beſieged by the Barons, He Himſelf went again to York, hoping to raiſe ſome Forces thereabouts to relieve it, but He found himſelf miſerably miſtaken, none coming into his aſſiſtance; then preſently after the King's departure, the E. of Lancaſter, and the Confederate Earls and Barons came with their Forces to Newcaſtle; and [1.] Tricklow's Chronicle farther relates, That the Earl of Lancaſter, before he left that place, in order to perſue Gaveſton, ſent a Meſſenger to the Queen, then at Tinmouth Caſtle, to comfort Her, aſſuring Her, that He would not give over his perſuit, until he had revenged Her Quarrel, and removed that Minion from the King; and the Earl alſo made his Excuſe for not coming to Her in Perſon, leſt for Her ſake he ſhould incur the King's farther diſpleaſure.

[5.] Chron. Lan.

The K. leaves the Queen at Tinmouth, and goes with Gaveſton to Scarburgh, and then returns to York, to raiſe freſh Forces.

[1.] MS. in Bib. Cot.

The Earl of Lancaſter, with the Confederate Earls, &c. come to Newcaſtle, and ſend a Compliment to the Queen at Tinmouth.

Then [2.] the Lords ſeized upon Pierce Gaveſton's Horſes, and other Goods he had left at Newcaſtle, cauſing them to be valued, and put into ſafe Cuſtody, and then marched with what ſpeed they could to Scarburgh, and beſieged it; but the Earl of Lancaſter finding no oppoſition, return'd home with his Forces, that ſo he might not be burthenſome to the Adjacent Countrey, and left the Earls of Pembroke and Surrey to take the Caſtle of Scarburgh, who in a ſhort time ſo weary'd out the Gariſon within by conſtant Aſſaults, that they were not able to defend it; × whereupon, when Gaveſton ſaw there was no Remedy, he ſurrender'd himſelf upon certain Conditions; which a MS. French Chronicle of Chriſt Church, Canterbury, hath ſet down at large in an Inſtrument, drawn up by way of Indenture, between the Earls of Pembroke and Surrey, and the Lord Peircy, on their Part and Pierce Gaveſton's; whereby they engaged and ſwore on the Holy Sacrament, 'Not to do him any hurt, or permit any to be done him, but that they would 'convey him ſafely to the King then at York, and deliver him in the 'preſence of the Earl of Lancaſter; and if He aſſented to theſe Articles, 'then

[2] I. W.

They alſo ſeize upon all Gaveſton's Goods, and ſo retire.

Scarburgh Caſtle being cloſely beſieged by the Earls of Pembroke and Surrey, Gaveſton ſurrenders himſelf on certain Conditions.

× notwithstanding ye King did all he could to hinder them from taking it by sending his Commands under the Broad Seal [Rot. Pat. 5. Ed. 2. p. 2. m. 6. R. cot: p. 327, 328] directed to all Barons Knights & others engaged in the siege of that Place to desist & retire from the same, on Pain of Forfeiture of their Lives or Estates.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

then the ſaid Earl Gaveſton was to remain in the Cuſtody of theſe Lords till the next Parliament; but if they ſhould not grant what was now agreed to, the ſaid Lords were to convey him back, together with thoſe of his Retinue, to the Caſtle of Scarburgh, without any Fraud or delay: Theſe things being ſolemnly confirm'd under their Seals, was dated at the Caſtle the Nineteenth of May: Whereupon Pierce Gaveſton, with thoſe that were with him, came out of the place, and ſurrender'd themſelves to the Noblemen above-mention'd.

When [3.] the King heard that His Favourite was thus taken, and being ery deſirous to ſee him, once more interceeded that his Life might be aved; promiſing them, upon that Condition, to ſatisfie the Deſires of His Great Men in all things; and the Earl of Pembroke relying on this oyal Promiſe, perſwaded the Barons to yield to the King's Requeſt, romiſing, under pain of loſing all his Lands, to keep him ſafe, and hen to reſtore him to them at a day and place prefixed, but indeed intended to have carry'd him to Wallingford Caſtle; when in his way thiher, at Dadington (or Deddington) in Oxfordſhire, four or five Miles rom Bambury, the Earl having committed him to the care of his Serants, while he went to lodge with his Lady at a neighbouring place, he Earl of Warwick having notice of it, came privately with a great ultitude of Armed Men that Night, and took him from his Guard, nd carried him to Warwick Caſtle; where (as [4.] ſome Hiſtorians elate) the Earls of Lancaſter, Hereford and Arundel being then aſſemled, it was debated what they ſhould do with him, whether carry him o the King, or put him to death: Then a certain cunning Man among hem interpoſed, That it was to no purpoſe, having been at ſuch charge nd trouble in taking him, to hazard the loſing or the ſeeking of him again; nd therefore added, That it were much better he ſhould ſuffer Death, than have a new War raiſed in the Kingdom. All there aſſenting to this dvice, they preſently took him out of Priſon, and having paſſed entence of Death upon him, by certain Juſtices whom they had appointed for that purpoſe, he was carried to a riſing Ground, about a Mile North Eaſt of Warwick, called Blackloe, and there (as a publick nemy of the Kingdom) they cut off his Head on the nineteenth day f June.

[3.] Id ib. The King deſires to ſee him, and interceeds for his Life, which is agreed to by the Earl of Pembroke, who takes him into his protection.

The Earl of Warwick carries him away in the Night to Warwick Caſtle, where he is ſentenced to loſe his Head.

[4.] Chron. Eveſ. MS.

Who is executed at a place called Black-Loe.

His [5] Body was carried to Oxford, and there depoſited for a hile, in the Church of the Fryers Preachers; but about two Years afer, it was removed to Langley, where the King had built, and richly ndowed a Religious Houſe of the ſame Order, on purpoſe to pray for is Soul.

[5.] T. W. His Body buried for a time at Oxford.

Such was the Fate of this inconſiderate and unfortunate Young an, who too much relying on his Maſter's Favour, which he had btain'd by Evil and Vicious Courſes, became proud, inſolent and preming; but this not being able to be ſuffer'd by a powerful and highpirited Nobility, produced his Ruin, as you have heard; though he ſudden and violent manner of doing it contrary to the Articles t his Surrender, is not any way to be commended, much leſs ſtified.

But to make ſome farther Remarks on the manner of his being deliered up to the Barons, whereas Dr. Brady relates from a Record in he * Tower; that it was not the Earl of Pembroke, but the ord Henry Piercy, to whom Pierce Gaveſton then ſurrender'd himſelf; yet

* Rot. Pat. 6. E. 2. P. 1. m. 21. printed in Dr. Brady's Appen. n 56.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

yet for all this Writ or Warrant directed to John de Mowbray, Governor of York, I cannot be of the Doctor's Opinion, that the Earl of Pembroke was none of the Lords to whom Gaveſton was then delivered, becauſe this Record does not ſay ſo: And beſides, the French Chronicle above-mention'd, ſays expreſly, that he was a Party to the Inſtrument, upon which he truſted himſelf in their hands; and though it is true, he is not nam'd in the preſent Record, yet he may be very well comprehended under the Aliis; Thoſe others, to whom (as this Record ſays) he then ſurrender'd himſelf. X X But I am now better satisfy'd yt the Ld. Henry Peircy was ye chief Person to whom Gaveston then surrendred up himself upon Condition of having his Life preserved and this appears from ye Kings writt [Rot: Pat. 6. Edw. 2. p. 1. m. 20. R-1 Coll. p. 334] or commission under the Great Seal, directed to John de Mowbray Guardian of the County & City of York, commanding him to seize the Estate & Person of Henry de Peircy for permitting ye s. Piers de Gaveston to be killd, & then withdrawing himself from the Kings presence, by both which he rendred himself obnoxious. These bear Date at London Julij 9.

[1] T. W. The Great men ſend to the King, demanding the obſervation of the late Ordinances, whereupon the King thinks fit to treat with them, and ſends for 'em to that purpoſe.

The [1.] Great Men, thus having obtain'd their Wills againſt Gaveſton, ſent to the King, poſitively demanding the former Ordinances to be confirm'd and put in execution; threatning withal, that if it was not done ſpeedily, they would come and force Him to it; and not having a ſatisfactory Anſwer, they preſently raiſed and united their Forces, and quarter'd themſelves in the Countrey about Dunſtable, the King being then at London.

* Rot. Pat. 6 Ed. 2. Part. 1. m. 20. printed in Ryley's Placit. Parl. f. 541.

When He found himſelf in this great hazard, He thought it beſt for Him to treat with the Confederate Barons; and therefore * ſent Joh de Beneſtede, one of his Juſtices, to the Earls of Lancaſter, Hereford and Warwick, (three of the Lords Ordainers of the late Ordinances) commanding them to be with Him at London or Weſtminſter, on the Sunday next after St. Bartholomew, to treat in His preſence about correcting and reforming the ſaid Ordinances, if any thing ſhould be found in them injurious or prejudicial to Him; and was farther to enjoin them by their Faith and Homage, that they ſhould not come with Horſ and Arms. Witneſs the King the fourth of Auguſt at Canterbury.

* Ib. m. 20. printed in Dr. B's Ap. n. 58. The Earls to whom the Meſſage is directed, do not think to obey the King's Summons, but take Arms, which is forbidden by his Writ.

But the Earls, to whom theſe Letters were directed, did not think i ſafe to obey them; and * therefore notwithſtanding the ſaid Inhibition, they marched about the Countries with Horſe and Arms, encou raging the people to join with them; whereupon the King not long af ter, iſſued out a new Commiſſion to the Biſhops of Norwich, and Bath an Wells, together with the Earls of Richmond and other Noblemen; wher in reciting the moſt material parts of the former Commiſſion to Jo de Beneſtede, it farther proceeds; 'That ſince the aforeſaid Earls ha 'not come to Him, as they had been order'd and enjoin'd, nor had ſe 'any one to anſwer for them; and ſince He underſtood that the ſai 'Earls with Horſe and Arms, and a great multitude of Armed Me 'were coming towards Him, to the great terror of the People, He o 'der'd the ſame Commiſſioners to forbid the ſaid Earls, and every o 'of them, by the Faith and Homage they owed Him, to approach wi 'Horſe and Arms any nearer to Him; and if the Earls would not ob 'the Prohibition, then to forbid all and every one coming with the 'to proceed farther, under pain of Treaſon. Witneſs the King at Weſ minſter, the third day of September. What was done upon the Co miſſion, I find not, but if it were executed, it was without a effect.

[2.] T. W. The Bps. with the E. of Gloceſter, uſe their Endeavours for a Peace,] who with the Pope's Nuncios mediate between the K. and the Lords.

[2.] Whereupon the Biſhops, with the Earls of Gloceſter, perceivi this Diſſention would prove dangerous to the Church, as well as Kin dom, uſed all their Endeavours for a Peace: They meet at St. Alb with the Pope's Nuncios, who were lately ſent by Him as Mediators procure a Reconciliation between the King and the Lords: Theſe N ci

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

The Lord's refuſe to treat with the Legats, and the bold Anſwer they ſent 'em.

cios ſent certain Clerks from St. Albans to Whethamſted, about three or four Miles diſtant (where the Barons and their Forces then lay) with the Pope's Letters, perſuading them to Peace; but they would not receive them, ſaying, They were not Book-learned, but bred up to Arms, and therefore cared not to ſee them: Then the Meſſengers deſired to know if they would ſpeak with the Nuncio's, who would willingly come to them to propound and treat with them about a Project of Accommodation; but this alſo they utterly refuſed, ſending for Anſwer, That there were many Learned Biſhops in the Kingdom, whoſe Advice they would take, and not that of Strangers, who knew nothing of the Cauſe of this Diſſention. The Nuncios being ſtunn'd at this bold Return, early the next Morning made haſt to London, after they had ſtaid at St. Albans about a Month to no purpoſe; yet at laſt, ſays our Author, the Biſhops, and Earl of Glceſter, by great Induſtry, concluded a Peace: But this cannot be wholly true, for the Record of the Articles of Peace ſhew plainly, that the Pope's Nuncio's had a hand in it, as you will find by and by: Then about the middle of October the King and Lords met in a great Council at Weſtminſter, where after they had ſat till towards Chriſtmas, they were, thro' the Legate's Mediation, reconciled on theſe Conditions, in the following Form, tranſlated from the French * Original, on Record in the Tower.

A great Council at Weſtminſter, where a Reconciliation is made between the K. and Lords, and upon what Terms.

'This is the Treaty of Peace, Upon certain Diſpleaſures the King 'had conceiv'd againſt the Earls of Lancaſter, Hereford and Warwick, 'and other Barons and Great Men of his Realm, ~~being~~ made and accord'ed before the honourable Father Monſieur E~~[illegible]~~ rnaud, by the Grace of 'God Prieſt and Cardinal, by the Title of St. Priſca, Monſieur Arnold, 'Biſhop of Poictiers, ſent into England by our Holy Father the Pope, 'alſo Monſieur Lewis of France, Earl of Eureux; before whom the Earls 'of Gloceſter, Richmond and Hereford, and the Lords Robert de Clifford 'and John Botetorte, were ſent to London with ſufficient power to do, 'treat and agree on the part of the Earls and Barons; the Lords Hugh Le 'Diſpenſer and Nicholas de Segrave, being alſo deputed by the King to hear 'the ſaid Treaty, and report it to him in the manner following. The firſt Article was;

The Articles of this Treaty of Peace.

'1ſt. That the Earls and Barons ſhould come before the King in Weſtminſter-hall, and with great Humility on their Knees make their Sub'miſſion, and ſwear, if He would ſo have them, That what they did, 'and for which they had incurr'd his Diſpleaſure, was not done in de'ſpight of Him, and they ſhould humbly pray his Forgiveneſs, and re'ceive it with a good will; and ſhould reſtore all that was taken at 'Newcaſtle upon Tine, or other places from Pierce Gaveſton, deceaſed, 'whatever it was, viz. his Jewels, Horſes and other things, &c.

'2d. The Second Article contain'd a Bill for the ſecurity of the 'ſaid Earls and Barons, their Adherents and Allies, which was to be 'paſſed into a Statute at the next Parliament, to be holden on the Third 'Sunday in Lent; and farther, that the King ſhould releaſe and quit 'the Earls, Barons, their Adherents, Friends and Allies, all Rancor, 'Diſpleaſure, Actions and Accuſations, &c. which had aroſe by the 'occaſion of Pierce Gaveſton, whether it were for the taking, detain'ing, or Death, or the ſeizing any Town or Caſtle, or beſieging of 'them, or for bearing of Arms, or impriſoning any perſons in order 'thereunto.

---

* Rot Clauſ. 6 Ed. 2. m. 8. dorſ. printed in Riley's Placit. Parl. f. 538.

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

3*d*. Alſo it was agreed, 'That if this Security pleaſed the Earls, 'tho they would not come to Parliament in their proper perſons, yet 'they might ſend their Proxies with ſufficient power to receive and con-'ſent to a Security to be made in that Parliament, for the Adherents 'and Receivers of Pierce Gaveſton; which Security was then treated of 'and agreed, and is there recited.

4*th*. Alſo the ſaid Treators agreed, 'That in the next Parliament 'there ſhould be proviſion made by the Common Aſſent of the Pre-'lates, Earls and Barons, that in all Parliaments, Treaties and other 'Aſſemblies in England, for that time forward, for ever, all Men ſhould 'come without Force and Arms, peaceably, to the honour of the King, 'and the Peace of Him and the Realm; and the three Lords Treators 'promiſed to uſe their utmoſt Endeavour, with the Earls of Lancaſter 'and Warwick, by themſelves or Proxies, that they would conſent to 'this Proviſion: And farther it was order'd, That no Buſineſs ſhould 'be propounded in this next Parliament, before the ſaid Securities, and 'this Proviſion was made and confirmed; nor any to come with Arms; 'and then they might treat of other Parliament-Matters, as there 'might be occaſion.

5*th*. Alſo the Treators promiſed, 'That after this Reconciliation 'was made, they would do what in them lay, and uſe their utmoſt 'Endeavours with their Peers, that the King ſhould have an 'Agreeable Aid of the whole Realm for his War againſt Scot-'land.

'6. Alſo whereas the ſaid Treators complain'd, that the King, ſince 'the ſafe Conduct given for this Treaty to the Lords and their Adhe-'rents, had cauſed the Lands and Goods of Sir Griffin de la 'Pole to be ſeized, and alſo of Sir Fouk L'eſtrange; therefore there were 'to be two Juſtices (not ſuſpected of Partiality) appointed by the King 'to examine theſe Matters, and do them right.

'7. Alſo that the Goods of Sir Henry de Piercy, which were ſeized 'by the King, ſhould be reſtored by Pledges or Sureties by the next 'Parliament.

8. Alſo it was agreed on behalf of the King, 'That all Men might 'ſafely paſs and repaſs through the Kingdom of England, or elſewhere, 'for the diſpatch of this Buſineſs under his Protection, they neither do-'ing nor receiving any Wrong. This Conduct and Security was to 'continue until Pentecoſt next coming; and of this the King was to 'grant Letters under the Great Seal to the Earls, Barons and their Ad-'herents. Then follows this Memorandum.

'The Collation of this Indenture was made and read in the Year of 'Grace 1312, on the Wedneſday next before Chriſtmas, in the Cardi-'nal's Chamber at London, in the preſence of the ſaid Cardinal, the 'Biſhop of Poictiers, the Biſhop of Worceſter, the Earl of Pembroke, and 'many others: In Witneſs whereof, one part of the Indenture re-'main'd with the King, and the other part was given to Maſter John 'Waleweyn, and Michael de Meldon, to be carried to the Earls and 'Barons. X

X And I find by ye Records in the Tower, that in Pursuance of this Agreement, all the Jewels, Plate & Horses belonging to the late Piers Gaveston were delivered by the Earls of Lancaster and Warwick, & other Lds & Barons there mentioned to the King's Chancellor & Treasurer according to an Inventory [Pat: 6. Ed. 2. pt. 1. m. 3. in Sced.] then made of them under the King's Broad Seal dated 7th of Feb: following

Yet for all this, the Securities mention'd in the Second Article of the Treaty, were not paſſed into Statutes, nor the Submiſſion made by the Lords in the next Parliament, which was ſummon'd on the twentieth of January, in the Sixth Year of the Reign of this King, to meet on

Anno Dom. MCCCXII.

on the Third Sunday in Lent, nor yet in the next to that, which was ſummon'd on the Twenty third of May next following, to meet fifteen days aſter the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt; but being ſtill put off, was done in that which was ſummon'd on the Twenty ſixth of July, in the Seventh year of his Reign, to meet on Sunday next aſter the Feaſt of S Matthew the Apoſtle, as you will find hereaſter, and alſo appears by the old Edition of Statutes, printed 1540.

Thus a Peace was concluded at length between the King and the Earl of Lancaſter, and the reſt of the Earls and Barons that were of his Party: But the King took the Death of Pierce Gaveſton ſo heavily, that He never forgave thoſe that had a hand in it, but ſeverely revenged it upon moſt of them, as you will read in due time. I meet with little elſe of moment to have happen'd this Year, [3.] but that on the Thirteenth of November, the King received ſome Comfort for the loſs of his Favourite, by the Birth of his eldeſt Son at Windſor, to the great joy of the whole Nation; who (upon his Father's Depoſition and Reſignation of the Crown) ſucceeded to it by the Name of Edward the Third.

[3.] T. W. The Birth of P. Edward, afterwards King Edward the 3d.

[4.] In the mean while, if we look into the North Parts of England, we ſhall find them in a moſt miſerable Condition; for King Robert hearing of theſe Diſſentions between the King and his Nobility, with a great Army again invaded England about the middle of Auguſt, and burnt the Towns of Hexham and Corbridg, and waſted all the Weſtern Parts; and no Forces being left able to reſiſt him, he ſent a great part of his Army as far as Durham, who coming thither on the ſudden, plunder'd and burnt great part of it, killing thoſe that made any reſiſtance; yet the Caſtle and Precinct of the Church and Abby being well fortified, they could not ſtay to beſiege them, but the People of that Biſhoprick, fearing what farther Miſchief the Scots might do them, compounded with them for the ſum of Two thouſand Pounds, to enjoy the benefit of a Truce till Midſummer next enſuing, which the Scots would not grant, unleſs upon this Condition; That they might have free Ingreſs and Regreſs through that County, whenever they had a mind to invade England; and then the People of Northumberland fearing the like Conſequences, paid Two thouſand Pounds more to be included in the ſame Truce; as did alſo the Counties of Cumberland and Weſtmorland; but they not having ready Money ſufficient to pay the whole down, were forced to give Hoſtages for the Remainder: This done, King Robert and his Army return'd into Scotland with a great ſtore of Priſoners and Plunder. Some time aſter this, in the beginning of December, the Scots had like to have ſurpriz'd the Town of Berwick, by the means of certain Scaling Ladders of Ropes, which they hung by hooks upon the Walls; but they being diſcover'd by the barking of a Dog, were forc'd to retire with Loſs: But though King Robert was diſappointed here, yet He had better Succeſs in his own Countrey; where not long aſter, by means of the like Ladders, He ſurprized St. John's-Town, and put the Scots that were of the Engliſh ſide to the Sword; but as for the Engliſh themſelves, they had their Lives and Liberties given them by the Conqueror, who now almoſt quite demoliſhed the Town, becauſe the Engliſh ſhould not fix there any more.

[4] Chron. Lan.

The King of Scots invades England, waſtes the Countrey, and burns part of Durham, and makes the whole Biſhoprick compound for a very large Sum.

The Scots had like to have taken Berwick by ſurprize.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIII.

The [5] King this Year kept his Chriſtmas at Windſor, being attended by few Engliſh, but many French Noblemen, who by their private Whiſpers and Detractions increaſed the King's Averſion againſt the Ba-

[5] T. W.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIII.

The King is incited against the Barons by certain French Noblemen rons, and made him not at all value their Counſels; ſo that the former Differences between the King and them began to revive, for what pleaſed one of them ſtill diſpleaſed the other.

* Rot. Clauſ. 6 Ed. 2. m. 3. Dorſ.

The King reſolves to make a Voyage into France with his Queen, and goes to Paris.

[1.] Chron. ad Mur.

After which I find nothing conſiderable until the Month of May, when the King reſolved to make a Voyage, together with his Queen, into France, to tranſact ſome Affairs with his Father-in-Law King Philip, as appears by the * Writs of Summons for a Parliament, to meet fifteen Days after Midſummer next enſuing, and bears Date the Twentieth of May, at Dover, though it was then put off, and afterwards diſſolved, without doing any thing conſiderable.

Then [1.] the King having appointed John de Brokensford, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, Guardian of the Kingdom in his Abſence, paſſed over to Calais, and from thence went to Paris, where He was preſent at the Solemnity of Knighting Lewis, eldeſt Son to the King of France, with his Brothers Charles and Philip, which was perform'd on Whitſunday following, with great Solemnity.

[1.] Chron. S. Auguſt. MS.

* Rot. Clauſ. 7 Ed. 2. m. 27. Dorſ.

The King at his Return ſummons another Parliament.

[2] T. W. Chron. Lan.

In which the King complains of the Injuries he had received by their taking P. Gaveſton and cutting off his Head; with the Anſwer of the Lords.

[1.] King Edward and his Queen remain'd in France till towards the middle of July, then they return'd into England, as appears by the * Writ of Summons to another Parliament; wherein it is ſet forth, That little or nothing having been done in the laſt Parliament (which was held during the King's Abſence), He therefore ſummon'd another to meet at Weſtminſter, the Sunday after St. Matthew's-day (or Twenty first of September) next enſuing, which Writ bears date at Dover on the Twenty ſixth of July, in the Seventh Year of his Reign, not long after his return. [2.] This Parliament being met on the Day aforeſaid, the Earl of Lancaſter appeared there with a great number of Armed Attendants rais'd from his own Tenants; the King began to renew his Complaint before the Clergy and Laity, concerning the Affronts and Injuries that had been done Him at Newcaſtle, and of their taking Pierce de Gaveſton, and cutting off his Head, contrary to the Articles he had made at his Surrender; but the Confederate Earls and Barons on the other ſide unanimouſly anſwered to theſe Accuſations, That they had in no ways offended the King in what was laid to their Charge, but rather deſerved his Thanks and Good Will, ſince they did not bring an Army thither in Contempt of his Authority, but that they might deſtroy a Publick Enemy of the Kingdom, who had been often baniſhed by the Community thereof, and which Sentence had been confirm'd by the King Himſelf, as being a Perſon who had not only injured the King's Reputation, but had robb'd the Crown of its Revenues, and had raiſed perpetual Diſſention between the King and his Natural Subjects: And they alſo boldly declared, That they would no more truſt to his vain Promiſes, or be deferr'd any longer of their Security; which the Queen with the Prelates, and the Earl of Gloceſter (who now again ſtood Neuter) perceiving, they did what they could, by mitigating the Diſpleaſure of both Parties, to make Peace between them; and at laſt it was concluded by their Mediation, ^ That the King ſhould wholly remit his Diſpleaſure towards them, provided thoſe Barons, with their Partakers, did in Weſtminſter-Hall, in full Parliament, perform what had been ſometime before agreed on, viz. That they ſhould humble themſelves before Him, and beg his Pardon in whatever they had offended Him, and thereupon the King ſhould receive them again into his Grace and Favour, and ſhould look upon them for the future as his Leigemen

The Queen and Earl of Gloceſter mediate an Agreement between the King and Barons, and on what Conditions.

X And also of Lewis Count of Evreux and the Ingelram de Margny, who were sent over by the King of France for that Purpose, as appears by King Edward's Letter to him concerning it entred on ye Roll of this year. [Rot. Rom. & Fran. m. 14. d. R. I. Coll. p. 434. [Rot Rom & Fran: m.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIII.

men and Subjects; and confirming all the Articles required, ſhould never again queſtion any man for the Death of Pierce Gaveſton; but ſhould grant his Charter of Pardon and Indemnity to all that ſhould deſire it: All which Particulars being agreed to by the King, and perform'd by theſe Barons, they and the reſt of the Great Men of the Kingdom conſidering the King's Neceſſity, granted Him a Fifteenth of all their moveable Goods, and ſo the Parliament was diſſolved, every man going home with joy and ſatiſfaction.

and there is on ye Rolls of this year ye King's Letters Patents to his Cousin ye Earl of Lancaster [Rot: Pat: 7. Ed 2. m. 15. & 1 Coll. p. 443. 444] with ye Earls of Hereford & Warwick & to divers other Barons, Knights, & Gentlemen, who had been engag'd in the late War against the sd Pierce, remitting & pardoning all Rancours, Quarrels, Actions, & Accusations by Reason of his Death, & the taking of ye King's Towns and Castles.

The Reader is alſo to take notice, that * there were paſſed in this Parliament two ſeveral Statutes, the former of which hath this Title, Ne quis occaſionetur pro morte Petri de Gaveſton; i. e. That no Man be proſecuted for the Death of Pierce Gaveſton: And the other was for the ſecurity of ſuch as had adhered to, or received him, as this Title ſhews; Ne quis Occaſionetur pro Reditu Petri de Gaveſton, viz. That no Man be proſecuted for the Return of Pierce de Gaveſton: But why theſe Securities did not paſs in either of the laſt Parliaments, (as had been already agreed to) I cannot tell, unleſs it ſhould be by reaſon of the King's Abſence, and becauſe the Lords thought themſelves ſafe enough without them, and did not care to humble themſelves, and beg the King's Pardon for what they had done; tho' without this they had no right to demand the ſaid Act of Indemnity.

* Vid. the Old Edit. of Stat. printed 1556. p. 42^{b}. 44^{a}.

I ſhall conclude this Year with the unhappy Succeſs of the Engliſh Forces that were left in Scotland, where [3.] King Robert Bruce taking advantage of the late Diſſentions and Differences between the King and his Nobility, had now reduced moſt part of Scotland to his Obedience, having the Year before taken St. John's-Town by ſurprize (as hath been already related) upon which, not long after, the Gariſons in Dumfrees, Ayre, and ſeveral other Places, ſurrender'd to the Scotiſh King; and this preſent Year the Caſtle of Roxburgh was ſurprized by James Douglas, which they demoliſhed, and that of Edinburgh was alſo taken by Thomas Randulph; for whilſt the Scots made a feign'd aſſault on the South Gate, and the Gariſon was employ'd in the defence of it, ſome others clamber'd up the Rock, and clapping Scaling-Ladders to the Walls, entred and let in the reſt of their Countreymen: [4.] Yet a Manuſcript Author here obſerves, that one great Reaſon why all theſe Caſtles made no better a reſiſtance, was, becauſe moſt of them had been by the King put into the cuſtody of Foreigners, who would not venture any hazard in their defence.

[3.] Boeth. Lib. 4. Buchan Lib. 8.

The King of Scots reduces Scotland to his Obedience, taking St. John's Town, Edinburgh and other Places.

[4.] Scala Chron. in Bib. Ben.

In the mean while [5.] Edward Bruce the King's Brother, cloſely beſieged the Caſtle of Sterling, in which was Philip Mowbray, a ſtout and provident Governor, who ſeeing the late great Succeſs of the Scots, had ſtrongly fortified, and very well victualled it; ſo that the Lord Edward Bruce, after ſome time lying before it, deſpaired of taking it by force, wherefore both ſides agreed on theſe Conditions: That if the Engliſh did not relieve the Caſtle within a Year from the Day of the Treaty, it ſhould be delivered unto the Scots; and that the Gariſon ſhould have ſafe Conduct to go whither they would, with all their Goods; which was afterwards perform'd accordingly.

[5.] Id. Buchan.

The Caſtle of Sterling cloſely beſieged.

As to Church Matters, this Year [1.] Robert Winchelſey, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, deceaſed on the 20th Day of May, after he had held that See 18 Years; he was a ſtirring intrieguing Prelate, and being highly devoted to the Papal Intereſt, had given the late King Edward a great deal

[1.] Chron. Will. Thorne ad hunc Ann. Col. 2278.

The deceaſe of Robert ABP. of Canterbury.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIII.

[2] T. W.

He is ſucceeded by Walter Reynolds Bp. of Worceſter.

deal of Trouble, as you have ſeen in his Reign; and it was chiefly thro' his encouragement that the Earl of Lancaſter ſo ſtrongly reſiſted the King's Exorbitant Courſes. [2.] Upon his Deceaſe the Monks of Chriſt-Church Canterbury choſe Thomas de Cobham, Doctor in Divinity, a Perſon of great Worth and Learning, Archbiſhop, but the Pope vacated the Election, and by the King's Interceſſion nominated Walter Reynolds, Biſhop of Worceſter, then Chancellor, one of more Secular Prudence than Learning, but a great Favourite of the King's, who was conſecrated in the beginning of October following; but however the Pope, to make Dr. Cobham, whom he had ſet by, ſome Amends, not long after promoted him to the See of Worceſter. *(1)

Anno Dom. MCCCXIV.

[2.] T. W. Chron. Lan.

The Scots again invade Northumberland, and aſſault Carliſle; whereupon the King reſolves upon an Expedition againſt them, and ſummons the Militia of the Kingdom to Newcaſtle for that purpoſe.

The Earls of Lancaſter, Warwick, &c. refuſe to attend him, and for what reaſon.

The K. draws out his whole Army to fight the Scots, and receives an entire defeat, with great loſs of men

[3.] Buchan. Lib. 16.

[2.] K. Edward this Year kept his Chriſtmas at London, and preſently after Eaſter, (2) receiving the ill News, that the Scots were enter'd Cumberland, and had ſpoiled the Country, kill'd the Inhabitants, and burnt many Towns, and aſſaulted the City of Carliſle, though they could not take it, by reaſon that ſo many of the People of thoſe Parts had fled thither for refuge: To revenge theſe Injuries, the King reſolved to make a Royal Expedition againſt the Scots, to drive them back into their own Countrey; wherefore He ſummon'd the whole Militia of the Kingdom to meet him at Newcaſtle upon Tine, three Weeks after Eaſter, and march from thence againſt his Enemies; and all that owed him Service came in to Him, except the Earls of Lancaſter, Warwick, Warren, and Arundel, who refus'd to perform their Services, becauſe the King had not effectually obſerved and put the late Ordinances in due execution; yet notwithſtanding He marched with a vaſt Army of near a Hundred thouſand Men (as the Scotiſh Hiſtorians relate) to the relief of Sterling Caſtle; near which being encamp'd, ſome of the Engliſh Army made Sallies toward that of the Scots, which lay before the Caſtle, and challenged them to come out of their Trenches, and fight them; and they coming out accordingly, were too hard for the Engliſh, and ſlew many Gentlemen; at which the King much provoked, was perſwaded to draw out his whole Army the next day, being the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt (or Midſummer Day) in order to fight the Scots: Then the Engliſh Generals drew up their Armies in three Battalions; the middle or main Body conſiſted of Pikemen and Archers to defend whom, the Horſe were placed in the two Wings; the Scots had but few Horſe, and were likewiſe drawn up in three Diviſions [3.] King Robert Himſelf marched in the head of the middlemoſt, whilſt his Brother, the Lord Edward, commanded the Right Wing, and Sir Thomas Randulph the Left; when the two Armies met, there was for a while a moſt terrible Conflict, but the Right Wing of the Engliſh Horſe advancing to fall upon the Left of the Scots, which Randulph commanded, were overthrown in certain deep Trenches which King Robert had ordered to be made, and being cover'd over with Hurdles were not taken notice of by the Engliſh Horſe that fell into them but this cauſed ſuch a terror and diſorder in the reſt that followed that they preſently retreated; in the mean while King Robert gave ſuch a vigorous aſſault upon the main Body of the Engliſh, as made them give ground; for ſeeing a great number of the Scotiſh Servants and Boys of the Camp drawn up on the ſide of an adjoining Hill, and taking them for another Body of Men coming down upon them, thoſe that were next began to run, and in their flight diſorder'd them that

---

(1) and I cannot but take notice, that the Pope and Council of Vienne having * conferr'd all the Lands, Revenues & Goods of the late dissolved Order of the Kts on the Kts Hospitallers, that were in England, & other Kingdoms. When this Decree be put in Execution, the King was so ill satisfyed with the Power of ye sd Council of ye sd Goods and Estates, that in the presence of a publick Notary, reciting ye sd Act in so do of the Pope & Council, he entred a Solemn Protestation against it; and that tho' for of the Dangers that might otherwise arise to ye Kingdom, he was forced for the present to submit to it, yet yt he would still preserve his own Right & yt of his Subjects to ye sd Goods & Revenues, notwithstanding any rendering of them to the sd Kts Hospitallers: and he further protests, that he wd still act against ye sd Ordinances and Decrees, whenever it shd seem convenient for himself & his sd Subjects so to do, & wd have Recourse to ye ancient Right which they had to the same: And of this he now sealed an Instrument under his Seal dated ye 7. of ye Kal: of December vid: Orig. publish'd in R—'s Coll. p. 451-452.

From this we may observe yt ye King & his Council did not then think, yt ye Pope & Council had any Power to dispose of temporal Estates, & Fees within his Dominions.

Yet about ye same Time he issued out several Writts in ye [Claus: 7. Ed. 2. m. 10. R—'s Coll. p. 454, 455.] on ye Close Rolls, directed to ye Keepers or Guardians of ye sd Lands & Revenues in ye several Counties, commanding them to deliver the Premisses to ye Procurators of ye sd Order of Kts Hospitallers therein named, for ye use of ye sd Order according to ye Decree of ye sd Council; he ye King having already entred a Protestation for ye Preservation of his own Right, & yt of his Subjects thereunto. This bears Date at Westminster 28. Novbr.

(2) But there is an Errour in ye Time as set down by Walsingham for this Expedition; for it appears by ye Writts of Summons [Claus: 7. Ed. 2. m. 14. d. R—'s Coll. p. 463 were to Thomas Earl of Lancaster, & other Earls & Barons, yt ye Day for their meeting King at Berwick was on Monday before the Feast of St. Barnabas, or ye 16. of June, when they were to be ready there with their Horses & Arms. dated Westminster ~~of~~ 23d of December.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXIV

vere behind: [3.] When the Earl of Gloceſter perceived this ill Succeſs, beng highly concern'd at it, he drew up together all his Soldiers and Miliary Tenants, who falling pell-mell upon the Scots, made a conſiderable laughter among them for a time; but they being few in compariſon f the Enemies, were ſoon over-powered, and he himſelf, tho fighting nanfully, was ſlain: the King ſeeing the main Body of his Army routd, wherein He himſelf (engaged) behaved himſelf with ſufficient Courage, till being overpower'd, He was forced to fly toward the Cale of Dunbar, as did alſo the Earls of Hereford and Pembroke, but the ormer was taken Priſoner by the way, as was alſo the Lord de Mounhermer, who had married the King's Siſter, Mother to the young Earl te deceaſed.

[3.] T. W.
The Earl of Gloceſter is ſlain.

The King is forced to fly to the Caſtle of Dunbar.

Beſides [4.] the Earl of Gloceſter, there fell that day the Lord Robert e Clifford, with many other Barons, beſides Seven hundred Knights nd Eſquires; ſo that there were no leſs than an hundred and fifty four arls, Barons or Baronets killed and taken Priſoners: As for the number of Common Soldiers ſlain on both ſides, our Hiſtorians are ſilent, hich ſhews they were a vaſt number; but the [5.] Scotiſh Writers rete, That no leſs than Fifty thouſand Engliſh were then ſlain, and of heir own Nation only Four thouſand; the former of which Accounts eems very incredible; but we muſt give them leave to magnifie their Victories as much as they pleaſe, to make ſome amends for their ſo may Defeats. This bloody Battel was fought on the 25th day of June, ot far from the Caſtle of Sterling, and from a ſmall River called Banock, hich near that place runs into the Sea, (and in which a great number of he Engliſh Horſe thinking to paſs over, by crowding upon one another, ere drowned) is therefore called the Battel of Banocksbourn, and was o fatal to the Engliſh, that they did not in two Years after make any olerable Defence againſt the Scots, tho they were provoked to it by diers Invaſions: And this Battel may ſerve as one of thoſe many Exámles in Hiſtory, where a few reſolute and well diſciplin'd men have put o flight a vaſt number of preſuming and inſolent Enemies; for the Scots ere not above Thirty thouſand in all.

[4.] Id. ib.
The number of the ſlain on the Engliſh ſide.
[5.] Boeth and Buchan. ib.
Much augmented by the Scotiſh Hiſtorians.

This Fight is called the Battel of Banocks Bourn.

[5.] After the Battel, King Robert having cauſed the Dead Bodies to e buried, bountifully divided the Spoils of the Slain among his Soldiers, y which Scotiand was very much enriched, the Engliſh having brought heir beſt Equipage to this Battel, beſides a great deal of ready Moey.

[5.] T. W.
King Robert divides the Spoil among his Soldiers, and ſends back the Bodies of the ſlain Noblemen.
[1.] Id. Buchan. ib.

King [1.] Edward ſtaid not long at Dunbar, but went by Sea to Berick, and upon his arrival there, the King of Scots ſent him the Bodies f the Earl of Gloceſter, and the Lord Clifford, and generouſly diſmiſs'd he Lord Mounthermer without any Ranſom, becauſe he had been formerly ery well acquainted with him: As for the Earl of Gloceſter, he was a oung Nobleman of great Hopes and Valour, and dying without any ſſue, his vaſt Eſtate fell to be divided between his three Siſters, who beng married to three conſiderable Barons, raiſed as many great Families n England. Upon this late Defeat at Banockborn (the Diſcontented Baons, of whom the Earl of Lancaſter was chief) laid all the fault on the ounger Le Diſpencer, and that it was by his Advice that this Misforune had happened, as being too favourable to the King of Scots; but ſince find this only in one [2.] Author, and he a Foreigner, I will not paſs y Word for the truth of it.

[2.] Froyſart L. 1. cap. 5.

King

Anno Dom. MCCCXIV.

[3] C. A. M. The King ſummons a Parliament at York, where little is done.

King [3.] Edward leaving Berwick, went into York, whither He had ſummon'd a Parliament to meet on our Lady's Aſſumption, (or fifteenth of Auguſt) but the Nation being in a great Conſternation, by the late great Loſs, though this Aſſembly ſat from that time until Michaelmas, yet nothing was then concluded about the Scots, more, than That they agreed to exchange the Lady of King Robert, who had been above nine Years Priſoner in England, for the Earl of Hereford; and ſome other Noblemen taken in the late Battel, were exchanged for the Biſhop of Glaſco and the Earl of Mar; but as for the reſt of the Priſoners, they were forced to ranſom themſelves as well as they could.

[4.] T. W. Chron. Lan. The King returns into the South of England.

After his Departure the Scots invade Northumberland and lay it waſte.

So [4.] ſoon as the Parliament was diſſolved, the King return'd into the South Parts of England, where He ſpent the Winter: But though an Account of the Scotiſh Devaſtations this Year, is not very pleaſant to relate, yet I cannot omit, That ſo ſoon as the Scots had notice of King Edward's leaving Scotland, about the beginning of Auguſt the Lord Edward Bruſe, and the Lord James Douglas, with other Noblemen, invaded England on Berwick ſide, with a great Army, waſting and reducing into their Power all Northumberland (except ſuch ſtrong Caſtles as held out) and then marched into the Biſhoprick of Durham, where they did not ſo much miſchief, becauſe the People ranſom'd themſelves from plundering and burning, by laying down a great ſum of Money, after this entring that Part of Yorkſhire about Richmond, they did much worſe, driving away a great Booty of Cattel, and taking many Priſoners, without any reſiſtance, all perſons that could flying away before them; then they returned home by Swaldale, and burnt Appelbey and Kinkwold and other Towns in thoſe Parts, but thoſe of Coupland redeemed themſelves by paying a great ſum of Money: And not contented with this, [5.] even whilſt the laſt Parliament was ſitting, the Scot again entred England by Redeſdale and Tindale, driving away the Cattel, burning the Towns, and deſtroying the Inhabitants, none bein able to reſiſt them; then they went and reduc'd all Gilleſland, ſo that th People in all thoſe Parts ſwore Allegiance to the King of Scots, and pai Him Tribute; in the ſpace of Six Months, the County of Cumberlan alone, paid no leſs than Six hundred Marks for its ſhare: And Walſingham farther ſays, The Engliſh were ſo diſpirited, that a hundred of the would run away from two or three Scotchmen; which ſhews us ho much a Nation, (though otherwiſe ſufficiently courageous) may b caſt down and diſheartened by a long courſe of unexpected Misfortunes. In the mean while the Civil Differences, and Miſunderſtandings between the King and the Diſcontented Nobility ſecretly i creaſed, of whom the Earls of Lancaſter and Warwick were th Chief.

[5.] Id. Ib. They make another Incurſion, and reduce the Countrey to the Obedience of their King.

Anno Dom. MCCCXV.

[1.] T. W.

* Rot. Clauſ. 8 Ed. 2 m. A Parliament ſummon'd, wherein the Prizes were ſet on all ſort of Victuals.

This Year the King having kept his Chriſtmas at Windſor, pr ſently after removed the Body of Pierce Gaveſton his late Favourite, an new buried it at Langley in Hartfordſhire, with great Solemnity, th Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and divers other Biſhops being preſent from thence He return'd to London a little before Candlemas, whither *H had ſummon'd a Parliament the day after that Feaſt, or (as the Recor more rightly places it) eight days after St. Hilary (or 20th of January when the Prelates, Peers and Commons were all there aſſembled, the began firſt to treat of the ſad Condition of the Kingdom, and how t abate the exceſſive price of Victuals, which by reaſon of the late ba

Year

Anno Dom. MCCCXV.

Years was grown ſo intolerable, that the Ordinary People had much ado to live; whereupon according to the Record, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and others of the Community of the Kingdom, petitioning to the King and His Council, *'That Oxen, Cows, 'Muttons, Hogs, Geeſe, Hens, Capons, Chickens, Pigeons and Eggs, 'were intolerably dear; it was thereupon enacted and proclaim'd in every County, That the beſt Ox not fed with Grain, ſhould be ſold for '*16 s. and no more; and if he were fed with Corn, then for 24 s. 'at the moſt; the beſt live Fat Cow for 12 s. a Fat Hog of two Years 'old, for 3 s. and 4 d. a Fat Weather, or Mutton unſhorn, for 20 d. 'and ſhorn for 14 d. a Fat Gooſe for 2½ d. a Fat Capon for 2 d. a Fat 'Hen for 1 d. two Chickens for 1 d. four Pigeons for 1 d. and twenty 'four Eggs for 1 d. and thoſe that would not ſell theſe things at theſe 'Rates, ſhould forfeit them to the King: Which Petition being granted in Parliament, immediately it became a Temporary Statute; yet it could not take any ſufficient effect, by reaſon that the ſcarcity of all Proviſions ſtill increaſed, a Quarter of Corn, not long after, being ſold for 20 s. and Barley for a Mark; but the Sheep having been moſt dead of the Rot, and Corn being ſo very dear, Hogs and Poultry could not be afforded to be kept, whereby all manner of Freſh Meats became ſo ſcarce, that the King going to St. Albans about the beginning of November, had much ado to get Bread to ſuſtain his Family. But to return to ſome more material Matters.

* Rot. Parl. 8 Ed. 2. n. 35, 36.

* Note, Silver was then at 20 d. the Ounce.

This Parliament above mention'd gave the King a Twentieth part of their Goods or Moveables; * which Tax, when it came to be raiſed in Staffordſhire and Shropſhire, ſome diſſatisfy'd People refuſed to pay, and hindred the Collectors appointed by the King from gathering it, pretending it was granted upon certain Conditions; to wit, That He ſhould cauſe the Great Charter of the Liberties of England, and the Charter of the Foreſt, with the Ordinances lately made by the Prelates, Earls and Barons, and the Perambulation of the Foreſts to be obſerved, which were not then duly obſerved: At which the King was much ſurpriz'd and diſpleas'd, ſeeing He had commanded them to be kept, and had aſſigned Commiſſioners in all Counties to make their Perambulations; therefore that He might be throughly ſatisfy'd about the nature of the Action, and have the Names of the Actors; He then appointed one of his Clerks, with the Collectors, to make Enquiry by themſelves, and if it were needful, by the Oaths of ſo many Lawful Men of thoſe Parts, of all Particulars concerning the ſame, and certifie him diſtinctly of them.

* Rot. Pat. 8 Ed. 2. Part 2^da^. m. 12. Dorſ.

The Parliament gives the King a 20th part of their Perſonal Eſtates; which ſome refuſe to pay.

[2.] After this another Parliament met fifteen days after Eaſter following. But here is no particular cauſe expreſſed in the * Writs, why they met again ſo ſoon, though it may be ſuppoſed, it was to repreſs the Malice of the Scots; but becauſe divers of the Great Men making ſome Excuſes for their Abſence, did not then come up, thoſe that were in Town did nothing but trifle away the Time; and even thoſe that were bound to defend the Kingdom, permitted the Scots to waſt Northumberland, and all the North of England, as far as York; ſo that no Place was ſafe, unleſs it were Carliſle and New-caſtle upon Tine, and a few other ſtrong Caſtles. And ye King was now so much put to it for want of Money, that he was forced to direct his Writts [Rot: Claus: 8. Ed. 2. n. 12. d. R— Coll. p. 511, 512.] of privy Seal to the Abbots & Priors of most of the Monasteries of England to borrow of some 200li, of others 100 Marks, and of others 50. (according to ye greatness & Richness of their Foundation) to repress the Rebellion & Malice of ye Scots. Those Writts bear Date ye 15th Day of March.

[2.] T.W.
* Rot. Claſ. 8 Ed. 2. m. 27. dorſ.

Another Parliament, wherein nothing is done; during which the Scots waſt Northumberland.

Anno Dom. MCCCXV.

* Ad hunc Ann. A more particular Account of the Miſchiefs done by the Scots. Carliſle beſieged by them, tho' in vain.

And ſince the * Chronicle of Lanercoſt gives us a more particular Account of what the Scots did in England this Year, I ſhall here inſert it; About the beginning of the Spring, they entred the Biſhoprick of Durham, and plunder'd the Town of Herlepool, the Inhabitants flying to the Ships in the Harbour with ſuch Goods as they could carry with them: The Scots return'd from thence with a conſiderable Booty; and about the end of July, King Robert came with a great Army before Carliſle, and laying cloſe Siege to it, aſſaulted it both by Engines and ſtorming, for about 10 or 11 days; but the Townſmen ſo well defended it, that the Scots deſpairing of Succeſs, raiſed the Siege; whereupon the Gariſon ſallying out on the ſudden at their Backs, took the Lords Murrey and Bardolph Priſoners, and carried them into the City: After this the Scots endeavoured to have ſurpriz'd Berwick, by means of certain Veſſels from the River; but being diſcover'd, were repulſed with loſs. The [3] T. W. The Welſh rebel.

[3.] Welſh alſo being encouraged with theſe ill Succeſſes, roſe under the Conduct of Lhewellyn Bren, a Welſh Nobleman, and rebell'd and burnt divers Towns, and kill'd a great many of the Engliſh; but he was at laſt taken by certain Knights of the King's Houſhold, and ſent up Priſoner to London, with his two Sons.

[4] Mezeray Hiſt. de France. The Death of Pope Clement V. and Character. [5] Contin. Annal. Baron. Tom. 14. Coll. 234.

England affording us nothing more conſiderable, we will ſee what happened in Foreign Parts this Year; where we ſhall find two very great Perſons to have deceaſed, (viz) [4.] Pope Clement the Fifth, who departed this Life at Roquemaure upon the Rhoſne, as he was returning to his Native Countrey, to take the Air for his Health. He was a high ſpirited Prelate, and of great Parts, and it was He [5.] that compiled the Seventh Book of the Decretals, commonly called the Clementines, tho' they were confirm'd and publiſhed by his Succeſſor: He alſo promoted the Study of Greek and Hebrew; for by a Decree in the late Council of Vienne, he appointed Profeſſors to teach thoſe Languages in the Univerſities, which were then underſtood by very few; He alſo ordained thoſe Rules or Laws that are obſerved in the Conclave to this day, for the Election of a Pope: But theſe Rules were then made to little purpoſe; for immediately after his Deceaſe, the Cardinals met, and were ſhut up in the Conclave according to Cuſtom, where not agreeing upon their Choice, but quarrelling among themſelves, whether they ſhould chuſe a Frenchman or an Italian; at laſt their Attendants growing weary of their delay, ſet fire to ſome old Buildings that were near the Place where the Conclave was held, which at laſt took the Room it ſelf, wherein the Cardinals were; but inſtead of frightning them into an Agreement, they all run away, and diſperſed themſelves into divers places, and not meeting again, the Papal Chair continued vacant for above two Years.

[1.] Mezeray ad hunc Annum. The Death of King Philip the Fair and Character.

The [1] other was Philip, ſirnamed the Fair, King of France, who died the Twenty fourth of November, at Fountainbleau, in the Twenty ninth Year of his Age: He was one of the handſomeſt and moſt accompliſhed Princes of his Time; Ingenuous, Couragious and Magnificent; yet ſo covetous of Money, that He exercis'd all ſorts of Oppreſſions upon his Subjects to raiſe it; and was ſevere even to Cruelty, and rather vindicative than merciful. This is Mezeray's Character of Him; and I have been the more particular in it, becauſe this Prince by his Daughter Iſabella, Queen of England, was the Grandfather of King Edward the Third, and from whom that Prince afterwards laid Claim to the Crown of France. But to return to our Relation; Lewis, ſirnamed

Anno Dom. MCCCXV.

Hutin (who was alſo in Right of his Mother, King of Navarre) ſucceeded the late King his Father, and reigned but a ſhort time.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVI.

This Year the [2.] King kept his Chriſtmas at Clipſton in Sherwood Foreſt, where he beſtowed many Newyear's-Gifts among His Courtiers; but ſtay'd not long there, and returned to more ſerious Affairs: * For fifteen days after St. Hillary (or the Eight and twentieth of January) as appears by the Parliament Roll, the King held a Parliament at Lincoln, where at the firſt opening of it, he deferr'd the declaring the Buſineſs of the Parliament, becauſe Thomas Earl of Lancaſter and other Great Men were not as yet come, according to whoſe Advice He intended to proceed; But on Wedneſday next after the day of their meeting, the Chancellor, Treaſurer and Juſtices of both Benches were enjoin'd to bring in Briefs of ſuch Matters as depended before them in their ſeveral Places, and which out of Parliament could not be determined, that in this Seſſion they might do in ſuch caſes what ought to be done.

[2] T. W.
* Rot. Parl. 9 Ed 2 n. 1.
A Parliament called at Lincoln to repreſs the Violence, of the Scots.

On * the Twelfth of February, being Thurſday, the Earl of Lancaſter and other Great Men being preſent, the Cauſe of calling the Parliament was declared, being for their Advice and Aſſiſtance againſt the King's Enemies, the Scots, who had poſſeſs'd themſelves of the greateſt part of that Kingdom, and renounced their Allegiance to the King, who then enjoin'd the Prelates, Noblemen and Other his Liege Subjects there preſent, to adviſe and aſſiſt Him therein: * Upon this it was agreed, That the Prelates, Peers and Others ſhould meet on the morrow, being Friday, to treat of Parliament-Buſineſs; accordingly they met that day, and diſcourſed of many things; and it was then agreed, and alſo commanded by the King, That they ſhould meet the next day to treat of the ſame Matter; where they reſolved, That the late Edict or Statute about the Prices of Oxen, Cows, Sheep, and other Victuals, ſet the laſt Parliament, ſhould be revoked, and that they ſhould be ſold as formerly, at as reaſonable Rates as they could be afforded: For which Walſingham hath given us a very good Reaſon; becauſe after that Statute, they grew much dearer: and ſays, That it could not be otherwiſe; for the Dearth that had began the Year before, ſtill continued, the Autumnal Rains having fallen ſo prodigiouſly, that no Grain could ripen, and ſuch as there was, could not be got in, by reaſon of the continual Wetneſs of the Seaſon, till the beginning of September; and it was ſtill ſo moiſt, that they were fain to dry it on Kilns before it could be ground. But to return to the Affairs of this Parliament, from the Rolls:

* Ib.

* Ib.

The late Ordinance concerning the price of Victuals repeal'd.

* On Tueſday following, the King, by the Biſhop of Norwich, promiſed to obſerve all the Ordinances formerly made by the Prelates and Great Men; and alſo the Perambulations of the Foreſt, made in his Father's time; Saving to the King his Reaſons againſt them; and thereof Writs were made accordingly.

* Rot. Parl.
Ib.
The Ordinances formerly made are promis'd to be obſerv'd.

On * the Friday after, the Great Men and Community of the Kingdom, granted to the King, in aid of his War with Scotland, out of every Town in the Kingdom, one ſtout Footman, except Cities and Burghs, and the King's Demeaſns; and theſe Footmen were to be armed and furniſhed with Swords, Bows, Arrows, Slings, Lances, and other Armour fit for Footmen, at the charge of the Towns, and their Ex-

* Ib.
The Number of Men appointed to be found by each Town againſt the Scots.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVI.

Expences to be paid, until they came at the Place of Rendezvous, an their Wages for ſixty days after, and no longer, if the King's Servic required it, at Four Pence the day; and Market Towns that were abl to be farther charged with Men, were ſo to be charged; the King promiſing to give his Letters to the Great Men and Community of the Kingdom, and to their Heirs, That this Grant ſhould be no Preſident, no drawn into Example for the future.

The whole Militia of England are alſo ſummon'd for this purpoſe.

The ſame day the King, by Advice of the Prelates and Great Men, ordered the whole Service due to Him, (i. e. all the Militia of England) to be ſummon'd for this Cauſe, to be at New-caſtle upon Tine, fifteen days after Midſummer.

* Ib. The Commons grant the King a Fifteenth of their Goods.

Then *the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes, granted the King, as an Aid for this War and Expedition, a Fifteenth part of all their Moveable Goods, as alſo from thoſe of the King's Demeſns, which they had at Michaelmas then laſt paſt.

* Ib. The Bp. of Norwich on the King's behalf aſſures the Earl of Lancaſter and the other Great Men of his Good Will towards them.

*On Shrove-Tueſday, the Biſhop of Norwich on behalf of the King moved in Parliament, That the Earl of Lancaſter would diſmiſs all Suſpicions he might have concerning him, for that He had a ſincere Good Will towards him, and all the other Great Men, and held them to be his Faithful Leige-men; and farther told him, The King deſired to have him the Chief of his Council; requeſting him, on behalf of the King's Prelates and Great Men there preſent, to take upon him to aſſiſt and adviſe in the Affairs of the King and Kingdom: Thereupon the Earl thanked the King, and humbly requeſted time to deliberate, and then make anſwer; which he did in a very ſhort time, and was ſworn of the King's Council in the Form following:

* Ib. n. 4. The Earl of Lancaſter is ſworn of the King's Council, with the Form and Conſtitution of it.

'* Whereas our Lord King Edward, by the Grace of God King of 'England, hath with the Prelates, Earls and Barons of the Land, in full 'Parliament, requeſted his Dear Couſin, the Lord Thomas, Earl of Lancaſter, That he would be Chief of his Council in all great and weighty 'Affairs, touching Himſelf and His Realm; together with other Prelates, Earls and Barons, who ſhall, between the King and him, take care, 'that it may be for the Profit of the King and the Realm; the ſaid 'Earl, for the great Love he hath for his Lord the King, and for the 'Common Profit of the Kingdom, and the Ordinances, which He had 'entirely granted to obſerve, and the right Laws to maintain in all 'Points, and in hopes to make Amendments in ſuch things as had been 'ill done in his Court, and the Eſtate of his Realm, did grant to be of 'the King's Council, with the Prelates, Earls and Barons; ſo as at 'any time, if the King ſhall not do according to his Directions, and thoſe 'of His Council, concerning the Matters of His Court and Kingdom, 'after ſuch things have been ſhown Him, and that He will not be directed by the Council of him, and others, the Earl without Evil Will, 'Challenge, or Diſcontent may be diſcharged from the Council; and 'that the Buſineſs of the Realm concerning Him, ſhall not be done, or 'perform'd without the Aſſent of him and the other Prelates, Earls and 'Barons, which ſhall be ordain'd or appointed to adviſe Him; and if 'any of the Prelates, Earls and Barons, ſhall adviſe the King, or do other 'thing, which ſhall not be for the profit of Him and His Realm, then 'at the next Parliament, by the Advice of the King and His Friends, 'they ſhall be removed; and ſo it ſhall be from Parliament to Parliament, as to them, and every of them, according to the Faults found them. In Witneſs whereof, this Bill was to be enter'd on the Parliament Roll. Then follows a Memorandum; That the aforeſaid Bill, ntaining the Form above-written, was delivered to William Ayremin, erk, by the Hands of the Lord Walter of Norwich, and Bartholomew Badleſmer, commanding the ſaid William, by Order of the King, to rol it Word for Word.

'in

It appears farther, by the * Rolls of Scotland, that over the Army ich was to be raiſed this Summer againſt the Scots, the Earl of Lanſter was appointed General, as alſo the King's Lieutenant in Scotland; o' Dr. Brady ſays, That he cannot find by any Record or Hiſtory, that Army was then ſent againſt the Scots; yet had he conſulted the Chronicle of Lanercoſt, he might there have found under this Year, at the Earl of Lancaſter, at the King's Command, marched againſt em with an Army as far as New-caſtle; but that the King not following him with the reſt of the Forces (as had been agreed) the Earl prently returned home without acting any thing further; for indeed ither of them truſted each other; and it is very probable the Earl was lous, leſt the King ſhould take this Opportunity of his abſence, to do mewhat prejudicial to his Intereſt, or to revoke the late Ordinances hich ſtill continued in force.

* Tho' perhaps it might be only the great Scarcity of Proviſions that inder'd this Expedition; for Walſingham tells us, That about the Feaſt f Eaſter, the Lords and Great Men of the Kingdom met at London, to eat of the Affairs thereof, when, during this Parliament, the Scarty ſo encreaſed, that before Midſummer a Quarter of Wheat was ſold r above 30 s. and by the midddle of Auguſt for 40*s.* ſo that the Noblemen were forced to diminiſh their Families, and many of thoſe Serants that were diſmiſſed away, turn'd Thieves and Robbers; and his Famine produced ſo great a Mortality, by reaſon of the ſcarcity nd badneſs of Victuals, that the Living ſcarce ſuffic'd to bury the Dead. nd certainly it was the moſt miſerable time that ever this Nation ſaw, f what our Author relates be true, That Parents often eat their own hildren, or ſtole away thoſe of others, and the very Malefactors eat ne another in the Priſons; and if the King had not iſſued out a Prohiition, that no more Corn ſhould be turn'd into Malt, moſt part of the eople would have died of Hunger.

As for the Scots, under [1.] the Conduct of their King, they about Midſummer invaded England, as they had done before; and entring orkſhire, waſted the whole Country as far as Richmond; but the Genemen of the Country being retired into the Caſtle of that Place, comounded with the Scots for a ſum of Money, to ſpare burning the Town, r doing any farther miſchief in thoſe Parts; having receiv'd the Money, hey turn'd another way, waſted and burnt the reſt of Yorkſhire, towards he Weſt, for about 60 Miles, carrying away many of the Inhabitants; which cauſed ſuch a Scarcity, that a Quarter of Wheat was ſold in the North Parts for 40 s. ×

After [2.] this Expedition, King Robert paſſed over into Ireland, to aſſiſt his Brother, the Lord Edward Bruce, who had invaded that Kingdom, and met with ſuch unexpected ſucceſs, that he had now taken the Title of King of Ireland, and had by the aſſiſtance of the Iriſh, made himſelf Maſter of moſt part of Ulſter and Leinſter, except ſome ſtrong Caſtles and walled Towns near the Sea, which they could not take;

* the

Anno Dom. MCCCXVI.

* Rot. Scot. 9 Ed. 2. m. 6. The Earl of Lancaſter appointed General againſt the Scots, but did little, with the reaſon of it.

* In Bib. Cot. The Earl of Lancaſter marches againſt the Scots, and returns without doing any thing, and why.

* Ad hunc An. The great Scarcity of Proviſion this Year follow'd by a cruel Famine.

[1.] Chron. Lan. The Scots with their King again invade England, and march as far as Richmond, ſpoiling all that Countrey, which cauſes a great Scarcity.

[2.] Id Ib. King Robert paſſes over into Ireland, to aſſiſt his Brother, who had now taken upon him the Title of King there.

× what ye King then did to resist this Invasion I do not find, only yt he came to York about ye middle of August & from thence issued out his Writts of Summons to the Earl of Lancaster, & other Earls & Barons to be at New Castle upon Tyne [Claus: 10. Ed. 2. m. 16. d. R—'s Coll. p. 568.] on ye Octaves of St Michael with their Horses and Armes to defend ye Kingdom against their Enemies ye Scots. This bears Date 20th of August. [Rot. Scot: 10. Ed. 2. m. 4. R—'s Coll. p. 582.] But why the King did not march against them in Person I do not find: yet it is certain the continued at York till the latter end of Novbr. as appears by a Writ there dated 23d of that Month, whereby he authorizes Robert de Hasting, & two others there named to meet about a Truce or Cessation of Armes with Robert de Bruce and those of his ~~own~~ Party in Scotland, till Christmass next ensuing. But whether this Treaty took Effect I do not find.

(1) I find nothing else worth noting to have happen'd in England, but that the South Welsh presuming upon the King's being engag'd in a war with the Scots, in the begining of this year, being headed by a Nobleman of Glamorganshire, call'd Lewellyn ap Rees, or Lewellyn Bren, falling upon the English Colonies in those Parts did a great deal of mischief; But they were repress'd, & a Peace settled in those Parts by the Power & Interest of Humphrey Earl of Herefor[d] & William de Montacute whom the King had appointed his Generals over the English Forces in those Parts. as appears by three several Letters Patents, ~~now~~ on the Rolls of this year. [Pat. 9. Ed. 2. p^t. m 34. ib. m. 28. R—s Coll. p. 546, 547, 548, 551, 555]

Anno Dom. MCCCXVI.

Annal. Hibern.

* the chiefeſt of which was Dublin, which being new fortified by the Mayor and Citizens, the Scots durſt not beſiege, but approaching near it, turn'd back to Leyſlip, which they burnt, and then march'd to the Naas, and plundering it, went back into the North; ſo that I do not find King Robert perform'd any great matter in Ireland this Summer, but return'd home about Whitſontide the next Year, before the Battel between his Brother Edward and the Engliſh.*

[3.] Id ib. The Pope ſends a Bull into England, enjoining a Truce or Peace with the Scots.

This [3.] Year the Pope ſent a Bull into England, enjoining the King to make a Truce or Peace with the Scots, which was joyfully received here; but the Scots were ſo much encouraged by the Civil Diſſentions between the King and the Earl of Lancaſter, that they refuſed to obey it, and ſo incurr'd the Sentence of Excommunication from the Pope, which they ſeem'd not to regard. As for other Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; [4.] This Year deceaſed William de Greenfeild, Archbiſhop of York and was ſucceeded by ~~Walter~~ William de Melton, a Man of a ſtrict and Religious Life, ~~but~~ and recommended by the King. On the ſixth of September, about Noon, there was a great Eclipſe of the Sun.

[4.] Id. ib.

(2) × Whilst he continued here he undertook the Crusado, or voyage to ye Holy Land, as appears by ye King's Commission to ye Bishops of Norwich & Ely, & the Earl of Pembroke & others to give their consent on his behalf to the preparations & settling ye time of his said voyage with the Pope. This bears Date at Elikstron 4 Jan. in ye 10th year of his Reign. but I do not believe ye King ever realy design'd to undertake yt Expedition, only pretended so, to engage the Pope more heartily to take his Part against ye Scots.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVII.

[5] T. W.

The [5.] King again kept his Chriſtmas at Clipſton in Sherwood, as he had done the Year before; and I ſuppoſe the reaſon was, becauſe there was greater plenty of Proviſions in thoſe Parts than elſewhere; yet before Eaſter He remov'd to Clarendon, and there kept that Feſtival; after which I can find nothing worth noting, till the latter end of May, or the beginning of June, when the Wife of Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, only Daughter of the late Earl of Lincoln, was carry'd away from her Houſe at Canford in Dorſetſhire, by a certain deform'd and crooked Knight called Sir Richard of St. Martyn, a Retainer to the Earl of Surrey, who was certainly privy to, if not a Promoter of the Fact, ſince this St. Martyn, with his Accomplices, brought the Lady to the Caſtle of Rygate then belonging to that Earl; and the King himſelf was thought to be too favourable to this wicked Action, or elſe ſo deſpicable a Fellow never durſt to have preſum'd, not only to have done ſuch an Injury to the Greateſt Man in England next Himſelf and his Children, but alſo to lay claim in the King's Court to the Earldoms of Lincoln and Salisbury, upon Pretence of a Pre-Contract with this Diſſolute Counteſs; of whom he ſaid, he had alſo Carnal Knowledge, as ſhe her ſelf was not aſham'd to own; which Proceſs, though it came to nothing, yet was ſo much to the Earl's Diſhonour and Vexation, that it is no wonder if he never forgave thoſe that had a hand in it: And therefore Dr. Brady hath not done well to omit this Remarkable Tranſaction, ſince it ſhews us the true cauſe why this high-ſpirited Earl was now again ſo incenſed againſt the King, that he could not come any more to any Parliament or Council this Year upon his Summons.

The Wife of the Earl of Lancaſter elopes from him with an Adulterer, who laid claim to her.

[1.] Id. ib. A Woman fantaſtically attired, rides into the Great Hall at Weſtminſter, and delivers a Paper to the King, with the Contents of it.

And [1.] becauſe we have now no great Matters of moment, I will here inſert another Relation from the ſame Author, ſince it ſerves to ſhew the Spirit and Humour of the Time: The King keeping the Feaſt of Pentecoſt in the Great Hall of Weſtminſter, and being at Dinner with the Great Men of His Kingdom, a certain Woman fantaſtically attir'd and diſguis'd like a Comedian, came into the Hall on Horſeback, and riding about the Tables, had the Confidence to mount the Steps to the where the King ſat, where flinging down a Letter or Paper before Him ſhe preſently departed; the King immediately cauſed it to be opened and read, being to this effect; Our Lord the King may take notice, that He hath not kindly regarded thoſe Knights who ſerved his Father and Himſelf

wi

Anno Dom. MCCCXVII.

ith their Lives and Fortunes; but hath too much enriched Others, who ver perform'd any thing conſiderable: Which when the King heard, He as very much incenſed, and thoſe who guarded the Door, were ſharp- rebuked for letting her in; they excuſed themſelves, alledging it not be the faſhion of the King's Houſe at Feſtival Times to keep out any ho came diſguiſed in that manner, ſince they thought they only came make the King Sport: But ſearch being made for this Woman, ſhe as found, and examined who ſet her on, whereupon ſhe confeſs'd, a night gave her Money to do as ſhe did; ſome time after the Knight as found, and upon examination boldly confeſs'd, he did it for the ing's Honour, and to no other end, and ſo eſcaped without any farer queſtion, and the Woman her ſelf was diſcharged; the Matter ing too true. But let us now proceed to things of greater moent.

Many [2.] Gentlemen and Commoners of the North of England had me time ſince taken up Arms, and reſiſted the Scots, without any help aſſiſtance from the King, or the Great Men of the Kingdom, yet at ſt theſe very Men, when their Money and Proviſions fail'd, became hieves, and from being Defenders, became Enemies of the Country, d ſo getting together in great numbers, robbed and ſpoiled the Inhatants of the Northern Parts, of all they had, without any reſiance.

[2] Id. Ib. Many Gentlemen and others of the North of England, not having wherewithal to ſubſiſt, turn Thieves, and rob the Countrey.

In the mean while the Pope had ſent two Cardinals, as his Legates, to England, to make Peace between that Kingdom and Scotland, and reconcile the Earl of Lancaſter to the King; they alſo brought the ope's Bulls of Excommunication to be denounced againſt the Scots, in ſe they refuſed to agree to a Peace; and one of the firſt things theſe egates did, after they came over, was to take a Progreſs as far as Durm, there to Inſtall Maſter Lewis de Beaumont, on whom the Pope had nferr'd that Biſhoprick, and to make void the Election of One that d been choſen by the Monks; but tho' theſe Legates were warn'd, at they ſhould ſtay in Yorkſhire, and not proceed farther without a uard from the King, becauſe of the great number of Robbers that then feſted thoſe Parts, yet the Cardinals relying upon their Legantine ower, ſlighted this Advice; but when they came near the Town of erlington, in that Biſhoprick, certain Robbers, led by two Gentlemen, ilbert de Middleton, and Walter de Selbey, fell ſuddenly upon the rain of the Cardinals and Biſhop Elect, but to their Perſons, they d no violence, only took away all their Horſes and ready Money, d Apparel; and tho' the Cardinals had ſometime after their Horſes d Furniture ſent them back, yet they never obtain'd a full Reſtitutin of what they had loſt; however, the King afterwards made them ore than ample ſatisfaction for their Damage; but in the mean me, [3.] the Cardinals went on to Durham, where they ſtaid me days, expecting an Anſwer from the Scots, but when they could ceive none, they return'd under the King's Conduct to York, where ey denounced Sentence of Excommunication againſt all the Thieves d Adherents in Northumberland; which Sentence was publiſhed all er England. So ſoon as theſe Cardinals returned, the firſt thing they d, was to reconcile the Earl of Lancaſter to the King, and a Peace as thereupon made between them upon certain Conditions, and they et, and embraced, and kiſſed each other upon a Plain near Leiceſter.

* Henry

The Pope's Legats come into England to make Peace between that Kingdom and Scotland.

The Legats are robbed in their way to Durham of their Horſes and Money, and for which the King makes them ſatisfaction.

[3.] Id. ib.

* This is further confirmed by ye Popes Bulle to King Edward, exhorting him to make Peace with his Adversary Robert de Brus, that so the King may be able to prosecute ye Crusado against the Infidels, as he has lately undertaken. vid: R—'s Coll. p. 611. 612. 613. where you may find this Bulle, as also his Commission to ye two Cardinals therein nam'd to mediate & conclude the sd Peace with Threats of Excommunication upon which of those Princes should presume to refuse it: and the Pope in consideration of his undertaking ye Crusado, granted ye King the Continuation of the Tenths of all Ecclesiastical Benefices within his Dominions for 5 years, as appears by another of ye sd Popes Bulls of this year published in R—'s Coll: p. 617.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVII.

*Col. 2534. The Legats make a Reconciliation between the King and the Earl of Lancaſter.

* Henry de Knighton farther relates, (tho', by a Miſtake, under the Year 1318,) That the Cardinals, together with the King and Queen, and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, attended by the reſt of the Biſhops of tha Province, as alſo many Earls and Barons, came to Leiceſter; fro whence, upon the News of the Earl of Lancaſter's approach, they wen out to meet him as far as Syroches Brigge, which is now called Sotesbrygge, where the Earl being with no leſs than Eighteen thouſand Men met the King, and having ſaluted and kiſſed each other, they were outwardly once more made Friends: And this Author alſo relates, Tha the Cardinals from thence proceeded on their Journey towards th North; which is more likely than Walſingham's Relation, who place their Journey before this Reconciliation.

Another relates it to have been done in a Great Council, but by the Mediation of the Legates.

And I cannot here omit what the Manuſcript Continuator of Nicholas Trivet farther tells us, concerning the Peace above mentioned, (th he alſo falſly places it under Anno Dom. 1318; That about the beginning of Auguſt, the King held a Colloquy at Northampton, with many Noble Perſons of the Kingdom, both of the Clergy and Laiety, wher they treated concerning the making a firm and laſting Peace betwee him and the Earl of Lancaſter, in the preſence of the Cardinal Legates to which Meeting the Queen Her ſelf, who was the Earl's Niece, al came in Perſon; by whoſe Interceſſion there was a firm Reconciliation made between the King and the Earl, which was confirmed by many Signs of Friendſhip, and that it was near Leiceſter wher this Affair was concluded, to the great ſatisfaction of all the Nation However this Reconciliation did not laſt long, for Walſingham ſays,*Th King ſoon broke all thoſe Conditions; which might very well be, what he relates be true; That not long after a certain Knight, who ha formerly been of the Earl's Family, was taken near Pomfret, with Blank Charter under the King's Great Seal, as alſo other Letters und the King's Private Signet, directed to the King of Scots, offering Hi what Conditions He pleaſed, provided He would procure the Death the Earl of Lancaſter; who having made the Meſſenger to confeſs th Fact, cauſed him to be hanged, and his Head ſet on the top of Pomfr Caſtle: But the Earl Kept the Letters and Charters by him, as a T ſtimony of the Fact; which being noiſed about England, brought off great many from the King's to the Earl's Party, which was before muc weaker.

Ad hunc Ann.* The Reconciliation is ſoon broke off, and for what cauſe.

[4.] Id. Ib. Thoſe that robbed the Legats are taken and executed.

I cannot forbear here taking notice of the deſerved End that the la Robbers met with, before the concluſion of this Year; [4.] for Gilbe de Middleton, with his Accomplices, having done many great Injuri to the Priory of Tinemouth, as well as to ſeveral other neighbourin Places, making it alſo his Trade to ſeize upon the Gentl men of thoſe Parts, and keep them Priſoners in a certain Caſtle he ha until they would ranſom themſelves for Money; ſome of the Frien of thoſe who were thus taken, being reſolved to ſet them free, came this Gilbert under his ſafe Conduct, and offer'd to ranſom them for Sum of Money that was to be brought thither, and paid at a day pr fixed, which happen'd to be at a time when this Gilbert's Accomplic were gone out to rob; ſo when the Gentlemen came thither, they pr tended they had brought the Money, but that it was ſecured in the a joining Town, for fear it ſhould be taken from them by others; wher upon thoſe in the Caſtle coming out to receive this Money, theſe Ge tlem

Anno Dom. MCCCXVII.

lemen with their Attendants, being well armed, ruſhed in, and killing thoſe that kept the Gate, eaſily maſter'd all the reſt, and having bound them faſt, they ſent them, and Gilbert their Leader, together with a Brother of his, in Fetters to London, where he was ſoon after condemned and executed as he deſerved; but as for the reſt of their Comrades, who being abroad, were not then taken, they went to their Conſort, Walter de Selbey, who from a ſmall Fortreſs had committed the like Spoils on the adjacent Countries.

We ſhall now ſee what was done abroad in the beginning of this Year, [5.] Philip Count of Poictiers, and Brother to the King of France, cauſed the Cardinals to meet at Lyons, where being ſhut up in the Conclave, after forty Days delay, and great Diſputes between the French and Italian Cardinals, which Nation ſhould obtain the Papacy, the former at laſt prevailed, and choſe James Doſſa, a Cardinal, and Biſhop of Porto, Pope, which Election was carried but by one Voice, and that his own too; yet He was nevertheleſs admitted, and took the Name of John the Two and twentieth; He was but the Son of a poor Cobler of the Province of Query, however was very learned for that Age; and it was He, who ſo ſoon as He was ſetled in His new Dignity, ſent the Legates abovementioned into England.(1) [5.] Mezeray ſub hoc anno.

The Election of Pope John XXII.

(1) and about ye same Time the King sent the Bishops of Norwich & Ely wth Amery de Valence Earl of Pembroke to congratulate his Election, & sollicit the Promotion of one of the King's Clerk to ye Bishop of Hereford, as appears by ye King's Letters to the Pope on that Subject. [Rot. Rom: & Fran: Ed. 2. m. 3. vid. R–'s Coll: p. 600. 601.

[1.] About the ſame time Lewis the Tenth, King of France, commonly called Hutin, deceaſed at Boys de Vincennes, at the beginning of June, being poiſon'd (as it was ſuppoſed); He reign'd little more than a Year and an half, and was not Eight and twenty Years of Age, of whom I(2) find little worth remarking, only, that from his Quarrelſome Temper, he was nicknamed Hutin, which in Old French ſignifies quarrelſome, or contentious.(2)

[1] Id. ib
The Death of Lewis King of France.

(2) [illegible] succeeded by [illegible] Philip [illegible] the King from [illegible] of his [illegible]

This being the Eleventh Year of King Edward, [2.] He kept his Chriſtmas at Weſtminſter, where few of the Great Men were preſent, becauſe there was a great Difference again ariſen between the King and them. They alledging, That He had not obſerved the Articles ſo often demanded, and as often promiſed by Him; yet, ſince the Kingdom was then in great danger, by reaſon of the Incurſion of the Scots, who had advanc'd as far as York, burning and deſtroying the Country without any reſiſtance, there was a neceſſity of applying a ſpeedy Remedy to theſe Grievances.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVIII.

[2.] I. W.
New Differences ariſe between the K. and the Barons, and the Occaſion of them.

Wherefore [3.] the Chief Prelates of the Kingdom having prevail'd upon the Pope's Legates to join with them, went to the King, and humbly prayed Him, that He would at laſt confirm and duly obſerve thoſe Articles which He had ſo often granted for the good of the Church and Kingdom; at laſt the King ſeeming to be touched with the Intreaties of the Cardinals and Prelates, he appointed Midſummer-day for the meeting of a Parliament at Leiceſter, where He promiſed to give ample ſatisfaction to all the Requeſts of the Clergy and Laity; but when the Commons, together with the Lords, appear'd at the Day appointed, the King indeed granted, after his wonted and general manner, that the foreſaid Articles (which, I ſuppoſe, were no other than the Ordinances formerly made by the Lords Ordainers) ſhould be obſerved; but it ſoon after appear'd, that this Conceſſion was not only frivolous, but wholly fraudulent; however, the Cardinals ſuppoſing they had ſufficiently ſetled this Affair, and having alſo declared the King of Scots Excommunicated,(3) and put the whole Kingdom under an Interdict, took their Leaves of

[3.] Id. Ib.
The Legats and Prelats pray the King that he would obſerve the Articles he had granted; whereupon a Parliament is ſummon'd at Leiceſter, where the K. grants the Requeſts of the People after a general manner.
The Legates leave the Kingdom.

cause he had refus'd to accept the two Years Truce, which the Pope would have [illegible] him to observe, as appears by a full and large Account of this Affair by a Fryar who had been employ'd as a Messenger to carry that King the Pope's Bulls, as for given by the sd Cardinal Legates, which bears Date at Berwick & is published in [illegible]: 3d. Vol: p. 684.

Anno Dom. MCCCXVIII.

of the King, and ſo went over into France; yet I do not find, that either the Scotiſh King, or his Subjects, much regarded this Excommunication, or were any thing the more inclinable to Peace.

[4] Chron. Lan. T. W. Ad ann. 1319, ſed falſò. Berwick taken by the Scots.

* Pol. Virgil. The difference in Authors concerning the manner of it.

For, on the 2d of April this [4.] Year, Berwick was betray'd to the Scots by Peter Spalding, then Governor, for a conſiderable Sum of Money, who permitted them to ſcale the Walls in the Night, at a place where he and his Men then kept Guard: Yet Thomas de la More, and * other Writers relate, That the Town of Berwick was taken by force from the Engliſh, by King Robert Bruce, who yet uſed his Victory with moderation, killing none that would yield to him; which Contradiction to our Authors cited in the Margin, I know not how to reconcile, unleſs we ſhould ſuppoſe, that Spalding was only Governor of the Caſtle which he betray'd, but that the Town was taken ſome time after by force, tho the taking of the Caſtle might be a great help to it: But be it as it will, this is certain, that ſo ſoon as the Scots were poſſeſſed of the Town, they turn'd out all the Engliſh, having firſt plunder'd them of their Goods; [5.] after which ſucceſs, they marched from thence to the Caſtle of Weark and Harbottle, which they beſieged and took, for want of being relieved in due time: They alſo ſurprized the Caſtle of Middeford, and by that means became Maſters of all Northumberland, except New-caſtle, and ſome few other ſtrong Places. And in May the Scots again enter'd England farther than ever they had done before, and burning the Towns of North-Allerton and Burrough-brig, in their March went as far as Rippon, which they likewiſe plunder'd of all that was in it, and beſides, made ſeveral of the Inhabitants, who defended themſelves in the Church, to pay a thouſand Marks for not burning them with the Town. Then having ſet fire to Scarburgh and Skipton in Craven, they returned home with a great deal of Plunder, and a conſiderable number of Priſoners, whom they drove like ſo many Sheep before them. So ſoon as King Edward receiv'd this Ill News, He put off the Parliament that was ſuddenly to have met, as appears by a * Writ on Record in the Tower, reciting, 'That whereas the King had ſummon'd a 'Parliament to meet on the Morrow of Holy Trinity, at Lincoln, He thereby revok'd it for this Reaſon, Becauſe his Enemies and Rebels the Scots, 'had lately invaded England, and enter'd Yorkſhire, committing 'many Murthers, Plunderings and Devaſtations, beſides burning the 'Country, ſo that He reſolved ſuddenly to march againſt them with an 'Army to reſtrain their Incurſions, and bring them to a due ſubmiſſion: And therefore the Parliament was put off; whereas indeed it ſhould have rather produced the quite contrary Effect: For what fitter Proviſion could be made againſt this Invaſion of the Scots, than the Unanimous Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Clergy and Great Men of the Kingdom: Wherefore I rather incline to believe, that the true Reaſon why the King put off this Parliament, was, becauſe he would not grant without any Reſervations, the Great Men's Demands concerning the late Articles or Ordinances, which He knew they would again inſiſt upon whenever they met; and I alſo doubt whether the Parliament, which Walſingham tells us was ſummon'd this Year at Leiceſter, was any other than that which the Record mentions to have met at Lincoln, but was now put off; and I am the more induced to believe it, becauſe there appears no Writs of Summons upon the Roll, of any Parliament that was to meet at Leiceſter this Year; yet however, the King might at a Treaty or Great [5.] Chron. Lan. Ib. After which they take ſeveral Caſtles in Northumberland.

* Rot. Clauſ. 11 Ed. 2. m. 8. Dorſ. The King puts off the Parliament, and for what Reaſons.

Council of the Nobility held at Leiceſter, give that Anſwer to their Demands, as I have already mentioned from our Author.*

Anno Dom. MCCCXVIII.

15 * But I am now better ſatisfyed from the Cloſe Rolls [Claus: 12. Ed. 2. m. 29.] of this year, that y^e was a Parliament held at York three ~~we~~ weeks after Michaelmaſs in which as alſo appears by the Patent Rolls [Pat: 12. Ed. 2. p^t. 1 m. 17. R—'s Coll. p. 734] the Earl of Lancaster, & his adherents there nam'd, with the aſsent of the Prelates, chief Men and Commons, were pardon'd all Felonies & Tranſgreſsions committed by him till y^e 7th of August last past. & this bears Date 22 of October.

But this is more certain, which the ſame Author relates, [1.] That the King held a Parliament at London, about Michaelmas, in which it was again ordained, That every City and Town of England, that was able to do it, ſhould raiſe and find ſo many Men to aſſiſt the King againſt the Scots, and the City of London maintained Two hundred Men armed at all Points; Canterbury Forty, the Town of St. Alban's Ten, and ſo conſequently did the other Cities and Towns according to their Rates; and theſe being muſter'd, made a great Army, and might have proved formidable to their Enemies, had they not been mutinous and ill diſcipli'd; ſo that when they came to York, this, with other Obſtacles, made them to be disbanded and ſent home again.

[1.] T. W. A Parliament at London, wherein every City and Town in England are rated at ſo many Men to march againſt the Scots, which yet comes to nothing.

Not long after, on the [2.] Fourteenth of November, happened the greateſt Earthquake that had been known in England in the Memory of Man; inſomuch that it ſtruck the Minds of the Superſtitious People with Panick Fears, [3.] for many Churches and ſtrong Buildings were either ruin'd, or ſorely ſhaken by it.

[2.] Id. ib. A terrible Earthquake in England.

[3] Chron. Lan.

But to make ſome amends for ſo much Ill Fortune, the Engliſh obtain'd a ſignal Victory over the Scots this Year in Ireland,* where the Lord Edward Bruce having in this, as alſo the laſt Year, fought againſt the Engliſh with ſuch ſucceſs, that he had cauſed himſelf to be crowned King of Ireland; he was ſo elated with it, that he thought himſelf ſtrong enough with about Six thouſand of his Countrymen, and as many Iriſh, that joined them, to give Battel to the Engliſh, under the conduct of the Lord John Bermingham, and the Lord Primate of Armagh, with other Barons, who fought with the Scots and Iriſh about four Miles North of Dundalk; the Fight was for a while very ſharp, but at laſt the Scots were routed, and their Titular King, with about Twenty nine Baronets, beſides Two thouſand Common Soldiers, ſlain on the Place. His Dead Body being found among the Slain, was cut into four Quarters, which were ſent to Dublin and three other chief Towns of Ireland in the Engliſh poſſeſſion; but his Head was by the Lord Bermingham carried over into England, and preſented to the King, who for this Service conferr'd the Earldom of Louthe upon him and his Heirs Male: (2) This Victory was obtain'd on the Fourteenth Day of October, and indeed is the only one that was gain'd againſt the Scots in all this King's Reign.

* T. W. Annal. Hib.

(2) As appears by y^e Letters Patents on the Cloſe Rolls of this year [Pat: 12. Ed. 2. p. 2^d. m. 11] vid. R—'s Coll. 3^d vol. p. 767.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIX.

The [4.] King kept his Chriſtmas at Beverly in Yorkſhire, with many Noblemen and Prelates, when being highly concern'd for the loſs of Berwick, He provided Himſelf of a numerous Army to march againſt the Scots, that He might free England from their Incurſions, as alſo to recover that conſiderable Place out of their Hands; but whilſt He was muſtering His Army, and marching thither to lay ſiege to it, the Scots in the mean time rais'd another of about Twenty thouſand Men, and enter'd England on the other ſide, hoping to have ſurprized and taken the Queen at York, where She then remain'd during the King's Abſence, (for it ſeems the City was to have been ſold to the Scots by ſome Engliſh Traytors); but the Queen having had timely notice of the Deſign, fled from thence to a ſafer Place; upon which the Scots being enraged at this Diſappointment, fell upon the Country, and deſtroyed it with Fire and Sword.

[4.] T. W. While the King raiſes an Army, the Scots invade England.

Anno Dom. MDCCCXIX.

[5.] Id. Ib. The King beſieges Berwick, but is forced to raiſe the Siege, and for what cauſe.

In [5.] the mean while (as our Author Relates) the King beſieged Berwick, and when it was very near being taken, He according to His uſual Inconſiderateneſs openly ſaid; We will make the Lord Hugh Spencer Governor of the Caſtle, and the Lord Roger Tamery Captain of the Town, if we take it: Which when the Earl of Lancaſter heard, he was ſo incenſed at it, that looking upon thoſe two Lords as his Enemies, he preſently withdrew himſelf from the Siege, with divers others of his Party, for which he was called a Traytor by the whole Army, ſince if he had not thus gone away, the Town and Caſtle might have been ſurrender'd into the King's Hands. And if this Relation be true, as the King's unadviſed Declaration is no ways to be commended, ſo the Earl is much more to be blamed, who would thus prefer his own private Piques before the good of his Country: Yet ſince I find this Story in no other Author but Walſingham, and that the Earl of Lancaſter was, not long after, in as great Reputation as ever, I believe this to be taken up from ſome lying Tradition or Report: For the Chronicle of Lanercoſt (whoſe Credit I moſtly rely upon in theſe Northern Affairs) relates it otherwiſe; That the King and the Earl of Lancaſter being now outwardly reconcil'd, entred Scotland with their Forces about the middle of Auguſt, and having beſieged Berwick, the Engliſh at the firſt Aſſault mounted the Walls, and had they been timely ſeconded, might have taken the Town; whereupon the Scots taking freſh Courage, new fortified the Works, and burnt a certain Engine called a Sow, which the Engliſh had brought to cover the Aſſailants, whilſt they undermined the Walls; whereby the Siege being protracted, the Scots thought beſt to act by way of Diverſion, and the Earl of Murrey, and the Lords Randolf and Douglas entring England by another way, deſtroyed the Country, carrying away their Plunder and Priſoners as far as Burroughbrig.

1.] Chron. Lan. T. W. The ABp. of York raiſes an Army of raw Soldiers, who are ſoon routed by the Scots, and many ſlain.

[1.] Then the Yorkſhire Men being reſolved to put a ſtop to theſe Depredations, under the Command of William de Melton, ABp. of York, raiſed an Army of about Ten thouſand Men, a great many of whom were Prieſts or Fryars, with which they marched againſt the Scots, who lay then encamped at Mitton, near the River Swale, about twelve Miles from York, exerciſing their wonted Depredations, and having a well armed and diſciplin'd Army, upon the approach of the Engliſh, preſently ſet upon them, who, being only raw Men, and half armed, without any skilful Commanders, were eaſily routed, and about Three thouſand of them were there ſlain; beſides a great part of thoſe that fled, being driven into the River Swale, were drowned. This unfortunate Fight happened on the Twenty firſt of September.

[2.] Id. Ib. The King raiſes the Siege of Berwick, and thinking to meet with the Scots, is diſappointed.

[3.] Chron. Lan. The Scots again invade England, and do much miſchief.

[2.] When the News of the Defeat came to the King's Ears, He preſently raiſed the Siege of Berwick, and made haſt with all his Army to meet the Scots before they ſhould get into their own Country; but they having notice by their Scouts, or Spies, of the King's Deſigns, took another Courſe, and returned home with much Cattel, and other Plunder: Nor were they ſatisfied with this, [3.] but about All-Hollandtide they again entred England with another Army, under the Conduct of the Lord James Douglas, and waſted all Gilleſland, burning the very Corn in the Barns, and this they did as far as Burough under Stanmore; then returning home by Weſtmorland and Cumberland, did the like in both thoſe Counties.

Wherefore [4.] the King, finding the Damages and Miſchiefs done y the Scots daily to increaſe, did by the common Advice of his Barons, ake a Truce with his Enemies for a time, which they willingly ac-pted of; for they were now ſo enriched with the Plunder of England, at the Country would ſcarce afford any more.

[4.] T. W. The King makes a Truce with the Scots.

[5.] When the King was return'd into the South Parts of England, He ought fit to call a Great Council at Northampton, on the Firſt of Au-ſt, where the Biſhops, Earls and Barons being aſſembled, were very nſible of the ill ſucceſs of His Majeſty's Affairs, which they imputed his late unadviſed Actings, without the Advice of the Earl of Lanca-er; (wherefore, as appears on * Record) they agreed to ſend ſome of ch Order, whoſe Names immediately follow, to diſcourſe and treat ith Him about the Honour and Welfare of the King and Realm; and it as then agreed between Him and thoſe Commiſſioners that were ſent Him, That a ſtanding Council of certain Biſhops, Earls and Barons ould conſtantly remain with the King, to adviſe Him in all Matters of ublick Concern, until the next Parliament; concerning which and her Matters, an Inſtrument was drawn up between the ſaid Earl d thoſe Commiſſioners, which is thus tranſlated from the French riginal.

[5.] Contin. Nic. Trivet. The King calls a Great Council at Northampton, where 'tis agreed to ſend Commiſſioners to treat with the Earl of Lancaſter; with the Effects of that Treaty.

* Rot Clauſ. 12 Ed. 2. m 22. Dorſ. printed in Dr. B's Ap. n. 61. and in Ryley's Placit. Parl. f 560.

'This Indenture Witneſſeth, That the Honourable Father, the Arch-iſhop of Dublin, the Biſhops of Ely, Norwich and Chicheſter; the Earls f Pembroke and Arundel; the * Lords Roger de Mortimer, John Somery, artholomew de Badleſmere, Ralph Baſſet, and John Botecourt, by the Will and Aſſent of the King, have diſcourſed and agreed with the Earl of Lancaſter concerning certain Things, touching the Profit of Himſelf and the Realm, in the Form following: To wit, That the Biſhops of Norwich, Chicheſter, Ely, Saliſbury, St. David*'s*, Carliſle, Here-ord and Worceſter; the Earls of Pembroke, Richmond, Hereford and Arundel; Sir Hugh de Courtney, Sir Roger de Mortimer, Sir John e Segrave, Sir John de Grey, and one of the Bannerets of the Earl of Lancaſter, which he ſhould name, ſhall remain with the King for one Quar-er of a Year, or until the next Parliament; and that two Biſhops, one Earl, one Baron, and one Banneret of the Earl of Lancaſter's, at leaſt, ſhould always be with Him, and that all conſiderable Matters, that might, or ought to be done out of Parliament, ſhould be done by their Aſſent, other-iſe to be void and amended in Parliament, by the Award of the Peers; nd ſuch as ſhould remain with the King Quarterly, ſhould be choſen and ſſigned out of them, and Others in Parliament, to Act and Adviſe the King, s aforeſaid; and the above-named Prelates, Earls and Barons, by the Will and Aſſent of the King, undertook that He ſhould Releaſe and Ac-uit the Earl of Lancaſter, his People, or Retinue, and thoſe of his Par-y, of all manner of Felonies and Treſpaſſes againſt the Peace, until the Day of St. James this Year; and that the Charters of Releaſe and Acquit-ance ſhould be plain and abſolute without Condition; and if better Securi-y for them might be found at the next Parliament, they ſhould have it here confirm'd by the King and his Baronage. And the Earl of Lanca-ter Granted, that he would make Releaſes and Acquittances to all thoſe hat on behalf of the King ſhould demand them, for any Treſpaſſes done to His Perſon, as ſoon as the Things aforeſaid ſhould be confirmed; nor that He would bring Suit of Felony againſt any one, from the time they had His etters; ſaving to Him all Plaints, Actions and Suits which He had againſt the

* In the French there is Monſieur before every one of their Names, which I have alter'd to Lord.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIX

* i. e. In carrying away his Wife

‘ the Earl of Warren, and all thoſe that were Aſſenting and Aiding to th
‘ * Felonies and Treſpaſſes which the ſaid Earl had done to Him againſt th ‘ King's Peace.

‘ And that the ſaid Ordinances ſhould be kept and obſerv'd, as they ar
‘ under the King's Great Seal ; and that theſe Things aboveſaid ſhould be per ‘ form'd and kept in all Points, the ſaid Honourable Fathers in God, th
‘ Archbiſhops of Canterbury and Dublin ; the Biſhops of Norwich, Ely ‘ Chicheſter, Salisbury, Cheſter, (or Litchfield) Hereford and Wor ‘ ceſter ; the Earl Marſhal, Edmund his Brother ; the Earls of Richmond
‘ Hereford, Ulſter, Arundel and Anegos ; Sir Roger de Mortimer
‘ Sir John de Somery, Sir John de Haſtings, Sir John de Segrave
‘ Sir Henry de Beaumont, Sir Hugh le Diſpenſer the Son, Sir John de ‘ Grey, Sir Richard de Grey, Sir Bartholomew de Badleſmere, Sir Ro ‘ bert de Mohant, Sir Ralph Baſſet, nnd Sir Walter de Norwich hav ‘ undertaken by the Will and Aſſent of the King. In Witneſs whereof th ‘ Prelates, Earls and Barons aforeſaid have put their Seals to one part
‘ this Indenture, and the Earl of Lancaſter hath put his Seal to the other ‘ Written at * Leek, the Ninth Day of Auguſt, in the Twelfth Year of Kin ‘ Edward.

* This is a Town in Staffordſhire, which then belonged to the Earl of Lancaſter.

After this Indenture, in the ſame Record, there is an Account wha was done in the ſucceeding Parliament, in perſuance of what was or dered in this Great Council.

[1.] Contin. Nic. Trivet. Another Reconciliation patch'd up between the K. and Earl of Lancaſter.

* Rot. Clauſ. 12 Ed. 2. m. 28. Dorſ.

But before I ſpeak any thing of that, I ſhall make an end with the reſ of the Proceedings of this preſent Aſſembly, [1.] in which I find (tho this Record doth not expreſly mention it) that there was another Re conciliation again patch'd up between the King and the Earl of Lanca ſter; and it was there alſo Ordain'd, That a Parliament ſhould not long after meet at York, three Weeks after Michaelmas, (as appears by th * Writs of Summons ;) which being met accordingly, the Proceeding of it are particularly ſet down in that above cited Record ; and th Indenture above-mention'd to have been made between the Earl of Lan caſter, and the Lords Commiſſioners that were ſent to him, was rea in the preſence of all aſſembled in that Parliament ; and all things in i being maturely conſidered, the Prelates, Earls and Barons agreed, ‘ T

A Parliament called, and what was done in it.

‘ Pray and Requeſt the King, for the Honour of Himſelf, and the Pro ‘ fit of Him and the Realm, That for the great Affairs that concern'
‘ Him, and which does happen from day to day, would pleaſe t
‘ aſſent, That two Biſhops, one Earl, one Baron or Banneret of th ‘ Family of the Earl of Lancaſter, ſhould in his Name and for Him, b ‘ preſent and remain with the King in their Turns, according to the fou ‘ Quarters of the Year, to deliberate with, and adviſe Him in due man ‘ ner, and that they might deliberate and adviſe about all conſiderab ‘ Matters out of Parliament, until a Parliament ſhould otherwiſe dete ‘ mine concerning them ; ſo as none of theſe things ſhould be debate ‘ without the Counſel and Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls and Others, wh ‘ were to remain with the King, according to the Term of the ſaid In ‘ denture ; and if any thing was done otherwiſe, it ſhould be void.

‘ The King underſtanding this Requeſt, and deſiring to be Adviſe
‘ by all means which may or ought to make moſt for the Honour an ‘ Profit of Him and His Realm ; and conſidering that when He receiv'
‘ the Government, He found Scotland in Rebellion againſt Him ; an ‘ ſince that there had been War in Ireland, with many other Diſtu

‘ bance

Anno Dom. MCCCXIX.

bances that had happen'd in His Dominions, for which He thought it neceſſary to have conſtantly the beſt and moſt ſufficient Council, He therefore agreed to have the ſaid Prelates, Earls and Barons to adviſe Him in the Form aforeſaid; yet ſo as his Miniſters ſhould always perform their Offices according to the Law and Uſage of the Kingdom.

'And whereas it was contain'd in the ſaid Indenture, That the Prelates, Earls and Barons there named had undertaken by the Aſſent of the King, that He ſhould make to the Earl of Lancaſter, His People, or Party and Followers, Releaſes and Acquittances of all manner of Felonies and Treſpaſſes againſt His Peace, until St. James's Day this Year: and that the Charters of Releaſe and Acquittances ſhould be Abſolute without Condition, and if better Security could be found for them in the next Parliament, they ſhould have it, and alſo confirmed by the King and His Baronage.

'The King by Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls and Barons, and Commonalty of His Realm in His ſaid Parliament, granted a Pardon to the Earl of Lancaſter and his Followers, of the Suit of His Peace, and whatever belonged to him, by reaſon thereof, of all manner of Felonies and Treſpaſſes committed againſt the Peace unto the Seventh Day of Auguſt laſt paſt, and a Pardon of Outlawry to thoſe that ſhould demand t, if any had been pronounced againſt them, before the making of their Charters; and commanded the Biſhop of Ely, then His Chancellor, That he ſhould make Charters under His Great Seal, abſolute and without Condition, for the Earl of Lancaſter, and ſuch as He ſhould by His Letters name to the Chancellor.

'Alſo, whereas in the ſame Indenture it was contain'd, That the Ordinances ſhould be holden and kept as they had paſſed the Great Seal, the King now willed and granted, That they ſhould be ſo obſerved, and that all theſe things ſhould be entred upon the Parliament Roll, and ſent to the Chancery to be enrolled there, and from thence o both Benches, to be likewiſe enrolled in them. × And I deſire the Reader to take Notice that the Relation concerning the Reconciliation of ye Earl of Lancaster is misplac'd, & sh'd have been inserted under A.D. 1218. & ought to be refer'd to that King's Pardon above mention'd

I find nothing elſe worth noting tranſacted in this Parliament, only appears by the * Sentence that was paſs'd three Years after againſt he two Deſpenſers, that Hugh the Son was then appointed by the Lords be Chamberlain to the King, and though De la More* is miſtaken in e Year in which it was done (placing it Anno Dom. 1313, near four ears agone) yet he might be right enough as to the Reaſon, why the ords made him ſo; for he ſays, That Hugh was made Chamberlain by e Conſent of the Prelates and Others, becauſe they knew the King ated him, yet that he by Prudence and Obſequiouſneſs ſoon changed is Mind, and gained His Affection, upon which they proſecuted him ith the greater Hatred: And then he proceeds to give a Character of is Nobleman, as well as his Father; which I ſhall defer until you nd them both become extremely Odious to the Nation, which was ithin a ſhort time after.

* Rot. Clauſ. 15 Ed. 2. m. 14 Dorſ.

Hugh Spencer the Son now made the King's Chamberlain.

* Ad hunc An.

As for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, the [2.] King this Year holding a Parment preſently after Eaſter, required a Subſidy of the Clergy towards War againſt the Scots, who had then entred England, but the Pretes refus'd to grant Him any without the Pope's Leave; to obtain hich, they ſent Maſter Adam Murymouth Clerk to Rome (the Author the Chronicle ſo often cited) to procure it, though at the King's own Charge,

[2.] Chron. Ad. Mur.

The King obtains the Pope's Licenſe that the Clergy might grant Him a Tenth.

Anno Dom. MCCCXIX.

Charge; and the Pope gave Him a Licenſe for the Clergy t grant the King a Tenth for One Year, to begin at Midſummer laſ paſt.

Anno Dom. MCCCXX.

[3.] T. W. * Polychron ad hunc Annum.

A Young Fellow takes upon him to be true Son to the late King Edward.

This Year [3.] the King kept His Chriſtmas at Wincheſter, with great many Knights, Eſquires, and other Courtiers, but it affords littl worth our noting, only that a certain poor Young Man * of Exeter (whom Higden calls a Writer or Clerk, and others call John Deydras a Tanner's Son) came to Oxford, and had the Impudence, or rathe Madneſs, to declare himſelf to be the true Son of the late King Edward and that he had been changed at Nurſe for the Son of a certain Carter who was the King now reigning; whereupon the Citizens of Oxford ſeized the Fellow, though he had taken Sanctuary in the Church o the Carmelite-Fryars there; and when he would not, neither by fai Means nor foul, deny what he had ſaid, he was ſent to the King (bein then at Northampton) and there he was condemned to be hanged, an was executed accordingly between that Town and Kenelworth, as Terror to all ſuch Impudent Impoſtors for the future. The Author la mentioned makes him to have been prompted to do this by the Inſtigation of an Evil Spirit in the Shape of a Cat, which promiſed him that h ſhould be King of England; but I rather believe him to have been reall mad (at leaſt as to this) or elſe he would never have thrown away hi Life for ſo Great a Piece of Folly.

And is executed for it.

[4] Id. Ib.

The Scots invade England, and march as far as York, and take the Earl of Bretaigne Priſoner.

Not [4.] long after, when the King was at York, the Scots broke th late Truce they had entred into, and invaded England again on the ſudden; and marching as far as the Suburbs of that City, burnt them, an in their Return took the Lord John of Bretaigne, Earl of Richmond, an ſeveral other Perſons of Quality Priſoners, whom they made to pa grievous Ranſoms before they were diſcharged.

*K. Edward goes over into France, to do his Homage to the new King.

Philip

* Alſo this Summer, towards the end of the Month of June, Kin Edward went over to Amiens, to meet the New King of France, wh having received Homage from the King of England, reſtor'd to Hi the Earldom of Ponthieu, which He had before ſeized on for the Non-performance of that Duty. ×

× And I further find by the Patent Rolls of this year [Pat: 13. Ed. 2. m. 4. R- coll: p. 835.] that ye King appointed Adomar de Valence Earl of Pembroke to be his Lieutenant during his absence, which was but for a short Time. For it appears by a Memorandum in the Cl. Rolls [Claus: 13 Ed. 2. m. 4. d.] that he began his Journey to ye Sea side on thursday before ye Feast of St. Barnaby & landed at Dover on ye 22d. of July following. [Claus. 14. Ed. m. 16. d.]

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

[5.] The Barons are highly diſcontented againſt the two Hugh le Diſpencers.

The King [5.] being return'd from France, kept his Chriſtmas a London with great Solemnity and Pomp, but could not, for all that long be quiet; for many of the Earls and Barons of the Kingdom bega ſoon after to be as highly diſcontented at the two Hugh le Diſpencer Father and Son (who were become now the King's moſt intima Counſellors) but they were moſt incenſed againſt the Son, for he ha puff'd himſelf up to a greater Inſolence than the former Favourite, inſomuch that he would not permit any of the Noblemen of the Kingdo to diſcourſe with the King, unleſs he were by, and heard what was ſai and often would preſume to return an Anſwer for Him, which ſhew' the Eaſineſs as well as Weakneſs of this Poor Prince. But to ſay ſomewhat farther of theſe Two Favourites from *Sir Thomas De la More, abov cited, who, ſpeaking of the Two Diſpencers, reports, That the Fathe was a Man of Integrity, wiſe in Counſel, and valiant in Arms, who Confuſion and Ignominious End was cauſed by his Inordinate Love towards his Son, who was a Perſon of a Brave Mien, but of a Haught and Proud Spirit, as well as a Wicked Life, cauſing by his Ambition an Covetouſneſs many Widows and Orphans to be diſinherited, and Noblemen to be put to death; by which he haſtened his Own and his Father

Ad An. 1213.

An Account of them from Sir Thomas de la More.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

ther's Deſtruction: It was therefore no great wonder that a Man of ſuch a Character ſhould be generally hated; but it was not long before divers of the Earls and Barons of the Kingdom took up Arms, and began a War againſt him and his Father upon this Occaſion.

Divers Earls and Barons take up Arms againſt them.

[1] T. W.

And the Occaſion of it,

[1.] William de Braioſe, a Baron in the Marches of Wales, and a Spend-thrift, propounded to ſell part of his Eſtate, called Gowerland, that deſcended to him by Inheritance, to ſeveral Lords; the Earl of Hereford, becauſe it lay near his Lands, firſt agreed with him for it; and the Two Roger Mortimers, becauſe it was adjoining to their Eſtates, thought it convenient for them, and knowing nothing of his former Bargain, agreed with him alſo for the ſame Land, whilſt the Lord John Mowbray, who had married his only Daughter and Heir, thought himſelf ſure of it by Inheritance: But in ſhort, this Land was held of the King in Capite, and ſo could not be ſold without the King's Licenſe; but lying neareſt to the Lands of Hugh Deſpenſer the Son, His then Chamberlain and Favourite, eaſily obtained he His Licenſe to purchaſe it, and then bought it of the Owner. This ſo provoked theſe Barons, and eſpecially the Earl of Hereford, that he complained of the Injury done him, to Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, and they Two engaging a great number of the Barons in their Intereſts, entred into a Confederacy to live and die for Juſtice, and the deſtruction of Traytors, intending thereby the two Le Deſpenſers, Father and Son, who now govern'd the King ſo abſolutely, that no Biſhop nor Lord could do any thing at Court without their Favour and Conſent.

The Earls of Lancaſter and Hereford, with other Barons, enter into a Confederacy to deſtroy the Two Spencers.

In perſuance of this, the Earl of Hereford, with the Barons there named, viz. the [2.] Lords Roger de Mortimer, the Nephew and the Uncle; the Lords Roger Damory, John de Mowbray, Hugh de Audeley, the Father and the Son, Roger de Clifford, John Giffard de Brimmesfield, Maurice de Berkeley, Henry de Teys, John Maltravers, with ſeveral Others of that Confederacy, on the Feaſt of the Invention of the Holy Croſs (or Third of May) entred into the Lands of Hugh the Younger, in Wales (whilſt he was with the King doing his Office as Chamberlain) by Force of Arms, killed ſome of his Servants and Tenants, Others they kept in Priſon, and ſome they ſuffer'd to be ranſom'd; they alſo burnt, pulled down, and deſtroy'd or defac'd all his Houſes and Caſtles, and took and carry'd away Goods of all ſorts whatſoever they found, either on his Lands, or in his Houſes and Caſtles, which amounted to a very great value; from thence they rambled up and down the Countrey, and went into Gloceſterſhire, Wiltſhire, Hampſhire, and all Countries where Hugh the Father had any Lands, and begun their Work on Barnaby Day (or Eleventh of June) at his Manor of Faſtern in Wiltſhire; and in all his other Lands, Houſes and Caſtles, wherever they came they behaved themſelves juſt as they had done to thoſe of his Son.

[2.] In the French Monſieur, ſo before all the reſt of their Names.

* See the Record of the annullation of the Proceſs againſt the Two Spencers. Rot. Clauſ. 15 Ed. 2. n. 14. Dorſ. where all theſe Actions are entred at large.

When they had committed theſe Miſchiefs, they marched to Sherborn-Caſtle in Dorſetſhire, where they found Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, the Owner of it; and on Sunday after Midſummer Day they all entred into a New, and confirmed the Old Confederacy.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

The Confederacy of the Earls and Barons againſt Hugh aud Hugh le Deſpenſer.

* Vid. The Regiſter of Chriſt Church Canterbury, where it is enter'd in French.

* i. e. Angus.

The Second Confederacy of the Barons againſt the Two Spencers

‘THis * Indenture witneſſeth, That on Sunday next after the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, in the Fourteenth Year of the King, at Sherborn at Elemede, in the Preſence of the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhops of Durham and Carliſle, the Earls of Lancaſter and * Ænegos, it was conſidered, That Hugh le Deſpenſer,, the Father and the Son, had ill counſelled and moved the King, to the Diſhonour and Damage of Him and of His Kingdom; and having alſo heard and underſtood the Reaſons of the Earl of Hereford, Roger de Mortimer the Nephew and Uncle, Hugh de Audeley the Father and Son, Roger Dammory, John d Mowbray, Maurice de Berkley, Roger de Clifford, Henry de Teys, Joh Giffard, Thomas Mauduit, Gilbert Talbot, and Other Great Men of the Marches (i. e. of Wales); and notice of Information having been give to the Earls of Lancaster and Ænegos, Monſieur Robert de Holland, Fauk de Eſtrange, Stephen de Segrave, William de Latimer, John Devery, John de Harrington, Adam de Snimnington, William de Kyme, Marmaduke de Tweny, Richard Walleys, Robert Pierpount, Ranulph Dacre, Edmund Deyncourt, Thomas Willeby, William de Penington, Ralp de Nevil. Giles de Trumpyton, John de Beker, Adam de Hodeleſton Michael de Haverington, Adam de Everingham, William Truſſel, Rober de Rigate, Robert de Richer, John de Clifford, Henry de Bradbourn, Nicholas de Langford, John de Brekeworth, Thomas Wycher, John de Cliff Thomas de Longuevillers, Edmund de Neville, and Goſtelin Daniel, That the Earl of Hereford, the ſaid Roger de Mortimer, and Other Grea Men of the Marches, and Others above named, had begun Quarrel and Complaints againſt the Lords Hugh the Father and Son, and tha 'twas done to the Honour of God, and of Holy Church, to the Profi of the King, the Queen, and Their Children, and the Safety of th Crown and People: And as the Earl of Lancaſter and Other Grea Men who had begun the Quarrel, would maintain it, ſo the Earl o Ænegos, and All thoſe named after him, will maintain it with all thei Power; and whenever the Earl of Lancaſter and other Great Men ſha leave the Quarrel, the Earl of Ænegos, and all thoſe named after him may leave it without being accuſed or queſtioned for it. And to maintain theſe Things, the Earl of Ænegos, and all the others after hi have put to their Seals. This was the part of the Indenture Agree and Seal'd to by the Earl of Ænegos.

[2.] T. W. The Confederate Barons march towards London, and demand the Baniſhment of the Two Spencers; which is anſwer'd by the King.

Theſe Things being thus concluded, in manner as aforeſaid, the [2 Confederate Barons marched from thence to St. Albans, taking Victuals every where in their March, and oppreſſing the Poor; and takin up there their Quarters, they ſent the Biſhops of London, Salisbury, El Hereford and Chicheſter, as Meſſengers to demand of the King, wh was then at London, not only to baniſh Hugh and Hugh, the Two Traytors, from His Court, but alſo out of the Kingdom; to which th King anſwered, That Hugh the Father was beyond Sea in His Servic and Hugh the Son was at Sea, for the guarding of the Cinque-Ports, according to his Duty, and that, according to Right and Cuſtom, the ought not to be baniſhed without anſwering for themſelves: And H adde dded further, That the Petitions of the Barons were neither founded pon Juſtice nor Reaſon, becauſe the ſaid Hughs, both Father and Son, ad been always ready to anſwer all Men that would complain againſt hem, according to due Form of Law; and if it could be proved that hey had offended againſt any of the Statutes of the Kingdom, they ould be ready to ſubmit to a Lawful Tryal; and He concluded, That e was reſolved not to violate His Coronation-Oath, by granting Parons to Notorious Delinquents againſt His Royal Perſon and Digity, who had thus diſturbed the Peace of the Kingdom.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

This [3.] Anſwer, though it ſeem'd very fair and reaſonable, yet d but ſo much the more enrage the Angry Barons, who taking up rms again, came with great Haughtineſs and Military Pomp up to ondon, and took their Quarters in the Suburbs, where they ſtaid very eaceably, till they had obtain'd the King's Leave (who had no Forces hinder them) to enter the City it ſelf, whilſt the Great Men of that arty ſtill perſiſted in their firſt Demands; but at laſt, by the Interceſon of the Queen and ſome of the Biſhops, the King was prevail'd with avoid the hazard of a War, to agree to all the Barons their Petitins; and thereupon a certain Edict or Statute was ſolemnly read and ubliſhed by the Earl of Hereford in Weſtminſter-Hall, by which Hugh Deſpenſer the Father, as alſo Hugh the Son, were both for ever baniſh'd e Kingdom.

[3.] Id. Ib.

The Barons not being ſatisfy'd, march up to London, and perſiſt in their Demands.

This Tranſaction (though our Author does not expreſly mention it) as made in a Parliament which had been ſummon'd *on the Fifteenth f May, to meet at Weſtminſter three Weeks after Whitſontide, or the Fifeenth of July; and it was in order to this, that theſe Lords thus march'd London in a Warlike Manner; and though the King had ſent to forbid hem coming thither Arm'd, but in due manner as they ought, acording to Law, yet nevertheleſs they did not regard His Prohibitions, or appear'd at Weſtminſter, according to their Summons, but remain'd London in an Armed Poſture, for fifteen days after the Parliament as begun, where they held a Council by themſelves until they had greed on, and drawn up the Sentence or Judgment againſt the Two Deenſers; nor did they ever Communicate it to the King, till they came Weſtminſter with Force and Arms, ſo that He was in no ways able hinder the paſſing of it; which Sentence or Statute is to this effect, tranſlated out of the French Record.

* Rot. Clauſ. 14 Ed. 2. m. 5. dorſ.

The King holds a Parliament at Weſtminſter, to which the Confederate Barons refuſe to come, till they had drawn up the Sentence againſt the Two Spencers.

'To the Honour of God and Holy Church, and of Our Lord the King, for the Profit of Him and His Realm, and to maintain Peace amongſt His People, and the Eſtate of the Crown, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Peers and Commons of the Realm, do ſhew againſt Sir Hugh Deſpenſer, Father and Son, That whereas Sir Hugh the Son, at the Parliament held at York, was appointed to be Chamberlain to the King, in which Parliament it was agreed, That certain Prelates and other Great Men ſhould be with the King by turns, at ſeveral Seaſons of the Year, the better to adviſe Him, without whom no Great Buſineſs ought to be done; now the ſaid Sir Hugh the Son, drawing to Him his Father, who was not by Order of Parliament to be near the King, or to be One of thoſe Counſellors, between them both have uſurped Royal Power over the King and His Miniſters, and the Government of the Kingdom, to the Diſhonour of the King, the Injury of the Crown, and Deſtruction of the Kingdom, Great Men and People, and have done

The Form of the Articles exhibited againſt them.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

'the Wickedneſſes underwritten, in contriving to turn the Heart o th
'King from the Peers of the Land, that ſo they (the Deſpenſers) ma
'have the ſole Government thereof.

'That Sir Hugh the Son made a Bill or Writing, whereby he wou
'have had Sir John Gifford of Brimmesfield, Sir Richard de Greye a
'Others enter into a Confederacy, to have forced the King to do wh
'he would have him, and had almoſt done it ; the Tenor of whi
'Bill is underwritten,

'1. Homage and the Oath of Allegiance is more due by reaſon of t
'Crown, than of the Perſon of the King, and is more ty'd or fixed
'the Crown; than to the Perſon ; and this appears, for that before t
'State of the Crown deſcends, there is no Allegiance due to the Perſo
'expectant; wherefore if the King does not govern Himſelf by Reaſo
'according to * the Right (or Law) of the Crown, His Lieges are the 'bound by their Oath taken to the Crown, to remove the King, a
'to take care of the State of the Crown, by a due Adminiſtration ; f
'otherwiſe that Oath could not be obſerved. Now if it be demande
'How the King is to be dealt with, whether by Suit of Law, or by R
'gor? not by the former, for no Man can be redreſſed that way, b
'cauſe he can have no Judge, unleſs it be from the King [Himſelf]; i
'which Caſe, if the King will not be guided according to * Reaſon, H
'will then be obſtinate in His Error: Wherefore † he ought to kee
'his Oath, and when the King will not relieve him, but is outragiou
'and will do that which is Injurious to His People in General, an
'withal is prejudicial to His Crown, then is it time for them to pro 'ceed againſt Him with rigor; for He is bound by His Oath to Gover
'His People and His Lieges ; and they are bound to Govern in Aid o
'Him, in caſe of His Default.

* I ſuppoſe the Coronation-Oath is here meant.

* i. e. Law.

† Viz. The Subject.

'2. Alſo upon any Application of the Great Men and People unt
'Him, the King His Anſwer ſtill was according to the Pleaſure of the 'Two, in turning the King from His Duty againſt His Oath, and th
'Hearts of the Great Men and People againſt their Liege Lord.

'3. Alſo by their Evil Contrivance, they would not ſuffer the Grea 'Men of the Realm, nor Good Counſellors to ſpeak with, or come nea
'the King to Adviſe Him, nor the King to ſpeak with them, unleſs i
'their preſence, or in the hearing of One of them, and that too bu
'when they pleaſed; thus uſurping Royal Power and Sovereignty ove
'the Perſon of the King, to the great Diſhonour and Peril of Him
'the Crown and Kingdom.

'4. Alſo, to attain their Wickedneſs, Covetouſneſs, and to the di
'inheriting of the Great Men, and the Deſtruction of the People, the 'had put out Good and Agreeable Miniſters who had been placed by A
'ſent, and put in Others Falſe and Wicked, that were of their ow
'Party, who would not ſuffer Right to be done; as Sheriffs, Eſcheators
'Conſtables of Caſtles, and make thoſe Juſtices, who underſtood no
'the Law; as Sir Hugh the Father, Sir Ralph Baſſet, Sir Ralph Cam
'and Sir John Inge, and divers Others their Friends, who cauſed b
'Falſe Jurors of their Alliance, the Peers of the Land to be indicted; a
'the Earl of Hereford, * My Lord Gifford of Brimmesfield, my Lor
'Robert de Monthalt, and Other good people to get their Lands fro
'them.

* Monſieur in the Record before is inſtead of Lord before theſe Names.

6. 'All

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI

'5. Alſo they falſly and malitiouſly adviſed the King to raiſe Arms againſt his People, in Gloceſterſhire, contrary to the Great Charter, and the Award of the Peers of the Land; and by their falſe and evil Counſel, would have made War in the Land, for their own proper Quarrel, to the Deſtruction of Holy Church, and the People.

'6. Alſo, whereas the Earl of Hereford, and the Lord of * Wigmore, by the King's Command, were aſſigned to make War upon Lleuelyn Bren, who had levyed War againſt Him in Glamorganſhire; when the Earl of Gloceſter's Lands, by reaſon of his Death, were in the King's Hands; and Lleuelyn had render'd himſelf into the Lord's Hands, to the King's Grace and Pleaſure: And upon that condition deliver'd him to the King, who received him accordingly. But when theſe Lords were out of the Country, theſe two Sir Hughs, the Father and Son, uſurping Royal Power, took Lheuelyn, and carried him to Cardiff: After which, Sir Hugh the younger * being ſeized thereof, and pretending to a Juriſdiction where none was in this Caſe, there cauſed the ſaid Lleuelyn to be drawn, hang'd, beheaded, and quartered, feloniouſly for things done in the time of King Henry; and they alſo took upon them Royal Power and Juriſdiction, which was appendant to the Crown, in Diſheriſon thereof, and to the Diſhonour of the King, the ſaid Lords of Hereford and Mortimer, and in ill Example and great Peril in the like Caſe for time to come,

* i. e. Roger Mortimer.

* Note he had theſe Lands as his Share of the late Earl of Gloceſter's Eſtate; whoſe Second Siſter he had married.

'7. Alſo they ill Adviſed the King, to take into his Hands the Lands and Goods of Sir Hugh Audley the Son, who was fore-judged without due Proceſs, contrary to the Law of the Land, by the Covetouſneſs of the ſaid Hugh to get ſome of thoſe Lands; and by other falſe Compaſſments, contrived to get the Lands of Sir Roger Dammory, having attainted him upon his entering into Gloceſterſhire, to the Diſheritance of the Peers of the Land.

'8 Alſo, that whereas the King had granted by his Letters-Patents to the Earl of Warwick, in full Parliament at Weſtminſter, that after his death, his Executors ſhould have his Lands, until his Heir was of full Age; which Grant, after the Earl's death, was confirmed by the King at Lincoln, at the Requeſt and Aſſent of the Peers of the Land in Parliament: Yet the ſaid Sir Hugh the Father, procured his Son to cauſe the King to repeal this Grant, without cauſe; and to give the Guardianſhip of the ſaid Lands to the ſaid Hugh the Father, for his own Profit: And alſo had defeated by evil Counſel, what the King had granted in his Parliaments, by good Advice, and by Aſſent of the Peers of the Land; to the Diſhonour of the King, and againſt Right and Reaſon.

'9. Alſo that they would not ſuffer the King to take reaſonable Fines of the Peers of the Land, and others, when they entered upon, and received their Fees, as it had been uſed before that time: But by Covetouſneſs, to obtain ſuch Lands by the Royal * Power, they had cauſed undue Impeachments to be brought, ſurmiſing the Land to be forfeited, as were thoſe of Sir John de Mowbray and others, to the Damage and Diſhonour of the King, and contrary to the Law of the Land, in Diſheritance of the Great Men and others: Alſo making the King do againſt his Oath in Parliament.

* i. e. Prerogative.

10. ' Alſo

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

‘ 10. Alſo by wicked Covetouſneſs, and encroaching of Power-Royal, they would not ſuffer the King to hear or do Right to the Great Men, upon what they preſented to Him, on behalf of Himſelf and themſelves; touching the Diſheriting the Crown and them, concerning the Lands which were the Templars : Alſo by Uſurped Power-Royal they governed the King, his Council, and Prelates; that in Matters concerning them and their Friends, or which they undertook, no Right could be obtained, but according to their Pleaſures, to the Damage and Diſhonour of the King, the Peril of his Oath, and Disheritance and Deſtruction of the People of his Realm.

‘ 11. Alſo Biſhops, Abbots, and Priors Elect, who ought to be received of the King, when duly elected, could not come near him, nor ſpeak with him to obtain his Favour, until they had agreed and made Fine with Sir Hugh the Son, according to his Pleaſure; nor thoſe that had any Grant to ask of the King, could obtain it, before they had made their Agreement or Fine with him.

The Sentence of the Peers in Parliament, againſt the two le Diſpenſers.

‘ Which Wickedneſſes are Notorious and True, as it is found by the Examination of the Earls, Barons, and other Peers of the Land; Wherefore we the Peers of the Land, Earls and Barons, in the preſence of our Lord the King, do award, That Hugh le Diſpenſer the Son, and Hugh le Diſpenſer the Father, ſhall be diſherited for ever, as Diſheritors of the Crown, and Enemies to the King and his People ; and ſhall be Baniſhed the Kingdom of England, never to return again, unleſs it be by the Aſſent of the King, and by Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls and Barons in Parliament duly ſummoned; and to avoid the Realm between the time of the Date of this Statute, and the Feaſt of the Decollation of St. John Baptiſt (or Nine and Twentieth of Auguſt) next coming; and if found in England after the Day, or if they return after that Day, then to be dealt with as Enemies of the King and Kingdom. This, in the * Printed Copy of Old Statutes, is called the Baniſhment of Hugh Diſpenſer, Father and Son ; Yet you muſt take notice, that theſe Articles were admitted and taken for granted, without any direct Proof, as the manner then was to proceed in Parliament.

The Earls and Barons obtain an Act of Indemnity for what they had done.

Then the Earls and Barons above-mentioned, being now the ſtronger Party, did not think themſelves ſafe, until they had alſo procured an Act of Indemnity for themſelves and all thoſe their Adherents, who had a hand in the late Diſturbances; which is enter'd in the * ſame Book, under this Title, Ne quis occaſionetur pro feloniis ſeu tranſgreſſ. factis in proſecutione Hugonis le Diſpenſer Patris & Filii; i. e. That no man ſhould be moleſted for the Proſecution of Hugh le Diſpenſer the Father and the Son. The Statute is to this effect:

‘ That ſince lately many Great Men of the Kingdom had accuſed Sir Hugh le Diſpenſer the Son, and Sir Hugh le Diſpenſer the Father, of divers Crimes committed by them againſt their Lord the King, and his Crown; and to the Diſinheritance of many of the Great Men, and Deſtruction of the People; and that they could not be proſecuted and attainted for their ſaid Offences by Proceſs of Law; ſince the two Diſpenſers uſurp'd Royal Power in divers manners, and had the King and his Miniſters and the Direction of the Law at their Diſcretion, or in their Power; therefore the Great Men of the Land, had made a Confederacy, by Oath, by Writing, and other manner,

‘ without

---

* Vid. Totel's Collection, Pars Secunda, Fol. 50. & deinde ad fol. 54.

* Ibid. fol 54. ad 55. b.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

without the King's leave; and then They and Others, with Horſe and Arms, had marched againſt them, and took and ſeized divers Caſtles, Towns, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Goods and Chattels of the King's Liege-Subjects; and ſome of them they took and impriſoned, others they ranſom'd, and ſome they kill'd, and did many other things, in deſtroying the ſaid Hugh and Hugh, and their Allies and others in England, Wales, and the Marches: Of which ſome may be called Felonies; which things having been ſo done by neceſſity, ought not to be taken notice of, nor puniſhed by Law; nor can be without great Trouble or Hazard of War. The Great Men pray the King, for Peace-ſake, for the aſſwaging of Anger and Rancour, and making Unity in the Land; and that He may more entirely have the Hearts and Good-Will of his People, to defend his own Countries, and offend his Enemies; that it might be accorded, and aſſented to in full Parliament, by the King, Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commons; that no Great Men of the Realm, Prelate, Earl, Baron, Knight, Clerk, or Eſquire, for the Confederacy made by Oath, Writing, or in other manner; or for riding with the King's or other Banners diſplay'd; nor for the taking or detaining of any Caſtles, Towns, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Goods or Chattels; the Seizing, Impriſoning, and Ranſoming the King's Liege-People; or for Killing of Men, and other Robberies, Felonies, or other things done againſt the King's Peace, which may be judged Treſpaſſes or Felonies; from the Beginning of the World to that Day: And all People of what Condition ſoever they were, for the Treſpaſſes and Felonies aforeſaid, committed ſince Candlemas laſt paſt, to that Day, ſhould not be impeached, grieved, or moleſted at the Suit of the King, or any other. But of all ſuch things, by this Statute and Accord, ſhould be quit for ever; Saving to every one, except the ſaid Hugh and Hugh their Right to demand, and recover their Frank-Tenement and their Right; without Puniſhment from the King, or giving Damages to the Party. And alſo that it may be granted by the King in the ſaid Parliament, That if any Earl, Baron, or any Great Men, for themſelves or others, whom they ſhall name to the Chancellor, between this and St. Michael next coming, will have the King's Pardon for Suit or Proceſs of the Peace, or what pertains to him, of all manner of Felonies and Treſpaſſes done contrary to the Peace; or of any Diſobediences, Contempts, Conſpiracies, Confederations, Privy Covenants, and Obligations made againſt the King, ſhall have their ſeveral Charters of Pardon, under the Great Seal, without paying any Fees in the Chancery: And that all ſuch Writings to the contrary, where-ever found, ſhall be Null and Void.

After which * follows the Form of the Charter of Pardon, that was taken out by the Earl of Hereford and the reſt of the Barons and Great Men, who had been Confederates in this Violent Undertaking. It bears Date at Weſtminſter the Twentieth of Auguſt in the Fifteenth Year of his Reign.

The Form of Pardon that was paſſed on behalf of the E. of Hereford, and the reſt of The Barons.

[2.] T. W.

The Barons being fearful of themſelves, go abroad Armed.

When [2.] they had obtain'd theſe Charters, and whatſoever elſe they could deſire, they for the preſent returned home; Yet upon better conſideration, were not very well ſatisfied with what they had done; for fearing they had provoked the King beyond any Reconciliation, they ſtill went abroad well Armed, and never truſted themſelves but

in

---

* Ibid Fol. 55. b. 56.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

[3.] Chron. A. M.
Of the two Spencers, the elder continued abroad, but the younger turned Pirate.

in ſecure Places; which are the uſual Conſequences of unjuſt and vio-lent Actions. But not long after, there happened an Acciden tab prov'd of fatal Conſequence to the Baron's Party, and gave the Kin a fit opportunity to recall the Diſpenſers; [3.] the Elder of whom continued ſtill abroad, but the Younger lay for ſome time conceal'd i England; yet afterwards went to Sea, and turn'd Pyrate; Robbin whatever Engliſh Merchants he could meet with.

[4] T. W.
The Queen being ſhut out of the Caſtle of Leeds, complains to the King.

But to come to the Matter in hand: [4.] Queen Iſabel had hithert promoted Peace and Concord between the King and the Barons whoſe chief Quarrel being againſt his Favourites, it was very Natura for Her (who did not love thoſe that had more power with Her Hu band than Her ſelf) to favour thoſe that were moſt able to oppoſ them: But now there fell out an Occaſion that ſet Her quite again the Barons, and was indeed the chief Cauſe of the Ruin and Deſtruction of a great many of them. For it happened, that the Quee in Her Progreſs towards Canterbury, intended to lodge at the Caſt of Leeds in Kent; of which Bartholomew de Badleſmere, a Rich an Potent Baron, had been made Conſtable or Governor in the Elevent Year of the King: Tho' our [5.] Hiſtorian ſays, that having bee long his Steward, he had now got it ſetled upon him and h Heirs, in exchange for other Lands; in which he had placed his Wi and Children, with a great deal of Treaſure, under a Guard: B whilſt he, forſaking the Faith of his Lord the King, adhered to th Barons, the Queen's Marſhal came thither, to provide Lodgings f Her Self and Family; but was denied Entrance, with a ſawcy Retur from the Guard within, That they would not ſuffer the Queen, n any other to enter there, without the Command or Letter from the Lord. Upon this, the Queen came in Perſon, and demanded En trance into the Caſtle: But She was denied, and forced to ſeek f Lodgings elſewhere. When She return'd to the King, and complain to Him of this Affront, He was very angry; and having drawn together ſome Thouſands of Armed Men, with many Londoners, cam perſonally to the Caſtle, commanding the Gariſon to ſurrender: B they refuſing to obey the King's Command, He ſtraitly beſieged then Whereupon they held out ſo long as they had any Victuals; and whe they could ſubſiſt no longer, they delivered up the Caſtle; and Th mas Colepeper, the Governor of it, was ſometime after drawn an hang'd for his Rebellion againſt Him; all the Women that were foun there were ſent to the Tower of London, and ſeveral of the Warde put to death.

[5.] T. W.

Who thereupon raiſes Forces and takes the Caſtle, and hangs the Governor of it.

[1.] Tho. de la Moor Chron. ad Mur.
Divers of the Barons come with their men and relieve the Caſtle.

[1.] Other Authors further add, That during the Siege of this Caſtle, divers of the Barons with their Forces came to Kingſton upo Thames, on the Vigil of St. Simon and Jude, or Seven and Twentiet of October, in hopes to relieve it: From whence they ſent the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London, and Earl of Pembroke t the King, to deſire Him to raiſe the Siege; promiſing Him, after t next Parliament, to deliver the Caſtle into his Hands. But He no granting their Deſires, they marched into other Parts of the Kingdom and the Caſtle in a very ſhort time after was ſurrender'd, as hath bee already ſaid. For indeed it was ſo notorious a piece of Rebellion, th the Barons could not find very many to take their Parts, ſo that the were forced to go to their own Homes; where ſtanding upon the Guard, the King marched with a great Army into the Marches of Wales, where many of them held out againſt Him.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXI.

In the mean while, about the Tenth of December, the Archbiſhop called a Provincial Synod at London, where few of the Biſhops and Clergy appeared, by reaſon of the Turbulency of the Times, and preſent Heat of Civil War; then Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger, being a little before return'd into England applied himſelf to the King, for the Repeal of his Exile, but His Majeſty, for the better colour of the Buſineſs, committed him to Priſon; however, * at the ſame time He ſent his Petition to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Other Biſhops and Clergy, then met in the ſaid Synod at London, to adviſe about, and give Him their Senſe upon it, who judged the late Sentence or Award, as to the Exile and Diſinheritance Erroneous, againſt Right, and obtain'd by Force, without their, (viz. the Biſhop's) Conſent, as Peers of the Land; and therefore they adviſed and pray'd the King to repeal and make it null for ever; which was accordingly done, and the King thereupon granted Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger His Protection and ſafe Conduct for his Perſon and Eſtate, by His Letters Patents, dated at Weſtminſter the Eighteenth of December, in the Fifteenth of His Reign.

* Vid. the Record of Revocation Exilii Hug. Spencer.

The ABp. and ſome of the Bps. and Clergy in a Synod take upon them to declare the Sentence againſt the Spencers null and void, and for what reaſon.

* Thomas de la More ut ſupra.

The King grants the Younger Le Deſpencer His Protection.

But if the Baniſhment of the Deſpencers is to be looked upon as illegal, becauſe done by Force, and without giving them leave to appear, and make any Defence for themſelves, certainly the diſannulling that Sentence was much more ſo; For what Authority had the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and a few other Biſhops and Clergymen of his Province, to judge concerning a Statute or Act of Parliament, as the Baniſhment of theſe Noblemen was? And therefore how Unlawful ſoever the procurement of it was, yet it ought not to have been repeal'd, but by the ſame way that it was made, viz. the Authority of Parliament.

After [2.] the aforeſaid Revocation of the Baniſhment of theſe Two Favourites, the King did little more this Year; but having now got the Younger Hugh with Him, He by his Advice, and ſome others of that Party, iſſued out His Writs to all the Sheriffs of England, to raiſe the Militia of the ſeveral Counties againſt the Barons; for He was reſolved to be revenged of them for their late Rebellion againſt Him at London; and they on the other ſide, not to be behind-hand with Him, muſter'd up what Men they could, reſolving to repel Force by Force. ✗

[2.] T. W.

The King having the Younger Spencer with Him, raiſes the Militia againſt the late Confederate Earls and Barons.

✗ And ye Earls of Lancaster & Hereford were not at all behind hand with the King; for they had already began to levy men: the former at Doncaster in Yorkshire, as appears by ye Kings Letter or Declaration [Rot: claus: 15. Ed. 2. m. 25. d. R. Coll: p. 899.] to the Earl of Lancaster commanding them not to hold any unlawful Assemblies, which had been lately strictly forbidden by an Ordinance of the King, and great Men, & that the sd Earl should dismiss the sd Companies. Then follows the Kings Letter to ye Earl of Hereford, & ye rest of the Earls and Barons much to the same Purpose, commanding them not to join with the Earl of Lancaster, but to dismiss their followers & come to a Treaty or Conference with the King, as he had appointed them: But they did not yield any Obedience to the King's commands, for it appears by ye same Roll [Claus: 15. Ed. 2. m. 22. d. R. Coll. p. 923] that the Earl of Hereford with the two Mortimers, & divers other Barons joining their Forces, marched from the Borders of Wales and burnt the Town of Bridgnorth, killing, and driving away the Garrison, and then marching forward they took the Castles of Elmeley and Hanle, doing the like by the King's Men they found there. And thus they continued their Hostilities till the King was in a condition to march with an Army sufficient to encounter them: as it appears he did in the begining of January the next year, from the Record above mentiond, directed to the Governour of the Castle of Bristol, which bears Date at Shrewsbury Jan: 15. And by another Record [Claus: Ib. m. 19. in sced:] on the same Roll, we find, that the sd Confederates had by the latter End of the last Month closely besieged the Castle of Tykhill, whereupon ye King sent his Letters under the privy seal to most of the Bishops, Abbots and Priors of England who sent him a speedy supply of Soldiers thereby to suppress the sd Rebellion and violence, when upon the King's Approach with his Forces, the Barons retird from thence, & raisd ye Siege

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

In the [3.] mean while, until the King's Forces could be got together, He went with Hugh Deſpencer the Younger, to keep His Chriſtmas at Cyrenceſter; and ſo ſoon as the Holidays were over, He marched from thence towards the Borders of Wales, where the main ſtrength of the Barons of thoſe Parts then lay, and leaving Gloceſter on His Left-hand, which was then held by them, He made a Tour round about by Worceſter and thoſe Parts, towards Shrewsbury, and ſo to Bridgenorth, where He took in that Caſtle, killing ſome, and putting the reſt to flight; and having out-law'd them, order'd their Eſtates to be ſeized. From thence He went to Shrewsbury, where divers Barons of thoſe Parts being afraid of the King's Power, came in, and ſubmitted themſelves to Him, notwithſtanding their late Oath of Confederacy to the contrary; the Chief of theſe were the Two Roger de Mortimers, the Uncle and the Nephew, whoſe deſertion of the Barons extremely weaken'd their Party, as being the moſt powerful Noblemen in all thoſe Parts, and had been the

[3] Id. Ib.

The King goes with the Younger Spencer to Cirenceſter, and there keeps Chriſtmas, and then marches againſt the Barons in the Borders of Wales.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

greateſt Sticklers for the Common Cauſe,(as they then call'd it); yet ho ever they were not much the better treated, notwithſtanding th coming in; for the King believing it done meerly through fear, ſe them both Priſoners to the Tower of London, till He could further r ſolve what to do with them. About the ſame time alſo the King to the Lord Hugh Audeley the Father, and the Lord Maurice Berkley Pr ſoners, and ſent them to Wallingford Caſtle, whilſt Others of the B rons being gain'd over by the King's fair Promiſes, ſurrender'd the ſelves, and yet were likewiſe ſent to divers places to be kept in ſafe c ſtody.

The King takes ſeveral of the Barons Priſoners, and ſends them to divers Caſtles.

[4.] Id. Ib. The Earl of Hereford and the Lord Talbot leave the Marches of Wales, and go with their Forces towards the North, to meet the Earl of Lancaſter.

[4.] When the Earl of Hereford, and the Lord Gilbert Talbot hea this, they left the Marches of Wales,and went with the Forces they ha rais'd, through Gloceſterſhire, towards the North, to meet the Earl Lancaſter, who expected them, and they found him at Burton upon Tre Upon this the King immediately marched after them; but when He a proached near that place, the Earl of Lancaſter with his Forces ſally out, and for three Days ſucceſſively hinder'd the King's paſſage ov Burton-Bridge, killing many of His Army that endeavour'd to poſſe themſelves of that Ford; but at laſt the King's Forces found a Ford abo Burton, where they got over the Trent,, and then marched againſt t Barons, who lay with theirs in and about the Town. So ſoon as the heard they had gain'd that Paſs, they left their Quarters, and und the Conduct of the Earl of Lancaſter, marched out to meet the King a Plain without the Town; but when he ſaw his Forces too ſ perior to his Own in Number and Strength, he with his Confederate and all their Men, retired Northwards, making great Depredatio in their Marches; whereupon the King perſued them to Burrough-bridg and there they were ſtopped by Simon Ward, Governor of York, and Sir A drew Harclay, Governor of Carliſle, who came againſt them with th Militia of Yorkſhire and Cumberland; ſo that the Barons not being ab to paſs any farther, were there forced to give them Battel, but wit very ill ſucceſs, for Humphry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, endeavou ing to force his way over the Bridge, was unhappily killed, and th Earl of Lancaſter not being able to bear the Shock of the Battel, nor t make his eſcape, * was taken by Sir Andrew Harclay, together wit ſeveral other Barons, Bannerets, and Knights, to the number of Ninet five. X

The Earl of Lancaſter fearing to encounter the King's Army, retires, and is taken Priſoner, and the Earl of Hereford is kill'd.

* De la More. f. 596.

X I cannot here omit that for that service, ye sd Sr An-drew Harcley was immediately highly advanced, and rewarded by the King, being created Earl of Carlisle with a Fee of 24 pr. An: out of ye Issues of the County of Cumberland, with a Pension of 1000 Marks to be payd quarterly out of the Exchequer, till the King should settle upon him Lands or Rents of equal value, as appears by the Letters Patents for that Purpose. [Rot Pat. 15. Ed. 2. pt. 2. m. 20. R-1 Coll. p. 948.]

* Ad hunc An.

* Henry de Knyghton from the Chronicle of a Monk of his own Mona ſtery, gives us a farther and more perfect Relation of this Battel, an ſays, That the Reaſon why the Earl of Lancaſter, with the Barons,wen ſo ſuddenly from the King at Burton, was, becauſe he found himſel diſappointed of a ſtrong Reinforcement, which was to have bee brought him by Sir Robert de Holland, one of the Confederates, bu when he heard the Earl was gone towards the North, preſently ſurren der'd himſelf to the King,who was then at Derby; however, he like wiſe was ſoon ſent Priſoner to Dover-Caſtle; and the Earl of Here ford, as he was fighting upon the Bridge, received his Death's Woun by a Lance directed through a Chink, by an unknown hand, from un der the Bridge, on the Fifteenth of March; and as for the Ear of Lancaſter, he was not taken in the Fight, (as Walſingham Relates but march'd back into the Town of Burrough-bridge, where he had reſpi given him till the next day, and then finding he could do no good, h ſurrender'd

urrender'd himſelf to Sir Andrew Harclay, who immediately ſent him o the King that was then at York.

5.] T W.

The King cauſes the Earl and his Accomplices to be tried and condemned to be hanged, but he himſelf is reſerved to the K's own Judgment.

So ſoon [5.] as the Earl with his Accomplices were brought thither, he King appointed certain Juſtices to ſit upon them, and then all the Barons, except the Earl of Lancaſter, were condemned to be drawn, ang'd, and quarter'd; but the Earl himſelf, out of reverence to his Royal Blood, was reſerved for the King's own Judgment; who coming to Pontefract, a few days after, had the ſaid Earl brought, and arraigned before Him in the Hall of that Caſtle, in the preſence of Edmund Earl of Kent, John Earl of Richmond, Adomar de Valence Earl f Pembroke, John de Waren, Earl of Surrey, Edmund Earl of Arundel, David Earl of Athol, Robert Earl of Anegos, and other Great Men of the ealm, who were then of the King's Council.

It appears by the * Record of this Proceſs, and the Sentence which is pon Record too in the Tower, that the Chief Crime laid to his charge, as, his taking up Arms againſt the King at Burton and Burrough-bridge, bovementioned; as alſo for divers Depredations and Robberies which ere committed by the ſaid Earl in his Retreat to that Place, until the ime of his being taken; which Treaſons, Murthers, Burnings, Depredations and Hoſtile Rebellions with Horſe and Arms, being, (ſays he Record) manifeſtly known, and notorious to the Earls, Barons, nd other Great Men of the whole Kingdom; it was therefore addged, That for the Crimes aforeſaid, the Earl ſhould be drawn, hang'd, nd alſo beheaded.

* Rot Pat. 2 Ed. 3 p. 1. m. 17.

The Articles exhibited againſt the Earl of Lancaſter.

And then follows, in the ſame Record, a long Recital of certain other Crimes which the ſaid Earl had formerly committed againſt the King, or moſt of which, having already obtain'd the Royal Pardon, I ſhall ut briefly mention:

'Firſt, His taking the Horſes, Jewels and Arms, with other Goods belonging to Pierce Gaveſton, and converting them to his own Uſe.

'Secondly, That after his being pardon'd that Offence, he had come to divers Parliaments with many Men, and an Armed Force, and had thereby hinder'd the King from holding his Parliaments, as belonged to His Crown, or elſe had neglected and contemned His Summons to come to divers others, but had held private Meetings or Conventicles of his Own elſewhere at the ſame time.

'Thirdly, That he (the Earl) had drawn to himſelf divers Malefactors, and Diſturbers of the Peace, who had committed ſeveral Felonies and Robberies, and that for receiving them, he himſelf deſerved to undergo the ſame Sentence of Death which they had deſerved.

'Fourthly, That when the ſaid Earl came to the King's Parliament at York, with a great multitude of Armed Men, he had induced the King to pardon all the aforeſaid Malefactors, though the Earl had formerly ſworn to obſerve divers Ordinances, whereby the King ſhould not pardon any Proceſs or Suit of the Peace in emergent Caſes concerning the Death of a Man.

'Fifthly, That though the King, to obtain the Earl's Good Will, and bring him to a better Temper, had beſtowed upon him divers Grants of Lands and Liberties, beſides other Gifts, Graces, and Pardons by His Charters, yet that he had ſtill continued rebellious and diſobedient againſt Him.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

'Sixthly, That the ſaid Earl ſent ſome Knights of his Family to the City of York, to draw the Community of the ſaid City to his Party, and to obtain the Government of it to himſelf, and had there uſurped Royal Power to himſelf in divers manners, and thereby had endeavoured, (as far as in him lay) to diſinherit our Lord the King.

'Seventhly, When the King had been lately at York, and commanded divers Great Men and Others of the Kingdom, whoſe Advice H deſired, that they ſhould come thither to Him, to treat concerning His Expedition againſt Scotland, the ſaid Earl, being then in his Caſtle of Pontefract with a great many Armed Men, ſent divers o them to hinder the Paſſage of ſuch Counſellors over that Bridge, or by any other ways, from attending on the King's Perſon.

'Eighthly, And further, when the King returned from the Countrey about York, to paſs towards the Southern-Parts, and came with hi Family to go over at Pontefract, the ſaid Earl and his Servants goin out of the Caſtle, moſt baſely called out upon the King with a grea Clamour, in Contempt and deſpight of His Royal Perſon and Dignity, as if He had been an Enemy, and not their Sovereign King an Lord.

'Ninthly, Alſo that the ſaid Earl, with the late Earl of Herefor and Other their Fellow Traytors, endeavoured to make a Confederacy with * Robert Bruce, Thomas Randolph, James Douglas, and Othe Scotchmen, Enemies to the King and Kingdom; the which Confederacy was found in the Form of an Indenture, upon the Perſon of the Ea of Hereford, when he was killed; which there follows at large, bu is to this effect; viz. That one John de Denham, was to tell Rober King of Scotland, and the Lord Thomas Randolph, Earl of Murrey, an the Lord James Douglas, on the behalf of the Earls of Lancaſter an Hereford, and their Allies, That if the King of Scots and the ſai Lords would come with all their Power to the Aſſiſtance of the ſai Earls, &c. at ſuch Time and Place as ſhould be agreed on, and woul miſchief or deſtroy thoſe, whom the ſaid Earls would have hurt an deſtroyed, and ſave thoſe whom they would have ſaved, that the the ſaid Earls would live and die with them in maintenance of thei Quarrel, ſaving any Claim, Conqueſt or Seigneury over England, Wale or Ireland; and that if the King of Scots ſhould be hindered by Sickneſs, or any other Occaſion, ſo that He could not come in His Ow Perſon, that then the ſaid Earl of Murrey, and the Lord James, ſhoul perform and do whatſoever they had already aſſured the ſaid Ear and their Allies, and would never march againſt them in Aid of th King of England; and whenſoever the ſaid Earls, &c. ſhould make a end of their Quarrel, they ſhould uſe their utmoſt endeavour, that Good Peace be made between the Two Kingdoms of England an Scotland, and that in the mean time (They) the Scots, ſhould hol their ſaid Kingdom as peaceably as (They, viz. the Engliſh) ſhould d England.

'And Laſtly, It concludes with a recital of what the Fellow Trayto with the ſaid Earl, did in taking and holding the Caſtle and Town Gloceſter with an Army againſt the King's Will; as alſo the Depredations and Murthers done at Bridgenorth, until they joined with th ſaid Earl, as their principal Refuge and Captain, who had alſo expreſſed his Treaſon and maintenance of theſe Traytors, in beſieging th

*i. e. The preſent King of Scots.

King

King's Caſtle of Tickil, after which the ſaid Earl fled toward the 'Scots, Enemies to the King and Kingdom, till he was taken at Burrough-bridge, as aforeſaid: This is the Sum of the Proceſs, Accuſation and Sentence againſt the Earl of Lancaſter; then follows the King's Mittigation of it in theſe Words.

'Wherefore as having reſpect to the Great Crimes and Wickedneſs of 'the ſaid Earl, and his Great Ingratitude, the King has no cauſe to 'ſhew him Mercy, as to the pardoning of any of the Puniſhments to 'which he ſtands now condem'd; yet becauſe the ſaid Earl is deſcend'ed of an Excellent and moſt Noble Lineage, the King for reverence 'thereof, doth by His Special Grace, remit the execution of two of the 'Puniſhments already adjudged, as aforeſaid; (to wit) That the ſaid 'Earl ſhall neither be Drawn, nor Hang'd, but that Execution ſhall be 'done upon him by Beheading.

The Earl, tho condemned to be hanged, &c. yet becauſe of his Royal Blood, is only beheaded.

And it farther appears by the Concluſion of this Proceſs, that it being drawn into Letters Patents, it was inrolled in the Chancery at York, the Second Day of May next enſuing; but how far theſe Articles againſt the Earl were true, or what Defence he could have made for himſelf, is uncertain, ſince it is ſeen by the ſame * Roll in which this Proceſs is recited, that in the Second Year of King Edward the Third, the Record of theſe Proceedings being then brought into Parliament, it was revoked and declar'd null and void by the King, Lords, and Great Men, and the whole Community of the Kingdom in the ſaid Parliament Aſſembled, for theſe Reaſons: Firſt, Becauſe the ſaid Earl was condemn'd to death without being arraigned, or making any Anſwer for himſelf. Secondly, For that it being a Time of Peace, and the King's Courts then open at the time when he was condemned, and that notwithſtanding he was one of the Peers and Great Lords of the Kingdom, he was adjudged to Death contrary to Magna Charta, or the Great Charter of the Liberties of England; which ordains, That no Man ſhall be outlawed, baniſhed, or otherwiſe deſtroy'd, neither ſhall the King proceed againſt him, unleſs by the Judgment of his Peers, and the Laws of the Land; all which Things being duly conſidered, and underſtood, the Lord Henry, Brother and Heir of the ſaid Earl Thomas, was, upon his Petition, reſtor'd in Blood. Witneſs the King at York, the Third Day of March.

* Ib. All the Proceſs and Judgment againſt the Earl revoked in Parliament, 2 Ed. 3. and the Reaſons for it.

All which, both Record and Proceſs, were entered on the Patent Rolls in the Tower, by a Charter of Inſpeximus from King Edward the Third; by which it alſo appears, that the ſaid Thomas Earl of Lancaſter was adjudged to death before King Edward and His Council, at Pontefract, by an Erroneous Proceſs, for the Reaſons already given. We may alſo farther obſerve from it, That the King Himſelf ſat as a Judge upon him, which was not only Illegal, but derogated very much from His Royal Dignity, as He was His Couſin German. I have been the more particular in this Tranſaction, becauſe Dr. Brady, tho he hath given us the whole Record and Proceſs it ſelf at large in his Appendix, yet ſays little or nothing of it in his Hiſtory.

So ſoon as the Earl of Lancaſter was thus condemned, [1.] he was led to a Hill or Riſing Ground without the Town of Pontefract, where he was beheaded on the Twenty firſt of March; however his Body, together with the Head, was buried by the Prior and Monks of that Place, in [1.] Chron. Eveſ.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

* H. K

The Earl is beheaded at Pontefract, and afterwards is by the Common People worſhip'd as a Saint, notwithſtanding all the King could do to hinder it.

A Church afterwards built to his Memory.

* Rot. Rom. 1 Ed. 3. n. 15. printed in Dr. B's Appendix, n. 64. Queen Iſabel writes to the Pope to juſtifie the Miracles done at his Tomb, and to deſire his Canonization.

Lib. 7. Chap. 42. Ran. Higden's Opinion of his Saintſhip.

X And the same Request was several Times renew'd to the Pope & Cardinals, & Envoys sent by King Edward her Son on purpose to take off all Scruples, & Objections that might be made against it, as appears by that King's Letters [Vid. R.'s Coll. 4 Vol. p. 421. 478, 479.] preserv'd among the Rot: Rom: of the 4th & 5th Year of this Reign, & are also published as above. Yet all this would not prevail upon the Pope to canonize one killed by fighting against his Prince, for a Saint.

in their Church, on the Right Hand of the High Altar; but not long after he was looked upon as a Saint, by the Common People, who came on Pilgrimage far and near to offer and pray at his Tomb, upon a Report of divers Miracles and Cures given out to be there done, which was no doubt invented by thoſe Monks, to enrich their Monaſtery; but when the King heard of it, He at the motion of the Deſpenſers, ſent a Guard to hinder the People from going into the Church to pay their Devotions at his Tomb; yet however, ſo great a Reverence had they for him, when they ſaw themſelves excluded thence, that they went and expreſſed the like Superſtition at the Place where he was beheaded, which, notwithſtanding all that the Deſpenſers could do to hinder it, by keeping a Guard upon the Hill, they privately continued, during this King's Reign, and in the beginning of the next. When the Times were changed, there was a handſome Church built upon it, by the procurement, and at the Charge of the Queen Dowager and the Earl of Lancaſter, Brother to the Deceaſed; and a Monk of Pontefract was appointed to receive and keep the Offerings that were there made, in a Cheſt with three Locks, the Keys whereof were to be kept by the Clerk of the Chappel, the ſaid Monk, and a Burgeſs of the Town of Pontefract; nay Queen Iſabel Her ſelf ſeem'd ſo well perſwaded of the Reality of theſe Miracles, that in the beginning of Her Son's Reign * She wrote Letters in His Name, as well as Her Own, to the Pope, wherein She ſets forth the great Cures that had been done to thoſe that reſorted to this Earl's Tomb, and therefore deſired His Holineſs to grant a Proceſs for the Sainting of Him. X But I do not find for all this, that the Pope could ever be ſo fully perſwaded of the Sanctity of the Perſon, or the Reality of the Miracles, as to canonize him for all them: nay, not only the Pope, but many others in England, then queſtion'd the Truth of them; for Ranulph Higden, a Monk of Cheſter, who not long after wrote his * Polychronicon, ſays thus; 'Of 'which Perſon's Miracles (ſpeaking of this Earl) there was much di'ſpute amongſt the Vulgar, whether he was to be number'd amongſt 'the Saints, or not; ſome aſſerting he ought, for that he gave much 'Alms, honoured the Religious, and contended to death, as it ſeems, in 'a Juſt Quarrel: whilſt others thought the contrary, That a Man who 'neglected his own Wife, and defiled innumerable Women; that put 'to death ſuch as did but lightly offend him; that cheriſhed Deſerters 'of their Orders or Profeſſion, and Tranſgreſſors of the Law; that com'mitted all things to the direction of his Secretary; that at the time of 'fighting to death for the maintaining of Juſtice, yet baſely fled; ought 'not to be thought a Saint; eſpecially, when he ſuffer'd unwillingly: 'But what Iſſue the Offerings now made, and the Appearance or Reſem'blance of Miracles celebrated at the place, where he was beheaded, 'will have for the future, after Ages will ſee.

* Vid. Vol. 2d. p. 1052.

I have no more to obſerve concerning the intended Sainting of this Great Nobleman, but that the People of England, when excited by the Monks, have been very prone to count thoſe for Saints, whom they ſuppoſed to have laid down their Lives in defence of the Liberties of the Church and Nation; as appears by the Hymns and Prayers that were addreſs'd to Simon Montfort Earl of Leiceſter, * mentioned in the Reign of Henry the Third.

But to return to the Hiſtory, from which we have ſomewhat digreſſed: As for the reſt of the Barons that were taken Priſoners during this War, [3.] ſome of them, viz. the Lords John Mowbray, Roger Clifford, and Jocelin Deyvile, were drawn and hang'd at York; and for the greater torment of the Earl, Six of his Principal Knights, to wit, Sir William de Liſle, Sir William Touchet, Sir Thomas Maudit, Sir Henry de Bradburn, Sir William Fitz-Williams, and Sir William Cheyney, together with a Servant of his, were all executed before him at Pontefract; and the Diſpenſers made them hang upon the Gallows ſome Months before they would permit them to be buried. As for the reſt of them, they were ſent up to be executed in their own Countries (to wit) the Lords Bartholomew de Badleſmere, and Bartholomew de Aſhburnham at Canterbury; with ſeveral others of the ſame degree; who ſuffered death at London, Windſor, Briſtol, Gloceſter, &c. to the number of above Seven or Eight, only the Lord Roger Damory dyed a Priſoner in Tuttebury-Caſtle; and the Lord Roger de Audeley having his Life granted him at the Interceſſion of his Wiſe, was kept Priſoner in Nottingham-Caſtle, until the Queen's Return out of France. So that ſince the Battel of Eveſham, there was never ſo great a Havock of the Engliſh Barons.

[3.] H. K. The reſt of the Barons taken with the Earl of Lancaſter are executed at ſeveral Places, beſides others that died in Priſon.

But theſe were not the only ill Effects of this King's Succeſs over the Barons; [4.] for an Author who liv'd near that time farther obſerves, that after the Return of the Diſpenſers, and the death of the Earl of Lancaſter, the King looking upon Himſelf as abſolute Lord and Maſter over all in His Kingdom, grew much worſe than ever He had been before; ſlighting the Nobility, and giving Himſelf up to Avarice, by invading other men's Properties, and to as great Luxury in the ſpending of it; ſparing none that had oppoſed him; but made it a pretence to enrich Himſelf by the Forfeiture of their Eſtates. For tho' the two Lords Mortimers, the Uncle and the Nephew, had in the Beginning of the late War deſerted the Barons, and ſubmitted themſelves to the King, yet did they not find much better Treatment for all that; * for they being arraigned before the King's Juſtices, were by them condemned to be hanged as Traytors, only their Drawing and Quartering was pardon'd: Yet they at laſt obtain'd the favour to have their Lives ſaved, tho' with the Loſs of their great Eſtate and Liberties: And ſo were committed cloſe Priſoners in the Tower, where the Elder Mortimer not long after deceaſed; but in due time you will hear more of his Name-ſake the younger Mortimer; And therefore I ſhall now paſs to more Publick Affairs.

[4.] Scal. Chron. Ms. in Bib. Ben. The King's Arbitrary Government after the Death of the Earl of Lancaſter.

The two Lds. Mortimers are condemned, tho' they had ſubmitted to the King.

* Vid. Proceſſ. in Rot. penes. Remem. Scace.

The King on the Fourteenth of March, this Year, being at Derby, a little before the late Defeat of the Baron's Army, * iſſued a Summons for a Parliament to be holden at York, three Weeks after Eaſter next enſuing; which being aſſembled, the firſt thing I find done there, was, that upon the Petitions of the Hugh Diſpenſers, Father and Son, the Proceſs and Judgment againſt them for their Diſheritance and Exile, were brought into Parliament; and upon ſhewing divers Errors in them, were revoked and made null: All which Proceſs, and the Statute made thereupon, being ſtill on the Rolls in the Tower, and not any where printed or publiſhed before that I know of, are tranſlated at large by * Dr. Brady in his laſt Volume; but being tedious, I thither

* Rot. Clauſ. 15 Ed. II. A Parliament ſummoned at York, wherein the Proceſs and Judgment of the former Parliament againſt the Spencers is revoked.

* P. 140. ad 145.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

thither refer the curious Reader, who deſires to peruſe them; and ſhall content my ſelf with making a ſhort Abſtract thereof.

An Abſtract of the Statute of Revocation, with a Recital of the Petitions of the two Spencers; ſetting forth the Outrages committed againſt hem.

‘This Statute of Revocation firſt relates to Hugh the Son, and begins with a Recital of the Sentence or Award made at a Parliament held three weeks after Midſummer laſt paſt, againſt the ſaid Diſpenſers, Father and Sons; as alſo a Petition which the Son had ſome time before given to the King; ſhewing, that while he was in His Service, as His Chamberlain, the Lords Mortimers, Uncle and Nephew, with divers Barons there named, made a Confederacy by Oath and Writing, to perſue and deſtroy Him: By virtue of which, they with their Retinues, conſiſting of Eight Hundred men at Arms, Five Hundred Hoblers, (or Light-Horſe) and Ten Thouſand Foot, came to Newport in Wales; and from thence marched forwards to take His Towns and Caſtles; and entering upon his Lands, they killed part of His Tenants or People; ſome of which were Knights, therein named, beſides others of the ſame degree, who were mad Priſoners; and they took and carryed away His Goods and Chattels. Then it proceeds to recount every thing in particular; as how much Proviſions of all Sorts, what Horſes, Armor, and other things, wer loſt; as alſo how many Oxen, Cows and Sheep (to a vaſt Quantity) they then plunder'd and carry'd away; together with the Lo of His Charters, Writings, and ready Money; as alſo the Burning his Granges, deſtroying His Crop upon the Ground, ſeizing of Hi Rents and Debts, and diſparking his Parks; all which Damages (a appear by caſting up the particulars therein mention'd) amount t the Sum of near Twenty Thouſand Pounds.

Ibidem. A Recital of the violent Proceedings of the Barons in the former Parliament at Weſtminſter.

‘Then it further recites, that they, the ſaid Earls and Barons, with all their Force and Power came to the Parliament at Weſtminſter; and there, upon falſe Accuſations, without calling the ſaid Hugh to anſwer, againſt all manner of Right and Reaſon, and againſt the Law of the Land, erroneouſly Awarded him to be Diſherited, and Exiled England: Wherefore he prays the King, as He is bound by Righ of His Crown, and by the Oath He made at His Coronation, to maintain all People in their Rights, that He would pleaſe to cauſe to b brought before Him the Proceſs of the Award made againſt him, that it may be examined; and that the ſaid Hugh may be admitte to ſhew the Errors in it; and if there ſhall be any found, He woul pleaſe to repeal and redreſs them; with a Proteſtation that he wil be hereafter ready to anſwer any Complaint according to Reaſon.

The Errors aſſigned in the ſaid Proceſs and Judgment.

‘And then it proceeds to ſhew the Errors of the ſaid Proceſs: A Firſt, That the Great Men who perſued and deſtroyed him; praye Pardon of the King for all thoſe things which might be judged Felonies or Treſpaſſes in that Perſuit, which they made by their ow Authority; by which they wrongfully made themſelves Judges o him, where they could not, nor ought to be Judges.

2. ‘Alſo Error, in that the ſaid Hugh was not call'd into Court, t anſwer where the Award was made; alſo Error, in that the Sentenc was given without the Aſſent of the Prelates, who were Peers i Parliament.

3. ‘Item, Error, in that there was no Record of their Perſuit, o the Cauſes contain'd in the Award; alſo Error, in that the Awar wa

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

was made againſt the Form of the Great Charter ; wherein is contain'd, That no Men ſhall be fore-judged, nor in other manner deſtroy'd; unleſs by Judgment of his Peers, or by the Law of the Land. Then he requeſts the King to take notice, that the Great Men were Summoned to come duly to the Parliament, yet did not , but came with Horſe and Arms, and all their Force: After which, he the ſaid Hugh came in, and ſurrender'd himſelf Priſoner to the King ; praying to be received into his Protection, to proſecute his Complaint, and that Right might be done him in theſe Matters: And the King received him as He ought to do ; and cauſed his Petition to be carried to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops, and other Prelates and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, then being in a Provincial Council at London ; charging them by the Faith they owed to Him, to adviſe about the Petition, and let Him know their Thoughts concerning it. And when they had well adviſed thereupon, they anſwered, That it ſeemed to them, that the Proceſs and Award of the Exile, and Diſinheritance of Hugh the Son, and Father, were erroneous, and wrongfully made; wherefore they agreed, and unanimouſly aſſented as Peers of the Land, and prayed as Peers Spiritual, that the Award which was made wickedly and wrongfully againſt God, and all manner of Right might be by the King repeal'd, and annull'd for ever. And they ſaid further, that they, nor any of them ever aſſented to the ſaid Award: But that every one of them, at the time when the Award was made, did make Proteſtation in Writing, that they could not, nor would aſſent to it for ſeveral Reaſons. And the Earl of Kent, the King's Brother, the Earls of Richmond, Pembroke, and Arundel, with the Prelates, being before the King, ſaid, the Award was wrongful, and againſt Law and Right; and prayed Him, as the Prelates had done before, to null and make void the Award: And the ſaid Earls affirm'd, that for fear of the Force, which the Great Men ſuddenly brought to the Parliament, in order to make the Award, which was to them unknown and unexpected, they gave their Aſſent to it, and alſo adviſed the King to ſuffer it to paſs; for which Offence and Miſtake they prayed his Pardon.

A Recital of the Judgment of the Biſhops in this Caſe.

I have been the more particular in the Recital of theſe Proceedings ention'd in this Statute; becauſe they do not only ſerve to confirm what our Hiſtorians have related concerning theſe Matters ; but may ſo inform ſuch as are Curious in the Antient Proceedings of Parliament; and what was then looked upon ſufficient to render any roceſs begun there erroneous. But to proceed.

Ibid.
The Petition of Hugh Spencer the Father.

'Then immediately follows in the ſame Record, a like Petition deliver'd in Parliament by Hugh le Diſpenſer the Father, being to the ſame effect with that of his Son's ; ſetting forth, That the ſame Great Men before named, and other Adherents and Confederates, with Force and Arms, on the day of St. Barnaby, in the Fourteenth Year of the King, came to his Mannor of Faſtern in Wiltſhire, and Twelve others in that Shire and other Counties, viz. Six in the County of Glouceſter, Four in Dorſetſhire, Five in Hampſhire, Two in Berkſhire, Six in Oxfordſhire, Three in Buckinghamſhire, Four in Surrey, One in Cambridgeſhire, Two in Huntingtonſhire, Five in Leiceſterſhire, One in Yorkſhire, One in Lincolnſhire, Five in Cheſhire, and

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

‘ Five in Warwickſhire; in all Sixty Three Mannors there named which ſhews the vaſt Eſtates the two Lords Diſpenſers had in tho days. But as for the Deſtruction and Havock the Barons made up on the Lands of Hugh the Father, they were much to the ſame effe with thoſe that were done to the Son, only greater; as the driving away of Twenty Eight Thouſand Sheep, Twenty Two Thouſand Oxen, Heifers and Cows, beſides the ſpoiling of Two Crop one in the Barn, and the other upon the Ground; the taking awa above Six Hundred Horſes and Mares, beſides a vaſt Quantity of Pr viſions of all ſorts, and Armor for Two Hundred Men; and the D ſtruction of his Houſes and Goods to the Value of above Thirt Thouſand Pounds; as alſo the taking away out of the King's Caſtle a Marlborough, Thirty Six Sacks of Wooll, a Chalice and Croſs of Gol divers Rich Veſtments and other Ornaments belonging to his Chap pel; beſides other Goods and Furniture to the Damage of Five Thouſand Pounds more.

Ibid.

I have not recited all the Particulars of this Loſs, becauſe it woul be too tedious; the Reader that deſires a more particular Informatio of theſe Matters, may find it in Dr. Brady's Hiſtory: Tho' this ma ſuffice to give the Reader a true Notion of the great Power and Riche of the Engliſh Barons in thoſe days, as alſo of their antient manner Living, and the Reaſons why they were then able to keep ſuch gre Hoſpitality, ſince they managed their Eſtates or Demeſnes by th Stewards or Bailliffs of their Mannors, who ſold or ſpent the Li Stock and Husbandry upon them, as was moſt for their Lord's A tage; there being then few or no Farmers or Husbandmen able to ta Leaſes of Lands for Years, (much leſs at a Rack-Rent) paying a yea ly Sum of Money for them, as is practiſed at this day: All which, conſider'd, it is no great wonder, that the Noblemen of thoſe tim ſhould be poſſeſſed of ſuch great Stocks of Corn and Cattle, ſince the chief Riches lay in them more than in ready Money, which was the ſcarce enough. But to proceed with the reſt of this Record.

Then excepting the Difference of the Loſſes, ſet forth in the F ther's Petition, (being of much greater value than thoſe of the Son' the Concluſion of it is alike word for word; and the ſame Errors a aſſign'd as in the former Proceſs or Award, with a like Recital of Hu the Father's rendering himſelf Priſoner to the King, and being al received into his Protection.

Ibid.
The Examination of the King and Parliament upon the ſaid Petition.

‘ Then follows the King's Judgment, in this Form: And we afte wards at our Parliament held at York three weeks after Eaſter, in th Fifteenth Year of our Reign, cauſed to come before us the Proce of the Award; as alſo the Petition of the ſaid Hugh the Son, a Hugh the Father, in theſe Words: To the Honour of God, and H ly Church, &c. The whole Sentence or Award is again repeated this Record. After which Recital it proceeds thus: At which Parli ment at York, the ſaid Hugh the Son, and Hugh the Father, bein brought before us in * Court, proſecuted their Complaints, and pra ed us to do them Right; when the ſaid Hugh the Son for himſelf a ledged the Errors in the Proceſs, as aboveſaid; and alſo Hugh th Father alledged the ſame Errors, and prayed ſeverally and jointl that as the Award was made erroneouſly and wrongfully, again the Laws and Uſages of the Realm, and againſt Common Right a

* i. e. in Parliament.

‘ Reaſon

Anno Dom.
MCCCXXII.

The Reaſons why the former Sentence ought to be made void.

* i. e. the Citizens and Burgeſſes.

Reaſon that we would annull and defeat the ſaid Award, and that they (the Complainants) might be remitted and reconciled to our Faith, and to ſuch Eſtate as they had, and were in before the Award. And here upon hearing the Reaſons of the ſaid Hugh and Hugh, we cauſed the Proceſs to be examined in full Parliament, in the preſence of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Knights of Counties, and the * People that were come by reaſon of the Parliament; and we found the ſaid Award was made without calling them to anſwer, and without the Aſſent of the Prelates, who are Peers of the Realm in Parliament, and againſt the Great Charter of the Franchiſes of England; which ſays, No Freeman ſhall be baniſhed, or otherways deſtroy'd, but by Lawful Judgment of his Peers, or the Law of the Land; and for that they were not called in Court, to make Anſwer, &c. for theſe Errors, and for that the Cauſes of the ſaid Award were not duly proved; As alſo having regard to this, that we cauſed the Parliament at Weſtminſter to be ſummoned in due manner, and commanded by our Writs the ſaid Great Men (who made the ſaid Award) not to make Aſſemblies and Alliances, or come with Armed Men; yet they came with all their Force to that Parliament, notwithſtanding Our Command; and when they came to London in that manner, they held their Councils and Aſſemblies without coming to Us at Weſtminſter according to Summons; and when We ſent to them to come to the Parliament at Weſtminſter, as they ought, they would not come, nor let Us know their mind, nor the Cauſe of the Award, tho' We had begun and held the Parliament for Fifteen days and more, and cauſed to come before Us the Prelates, and ſome Earls and Barons, Knights of Counties, and others, who came for the Commons of the Realm; and cauſed it to be publiſhed, that thoſe that had Petitions to promote, ſhould deliver them: And after Proclamation thus made, no Petition was deliver'd, or Complaint made againſt the ſaid Hugh and Hugh, until they (the Barons) came as aforeſaid; and the Contrivance of the ſaid Award they wholly conceal'd and kept from Us, unto the very Hour they came to Weſtminſter, with Force and Arms, and made their Award againſt Reaſon, as a Thing treated and agreed on amongſt themſelves, by their own Authority, in Our abſence, and Encroachment upon the Regal Power, Juriſdiction and Connuſance, and Judgment of thoſe things which belong to Our Royal Dignity: Wherefore We could not at that time ſtop the ſaid Award, nor do Right to the ſaid Hugh and Hugh, as it belonged to Us. And further taking notice, that thoſe Great Men, after the Award made, prayed Our Pardon and Releaſe for Confederating themſelves by Oath, Writing, or in other manner, without Our Leave; in perſuing the Diſpenſers, and marching with our Banners, and their own Enſigns diſplay'd; and taking and poſſeſſing Caſtles, Towns, Mannors, Lands, Tenements, Goods and Chattels; and alſo taking and impriſoning People of our Allegiance, and others; ſome they wounded, and ſome they killed, and many other things they did in order to deſtroy the ſaid Hugh and Hugh, in England, Wales, and other where; of which ſome might be called Treſpaſſes, and others Felonies. Alſo it appear'd, that thoſe Great Men were Enemies to, and hated them at the time of the Award, and before, whereof they ought not to be their Judges, in their own Proſecution of them, nor have Record upon the Cauſes

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

‘ of the ſaid Award. And we are bound by Oath made at our Cor
‘ nation, and obliged to do Right to all Our Subjects, and to redre
‘ and cauſe to be amended all Wrongs done to them, when We a ‘ required; according to the Great Charter, by which We are not ‘ ſell or delay Right and Juſtice to any one: And at the preſſing Advic
‘ and Requeſt of the Prelates, given Us for the Safety of Our Sou
‘ and to avoid Danger, and to take away an Evil Example for th
‘ time to come, of ſuch Undertakings and Judgments in the like Caſ ‘ againſt Reaſon: Whereſore We ſeeing and knowing the ſaid Pr
‘ ceſs and Award, made in the manner aforeſaid, to be as well to th ‘ Prejudice of Us, the Blemiſhment (or Hurt) of Our Crown an ‘ Royal Dignity, againſt Us and Our Heirs, as againſt the ſaid Hug
‘ and Hugh, and for other reaſonable Cauſes: We by Our Royal Pow ‘ er, in a full Parliament at York, by the Advice and Aſſent of the Pr ‘ lates, Earls and Barons, Knights of Counties, the Commons of the Real
‘ and others, being at our Parliament at York, do wholly annul'l an ‘ defeat the ſaid Award of the Exile and Diſheritance of the ſaid Hug
‘ and Hugh, and all things in the Award; and do fully remit and reco ‘ cile the ſaid Hugh the Son, and Hugh the Father, to Our Faith and Peac
‘ and to the Eſtate they had and were in, before the making that Awar
‘ in all Points. And We adjudge, That they have again Seiſin of the ‘ Lands and Tenements, Goods and Chattels, &c. And We Will and Com ‘ mand, that where ever this ſaid Award is enrolled in any of our Court
‘ it be cancell'd and annull'd for ever.

The former Sentence or Award againſt the Spencers made void by the Parliament.

And ſo the Roll was Cancell'd and Croſſed, and accordingly re mains ſo at this day, with this Memorandum written under the ſai Award: ‘ Theſe Things above written are Nulled and Cancelled b ‘ force of an Award, or Decree made in the Parliament at York
‘ held Three Weeks after Eaſter, in the Fifteenth Year of the Reig ‘ of our Lord King Edward; as 'tis contain'd in a Schedule ſowed t and hanging at this Roll.

‘ And further in * this Parliament at York, the Prelates, Earls, Ba ‘ rons, and the Commons of the Realm there Aſſembled by the King ‘ Command, cauſed to be rehearſed and examined the Ordinances date
‘ the Fifth of October, the Fifth of Edward the Second; and for that, b ‘ examination thereof, it was found in the ſaid Parliament, That by th
‘ things which were formerly Ordained, the King's Power was reſtrain
‘ ed in many things contrary to what was due to His Seigniory Roya
‘ and contrary to the State of the Crown; and alſo for that in time
‘ paſt, by ſuch Ordinances and Proviſions made by Subjects over th ‘ Power Royal of the Anceſtors of Our Lord the King, Troubles an ‘ Wars came upon the Realm, by which the Land or Nation was i ‘ Danger; it was accorded and eſtabliſhed in the ſaid Parliament b
‘ the Lord the King, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and all the Com
‘ monalty of the Realm at that Parliament Aſſembled, That all thoſ ‘ things Ordained by the former Ordainers, and contained in thoſ ‘ Ordinances from thence forth for the time to come, ſhould ceaſe an ‘ looſe their Force and Effect for ever; and that from thence forwar
‘ in no time, no manner of Ordinances or Proviſions made by the Sub ‘ jects of the Lord the King, or His Heirs, by any Power or Commiſſi
‘ on whatever over or upon the Power Royal of Our Lord the King ‘ or His Heirs, or againſt the State of the Crown, ſhall be of any ‘ Valu

* Vid. Stat. Roll from Hen. 3*d.* to 21. of Ed. 3. M. 31. & MS. in Bib. Cott. Claudius, D. 2. F 232 a.

The Ordinances or Proviſions in the Fifth Year of the King's Reign, are alſo made void.

‘Value or Force, but all things that ſhall be eſtabliſhed for the Eſtate of the King and His Heirs, and for the State of the Realm and People may be Treated, Accorded, and Eſtabliſhed in Parliament by the King, with and by the Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commonalty of the Realm, as hath been accuſtomed.

anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

I do not find any thing elſe to have been done in this Parliament, but that [1.] Hugh le Deſpencer the Father, was now made Earl of Wincheſter, and had the Manor and Caſtle of Donnington in Linconſhire given him for the better ſupport of his Dignity; alſo at the ſame time Sir Andrew Harclay, who had taken the Earl of Lancaſter Priſoner, was for that piece of Service Created Earl of Carliſle, and had certain Lands on the Marches of Scotland beſtowed upon him, with the Government of that City and County. The King had then alſo granted Him towards his Expedition againſt the Scots, a* Tenth Part of the Goods of the Lords and Commons of the Kingdom, and a Sixth Part of thoſe belonging to the Cities, Boroughs, and Antient Demeaſns. The Reader may here obſerve the great Violence of theſe Times; for as the King by His late Succeſs againſt the Earl of Lancaſter, and the Barons of His Party, was now able to procure a Parliament that would do whatever He and the Deſpencers would have them; ſo when the Tide turned, and the Queen and Her Adherents, (who were the greater part of the Barons) got the better over the King, and theſe His Favourites were executed, all the Proceedings in this Parliament at York were looked upon as null and void, as being procured by Force and Fear, as you will find hereafter, towards the latter end of this Reign. But to return to our Hiſtory.

[1.] T. W. Ib. Hugh Spencer the Father made Earl of Wincheſter in this Parliament.

* Rot. Clauſ. 16 Ed. 2 m 20. Dorſ. A Grant is alſo then given the King.

Not long after the breaking up of this Parliament, towards the latter end of July, [2.] the King having ſtill a great Army on foot,× was reſolved to make another Expedition into Scotland, to revenge the Injuries He had received, but ſo ſoon as He enter'd that Kingdom, the Scots hearing of His Approach, deſtroyed their Countrey as much as they could, and ſo retreated into their Faſtneſſes in the Mountains beyond the Frithe of Edinburgh, which the King not thinking fit to paſs over, His Army being much diſtreſſed by Sickneſs, as alſo for want of Victuals and Forage, He returned back again in the beginning of September, without doing any thing conſiderable; but before He could reach England, the Scots were again come back, and following the King at the Heels, diſtreſs'd His Army by daily Incurſions, [3.] took Norham Caſtle, and marching forward, deſtroyed divers Towns in the North-riding of Yorkſhire, and ſo ſurprized the King at the Abby of Byeland, in the Foreſt of Blackmore, that they had even like to have taken Him Priſoner, had He not ſpeedily ſaved Himſelf by flight; nevertheleſs, they ſeized all His Plate, Furniture, and Money, and meeting with the Earl of Richmond, who had been ſent by the King to obſerve the Motions of the Scots, they routed his Men, and carried him away Priſoner; but the King Himſelf, with His Favourite, the Younger Deſpencer, got ſafe to York. This is the Third Expedition which this Unfortunate Prince made into Scotland, with the like ill Succeſs: [4.] When His Enemies had ſpoiled the Country as far as that City, they returned homeward with a great many Priſoners, and much Booty, and in their Return [5.] they put the Towns of Rippon and Beverley to a Ranſom of Four hundred Pounds,

× (which had been lately raiſed by the Military Service of his Barons & Tenants in Capite) as appears by the Writts of Summons for that Purpoſe, Rot: Claus: 15. Ed. 2. m. 7. d. vid: R—s Coll: 3d vol. p. 952.

[2.] T. W. Ib. The King makes another Expedition againſt the Scots but without any Succeſs, and returns back.

[3.] C. Walt. Hemingford in Bib. Herald. The Scots preſently after invade England, and deſtroy the Countrey almoſt as far as York, and had like to have taken the King Priſoner.

[4] T. W.

[5.] C. Ad. Mur.

which

Anno Dom. MCCCXXII.

which they were forced to pay, to ſave them from Burning and Pillage. *

* this year, a strange mad superstitious zeal, seizd the shepheards, & other Rustics of Cornwall both men and women, who fancying they were ordained by God to recover the Holy Land took shiping, but being arrived beyond Sea and there committing great disorders & plunderings in their marches, were seizd and many of them hangd the rest ~~privately~~ escaping, returnd privately into England. Contin: Chron: Gervasii ad hunc annum.

[1] Mezeray, Ad hunc An. The Death of Philip the Long, K. of France, who is ſucceeded by Philip the Fair.

As to Foreign Affairs, I find nothing elſe to have happened conſiderable, only the [1.] Death of Philip the Long, King of France, who deceaſed of a Quartane Ague, at Bois de Vincennes, on the Thirteenth o January, having attain'd but to the thirty firſt Year of His Age, and th beginning of the Sixth of His Reign, but died unlamented both by th Clergy and People, becauſe of His frequent exacting of Tenths from th Former, and the many grievous Taxes He laid upon the Latter: H left no Iſſue Male but three Daughters, ſo that according to the French Salick Law, His Brother Charles, ſirnamed The Fair, ſucceede Him.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIII.

[2.] T. W. Ad hunc An.

The King expreſſes a Concern for the Death of the Earl of Lancaſter.

King Edward [2.] having kept His Chriſtmas at York, continued ther all this Winter; and though He put the beſt Face He could upon Hi late Defeat by the Scots, yet it ſeems He was much concern'd at the Diſhonour of it, as alſo for the late ſevere Proceedings againſt the Earl of Lancaſter: For when about this ſame time an Ordinary Perſon of the Famil of that Prince, who had been engag'd with his Lord in the late Inſurrection, was taken and condemn'd to be hang'd, but becauſe he formerly had a Place at Court, ſome about the King offer'd to interced for his Life; at which He fell into a Paſſion, ſaying, Go your ways, yo wicked and malicious Detractors, you can intercede for this Raſcal, but non of you would not ſo much as open your Mouths in behalf of my Couſin of Lancaſter, who if he had lived, might have been uſeful both to Me and th whole Kingdom; therefore as for this Fellow he ſhall die as he deſerves and ſo He ordered Execution to be done upon him. This Story deſerves to be taken notice of, becauſe it lets us ſee, that this King was no cruel in His Nature, but repented Him of His too great Severity t His Kinſman, whom perhaps He might have pardon'd, had any of thoſ about Him interceeded for his Life, and that the Two Deſpenſers ha not haſten'd his Execution.

[3.] Id. Ib. The ſudden great Fall of Andrew Harclay Earl of Carliſle, and the Occaſion of it.

And ye King was now so distressed for want of Money, that he was forced to summon another Parliament [Claus: 16. Ed. 2. m. 22. d.] to meet at Rippon, which for some Reasons was presently after adjourned to York: [Ib. m. 24. d.] to meet the Sunday after Michaelmas Day, where being assembled, the King appointed his Brother Edmund Earl of Kent to be his Lieutenant in the Marches of Scotland. Rot. Pat. 16. Ed. 2. p. 1. m. 4.]

He is degraded, and then executed.

[3.] About Candlemas happen'd a ſtrange Revolution of Fortune to Great Perſon lately raiſed; for Andrew de Harclay, Earl of Carliſle, di not long enjoy his new Honour,, and whether it was from an Indignation, to ſee Hugh le Deſpenſer the Younger ſo much prefer'd before hi in the King's Favour, or that he hoped to advance his Fortunes muc higher, by an Alliance with the King of Scots, we know not, howeve he held a Secret Correſpondence with Him, and engaged to go over t His Party, and (as ſome relate) to marry His Siſter; but this wa not kept ſo ſecret, but at laſt it came to the King's Ear, Who thereupo privately employ'd Sir Anthony Lucy, a Valiant Knight of thoſe Northern Parts, to ſeize upon his Perſon, which (though he had been h familiar Friend, yet) to eſtabliſh himſelf in the King's Favour, he undertook; and underſtanding that the Earl reſided then at Carliſle, he cam upon him on the ſudden with a ſtrong Party, and taking him Priſone ſent him up to London, where he was tryed by his Peers, and adjudge to be condemned, drawn, hang'd and quarter'd, which was execute upon him accordingly; but he was firſt degraded of his Honour Knighthood, his Gilt Spurs being cut from his Heels with a Hatche and his Military Belt or Girdle pulled from about his Middle; his Hea was ſet upon London-bridge, and his Quarters were ſent to four of th Chief Cities of England. This deſerves our notice, it being the fir

Examp

Example in our Hiſtory of any Nobleman or Gentleman who had been thus degraded before his Execution.

But I cannot omit taking notice that the [4.] Author of the Chronicle of Lanercoſt (from whom alſo John of Tinmouth often fellows) does all he can to extenuate this Earl's Crime; as that when he ſaw the King not able to defend his Kingdom againſt the Scots, he thought fit to make Peace with them upon the beſt Terms he could; and to that end going privately into Scotland, there held a Secret Treaty with King Robert; the Deſign was to make a Perpetual Peace between the Two Nations, the Chief Articles were, 'That each of them ſhould live in 'Peace under their own Kings and Laws, diſcharg'd of all Subjection 'and Dependance of either King to the Other, and that for the determining of all Differences between them, Six Noblemen of each Nation 'ſhould be choſen, and have full Power for that purpoſe, in order to the 'Peace and Benefit of both Kingdoms, and the Deciſions of theſe Com-'miſſioners, the King of Scots and the ſaid Earl ſhould ſee put in execu-'tion in their reſpective Kingdoms, without delay; that in conſiderati-'on of this Peace, the King of Scots ſhould pay the King of England the 'Sum of 80000 Marks in ten Years, at 8000 Marks per Ann. it was 'alſo agreed, That King Edward ſhould have the diſpoſal in Marriage 'of his (viz. King Robert's) Eldeſt Son, according to the Agreement 'of the Twelve Noblemen above-mentioned, for the good of both 'Kingdoms, neither of which was to receive each other's Enemies, but 'that if the King of England would not agree to His Treaty, within one 'Year next enſuing, then the King of Scots was to be free from the ſaid 'Engagement: For the true performance of all which Articles, the Earl of Murrey ſwore on the behalf of King Robert, as the Earl of Carliſle did for himſelf; who ſo ſoon as he return'd into Ergland, ſent to the Sheriffs of, Northumberland, the Biſhoprick of Durham and Yorkſhire, commanding them to ſummon all the Chief Men of thoſe Counties to be aſſiſting to him in performing the ſaid Articles, and to proſecute all thoſe who ſhould go about to hinder or oppoſe their Execution; the Earl himſelf did the like in Cumberland, which when the Common People heard of, they were very much pleaſed, ſince they now hoped to live in peace: But upon this News King Edward and His Council were ſo highly incenſed, that the Earl ſhould offer to treat with the Common Enemies, the Scots, without their knowlede or conſent, to the prejudice of the King and Kingdom; and eſpecially, ſince he would have obliged the King's Subjects to riſe againſt Him, if He would not agree to what the Earl had then concluded without His knowledge; whereupon He order'd him to be ſeized, (as hath been already related): The ſame Authors farther ſay, That the Earl was not condemned at London, but at the Caſtle of Carliſle, where on the Third of March, Sir Geoffery le Scrope, Lord Chief Juſtice, ſat upon him, and condemned him to ſuffer as a Traytor; and that at his Execution he confeſſed the whole Confederacy with the Scotiſh King, in the manner as is here related. But to proceed with the reſt of the Scotiſh Affairs.

[4.] Hiſt. Aur. ad hunc An. Some Writers extenuate his Crime with the Project of Peace he would have made with the King of Scots.

[5] Robert King of Scots having been ſometime ſince excommunicated by the Pope, and His Kingdom put under an Interdict, for refuſing to make Peace with the King of England, being now ſenſible of the great Inconvenience of it, He ſent the Biſhop of Glaſco and the Earl of Murrey to Rome, to try if they could obtain Abſolution from the Pope, but [5] T. W. The King of Scots ſends Ambaſſadors to Rome to obtain the Pope's Abſolution from the Interdict, and offers a Truce with England.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXXIII.

but could not prevail, becauſe He was oppoſed by a Clerk of the King of England's, who was ſent thither to prove, that Robert Bruce had no given His Holineſs, nor yet the King his Maſter, any Satisfaction; wherefore to comply with the Pope's Commands, and thereby obtain His Favour, King Robert propoſed a Truce to King Edward; who being now tired out with this Unlucky War, readily agreed to it; and ſo it wa concluded between the Two Kings for Thirteen Years, and was compriſed in as many Articles; for which our Author refers us to the Chronicle of Henry Blankford, a Monk of St. Alban's Abby, which not bein now to be found, we know not what they were. ×

× But now I find by a Record since published [Rot: Pat: 16. Ed. 2. pt. 2. m. 9. d. R—'s Coll: p. 1022, 1023.] ~~by~~ Mr. R—r, that the chief Articles of this Truce were, that it sh. extend to all the Dominions of the King in England, Wales, Gascoigne, & Ireland, and to all Scotland, with the Appurtenances thereof, to continue from ye 12th Day of June ~~ensuing~~ next and from thence for 13 years ~~next~~ ensuing.

I must further take notice yt ye chief Commissioners for concluding it ~~were~~ for K. Edward were Amery de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, Hugh Spencer the younger, with two Clergy Men, & two Knights more: and for the King of Scots, the Bp. of St. Andrews with the Earl of Murray, with two Knights & one Clergy Man, who are all particularly named in the King's Letters Patents concerning ye Articles of ye sd. Truce the principal of which are these yt. follow.

1. That all Differences & Debates concerning any Breach of ye sd Truce should be decided by certain Guardians equaly appointed by both King's for that Purpose: that during the sd. Truce there should be no communication between their Subjects without the special License of ye sd. Guardians, & yt none should pass out of one Kingdom into the other without their Leave.
2. That no new Fortresses sh. during ye sd. Truce be erected on ye Marches or Frontiers of either Kingdom: but those yt were already built might be kept & maintained ~~by either Kingdom~~.
3. That all Merchants Strangers with their goods might freely pass by Sea into either Kingdom without molestation; that all Persons aggrieved might go to complain to ye Guardians appointed to com of an Injury done them without any License ~~without~~ for that purpose
4. & lastly. That ye King of England wd. no way hinder ye Ld. Robert Bruce from purchasing his absolu his Excommunication from the Pope, whenever he sh. please to grant it. These Articles bear Da Thorp near York ~~the~~ 30th of May. A.D. 1323.

This Truce being proclaimed in both Kingdoms was solemnly sworn to [Rot: Claus: 16. Ed. 2. m. 2. 9. d. R—'s Coll. p. 124, 125.] on ye behalf of both Kings by certain Noblemen, appointed by special Comm yt Purpose: Note, that in these Instruments King Edward does not afford ye K. of Scots ye Title of King: but it is tacitly allowed him by entering on ye Rolls [Rot: Pat. 16. Ed. 2. pt. 2. m. 9. d. R—'s Coll. p. 1030. a copy in French of of this Truce by King Robert, wth ye Assent of ye Bishops, Earls, & Barons of Scotland under ye Title of King of ye King Date at Berwick upon Tweed ye 7th Day of June in ye 18th year of his Reign.

[1.] Id. Ib. Ambaſſadors arrive from France to ſummon the King to come over and do His Homage, but He is diſſwaded by the Spencers from going over. Upon failure of which the King of France ſeizes upon all His Territories there.

Not [1.] long after this there came over the Sieur Seonville, and Andrew de Florentia, as Ambaſſadors out of France to the King, then lying at Pyckering in Yorkſhire, to cite and admoniſh Him to come ove within a certain time prefixed, to perform His Homage to Charles th New King of France, but Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger, and Richar Baldock, the King's Chancellor, perſwaded the Ambaſſadors not plainly to declare to the King the Penalty He was to undergo in caſe of a Failure, viz. the ſeizing on His Territories in France; which they ſo fa comply'd with, that they only gently adviſed Him to come ove with all convenient ſpeed; but of this Admonition, the Latter of thes Ambaſſadors (being a Publick Notary) privately made an Inſtrumen or Record of it, atteſted by himſelf; which being deliver'd to the Kin of France upon their Return, He iſſued out a Proceſs in the Parliament of Paris, in vertue whereof He not long after ſeized upon al the King's Territories in Guienne and Gaſcoigne, as you will hear furthe under the next Year.

[2.] Id. ib. Some endeavours, though in vain, to reſcue the Lords Berclay and Audley out of Priſon.

About [2.] this time there was carried on a Secret Plot or Combination of many that were of the Party of the impriſon'd Barons, to ſe them free; and in order to this ſome of the Conſpirators came by Nigh to Walſingford Caſtle, with a deſign to ſet the Lords Berkley and Audley, who were kept there, at liberty; this was ſo near ſucceding, tha they had got in by a Poſtern-Gate next the Thames; but being diſcover'd by ſome of the Warders of the Caſtle, they alarum'd the Townſmen, who came in quickly to their aſſiſtance; whereupon the Conſpirators fled for Refuge into the Chappel there; but that did not at al avail them, for they were pulled out from thence, and the Ringleader hang'd, and the reſt made Priſoners.

[3.] Id. Ib. Ad Mur. The Lord Roger Mortimer makes his Eſcape out of the Tower.

Yet [3.] not long after, about the beginning of Auguſt, the Lord Roger Mortimer the Younger, eſcaped out of the Tower of London, b putting a Sleeping Doſe into the Drink wherewith he treated the Warders; or elſe (as the Chronicle of Leiceſter in H. Knyghton relates) b the Connivance of one Girald de Alſpaye, who was then Lieutenant o it under the Lord Stephen de Segrave the Conſtable; ſo ſoon as he ha eſcaped, he went immediately over into France, where that King being upon ill Terms with His Brother of England, not only received him but divers Others of the late Baron's Party, that had fled thither for fea of the Diſpenſers, who now ſeized the Eſtates of whomſoever they pleaſed to call Enemies to the Publick, who was indeed Enemies t themſelves; but the Eſcape of Mortimer and the Reſt proved the Rui of theſe Favourites a few Years after: Walſingham, and ſome other Authors place this Nobleman's Eſcape under the next Year, but I prefe

Adam

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIII.

dam Murymouth's Account, who ſays, It was on the firſt of Auguſt in is, when indeed it happen'd. ×

× And about three months after his Escape, ye King fearing yt a Nobleman of his great Interest & Relations might hold Correspondence with those of his Party in England, thot fit to prevent it by issuing out a Proclamation to [Rot. Pat. 17. Ed. 2. pt. 1. m. 11. R., Coll. Vol. 4. p. 22] all the Sheriffs, & to the Ld Justices of Wales, Chester, & the marches thereof, and to ye Wardens of the Cinque Ports wherein (after setting forth the manifold Treasons of the sd Roger Mortimer (for which he deserved to have suffered ye Death of a Traytor, but yt being kept Prisoner he had made his Escape) ye King strictly commands all Men upon Pain of Life & Forfeiture of their Estates, not any ways to aid, comfort, or assist ye sd Roger, by Letter, Message, or any other way & to pursue him & all his Adherents by Hue & Cry, & all the Power they could raise; and that they shd make publick Proclamation thereof in all their Districts, & Bailywicks. given at Notting ham. 14. November.

* Pat. 16 Ed. 2. part. 1. m. 34. Dorſ.

A Vindication of the Lord Mortimer from ſome Falſe Miſrepreſentations.

Dr. Brady hath given us a * Record, whereby it appears, that the ord Roger Mortimer the Younger, upon his Tryal for Treaſon, having ceived Judgment to be drawn and hang'd, the King out of His Special race, pardon'd the execution of that Sentence, and ordered, that inead thereof he ſhould be a perpetual Priſoner, and aſſigned certain Juices to adjudge him to perpetual Impriſonment; but as to what De More relates of his eſcape out of the Tower, and going over to the ueen into France, it is certainly a Miſtake, all Writers (beſides himlf) relating it as done a Year before at leaſt. And whereas Dr. Brady lledges his following Combination with the Queen as a great piece of gratitude to the King, to whom he owed his Life, yet thus much uſt be ſaid in his Vindication, That the Sentence of Death that was iven againſt him, was certainly too ſevere, and contrary to Common uſtice, ſince he had before ſurrender'd himſelf to the King's Clemency, pon his Arrival in the Marches of Wales; and it is highly probable it as not without ſome Private Conditions for the ſaving of his Life and ſtate: And though it appears by the Record abovementioned, that he ad his Life given him, yet that was no great Favour, when his Eſtate nd Liberty was to be for ever loſt, and his Family ruined; eſpecially hen the King Himſelf had no Right to take them away.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIV

[4.] T. W.

* Rot. Clauſ. 17 Ed. 2. m. 27. Dorſ.

The King holds a Parliament, where it is debated what Anſwer to return to the King of France's Summons.

The King, [4.] having kept His Chriſtmas at Kenelworth with great Magnificence and Crowds of Nobility, in the * beginning of Lent ollowing, held a Parliament at London, to treat of divers Publick Afirs, and particularly what Anſwer he ſhould return to the K. of France His Enbaſſie, concerning His going over to do Him Homage; nd as to that Matter, it was the Reſolution of the Lords, and all Ohers there aſſiſting, That the King ſhould not go in Perſon, but hould ſend certain Ambaſſadors on purpoſe to excuſe His coming over t all, or at leaſt, to delay it for a time; and there were choſen in this Parliament two Noble Perſons to go on that Errand, to wit, the Earl f Kent, the King's Brother, and the Archbiſhop of Dublin.

[5] Id. Ib.

The Parliament refuſe the King an Aid.

The [5.] King alſo required in this Parliament a pecuniary Aid from he Clergy and Laiety, to diſcharge the Ranſom of John Earl of Richond and Bretagne; but this Propoſal was refuſed by the Barons for a ery good Reaſon, viz. That no ſuch Tax ought to be raiſed, but only for he Ranſom of the King, Queen, and their Eldeſt Son, if they ſhould appen at any time to be taken Priſoners, and ſo that Demand fell.

[1.] Id. Ib.

The Biſhop of Hereford arreſted for High-Treaſon, with the Charge againſt him.

In [1.] this Parliament likewiſe Adam Biſhop of Hereford was arreſted, o the great ſcandal and prejudice of the Clergy (as the Monk my Author words it) being examined before the King and Lords upon divers Articles of High-Treaſon. It was laid to his Charge, That he had receiv'd certain of the King's Enemies, had furniſhed them with Arms, and had given them his Aſſiſtance, Favour and Advice: The Biſhop being a Diſcreet and Learned perſon, ſaid little at firſt to this Accuſation, until being further urged, he thus anſwer'd; My Lord the King, (ſaving all ue Reverence to Your Majeſty) I being an humble Miniſter of God's Church, nd a Conſecrated Biſhop (though unworthy) ought not to anſwer ſuch high Matters without the Licenſe and Authority of my Lord the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who next to the Pope, is my proper Judge; as alſo without the Conſent of the reſt of my Fellow Biſhops: Upon which the Archbiſhop

His Anſwer to the Accuſation.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIV.

Upon the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and other Bps. Interceſſion he is delivered into the ABPs Cuſtody, and being brought to his Tryal, is reſcued by the Biſhops; yet the King does not deſiſt from His proſecution. He is found guilty by a Jury in Herefordſhire, and all his Temporalties are ſeized.

and his Suffragans riſing up, implored the King's Mercy for him, whe upon he was delivered to the Cuſtody of the Archbiſhop, till the Ki ſhould reſolve when and how to ſummon him again, to anſwer wh might be farther laid to his Charge; But the King's Anger not being y pacified, ſomedays afterHe ſummoned theBiſhop again to anſwer in th Court; which coming to the ears of hisBrethren theArchbiſhops of Ca terbury, York, and Dublin, with ten other Biſhops, came to the place Judgment, with their Croſſes erected, and took him away into th own Cuſtody, firmly enjoining all that were preſent, under the pain God's Curſe, not to lay Violent Hands upon him; with which Boldneſs the Clergy the King was ſo incenſed, that He commanded Inquiſiti to be made upon the former Charge before His Juſtices in Herefor ſhire, and a Jury being ſummoned of that County, and fearing to fend the King, quickly found the Biſhop (though abſen guilty of all the Articles laid to his Charge; which Verdict His M jeſty then taking advantage of, immediately ordered all the Biſho Goods, Lands, and Revenues to be ſeiſed; but he ſtill continued in t Cuſtody of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, expecting the King's Merc though in vain.

*Clauſ. 1 Ed. 3. part. 1. m 13. Intus.

The Crimes laid to his Charge, and the Proceedings thereupon proved from a Record.

But as the following * Record ſets forth how he was reſtored to h Temporalities in the firſt of Edward the Third, ſo it alſo ſhews partic larly, what Crimes were laid to this Biſhop's Charge, and the Procee ings thereupon, and indeed confirms the Teſtimony of our Autho therefore I ſhall give you the Contents of it, viz. That by an Inquiſiti taken at Hereford before the Juſtices of the King's Bench, it was the found, that Adam Biſhop of that See, was of the Confederacy of Rog de Mortimer of Wigmore, *who was then reputed an Enemy and Rebel the King his Father, and that he (the Biſhop) ſent certain Men at Arms his aſſiſtance; and being accuſed of theſe Things before the ſaid Juſtices, had alledged, * That without offending God and Holy Church, and witho leave of the People, he could not, nor ought to make Anſwer; nor ought t Juſtices to proceed to take the ſaid Inquiſition; yet however they did proce againſt him; and becauſe it was found by that Inquiſition, that the Biſhop w of the Confederacy of the ſaid* Roger, and ſent to his aſſiſtance Men of Arms, was adjudged by the ſaid Juſtices, That he ſhould as one Convict remain in t Cuſtody of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and that his Lands and Ten ments, Goods and Chattels ſhould be ſeiſed into the King's Hands; a they remained ſo ſeiſed, until the date of this Record, by which they we reſtor'd. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter the Sixteenth of Februar in the firſt Year of His Reign.

* i. e. Pleaded by his Attorny (for it is certain he was not there in perſon, as appears above.)

[2.] T. W. The Lands of the late Knights Templars are beſtowed on thoſe of S. Joh. of Jeruſalem Vid. * Totel's Collection, 16 Ed 2.

But to return to the reſt of the Affairs tranſacted in this Parliamen in which all the Mannors and Poſſeſſions of the late Knights Templa were by the Common Conſent of the Clergy and Laiety of the King dom granted to the Knights * of St. John of Jeruſalem, Hoſpitala for ever, as appears by the Statute at large, made for that purpoſe, u der this Title of Statutum de Terris Templariorum; the Chief Heads which you may find at the end of this King's Reign, where are ſom things worthy your obſervation: But I cannot forbear here taking no tice, that Dr. Brady hath omitted in his Hiſtory making any partic lar mention of this Parliament, or of the Proceedings in it, except wh he curſorily ſays concerning this Buſineſs of the Biſhop of Herefor and yet the * Dr. is certainly out in his Relation, ſuppoſing him to hav bee

* p. 147.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIV

een tryed in perſon by a Jury of his Country, and to be found guilty: whereas indeed he never was tryed by a Jury at all, for he was then abſent, but only a Bill of Indictment being found by the Grand Jury, the King ſeiſed upon his Temporalities, as appears by the Record above cited.

I ſhall now come to the moſt Remarkable Tranſactions with France, where we find a Treaty of Marriage to have been begun ſometime after the ending of the laſt Parliament, between Prince Edward the King's Eldeſt Son and the Daughter of Charles Count of Valois ~~Coſin~~ Uncle to the King of France; as appears by a Letter (extant on the * Clauſe Roll of this Year) directed to that Earl, who had lately preſſed him to a ſpeedy Concluſion of the Match; in Anſwer to which He lets him know, that it was neither expedient, nor decent, that this Treaty ſhould be concluded without the Advice, Conſent, and Confirmation of the Prelates and Great Men of His Kingdom aſſembled in Parliament; which He ſays, He reſolves to ſummon preſently after Michaelmas, and He will then take care to reſolve by the Common Council of the Kingdom, what ſhall be beſt for His Own and the Publick Intereſt; and to the like purpoſe He wrote to the King of France, about this Affair; as appears by another Letter to Him, entred upon the ſame Roll.

But whether the King ſhewed Himſelf thus cautious in coming to a Concluſion concerning this Match, out of any deference to the Judgment of His Parliament, which was now, ſince the cutting off the Earl of Lancaſter and his Party wholly at His Own diſpoſal, or (which is more likely) out of ſome jealouſie or diſguſt at the King of France, I ſhall not here determine; only take notice, that it was not long after that a Quarrel between King Edward and that Prince broke out to ſuch a heighth, that it was like to have produced a War between the Two Crowns, if our Edward had either Power or Courage enough to have undertaken it. I ſhall now proceed to ſhew you, that Charles, ſirnamed the Fair, having lately ſucceeded to His Brother King Philip deceaſed, preſently after His coming to the Crown, ſummon'd our Edward to come over into France and do His Homage for the Territories He poſſeſſed in that Kingdom; this the King was perſwaded to by His Favourites the Spencers was neither honourable nor ſafe for Him to perform; whereupon His Brother the Earl of Kent, and the Archbiſhop of Dublin were ſent over this Summer, to try to accommodate this Affair; and though they were honourably received by the King, yet could they not obtain any Favour from Him on behalf of their Maſter, for He looked upon their Excuſes for His not coming over, to amount to a flat Denial of what He required, as to the Homage: Of ſo little value are the neareſt Alliances between Princes conſidered, when they find they can have any advantage over each other. ✗

The Earl of Kent and ABp of Dublin are ſent over to the King of France to obtain a reſpit of the Homage, but without any effect.

But that which highly aggravated the Difference between the Two Kings was (as a [4] French Hiſtorian relates) that not long before, the Lord of Montpeſat had built a Fortreſs on certain Lands which he ſuppoſed to have belong'd to the Territories of the King of England in Gaſcoigne, but which the French aſſerted to belong to the King of France; this Buſineſs being diſcuſs'd in the Parliament of Paris, the Fort, with the Lands adjoining to it, were adjudged to belong to their King; who thereupon took poſſeſſion of the ſame accordingly; but the Lord of Montpeſat would not ſubmit to this Sentence, but calling the Seneſchal of

A new Quarrel ariſes between the two Kings, and on what occaſion, according to the French Hiſtorians.

✗ And besides this Ambaſsy [illegible] yt it further appears from our Records, [Pat: 17. Ed. 2. p. 2. m. 31 & 4 Coll. p. 38] that ye beginning of this year William Weston Cantor of Lincoln & Dr. of Laws was sent over to the Parliament of Paris, as an Envoy to treat with them upon certain affairs relating to ye Dutchy of Aquitain ~~to intercede for a Delay~~ [illegible]. But whether this message related to the above mention'd Homage I cannot determine, since ye Letters of Credence on the behalf of this Dr. Weston do not mention ye particular business he was sent about and was to propose to the sd Parliament. This Commission bears Date at Westminster 6th of March. But yt another message relating to ye Business of ye Homage was sent appears by ye next Record of this year [Rot. Vasc: 17. Ed. 2. m. 24 Coll. p. 40] dated but 5 Days after ye former, whereby Alexander Arch Bishop of Dublin, & Edmund Earl of Kent ye King's Brother, together with this Dr. Weston were ~~agreed~~ commission'd to agree upon a fit Time & Place for an Interview between ye Kings of France & England; to ye speedy performance of which Homage, Pope John also perswaded the King by a Breve to that Purpose, as also by another longer Bulle of ye same year, wherein he urges the King to perform it from divers prudent Considerations there mention'd. This bears Date at Avignon July 5th R. Coll. J. 6. p. 41. 63.

---

* 16 Ed. 2. m. 7. Dorſ.

[4] Contin. Chron. Guil. de Nangis.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIV.

of Bourdeaux to his Aſſiſtance, marched with ſome Forces to the place, razed the Fort, with all the other Buildings about it, to the Ground. This Relation is more likely than that of Walſingham, who tells it quite another way; That the King of France having built a certain Fort or Caſtle, with other ſumptuous Buildings, upon a piece of Ground belonging to the Engliſh Territory, the Inhabitants of that Village were ſo elated thereat, that they refuſed to ſubmit to the Common Laws of the Countrey, and affronted the Lord Ralph Baſſet, the King of England's Seneſchal of Bourdeaux; who being thereby provoked, gathered ſome Forces, and marching to that Town, ſlew many of the Inhabitants, and razed the Fort and Buildings to the Ground. But this much is certain, that upon this Action the Seneſchal being ſummon'd to Anſwer in the Court of the King of France, he refus'd to appear, alledging, That he had done therein no more than his Duty to his Prince; whereupon the French King being more incenſed, declar'd him and all his Accomplices Traytors, for their Contumacy; then the Seneſchal hearing of that Sentence, got into the Caſtle of Montpeſat, abovementiond, where (it being well fortified) he ſecured himſelf from the Incurſions of the French; upon which the King of France demanded of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, That Baſſet, with his Accomplices, might be deliver'd up, and puniſh'd according to the Laws of France; the Earl of Kent was willing, for Peace ſake, to conſent to the King's pleaſure in this Point; but the Archbiſhop of Dublin refus'd to agree to it, until he had conſulted the King his Maſter; wherefore Meſſengers being ſent into England about it, the King blamed the Eaſineſs of the Earl of Kent, and ſent word, That He would not ſacrifice ſo good a Servant to the Unjuſt Reſentments of His Enemies: When the King of France had received this Meſſage, He reſolved to uſe Force, and preſently ſent His Uncle the Lord Charles of Valois (a ſworn Enemy to the Engliſh) to ſeiſe upon the Dutchy of Aquitain and Earldom of Ponthieu, for the Diſobedience of King Edward, in not performing His Homage, as hath been already ſaid.

Upon [5.] theſe Severe Proceedings the Earl of Kent retir'd from the Court of France into Guienne, where many Noblemen lately come over from England met him, being ſent by the King with ſome Forces, to preſerve that Country (if it were poſſible) and reſiſt the Count of Valois; but it was to little purpoſe, for not having ſufficient Strength wherewith to make any conſiderable Reſiſtance, the Count ſeiſed all the Countrey as far as the Town of Reole, in which the Earl of Kent then was; who finding himſelf unable to defend it, delivered up the Place upon certain Conditions; whereupon a Truce was made between them for a few Months, till a Peace could be concluded between the Two Kings; which not being preſently done, the Count of Valois, not long after, took almoſt all the Engliſh Territories in France, except Bourdeaux, Saint Severe, and Bayonne. (2)

[1.] Not long after which there were other Envoys ſent over into France to procure a Peace, but it ſeems that Treaty came to nothing: In the mean while things grew worſe and worſe between the Two Crowns, inſomuch that all Commerce was forbid, and the Merchants Effects ſeiſed in both Kingdoms: The Queen alſo fared the worſe for it, for all Her French Servants were diſmiſſed; and (further fearing Her Partiality to Her Own Nation) all Her Mannors and Caſtles * were ſeized into

The Earl of Kent retires from the Court of France into Guienne, to ſecure that Province, but to no purpoſe, for he is overpowered by the Count of Valois. And almoſt all the Territories in France are ſeized upon.

[1.] Id. Ib. The Endeavours of a Peace being fruſtrated, Commerce is forbid, and the Queen's Revenue ſeis'd,

(1) X But before things came to this Extremity, the King hearing of ye King of France's Preparations to besiege it, appointed John Bp. of Norwich and several Noblemen his Commissioners to treat & agree wth the King about it [Rot: Pat. 18. Ed. 2. p. 1. m. 37. R–s Coll. p. 66] & to make up this Difference in an Amicable way: and in the mean while ye King had committed the Custody of the sd. Castle to John Stohore with Orders to deliver it to ye King of France or his Deputies on certain Conditions. yet this did not hinder the sd. King from taking it by Force & demolishing it.

(2) X I must here take notice yt ye Earl of Kent would not have thus tamely deld. up ye Town above mention'd, had it not been for ye Arch Bp. of Dublin his Fellow Comissioner, for which, & also for quarreling wth Hugh Spencer ye younger, and accusing him of High Treason, ye King now wrote a very sharp Letter to ye Pope agt. him, writing farther yt he stood excommunicated in ye Pope's Court for not observing some Decrees of it: and therefore ye K. desired ye Arch Bp. might be deprived of his Charge, & remov'd out of Ireland, as appears by ye Kings Letter to ye Pope dated ye 5 of W. 28 May & is entered on ye Rolls of this year. [Rot. Rom: m. 1. vid. R–s Coll. p. 130] And at ye same time also ye King wrote another Letter to ye Pope agt Adam Bp. of Hereford for assisting ye Kings Enemies in the late Rebellion & praying his Deprivation from his Bishoprick; as appears by a second Letter immediately following on ye same Roll. But I do not find yt ye Pope ever gratify'd ye King in either of his Requests, for he was now grown contemptible at ye Court of Rome for his weak, & imprudent management of his Affairs.

*1 In the Counties of Cornwal, Devonshire and Dorset, vid. R–s Coll. p. 84.

cannot here omit, that in the begining of this year, the King to strengthen his Interest a-inst France wrote a Letter to the Ld. John Infant of Castile [Rot: Claus: 18. Ed. 2. m. 11. d. R-'s Coll. p. 120. and Tutor to his nephew King Alphonson then a minor that he might Marry her Daughter to King Edward, & should assist him with 1000 Horse, & 10000 Foot against ever should make War upon him: This Letter bears Date Jan: 18. this year. And tho' it ars by the Patent Rolls (Pat 18. Ed. 2. m. 22.] of this year that Ambassadors were sent to treat about it, it came to nothing by Reason that upon ye Peace wch was to be suddenly made with France King Edward had no need of his Assistance, or else both the Princes being then very young the Treaty broke off before ye Kings Deposition. Also, as appears by ye Close Rolls, 18. Ed. 2. m. 12 d. R-'s Coll. p. 128. about ye same Time he enter'd into another Treaty with James, King of Arragon for a marriage between Prince Edward, and ye King's Daughter: & ambassadors were also sent to treat and conclude with ye King about it: but this likewise took no Effect for the Reason above mention'd and because Prince Edward not long after engag'd his affections in another Place without his Father's Consent.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXIV.

to the King's Hand, and She was forced to ſubſiſt upon a bare Penſion or Allowance, and that ill pay'd too. It is therefore very likely, that what De la More reports may be true, that the Biſhop of Hereford having now obtain'd his Liberty, yet his Temporalities ſtill remaining in the King's Hands, he took this Opportunity by all means to revive the Hatred of the Nobility againſt the Deſpenſers, which was before laid aſleep; and alſo incenſed the Queen againſt them, as having adviſed the King to reduce Her Family, and retrench Her extravagant Expences; which cauſed Her Hatred not only againſt the Spencers, but alſo begot an Animoſity toward the King Her Huſband: The like was alſo done by Henry Biſhop of Lincoln, whoſe Temporalities had been ſeiſed two Years before. Theſe two Biſhops had divers Conferences with Her concerning the Iniquity of the Times, aggravating the Sadneſs of Her Condition; that She being the ſole Daughter of France, ſhould be forced like a mean Waiting-woman, to depend upon the Deſpenſers for Her Maintenance; and they both agreed in this Advice, that Her beſt way was to lay hold on the firſt Opportunity of making a Viſit to Her Brother the King of France, and Her Uncle Count Charles de Valois, and to beg their Advice and Aſſiſtance againſt the Deſpenſers; which if She obtain'd, all things might ſucceed according to Her Deſire. And indeed it was a very Impolitick Action of theſe Favourites, that when they had thus diſobliged the Queen, a Lady of a very high Spirit, they would ever permit Her to go over into France; as you will find they did the Year following, to the Ruin of themſelves, and the King their Maſter.

The Biſhop of Hereford takes this Opportunity to incenſe the Queen and Nobility againſt the Spencers.

The Biſhop of Lincoln does the ſame, and aggravates the Sadneſs of her Condition.

I have no more to relate under this, only that tho' the Truce with Scotland was agreed upon the laſt Year, yet was it not abſolutely concluded until now: [2.] when * in the Beginning of this Summer, Adomer de Valence Earl of Pembroke, Hugh Deſpenſer the Younger, Robert Baldock Archdeacon of Middleſex, and Chanceller, were with ſome other Perſons of Note, ſent from the King to Newcaſtle upon Tyne, to treat with William Biſhop of St. Andrews, Thomas Randolph Earl of Murrey, and ſome other Perſons of Quality, Commiſſioners for the King of Scots, concerning a final Peace. But when they could not bring that to bear, they ended their Negotiation in a Truce of Thirteen Years, to commence from the Tenth of June; which was proclaim'd the day following, and bears date at Thorp, not far from York.

[2.] Chron. Lan.
* Stow's Chron.
A Truce now made with Scotland, and the Commiſſioners who were employ'd in it.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXV.

After [3.] the Concluſion of this Truce with Scotland, the King kept a Noble Chriſtmas at Nottingham; about which time there came the Archbiſhop of Vienne, and the Biſhop of Aurange, as Legates from the Pope, to mediate a Peace between the Kings of England and France, tho' without any effect: And ſo having impos'd a great Tax or Contribution upon the Clergy, to diſcharge the Expences of their Journey, they return'd back without doing the Buſineſs for which they came. * see above

[3.] T. W.
Certain Legates arrive from Rome to mediate a Peace between England and France, tho' without any Effect.

On [4.] the Octaves of St. Hillary enſuing, the King held a Parliament at Weſtminſter; where they treated concerning the Preſervation of the Dutchy of Aquitain, the greateſt part of which was now taken away by the French: And there it was reſolved, that the Biſhops of Winchester and Norwich, together with the Earl of Richmond, and ~~Will. de Ayremine Chanon of Norwich~~, ſhould be ſent over Ambaſſadors Ld. Henry de Beaumon (V. R-'s Col. p. 106. 107

[4.] Id. ib.
A Parliament ſummoned to conſider how to recover the Dutchy of Aquitain; for

to

For it appears by 3 several commissions still extant on the Patent Rolls of this year, it was not this Man but the Ld. Henry Beaumont, who was then appointed the third on to treat & conclude all Differences with Charles King of France.

(x) Being to this Effect (as appears from ye original in French printed in Mr. R—'s Coll. vol. V. p x These articles were concluded by ye Bishop of Viviers with ye Constable or Chancellour of Fra Commissioners therein nam'd on that King's behalf, & by the Bp. of Norwich, John Earl of Bret Richmond, & Will: de Ayremine Chanon of York on the behalf of ye King of England, by t sion of Queen Isabel, and the Pope's Nuncio's therein nam'd.

1. That ye Lands or Territories which ye sd. King of England holds in the Dutchy of Guien King of France may and shall take into his own Hands, and shall sette an able Seneschal who shall govern there in his Name, & shall there establish Judges, Bailiffs, and other inferiour Officers, who shall govern ye sd. Country according as it was accustom'd to be govern'd. And to this End the Men at Arms, who are in Pay of ye King of England shall retire from Bayonne, and the Country thereabouts so soon as possibly they can. And ye Men at Arms of ye King of France shall do the same, only the Castles, & strong Houses out of Towns both of ye one part & ye other shall be mann'd and Garison'd according to the Seneschal with ye Advice & Counsel of the Chastelans, & other Wardens of the sd. Castles & strong Places.

2. That this being done, ye King of England shall give no Disturbance nor hinderance to it neither by himself nor his Officers.

3. And since it is hoped that all those things may be done & accomplished before ye Feast of our Lady's Assumption next ensuing, it is also agreed by ye sd. Procurators of both Kings, yt if the K. of England will come to Beauvais, ye King of France shall meet him there, & if ye King of England shall there offer to do his Homage, ye King of France shall receive it with a Protestation that it shall no ways prejudice his Right to what he already possess'd in ye sd. Country. But if either King shall be hindered by Sickness, or any other weighty Occasion, so as to prevent the sd. Journey & meeting, timely Notice shall be given of it, & another Time appointed for it at ye Place abovementioned. And it is further agreed yt upon the Performance of ye sd. Homage in manner abovesayd, that ye Territories which ye King of France possesses at present in the sd. Dutchy, he shall keep them till he is satisfyed for all the Expences and Costs he has been at by Reason of the hinderance and Trouble the King of England and his Subjects have given the King of France and his Subjects in reducing it to his Allegiance.

4. But &c. vid. Paper.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXV.

Which Ambaſſadors are appointed to go over to treat about it.

* Vid. Libnitz Cod. Diplomat. p. 108, 109.

to King Charles. But theſe arriving in France, after many Allegations and Treaties on both ſides, came not to any final Agreement, more than the Prolongation of the preſent Truce from Fifteen days after Pentecoſt to One Month after the Feaſt of the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt. This being concluded, the Biſhop of Wincheſter return'd into England (leaving his Collegues behind him) to give the King an Account of what they had done, and to receive his further Directions: When after a long Debate, tho' the King at firſt intended to paſs the Sea Himſelf, yet the two Deſpenſers His Favourites, either being afraid to be left behind leſt the Nobility and People ſhould riſe up againſt them, or if they went over with the King that they ſhould fall into the Hands of their Enemies the French, oppos'd His going over; and at laſt they agreed to the Queen's Offer, of going over Her Self to Her Brother the French King, and there mediate a Peace between Him and Her Huſband; or, as De la More relates, She obtain'd this of the King by Her Flatteries: But that is not at all likely, for She was then out of Favour, Her French Servants diſmiſſed, and Her Revenues ſeiſed: And therefore Walſingham's Relation is much more probable; That thoſe that were neareſt about the King firſt propoſed the Queen's going over with a moderate Retinue, as the only way to prevail upon Her Brother of France to abate his Rigour towards Her Husband x ~~and~~ She readily undertook this Journey, as being that which She had long ſecretly deſired: And ſo [5.] She paſſed over to Calais in the Beginning of July, attended but by One Baron and Four Knights. So ſoon as She arrived, She was kindly received by the King Her Brother, who at Her Interceſſion came to this Agreement on the behalf of Her Huſband, That if King Edward would make over His Right in the Dutchy of Aquitain, and Earldom of Ponthieu to his Son Edward, upon his doing Homage to Him, He would give him Seiſin of both. Theſe things being on both ſides agreed on, the King of France iſſued his Letters of Safe-Conduct for the Prince; and then the King his Father made Him a Grant of thoſe Lands, to Him and His Heirs, Kings of England; adding withal, that if the Son ſhould dye, living the Father, they ſhould return to Himſelf, with ſome other Conditions, by which it ſhould not be lawful for the King of France to marry Him, nor provide a Guardian for Him againſt His Will. This Agreement was confirm'd by x ~~a~~ Charters x at the Abbey of Langdon near Dover with the Advice of the Prelates and other Noblemen at ~~Dover~~, the day after the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, in the Nine ~~Eigh~~teenth Year of the King; and on Thurſday following, being then at Dover Edward the Son, attended by Walter Biſhop of Exeter, and ſeveral Noblemen, went on Shipboard, and being arrived at Paris, not long after, viz. about the End of September, did Homage to his Uncle of France at Bois de Vincennes, which was performed under Proteſtations made on both ſides in the preſence of divers of the Nobility of both Kingdoms. And that whole Affair was now compleated, for which the Queen was ſent into France, and the young Prince nobly preſented by His Uncle King Charles; yet did not the Queen His Mother think fit to return into England, for Reaſons that you will hear of ~~by and by~~ hereafter.

[5.] Id. ib. The Queen is ſent by Her Husband to intercede with Her Brother of France, and obtains favourable Terms.

Which are alſo agreed to by King Edward; whereupon the Pr. His Son goes over into France.

But [5] the King being Impatient, and Jealous at Her abſence, preſently after Michaelmaſs wrote to the Queen, that She ſhould ſpeedily return, and bring over Her Son with Her into England. She wrote back, that the King of France Her Brother, out of His great Affect [5.] De la Moor. Upon the Qu's delaying to return into England, the King writes to Her to haſten Her.

of

Insert this p. 308.

4. But if the King of England will permit ye King of France to keep ye sd Territories he now possesses, the sd Commissioners promise in his name, that the King of England shall not be oblig'd to render any thing for the sd Costs and Expences: and upon the Proclamation of the Peace all People taken Prisoners on either side in France shall be set at Liberty.

l Rot. Al- / m 19. Ed / m. 3. R / l: p 157. This Treaty was to be ratifyed by the Letters Patents of both Kings under their Great Seals before the Feast of St. John Baptist next ensuing at furthest, which was done accordingly.

This is the Effect of this Peace which ye Queen procur'd for ye King her husband, which however mean and dishonourable it appears, he was forced to accept of it, and take it as a Favour; and I find by divers other Records, that the King either fully resolv'd, or seem'd to resolve to go over into France, & do his Homage at the Time appointed;

Pat. 18. / p. 1. m and he gave Letters of Protection to several Gentlemen and Clergymen his Servants and Chaplains, who were to have gone over with him. But whilst the whole Kingdom was in Expectation of this voyage and yt ye King was already on his way to the Sea side, he was either taken very ill, or pretended to be so; and thereupon sent over the Bp. of Winchester, & Mr. John de Bruton Chanon of Exeter lem: / 2. m. 1. with a Letter to ye King of France to excuse his not coming over at the Day appointed, as also to be his special Procurators and Envoys to swear on his behalf to the Truth of the sd Excuse, if there shd be occasion, ratifying whatever they should act in Relation to the Premisses. This bears Date at Langdon near Dover 24 Augst. The Effect of this Ambassy was, that since he could not now come over in Person, that if King Edward &c.

l. 38. For a Charter read, by 2 several Charters dated at Dover, one whereby 19. Ed. 2. / m. 25. / p. 163. / 65. King Edward confers the Earldoms of Ponthieu, & Monstreuil upon his Son the Prince, and the other whereby he grants him ye whole Dutchy of Aquitain to him & his Heirs and Successors Kings of England, both made upon the Princes going into France.

Yet I do not find any thing inserted in either of the sd Charters, nor yet in yt of ye King of France, by which he agrees to receive the Homage from his Nephew Prince Edward; only the sd King was prohibited from marrying ye sd Prince without ye King his Father's Consent: so yt if there were any such Condition, it was contain'd in some private articles that are not now to be found upon Record.

38. Instead of at Dover, read, at the Abbey of Langdon near Dover.

l. 44. After both Kingdoms, add, Note, yet for all this great Condescention on King Edward's side to ye French King's Demands, and his great Professions of Kindness to his Nephew the Prince, yet the King still refus'd to deliver all the Territories, and particularly that of Agen which belong'd to the Dutchy of Aquitain: as appears by King

m. 19. Edward's Letter to the Pope's Nuncio in France dated at Sheen ye 25 of October, wherein he complains of that King's hard dealing with him, & the Prince his son.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXV.

on, deſired their Company a little longer; ſo She ſent back the greateſt Part of both their Families, and ſpent the Reſidue of the Year in proſecuting Her Deſigns. Walſingham relates this Tranſaction ſomewhat otherwiſe: As that there were various Reports concerning the Queen's delaying to come over; ſome imputing it to Her too great Familiarity with the Lord Roger Mortimer, without whom and the other Baniſhed Noblemen, She had no mind to return: Whilſt others alledged it was, Her Hatred of the two Deſpenſers, the younger of whom had cauſed Her Family to be diſmiſſed; and that the latter of theſe proved the true Reaſon, the Event ſufficiently declared. Yet as to Her Familiarity with the Lord Mortimer, there might be nothing Criminal in it, [2] he being at that time above Forty Years of Age, and having Sons and Daughters at Men's and Women's Eſtate; tho' it cannot be denied, that the Queen both then and afterwards very much loſt Her Reputation, by reaſon of Her too great Intimacy with that Nobleman; and therefore it is confidently related by De la Moor, that She was ſo bound up in Mortimer's Embraces, that ſhe would not return: But this is more certain, that the Biſhop of Exeter, the King's Treaſurer, having been diſmiſſed from being of Her Secret Council, left Her, and returning into England, gave the King a very bad account of Her Proceedings. And this made Him the more impatient of Her Stay, as appears by His Letters on * Record; for He wrote to Her ſeveral times this Winter to return home; expreſſing great Kindneſs to Her, and Grief of Mind for Her Abſence. In anſwer to which, She made many feigned Excuſes in Her Letters for Her not coming; but the Chief was, as I ſaid before, the Danger and Fear She was in of Hugh le Deſpenſer the Younger; which Letters She ſent to Him by the Biſhop of Wincheſter. In return whereunto, the King wrote back, that He much won'der'd at it; ſeeing and obſerving in His preſence the kind Deportment of Her to the Lord Hugh Deſpenſer, and of him to Her; and eſpecially at Her Departure, declaring a perfect Amity; and ſince by Her Letters of a late Date, which He had ſhewn unto him, atteſting the ſame: And therefore the Homage being now done to his Brother of France, and that they were in ſo fair a Way of Reconciliation to each other; He commanded and charged Her as much as poſſible, that all feigned Excuſes laid aſide, She ſhould come home to Him with all ſpeed; for that the Biſhop had told him, that His Brother the King of France, in his preſence, had ſaid to Her, that according to the Tenor of the Safe Conduct, She ſhould not be diſturb'd, nor ſtayed from coming over to Him, as to Her Lord, and as his Wife. And then further writes to Her, that when She came, Her Expences and Way of Living ſhould be ſuch, as ſhould be neither to His or Her Diſhonour. He alſo willed and commanded Her to ſuffer His Dear Son Edward to come to Him, as He had commanded Him. And whereas at this time, Walter Biſhop of Exeter was with Her, and had been certainly inform'd, that ſome of his Enemies and baniſhed Subjects waited to deſtroy Him, if they had an Opportunity, to avoid ſuch Dangers, and for other great Buſineſs he had with Him, He commanded him upon his Faith and Allegiance to return to Him with all ſpeed; leaving all other things in as much Security, as he could; and therefore She was to excuſe his ſudden coming away, it being for no other Cauſe. Dated at Weſtminſter the Firſt Day of December.

The Queen's Reputation vindicated, as to Her Familiarity with the Lord Mortimer.

The Biſhop of Exeter returns into England, and gives the King a bad account of Her.

Who thereupon writes again the more earneſtly to return home; with Her Anſwer to His Letters, and His Reply to Hers.

He commands the Queen to ſend over the Prince His Son to Him.

[2.] Vid. Dugdale's Baronage, 1 Part, p. 144.

* Clauſ. 19 Ed. 2. M. 2. Dors.

* And

Anno Dom., MCCCXXV.

* Ib.
The King of France writes to K. Edward to excuſe His Siſter's coming to Him for fear of the Spencers; to which He returns an Anſwer, deſiring Him to ſend over His Wife and Son.
* Ib.

* At the ſame time the King of France by the Biſhop of Wincheſter wrote to the King an Expreſs to let Him know, that He had been inform'd by perſons of good Credit, That the Queen durſt not come to Him for fear of Her Life, by reaſon of Hugh le Deſpenſer; to which the King made the ſame Anſwer He had done to the Queen before, and averred with an Oath, That if the ſaid Hugh, or any Other Perſon living in His Kingdom, or in His Power, ſhould offer any ill to Her, and He ſhould know it, He would make them ſevere Examples to all Others; and beſeeched Him, not to believe thoſe that inform'd Him otherwiſe, for that He had, and ought to have greater Reaſons to know and underſtand this Matter, than any Other; and therefore deſired Him to prevail with His Siſter to come to Him as ſoon as ſhe could, for the honour of Themſelves and of Her, being much grieved for want of her Company: He * alſo earneſtly prayed Him to diſpatch away His Son Edward with all ſpeed, and deliver up to him the Dutchy of Aquitain (which He had granted out of His Affection to him), it being His Intention he ſhould return ſo ſoon as he had done his Homage; and then excuſes the Biſhop of Exeter's ſudden leaving France, and returning into England, in the ſame manner as He had done in the Letter to His Queen. This is dated at the ſame time and place with the former.

* Ib.
The King writes alſo to the French B^ps^ and Noblemen to endeavour His Wive's Return.
* Comp. Hiſt. 2d Vol. p. 151.

* The King ſent Letters of much the ſame purport to the Archbiſhop of Rheimes, the Duke of Burgundy, and the reſt of the Peers of France, both Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal, as likewiſe to ſeveral Other French Biſhops and Great Lords His Friends and Relations, who were not Peers, whoſe Names 'twere needleſs to repeat, ſince * Dr. Brad hath done it already, to whom I refer the Curious Reader, if he deſires further to be ſatisfied: Beſides theſe Letters, the King alſo wrote to His Son the Duke of Aquitain, not long after, That though he was very young, yet he might remember what He commanded and charged him at his Departure from Him at Dover, viz. That when the King of France had received His Homage, he ſhould take his Leave of Him, and return to Him, with his moſt Dear Companion, the Queen his Mother, if She could come ſo ſoon; but if not, that he ſhould come without Her, and ſhould not omit it, neither for his Mother, nor any other perſon, upon His Bleſſing. Dated at Weſtminſter, the Second Day of December.

The King again preſſes the Prince to return either with or without his Mother.

* Ib.
The Prince's Anſwer to the King his Father, together with His Reply to it.

We find alſo on the ſame Roll, that the Prince had returned an Anſwer to the King his Father's Letter; wherein he acknowledges he did remember what his Father had charged him at Dover, and eſpecially not to marry without His Conſent, and what He ſaid there to him before his Departure; and farther promiſed always to perform His Commands and Pleaſure to his Power: Whereupon the King in His Second Letter, dated in March following, ſtrictly charges him again, 'We
'to remember theſe Things, and in no caſe to marry, or ſuffer himſelf
'to be married without His Conſent, nor before he ſhould come to Him
'nor do any thing that might turn to his damage or trouble of Mind.
And as to what His Son had ſaid in his laſt Anſwer, That he could n come over ſo ſoon as He commanded him, by reaſon of his Mother, nor lea Her, being bound by Nature to perform his Duty to Her; to this the King rejoin'd in theſe Words; Good Son, You know how much I ſhould have l ved and cheriſhed Her, if She had carried Her Self towards Us as S ought to have done, and as a Wife ſhould do toward Her Husband an Wherein He inveighs highly againſt the Queen.

Lor

Anno Dom. MCCCXXV

Lord: But whereas She feigned an Occaſion to withdraw from Us, by reaſon of Our Dear Nephew, and Faithful Hugh le Deſpenſer, who hath always loyally ſerved Us, You and all the World may ſee, that openly, and deſignedly, againſt Her Duty, and againſt the Eſtate of Our Crown, (which She is bound to maintain) She hath taken to Her, and retains ſtill in Her Company and Council, Mortimer Our Traytor and mortal Enemy, proved attainted, and in full Parliament ſo judged; and keeps him company every where in Houſe and Abroad, in deſpight of Us and Our Crown, and the Laws of the Realm, whom at another time your Uncle baniſhed His Kingdom at Our Requeſt, as Our Enemy; and yet She doth worſe (if worſe can be) in bringing you into his Company, and making him your Counſellor, and making you adhere and ſtick to him openly and notoriouſly in the face of the World, to the greateſt Diſhonour of Us and you, and in prejudice of Our Crown, and the Laws and the Uſages of the Laws of England; which above all things you are bound to preſerve and maintain: And therefore He commands and charges him upon his Faith, Amity, and Ligeance, and his own Bleſſing, that he ſhould come to Him with what Speed he could, notwithſtanding the foreſaid Excuſes, or any other; His Mother having wrote, that if He would return, ſhe would not hinder Him; and He could not underſtand, His Uncle ſhould do it againſt the Tenor of His Safe-Conduct. Given at Litchfield the Eighteenth of March.

*Ibid

The King again writes to the King of France; wherein He anſwers a Letter that he had writ to Him not long before.

* At the ſame time King Edward again wrote to His Brother of France, that He had conſidered His Letters; wherein He ſignified to Him, that He had ſeriouſly diſcourſed His Siſter about the Reaſons and Things to which He had anſwered; and that She had told Him, She deſired only to be with Him Her Husband, and in His Company, as a Good Wife ought to be with Her Lord; and that the Amity between Her and His Nephew Hugh le Deſpenſer, was only feigned; yet it was convenient to keep it up to gain time, and avoid worſe things. Now to diſprove what She had ſaid to Her Brother of France; He reminded Him of what great Amity and Kindneſs She often pretended to Hugh le Deſpenſer, ſince Her being there; and then repeats the Intimacy between Mortimer and Her, and how She was wholly adviſed and directed by him, and did whatever he ordered, in the ſame Words and Manner as in the laſt Letter to His Son; and then deſires Him to reſtore the Dutchy of Aquitain, &c. to Him without having regard to the wilful Humour of a Woman; and ſend Him His Pleaſure by the Bearer. This is dated at Litchfield the Eighteenth of March, on the ſame Day as before.

Rot. Rom. 19. Ed. 2. M. 3.

The Purport of the King's Letter to the Pope about the ſame Affair.

In April, the King wrote to the Pope, and ſent him a Tranſcript of whatever had paſſed between Himſelf, the King of France, and His Siſter the Queen, and His Son, by way of Narrative; with the Copies of the Letters He wrote Them, and His Anſwer to what was reported of Him in France; heartily beſeeching His Holineſs to read and conſider them, and apply ſuch Remedy for the removing the Matter of Scandal and Diſſention, and the Dangers that might proceed from thence, as he ſhould think fit; promiſing wholly to be directed by his Advice. Given at Kenelworth the Fifteenth day of April. Theſe Letters, tho' they were written in the Beginning of the next Year, yet I have put together under this; ſince they are all enter'd upon one and the ſame Roll in the Tower, and belong to this preſent Affair, and give a great Light to it.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

[3.] T. W.

The King and Court are very Melancholy for fear the Queen and Baniſhed Noblemen ſhould come over without His Conſent.

But it is time to look back to the Beginning of this Year; when w ſhall find [3.] King Edward kept His Chriſtmas at St. Edmondsbury, bu with no great Splendor; the King and Court being very Melancholy and much diſturbed for fear of the Queen's Return, and of thoſe Ba niſhed Noblemen that were with Her; leſt they ſhould come over b the Aſſiſtance of France, with Forces, without the King's Conſent Neither can I find, how the King ſpent His time before the Queen' Coming over; only that in General, He made what Preparations H could to prevent it,× tho' it were all in vain; as will appear by the E vent. For notwithſtanding all theſe Letters and Mediations above-re cited, yet would She not truſt Her Self any more in England, until Sh could come over with Forces ſufficient to be revenged of the Deſpen ſers, whom She looked upon as Her Enemies; and [4.] who (as wa then reported) had procured the King to conſent to make away th Queen His Wife, and Prince Edward His Son; and that the Lord Joh of Bretaigne being then near Her Perſon, was to be the Inſtrument o it: Which being diſcover'd, and that She alſo perceived the Noble men of France to have been corrupted by large Preſents from Englan to Her Prejudice, and that there was no Safety to be expected for He in the French Territories, She went away privately with Her Son an their ſmall Retinue, to the Earl of Haynault, by whom they wer Honourably received.

× (as particularly by his commission to his Admiral to search all Persons passing into ye Realm to see whether they brought any Letters yt might prove prejudicial, or suspected to be so to ye King & his faithful subjects: and to seize all such with whomsoever Letters shall be found, as appears by the King's writts to all Baillifs, & other his subjects. Pat. 19. E. 2. p. 1. m. 12. vid. Rls coll. p. 183.

[4.] T. W.

The Queen thinking Her Self and Son to be in danger in France, retires privately to the E. of Haynault.

At what time Queen Iſabel left the Court of France, I cannot poſ tively determine, ſince neither Froiſart nor any other Author hath gi ven us ſo much as the Month: But it appears by the foregoing Letter from the King Her Husband, that She was at the Court of France i March, and it is likely, She left it in April or May following. And the Time of Her going is uncertain, ſo is likewiſe the Manner and Oc caſion of Her quitting France, variouſly reported by the French Hiſto rians. For ſome of them relate, that Her Brother King Charles, eithe was not willing to join with the Queen of England in a ne Quarrel, or elſe diſapproving Her Conduct, would not permit He to ſtay longer in His Dominions; whereas ours relate, that She ſto from thence for fear of being deliver'd up to Her Enemies.

This is alſo confirm'd by * Froyſart the Flemiſh Hiſtorian, wh ſays, he wrote his Chronicle from the Memoirs of Sir John Lele Cha non of St. Lambart's in Leige, one much in favour and very intimat with the Lord John of Haynault, the Earl's Brother; and thus relate this Tranſaction; That the Barons of England not being able any lon ger to endure the too great Power and Favour which the Deſpenſers ha with King Edward, met privately, and reſolved for the future to agre better together; they thereupon ſent over privately to the Queen, (be ing then at Paris) letting Her underſtand, that if ſhe could come int England with a Thouſand Men at Arms, and bring Her Son and He with Her, they would all come over to Her and Her Son Edward. Sh ſhewed theſe Letters to the King of France; who promiſed ſuch Aſſ ſtance, as well as to furniſh Her with Money. But as She was providin for Her Voyage, Hugh le Deſpenſer having notice of it, contrived wit Preſents to buy off the French King; and ſent ſecret Meſſengers wit Plenty of Gold, Silver, and Jewels, into France, and eſpecially to th King and His Council; inſomuch as He forbad under Pain of Baniſh ment, that any of His Subjects ſhould aſſiſt the Queen to go into Eng land by Force. ^ which is very probable; for some time before we find by certain Letters [Rot. Vasc. 19. Ed. 2. m. 2.] directed to the Major and Com munity of the City of Bayonne, that the King was so far incensed against ye King of France for detaining his wife and Son, that he ordered the Persons to whom this directed to make war upon the Subjects of the French King by Sea and Land.

* Vol. 1. c. 8.

The Barons of England not being able to endure the Inſolence of the Spencers, ſend privately to the Queen to come over with ſome Forces.

The King of France being bought off with large Preſents from England, quits His Siſter's Intereſt.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI

But if the Chronicle of Lanercoſt may be credited, the Deſpencers were not contented with this, but alſo ſent privately a certain Fryar Minor called Thomas Dunheved, with another Companion of his, who Proſecuted a Divorce at Rome between the King and Her, though the Cauſe is not mention'd; but this is more certain which * Froiſart relates, That Hugh le Deſpencer the Son, out of his Malice to the Queen, and to get Her into his Power, cauſed the King to deſire the Pope that he would write to France, to ſend the King his Wife again into England, for He would acquit himſelf to God and the World, that it was not his fault that She thus kept from Him; and He would do nothing to Her, but expreſs all that Love and Conjugal Fidelity as was due to Her.

The Deſpencers ſend a Frayr to Rome to Proſecute a Divorce between the King and Queen.

* Ib. c. 8.

* Alſo that He ſent large Preſents of Gold and Silver to divers Cardinals and Prelates, who He thought had moſt Influence over the Pope; and they ſo prevailed upon him by their Subtle Perſuaſions, as to engage him to write to the King of France, that on pain of Excommunication, he ſhould ſend back His Siſter Iſabell into England, to the King Her Husband. Theſe Letters were brought to the King of France by the Biſhop of Xantes; and when he had read them, they were ſhewed to the Queen His Siſter; whereupon He commanded Her ſpeedily to depart His Kingdom, or otherwiſe He would make Her do it with Shame.

* Ib.

The King by his Preſents to Cardinals prevails upon the Pope to write to the King of France to ſend back the Queen.

And that by this means all the Barons of France were withdrawn from the Queen, except Robert de Artois Her Dear Couſin, who privately aſſiſted and encouraged Her by his Counſels; and gave Her Secret Intelligence, That Her Brother would deliver up both Her and Her Son, together with the Earl of Kent, King Edward's Brother, and Sir Roger Mortimer, to the King and Hugh le Deſpencer; and therefore Adviſed Her to retire to William Earl of Haynault. This Earl received Her with great Joy at Valenciennes, and brought his Four Daughters, viz. Margaret, Philippe, Jane, and Iſabel, into Her and Her Son's Preſence. The Prince liked Phillippe beſt, and moſt frequented Her Converſation during his Abode there, which was till toward the latter end of this Year.

The Earl of Artois privately aſſiſts Her, and adviſes Her to retire to the Earl of Haynalt; which She did.

And the Lord John of Haynault had ſo cordially eſpous'd Queen Iſabel's Intereſt, that he not only raiſed Three Hundred Horſe for Her Service, but alſo engaged the Earl his Brother to declare for Her, on condition of a Marriage to be Conſummated between his Second Daughter Philippe and Prince Edward, then not Fourteen Years of Age; in conſideration of which, he was to furniſh the Queen with Two thouſand ſeven hundred Men at Arms, and a ſufficient Number of Veſſels to Tranſport them: Theſe preparations were making all this Summer, yet could not be got ready for Action untill the beginning of Autumn.

The Lord John of Haynault eſpouſes the Queen's Intereſt, and raiſes Men for Her Service; and engages his Brother to declare for Her on certain Conditions.

In the mean while we ſhall have leiſure to look back into England; Where the firſt publick thing I find the King to have perform'd in order to prevent this formidable Invaſion, was that upon the News of the great Preparations that were making againſt Him, He Iſſued out a Proclamation to this Effect :*

The King Iſſue out a Proclamation againſt the Queen and Roger Mortimer, commanding all men to be ready to reſiſt them at their Landing.

* Rot. Claus. 19. Ed. 2. m. 4. dors. vide Ry. W. vol. p. 188. 189.

The King to the Sheriff of Northampton, Greeting, &c. And then proceeds to recite, 'That ſince lately by the Aſſent and Requeſt of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men of the Kingdom, He had ſent the Queen into France, to compoſe certain Differences with ‘ the King Her Brother, concerning the Dutchy of Guyenne; and th afterwards when He (the King) was ready to go beyond Sea, He had upon divers Meſſages from the Pope and King of France, with the Aſſent of the Earls, Barons, &c. given His Son Prince Edward the ſaid Dutchy, who was thereupon gone over, and had done his Homage for it accordingly: And that notwithſtanding He the King had commanded the Queen and His ſaid Son to return home, yet neither would She come Her Self, nor ſuffer Her Son to return, but, as He had been inform'd by His Loyal Subjects that came from thence, That by the Evil Counſel of Roger Mortimer, His notorious Enemy and Rebel, and Others His Enemies and Rebels in thoſe Parts, with whom She (the Queen) had made Alliance; as alſo with certain People of thoſe Parts, and other Strangers, who were to come over by force with His Son Edward into England, to hurt and deſtroy the Good People of the Land, and to bring it into Danger and Subject on of the ſaid Aliens and Rebels, to His diſhonour, prejudice, peril, and diſinheritance of Himſelf, and His Crown, and the great damage and deſtruction of His People aforeſaid.

* Ib.

‘* Wherefore He, being willing to avoid the ſaid Perils, &c. firmly commands and enjoins the ſaid Sheriffs, That in all Places in his Bailywick he ſhould cauſe to be openly proclaimed and commanded on His behalf, That all Earls, Barons, Knights, and other Men of Arms, and Hobbelours, and other People on Foot ſhould be ready and equip'd to go with Force and Arms againſt ſuch Strangers and Enemies of Him and His Kingdom, as ſhould invade the Land, and arreſt and deſtroy them, whenever they ſhould hear or know of their Arrival; yet if the ſaid Queen and His Son ſhould come over in thoſe Ships which He would order for Them and Their Retinue, in Good and Obedient manner, according to His Will and Commandment, that then they ſhould receive them honourably and courteouſly, according to their High Dignity; but if they ſhould come in other Veſſels, and in a diſobedient manner, and againſt His Will, then He commands all His ſaid Subjects to treat the ſaid Aliens that ſhould come with them, and all ſuch as were of their Company, as Enemies to Himſelf and the Kingdom; the Perſons of His ſaid Queen and Son to be only ſaved and excepted; and concludes, That He will hold theſe who ſhall be ready, and uſe their endeavour to do theſe Things, as His Good and Loyal Subjects; but thoſe that ſhall be negligent, and will not do their Duty, He will hold as His Enemies, and puniſh them as ſuch. Given at Gaywood the Eighth of February.

* Ib.
He ſends the like Writs to the Admirals of the North and South Seas, &c.

* In the like manner it was written to all the Sheriffs of England, as alſo to both the Admirals of the North as well as South of the Thames; as alſo to Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, Conſtable of Dover, and to the Wardens of the Cinque-Ports: Theſe laſt bear date at Leiceſter, the Sixth day of March enſuing.

[1.] Froiſ. Lib. 1. cap. 9. T. W.

The Queen and Prince attended by the Earl of Kent the King's Brother, and other Noblemen land near Harwich with a ſmall Force.

All things being now ready for the Queen's and Prince Her Son's Embarking for England, [1.] She took Ship at Dort, attended by Edmund Earl of Kent, the King's Brother, who had never been in England ſince his late Ambaſſy into France; for being diſcontented at the Greatneſs of the Diſpenſers, he had wholly joined with the Queen his Siſter-in-Law; but the Chief Conducter of this Expedition was the Lord Roger Mortimer, though there join'd with him many other Engliſh Noblemen, blemen, who had been either baniſhed, or elſe had voluntarily fled their Countrey; yet I think they need not be particularly named, for the Reader, if he pleaſes, may ſee them in Henry de Knyghton's Chronicle; the Army was but ſmall, not amounting to Three thouſand Men, being commanded by the Lord John of Haynault, and ſome other Noblemen of that Countrey. The Queen with this ſmall Fleet and Army, after a long and dangerous Paſſage, landed at the Haven of Orewel, near Harwich, on the 22d of September, from whence marching up into the Countrey, was firſt met by Henry Earl of Lancaſter, Brother to the late Earl, and after by the Earl Marſhal, and other Barons and Knights, with almoſt all the Prelates, but chiefly with the Biſhops of Lincoln, Hereford, Dublin, and Ely; and there were ſome Others, as eſpecially the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who though they did not appear in perſon, yet privately ſent in Money to Her aſſiſtance; ſo that with thoſe She brought, and the Forces that came daily into Her, they ſoon made up a conſiderable Army, which being muſter'd and refreſh'd at St. Edmundſbury, She marched for[illegible] (as She ſaid) To ſeek out Her Own and the Kingdom's Enemies, who had then taken ſhelter under the King's Protection.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI

The Earl of Lancaſter and ſeveral other Noblemen, Biſhops, and others aſſiſted Her underhand.

So [2.] ſoon as the King (who was then at London) heard of the landing of the Queen, Her Son, and ſo many Strangers, He was very much diſpirited; but to do all that could be done in ſo deſperate a Caſe, He iſſued out a Proclamation againſt Roger Mortimer and Others of his Confederacy; giving notice, That he and other Traytors had enter'd His Kingdom by force, and brought along with them many Aliens and Strangers, and uſurped Royal Power; and therefore He was reſolved to oppoſe them in Perſon, to arreſt and deſtroy them and all their Company and Adherents, as He ought, and might, except the Queen, His Son, and the Earl of Kent, whom He would by all means poſſible preſerve as ſafe as before their landing; and ſummon'd all Perſons in, that by their Liegance were obliged to come with all their Force and Power, in defence of Him, Themſelves, and the Kingdom; and for the eaſe of the People, He engaged to pay the Soldier's Wages, and alſo promiſed to all Great Men His Charters of Pardon for Felony or Adherence to His Enemies, as well in times paſt, as preſent; and for Outlawry for what cauſe ſoever, except the Traytor Roger Mortimer, and thoſe People that came from beyond Sea with him, and thoſe that killed Sir Roger de Beler; and then promiſed a Thouſand Pounds Sterling, and Pardon to any one that ſhould bring Him the Body or Head of Roger Mortimer. Given under His Great Seal at the Tower of London the Eight and twentieth day of September. ×

[2.] Id. Ib. The King upon the News of the landing of the Queen and Prince, with Roger Mortimer, and Foreign Forces, iſſues out a Proclamation to all His Subjects to come in and aſſiſt Him againſt them, and to take and deſtroy them all, except the Queen, Prince and the Earl of Kent.

× Both these writts are entered on the Rolls. The former on the Pat. Rolls 20 T. W. Ed. 2. m. 11. ye latter in ye Cla: Rom. m. 17. dors. printed in R—s Coll. IV. vol. p. 331. 332. Also note that in the Record beside a general Pardon of all offences to whomsoever should bring in the Body or Head of Roger Mortimer, instead of 1000 Pound, as is expressed in the printed Historian cited in the Margin, promis'd to him that should do it. The Record promises but three Pounds Sterling which makes nine pound of our Money at this Day, and seems too scanty a Reward for so great a Hazard, as he must have undergone who should have kill'd him.

The Queen, by the Advice of the Lord Mortimer, to be even with the Deſpencers for this Proclamation, not long after Her landing, iſſued out another to this effect; That all Men ſhould enjoy Peace and Quiet, except the Publick Enemies of the Kingdom, (viz.) the Two Deſpenſers Father and Son, and Robert Baldock the King's Chancellor, and their Favourers, who were the cauſe of the preſent Diſturbance of the Nation; that no Goods ſhould be taken from any, without the Conſent of the Owners; and if above the value of Three Pence (then a day's Wages for a Common Soldier) his Finger was to be cut off; nor Sixpence (the Wages of the Hobelour) under pain of his Hands being cut off. Nec valorem Duodecim Sterlingorum, &c. (which I may render

Twelve-

The Queen in revenge iſſues out a Proclamation againſt the two Spencers, and Robert Baldock the Chancellor, with a ſtrict Prohibition againſt plundering.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

Twelvepence the daily Wages of a Man at Arms) upon Pain of Death; and She was as good as Her Word, for Her Army did no Injury to the Bodies or Goods of any but Her Enemies, which She ſought out, and every where applied their Goods to Her Own Uſe, and plunder'd their Farms.

The Reaſons why the Nation was now in a Ferment againſt the Deſpenſers.

Therefore it was no great wonder that the King's Proclamation had no extraordinary effect, the Nation being at that time in a great Ferment by reaſon of the Cruel and Arbitrary Government of the Deſpenſers, many of the Nobility having been executed contrary to Law, and the Eſtates of ſeveral of them extorted by Violence from the Right Owners; of which you may find ſeveral Inſtances from the Records of that time, in * Sir William Dugdale's Baronage: And beſides all this, the Biſhops and Clergy were highly diſcontented at the King's late Violent Proceedings againſt the Biſhop of Hereford (as you have already heard); ſo that although in compliance with the King's Will, the Archbiſhop, and divers Others of them had before declared againſt the Baniſhment of the Deſpenſers as unjuſt and illegal; yet when they found themſelves grieved and oppreſſed (as they ſuppos'd) by theſe Favourite's Procurement, thoſe very Biſhops took the firſt Opportunity (when they could do it with ſafety) to declare againſt them; and therefore I think Dr. Brady is miſtaken, 'when he imputes the People's taking part with the 'Queen, to their having been prepoſſeſſed with Strange Notions and Jea-'louſies concerning the King and both the Spencers, and the Great 'Things the Queen and Mortimer would do for Holy Church and the 'Kingdom. For I deſire any one who is at all vers'd in our Hiſtory, to ſhew me, that ever the Engliſh Nation made a General Defection from their King, and refuſed to aſſiſt Him, but when His Arbitrary and Tyrannical Government, either exercis'd by His Own Abſolute Will, or that of His Favourites or Miniſters, made the People ſenſible, that it was wholly deſtructive to their Civil Liberties and Religion. Therefore though what Delamore reports may be true, That the Biſhops and Clergy of the Queen's Party, to bring in as many as they could into it, ſpread abroad a Lying Report, That the Pope had abſolved all Engliſhmen from their Oath of Fealty to the King, and had thunder'd out His Sentence of Excommunication againſt all thoſe that bore Arms againſt the Queen, which they alſo further confirmed, by pretending that there were two Cardinals in the Queen's Army, who were ſent from the Pope for that purpoſe; yet without any ſuch Falſe Reports (which have been often the Means by which a weaker Party prevails over a ſtronger) it was eaſie to gueſs which ſide the People would take.

* Pag. 389.

As were alſo the Biſhops and Clergy againſt the K., and for what cauſe.

[3.] T. W. The Anſwer that the Londoners made to the King's Letters to provide Him Aſſiſtance.

And this moſt evidently appears in the Londoner's Carriage upon this Occaſion; [3.] for when upon the News of the Queen's being landed, the King ſent to them to provide Him an Aſſiſtance of Men and Money; after ſome deliberation they return'd Him this Anſwer, 'Tha 'they ſhould always reverence their Lord the King, the Queen, and 'their Son, the Lawful Heir of the Kingdom; that they ſhould ſhu 'their Gates againſt, and reſiſt, as far as they were able, all Foreigner 'and Traytors; yet declar'd, That they were not willing to march ou 'of their City to fight, unleſs, according to the Liberties granted them 'they could return the ſame day before Sun ſet. With which Anſwe the King not being at all ſatisfied, He preſently fortified the Tower o London with Ammunition and Victuals, and leaving therein His Young er Son, John of Eltham, with the Wife of Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger, left London, and went into the Weſtern Parts of the Kingdom, with the Two Deſpenſers in His Company, to find out a place where they might raiſe an Army againſt the Queen and Her Party.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXXVI.

The King Iſſues out a Proclamation againſt any Man's aſſiſting the Traytors lately Landed.

But before He left the Town (beſides the Proclamation already mention'd againſt Roger Mortimer) He Iſſued out Another, forbidding all Men upon pain of loſing Life and Eſtate, to Aſſiſt any of the Traytors and Enemies lately Landed, or ſo much as to Sell them any Victuals or Proviſions.

The King's Forces deſerting Him, He with the Younger Spencer betakes him to the Sea, intending to paſs over into Ireland.

This Proclamation had no better Effect than the former, for notwithſtanding this, the King's Party daily Decreaſed, and that of the Queen's as much Increaſed; wherefore He went down into Glocesterſhire and ſo to Chepſtow, from whence He ſent Hugh le Deſpenſer the Elder to keep and fortify the Town and Caſtle of Briſtol; yet for all this the King not having about Him a ſufficient Force to reſiſt the Queen, He thought it His beſt way, together with Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger, Robert Baldock His Chancellor, and ſome few others, to betake themſelves to Sea, with a Deſign to paſs over to the Iſle of Lundy, or elſe into Ireland; and how they came to be Diſappointed in it I ſhall tell you by and by.

[5] Id. ib. The Queen came to London, and after a ſhort ſtay, Marches with Her Army to Gloceſter.

But I ſhall now return to the Queen, [4.] who coming firſt to London, after a ſhort ſtay there Marched thence with Her Son and a Great Army to Oxford, where the Biſhop of Hereford Preached before the Queen and Prince, declaring, That the cauſe of their coming was to Deſtroy Evil Government in the Kingdom. From thence She went to Gloceſter, where Her Army very much Increaſed by the coming in of the Lords Piercie and Wake, and Others of the North Parts and Marches of Wales.

[4.] Id. Ib. The ordinary Tradeſmen take Arms and ſeiſe the Mayor.

[5.] Whil'ſt the Queen was thus employ'd, the common People or Rabble of London, who (as my Author long ſince obſerves) never want Fury whenever they have the Licenſe of being Inſolent, gathering together the meaneſt ſort of Artificers, took Arms and ſeiſed their Mayor, threatening to Kill him if he would not Swear to conſent to their Orders, which he did to ſave his Life; and then they made a Confederacy, That the Qu's Enemies where ever they ſhould be found, or of what State or Condition ſoever they were, or ſuch as ſhould procure any Damage to the Liberties of the City, ſhould be put to Death.

[1.] Id. Ib.

They Burn the Biſhop of Exeter's Houſe, and take himſelf and cut off his Head.

[1.] Under pretence of this Oath, they preſently took John Marſhal, Servant to Hugh le Deſpenſer the Younger; and without any more ado cut off his Head and Plunder'd all his Goods; and on the ſame day continuing their Rage and Madneſs, they ran to the Biſhop of Exeter's Houſe, ſetting Fire to the Gates of it, and when they had got in and could not find him, they Plunder'd and took away his Jewels, Plate, and Houſhold-ſtuff; and he himſelf unluckily coming out of the Fields on Horſeback to the North Door of St. Paul's, the incenſed People drawing him from his Horſe, Beat and Wounded him Unmercifully, and then dragg'd him into Cheapſide, where after they had proclaim'd him a Publick Traytor they cut off his Head. The reaſon of their Fury againſt this Biſhop, was, That being Treaſurer of the Kingdom he had perſwaded the King's Council that the Itinerant Juſtices might Sit in London, who found that the Citizens had Offended in many Things, for which they loſt their Liberties; ſome were Fined, and others had Corporal Puniſhments.

It

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

[2.] Angl.Sac. 1 Vol.fol.366.

A more particular Account of theſe Actions from an Author then living.

It may not be amiſs here to give you a further Account of the Manner of the Murther of this Biſhop, with ſome Eccleſiaſtical Tranſactions preceding the ſame, [2.] from William de Dene a Publick Notary of the Church of Rocheſter, who was living at that time; and h thus relates it. The Archbiſhop, Fifteen days after Michaelmas, intended to have held a Treaty with the Biſhops at St. Paul's, abou ſending ſome of their own Order to the King and Queen, as Mediators of Peace between them: The Biſhop of Rocheſter (whoſe Nam was Hamon) diſſwaded his going into the City, or beyond the Thames to treat, being then at Lambeth; telling him, the Hearts of the People were then turn'd againſt the Biſhops, and that they hated them imputing all the Evil that had happened in the Nation to their Slothfulneſs, Folly, and Ignorance. The next day they met at Lambeth and reſolved to ſend Two: The Biſhop of Wincheſter was willing t go for One; but could not get a Companion. On Wedneſday befor St. Luke's day, the Citizens met at the Guild-Hall, where they contrived how they might take, and put to death the Biſhops of London and Exeter, and the King's Juſtices; and how they might plunder the Merchants; taking this Occaſion of the Queen's coming over; becauſe thoſe that would not adhere to Her, were reputed Traytors t the Kingdom. And as the Biſhop of Exeter was flying for Sanctuary to St. Paul's Church, they caught him at the North-door, and having grievouſly wounded him, drew him thro' the Streets to the great Croſ in Cheapſide, where theſe Sons of the Devil, (as he calls them) beheaded a Faithful, Wiſe, and Diſcreet Man, and very Uſeful to the Nation. And further ſays, that the whole Kingdom then was in Confuſion; for the Turbulent calling Peaceable Men the Queen's Enemies who were under that Colour and Pretext plunder'd of their Goods.

This Biſhop of Exeter Founder of Exeter-College, and Hart-Hall.

I have nothing elſe to add further concerning this Biſhop, Walte Stapleton; but that about Nine Years before, he founded Exeter-College in Oxford, as alſo Hart-Hall, not far from it.

[3.] T. W.

The Mob take away the Keys of the Tower, and let out all the Priſoners.

The [3.] next day after their Beheading of the Biſhop, the Mob or Rabble met by accident with Sir John de Weſton, Conſtable of th Tower of London, and taking from him the Keys by force, let out al the Priſoners; and beſides that, turn'd out the King's Officers, and put in others in the Name of the Lord John of Eltham, the King's Son, whom they made Guardian of the City and Kingdom. Yet di they not ceaſe ſtill to commit divers Ravages and Inſolencies. So likewiſe in other Places, all Perſons impriſon'd for Crimes againſt the State were diſcharg'd, and all Fugitives and Baniſhed Perſons return'd home

The Queen iſſues out a Proclamation; with the Tenor of it.

[4.] Scriptor. X fol. 2764.

But to return to the Queen whom we left at Oxford. So ſoon a She came thither, She Iſſued out a Proclamation in Her Own and He Son's Name, which may be found in the Plea, or [4.] the Defenc which Adam Dorlton then Biſhop of Wincheſter, and formerly of Hereford, ſome Years after made for himſelf; ſetting forth, that he di then by the Command of His Lord the King that now is, (viz. Edward the Third) in the Preſence of Him the ſaid King, the Earl o Lancaſter, and other Noblemen, Publiſh the Tenor of certain Letters Patents, under all their Seals; ſetting forth the Cauſes of th ſaid King's and the Queen's his Mother's coming over, which were iſſued in Her Name in theſe Words: 'Iſabel by the Grace of God, Queen ' of England, Lady of Ireland, Counteſs of Pontiff (or Ponthieu,

'and

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

'and We Edward, Eldeſt Son to the Noble King of England, Duke of Guyenne Earl of Cheſter, Pontiff, and Monſtroil (or Monſtrevil;) and We Edmund, Son to the Noble King of England, Earl of Kent, to all thoſe to whom theſe Letters ſhall come, Greeting; Whereas 'tis notoriouſly known, that the State of Holy Church, and the Realm of England are many ways blemiſhed and abaſed, by the Evil Counſel and Abetting of Hugh le Deſpenſer, who by Pride, and a Deſire to Lord it, and ſet himſelf over all Others, hath taken upon him Royal Power, againſt Right, Reaſon, and his Allegiance; and in like manner made uſe of all the Evil Counſel of Robert Baldock and Others his Adherents, ſo that Holy Church is revil'd and ſhamefully put under great Subjection, and the Prelates thereof ſpoiled of their Goods, againſt God, and Right; Holy Church being defamed and diſhonoured many ways, and the Crown of England deſtroyed in divers manners, in diſheritance of Our Lord the King, and His Heirs, the Great Men of the Realm, by the Malice and wicked Cruelty of the ſaid Hugh; many of them without fault, and without cauſe, put to ſhameful Deaths; ſome diſherited, others impriſon'd, baniſh'd and exil'd; Widows and Orphans wrongfully forejudged of their Right, and the People of the Land, by divers Talliages and undue Exactions very often burthened, and by divers Oppreſſions grieved without Mercy; by which Offences the ſaid Hugh hath ſhewn himſelf an open Tyrant and Enemy to God and Holy Church, to our moſt Dear Lord the King, and the whole Realm; and We, and many Others, with Us, and in Our Company, who have long been eſtranged from the Good Will, or Favour of Our Lord the King, by the Falſe Suggeſtions and Evil Procurement of the aforeſaid Hugh, and Robert, and their Adherents, are now come into the Land, to raiſe the State of Holy Church and the Realm, and to defend the People from theſe Miſchiefs and Grievous Oppreſſions, and to maintain to our power the Honour and Profit of Holy Church, and Our Lord the King, and the whole Realm, as aboveſaid; wherefore we command and pray you, for the Common Profit of You and every one of You, to be aiding to us at all times, and in all places, and by all the ways you know or can, that the things aboveſaid may be ſpeedily brought to a good effect and end; for know certainly, that all We, and all thoſe with Us, will not undertake any thing but what ſhall be to the Honour and Profit of Holy Church, and of the whole Kingdom, as in time you will ſee and find, if God pleaſe. Given at Wallingford the Fifteenth day of October, in the Twentieth Year of the Reign of our moſt Dear Lord the King.

to be

This Declaration, though dated a little before the Queen came to Oxford, yet the Contents thereof were not publiſhed, until it was done by the Biſhop of Hereford in the manner as is above related. But to return to the Matter:

[5.] T. W. The Queen leaves Oxford, and goes to Gloceſter, and at Berkely Caſtle reſtores that and the Honour to the right Owner.

[5.] From Oxford the Queen went to Gloceſter, and going from thence by Berkley-Caſtle, She reſtored that place to the Lord Thomas de Berkley, Heir of the Lord Maurice, lately deceaſed in Wallingford Caſtle, together with all things belonging to the Honour of Berkley, which Caſtle, with the Appurtenances, had been conferr'd upon Hugh Spencer the Younger; then the Queen with Her Army marched on, and beſieged the Town and Caſtle of Briſtol, which not being able to hold out againſt ſo great a Force, was ſoon ſurrender'd, together with the

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

The Caſtle of Briſtol taken, and the Elder Spencer is there Hanged.

* L. 1. Cap. 12.

Froiſſart's Relation of this Action.

The manner of his Condemnation and Execution.

Caſtle, of which Hugh Spencer the Elder, Earl of Wincheſter, was Governor; who the day following, to ſatisfie the Clamour of the Common People, was drawn and hang'd in his Coat of Arms at the Common Gallows without the Town. * Froiſſart relates this Action more particularly, and ſays, That the Earl being then near Ninety Years of Age, was brought before the Queen, the Prince, and the reſt of the Lords that were with Her, and being asked what he had to ſay for himſelf, reply'd thus to the Queen, Ah, Madam, may God give us a Good Judge, and a Good Judgment, but if we cannot have it in this Life, we ſhall have it in another. Then the Lord Thomas Wake (who was Marſhal of the Army) roſe up, and read a Writing containing all the Crimes laid to his Charge, and then turn'd and ſpoke to an Antient Knight who was on his Right Hand, that he ſhould bring in upon his Faith what Judgment had uſed to be given upon ſuch Perſons for the like Crimes; then this Knight applied himſelf to all the Barons there preſent, and reported their Votes or Opinions, which were, That he deſerved Death for the many horrible Crimes which were laid to his Charge, and which they held for clear and certain: and therefore he was condemn'd firſ to be drawn on a Hurdle, then beheaded, and afterwards hang'd upon a Gibbet, all which was executed upon him accordingly. And this i farther confirm'd by Sir Thomas De la More, who thus relates the manner of it; That the Bowels of this Noble Knight, his Arms and Leg being ſtretched out at length, were moſt inhumanly cut out of his Belly before his Eyes, and the reſt of his Body hang'd up upon the Gallows: Which I have taken notice of to ſhew, that the manner of Executing of Traytors at that time, was, to make hanging the laſt part o their Puniſhment, and not until they were dead.

Froiſſart miſtaken in the time of the Execution of the Earl of Arundel.

But though Froiſſart is right enough in this part of the Relation, ye he is certainly miſtaken in making the Earl of Arundel to have been condemned at the ſame time; as alſo in what immediately follows, vi That the King and Hugh Spencer the Younger ſaw this Execution o his Father from the Caſtle of Briſtol, where they then were; and th thereupon one Morning early, they Two with a few in their Retinu went privately on board a ſmall Veſſel behind the Caſtle to paſs int Wales, but that being repell'd by a Contrary Wind, he was taken no far from Briſtol by the Lord John de Beaumont; which is contrary to a our Engliſh Hiſtorians, as you will find by and by.

Upon this Succeſs, divers Cities and Towns ſent Meſſengers to the Queen.

* Rot. Clauſ 20 Ed. 2. m. 3. Dorſ. Printed in Dr. B's Append. num. 70.

Her Son the Duke of Aquitain is made Guardian of the Kingdom during the King's Abſence.

Upon this Succeſs (as Polydor Virgil ſays) the Cities of Wincheſte Salisbury, Bath and Wells, and divers other neighbouring Places in th Weſt, ſent Meſſengers to the Queen to deliver them up to Her; an whilſt She thus continued at Briſtol, it appears by a * Record, th Her Son, the Duke of Aquitain, was by the Common Conſent of the Gre Men of the Kingdom, made Guardian or Regent of it during the King abſence, none there knowing what was become of Him: And I ſuppo it was in this Aſſembly that the Biſhop of Norwich was alſo appoint Chancellor, and the Biſhop of Wincheſter Treaſurer; though theſe O ders were ſoon alter'd; and Walſingham was miſtaken in making th things to have been done at Hereford; But this is more certain whi he relates in the ſame Place; That from Briſtol the Queen went to t City laſt mentioned, where She ſtaid about a Month, and in the me time She ſent the Lord Henry Earl of Lancaſter, and Rees ap Howel, Welſh Clerk, (who knew thoſe Parts very well) into Wales wi

ſon

ome Forces, for the diſcovering and ſeizing of the King's Perſon, where ever He ſhould be found, ſince there wanted only that to compleat Her Victory, whom they heard to have landed there lately, and o lie conceal'd ſomewhere in thoſe Parts: For indeed this Poor Prince aving been at Sea in the Mouth of the River Severn for about a Week, nd being perpetually beat back by contrary Winds, not being able o make the Iſle of Lundy, nor ſail over into Ireland, as He firſt intended, was forced to land in Glamorganſhire, and getting privately o the Abby of Nethe, there lay concealed among the Monks, until eing diſcover'd by ſome Welſhmen of thoſe Parts, who were corrupted with Money, He was there taken with Hugh le Deſpencer the Younger, Robert Baldock, and Simon de Reding, and they were all committed to the Cuſtody of the Lord abovenamed, by the Advice of the Biſhop of Hereford, who then with the Lord Roger Mortimer govern'd ll Affairs.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

The Queen ſends the Ld Henry of Lancaſter to find out and ſeize the King.

The K. having been for near a Week at Sea, Lands in Glamorganſhire, and lies hid in the Abby of Nethe till he was diſcovered by ſome Welſhmen.

He and Hugh Deſpencer, and Robert Baldock, are all taken together.

But before we proceed further, I cannot but take notice of that Memorable * Record already cited, which ſets forth the Civil Tranſactions relating to the Government, during the King's Abſence and Concealment, when it was ſuppos'd that He had left England, and quitted he Government in the Company of the Perſons abovemention'd, open Enemies to the Queen, and the Prince Her Son; whereupon on the x and twentieth Day of October, at Briſtol, the Archbiſhop of Dubin, the Biſhops of Wincheſter, Ely, Lincoln, Hereford, Norwich, and ther Prelates, and Thomas Earl of Norfolk, Edmund Earl of Kent, the ing's Brother, Henry Earl of Lancaſter and Leiceſter, Thomas Wake, enry de Beaumont, William de la Zouche de Aſhby, Robert de Montalt, obert de Morley, Robert de Wattevile, and Other Barons and Knights, the Preſence of the Queen, and Duke of Aquitain Her Son, by the onſent of the whole * Community of England, then preſent, unanimouſly choſe the ſame Duke to be Guardian of the Kingdom, ſo as the id Duke and Guardian ſhould govern the Kingdom in the Name and ight of the King His Father, in His Abſence: And he took the Government of the Kingdom upon him accordingly, and paſſed all Maters under his Privy Seal, not having any Other. Then afterwards on e Twentieth of November, when the Queen's and Duke's Enemies ere taken, and the King was return'd into His Kingdom, the ſaid ueen, Duke, Prelates, and Noblemen, with the Aſſent of the Community aforeſaid, then being at Hereford, by reaſon that the Power of the uardian ceaſed by the King's return into His Kingdom, ſent the Biſhop of Hereford to the King, who was then at Monmouth, to beſeech im to command, That all things that might tend to the Peace of the ingdom, might be ſealed with the Great Seal, which was at that time ith Him: This was done in the preſence of the Earl of Lancaſter, and r. Thomas Chaundois, Archdeacon of Hereford: Thereupon the King, ter ſome deliberation, was prevail'd with to ſend the Seal by Sir William Blount, in the Company of the ſaid Biſhop, to His Wife, and Son, ſee what they would do with it, which they carry'd accordingly; d the Seal remain'd for the moſt part in the Cuſtody of the Prince d the Lord Roger Mortimer, 'till the Biſhop of Hereford was made hancellor, as appears by the ſame Record.

* Rot. Clauſ. 20 Ed. 2. m 3. Dors.

An Account of the reſt of the Tranſactions, during the King's Abſence and Concealment; as alſo after it, His Diſcovery.

* This was ſo recited for Form's ſake, for this Aſſembly was no Parliament, but a great Council of the Barons and Knights of the Queen's Party.

The King ſends the Great Seal to his Wife and Son.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXXVI.

[1.] I. W.
The King is ſent to the Caſtle of Kenelworth.

Hugh Spencer the Younger is Executed.

[1.] Whilſt the Earl of Lancaſter was conveying the King out o
Wales, by Monmouth and Ledbury in Herefordſhire, and other Places, t His Caſtle of Kenelworth in Warwickſhire, where He ſpent the Winter they ſent Hugh Spencer the Son, Robert Baldock, and Simon Reding t the Queen at Hereford, but before their coming, the Earl of Arundel
John Daniel, and Thomas Micheldene had their Heads ſtruck off by th procurement and hatred of Roger Mortimer, who was at this time th Queen's moſt Familiar Counſellor, and without whom She ſcarce di any thing: Thoſe that brought Hugh Spencer, had for their Rewar
Two thouſand Pounds, as She had promiſed, and ſoon after he was ad judged to Death, without being put to anſwer, and was drawn, an hang'd upon a Gallows fifty Foot high, and then quartered, and hi Head fixed upon London-Bridge. On the ſame Day Simon Reding wa drawn and hanged for ſpeaking hard things of the Queen.

A more particular Account of his Execution from Froiſſart.

Tho. Walſingham differs from himſelf in this Relation concernin Hugh Spencer, and ſays, That he was not taken with the King, bu that he betook himſelf to the Caſtle of Caerfillei in Glamorganſhire, (o which he was Governor) and that it being well mann'd and victualed he held out till Eaſter, when he ſurrendered it unto the Soldiers of th King and Queen, upon Condition of having the Lives and Eſtates o thoſe that defended it ſaved and preſerved; which ſince it is in no othe Hiſtorian, I much doubt the truth of; only this is certain, that he wa condemned to death without any Anſwer or Defence, and executed a Hereford (as hath been already related). But Froiſſart gives a mor particular Account of this Affair, and ſays, That this Nobleman bein taken about the Feaſt of All Saints, was brought before the Queen an the reſt of the Barons and Knights, being then at Hereford; where h Accuſation being publickly read before him, and he having nothing t object againſt it, he was by them condemned to the ſame Puniſhmen that his Father was, which was cruelly executed upon him; his Bod being ſtretched out upon a Ladder in the preſence of all the Spectator his Privy Members were firſt cut off, and burnt before him; for whic our Author gives a Reaſon; which if the Reader cannot gueſs, it is filthy and ſcandalous to this King's Memory, that I ſhall not recite i but proceed. Then his Heart and Bowels being taken out and burn and his Head cut off, his Body was left to hang upon the Gibbet in th ſame manner as his Father's had been before: With which * Henry d
Knyghton very much agrees; Who relates, that Hugh le Deſpencer th Younger was arraigned before Sir William Truſſel, Juſtitiary, who mad a long Speech to him at his Condemnation, containing all the Articl laid to his Charge; which being very long, is thus contracted by Dr Br dy, from that Author.

* Col. 2547, 2548.
The Manner of his Arraignment.

The Speech made to him by Sir William Truſſel.

'Hugh le Deſpencer know, that in the Parliament at Weſtminſter, i
'the Fifteenth Year of the King, your Father and your ſelf were awar
'ed Traytors and Enemies of the Realm, and baniſhed as ſuch, never t
'return without the aſſent of the King in full Parliament duly ſummone
'contrary to which Award, your Father and you Hugh were found in th
'Court without Warrant; and you Hugh, as you returned into the King 'dom, feloniouſly ſpoiled and robbed two Domands, (i. e. Merchan 'Ships ſo called) of Goods to the value of Forty thouſand pound
'then Hugh after this Felony, you came to the King, and cauſed Hi
'to go with Force againſt the Peers of the Realm, and Other His Lieg

People

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

'People, to deſtroy and diſherit them, contrary to the Great Charter; and alſo taking upon you Royal Power, you Hugh, and your Aſſiſtants, with Force and Arms, robbed feloniouſly the Good People of the Realm, and by Andrew Harclay and other Traytors your Adherents, murthered the good E. of Hereford, Mo^r. W. Sullee, and Monſieur Roger de Berfelde (at Borough-Bridge;) and cauſed to be taken the moſt Honourable Lord Thomas the good Earl of Lancaſter, and cauſed him to be judged by a falſe Record againſt Law, Reaſon, and the Great Charter; and alſo to be murther'd, martyr'd, and put to a Cruel Death: Alſo in the ſame * March (viz. to Borough-Bridge) you cauſed many of my Lords, (i. e. the Earl of Lancaſter) Barons, and Knights, to be drawn and hang'd by falſe Record, againſt Law and Reaſon, and cauſed other Great Men to be put in Priſon, and murthered to get their Eſtates, as Roger Mortimer the Nephew, and Uncle, and Hugh Audeley, Father and Son. After this Deſtruction of the Nobility, you Hugh with your Father, and Robert Baldock, uſurping Royal Power over the King, led Him and His People into Scotland againſt His Enemies; where you, Hugh, by your Trayterous Conduct, cauſed Him to loſe Twenty Thouſand of His People, to His great Diſhonour, and Damage of the Realm, and to return without doing any thing.

'Hugh, neither would this Treaſon nor Tyranny ſatisfy you, until by Royal Power gained over the King, you deſtroyed the Franchiſes of Holy-Church, and the Prelates, as the Biſhops of Hereford, Lincoln, and Norwich; taking their Goods out of their Churches: And whereas you knew, God had done great Things by my Lord (the E. of Lancaſter) whom you cauſed to be murthered; you placed Armed Guards, and ſhut the Church-doors, that none ſhould enter to honour God and his Saints. Hugh, after theſe Miſchiefs, you adviſed the King to give unto the Falſe Traytors, the Earl of Wincheſter, Andrew Harclay, and your ſelf, Lands properly belonging to the Crown, in Diſheriſon thereof. Hugh, whereas the Queen and Her Son paſſed beyond the Sea by the King's Command, to ſave the Country of Guyenne, in danger to be loſt by your Trayterous Counſel; you ſent over a great Sum of Money to ſome of your wicked Adherents, to deſtroy the Queen and Her Son, who is Right Heir of the Kingdom; and to hinder their coming over. Hugh, your Father, Robert Baldock, your ſelf and other falſe Traytors, your Adherents, taking upon you Royal Power, made Great and Small by force to ſwear to, and aſſure you, to maintain you in your falſe Quarrels or Pretences; not having regard, that ſuch Confederacies were Falſe and Trayterous againſt Legiance, and the State of the King and His Crown; and foraſmuch as you Hugh and other Traytors, knew, that the Queen and Her Son were arrived in the Nation, by your evil Counſel, you cauſed the King to withdraw Himſelf, and go from them, and carried Him out of the Kingdom, to the danger of His Royal Perſon, and Diſhonour to Him and His People; feloniouſly taking with you the Treaſure of the Realm, contrary to the Great Charter.

'Hugh, you are now found a Traytor; wherefore all the Good People of the Kingdom, Great and Small, Rich and Poor, by common Aſſent, do award, That you are found a Thief, and therefore ſhall be hanged; and being found a Traytor, ſhall therefore be drawn and

* In the French Journey.

'and quartered: And for that you have been outlaw'd by the King, 'and by common Aſſent, and return'd to the Court without Warrant, 'you ſhall be beheaded; and for that you abetted and procur'd Diſcord between the King and Queen, and others of the Realm, you 'ſhall be embowell'd, and your Bowels burnt. Withdraw, Traytor; 'and ſo go take your Judgment, attainted, wicked Traytor. This Sentence was executed upon him on the Four and Twentieth of November.

* Comp. Hiſt. p. 161. Some Miſtakes of Dr. Bradies confuted.

* Dr. Brady, from the Authority of Sir Thomas de la Moor, calls this Hugh Spencer Earl of Gloceſter; in which I doubt not but he is miſtaken; for I do not find him ſtiled ſo by any other Author: And tho' perhaps he might have that Title given him by the Courteſie of his Creatures and Favourites, as having married Eleanor the eldeſt Daughter of the ſaid Earl; yet that he was never created ſo by any Charter, or Inveſtiture, is agreed by * Sir William Dugdale, in his Baronage of England: And he is alſo ſtil'd no otherwiſe than Hugh le Deſpenſer the Younger, in the * Act of Parliament for the Reverſal of his Attainder, which was paſs'd in the Twenty Firſt Year of Richard the Second, whereby Thomas le Diſpenſer his great Grandſon was not only reſtor'd in Blood, but created Earl of Gloceſter.

* 1 Vol. p. 393.

* Rot. Parl. 21. Rich. 2. n. 55.

* Ib.

* The Dr. alſo ſeems to be miſtaken, when he ſays further, that the ſaid Hugh was never tryed by a Common Jury, or by his Peers the Barons; the former of which was improper, he being a Peer; but that he was call'd to anſwer before the Duke of Aquitain, and the Barons at of Hereford, appears by Froiſſart's Account of theſe Proceedings, as hath been already recited; and therefore this Sir William Truſſel, as ſupplying the Place of Chief Juſticiary of England, might in the name of all the Barons there preſent, make this Speech, and pronounce the Sentence of Death upon him: And the Reader may further obſerve, that the Reaſons given in the ſaid Statute of King Richard the Second aforeſaid, for the Reverſal of his Attainder, were chiefly, becauſe it was againſt Magna Charta, that any Man ſhould be exiled, tryed, or otherwiſe deſtroy'd, without Judgment of his Peers; alſo becauſe the Repeal of the Statute of Edward the Second, for his Reſtoration, was made in the Firſt Year of Edward the Third, when his ſaid Father was yet living, and tho' ſtill very young, could not reſiſt the ſame. But of this we ſhall ſay more, when we come to the Reign of K. Richard the Second.

Of the Attainder of Hugh Spencer the Younger.

The Taking and Execution of Edmund Earl of Arundel.

* Col. 2545.

I ſhall now proceed to give ſome Account of what became of the reſt of thoſe Great Officers and Noblemen that ſuffer'd in this Unhappy Quarrel: For tho' Walſingham relates, that Edmund Earl of Arundel was beheaded, before Hugh le Deſpenſer; yet * Henry de Knyghton, from the more Antient Chronicle of his own Houſe, (which he ſtill cites under the Title of Leiceſtrenſis) gives a more full Account of it, and the Crimes laid to his Charge, viz. That Edmund Earl of Arundel being taken (not long after the King) by Sir John Charleton, in Shropſhire, was brought before the Queen and Great Men at Hereford; where it was laid to his Charge, That having married his Son and Heir to the Daughter of Hugh le Deſpenſer, he had been privy to his Counſels, and had done the Queen much Prejudice in Her abſence, and had alſo procured the Death of Thomas late Earl of Lancaſter, with that of Adomar de Valence Earl of Pembroke, who was ſuppos'd to be poyſon'd in France: Wherefore the ſaid Earl was condemned to be drawn and hang'd, together with John Daniel an Eſquire of his, whoſe Advice he had followed more than he ought.

Anno Dom. MCCCXXVI.

As [2.] for Robert de Baldock the King's Chancellor, he being carried from Hereford to London, was there treated very ſeverely by the Rabble; but notwithſtanding he was committed to the Biſhop of London's Priſon for his Security, yet he was, about Candlemaſs, pulled out from thence by ſome of the Common People of London; as being (they thought) not kept ſafe enough; and as they carried him to Newgate, they beat him ſo cruelly by the way, that he died not long after by his Bruiſes, in great Torment. This Man hath a very bad Character by all our Hiſtorians, as a corrupt Miniſter, and Inſtrument of all the Deſpenſer's Enormities, and is called in our Antient Engliſh-Writers that Falſe and Peiled Clark; I ſuppoſe, becauſe of his Shaven Crown, as being Arch-deacon of Middleſex, and in Prieſt's Orders. But to return to the King his Maſter.

[2.] T. W. Robert Baldock being Committed to Priſon, is pull'd out from thence, and ſo Beaten by the Rabble that he Died; with his Character.

This Unfortunate Prince being about the third of December at Ledbury, is ſuppos'd to have iſſu'd out a * Writ for Proroguing the Parliament, which had been ſummon'd to meet Fifteen days after the Feaſt of St. Andrew, (or Fifteenth of December.) And in this Writ it is recited, That it was to be holden by Iſabel Queen-Conſort of England, and Edward his Eldeſt Son, Gu[illegible]n of England, the King being at that time out of the Kingdom. [illegible]en follows the Proroguing that Parliament to the morrow after Epiphany, or Twelfth-day; to be holden by Him, if perſonally preſent, or in His Abſence, by His ſaid Conſort and Son. Dated at Ledbury, on the Third of December, with His Teſte to it. Tho' it appears by the * Record here cited, that the Unfortunate King knew nothing of the Sealing of this Writ, having already parted with the Great Seal to the Queen and Prince, who had a little before delivered it to the Biſhop of Norwich, then on his Journey to Woodſtock; where he again deliver'd it up to the Prince, and the Lord Roger Mortimer: So that the Place where theſe Writs were Seal'd is very uncertain, tho' the matter is not much, ſince there is no Averment againſt the Record.

* Rot. Clauſ. 20. Ed. 2. m 4. Dors.

The Parliament is prorogued to the Morrow after Epiphany in the King's Name, but without his Conſent.

* Printed by Dr. B. in Apen. n. 71.

This being the laſt Year of King Edward the Second's Reign, the [3.] Queen with the Prince Her Son, the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, the Biſhop of Winchester Treaſurer, and the Biſhop of Norwich, Chancellor, together with the Biſhops of Ely, Coventry, and Hereford, and other Prelates, Peers, and Noblemen of the Kingdom, kept their Chriſtmaſs at Wallingford-Caſtle with great State and Magnificence; the King ſtill remaining a Priſoner at Kenelworth. So ſoon as the Feſtival Solemnity was over, the Queen with all the reſt of the Company removed to London, where She was received with great Joy, and many rich Preſents. Then on the morrow after Epiphany, * the whole Nobility of England met at Weſtminſter, according to the late Summons, where divers Articles of Miſ-government being brought in againſt King Edward, it was there unanimouſly agreed, That He ſhould be depos'd, and His Eldeſt Son elected King in His Room. * The Articles abovemention'd were certainly enter'd on the Parliament-Roll, but being now taken off the File, are not any where to be found, unleſs in the aforeſaid [4.] Anſwer or Defence of Adam de Orleton then Biſhop Elect of Wincheſter; which are thus tranſlated from the French Original.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

[3.] T. W. The Queen with great Officers of the Kingdom keep Chriſtmas at Wallingford Caſtle, and thence removes to London.

* Tota Nobilitas Angliæ, here ſignifies the Commons, as well as the Lords.

* The Acts of this Parliam. at Weſtminſter.

[4] Script·X. Col. 2765, 2766.

Firſt,

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

Articles of Male Adminiſtration againſt the King brought into Parliament.

‘ Firſt, That the Perſon of the King was not ſufficient to Govern
‘ for in all His time He was led and governed by others, who gave Hi ‘ evil Counſel, to the Diſhonour of Himſelf, and Deſtruction of Hol ‘ Church, and all His People; not conſidering or knowing whether ‘ was Good or Evil; nor would He remedy theſe things, when He w ‘ requeſted by the Great and Wiſe Men of this Realm, nor ſuffer the
‘ to be amended.

2. Alſo, in all this time, He would not give Himſelf up to goo ‘ Counſel, nor take it, nor mind the Good Government of His Kin
‘ dom; but always gave Himſelf to Employments not convenient ‘ neglecting the Buſineſs of His Realm.

3. ‘ Alſo for want of Good Government, He loſt the Kingdom ‘ Scotland, and other Lands and Dominions in Gaſcoigne and Irelan
‘ which His Father left Him in Peace and Amity with the King ‘ France, and many other Great Perſons.

4. Alſo, by His Pride and Cruelty, He had deſtroyed Holy-Churc
‘ and the Perſons of Holy-Church: putting ſome in Priſon, and othe
‘ in great Diſtreſs; and He had alſo put to ſhameful Death, and im ‘ priſoned, baniſhed, and diſherited many Great and Noble-Men
‘ the Land.

5. ‘ Alſo, whereas He was bound by His Oath to do Right to a
‘ He would not do it for His own Profit, and the Covetouſneſs
‘ Him and His Evil Counſellers, who were with Him; neither r
‘ garded the other Points of the Oath which He made at His Coron ‘ tion, as He was obliged.

6. ‘ Alſo He abandoned His Realm, and did as much as in Him la
‘ to deſtroy it, and His People; and what is worſe, by the Cruelt
‘ and the Defaults of His Perſon, He is found Incorrigible, witho ‘ Hopes of Amendment. All which Things are ſo Notorious, th ‘ cannot be gain-ſaid.

* Ib.

The manner of King Edward's Reſignation of the Crown.

* Theſe Articles were indited and dictated by John Stratford, B ſhop of Wincheſter, and Treaſurer of England; and written by Wil am Mees Clerk, His Secretary; and a Publick Notary having app ved the Articles, they were by Common Agreement ſent to the Ki then a Priſoner in Kenelworth-Caſtle, by John Stratford the aforeſaid B ſhop, Adam de Orleton Biſhop of Hereford, and Henry Burwaſh Biſh of Lincoln, together with Two Earls, Four Barons, and Three Knigh of every County; as alſo ſome of the Citizens and Burgeſſes for Lo don, the Cinque-Ports, and other Cities and Towns of England, wh in the Name of them all, were to reſign their Homage and Fealty the King; and ſhould give Him notice of the Election of His Son, a ſhould procure His Voluntary Reſignation of the Crown; or otherw they ſhould render up their Homages; and proceed as they ſhould thi fit. The reaſon of which Proceeding was, [1.] that the Queen ſeem very much grieved at this Sentence againſt Her Husband; and t young Prince affected with this outward Paſſion of His Mother, wou not accept the Title againſt His Father's Will; and therefore the Kin precedent Reſignation was thought neceſſary for their better Sat faction.

[1.] T. W.

Another Relation of it from De la More's Hiſtory, not probable in all points.

And Sir Thomas de la Moor hath ſhewn us by what means this Re natiin was obtain'd; as that the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln ca before the reſt to the King, to bring Him to it: And theſe togeth wi

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

with the Earl of Lancaſter, His Keeper, perſuaded Him to reſign His Crown to His Son; and the more to induce Him to it, promiſed Him as much Honour after His Reſignation as before; and on the other-hand threatned Him that if He would not, the People would yield up their Homage and Fealty, and paſs by His Sons, and chuſe One not of Royal Blood. But this, by the way, ſeems not very probable, ſince the Earl of Lancaſter was next Heir to the Crown, after the King's Children; and therefore, I ſay, it is not likely, that he ſhould make that a Motive for the King's Reſignation. But be that Part of the Meſſage as it will, the reſt of it is likely enough, That they promiſed Him Safety as to His Perſon, with a large and handſom Allowance for the Support of His Dignity. All which Motives prevail'd ſo far with Him, that He was brought to conſent to their Propoſal, and to make His Reſignation accordingly: The Manner of which being very Grave and Solemn, I ſhall give it you at large from the ſame * Author; who relates, That the Biſhop of Hereford having introduced all the ſaid Commiſſioners of Parliament, the King came out to them from His Bed-Chamber in a Mourning-Gown; and as ſoon as He heard their Meſſage, fell in a Swoon, and had fallen to the ground, had He not been ſupported by the Earl of Lancaſter, and Biſhop of Wincheſter: But theſe Circumſtances Dr. Brady hath omitted, (I ſuppoſe) becauſe he thought it would leſſen the Character of this Prince, whom he doth all he can to heighten; and only ſays in general, that the whole Matter they came for was diſpatched, not without great Grief and Reluctancy from the King.

Yet the reſt of it being more full than any other, is credible.

* Tho. de la Moor. Ib.

And tho' the Dr. from Thomas of Walſingham, hath given us the Manner of this Reſignation, yet he hath curtail'd the King's Anſwer to theſe Commiſſioners; and therefore I ſhall from the ſame Author truly recite this whole Tranſaction. The King having heard the Meſſage of the Commiſſioners, whereby they demanded the Reſignation of His Crown; anſwered with Tears in His Eyes, That He was very ſorry that He had ſo miſbehaved Himſelf towards His People, and asked pardon for it of all that were there; but ſeeing now it could not be otherwiſe, He return'd them thanks for Electing His Firſt-born Son in His room: And then made His Reſignation, by delivering up the Royal Enſigns of Sovereignty; by which, I ſuppoſe, he means the Crown and Scepter, which were then brought thither for that purpoſe. Then Sir William Truſſel (whether as a Member of Parliament, for he was certainly a Commoner, and no Peer; or as ſupplying the Place of Chief Juſtice of England I cannot determine) was order'd by the whole Parliament to pronounce their Reſignation and Homage to the King; which he did in this Form. [2.] 'I William Truſſel, Procurator of the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, and other People in my Procuracy named, having for this full and ſufficient Power, do ſurrender, and deliver up to You Edward, King of England, before this time, the Homage and Fealty of the Perſons in my Procuracy named, in the Name of them, and every of them, for certain Cauſes therein mentioned; and do return them up to You Edward, and acquit or diſcharge the Perſons aforeſaid, in the beſt manner that the Law and Cuſtom can give it: and do make this Proteſtation in the Name of all thoſe that will not for the future be in Your Fealty, or Allegiance, nor claim to hold any thing of You, as King; but account You as a private Perſon, without any manner of Royal Dignity.

Dr. Brady too ſhort in this Relation of the King's Anſwer to the Commiſſioners ſent by the Parliament.

A full Account of it from Walſingham.

The manner of Sir William Truſſel's Surrendring up the Homage in the Name of the whole Parliament.

[2.] H K. Col 2550.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

[*] Plebi. Dr. B. p. 163. here tranſlates this word by Rabble, which in all other places he renders People or Laity; the reaſon of which is plain enough.

[*] Lib. 7. c. 41.

A Deſcription of K. Edward's Perſon; with a Character of His Diſpoſition.

Whereupon the Commiſſioners returning to the Parliameet at London, with the King's Anſwer, and the Royal Enſigns, made the * Common People rejoice; and preſently the whole Community of the Kingdom admitted Edward, a Youth of Fourteen Years of Age, to be their King Whoſe Admiſſion and Coronation, ſince it properly belongs to the next Reign, I ſhall, until then, reſer further to Treat of; and with the late King's Abdication of the Royal Power ſhall conclude this Reign; and from the Writers neareſt that time, give a brief Character of his Perſon and Diſpoſition.

'* Ranulph Hygden in his Polychronicon, deſcribes Him to be very 'handſome and well made, and of a healthy and ſtrong Conſtitution; 'but very fickle and inconſtant, often changing His Reſolutions, and that 'moſt commonly for the worſe; for not regarding the Company of His 'Nobility, He preferr'd Jeſters, Singers, Players, Rowers, and other 'Mechanicks; and being given to Drink, then eaſily betray'd His Secrets; 'often ſtriking thoſe about Him for a ſmall Offence; and followed the 'Advice of others more than his Own: He was Prodigal in His Gifts, 'Splendid in His Entertainments, Ready in Promiſing, but Uncertain 'in Performing, Unfortunate againſt His Enemies, Severe to His Domeſticks, ſtill fixing His Affections upon one Favourite, whom He alone 'loved, enriched, prefer'd, and honour'd; which Weakneſs tended to 'the Diſgrace of Himſelf, the Reproach of the Favourite, the Scandal of the People, and Detriment of the Kingdom. He alſo advanced very unfit Perſons to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities; which afterwards 'proved Thorns in the Sides of the Church. In His time there were 'frequent Contributions of the Clergy, and indeed a continual Squeezing both of them and the Laity; and when by the permiſſion of the 'Pope, a great deal of Money came into the King's Coffers, for His 'War againſt the Scots, yet by His ill Management it was often vainly 'ſpent, and laviſhed away.

Whether He made good this Character thro' all Parts of His Reign, I ſhall not affirm; yet that He gave Himſelf up to be wholy governed by His Favourites, who made uſe of the Eaſineſs of His Nature, to the great Abuſe of His Royal Power, hath been already ſhew'd; and tho' the Nobility might often deal too roughly with Him, in making Him baniſh His Favourites whether He would or not, and in cutting off the Head of Gaveſton, contrary to his Command; yet did they not proceed to theſe Extremities, until they found that no Laws nor Remonſtrances whatſoever had any effect upon Him: And tho' it muſt be confeſs'd, they dealt very rigorouſly and unjuſtly with Him, in thus depoſing Him for the Offences and Miſcarriages of others, His Officers and Miniſters; and perhaps beyond, if not contrary to the Intention of ſeveral of the Biſhops, Lords, and Commons, that firſt took part with the Queen and Prince at their Landing: Yet it is very eaſie and natural to ſuppoſe, that the Queen and Her Favourite the Lord Mortimer, together with the Earl of Lancaſter, and Biſhop of Hereford, and ſome others that had ſuffer'd either in their Fortunes or Relations, or had been in danger of their Lives, by reaſon of the cruel and ſevere Government of the Deſpenſers; when all theſe call'd to mind the great Turn of Affairs that had happened after the Execution of the Earl of Lancaſter and his Adherents, they could not but be afraid of the like Revolution of Fortune; and therefore could not think themſelves ſecure, until He was deprived of all Power of doing them any Hurt again: And this made ſome of them who were of a more cruel and ſuſpicious Nature, never to think themſelves ſafe ſo long as He was alive; which not long after brought on His Deſtruction, as you will find in the Sequel.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

But to give this Prince his due, tho' He was Raſh and Paſſionate, yet that He was in His own Nature merciful, appears by His lamenting the Death of His Couſin the Earl of Lancaſter, and by pardoning the Lives of ſeveral of the Lords, that had been in Arms againſt Him, tho' He kept their Eſtates. He ſeems alſo to have been Continent as to Women, ſince we do not read of any Miſtreſs, or Baſe Iſſue He had. However ſome of the Writers of that time, make Him Guilty of a worſe Vice, which ſince I do not believe to be true, I ſhall not further mention. But He was certainly of a Charitable and Publick Spirit; as appears not only by His founding the Abbey of Langly, to pray for the Soul of Pierce Gaveſton; * but at the Perſwaſion of Adam de Brom His Almoner, about two Years before His Depoſition, He founded Oriel College in Oxford; which was at firſt called King's-Hall, but the other Name hath taken place ſince, by reaſon the College was afterwards built upon a piece of Ground where ſtood a large Houſe called Le Orielle. But why that Place was ſo called, may be another Queſtion, which I will not undertake to determine.

* Antiq. Oxon. Anton. à Wood, p. 103. He founded Oriel-College in Oxford.

The Wife and Children of K. Edward the Second.

HE [1.] married Iſabel, Daughter of Philip the Fair, King of France; She being then but Twelve Years of Age, who lived His Wife Twenty Years, His Widow Thirty, and dying at Threeſcore and Three Years old at Ryſings near London, was buried in the Midſt of the Choir of the Gray-Fryars, London. By Her He had Iſſue Two Sons, and Two Daughters. [2.] His Eldeſt Son named Edward, ſirnamed of Windſor, becauſe born there, ſucceeded Him in the Kingdom: His Second Son named [3] John of Eltham, becauſe born at that Mannor, was at Twelve Years old created Earl of Cornwal; he died in Scotland in the Twentieth Year of His Age, Unmarried. His [4.] Eldeſt Daughter Joan being a Child, was married in the Fourth Year of King Edward Her Brother, to David Prince of Scotland, Son to King Robert Bruce, he being then but Seven Years old. She coming afterward into England to viſit Her Brother, died here in the Thirty Second Year of His Reign, and was buried at the Gray-Fryars in London, A. D. 1357. [5.] His Second Daughter was married to Reginald the Second E. of Gelders, with a Portion of Fifteen Thouſand Pounds. She had Iſſue by Him Two Sons, who were Earls ſucceſſively, but Both deceaſed without Iſſue.

[1.] T. W. Sandford's Geneal. Hiſtory, p. 155.

[2.] T. W.

[3.] Id. Ypod. Neuſt.

[4.] Sandford's Geneal. Hiſt. ibid.

[5.] Ib.

Taxes in this King's Reign.

IN [1.] the Parliament at Northampton, in the Firſt of His Reign, the Earls, Barons, Knights, and all Others of the Kingdom, granted to the King a Twentieth Part of their Moveables (except their Armour, War-Horſes, Jewels, Robes, and Veſſels of Gold and Silver) of Knights and other Freemen, and of their Wives. And the Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Tenants of the Antient Demeſnes of the Crown, granted a Fifteenth Part of their Moveables; as alſo did the Clergy.

[2.] Inter Rot. Comput. in Cuſtod. Cler. Pipæ, tempore Ed. 2. Clauſ. 1. Ed. 2. m. 12. intus.

[2.]Rot Clauſ. 2. Ed. 2. M. 23. in Sced.

In [2.] His Second Year, at a Parliament holden at Weſtminſter, a Month after Eaſter, the Laity granted a Twenty-Fifth of their Moveables.

[3.] In Rot. Comput. ut ſupra.

* Communitates.

In [3.] the Seventh Year, in his Parliament at Weſtminſter, the Earls, Barons, Knights, Freemen, and the * Commons of Counties, gave a Twentieth Part of their Goods; and the Citizens and Burgeſſes, and Communities of Cities, and Boroughs gave a Fifteenth.

[4.] Rot. Pat. 8. Ed. 2. M. 12. Dorſ P. 2.

In [4] His Eighth Year, He had a Twentieth Part of the Moveables of the Laity, granted by the Commons of the Counties of the Kingdom (per Communitates comitatuum regni) aſſembled in Parliament.

[5.]Rot. Parl. 9. Ed. 2. m. 2.

In [5] His Ninth Year, He had granted a Fifteenth Part, of the Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Tenants in Antient Demeſnes, for his War with the Scots, in the Parliament held at Lincoln; the ſame Year, the Community of the Kingdom, or the Military Men being then alſo ſummoned to do their Service.

[6.]Rot. Clauſ. 15. Ed. 2. m. 16. Dorſ.

[7.]Rot. Clauſ. 16. Ed. 2. m. 20. Dorſ.

* Note, Theſe Synods or Convocations did not meet till after the Parliament at York was riſen.

In [6.] the Fifteenth Year of His Reign, the King ſummoned a Parliament to meet at Rippon, but it was held at York three Weeks after Eaſter: And after the End of this Parliament, on the Twenty Seventh of Nov. next following, He directed [7.] His Writs dated at York, to the Prelates and Clergy of both Provinces, to meet in two Synods or Convocations, the one at Lincoln, the other at York; the former of which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was immediately to Summon, to treat of a Competent Aid to be granted to Him towards His Expedition againſt the Scots, who had then invaded England. In which Writs, as it were for a Direction, He recites * what the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Noblemen, and the Commons of the Kingdom had done in the Parliament at York; viz. That they had granted Him a Tenth Part of the Goods of the Community or Body of the Kingdom, and a Sixth Part of the Goods of Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Tenants of Antient Demeſnes. The Latin Original runs thus: Prælati, Comites, Barones & Proceres, necnon Communitates dicti regni apud Eborum, ad tractandum ſuperdictis negotiis & aliis, Nos & Statum dicti Regni tangentibus nuper convocati; & Decimam de Bonis de Communitate ejuſdem Regni, & Sextam de Civitatibus, Burgis, & antiquis Dominicis noſtris, nobis liberaliter conceſſerunt & gratanter. From whence you may obſerve, That the Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Tenants in Antient Demeſnes, are there reckon'd as diſtinct from the Community or Body of the Kingdom; tho' they are taken in as Part of the Commons or Commonalty thereof.

But thus much is to be ſaid for this King's Reign, That we find few or no Complaints of any Taxes impos'd by Colour of His Prerogative, contrary to Law, notwithſtanding the exorbitant Power of the two Deſpenſers: But this might be owing to their Policy, who having made themſelves ſo obnoxious to the Nobility, would do what they could to make the Common People their Friends. But towards the latter end of His Reign, the Confiſcation of the Eſtates of the E. of Lancaſter, and the reſt of the Barons attainted, were ſo conſiderable, that tho' He gave away a great deal of Lands to the Deſpenſers and their Adherents, yet that which ſtill remain'd in the Crown made Him to have a greater Revenue than any of His Predeceſſors ſince King Henry the Second's time.

A Sum or Abſtract of the Principal STATUTES made in the Reign of King Edward the Second.

THE Firſt is called, A Statute for Knights, made 1 Edw. II. Wherein are ſet down divers Cauſes for which a Man may be xcuſed from taking upon him the Order of Knighthood. But this is now repealed by the 16 Car. I. c. 20.

The ſame Year was likewiſe made the Statute de frangentibus Priſonam; which enacts, That it ſhall be Felony for any Perſon to break Priſon, being in for Felony; otherwiſe not.

Articuli Cleri 9 Edw. II.

THeſe Articles being Sixteen in Number, and indeed ſo many diſtinct Laws, contain divers Powers and Privileges, declared or granted to the Clergy: But moſt of them are now become obſolete, or in great meaſure altered by Subſequent Statutes, and thereforee I ſhall only give you the Titles of the ſeveral Chapters of them.

Ch. I. No Prohibition ſhall be granted where Tythes be demanded, but where Money for them.

Ch. II. Debate upon the Right of Tythes exceeding the Fourth Part: Enjoining Penance Corporal or Pecuniary.

Ch. III. Laying Violent Hands upon a Clerk. Excommunication for Penance Corporal.

Ch. IV. Prelates may correct for Defamation.

Ch. V. No Prohibition where Tythe is demanded of a New Mill.

Ch. VI. Where a Suit for One Offence may be proſecuted both in Court Spiritual and Temporal.

Ch. VII. In what only Caſe the King's Letters ſhall be ſent to diſcharge an Excommunicate.

Ch. VIII. Clerks in the King's Service ſhall be diſcharged of their Reſidence, but ſhall be corrected by the Ordinary.

Ch. IX. Diſtreſſes ſhall not be taken in the Highways, nor in the Ancient of the Church.

Ch. X. They that abjure the Realm, ſhall be in Peace, ſo long as they be in the Church, or Highway.

Ch. XI. Religious Houſes ſhall not be charged by Compulſion with Corrodies, Penſions, Reſort, or taking of their Horſes or Carts.

Ch. XII. A Clerk Excommunicate may be taken out of the Pariſh where he dwelleth.

Ch. XIII. The Examination of a Parſon preſented to a Benefice, belongeth to a Spiritual Judge.

Ch. XIV. There ſhall be free Election of Dignities of the Church.

Ch. XV. A Clerk fleeing into the Church for Felony, ſhall not be compelled to abjure.

Ch. XVI. The Priviledge of the Church being demanded by the Ordinary, ſhall not be deny'd to a Clerk that hath confeſſed Felony.

The

The Statute of Sheriffs made at Lincoln, 9 Edw. II.

That Sheriffs ſhall be aſſigned by the Chancellor, Treaſurer, Barons of the Exchequer, and Juſtices, and in the abſence of the Chancellor, by the Treaſurer, Barons and Juſtices: And that none ſhall be Sheriff, except he have ſufficient Lands in the County where he is Sheriff, to anſwer the King and His People. The reſt of the Statute appoints who ſhall have the keeping of Hundreds, and by whom Execution of Writs ſhall be made: Saving always Return of Writs to them that ought to have them.

The Statute of Gavelet made at London, 10 Edw. II. 1316.

It is provided by the King and His Juſtices, and alſo granted to the Citizens of London, That the Lords of Rents in the ſaid City may recover them by a Writ of Gavelet; and in default thereof, the Lands in Demeſne.

The Statute of York, Anno 12 Edw. II. 1318.

Chap. I. Tenants in Aſſize of Novel Diſſeiſin may make Attorneys, and may plead by Bayliffs, if they will, as they uſed to do heretofore.

Chap. II. Proceſs ſhall be awarded to cauſe Witneſſes to appear, to prove a Deed, or other Writing that is deny'd in Court; and upon non-appearance at the Grand Diſtreſs, or a Nihil or Non invent. returned, the taking of the Inqueſt ſhall not be deferred by the abſence of ſuch Witneſſes; with ſome few other things relating to Practice; which are too tedious here to inſert.

Ch. III. Enqueſts and Juries touching Plea of Land, that require not great Examination, ſhall be taken by Niſi prius in the Countrey, before a Juſtice of the Place where the Plea is, accompany'd with a Subſtantial Perſon of the Countrey, Knight or other, &c. But this part of the Law is now grown obſolete. But then follows, that Enqueſts and Juries, in Pleas of Land that require great Examination, ſhall be taken in the Countrey, before two Juſtices of the Bench; which is the Practice at this Day.

Ch. IV. Juſtices of Niſi prius have power to record Nonſuits and Defaults in the Countrey, at the Days and Places aſſigned; which ſhall be reported in the Bench at a Day certain, there to be enrolled, and thereupon Judgment ſhall be given.

Ch. V. An Indenture ſhall be made between the Sheriff and Bayliff of a Franchiſe under their Names, of every Return delivered by the Bayliff to the Sheriff; and if the Sheriff change the Return ſo delivered to him by Indenture, and be thereof convict, he ſhall be puniſhed by the King, and ſhall yield to the Lord of the Liberty, and to the Party, double Damages: Likewiſe Sheriffs and Bayliffs ſhall ſet their Names to their Returns, on pain of being grievouſly amerced to the King's Uſe.

Ch. VI. No Perſon in any City or Borough, who by reaſon of their Office ought to keep the * Aſſizes of Wine or Victuals, ſhall buy or ſell any ſuch Proviſions, ſo long as they ſhall continue in their ſaid Offices: But this is now grown out of uſe.

* i. e. Meaſures and Price.

The Statute of Eſſoins, made 12 Edw. II.

Declares how many ways Eſſoins may be challenged, and in what aſes they do lie, and in what not.

The Statute of Carliſle, made 15 Edw. II.

This looks more like a Writ, or Precipe, than an Act of Parliament;
r it begins thus, The King unto the Juſtices of His Bench, greeting:
nd a little after, We have ſent unto you our Mind in Writng, firmly to be ob- rved,&c. But whatſoever it is, it appoints the Conuſors of Fines perſoally to come before the Juſtices, if they are able; if not, a Commiſon is to be awarded (and in what manner, and to whom di-ected) to take ſuch Fines; and alſo it ſaves the Authority of the Chan-llor, and of the Chief Juſtices, in admitting Attorneys, as had been fore obſerved. At the end it is ſaid to be Given (that is, I ſuppoſe, onfirmed) at our Parliament at Carliſle, the Year above-written.

The Statute de Prerogativa Regis, made 17 Edw. II.

This Body of Laws, contained in Sixteen Chapters, was made to de-lare, what were the King's Antient Prerogatives; which are as folow, viz.

hap. I. The King ſhall have the Wardſhip of the Heir of His Tenant that holdeth in Chief.

h. II. The King ſhall have the Mariage of the Heir of His Tenant, being within Age, and in His Ward.

h. III. The King ſhall have primier ſeiſin of the Land of His Tenant in Capite.

h. IV. The King ſhall aſſign Dower to the Widows of His Tenants; and ſuch Widows before Aſſignment ſhall ſwear, That they will not marry without the King's Licenſe, upon forfeiture of the Lands and Tenements they ſo hold of Him.

h. V. Parceners, or Co-heirs, holding of the King in Chief, ſhall all of them do Homage alike.

h. VI. The Ward of the Body of a Woman that marries before ſhe be marriageable, ſhall be in the King till her Age of Conſent: And the King's Tenant in Chief ſhall not alien the major part of his Lands without Licenſe.

h. VII. Tenants by Serjeanty ſhall pay a Fine to the King at their Alienation of them.

h. VIII. No time ſhall prejudice the King's Preſentation to a Church, ſo that He preſent within the ſpace of Six Months.

h. IX. The King ſhall have the Cuſtody of Idiots Lands, but after their Death ſhall render them to the Right Heir, to prevent the Idiots from alienating, and the Heirs from being diſinherited.

h. X. The King ſhall have the direction of Lunaticks Lands to be ſafely kept without waſt, for them and their Families (if they have any) to be maintained out of their Profits; the reſt to be kept for their Uſe, and delivered unto them, when of Sane Memorie; ſo that they ſhall not be aliened.

Ch. XI. The King ſhall have Wreck of the Sea throughout the Realm Whales and Sturgeons taken any where within the Realm, except in Pla ces priviledged by the King.

Ch XII. The King ſhall have the Eſcheat of Norman Lands, to whoſe Fe ſoever they belong, ſaving the Service appertaining to the Chief Lord of the ſame Fee, &c.

Ch. XIII. The Heir of the King's Tenent in Chief dying, ſhall gain no Free hold, if he enter before he hath done Homage to, or received Seiſin the King; and if during that time he die ſeized, his Wife ſhall loſe he Dower.

Ch. XIV. The King ſhall have the Eſcheat of Archbiſhops and Biſhops Free hold Tenants, attainted of Felony, during the Vacation, whilſt their Tem poralities were in His Hands, ſaving the Services due to ſuch Pre lates.

Ch. XV. In a Grant of Land, or a Mannor with the Appurtenances by th King, Knights Fees, Advowſons, and Dowers do not paſs from Him, with out Special Words.

Ch XVI. The King ſhall have all the Goods of Felons Attaint, and Fug tives, and the Year, Day, and Waſt of their Lands; and then the Lan ſhall be delivered to the Lord of the Fee; but he may (if he pleaſe) fi before with the King, for the Year, Day, and Waſt; with certain Land excepted; as in Gloceſterſhire and Kent.

The next that follows (of the ſame 17 Edw. II.) ſeems rather to b a Declaration than a Statute, and directs in what Words a Freeman ſha do his Homage and Fealty, and a Villain his Fealty.

Statutum de terris Templariorum, made Anno 17 Edw. II.

This veſts the Lands belonging to the Order of Knights Templers lately diſſolved in that of the Knights-Hoſpitallers, commonly called of St. John of Jeruſalem; but this likewiſe is diſſolved in this King dom.

The Statute for view of Frank-pledge, made the 18th of thi King, gives you the Articles of the Charge in a Court Leet; to whic I refer.

There are divers other Laws and Ordinances of uncertain time, an alſo as uncertain whether they were made in Parliament, or only by th King and His Council; but moſt of them being now Obſolete, I ſha ſay no more of them.

A Brief Account from the Lord Chief Juſtice Hale's Manuſcript Treatiſe of the Progreſs of the Law during the Reign of King Edward the II.

THis Prince ſucceeded His Father; and though by reaſon of th Troubles and Uneaſineſs of His Reign, the very Law it ſelf ha many Interruptions, yet it preſerved its Current in a great meaſure ac cording to that Frame and State that His Father left it; for beſides th Records of Judicial Proceedings in the Courts in His Reign, there wer ſom ſome things that ſeem to give us great Light into the State of the Law in His Time.

As firſt His Statutes, and eſpecially that of the 17 Edw. II. de Prerogativa Regis; which (tho' it be called a Statute, yet) for the moſt part is but a Sum or Collection of certain Prerogatives that were known long before: As for Inſtance; The King's Wardſhip of Lands in Capite, attracting to it the Wardſhip of Lands held of others, and the Grant of a Mannor not carrying an Advowſon appendant, unleſs particularly named; as alſo the King's Title to the Eſcheats of the Lands of the Normans was in uſe from the firſt Defection of Normandy, under King John; beſides the King's Title to Wrecks, Royal Fiſhes, and many other Things which were Antient Prerogatives of the Crown.

The Reports of the Years and Terms of this Reign were not printed in one Entire Series of Time, only ſome Broken Caſes remain; yet there are many Entire Copies very well reported, wherein are divers Reſolutions agreeing with thoſe of the Time of Edw. I. The beſt Copy I know of at this day extant, is in the Library of Lincoln's-Inn, which gives us a fair Specimen of the Learning of the Judges and Pleaders of that Time; and I ſuppoſe it was from this Copy, as well as perhaps one of His own, that the late Serjeant Maynard publiſhed his Edition of the Reports or Year-Book of this King's Reign.

Affairs of the Church in His Time.

I Need not ſay much more of this than I have done already; only the Reader may take notice, that in the Third Year of this King, the Order of the Knights-Templars being diſſolved by the Council of Vienne in Dauphinè, was alſo totally ſuppreſſed in England, A. D. 1310. by the Sentence of the Synods of both the Provinces of Canterbury and York, as I have already mention'd in the precedent Hiſtory: but this King's Reign, being very unquiet and diſturbed by Foreign Wars and Domeſtick Troubles, He durſt not put the Act in execution, that had been made by His Father againſt the Papal Proviſions of Benefices by the Court of Rome; as I have likewiſe already obſerved; with which, as well as with the Biſhops here at home, tho' the King was obliged, for the Reaſons before given, always to keep fair; yet He ſtill continued to ſummon the Clergy to His Parliaments, not only by continuing the Clauſe of Præmanientes, begun by His Father, in all Writs of Summons to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, but alſo by iſſuing out two other Provincial, Parliamentary Writs, directed to the two Archbiſhops, requiring them to add their own Mandates to the Clergy of their Provinces, not to fail to do what the King by his other Summons required of them; the Form of which Writs are entred in the Regiſters of ſeveral Biſhops of that Time, and are likewiſe entred on the Rolls: You may ſee the Form of them in the Reverend Dr. Wake's State of the Church, (p. 71.) and alſo in Prynne's Parliamentary Regiſter, Part. 1. Num. 74. who alſo further obſerves, That as the firſt theſe kind of Writs is found to be in the Fifth of this King's Reign, ſo the laſt that appears upon Record, is, of the 14th of His Son Edward the Third; about which time it is very probable the King began to omit them, being not much concerned whether the Clergy came duly to Parliament, or not, ſo long as they appeared, and did His Buſineſs in their Convocations.

The End of the Reign of King Edward the Second.

8 IA 56

THE General Hiſtory
OF ENGLAND
BOTH Eccleſiaſtical and Civil.

VOL. III. BOOK XI.

Containing the Reign of King Edward III.

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxvii.

KING Edward the Second being by the Sentence of the Biſhops, Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, as alſo by His Own Solemn Reſignation, depoſed and laid aſide, [1.] His Eldeſt Son Edward, Duke of Aquitain, and Earl of Cornwal, then of the Age of Fourteen Years, was n the 20th Day of January elected and declared King by the Eſtates of e Kingdom, who reckoned this the firſt Day of His Reign; and there re He immediately acted as King, tho' it was before His Coronation; hich will appear by a * Writ directed to all the Sheriffs of England, mmanding them to proclaim His Peace in theſe Words:

The King to the Sheriff of Yorkſhire, Greeting; 'Since Edward late King of England, Our Father, by Counſel and Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men, and of the Commons of the ſaid Kingdom; as likewiſe of His Own Free Will, hath removed Himſelf from the Government of the ſaid Kingdom, willing and granting that We, as His Eldeſt Son and Heir, ſhould take upon Us the Rule and Government thereof; and We yielding to the Good Pleaſure of our ſaid Father, by the Counſel and Advice of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Great Men, and Commons aforeaid, have taken upon Us the Government of the ſaid Kingdom, and received he Homages and Fealties of the ſaid Prelates and Great Men, according to [1] T. W. Edward Duke of Aquitain elected and declared King by the Eſtates of the Kingdom.

* Rot. Clauſ. 1 *Ed.*3 part. 1. m 28. Vid. Dr. B's Append n.74. He iſſues out a Writ to proclaim His Peace.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

‘ Cuſtom, therefore deſiring our Peace, for the Quiet and Tranquility of our ‘ People, to be inviolably obſerved, We command, That forthwith, after ‘ ſight of theſe Preſents, you cauſe our Peace publickly to be proclaimed ‘ through your whole Bailiwick; forbidding all and ſingular, under pain of ‘ Diſheriſon, and loſing Life and Member, that they preſume not to infringe ‘ or violate Our Peace, but that all Men do proſecute their Suits and Acti‘ ons without violence, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Land, &c. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter the 29th of January.

[2.] Stanford. Gen Hiſt. p. 158. The King is knighted by Henry Earl of Lancaſter. [3.] Id. [4.] T. W. He is crown'd by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury.

Then [2.] three Days after, viz. on the firſt of February, the King was by His Couſin Henry Earl of Lancaſter, girded with the Sword of Knighthood, according to the Cuſtom of that Age, when this Honour was thought as a fit Introduction to the Higheſt Dignities. [3.] After this the King Himſelf knighted ſeveral other Young Noblemen, among whom were the three Sons of the Lord Mortimer. When theſe Ceremonies were over, [4.] He being Royally attended (according to Cuſtom) went to the Abby Church of Weſtminſter, and there was crown'd by Walter Reginald Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who preached a Sermon upon that occaſion, taking for his Text, Vox Populi, Vox Dei: The Deſign of which is ſo obvious, that it needs no Comment; and thereupon as an Earneſt of the Great Advantages His People were to reap from His Proſperous Reign, He iſſued forth a Proclamation of General Pardon, which gave occaſion for ſucceeding Kings to do the like upon their firſt coming to the Crown, following ſo Great a Precedent.

[5. Leland's Hiſt. Collect. 1 Vol. in Bib. Bod. p. 655. Twelve Guardians appointed over the K.

Now [5.] becauſe of the King's Tender Age, there were Twelve Guardians appointed Him, (to wit) five Biſhops, two Earls, and five Barons; the Names of them were theſe; Walter Reginald Archbiſhop of Canterbury, William Melton Archbiſhop of York, John Stratford Biſhop of Winchester, Thomas Cobham Biſhop of Worceſter, and Adam Orleton Biſhop of Hereford; the two Earls were Thomas of Brotherton Earl Marſhal, and Edmund of Woodſtock, Earl of Kent, both the King's Uncles; the Barons were John Lord Warren, Thomas Lord Wake, Henry Lord Piercy, Oliver Ingham, and John Lord Roſs; but [6.] over and above all theſe; and by General Conſent of the Lords in Parliament, and the Twelve Guardians themſelves, Henry Earl of Lancaſter, Lincoln, Leiceſter and Derby, the King's Couſin, was deputed to have the Chief Care of His Perſon.

[6.] T. W. Henry Earl of Lancaſter made Protector of His Perſon.

* Rot. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 3 m. 27. Part 1. print. in Dr. B's Ap. n. 81.

* The Parliament which was called in the late King's Time is ſtill continued.

The * Parliament which was called in the late King's Name, continued ſtill ſitting; for on the Third of February, two Days after the Coronation, we find all thoſe that had been any ways concern'd in the Quarrel of Thomas late Earl of Lancaſter, and had been baniſhed and diſinherited for the ſame, to have petitioned the King and Council in Parliament, that they might be reſtored to their Eſtates, with the Profits of them, from the time they had been wrongfully diſſeiſed; and accordingly it was granted by the Aſſent of the whole Parliament; ‘ That all ‘ Lands and Tenements which had been ſeiſed by reaſon of the ſaid Quar‘ rel or Contention (and which was affirm'd to be juſt by the whole ‘ Parliament) ſhould be reſtor'd as well in Ireland and Wales, as in Eng‘ land, together with their Profits and Arrears of Rent, except thoſe that ‘ had been received to the King's Uſe.

On

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

All perſons that came over with the Queen and Prince are indemnified for ſo doing, with the Heads of that Statute.

On the ſame Day all thoſe that came over with the Queen and the Prince Her Son, and thoſe that joined with them after their Arrival, were alſo pardon'd and indemniſy'd; the Preamble to this Pardon or Statute is very long and remarkable, as containing all the Cauſes and Reaſons of the late Revolution; which ſince it is printed at large in our *Statute-Books. I ſhall only give you the Heads of it, and refer the Reader, that deſires to be further ſatisfy'd, to the Statute it ſelf.

* Primo Ed. 1. cap. 1.

'It firſt recites the Baniſhment of the Two les Diſpenſers, Father and Son, by Act of Parliament: Secondly, Their Return without the Conſent of the Community of the Realm: Thirdly, Their cauſing the King to perſue Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, and other Barons and Commons that endeavoured to oppoſe it; in which Perſuit, the ſaid Earl, and divers other Great Men and People of the Realm, were put to death and diſinherited, and others impriſon'd, outlaw'd, or baniſhed. Fourthly, That after theſe Miſchiefs, Robert Baldock, and Edmund Earl of Arundel uſurped to themſelves Royal Power, ſo that the King could do nothing but as they counſelled Him, were it never ſo wrong. Fifthly, That after the Queen's going into France, by the King's Will, and Common Council of the Realm, the Perſons above mention'd excited the late King againſt the Son Edward, and the Queen His Conſort, ſo that they remained in a manner exil'd from the ſaid King Edward, and the Realm of England; wherefore it was neceſſary for our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, and the Queen His Mother, being in ſo great Jeopardy of themſelves in a Strange Countrey, ſeeing the Deſtructions, Oppreſſions and Diſheriſons which were notoriouſly committed in the Realm of England upon Holy Church, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, &c. and other Great Men, and the Community, by the ſaid Perſons abovementioned, by encroaching Royal Power to themſelves, to take as good Counſel as they might; and ſince they could not remedy the ſame unleſs they came into England with an Army of Men of War, and had by the Grace of God with that Puiſſance, and the help of the Great Men and the Commons of the Realm, vanquiſhed and deſtroy'd the ſaid Parties abovementioned, &c. Then follows the Enacting Part, viz. That therefore our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, upon certain Petitions and Requeſts made to Him in this Parliament, upon ſuch Articles as are there above rehearſed, by the Common Council of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men, and by the Commonalty of the Realm there preſent, by His Commandment hath provided, ordained and eſtabliſhed in manner following:

'* That no Great Man, nor other, of what Eſtate, Dignity or Condition he be, that came over with the ſaid King that now is, and with the Queen His Mother, into the Realm of England, nor any other then dwelling in England, that came with the ſaid King that now is, and the Queen in aid of them, to perſue their ſaid Enemies, in which perſuit the King His Father was taken, and put in Ward, and yet remaineth in Ward; ſhall be impeached, moleſted, or grieved in Perſon, or in Goods, in the King's Court, or any other Court, for the perſuit of the ſaid King, the taking and with-holding of His Body, or perſuit of any other, or taking of their Perſons, Goods, or Death of any Man, or any other thing perpetrated or committed in the ſaid purſuit; from the day that the ſaid King and Queen did arrive, till the day of the Co-

* Ib.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

'ronation of the ſame King. There alſo follow divers other Clauſes in this Statute, but ſeeing they make not much to our purpoſe, I omit 'em; this being ſufficient to ſhew you, that no taking up of Arms againſt the King is juſtifiable according to the Common Laws of England; however it may really prove for the preſervation of the Common Rights and Liberties of the People; and therefore all thoſe that had any ways contributed or aſſiſted in this Revolution, did not think themſelves ſe'cure even from the preſent King (in caſe He ſhould ever change His Mind) without this Act of Parliament to indemnifie them for what they had done. But had the Times turn'd, and King Edward the Second recover'd the Throne, I doubt whether this Pardon would have then done them any Service. But to come to the Hiſtory.

* Rot. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 3. m. 16. Dorſ.

Commiſſioners appointed to go into Scotland to treat of Peace with the Scots, who had lately entred the Borders.

[1.] Thomas Southwell's Chron. cited by John Stow.

The Parliament being ended, * Commiſſioners were appointed to go into Scotland to treat of Peace; for the Scots preſuming on the late Diſturbances in England, had now broke the Truce they had lately made with the Depoſed King, and [1.] on the day of this King's Coronation, had entred the Borders, and endeavour'd to have taken the Caſtle of Norham by ſurprize; but tho' ſixteen of them had mounted the Walls in the Night, yet the Governor Sir Robert Mannors having had notice of their Deſign, was ſo ſtrict upon his Guard, that by the vigilance of his Men he took ſome of them Priſoners, and put the reſt to the Sword; upon which thoſe that were without immediately march'd off.

[2.] Hector Boeth. Buchan.

The Scotiſh K. ſends to defie King Edward.

The [2.] Peace being thus openly broken, Robert King of Scots reſolved to perſue the Advantage He thought He had got through the Diviſions in England, and the Minority of their Prince, tho' He Himſelf was much weakned with Years, as well as Infirmities; therefore not long after ſent King Edward a ſhort and briſk Defiance, telling Him He would ſoon invade England with Fire and Sword.

[3.] Hect. ib. Buch. l. 8.

The Cauſe of this Breach, according to the Scotiſh Hiſtorians.

[3.] But to ſay ſomewhat further of the Cauſe of this War; the Scotiſh Writers impute it to ſome Fraud or Colluſion of the late Engliſh Ambaſſadors, who were now return'd without obtaining any thing they came for, yet are accuſed for having gone about to enſnare the Scotiſh Nation; but what thoſe Frauds or Deceits were they then uſed, theſe Writers do not tell us, nor, I believe were able to aſſign any; for it appears by the Authorities already cited from our Hiſtorians, that the Scots had broken the Truce before any Ambaſſadors could be ſent to them by the Young King Edward; and as for the Old one, we do not find He ſent any to them for two Years before His Depoſing, nor was England in a Condition either at the latter end of the late Reign, or beginning of this, to have renewed a War with the Scots; and therefore it is moſt probable that it was undertaken by them upon the Motives already mention'd; as alſo upon the ſpecious Pretence of reſtoring the Depos'd to His Crown and Liberty. But to proſecute our Hiſtory.

[4.] Id. Ib.

The Scots invade England with 20000 Men.

The [4.] Scots in perſuance of this late Defiance, had towards Eaſter invaded the Engliſh Borders with an Army of about Twenty thouſand Horſe, and ſome few Foot, which was ſo order'd, that they might make the more ſudden Invaſion, do greater Miſchiefs, and then retire the more ſpeedily, if there were occaſion: This Army was commanded by the Earl of Murrey, and the Lord Thomas Randolph, two experienced Generals; for their King Robert being diſabled (as I ſaid a little above) with Years ears and Sickneſs was unable to appear in Perſon: In the mean while] King Edward much incenſed at the late Defiance, ſent His Uncle omas Brotherton Earl of Norfolk, with a ſelect Detachment of Sol- rs to Newcaſtle; where he muſter'd them about the Beginning of e; and the Lord Robert Vfford, and the Lord John Mowbray, were ewiſe ſent with another Body of Men, to reinforce the Lord Lucy en Governor of Carliſle. And at the ſame time alſo the King iſſued t His General Summons to the reſt of His Subjects, requiring them ~~ſuch a~~ day x to meet Him at Newcastle ~~York~~, well provided with Horſe and rms. [1.] But not relying on theſe alone, He ſent to the Lord n de Beaumont, Brother to the Earl of Haynault, deſiring him to me over to His Aſſiſtance. This Lord, in Complyance with theſe ſires, came over accordingly into England, attended by divers Lords d Knights of Haynault, Flanders, and Artois, with Five Hundred en at Arms; which together with thoſe that not long after arrived der the Conduct of the Lord William, Son to the Duke of Juliers,] made up in all about Two Thouſand Foreigners. This I take no- e of, becauſe the Reader may obſerve, that it hath not been unu- l for the Kings of this Realm, in times of great Danger, to make e of the Aſſiſtance of Foreign Mercenary Forces; eſpecially if their n, by long Peace, or frequent ill Succeſs, have proved diſpirited d unwarlike.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

[5.] Froiſſart Vol. 1. c. 18. The K. ſends His Uncle Thomas Earl of Norfolk with a ſelect Party to reſiſt the Scots.

[1.] Id. ib. And receives Aſſiſtance from the Ld. John de Beaumont, Brother to the E. of Haynault.

[2.] H. Knyghton, c. 2551.

x on ye Monday before the Feast of our Lords Ascension to meet him at New castle upon Tyne, wth their Horses & armes, & all their usual service, ready to march with ye nobles and great men of the Land against Robert Bruce, & the rest of the Kings Enemies. This Summons is by way of Writt directed to all ye Earls, Barons, Bishops, Abbots, and Tenants in Capite of England, and is entered on the Close Rolls of this year p. 1. m. 2. d. vid. R–'s IV. Vol. p. 481. 482.

King [3] Edward being arrived at York, ſtayed there about the pace of Six Weeks, to muſter and review His Army; But part of is time (as much as could be ſpared from His Military Affairs) was ent in Jollity, Feaſting and Dancing, for the Entertainment of theſe oreign Princes; the Queen-Mother being there in Perſon, with the dies of Her Court. But this Mirth was allay'd by a very ſad and nlucky Accident; [4.] for the Evening after one of theſe Enter- inments, there happened a great Fray between the Engliſh Ar- ers, and the Servants and Horſe-Boys of the Foreign Auxiliaries, s often happens in Armies compoſ'd of divers Nations) in which any of the latter were ſlain, as alſo above Eighty of the Engliſh rchers: Yet no ſooner was this Tumult a little quieted through the ing's Command, as well as the Queen's Mediation, [5.] but the Fo- ign Soldiers reſolved to be revenged; and therefore combining toge- er, they ſet upon the Archers of Northampton and Lincolnſhires, and lled that night above Three Hundred of them. At this the Engliſh ere ſo enraged, that they were going to join all in a Body and fall up- n the Foreigners, and cut them all to pieces; and would have done , had not the King interpos'd His Authority, and likewiſe ſet a rong Guard of Part of the Army to ſecure them from being again ſaulted by the Engliſh; who could never endure to ſee Foreign Mercina- es preferr'd before them, either in Favour or Command. x But to come ſomething more conſiderable.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. K. Edward arrives at York with His Army.

[4.] Id. ib. c. 18. A great Fray between the Engliſh Archers and the Foreign Auxiliaries.

[5.] H. K ib. The Foreigners reſolving to be revenged, ſet upon the Engliſh Archers, and killed a great many of them.

x But the Author of the History call'd Eulogium relates this matter after a more hainous manner viz: that the Townsmen of York being incensed against the Heynaulters for debauching with their wives and daughters set upon them in the streets, whathereupon [illegible] set fire to the Town, so that ~~the whole~~ almost the whole street of St. Nicolas in the suburbs was burnt down, ~~which~~ this caused a very fierce engagement between them which began in the morning before Sun riseing, in which above 500 Heynaulters were slain and of the English 242.

Whilſt the King continued at York, a [1.] Treaty of Peace was ſet n foot with certain Ambaſſadors ſent from the King of Scots, and ree Weeks ſpent about it; but not being able to come to any Agree- ent with the King's Council that were appointed to treat with them, e Preparations of War were again renewed, and the Mareſchals of e Camp gave notice, that all Men ſhould be ready to march upon e firſt Signal. [2.] Then about the Beginning of June, the King, attend-

[1.] Caxton's Chron. Certain Ambaſſadors ſent from the Scots to treat of Peace, but without any effect.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

The King with the Flower of the Engliſh Nobility marches againſt the Scots, who thereupon retire into the Biſhoprick of Durham.

[3] Holingſh. Hiſt. Scot. p. 228.

attended by the Earl of Kent, together with the Flower of the Nobility of England, beſides the Foreign Princes above-mention'd, ſet ou for Scotland; but before they could get ſo far as Newcaſtle, [3.] the Scotiſh Army had privately retreated into the Biſhoprick of Durham, without ſo much as being ever encountered by the Engliſh, unleſs it was b ſome of the Country-Militia, whom they quickly put to flight.

The K. finding the Scotiſh Army retreated, marches in perſuit of them.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib.

King Edward drawing nearer the Borders of Scotland, and finding the Army of that Country afraid of the mighty Numbers of th Engliſh Forces, then above Sixty Thouſand retreating to entrenc themſelves in ſome Place of Safety and Advantage; He marche in perſuit of them, being directed by the Smoak of the Houſe and Villages, which the Scots had ſet fire to in their Retrea But after a Day or two's March, when the King found the Enem (chiefly conſiſting in Light-Horſe without much Baggage) were no to be overtaken, and that His Men were quite tired thro' the tediou neſs of the Way; He then held a Council of War with His Gener Officers, to conſider what was beſt to be done on this Occaſion; An after mature Deliberation, it was there unanimouſly reſolved, That ſe ing in what a Condition the Engliſh-Army then was, the King wi the Flower of his Forces, leaving their heavy Baggage and Carriage behind them under a ſtrong Guard, ſhould paſs the Tyne, and meet th Scots in their return home. This was immediately put in Executio the King Himſelf undertaking it with a Flying-Army, conſiſtin chiefly of Horſe; and after a March of above Twenty Miles, the the next day got over the River, tho' with much difficulty, by re ſon of the abundance of looſe and ſlippery Stones that lay in their wa When they had compaſſed this, and were got a Day's March furthe without ſeeing or hearing of the Scots, they fell into ſuch lamentab want of Proviſions, and beſides found themſelves ſo fatigu'd and ha raſs'd with Five or Six days continual March, that the King with H Forces were forced to quit the Barren Country of Northumberland, a repaſſing the Tyne again enter'd the Biſhoprick of Durham; Whe they had not been long, but Thomas Rooksby an Eſquire of Yorkſhir brought Him News, that the Enemy was ſtill encamped in Englan three or four Miles off upon a high Hill in Weredale. The King, for th Intelligence, beſtowed upon this Gentleman no leſs than one Hundre Pounds per Ann. to him and his Heirs for ever, beſides the Honour Knighthood, which He alſo ſuper-added at the ſame time. X

The K. leaving His Baggage, &c. behind Him, goes with the Flower of His Army to find out the Scots, but falls into great Wants and Difficulties in the Execution of it.

The Scots are diſcover'd where they lay, and the Perſon that brought the News is well rewarded.

X A Copy of the same
Thomas de Rokesby's Patent for this 100li pr annum is entred on the Patent Rolls of [illegible]
[illegible] 1. Ed. 3 p. 2. m
13. Dors: vid. R— IV. vol
p. 312.

[4] Id. ib.

The King coming to the Banks of the River Were, the Scots will not permit Him to paſs it; whereupon He ſends them a Meſſage, with their Anſwer to it.

The [4.] King then bent His Forces towards the Enemy; but whe He came to the Bank of the River Were, He found the Scots Arm drawn up at the Foot of an adjacent Mountain, in order of Batte Upon which King Edward alſo ſet His Forces in Battel-Array; But t cunning Scots underſtood their Advantage better, than to let the E gliſh quietly paſs over the River to them; and it was as unſafe for the ~~too~~, to go over and fight the Engliſh. Wherefore King Edward by t Advice of His General Officers, ſent His Heralds to the Scot Camp, to let their Generals know, that if they were willing to p over the River, in order to a Battel, the King would give them fr Liberty; or if they did not like that, He deſired the ſame leave f Himſelf and His Army. Upon this Propoſal, the Scots having ca led a Council of War, the valiant Lord Douglas one of their General was willing to embrace the Propoſal; but the Lord Randolph bein mor more prudent and cautious declined it, and return'd the King an Anſwer to this effect: That the Scotiſh Lords were better adviſed than to follow the Counſel of an Enemy; That they were reſolved to maintain their Poſt, and not to quit it, ſo long as they had the Advantage; and therefore would accept of neither of theſe Propoſals; and if the Engliſh did not like it, they might help themſelves as well as they could. After this Anſwer, the Scotiſh Generals leaving a ſufficient Force to guard the Paſs over the River, retreated to their former Encampment on the Mountain: And thus for three days both Armies lay facing each other, neither Party daring to paſs the River, for fear of the Advantage the other might get over them; ſo that King Edward had no way left (being now between the Enemy and home) but to block up their Army, and ſtarve them for want of Victuals and Forage: For he underſtood by certain Priſoners, that their Oatmeal, Wine and Salt were almoſt ſpent, and then they would in a ſhort time have nothing but Fleſh left them to ſubſiſt on, which, without Bread or Oatmeal, could be no grateful nor wholeſom Diet; but the Scots were not ſo eaſily to be ſtarved, for (as [5.] Froiſſart informs us) they were then ſo abſtemious and patient in time of War, that for a good while they could live on Fleſh half-boiled, and drink out of the next River: Nor yet had they any Pans or Cauldrons to dreſs their Meat in; for what Beaſts they found, (as they always did good ſtore in thoſe Northern-Parts) they would ſeeth them in their own Skins ſtretched out on Stakes in the manner of Cauldrons, and having thus ſod their Meat, they would take a little Iron Plate, which they uſed to truſs upon their Saddles; and laying it on the Fire, take forth ſome Oatmeal, (which they carried behind them in little Bags for that purpoſe) and having kneaded and mix'd it with Water, made Cakes of it; which being thus baked on the Pan, they uſed for Bread to Comfort and Strengthen their Stomachs, when they did eat Fleſh. This I have taken notice of, to let the Reader ſee, that the ordinary way of living among the Scotiſh Nation in that Age, was much the ſame with that of the Highlanders at this day.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

[5.] Id. ib.
The manner of the Scots Diet in time of War.

But [1.] tho' the Scots were not eaſily to be ſtarved, yet whether they wanted Forage for their Horſes, or that they had a mind to encamp in a Place of greater Safety, I will not determine; but it is certain, about four days after, they diſlodged in the Night, and marched off to another Mountain near the Side of the ſame River, having a great Wood on the one hand of them, and a large Bogg on the other. This Place lay in Stanhope-Park belonging to the Biſhop of Durham. When King Edward perceived the Scots were removed, and had learned by His Scouts the Place in which they were encamped, He immediately marched after them with His Army; yet having the River ſtill between Him and the Enemy, it was to as little purpoſe as before: And tho' He lay there for the Space of above Fifteen days, with a deſign to block up and ſtarve the Scottiſh Army, it ſignify'd nothing; for they did not only make a ſafe Retreat into their own Country, but alſo put the King in very great danger of His Life and Liberty. For the firſt night after the Removal of their Camp, the [2.] Lord Douglas having Intelligence that the Engliſh kept but a careleſs Guard, he paſſed the River beyond the Engliſh Camp, and with two Hundred Men at Arms well mounted, broke into it, and (as the [3.] Scottiſh

[1.] Id. ib.
The Scots decamp in the night, and take up their Quarters in Stanhope-Park.

The K. perſuing the Scots, is in great danger of being taken Priſoner.
[2.] Froiſſ. id. ib.

[3.] Hec. Boeth & Buch. ibid.

The Relation of the Scotiſh Hiſtorians not probable in all Circumſtances

* Col. 2552.

A better Relation from H. de Knyghton of this Action.

Writers relate) ſlew Three Hundred Engliſh before ever he arrived at the King's Tent, ſome of the Cords of which he cut, and had certainly either killed or taken Him Priſoner, had He not immediately leaped out of His Bed, and ſlipped away in the dark among His Guards; upon which Douglas retreated with little or no loſs. But it is not very likely that the Scots ſhould come ſo near the King's Tent, and kill ſo many Men in his Paſſage thither without ever alarming Him or His Guards; and therefore what * Henry de Knyghton reports, is much more probable: That the Lord Douglas intending to take the King Priſoner, or kill Him if he fail'd in it, (either of which would make an end of the War) enter'd the Camp by Stealth with ſome of the ſtouteſt of the Scotiſh Nation, and counterfeiting himſelf an Engliſh Officer going the Rounds, he cried out, Ha! St. George, no Watch; until at laſt arriving near the Royal Tent, he firſt ſlew the King's Chamberlain, and then a Chaplain, who coming to awake Him, interpos'd his Perſon between Him and the Lord Douglas; upon which the King ſtarting out of His Bed, and ſnatching up His Sword, therewith defended Himſelf, till the Guards that lay near came into His Aſſiſtance: Which Douglas perceiving, he immediately retreated; and it being very dark, got off ſafe, tho' with the loſs of many of his Men. This is the beſt Account that our Writers give of this Action, and ſeems much more probable than the other; all the Advantage that the Engliſh obtain'd by it was, that it made them ſtand better upon their Guard for the future.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. H. K. ib.

The Scots being in want of Proviſions, ſteal away by night.

When [3.] the Scots had lain thus encamped for about a Fortnight longer, they began to be in great want of Bread, Salt, and other Neceſſaries, though they had Fleſh enough; and finding they could gain no more Advantages over the Engliſh by ſurprize, and not daring to give them open Battel, who ſo much exceeded them in Number; they reſolved to make a private and ſpeedy Retreat homeward: Whereupon their Generals gave them notice, that they ſhould all be ready to march under their ſeveral Banners at the time prefixed, but without letting them know whither, for fear the Engliſh ſhould any ways have intelligence of it: Yet thus much the King learned from a Scotiſh Knight, who had been lately taken Priſoner, and from thence concluding, that they intended to ſurprize Him, and make a General Aſſault upon His Camp by night; He immediately commanded His Forces to be drawn up in three Battallions, the middlemoſt of which was to ſtand before the Camp, and the other two on each ſide, to receive the Scots which way ſoever they ſhould attempt to fall upon it. But when the Engliſh had ſtood to their Arms all night, they had notice by two Scotiſh Trumpeters taken by their Scouts, that their Army had ſilently decamped about Midnight, and having marched away through the Woods, had now got ſeveral Miles before them: Upon which intelligence the King called a Council of War, and it being there conſidered, that the Scotiſh Army conſiſting chiefly of Horſe, would certainly reach their own Country before the Engliſh could overtake them, and the Autumn being far ſpent, that it was too late to undertake another Expedition this Year; beſides the great Expence of Money, and Loſs of Men and Horſes by long Fatigues, and the Diſeaſes of the Camp; I ſay, upon all theſe Conſiderations it was at laſt reſolved, That the King with the whole Army ſhould preſently return home into England.

The K. having intelligence of their March, makes His Army ſtand to their Arms.

The Scots being gone, the King returns into England with a great Loſs of Men and Money.

Before [4] they departed, many of the Engliſh went to view the Deſerted Camp of the Scots, as well out of curioſity as hopes of Plunder; but they found nothing worth the carrying away, beſides the Carkaſſes of above Five Hundred Deer and Black Cattle, which lay there ready killed; and Ten Thouſand Pair of Shoes made of raw Hides, with the Hair on: And among the reſt there were Five poor Engliſh Priſoners faſt bound to Trees, with their Legs broken, that ſo they might not eſcape to give intelligence; of whom their Countrymen took all the care they could.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

[4.] Froiſſ. ib. The Engliſh view the Place of the Scots Camp, but find nothing worth taking.

Then [5.] the Engliſh Army decamped, and marched towards Durham, where the King found all His Carriages and Baggage ſafe; and marching from thence to York, He was there received with great Joy by the Queen His Mother, and Her Retinue. The King ſometime after, having diſmiſſed the Lord Beaumont and the reſt of the Foreign Commanders with great Preſents, and the Common Soldiers with ſome Money paid down, and the reſt to be ſatisfied in a ſhort time, He return'd into the Southern Parts.

[5.] Id. ib. The King arrives at York, and is joyfully received by the Qu. His Mother; the Foreign Forces are paid and diſmiſſed.

Thus ended this Unfortunate and Inglorious Expedition, which happen'd thro' the Treachery or bad Conduct of the Engliſh Commanders, the King Himſelf being very young. This ill Succeſs is chiefly laid at the door of the Lord Roger Mortimer, as you will find hereafter, whereby the Engliſh loſt one of the greateſt Advantages over the Scots that ever they had; for if the King had then divided His Army, which was doubly ſuperior to the Number of the Scots, and had left the one half of it to defend the Borders, and with the other had marched immediately into Scotland, He might in all probability have reduced that Kingdom, or elſe have forced the Scots to a Battel; and had He therein proved victorious, He might have gone where He had pleaſed. But theſe are the Misfortunes of young Princes, who tho' they prove afterwards of wonderful Courage and Prudence, yet often receive great Defeats and Loſſes in their Minority, through the want of ſufficient Fidelity and Conduct in thoſe who have the chief Government and Adminiſtration of Affairs.

The King for want of good Conduct loſes a great Advantage over the Scots.

But to put an end to the Affairs of Scotland: [1.] Not long after King Edward's Departure into England, the Scots rais'd a great Army, and, according to their wonted Cuſtom, entred Northumberland, and waſted and plunder'd it, except the Caſtles, or other ſtrong Places; which the reſt of the Inhabitants of the Marches hearing of, they were glad to redeem themſelves from Plunder by the Payment of a great Sum of Money; and thereby obtain'd a Truce till Whitſontide following.

[1.] Chr. Lan.

We ſhall now look back and ſee what had been doing in England during this Expedition; [2.] the Depos'd K. had hitherto been kept Priſoner in ſafe, but eaſie Cuſtody by Thomas E. of Lancaſter His Coſin, who began to pity His Condition; He ſeemed not to want any thing but the Company of His Q. who tho' She ſent Him ſome Suits of Cloathes and Linen, yet would never ſee Him, either through an Averſion She had to His Perſon, (or as others relate) through the Inſtigation of the Lord Mortimer, who perſwaded Her that the King intended to kill Her when ever She could get Her into His Power. But this is more certain, that this Lord, together with Adam de Orleton Biſhop of Hereford, fearing that K. Edward ſhould eſcape out of Priſon, and recover His Crown, they might be made to ſuffer ſeverely for what they had acted againſt Him, ſo far prevail'd upon the Queen's Weakneſs and Fears, that She gave Her Conſent He ſhould be made away during Her Son's Abſence; in order to which about the beginning of April, He was taken from the Cuſtody of the Earl of Lancaſter, and delivered to Sir John Matravers, and Sir John Gurney, Knights, being Perſons that would do any thing the Court required of them: Theſe had Commiſſion to enter any of the King's Caſtles, and there to command in chief as long as they pleas'd to ſtay there; by virtue of which they remov'd the late King privately from Kenelworth-Caſtle to that of Corfe in Dorſetſhire, and from thence after a while to Briſtol-Caſtle; where tho' He was kept very privately, yet it being known to ſome of the Chief Citizens, they ſecretly combined to ſet Him at liberty, and convey Him to ſome ſafe Place beyond Sea; of which Deſign, when it was ready to be put in execution, His Keepers having ſome notice, they preſently removed Him from thence to Berkley Caſtle in Gloceſterſhire; and I muſt not omit telling you, that in His Paſſage thither, He was treated with great Indignity; for the above-cited [3.] Writer of His Life informs us, That being made to ride upon a ſorry Jade, bareheaded, Gourney; one of His Keepers, as they paſſed by a certain Grange, clapped upon His Head a Crown of Straw, adding this Flout, * Fare forth Sir King; nor did they end here, for having a mind to cut off the Hair of His Head and Beard, that He might be more diſguis'd from the knowledge of any they ſhould chance to meet with, they made Him alight at a certain Ditch in their way, from whence an Inſolent Fellow fetched Him ſome Cold and Dirty Water in an old Helmet, as He ſat on a Mole-hill to be trim'd, ſaying, That Cold Water ſhould ſerve Him for that time; to which the Poor Prince reply'd, That in ſpight of them He would have Warm. This Action, ſince it is ſo well atteſted, I will not queſtion, tho' I think I juſtly may, whether this Reply, and the Tears He then ſhed, ſhew'd that Heroick Greatneſs of Mind, which is above ſuch Reſentmens of Mean Injuries and Affronts: But to let that paſs; So ſoon as they arriv'd at Berkley-Caſtle, the Lord thereof was diſmiſſed from having any Command there, or (as was ſuppos'd) willingly removed to another Seat; for which, as being thought privy to the Intended Deſign, he was after queſtion'd in Parliament, and put in great danger of his Life, as you will find hereafter. But to come to the Matter in hand.

[2.] Sir Thomas de la More. A Relation of the Sufferings of the late K.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

He is taken out of Cuſtody of the Earl of Lancaſter.

And is privately removed from one Caſtle to another.

[3.] Id ib. He is uſed with great Barbarity.

* i. e. In Old Engliſh, Advance Sir King.

The late King is brought to Berkley-Caſtle.

[4.] So ſoon as the Conſpirators had brought the late King to this Place, they lodged Him in a high Turret of the Caſtle, where tho' by Ill and unwholſome Diet, and placing dead and ſtinking Carkaſſes near His Chamber, as alſo by unworthy Treatment and Reproaches, they found they could neither make Him fall ſick, nor yet cauſe Him to make Himſelf away, they reſolv'd to take a ſpeedier Courſe, and after they had entertain'd Him with a plentiful Supper that He might ſleep the ſounder, and be the leſs ſuſpicious of their Wicked Deſign, they came at Midnight with about Fifteen Ruffians into His Chamber, and laying a heavy Table upon His Upper Parts, they made Him turn to ſuch a Poſture, [5.] as that they could eaſily thruſt a Hollow Pipe through His Poſteriors into His Body, and through that a ſmall ſharp Iron heated red hot, which they turn'd up and down, until with unſpeakable Torments and intolerable Groans which were heard by the Neighbourhood, He at laſt expired: This Cruel Death they choſe to put Him

[4.] Id. Ib. He is there lodg'd in a Turret with Dead Carkaſſes plac'd near His Chamber.

[5.] T. W. The Conſpirators enter in the Night, and murther Him in a moſt cruel manner.

Him to, becauſe it concealed the Violence done to His Body; and to put a better Colour upon the Matter, they gave out, that He died ſuddenly: and expoſing the Corps to publick view, they ſent for the Prior of Briſtol, and Abbot of Gloceſter, with the Burgeſſes of thoſe Towns, as alſo for ſeveral Knts and Perſons of Quality; but though they could not ſee the Skin any where broken, yet from the Blood that was ſetled in His Face, divers of the wiſer and more penetrating ſort concluded, that His death was violent, but the manner of it was not diſcovered till ſome time after, when the Authors, as well as Actors in it were called to a juſt Account for this Horrid Villany: Such was the Tragical End of this Unfortunate Prince, in the Forty third Year of His Age; who however ill He had carried Himſelf, yet certainly did not deſerve ſo cruel a Treatment from thoſe who had been His Subjects, and ought to have been His Keepers, and not His Murtherers.

They give out that He died ſuddenly, and ſend for the Prior of Briſtol, and Abbot of Gloceſter, with divers Perſons of Quality to view the Corps.

I ſhall ſay no more of this Tragical Story, but [1] that the Abbots and Monks of St. Peter's in Gloceſter, to whom this Prince had been a great Benefactor, out of Gratitude fetch'd His Corps from Berkley-Caſtle, and with a decent, tho' private Funeral, bury'd it in their own Church, where His Son, Edward the Third, erected to His Memory a fair Monument of Alabaſter, with His Portraiture thereon, under the Second Arch, on the North ſide of the Altar, betwixt two Pillars, and where it is to be ſeen at this day. But to come to ſomewhat more diverting:

[1.] Sanford's Geneal. Hiſt. p. 152.

Which is buried at Gloceſter by the Abbot of that Place.

The King preſently after His Return from His Scotiſh Expedition, held a Parliament at Lincoln on the morrow after the Feaſt of Holy-Croſs, or 13th of September, as appears by the * Writ of Summons on Record, which is very long, there being recited in it the principal Matters that happened in this War, with the eſcape of the Scots at Stanhope, much after the ſame manner as hath been already related: This bears date at Stanhope the 7th of Auguſt; but tho' the Parliament met at the time appointed, yet I cannot find what was done in it; but certainly nothing very conſiderable, ſince our Hiſtorians are ſo ſilent concerning it, and the Records thereof are loſt.

* Rot. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 3. m. 16. Dorſ.

[2.] So ſoon as this Parliament was over, the King returned to London, where notwithſtanding His late ill Succeſs, He was joyfully met by the Mayor and Aldermen without the City; for He was a Young Prince of Great Hopes, and expreſs'd more than ordinary Spirit in His Countenance as well as Actions: Not long after His Return He held a [3.] Parliament, or rather Great Council of the Nobility, at Weſtminſter, on St. Brice's day, or 13th of November, in which the chief Matter I find then to have been tranſacted, was, that He not only confirm'd to the Londoners all their former Priviledges, but granted them divers new ones, ordaining, 'That the Lord Mayor, or His Deputy, for the time being, ſhould ſit as the King's Chief Juſtice in all Places within the Liberties; and that every Alderman, who had been Mayor, ſhould be a Juſtice of the Peace within His own Ward: He alſo granted unto the Citizens the Fee Farm of London for three hundred Pounds per Ann. *And that * the Lawful Franchiſes of the City ſhould not be ſeized into the King's Hands, but only on occaſion of Abuſe or Miſuſage, or for Treaſon or Rebellion countenanced or done by the whole City:* [4] He then alſo further ordained 'That Southwark ſhould be under the Government of the 'City

[2.] T. W.

He is joyfully received by the Mayor and Aldermen of London.

[3.] Jo. de. Tinmouth in Bib. Lambeth, ad hunc Ann.

A Great Council held at Weſtminſter, wherein the Liberties of the City are confirmed and increaſed.

Coke's 2d Inſt. f. 20.

[4.] Stow's Survey of London. p. 248.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxvii.

'City, and that the Mayor of London, as Bailiff of Southwark ſhould 'depute under Him the Bailiff of the Borough. This deſerves our notice.

[5] Holingſhead ex Regiſtro hujus Abbat. vocat. Werketon. quod etiam vidi penes Dom. Rich. Gipps.

A Relation of the great Riot and Inſurrection made by the People of St Edmunds-Bury againſt the Abbot and Monks. They imprison the Prior and Monks, and force them to ſeal an Obligation of 1 000 l.

I ſhall here for want of Matters of greater moment, take notice of a notable Riot and Inſurrection that happened in the beginning of the Year upon this occaſion; [5] The Inhabitants of the Town of St. Edmund's Bury in Suffolk having a Quarrel with the Abbots and Monks of that Monaſtery, about their Priviledges, made a great Riot and Inſurrection twice this Year againſt them; the firſt time was on Wedneſday after the Converſion of St Paul, or 25th day of January, when Robert de Texton, and Richard Drayton, with a great many others, in a warlike manner aſſaulted the Gates of the ſaid Abby, and breaking them down, entred it by force, and beating and wounding the Monks and what Servants they met with, plunder'd the Houſe of a vaſt quantity of Plate, Veſtments, Books, &c. beſides Five hundred Pounds in Silver, and Three thouſand Florins of Gold, all which they took and carried away, together with ſeveral Antient Charters of King Cnute, Hardicnute His Son, and Edward the Confeſſor; as alſo thoſe of King Henry the Firſt and Third, granted to the ſaid Abby, with the Bulls of ſeveral Popes; and not contented with this, they ſeized likewiſe Peter Clopton, Prior of the ſaid Abby, with divers of the Monks, and imprisoned them in a place called the Leaden-Hall, till almoſt Candlemas, and then they brought them back again into their Chapter-Houſe, and there made them ſeal an Obligation to one Kempe and Others therein named, of Ten thouſand Pounds, as alſo a Releaſe of all Actions, Debts, Treſpaſſes, &c. againſt the ſaid Kempe and the reſt therein named.

* Id. ib. After which they renew the Riot, ſeize upon the Abbot and Monks, and keep them Priſoners till they ſeal'd a Charter, whereby the Inhabitants of the Town were to be made a Corporation.

* After which Riot, the Abbot being now return'd to Bury on the Thurſday after Candlemas, the Perſons above mentioned enter'd the Abby again, and ſeizing the Abbot himſelf, and certain of His Monks, kept them Priſoners till the next day, when they made them to ſeal other Writings, and among the reſt a Charter, whereby the Abbot made the Inhabitants of the ſaid Town to be a Free Corporation, conſiſting of a Bailiff and Aldermen, beſides divers other Priviledges; and then made them ſeal to the ſaid Town, as to a Corporation, three ſeveral Obligations, amounting in all to Seven thouſand Pounds, and alſo a Releaſe of all Treſpaſſes and Damages; for they had at the ſame time not only plunder'd the Abby afreſh of a great deal more Plate and other things, but had deſtroy'd two Houſes belonging thereunto in the ſaid Town, let out the Fiſh-bounds, and cut down a great many Trees, all which amounted in the whole to the value of Forty thouſand Pounds.

* Id. ib. Upon the Abbot's proſecuting them at Law, they renew the Riot, and burn down the Abby Gates, with ſeveral Houſes.

* Nor did they ſtop here; but finding the Abbot and Monks had begun to ſue them at Law for what had been already done, the Townſmen being aſſiſted by divers rude and diſorderly People out of the Country, on St. Luke's Day again took up Arms, and aſſaulting the Abbey-Gates, ſet them on fire, and burnt them, with ſeveral Houſes adjoining: Which Riot they continued not only the next, but for two or three days following, till they had burnt down and deſtroyed all the Farms and Granges belonging to the Abbey, not only in Bury, but within three or four Miles round about it; together with all the Corn, and other Grain to a very great value. Complaint of which Inſurrections being made to the King, He thereupon iſſued out a Writ or Com-

miſſion

Anno Dom. M cccxxvii.

miſſion to Sir John Stonore, Walter Friskeney, and other Juſtices of Oyer nd Terminer, by virtue of which, the Offenders in the ſaid Riot were ondemned to pay the Sum of Forty Thouſand Pounds; and the ſaid ichard Drayton and the reſt of the Criminals that could be found, were ommitted to Priſon.

The King upon Complaint of this Riot iſſues out a Commiſſion againſt all the Offenders, by which the Juſtices proceed with great ſeverity.

* And beſides this, there was alſo an Indictment preſerr'd againſt the id Richard Drayton and the reſt, for the Second Riot by them comitted as aforeſaid; and this was upon a Commiſſion directed to the rl of Norfolk, Lord Marſhal of England, Thomas Burdolf, and others, virtue of which nineteen of the ſaid Rioters were taken and hanged, nd one that would not plead preſs'd to death; beſides which all the Inabitants of the ſaid Town, becauſe they did not hinder the ſaid Maefactors in the beginning of their Inſurrection (as they ought to have one) were condemned to pay the Abbot and Convent, towards their oſſes and Damages the Sum of One hundred and Forty thouſand ounds; a vaſt Sum even in our Times.

* Id. ib.

Many of the Rioters executed, and the Inhabitants condemned to pay the Convent 140000 l.

But this I ſuppoſe was done only to keep them in the greater Awe nd Subjection to the Abby and Convent, and not with a deſign it ſhould ver be paid; for I find in the ſame Regiſter, that about four Years afr, at St. Edmund's-Bury there was an Agreement made between Richd, then Abbot, and his Convent, with the Townſmen of the ſaid lace, in the preſence of the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Lord Chancellor, e ſaid Sir John Stonore, and other of the King's Juſtices, That on Coition the ſaid Townſmen truly paid to the ſaid Abbot Two thouſand arks within the ſpace of Twenty Years next enſuing (viz. One hunred Marks per Ann.) till the ſaid Sum ſhould be diſcharged, they would ereupon forgive all the reſt of the ſaid Damages, amounting to Twelve ouſand Two hundred Thirty three Pounds, Six Shillings and Eight ence; ſo that in the mean while they continued quiet and peaceable, d did not diſturb the ſaid Abbot and his Succeſſors; and ſhould alſo ſtore to them certain Charters and Obligations, which they had ford from them by Dureſs to make under the Common Seal; all hich thereupon were delivered up by them to be cancell'd, as they ere accordingly done; and ſo this difference between the ſaid Abby d Town of St. Edmunds-Bury was wholly agreed and made up. This ake notice of, that ſo the Reader may obſerve, that the Fury of the ommon People, (or Mob, as we now term them) when let looſe, s then as bad, or worſe than ever we have known it in our ime.

An Agreement is at laſt made between the Abbot and Townſmen for the paying 2000 Marks in the ſpace of 20 Years.

I can find nothing elſe remarkable that happen'd this Year, [1.] except e Death of Walter Reginald, Archbiſhop of Canterbury in the Month of ovember; he was a lover of Learning, but however is noted for his eat Ingratitude to the late King Edward, to whom he had been Tur, and was by the Pope preferr'd to the Archbiſhoprick purely upon is Recommendation; and yet upon the Queen's Arrival in England, he ined with Her againſt the King, and privately furniſhed Her with eat Sums of Money: To him ſucceeded Simon de Mepham a Kentiſh an, Dr. of Divinity, and Chanon of Chicheſter, who was a perſon inent for Learning and ſtrictneſs of Life.

[1.] Godwin de Præſul. p 4:6.

The Death of Walter ABp. of Canterbury.

We are come now to the Second Year of this King's Reign, in hich the firſt thing, and that the moſt fortunate, we find to have been tranſacted, Anno Dom. Mcccxxviii.

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxviii.

* Rot. Clauſ. 2 Ed 3. m 3. Dorſ.
[2] Froiſſ. ib. c. 19. * Rot. Pat. 2 Ed. 3. part. 1. m. 15.
The King is married to the Lady Philippe of Hainault by Proxy.
[3.] H K Col. 2552.
She comes to London, and goes to the K. at York, where She is married again.
[4.] Sandford Gen Hiſt. p. 159.
Her Coronation at Weſtminſter.

tranſacted, was * the Conſummation of His Marriage with the [2.] Lady Philippe of Hainault; * for tho' the Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, with other Perſons of Quality, were about Autumn laſt Year ſen over as Ambaſſadors to the Earl her Father, to demand her on th King's behalf, (which was preſently granted, as having been agreed o before) yet in this Treaty, and obtaining the Pope's Diſpenſation, and in ſolemnizing the Marriage by Proxy at the City of Valenciennes, abou three or four Months were ſpent, ſo that the Royal [3.] Bride did no arrive at London until a little after Chriſtmaſs, where She was nobly received, and from whence She went immediately to York, where the King then was, and on the 24th of January they were again publickly married by the Archbiſhop of that City; [4.] but She was not crowned Queen at Weſtminſter until the Firſt Sunday in Lent, upon the King' return from York.

* Rot. Clauſ. 2 Ed. 3. m. 3. Dorſ.
A parliament Summon'd to treat of certain Articles between England and Scotland, but nothing is done; and why.
* ~~Rot. Clauſ.~~ 2 Ed. 3. m. 31. Dorſ.
Another Parliament held at Northampton, where a Shameful Peace is made with the Scots, and upon what Terms.
The Subſtance of King Edward's Charter to the King of Scots.

The Reaſon of the Court's Continuing ſtill there, was, that a *Parliament had been ſummon'd thither on the Sunday after Candlemaſs-day, t treat of certain Articles then propounded between the Kingdoms o Scotland and England, at Newcaſtle; but nothing was done in it, becauſe the Biſhops and other Great Men did not appear, as is expreſſed i the next * Writ of Summons dated March the 5*th* enſuing, for a Parliament to meet three Weeks after Eaſter at Northampton, in which (a Murimouth, and Walſingham from him relates) there was a ſhameſu Truce or Peace clapt up between the Engliſh and Scots, by the direction and contrivance of the Queen and Roger Mortimer Her Favourite the Conditions of which were theſe; Firſt, That Prince David, only Son and Heir to Robert King of Scots, ſhould marry the Lady Joa King Edward's Eldeſt Siſter; in conſideration of which, He was t grant the Scotiſh King a Charter, to releaſe all His Claim of Superiority which Edward or His Anceſtors had or could pretend to over that Kingdom; this Charter being no where extant as I know of, but in th Manuſcript Chronicle of Lanercoſt; I ſhall here therefore give an Extract of it, having printed it at large in the Appendix: It begins with a Recital of the dangerous Wars, and great Miſchiefs that had for a lon time fallen upon both Kingdoms by reaſon of that Claim of Superiority which He, the King of England, and His Predeceſſors had mad over that of Scotland: To put an end to which, He by the Conſent o the Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and Commons of His Kingdom aſſembled i Parliament, grants to Robert King of Scotland, His Heirs and Succeſſors, that they ſhall hold that Kingdom free, and for ever diſcharged o all Subjection, and all Claim and Demand thereof from the King o England; His Heirs and Succeſſors, and further renounce for Himſelf &c. by theſe Preſents all former Obligations, Agreements or Compacts made by or with any or either of their Predeceſſors concerning th Subjection of the Kingdom of Scotland, or its People both of the Clergy and Laity; and that if any ſuch Charters or Inſtruments ſhall b found, He wills that they ſhall for the future be accounted as null, voi and of no value: Dated at York the Firſt Day of March, A. R. Secundo So that all Original Inſtruments of Homage from the Crown of Scotland being now loſt and deſtroy'd, if that the Charters of Homage made by King John Bailiol were not recorded on our Rolls in the Tower, we could not be able to prove (unleſs by the Teſtimony of our Hiſtorians) that ſuch Charters had ever been made.

There were alſo ſome other Articles, [4.] tho' of leſs moment, than agreed to, as that the Scotiſh King ſhould renounce all Claim to Northumberland and Cumberland, &c. and the Engliſh Noblemen were to give up all their Right to the Lands which they or their Anceſtors had enjoy'd in Scotland, unleſs they would reſide there, and become Subjects to that Crown; but the Scots were ſo eager for this Peace, that in conſideration of theſe Grants, it was agreed on the behalf of the King of Scotland, That He ſhould pay King Edward the Sum of Twenty thouſand Marks: I ſuppoſe this was for the Damages they had committed upon England the laſt Year: However it ſeems Mortimer had all this Money, as will appear anon by the Articles exhibited in Parliament againſt him.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxviii.

[4.] H. K. Col. 2558.

Some other Articles of leſs moment then agreed on.

The Mariage between King David and the Young Lady was now made, yet King Edward would not ſtand to this Agreement when He came of Age, but the War with Scotland was again renew'd, as you will ſee hereafter.

In this Parliament likewiſe it was that [5.] King Edward began firſt to lay claim to the Kingdom of France; for His Uncle, King Charles the Fair, had lately deceas'd in January, after above ſix Years Reign; and though [6.] King Edward Himſelf acknowledged the force of the Salick Law, whereby the Infant Daughter of the ſaid Charles was excluded, yet the King inſiſted, that though that Law debarr'd Females from ſucceeding to that Crown, yet it did not exclude the Male-Heirs that deſcended from them, and therefore He claim'd it as next Heir-Male to His Uncle. But theſe Matters being fully diſcuſſed and allow'd of in this Parliament, it was thereupon ordained [1.] that Adam d'Orleton, Biſhop of Worceſter, × and Roger Northborough, Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield ſhould go into France, and there in the Name of King Edward their Maſter, claim that Kingdom, and as much as in them lay, hinder the Coronation of Philip, Son to Charles of Valois, the late King's Brother; but before the Ambaſſadors could reach Paris, Philip was crowned at Rheimes, ſo that their Journey prov'd in vain, and the King was forced to ſurceaſe His Claim for that time, though He again renew'd it when He found Himſelf ſtrong enough to make War on King Philip for that Crown, as you will find in its due place.

[5.] MS. Vet. in Bib. Benn Cantab.

[6.] Mezeray. An. 1328.

[1.] Antiq. Brit. p. 228.

× as it appears by the Commission under the great Seal entred on the Patent Roll. 2. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. where the last Bp. is stil'd Bp. of Chester, wch was then a common Title for the Bishop of Coventry & Litchfield. vid. Rym. Coll. IV. vol. p. 354.

But I cannot here omit what the French Hiſtorians relate; That King Edward's Ambaſſadors did now put in His Claim to the Crown on behalf of their Maſter, and that it being ſolemnly heard, and the Title of Philip de Valois alſo ſet forth before the Eſtates of the Kingdom, they adjudged it to the latter, as moſt agreeable to their Salick Law.

Some Matters of moment happening after the late Parliament, that required great Advice, there were new * Writs iſſued out bearing date Auguſt 28th, for another to meet at Salisbury on the Sunday next after the Quindene of St. Michael: In [2.] this Parliament there were made three Earls, viz. John of Eltham, the King's Brother, Earl of Cornwal; Roger Motimer, Earl of the Marches of Wales, by the Title of Earl of March; and the Chief Bottiller*, or Butler of Ireland, Earl of Ormond: To this Parliament the Earl of Lancaſter, and the Lord Wake were alſo ſummon'd, but they refuſed to appear; the Earl, becauſe he having been appointed by Parliament the King's Chief Counſellor and Guardian of His Perſon, the Lord Mortimer had now taken to Himſelf

*Rot. Clauſ. 2 Ed. 3. m. 31. Dorſ.

[2.] T. W.

A Parliament called, wherein three New Earls were created.

* He is called in Latin, Pincerna.

The E. of Lancaſter and Lord Wake ſummon'd to this Parl but refuſe to come.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxviii.

[3.] H. K. col. 2554 T. W.

Whereupon they with the Earls of Kent and Norfolk raiſe Forces againſt Mortimer.

* Walſingham places it in Bedfordſhire, but that is not likely, being ſo far from Salisbury where the Court then was: I therefore think it was Bradford lying about 20 Miles from that City.

The E of Lancaſter being deſerted by the Earls laſt mentioned, is forced to ſubmit himſelf to the Qu. and Mortimer.

[4.] Mezeray ad hunc Ann.

himſelf the Royal Power, and would not permit him to come near the King, ſo as to adviſe and protect Him according to His truſt: The Lord Wake alledged other Grievances and Fears of the evil Deſigns of Mortimer, who then came armed to this Parliament, contrary to Law; [3.] Whereupon not only theſe two Lords, but alſo the Earls of Norfolk and Kent, the King's Uncles, and other Great Men, who had not conſented to their wicked Deſigns, raiſed Forces in the Southern Parts againſt Mortimer, and thoſe of his Party. Which when the new-made Earls heard, they likewiſe raiſing a ſtrong Force of Engliſh and Welſh, marched with them to Leiceſter, and there plunder'd and ſpoil'd the whole Country, in revenge to the Earl of Lancaſter, whoſe Eſtate lay there: But he himſelf was then coming from the Southern Parts with his Forces, with which he marched towards Mortimer and his Party, and encamped near * Bradford, intending thereabouts to give them Battel; but the Earls of Norfolk and Kent being afraid, left him, and ſubmitted themſelves to the Queen-Mother and Mortimer. Then the Earl of Lancaſter ſeeing himſelf thus deſerted, made his Submiſſion to the King before the whole Army; and was, by the Mediation of Simon Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and other Biſhops, reconciled, upon his making Oath with others of his Company, and giving Security by Recognizances, that neither he nor they would attempt any thing upon the Perſons of the King, the two Queens, nor of any other, Great or Small, of their Council, or that were about them: Nor would do, nor procure to be done, any Injury or Damage unto them, privately or openly; nor aſſent to the doing thereof: And would alſo ſubmit to the Judgment of the next Parliament for what he had done already.

But before we conclude this Year, I muſt not forbear taking notice of a Foreign Affair of great moment; which was, [4.] that a great Quarrel aroſe between Pope John the Two and Twentieth, and the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, concerning his Holineſs's Right of Crowning Him, For having accepted of that Dignity without the Pope's Approbation; He thereupon not only diſown'd His Authority, but alſo iſſued out a Bull of Excommunication againſt Him. Whereat the Emperor being incenſed, marched into Italy with an Army, to depoſe the Pope; and at firſt had ſuch good Succeſs as to put him to flight, and get one Nicholas de Corbier, a Fryar-Minor, to be choſen in his room. But the Emperor, through His own ill Conduct, being forced to leave Italy, the former Pope (who had been ſet aſide) again recovered his Power, and pronounced the Emperor Excommunicated and depoſed from the Empire: But as for the Anti-Pope, who called himſelf Nicholas the Fifth, He being deſerted by thoſe of his own Order, was, after divers Adventures, forced in the Year 1330. to ſurrender Himſelf to the Pope with a Rope about his Neck. Yet he was not pardon'd for all that, but was clapt up in Priſon, where he died ſome Months after. All which things, though they did not fall out in the ſame Year, yet I thought fit to put together in this place, for the better connection of this Story.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib.

So ſoon as Philip [1.] the new King of France was ſetled in His Throne, He thought it neceſſary to make His late Competitor King Edward to acknowledge His Title; wherefore He ſent Ambaſſadors into England, to ſummon Him to come over and do His Homage for the Dutchy of Aquitain and Earldom of Ponthieu. Theſe Ambaſſadors being arrived, and having delivered their Meſſage, the Matter was for ſome time debated in the Council; where tho' moſt of the Lords allowed the King's Title to the Crown of France, yet did they not think it ſafe either for Him or the Kingdom, at that time to inſiſt upon it, not being then in a Condition to make War with France. [2.] Whereupon, to ſecure the K's Right as much as poſſible, He appointed as His Procurator one of His Council, who made a Proteſtation on His behalf o this effect, viz.

Phil. the new K. of France ſummons K. Edw. to come and do Him Homage; which the K. is adviſed by His Council to perform.

[2.] Ord. Raynold. contin. Annal. Baron. ad An. 1340.

Yet makes a Proteſtation to ſave His Right to the Crown of France notwithſtanding.

'That for any Homage whatever, to be made to the Lord Philip 'of Valois (then bearing Himſelf as King of France) by King Ed'ward of England, for the Dukedom of Aquitain, and the Earldom of 'Ponthieu, He did not, nor would thereby intend to renounce His 'Hereditary Right which He had to the ſaid Realm of France, or any way derogate from the ſame; even although thereupon Letters ſhould afterwards be Signed with either of His Seals. And He did further proteſt, that He would not do any Homage to the Lord Philip of His own free-will, but as He ſhould do it for the juſt fear He had of loſing the ſaid Dutchy and Earldom; and becauſe He was afraid that unleſs He ſhould do Homage to the ſaid Philip, He could not avoid other great Dangers, and irreparable Loſſes; Therefore in Confirmaion of the Premiſes, King Edward cauſed His ſaid Procurator to take n Oath, by laying His Hands on the Holy Goſpels, before all thoſe of His Council then preſent.

This Caution being thus taken, [3.] Dr. Graveſend, Biſhop of London, was ordered to return an Anſwer to the French Ambaſſadors, to his effect: 'That the King His Maſter would, in Complyance with the Deſires of the French King, go over ſuddenly into France, and as to the Homage demanded, He would do His Devoir as He ought. Then the Ambaſſadors being well preſented and careſſed, took their eaves and returned home. And having given their King an Account f their Ambaſſy, He was ſo well ſatisfied with King Edward's Complynce, that He preſently ſent His Envoys to the Kings of Bohemia and Navarre, inviting them to be preſent at this Ceremony.

[4] Froiſſ. ib. cap. 25.

The King of France upon the News of K. Edward's granting to come over and do His Homage, invites the Kings of Bohemia and Navarre to be preſent at it.

Then [4.] King Edward, accompanied with the Earls of Norolk and Kent, His Uncles, and divers others of the Biſhops and chief Nobility of England, having left His Brother the Earl of Cornwal His Lieutenant, about the latter end of May paſſed over into France; and oing to Amiens in Picardy, He was there honourably received by King Philip, and the other Kings and Princes, and Peers of France; who were to be witneſſes of this Homage and Submiſſion. All things being ow ready for this Ceremony, King Edward came on the Sixth of une into the Choir of the Cathedral of Amiens, to do His Homage, in Robe of Crimſon-Velvet embroider'd with Leopards of Gold, His Crown on His Head, His Sword by His Side, and Golden Spurs on His Heels; where King Philip of Valois ſat ready to receive Him on His Royal Throne in a Robe of Purple Velvet powder'd with Flowers e Luces of Gold, His Crown on His Head, His Scepter in His Hand, ith the other Enſigns of Majeſty. But becauſe Hiſtorians very much iffer about the Manner of the Performance of this Homage, I ſhall rſt relate what the French Writers ſay concerning it, and then proceed o the Account which Froiſſart and others give of it, different from

[4 Id. ib.

The King goes over to Ami- e purpoſe.

The Manner of this Ceremony.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxviii.

* Recueil de France, p. 47.

The French Hiſtorians their Relation of it.

theirs. Du * Tillet tells us, that his Relation of it is taken from certain Antient Records in the Chamber of Accounts in Paris, and is as follows:

King Edward being come into the Church at Amiens, kneeled down before the King of France, to do His Homage in the accuſtomed Form; but before this was performed, Monſieur de Noyers made a Proteſtation on the behalf of King Philip, that He would not receive it for any thing which He or the late King Charles held, or ought to hold in Gaſcoigne, and Agenois. Then the Biſhop of Lincoln, for King Edward, made a like Proteſtation, That He did not thereby intend to renounce any Right which He had, or ought to have, in the Dutchy of Guienne and its Appurtenances. Then the Viſcount de Melun, Grand Chamberlain of France, read the Form of the Homage out of a Schedule, according to his Office; and when King Edward anſwered Yea, (as to what was demanded of Him) the Viſcount ſpoke for the King of France, and ſaid, that He accepted of the King of England's Homage, ſaving the ſaid Proteſtation made on His Maſter's behalf. This being performed, King Edward put His Hands between thoſe of King Philip, who then kiſſed Him on the mouth, as Lord of the Feud.

* P. 36.

Froiſſart relates the Homage made by the King not to have been full and abſolute.

The learned * Mr. Barnes in his elaborate Hiſtory of this King's Reign, undertakes to give us a more particular Account of this Tranſaction; but ſince I do not find it in any of the Authors he there cites, I ſhall confine my ſelf to what they ſay farther concerning it. Froiſſart, in the place c[illegible]our Author, ſays no more, than that it ſeems to him, that King Edward perform'd this Homage only by word of Mouth, without putting His Hands within thoſe of the King of France, or of any other Prince or Prelate deputed by Him: Nor that King Edward, according to the Advice of His Council, would do more, until He return'd into England, and had conſulted ſuch Privileges and Charters which might give Him ſome Light thereinto, and ſhew Him how and in what manner He ought to become a Liege-Man to the King of France. To which King Philip anſwered thus: Couſin, We will not impoſe any thing upon You; what You have already done, ſufficeth for the preſent: So that upon Your Return, when You have found from the Records of Your Predeceſſors, You perform what They have done on the like Occaſions. Having thus ſpoke, the Aſſembly broke up, the French King not then expreſſing any outward Diſcontent: Yet a little after, revolving in His mind the Affront this young Prince had put upon Him, in refuſing any abſolute Submiſſion, He reſolved to revenge it; and, notwithſtanding His Letters of Safe-Conduct, to ſeize His Perſon.

[5] H. K. col. 2555.

The King having intimation of a Deſign to ſeize His Perſon, comes away on the ſudden.

* P. 132, 133.

But [5] Knyghton relates, that Henry Burwaſh Biſhop of Lincoln (a Prelate of a deep Reach) having had ſome Intimation of it, adviſed the King immediately to withdraw; which He preſently did, and ſo left France, to the great Surprize of thoſe Princes that were then aſſembled. But notwithſtanding what this Author relates, we do not find any thing in the French Hiſtorians, but that this Homage was performed in the accuſtomed manner; as appears by the Inſtrument of it ſtill preſerved in the Chamber of Accounts at Paris: A Copy of which you may find in the learned Monſieur Leibnitz his Codex Diplomaticus, printed at large. But as for the Proteſtation then made by the Biſhop of Lincoln on King Edward's behalf, you will find that preſently after, upon the French King's not being ſatisfied with it, He was forced further to acknowledge it by His Letters-Patents. But to proceed.

Tho' the French King would not come to an open Rupture upon this Action, yet He was reſolved not to deſiſt from preſſing the King to a more particular Acknowledgment as to the Nature of the Homage He was to perform; and therefore preſently diſpatched after Him the two Biſhops of Chartres and Beauvois, the Lord Lewis of Cleremont, the Duke of Bourbon, the Counts of Harecourt and Tankervil, as His Ambaſſadors, accompanied with ſeveral Knights and learned Men; who came to demand a further Performance and Satisfaction, concerning the Homage that had been made to the King their Maſter. When K. Ed's Council had duly conſidered the Uſage of former Kings of England, in their doing Homage for the Dukedom of Aquitain, and found that things had been antiently ſo performed, as they were now demanded to be done; tho' moſt of them were offended at the great Arrogance of the King of France, and allow'd their Maſter a much better Title to that Crown; yet conſidering how unable England was to enter into a War with ſo powerful a Prince, they concluded it to be the wiſeſt Courſe for the King at preſent to ſtifle His Pretenſions, and to give His Brother of France all the Satisfaction He required. Wherefore after a great deal of time ſpent in ſearching Records, and arguing pro and con, (the Ambaſſadors being fain to ſtay in England all that Winter) in the beginning of May they obtain'd a Poſitive Anſwer; and the King was at laſt prevail'd upon to give the [2.] Letters-Patents under His Great Seal; wherein He not only acknowledged that He owed the King of France Liege-Homage for the Territories He held of Him, but alſo promiſed for Himſelf and His Succeſſors, Dukes of Aquitain, that the Homage ſhould be made in manner following: The K. of England, Duke of Aquitain, ſhould hold His Hands between the Hands of the King of France; and he that is to ſpeak for the King of France ſhall ſay thus: You become Liege-Man to our Lord the King, here preſent as Duke of Guienne and Peer of France; and You promiſe to bear to Him Faith and Loyalty: Say, Yes. And then the King of England, Duke of Aquitain and His Succeſſors, ſhall ſay Yes. And then the King of France ſhall receive the ſaid King of England and Duke of Guienne to the ſame Liege-Homage, with Faith and Troth by word of mouth; ſaving His own Right and all other. And the like He was to do for the Earldom of Ponthieu and Monſtrieul. And He further promiſed to bear unto Him Faith and Loyalty. Then the Letters-Patents conclude in this manner: And thus it ſhall be done and renewed as often as Homage ſhall be done; of which, We and Our Succeſſors, Dukes of Guienne, ſhall (after the ſaid Homage performed) deliver our Letters-Patents ſealed with Our Great Seal, if the King of France ſhall ſo require. And moreover, We promiſe in good Faith to hold and keep entirely the Peace and Accord, made between the King of France and the ſaid King of England, Dukes of Guienne, &c. Theſe Letters being ſealed with the Great Seal of England, were deliver'd to the French Ambaſſadors, and upon their Arrival were preſented to the King their Maſter; who order'd them to be laid up in His Chancery. ^ I have been the more particular in relating the manner of this Homage, becauſe it is the laſt that ever was perform'd by any King of England to the Crown of [1.] Froiſſ. ib. The French K diſpatches Ambaſſadors to K. Edward to demand further Satisfaction concerning the late Homage.

The King's Council adviſe Him to comply with theſe Demands; and upon what Account.

[2.] Id. ib. c. 24. Du Cheſne l. 14. p. 638. The King grants a Charter to the K. of France, acknowledging that His Territories in France were held of Him by Homage-Liege.

^ and a Copy of the like Letters Patents from King Philip, declaring the sd Homage to be Liege Homage, and the manner how it was to be performed by the Kings of England as Dukes of Guienne for all times coming was transmitted into England, and is extant under the Seal of the Provosty of Paris, bearing Date Sept. 2d 1331. a Copy of which you will find published from the original in R—'s IV Vol. p. 481. 482.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxix.

of France; as alſo, becauſe Dr Brady hath thought fit to leave it out in the laſt Volume of his Hiſtory.

[3.] John Tinmonth. Hiſt. Aurea. Chron. MS. in Bib. Lamb. Ad Myremuth.

A Solemn Torneament held in Cheapſide, where the Queen and Her Ladies were in great danger by the fall of a Scaffold.

I muſt not here forget, that whilſt the French Ambaſſadors ſtay'd in England, the King to ſhew them the Proweſs of the Engliſh Nation, entertain'd [3.]them with a Solemn Tournaement of Thirteen Knights on a ſide, which was perform'd in Cheapſide, between the Croſs and Soper lane, now Queen ſtreet, the Street being well cover'd with Sand, to keep their Horſes from ſlipping; acroſs the Street at the upper end, was erected a ſpacious Scaffold, made like a Tower, whereon the Queen and all the Chief Ladies of the Court ſat to behold the Performance; about the midſt of which happen'd an unlucky Accident that had like to have prov'd fatal to them all, for the Scaffold breaking under them, it put the Queen and Ladies into a very great Fright, but as it pleas'd God, they receiv'd no other Hurt. The King thereupon ſwore He would ſeverely puniſh the deceitful Workmen, but being ſoften'd by the Queen's Interceſſion for them on Her Knees, She at laſt, (tho with ſome difficulty) obtained their Pardon of Him.

[4.] Id Ib. The ABp declares all thoſe excommunicated who had any hand in the Death of the Bp. of Exeter.

As for Church Affairs, I find nothing worth obſerving, [4.] but that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury this Year held a General Synod of the Clergy of his Province at London, wherein he declared all thoſe excommunicated that had any hand in the Murther of Walter Stapleton, late Biſhop of Exeter, altho he had been already attainted by Act of Parliament. Nothing elſe cor[illegible]erable was done, but that the Feaſt of the Nativity of our Bleſſed [illegible]in, and ſome other Holy-days were ordered to be better obſerved.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxix.

[5.] T. W.

* Rot. Clauſ. 4 Ed. 3. m. 41. Dorſ.

The Condemnation of the Earl of Kent in Parliament, and on what Occaſion.

[1.] Ib. cap. 23.

This Year begins wit[illegible] Unfortunate Death of Edmund Earl of Kent, the King's Uncle, [[illegible]ho was now ſeized and accuſed of High Treaſon, in the Parliament that was * ſummoned to meet at Weſtminſter on the Sunday before the Feaſt of St. Gregory (or the 13*th* of March), and on the next day the ſaid Earl was by Judgment of his Peers in Parliament condemned to die; but the Hiſtorians of that time differ in the Crime whereof he was accuſed: Froiſſ.relates, [1.] That being Heir Apparent to the Crown, he was accuſed of conſpiring the Death of the King, his Nephew, by Poiſon; but this is altogether improbable, ſince this Earl had then an Elder Brother, viz. Thomas Brother to the Earl of Norfolk; and the Lord John of Eltham, the King's Brother, was alſo then alive, tho Froiſſard by a Miſtake ſuppoſes him to have been dead: I therefore rather agree with the major part of our Engliſh Hiſtorians, [2.] T. W. H. K. Col. 1255.

He is made believe by Mortimer and his Crearures, that the late King is ſtill alive.

who relate, [2.] That he was found guilty, and condemned, for endeavouring to ſet the late King Edward his Brother (whom he ſuppoſed to be ſtill alive, and in Priſon) at liberty; and that this may not ſeem ſtrange, tho He had been dead above two Years, the Reader may obſerve, that the Lord Mortimer, either by himſelf, or others, made the ſaid Earl believe, that the late King was ſtill alive, notwithſtanding the Reports of His Death and Burial, and that He ſtill was ſhut up in Corfe Caſtle, tho not ſuffered to be ſeen by any but thoſe who were intruſted with this Secret: Whereupon the Earl, deceived by a Fryar whom he had intruſted to look into this Matter, believing that His Brother was ſtill alive, entred into a Plot for His delivery; as appears by an Inquiſition taken before Robert Howel, the Coroner of the King's Houſhold, and which was alſo confeſſed by the ſaid Earl before the Peers in Parliament, That he had been enjoined by the Pope to do his endea-

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxix.

our to deliver his ſaid Brother out of Priſon; and he alſo confeſſed the rch-Biſhop of Tork to have been privy to the Deſign, and to have romiſed to furniſh him with Five hundred Men to put it in execution; nd that Sir Robert de Landeun was ſent by the ſaid Arch-Biſhop about his Affair; and that Sir Robert alſo affirmed, he had Five thouſand Ien more ready to riſe for the ſame purpoſe: The Earl alſo farther acuſed divers others both of the Clergy and Laity, and among the reſt he Biſhop of London, to have been privy and aſſiſting to the ſame Degn; and there were likewiſe ſome Letters of the Earl's directed to the teKing his Brother, beſides his own Confeſſion, produced to the ſame ffect. [3.] Upon all which, he was not only found guilty, and conemned for Treaſon, and his Heirs to be diſinherited; but was alſo exeuted the day following, by a Precept directed to the Bailiffs of the City f Wincheſter, who could find none to perform that ungrateful Office, ough the Earl ſtood ready for Execution from Morning until Evening: o dear and well beloved he was by the Common People. At laſt a Vicked Wretch out of the Marſhalſea, to ſave His own Life, ſevered is Head from his Body, on the Nineteenth of March, * which was rivately buried in the Church of the Fryar-Preachers of that ity.

He confeſſe he had been enjoin'd by the Pope to endeavour the delivery of his Brother out of Priſon.

[3.] Id. ib. He is found guilty, and executed at Wincheſter.

* Dug. Baron. Vol. I. p. 147.

So that Du Cheſne the French Hiſtorian is miſtaken, who relates, hat he was drawn, hang'd, and quarter'd and his Quarters ſet upon e Gates of four of the Chief Cities of England, and his Head upon ondon-Bridge.

But the Year after, † the Lord Edmund, Son and Heir to this Earl, etition'd the King in the next Parliament, held in the Fourth Year of is Reign, That the Judgment given againſt his ſaid Father, might r the Errors therein be reverſed; and he and the Lady Margaret his other, in their ſeveral Petitions ſet forth, 'That his ſaid Father, her Husband, was falſly by Roger Mortimer, Sir John Matravers, and other is Accomplices, made to believe that King Edward was alive, after He was murther'd, with deſign to deceive him into a pretended Contrivance to releaſe Him out of Priſon, for which he loſt his Life and ſtate at the laſt Parliament at Wincheſter, as Mortimer had alſo confeſſed to the People at his Death, and that he died wrongfully. Whereupon Edmund his Son was reſtored to the Honour and Lands of his Faer, and the Counteſs to her Dowry.

† Rot. Parl. 4 Ed 3. m. 11, 12. Dorſ.

His Attainder is not long after reverſed in Parliament, and for what cauſe.

But leſt the Reader may wonder how one ſo nearly related to the ing ſhould thus loſe his Life and Fortune, for a Plot that was impoſſie to be executed, you are to take notice, that this was brought about by e Contrivance and Power of the Queen Mother, and the Lord Mortier, Her Favourite, who hated and fear'd the Earl, that ſo openly oppos'd eir Evil Deſigns, and therefore they rais'd this Falſe Report on purpoſe to draw in the Credulous Earl and others into this Fooliſh Plot; nd alſo when he was condemned, Mortimer never left urging the ueen to have him ſpeedily executed without the King's knowledge. his Earl, though in himſelf a Prince of great Lenity and Good Nature, as the leſs lamented, because his Servants were very oppreſſive the Common People, and many great Diſorders were committed his Family; for certainly 'tis not enough for a Man of High Quali y to do well himſelf, but he ought to take care that thoſe who are uner him do ſo likewiſe, ſince he is liable to cenſure for their Miſcarriages,

The Reaſon of the late Earl's ſudden Execution.

[4.] T. W. Hypod Neuſt.

Wm Robe

Anno Dom. Mcccxxix.

ges, which he might either prevent or puniſh if he pleaſed. His Death was alſo looked upon by ſome as a Juſt Judgment upon him for his joining with the Queen and Mortimer againſt the late King his Brother, by which means He was depos'd and now ſuffered himſelf, for endeavouring to deliver him when it was too late.

[5.] T. W. The ABp. of York and Bp. of London, with ſeveral Laymen accuſed of the ſame Crime, are acquitted, but others are condemned to perpetual Impriſonment.

I ſhall ſay no more concerning this Unfortunate Buſineſs, [5.] bu that the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhop of London, and the Abbot o Langdon, with ſome other Perſons of Quality, all accuſed for the ſam Crime, were acquitted; and though the Eſtates of the Lay-men (ſuppoſed to be concern'd) were for a time ſeized into the King's hands, ye were they not long after reſtor'd; however the Earl of Lincoln, with ſom others, were apprehended about this Matter; but ſince nothing coul be made out againſt them, they were ſoon diſcharged; ſo that excep the Earl of Kent, none loſt their Lives for this fooliſh and impoſſibl Deſign, but divers did their Liberties: For Sir Robert de Taunton, wit ſome Preaching and Carmelite Fryars concerned in the ſame Plot, wer condemned to perpetual Impriſonment; but the Provincials of bot thoſe Orders were baniſhed the Kingdom for ever.

[1.] Buchan. l. 8. The Deceaſe of Robert Bruce K. of Scots. *Chron. de Lan.

As for Foreign Affairs, about [1.] the beginning of July this Year a little before the Marriage of His Son David, Robert Bruce, King o Scotland, having been long troubled with the Leproſy, deceaſed, after H had reigned four and twenty Years, notwithſtanding all that the Thre Edwards, ſucceſſively King's of England, could do againſt Him: He wa certainly a Prince of great Prudence and Courage, yet He is noted b our Hiſtorians, as one of no great Fidelity in keeping Oaths, Leagues or Treaties of Peace, further than they ſtood with His Intereſt.

[2.] Chron. de Lan.

Not long after the Death of this Prince, [2.] the King ſent the Ea of Arundel, then Warden of the Marches, into Scotland with ſufficien Forces, but he was attacqued by Sir James Douglas at a Place called Imtel in the Foreſt of Tedworth, where Sir Thomas de Richmond one of th Earl's Chief Officers being ſlain, he was forced to retreat into Engla with the loſs of many of his Men.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx.

[3.] Pol. Vergil. Stow. The K. goes over privately into France to viſit ſome Holy Places.

In [3.] Eaſter Week this Year, King Edward, to perform ſome Vo He had made, ^ reſolved to viſit ſome Holy Places in France, wherefo leaving His Brother the Earl of Cornwal, His Lieutenant during His a ſence, He on Thurſday, in the ſaid Eaſter Week, paſſed over privately i to France, accompanied by John Stratford Biſhop of Wincheſter, a the Lord William Montacute, afterwards Earl of Salisbury, being a diſguiſed like Tradeſmen or Merchants, the whole number of their R tinue not exceeding a dozen perſons.

× In Time of some late Danger not particularly mentioned, as appears by the Letters Patents [A.D. 1330. Rot. Pat. 4 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 1. vid. Ks Coll. 11. vol. p. 480.] or Commission whereby the Earl of Cornwall was appointed Guardian or Lieutenant of the Kingdom, whilst the King should stay beyond Sea.

[4.] Du Tillet. RecueilTraictez. &c. p. 47. The French Hiſtorians give a different Relation of this Voyage. A Final Peace made with France, and the Articles of it.

But the [4.] French Hiſtorians give us another Account why t King went then over into France, viz. To appeaſe the War that w then begun in Guienne, upon His ſo long delaying to ſend over the D claration of His Homage within the time prefixt, and to anſwer t Contravention of the former Treaty in divers Particulars at firſt req red of Him: ſo that King Philip having cauſed Him again to be ſu moned, upon His not appearing, He had now ſent His Brother Charl Earl of Alenſon to lay ſiege to the Town of Xaintes, which King Edwa underſtanding, to put a ſtop to this War, began a new Treaty of Peac for the perfecting whereof, He had ſome time before ſent His Amba dors into France, with whom the following Agreement was made on t Ninth of March this Year, being to this effect.

1. That [5.] King Philip ſhould grant a full Repeal of Baniſhment to the Principal Authors of the late Diſturbance in Guienne, named in the Treaty of the Year 1326, according to the Promiſe made by His Predeceſſor Charles the Fair.

[5] Id. ib. p. 47. Du Cheſne's Hiſt. d' Argl.

2. That the Treaties preceding, which import, that thoſe who were baniſhed by the King of France or His Court, ſhould not be received nor conceal'd in Guienne, ſhould be kept inviolably. So that even without the Approbation of King Edward, the Seneſchals of France ſhould have power notwithſtanding to puniſh His Officers and Miniſters for Faults committed in their Precincts, as by Right of Sovereignty they ought; and the King of France doth eſpecially grant, that all the Liberties, of which the ſaid Seneſchals have been in Poſſeſſion before this Treaty, ſhould be conſerved unto them accordingly.

3. That as to the Sums of Sixty Thouſand Pounds of the one Part, and of Fifty Thouſand Marks Sterling on the other, which King Edward owed unto King Philip; Reaſon ſhould be done by Payment or Compenſation.

4. The Fourth is concerning the Quality, and Form of Homage for Guienne and Ponthieu, &c. which ſhould be renewed on every Succeſſion.

5. The Fifth is concerning the demoliſhing of the Caſtle of St. Croix, &c. according to the Form preſcribed; and that the other Points of the Form of Treaties remaining ſtill to be perfected, ſhould be reſpectively accompliſhed.

6. That the Siege of the Town of Xainctes ſhould be raiſed, ſo ſoon as King Edward ſhould have ratified the preſent Accord, &c. This Treaty was followed with another made at Bois de Vincennes the Thirtieth day of May following; and thereby it was further agreed, That the Profits of the Land of Guienne, which for Default of Homage were ſeized by the late King Charles, and converted to His uſe, ſhould be ſequeſtred in the Hands of two Commiſſioners, deputed on the behalf of either of the Kings, till all their Differences and Proceedings ſince the Truce, in the Year 1324, ſhould be amicably decided.

To conclude, King [1.] Edward having by His Ambaſſadors made that Declaration of His Homage already mentioned, went over in Perſon into France, under pretence of a Pilgrimage; and thereby put a Stop to the War already begun, by making a Viſit incognito to the King of France. [2.] In conſideration of which, King Philip, at His requeſt, remitted to Him the demoliſhing the Caſtle of St. Croix, and others mentioned in the late Articles; but the Town and Caſtle of Xainctes were not reſtor'd until the Year following; and the reſt of the Towns and Caſtles in thoſe Parts, which had been taken from the King's Father, were never reſtored, but remain'd all along under Sequeſtration; which was the Occaſion of a freſh Quarrel between theſe Princes, as you will find hereafter. The King having thus concluded His Affairs in France, as well as He could at that time, return'd into England; × and immediately after held a great Tournament at Dartford in Kent, thereby to exerciſe His Nobles in Feats of Arms.

[1.] Du Cheſne ib.

King Edward goes over privately to confirm theſe Articles.

[2] ib. Du Tillet

Whereupon K. Philip reſtores ſeveral Places, and demoliſhes others.

× [illegible] April [illegible] Day [illegible] a great deal of [illegible]

Some time after this, [3.] on the Fifteenth of June, Queen Philippa brought forth Her Firſt-born Son at Woodſtock near Oxford, who was baptized by His Father's Name, and afterwards obtain'd the Appellation

[3.] John Tinmouth Hiſt. Aur. T. W. ſub An 1329. ſed falſo

Anno Dom. M. cxxx

Vid. H. K. Col. 2558.

Prince Edward born; the reaſon why He is called the Black Prince.

pellation of the Black Prince; being ſo called not from His Complexion, for that was very Fair, but from His Terrible Actions; which made His Enemies the French give Him this Sirname, that hath ſince ſo generally obtain'd among the Hiſtorians of thoſe Times.

The K. reſolves to take the Government into His own Hands.

[4] H. K Col. 2552.

C. W.

The Exorbitant Power of the Queen and the Lord Mortimer.

The King being now Eighteen Years of Age, and ſtrengthen'd by a Son, was reſolv'd to take the Government of the Kingdom into His own Hands; but the Exorbitant Power of the Earl of Marche ſtanding in his way, He was in the firſt place to be removed, before the King could become Maſter of Himſelf or His Affairs. For indeed ever ſince His Acceſſion to the Crown, He [4] had no more than Title of King, his Mother and the Lord Mortimer diſpoſing of the Treaſure of the Kingdom, and beſtowing all Places of Truſt juſt as they thought fit; not conſulting Him: So that this was a very difficult Matter to be brought about. For Mortimer had not only got a vaſt Eſtate by Inheritance, and made a large Addition to it by the Attainder of the late Earl of Kent; but he had ſo ſtrengthened himſelf by a great Multitude of Alliances and Dependents, that his Retinue exceeded that of the King's, towards Whom he carried himſelf more like a Superior than His Subject; which ſo far incenſed the young Prince, that he only watched for an Opportunity to ſurprize him; which, not long after, thus offer'd it ſelf.

* Rot. Clauſ. 4 Ed. 3. m 23. Dors.

A great Council held at Nottingham; where the K. reſolves to ſeize the Lord Mortimer; with the manner of it.

[5] Stow ad hunc Ann.

A * great Council of Lords being aſſembled at Nottingham, Fifteen days after Michaelmaſs, the Lord Roger Mortimer appeared there with ſo ſtrong a Guard, and was likewiſe ſo protected by the Queen-Mother, that it ſeemed almoſt impoſſible to ſeize him: [5] For She had aſſigned him Lodgings in the Caſtle, of which She Her Self every Night kept the Keys; neither the King Her Son, nor any of the Princes of the Blood being allowed to lodge in it. Whereby he became ſo odious to all Sorts of Men, that he was looked upon as the Debaucher of the Queen, the Murtherer of the late King, and the Deſigner of the Ruin of this. All which being repreſented to Him by the Lord Montacute, and ſome others of His Faithful Servants, He immediately thereupon gave that Lord a Command to take to his Aſſiſtance ſome bold and reſolute Perſons, and to ſeize Mortimer where ever they could handſomely light upon him. The Perſons therefore he choſe for this purpoſe, were Sir John, Sir Edward, and Sir William Bohun, all three younger Brothers to John Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, High Conſtable of England; the middlemoſt of them being then Vice-Conſtable of Nottingham Caſtle. Beſides theſe, there were engaged in it John Lord Molins, Sir Robert Ufford, and Sir John Nevil. But without the Aſſiſtance of Sir William Eland, the Conſtable of the Caſtle, no Admittance could be had into it; who being ſounded by the King's Order, he ſeemed willing to conſent to any thing that might be for His Service: But as for the Keys of the Caſtle, he ſaid, they were not in his Power, being every Night carried to the Queen, who laid them under Her Pillow until the Morning. But to make ſome amends for this, he diſcovered to them a certain ſubterraneous Vault or Paſſage, without the Weſt-ſide of the Caſtle, which led up to the Keep or Chief Tower of it. Upon which intelligence, one Friday-night being the Nineteenth of October, the King, with a ſelect Number of truſty Followers, (of whom the Conſtable and the Perſons above-mentioned were the Chief) [1.] enter'd the Caſtle by this Paſſage; (which is ſhewn

The K enters the Caſtle by a Subterraneous Paſſage, where he apprehends Mortimer and his Adherents.

[1.] H. K. Col. 2556.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx.

ſhewn at this day by the Name of Mortimer's Hole) where, after ſome Reſiſtance, Sir William Eland ſeized the Earl of Marche, who was then in a Room adjoining to the Queen's, diſcourſing with Henry Biſhop of Lincoln; (and not in Her Chamber, going to Bed, as ſome Modern Authors falſly relate.) But the Lord Montacute finding ſome Reſiſtance from his Attendants before it could be executed, ſlew Sir Hugh Turplington, Steward of the King's Houſhold, and Sir John Monmouth, who were Creatures of Mortimer. On the King's Party, Sir John Nevil was wounded, but not (as ſome ſay) ſlain; for it will by and by appear, that he was after this alive. × For there is still extant on the Patent Rolls of this year a Grant to this Person of an Annuity of 200 marks pr. Ann: [Pat. 5. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 6. vid. Rym. IV. vol. p. 487] in several manors to be held by him and his Heirs males till the sd. 200 marks sh. be otherwise settled

Stow ad hunc Ann.

The Queen is much concern'd at his Apprehenſion, and intercedes for him, but in vain.

The Queen-Mother being then in Bed, heard the Noiſe of this Rencounter, and ſuppoſing what the Matter was, preſently got up; and finding the King there, thus addreſſed Her Self to Him in French: Bel Fitz, Bel Fitz, ayes pitie du Gentile Mortimer But, it ſeems, He took no notice of Her Intreaties, for he was hurried away, and brought before the King; who immediately commanded him to be put into Safe Cuſtody in the Caſtle. Whereupon all the Keys were forthwith ſecured, that ſo none might go out to diſcover what was done, till the reſt of Mortimer's Abettors were taken. So the next Morning, by the King's ſpecial Command, two of his Sons, Sir Edmund and Sir Geoffrey, were ſeized in the Town, together with Sir Oliver Byngham, Sir Simon Bereford, and Sir John Daveril Conſtable of Corfe-Caſtle, who had been an Evidence againſt Edmund late Earl of Kent, and given him falſe Information, that the late King his Brother was ſtill alive. The ſame day Mortimer, with the reſt taken upon his Account, were conveyed with a ſtrong Guard towards London, to the great Satisfaction of all the Spectators; And being brought thither, were committed cloſe Priſoners to the Tower; and ſo this Council was thereupon diſſolved.

His Abettors are alſo apprehended together with two of His Sons.

In the mean while the King being come to Leiceſter, and finding it neceſſary to call a Parliament for the Tryal of the Lord Mortimer, iſſued out from thence His * Writs of Summons, to this effect: That from His taking upon Him the Government of the Kingdom to that time, the Buſineſs that concerned Himſelf and the State of the Nation had been managed to His Damage and Diſgrace, and the Impoveriſhing of His People: Wherefore His Conſcience urging Him, and not being able any longer to endure it, but deſiring with His whole Heart to Reform the State and Government of the Kingdom, according to Right and Reaſon, to the Honour of God, the Peace and Tranquillity of Holy-Church, and the whole People of the Kingdom; by Aſſent of the Prelates and Great Men aſſiſting Him, He called this Parliament, &c. Then Apologizing for His having ſhort'ned the Day of Summons, He ſaid, That it was from the fervent Deſire He had, that the Buſineſs concerning the State of the Kingdom might be happily ordered and diſpatched. This Writ being of an Unuſual Form, I have here given you at large; and thoſe that deſire to ſee it in the Latin Original, may either conſult the Roll, or elſe read the Tranſcript of it in Dr. Brady's * Appendix to the laſt Volume of his Hiſtory.

The K. ſummons a Parliament for the Trial of Mortimer, with the Form of the Writ.

* Rot. Clauſ. 4 Ed 3. m. 19. Dors.

* N. 82.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx.

The Articles exhibited in Parliament againſt the Lord Mortimer.

The Parliament being aſſembled at Weſtminſter according to the Summons, the firſt thing we find done in it, was, the exhibiting the following Articles againſt the Lord Mortimer, which I ſhall here give you, tranſlated from the French Original in the Tower; the Title runs thus;

Theſe are the Treaſons, Felonies and Miſchiefs done to Our Lord the King, and His People, by Roger Mortimer, and Others of his Company.

*Rot. 1. Parl. 4 d. 3. n. 1. printed in Dr B's Append. in French, n. 83.

*FIrſt, Whereas in the Parliament holden at Weſtminſter next after the King's Coronation, it was ordained, That four Biſhops, four Earls, and ſix Barons ſhould remain with the King to adviſe Him, and that four ſhould ſtill be with Him, viz. One Bp. one Earl, and two Barons at leaſt, and that no great Buſineſs ſhould be done without their Aſſent; after which Parliament the ſaid Roger not having regard to the ſaid Aſſent, uſurped to himſelf Royal Power, and the Government of the Realm, above the State of the King, and put out and placed Officers in the King's Houſe, and other where throughout the Kingdom, at his pleaſure, ſuch as were of his Party, and ſet John Wyward and Others about the King, to obſerve His Actions and Words; ſo as He was encompaſſed by His Enemies, that He could do nothing as He would, but only as a Man under Guard or Reſtraint.

2. Alſo, whereas the King's Father was at Kenelworth, by order and aſſent of the Peers of the Land, to ſtay there for His eaſe, and to be ſerved as ſuch a great Perſon ought to be; the ſaid Roger by his Uſurped Power, which he exerciſed over Him at his pleaſure, order'd that He ſhould be ſent to Berkley-Caſtle, where, by him and his Confederates, He was Traiterouſly, Feloniouſly, and falſly murthered and kill'd.

3. Alſo the ſaid Roger by his Uſurped Royal Power, forbad by the King's Writ under the Great Seal, That any ſhould come to the Parliament at Salisbury with Force and Arms, under pain of forfeiting whatever they had to the King; yet thither he came with others of his Party with Force and Arms to the ſaid Parliament, contrary to the Prohibition aforeſaid; wherefore divers Peers of the Land, as the Earl of Lancaſter and Others, knowing the manner of his coming, would not be there: And whereas the Prelates were aſſembled in one Houſe, to conſult about the Buſineſs of the King and Realm, the ſaid Roger broke open the Doors of the ſaid Houſe with Armed Men, upon the Prelates, and threatned them with Life and Member, if any of them ſhould be ſo hardy as to ſpeak or do any thing contrary to his Pleaſure in any Point. And in the ſame Parliament by the ſaid Vſurped Power, he cauſed the King to make him Earl of Marche, and to give him and his Heirs ſeveral Lands in Diſheriſon of the Crown; and afterwards the ſaid Roger, and thoſe of his Party, led the King armed againſt the Earl of Lancaſter, and other Peers of the Land, as far as Wincheſter, when they were coming to the Parliament at Salisbury, ſo that the Earl, and other Peers, to avoid the Evils that might have happen'd, out of regard to the King, departed and went toward their own Countries, grieving that they could not ſpeak with, or adviſe their Liege Lord as they ought to do.

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxx.

4 Alſo the ſaid Roger, by the ſaid Vſurped Power, cauſed the King to march forcibly againſt the ſaid Earl, and other Peers of the Land, who were appointed to be with the King, to adviſe Him; and ſo proſecuted them with Force, that the ſaid Earl and ſome others of his Company, that wiſhed well to the Kingdom, ſubmitted to the King's Grace, ſaving to them Life and Member, and that they might not be diſinherited, nor have too great a Fine ſet upon them; yet He cauſed them to be fined ſo grievouſly, that half their Lands, if ſold outright, would only pay it; and Others He cauſed to be driven out of the Nation, and their Lands to be ſeized, againſt the Form of the Great Charter, and Law of the Land.

5. Alſo, whereas the ſaid Roger knew well the King's Father was dead and bury'd, he by others of his Party in deceivable manner, inform'd the Earl of Kent, that He was alive; wherefore the Earl being deſirous to know whether it was ſo or not, uſed all the good ways he could to diſcover the truth, and ſo long, till the ſaid Roger by his Uſurped Royal Power, cauſed him to be apprehended in the Parliament holden at Weſtminſter, and ſo perſued him, as in that Parliament he procured His Death.

6. Alſo the ſaid Roger, by his Uſurped Royal Power, cauſed the King to give to him and his Children, and Confederates, Caſtles, Towns, Mannors and Franchiſes in England, Ireland, and Wales, in decreaſe of the Revenues of the Crown.

7. Alſo the ſaid Roger in deceivable manner cauſed the Knights of Shires, at the Parliament at Wincheſter, to grant to the King one Man at Arms out of every Town of England, that anſwered in the Court of the Eyre by four Men, and the Provoſt, (i. e. the Rieve or Bailiff of the Lord of the Mannor) to ſerve at their own Coſt, for a Year in His War in Gaſcoigne; which Charge he contrived for the Advantage of himſelf and Party, in deſtruction of the People.

8. Alſo the ſaid Roger, by his ſaid Uſurped Power, cauſed Summons to be ſent to many great Knights and Others, that they ſhould come to the King where ever He was; and when they came, he cauſed them to be charged to prepare themſelves to go into Gaſcoigne, or fine at his pleaſure; which Fines were for the benefit of him and his Party.

9. Alſo the ſaid Roger falſly and maliciouſly made Diſcord between the King's Father and His Queen; and poſſeſſed Her, that if She went to Him, She ſhould certainly be killed with a Dagger, or otherwiſe murthered; and by this way, and his other Subtleties, he ſo ordered it, that She would not come at Her Liege Lord and King, to the great diſhonour of Her Son and Self, and great damage of the whole Realm, perchance in time to come, which God forbid.

10. Alſo the ſaid Roger by his ſaid Uſurped Royal Power, had cauſed to be taken for him and his Party, the King's Treaſure, as much as he pleaſed, without tale, in Money and Jewels, in deſtruction of the King, ſo that He had not wherewithall to pay for His Victuals.

11. Alſo the ſaid Roger, by the ſaid Vſurped Power, cauſed to be ſhared between him and his Confederates the Twenty thouſand Marks which came

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx.

came out of Scotland, for the Articles of Peace, without any thing received by the King.

12. Alſo the ſaid Roger, by his above-mentioned Royal Power, received the King's Duties, and Purveyance through the Kingdom, as if he had been King; and he and his Party had with them double the Company of Men and Horſe that were with the King, in deſtruction of the People, not paying for their Quarters any more than they themſelves pleaſed.

13. Alſo the ſaid Roger, by his ſaid Royal Power, cauſed the King to grant to the mounting of Two hundred Iriſh Chivalers, or Horſe, being of thoſe that killed the Great Men of Ireland and Others, who were in the King's Faith; whereas the King ought immediately to have revenged their Deaths, rather than pardoned them, contrary to the Statute and Aſſent of Parliament.

14. Alſo the ſaid Roger contrived to have deſtroy'd the King's ſecret Friends, in whom he had moſt confidence; and he ſurmiſed to the King, in the preſence of the Queen His Mother, the Biſhops of Lincoln and Salisbury, and Others of His Council, that His ſaid ſecret Friends had excited Him to combine with his (the ſaid Roger's) Enemies beyond Sea, in deſtruction of the Queen His Mother, and of him the ſaid Roger; and this he affirmed ſo impudently to the King, that He could not be believed againſt what he had ſaid; and for theſe things, and many others, not as yet fit to be declared, he had been apprehended: Wherefore the King charged the Earls and Barons, the Peers of the Land, as theſe things concern'd Himſelf, themſelves, and all the People of the Realm, to do Right and true Judgment upon him for the Crimes above written, as being notorious and known to be true, to themſelves, and all the People of the Kingdom.

Theſe Articles, tho ſomewhat long, I have here ſet down at large, becauſe they give greater light to divers Tranſactions in the three firſt Years of this King's Reign, than is to be had any where elſe.

The Earls and Barons give Judgment againſt Mortimer, that he ſhould be hanged, &c.

Then the Earls, Barons, and Peers, having examin'd theſe Articles, came into Parliament before the King, and they all delivered their Opinion, by one of their Body, That all things contained in the ſaid Articles were notorious, and known to themſelves, and all the People; wherefore they, as Judges in Parliament, by aſſent of the King, did award and Judge the ſaid Roger as a Traytor and Enemy to the King and Kingdom, to be drawn and hang'd, and commanded the Earl Marſhal to execute the Judgment, and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London, with the Conſtable of the Tower, and thoſe who had the guard of him, to be aiding and aſſiſting with the Earl Marſhal at the Execution; which was performed accordingly on the Nine and twentieth of November, at a place then called the Elms, and now Tyburn: His Body, after it had hung two Days, and two Nights, was granted to the Fryar-Minors, who buried it in their Church, now called Chriſt-Church.

He is executed at Tyburn.

His Character.

This was the end of this Ambitious and Cruel Man, who made uſe of the Power and Favour of his Prince, (as too many Favourites too often do) to the enriching of himſelf, and the deſtruction of all thoſe that oppoſed him. The Reader may from hence obſerve, that as he had cauſed others to be condemned, without making any Defence, ſo was he likewiſe ſerved himſelf; or, as my Author remarks, ſuch was the violence of the Factions in thoſe times, that all thoſe Noblemen that had ſuffered death, were condemned without ever being heard, and conſequently without any Legal Conviction; and it was for this Reaſon, that in this King's Reign, four and twenty Years after, this Judgment was reverſed in another Parliament, as erroneous, as appears by the * Parliament Roll. But to return to the reſt of the Acts.

* Rot. Parl. 28 Ed 3. n 9, 10, 11, 12.

The † King in this Parliament charged the Earls, Barons and Peers to give right and true Judgment againſt Simon de Bereford, Knt., who had been aiding and adviſing with Roger Mortimer in all the Treaſons, Felonies, &c. for which he was afterwards adjudged to die, as was notoriouſly known to the ſaid Peers; whereupon they came before the King in Parliament, and ſaid all with one Voice, That the ſaid Simon was not their Peer, and therefore they were not bound to judge him as a Peer of the Land: But ſince it was a thing ſo notorious and known to all, that he was adviſing, aiding and aſſiſting the ſaid Roger in all the Felonies, Treaſons and Villanies aforeſaid, which were to the Uſurpation of Royal Power, the Murther of their Liege Lord, and deſtruction of the Royal Blood, and that he was guilty of divers other Felonies and Robberies, and principal maintainer of Robbers and Felonies; they as Peers and Judges of Parliament, by aſſent of the King, do award and adjudge him, as a Traytor and Enemy to the King and Realm, to be drawn and hang'd; and the Earl Marſhal was commanded to do Execution; which was done accordingly on Munday next after the Feaſt of St. Thomas the Apoſtle.

† Rot. Parl. 4 Ed 3. n 2.

Sir Simon de Bereford being alſo impeached, the Lords at firſt refuſe to try him, and why.

Yet he is condemned to be hanged, and he is executed accordingly.

But it appears by the ſame Parliament-Roll, that it was then alſo declared, That tho the Lords and Peers in Parliament had for this time in the King's preſence, proceeded as Judges to give Judgment upon thoſe that were no Peers; yet hereafter this ſhould be no Precedent to draw them to give Judgment on any other but their Peers, in caſe of Treaſon or Felony.

Yet declare that this ſhould not be drawn into a Precedent.

Then the Peers proceeded and paſſed Judgment upon the principal Actors in the Murther of the late King Edward, and the Death of Edmund Earl of Kent; and for the latter of theſe * Sir John Maltrevers being found guilty in making him falſly to believe, that the ſaid King was alive, the ſaid John was ſentenced to be drawn, hanged and beheaded as a Traytor, when and where ever he ſhould be found; and the Peers prayed the King to iſſue forth His Proclamation, That any one who could take him alive, and bring him to the King, ſhould have a thouſand Marks; and if he could not be taken alive, he that ſhould bring his Head, ſhould have Five hundred Pound of the King's Gift.

* Ib. n 3.

The Peers give Judgment on the Murtherers of the late K. Edward; as alſo on thoſe who had a hand in the Death of the Earl of Kent; Sir John Maltravers being found guilty of this, is condemned (tho' abſent) to be hanged, &c.

But it ſeems ſtrange, that this Man who is reported by all our Hiſtorians, to be as much concerned as any in the Murther of King Edward, ſhould not be now condemned for that, but another leſs Crime; which makes me ſuppoſe, that there was not ſuch ſufficient proof made out againſt him of that Murther, as there was of the other: But notwithſtanding this Price which was put upon his Head, it is certain [1.] he was never taken, but lived a baniſhed Man in Germany, at the time when my Author wrote his Chronicle.

But he died in Baniſhment.

[1] Ad. de Myrimeuth, ad hunc Ann

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx

* Ib. n. 4. The like Judgment given againſt others guilty of the ſame Crime.

Further * the ſame Judgment was given againſt Bogo de Bayons, and John Daveril, for the ſame cauſe, and he that could take Bogo alive, and bring him to the King, ſhould have a hundred pounds; or if he brought his Head, he ſhould have a hundred Marks; and he that could take John Daveril alive, and bring him to the King, ſhould have a hundred Marks; or if he could bring his Head, he ſhould have Forty pounds.

* Ib. n. 5. The like Judgment given upon Thomas de Gurney and Will. Ocle for the Murther of the late K.

The * ſame Judgment was given likewiſe againſt Thomas de Gurney, and William de Ocle, for the Death of King Edward, That they had falſly and traiterouſly murthered Him; and he that could take Thomas alive, was to have a hundred pounds; or if he could bring his Head, a hundred Marks: He that could bring William de Ocle alive, was to have a hundred Marks, or his Head, forty pounds.

[2] T. W. Gurney being ſeized at Marſeilles, is beheaded on ſhipboard.

× Walsingham is mistaken when he relates him to have been taken at Marseilles, since it appears by two several Letters written by K. Edward to Alfonso [illegible] Rot. Pat. 5 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 13. vid. [illegible] Collection p. 4 [illegible] King of Castile, & also to the Mayor and [illegible] of [illegible] Burgos, [illegible] thanking them for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] at Bayonne, to the Mayor of Bayonne to be sent over into England, and not long after he was [illegible].

What became of this De Ocle I cannot tell, but [2.] as for Gurney, he was not long after ſeized at Marſeilles in France, and being put on board a Ship, in order to be brought over to England, was by order of the Captain beheaded at Sea, leſt if he arrived, he ſhould accuſe ſome Prelates and other Great Men, as being privy and conſenting to the ſame Crime.

* Rot. Parl. 4 Ed 3. n. 16. printed in Dr. B's Ap. n. 85. The Lord Berkele is alſo arraigned for the ſame Crime, but he was not found guilty at his Tryal.

* This was another Seat of the ſaid Lords.

Likewiſe amongſt the * Pleas of the Crown of this Parliament, there is recorded the Arraignment of the Lord Thomas de Berkele, for the Death of King Edward the Second, to this effect; for that the ſaid King was committed to the keeping of the ſaid Thomas, and John Matravers, in the Caſtle of the ſaid Sir Thomas at Berkele when He was murthered: the ſaid Thomas ſaith, That at the time of the death of the ſaid King, he was ſick at * Bradelye, without the ſaid Caſtle, and knew not what was done there, nor was conſenting thereunto, and thereupon put himſelf upon his Tryal by Twelve Knights (named in the Record) who found him not guilty, nor that he fled, or withdrew himſelf upon it; but ſince he had placed under him Thomas de Gurney, and William de Ocle to keep the King, by whom He was murthered; he had a day given him to hear his Judgment in the next Parliament, and in the mean time was committed to Ralph Nevill, Steward of the King's Houſhold.

* Rot. Parl. 4 Ed. 3. n. 13. The Young Earl of Kent reſtored in Blood. As is alſo the Son of the late Earl of Arundel.

In this Parliament, * Ed~~ward~~ mund the Young Earl of Kent, was alſo reſtored to his Father's Honour and Eſtate, as hath been already obſerved; for being encouraged thro the Clemency as well as Juſtice ſhewn by the King, to Richard, Son of the late Earl of Arundel, he alſo prayed to be reſtored to his Blood, Lands and Goods, ſeeing his Father was put to death, not being try'd by his Peers, according to the great Charter, and the Law of the Land; but becauſe the Attainder was confirm'd by Parliament at Northampton, he mended his Petition, and prayed to be reſtored of the King's meer Grace, which was granted accordingly.

* Ib. n. 14. A 1000 l. per Annum ſetled on Sir William Montacute for ſeizing the Lord Mortimer.

* Ib. n. 15.

Alſo * in the ſame Parliament, the Prelates, Earls and Barons, prayed and adviſed the King to give and grant a thouſand pounds per Annum to Sir William Montacute, and his Heirs, for his Service, in taking Roger Mortimer, Earl of Marche, and his Confederates, without Bloodſhed; a thouſand Marks whereof was to be out of the Lands of Mortimer. And upon the like Prayer and Advice, his Aſſiſtants, * viz Edward Bohun had four hundred Marks per Annum to him and his Heirs; Robert de Ufford three hundred, and John Nevill two hundred.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxx.

And to give you the reſt of the moſt conſiderable Tranſactions of this Parliament, William Archbiſhop of York, Stephen Biſhop of London, William Abbot of Langdon, William Lord Zouch of Mortimer, and many others, who had agreed with Edmund late Earl of Kent, for the Delivery of the late King Edward, and been therefore impeached, were now wholly acquitted, and fully reſtor'd to all their Goods and Poſſeſſions.

Vid. Cotton's Abridg. p. 7.

The Archbiſhop of York and others acquitted for endeavouring the Delivery of the late K.

It was alſo * ordered, that thoſe who had taken up Arms with Henry Earl of Lancaſter at Bedford, or had been concern'd in the Matter of Edmund late Earl of Kent, ſhould be releaſed of all Fines impoſed for that reaſon upon them; and that their Lands which were therefore ſeized into the King's Hands, ſhould be reſtored with the Meſne-Profits, &c. and therefore the King pardoneth Henry Earl of Lancaſter, and all thoſe who took part with him, all Fines and Ranſoms whatſoever.

* Ib: p. 8.

Thoſe who had taken up Arms with the Earl are diſcharged from all Fines.

And farther, we find, that ſoon after the News of Mortimer's Fall, and the Knowledge of this Pardon, [3.] Thomas Lord Wake, Hugh Lord Audeley, Henry Lord Beaumont, Sir Thomas Roſſelin, Sir William Truſſel, Sir Thomas Withers, and the reſt, whom Mortimer's Power had forced beyond the Seas, returned from France, and were received as their Loyalty deſerved; being by the King freely reſtored to all their Lands and Poſſeſſions.

[3.] H. K.

Several Lords and Knights who had fled beyond Sea for fear of Mortimer, return and reſtor'd to their Eſtates.

This Parliament having diſpatched a great deal of Buſineſs in a ſhort time, was diſſolved a little before Chriſtmaſs. Then the King went down into the Country to divert Himſelf, and kept that Feſtival at Wells.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxi.

With Mortimer, the Queen-Mother's Power alſo fell; For not long after, the King being made ſenſible how ill She had carried Her Self, with Reſpect to His late Father, Himſelf, and Her own Reputation, [4.] took the Management of Publick Affairs into His own Hands, and confined Her to Her Houſe at Riſings near London; and ſeizing upon the great and immoderate Jointure that had been ſetled upon Her at His firſt coming to the Crown, allow'd Her a Penſion of but Three Thouſand Pounds per Ann. but left Her ſuch Plate, Jewels, and other Furniture, as befitted Her Dignity: And tho' She came no more to Court, yet the King went conſtantly to viſit Her once or twice every Year, as long as She lived. ×

[4.] T. W.

The K. takes the Government into His own Hands; confines His Mother to Her Houſe, and ſeizing upon Her great Joynture allows Her a Penſion of 3000 l. per Ann.

× I cannot but here take notice, yt this year there was outwardly a perfect Peace, & agreement made between King Edward, & Philip of France, the former having perform'd all the Articles agreed on between them, and the latter having also been Content to pay the former the sum of 33000 Livres Tournois, at Easter next ensuing.

This Summer He ſpent in reforming the Abuſes and Corruptions of the Government: And in Autumn, on the day after Michaelmaſs, *He held another Parliament. In which the Biſhop of Wincheſter being Chancellor, declared the Cauſe of Summons to be concerning the Dutchy of Aquitain, and the King's other Lands beyond Sea; whether Peace ſhould be made, or other Iſſue put to the late Differences between the Kings of England and France, by reaſon of the ſaid Territories: And alſo about the Buſineſs of Ireland; and concerning the King's going thither: And likewiſe to ordain how the Peace might beſt be kept there. And it was agreed, that the King's Buſineſs ought to be diſpatch'd before any other.

* Rot. Clauſ. 5 Ed. 3. m. 7. Dors.

Rot. Parl. n. 2.

The K. ſummons a Parliament, at which the Bp. of Wincheſter declares the cauſes of it.

Then *the Chancellor applied himſelf to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and all the other Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men, for their Advice; Whether they thought it beſt, for the King to proceed by way of Proceſs, or War, or by amicable Treaty with the

* Ib. n. 3.

Upon which he deſires the Advice of the K. and Lords

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxi.

King of France, for the Reſtitution of Aquitain. And they agreed upon the laſt, ſeeing the two former ways might prove dangerous: And the Biſhops of Wincheſter, Worceſter, and Norwich, or one or two of them, as the King pleaſed, together with the Lords Beaumont, Piercy, and Montacute, Sir Geoffry Leſcrop, and Mr. John de Shordich, were to be ſent to the King of France for that purpoſe.

* Ib.

Some Forces ordered for Ireland.

As * to the Buſineſs of Ireland, it was agreed in the ſame Parliament, That the King ſhould provide Himſelf to go thither as ſoon as He could, and in the mean time, that He ſhould ſend over ſome Great Perſon with Men at Arms, to aid the Juſtices and other Liege-People againſt ſuch as oppoſed the Government.

* Id. n. 9.

In this Parliament alſo, * the King, by Aſſent of the Peers, and at their Requeſt, granted, That the Queen His Mother, becauſe the Penſion of Three Thouſands Pounds yearly, which She was to receive out of the Exchequer, for Her Support, was not well paid according to Her mind, ſhould have Lands and Rents of that Value aſſigned to Her.

* Ib. n. 10.

Ordered, that no Great Man ſhould for the future maintain or abett any Robber or other Malefactor.

Then * for keeping of the Peace it was alſo agreed in full Parliament, (every one of the ſaid Great Men having been eſpecially examined, and aſſenting) That no Great Man of the Land for the future, ſhould retain, maintain, or avow, openly or privately, by himſelf or others, any Robber or Malefactor indicted of Felony, or Fugitive for the ſame, nor any ſued to an Exigent, or of evil Fame. And the ſaid Great Men promiſed with all their Power to aſſiſt the Juſtices, Sheriffs, and other the King's Officers, in the Execution of all Judgments, and other things that belonged to their Offices; as well againſt Great Men as others, of what Condition ſoever they were. The Cauſe for the making of this Statute (as * Walſingham informs us) was, That certain Lawleſs Diſſolute Fellows relying upon the Protection of ſome of the Great Men of the Kingdom, and deſpiſing the King's Youth, would now make a Diſturbance; So that poſſeſſing themſelves of certain Paſſes thro' Woods and Mountains, they robbed all they met with, and increaſed to that degree, that they became a Terror to the whole Kingdom. Wherefore the King was forced to raiſe ſome Military Troops to ſuppreſs them, and acted with that Vigour, that divers of theſe Malefactors were taken and impriſoned, and others were executed; and by this means they were ſuppreſſed for a time, tho' you will hear more of them hereafter.

The Occaſion of this Statute.

* Ad hunc An.

England affording nothing more worth noting, I ſhall now give you an Account of an Accident that cauſed a Great Revolution in Scotland the next Year, by a few Engliſh and Scotch Voluntiers, headed by the Lord Edward Baliol, Son of John, formerly K. of that Nation. The Original of it was thus: [1.] This young Lord, after the Death of his Father in Normandy, had lived privately upon his Lordſhip called Quimper in that Province, until by reaſon of his protecting and ſending away an Engliſh Servant of his, that had killed a Frenchman in a Quarrel, he was not only diſſeized of his Eſtate, but caſt into Priſon by the King of France; where he continued for ſome time, till the Ld. Henry Beaumont's going over thither, who being driven out by the Power of Mortimer, (as hath been already related) found ſo much favour with the King of France, his Kinſman, that by his interceſſion the Lord Bailiol was ſet free: And being look'd upon as the true Heir to the Scotiſh Crown, he was by the Lord Beaumont brought over into

[1.] Caxton's Chron

The Ld Baliol put in priſon, and his Eſtate ſeized in France, and on what occaſion.

He is ſet free by the interceſſion of the Ld. Beaumont.

England,

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxi.

England, that by ſetting up his Title, he might thereby obtain his Inheritance in Scotland ; claiming in Right of his Wiſe the Earldom of Buquhan in that Kingdom. Baliol being thus arrived in England, lay for ſome time privately in Yorkſhire ; where the Lord Beaumont began ſecretly to raiſe Men in order to that Deſign : Which being in a good Forwardneſs, Balliol was in the Beginning of Auguſt preſented to the King, where he not only renewed his Father's Claim to Scotland, but alſo offer'd to hold it of the King by Homage, provided he were reſtored to his Right by His means.

He is preſented to the K. and renews his Claim to Scotland.

Tho' King Edward was much troubled at the diſhonourable Peace that had been ſtruck up with the Scots in His Minority, [2.] yet was He obliged by a Bond of Twenty Thouſand Pounds forſeitable to the Pope, to obſerve this Truce inviolable for the Term of Four Years, which were not yet expired ; and therefore He refuſed to give Baliol any Aſſiſtance Himſelf, but however He connived at his engaging ſuch Engliſh and Scotiſh Nobility and Gentry, as had by the late Peace and Agreement with the young King of Scots, been diſinherited of their Eſtates in that Kingdom. Thereupon theſe all agreed to raiſe Forces at their own Charges, and under Bailiol's Title to make War upon King David: Which tho' they could not begin in this, yet you will find they did it with Succeſs the next Summer.

[2.] H. K. Col. 2560.

K. Edward refuſes to aſſiſt Bailiol openly, and for what cauſe ; yet connives at his engaging ſuch Noblemen as had loſt their Eſtates for taking his Part.

To add ſomewhat more of Foreign Affairs, I muſt here take notice of an Action, which (tho' it only concern'd a Subject of France, yet ſince it produced ſo great a War in that Kingdom) deſerves Obſervation. [3.] The Lord Robert of Artois, who had married K. Philip's Siſter,(being a Perſon of extraordinary Parts and Intereſt, had been a great means of ſetting the Crown upon His Head) now fell into open Enmity with Him on this Occaſion. This Lord, after the Death of Mahaud Counteſs of Artois, challenged that Earldom, as Heir to his Father, againſt Blanche Daughter to the late King Philip the long and then Wiſe to Eudes Duke of Burgundy : And to this end he produced in the Parliament at Paris certain Charters under the Great Seals of the former Kings of France, to make out and confirm his Right; and which as he alledged had lain hitherto conceal'd. This Proceſs being heard before the King in the ſaid Parliament, theſe Charters upon ſtrict examination, were found to be Counterfeit, and his Cauſe declared unjuſt. Upon this, the Ld. Robert looking on the K. as the Author of his Diſgrace, (having openly appeared for the Lady Blanche His Niece) ſaid in his Paſſion, By me Philip was made King, and by me He ſhall be un-king'd, together with a great deal of other undutiful Language : Which being related to King Philip, He was ſo enraged at it, that He endeavoured to ſeize his Perſon , but he making his Eſcape, was thereupon baniſhed by Sound of Trumpet, and all his Eſtate confiſcated ; and what was yet more ſevere, his Lady (tho' the King's own Siſter) was made a cloſe Priſoner, together with her Children. Robert finding there was no more mercy for him in France, fled for refuge to the Earl of Haynault ; but the King's indignation would not ſuffer him to continue long there : So that the Duke of Brabant being excited by the King to make War upon the E. of Haynault, upon that and ſome other Accounts, the Lord Robert, that he might not prove a Ruin to his Friend, left his Country, and came over to the King of England the Year following; tho', not to make a Breach in this Story, I have [3.] Gaguin & Mezeray. Hiſt. de France.

The Lord Robert of Artois falls out with the King of France, and on what occaſion.

He is baniſhed the Kingdom, and flies into Haynault.

Where not being able to ſtay, he comes over into England.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxi.

I have placed it together under this; where at preſent I ſhall ſay no more of him, but that being a Great Favourite and Privy-Councellor to King Edward, He never ceaſed to excite Him to a War with France; which broke out ſome Years after.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxii.

* Rot. Clauſ. 6 Ed. 3. m. 36. Dorſ.

Another Parliament at Weſtminſter.

* Rot. Parl. 6 Ed 3. n. 5.

The Cauſes of it declared by the Chancellor.

The neceſſity of the King's Affairs obliging Him to frequent Parliaments, * He now iſſued out Writs for a new one to be held on Monday after St. Gregory, or Twelfth of March, reciting in the Summons the Cauſes of His calling it, * which the Chancellor more fully declared at their meeting; to wit, that the King of France, and many other King's and Princes (mentioned in the Writ) having appointed their going towards the Holy Land in that preſent Month of March, they much deſired the Company of the King of England, for the better ſtrengthening themſelves againſt the Enemies of Chriſtendom, and that they had lately for this purpoſe ſent over Letters and Meſſengers to Him; He therefore demanded the Advice of the Prelates, Barons, and other Great Men in Parliament, whether it was fit for Him to accompany the King of France, or not.

* Ib.

Sir Geoffry L' Eſcrope ſets forth the Miſchiefs that had happened by reaſon of Robbers and Outlaws.

He alſo asks the Advice of the Prelates and Peers concerning the King's Voyage to the Holy-Land.

After this Declaration, Sir Geoffry L' Eſcrop, by command of the King, and in His preſence, before all the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men, reported, That the King was inform'd, and it was notorious to them all, that divers looſe perſons defying the Law, were gathered together in great Companies, to the deſtruction of the King's Liges, the people of Holy Church, &c. taking and detaining ſome of the King's Juſtices in Priſon, until, to ſave their Lives, they had paid great Fines and Ranſoms, at the pleaſure of the ſaid Malefactors; ſome of the King's Subjects they had put to death, and robbed others of their Goods and Chattels, doing other ſad Miſchiefs and Felonies; and further, the ſaid Sir Geoffry, on behalf of the King, charged the Prelates, and all others there aſſembled, That by the Faith and Allegiance they owed to the King, they would counſel Him concerning His Voyage to the Holy-Land, which He very much deſired to undertake, and alſo how the Peace might be kept, and theſe Rioters in the mean time chaſtiſed and reſtrained from their Wickedneſs.

Ib. n. 5.

* Grantz; under which Titles the Knights of Shires were alſo comprehended.

Then the Lords and * Great Men being returned to the King's Preſence, by the Mouth of Sir Henry Beaumont, gave their Anſwers, that for the Conſervation of the Peace againſt thoſe Offenders, there ſhould be Juſtices ordained in every County, with power to puniſh and repreſs them; and further, That certain Officers ſhould be alſo appointed for apprehending Malefactors, and levying of Hue and Cry.

* Ib.

The Reſolution of the Lds in Parliament for the ſuppreſſing of Robbers.

* Whereupon, by the Advice of the Earls, Barons, &c. it was in the firſt place agreed, That as to theſe wicked people, the King ſhould proſecute them by Law, Force, and all other ways He ſhould be adviſed; and accordingly Commiſſions were iſſued out to the beſt Men in the Counties, and to the Sheriffs, to apprehend and impriſon them, and raiſe the Poſſe Comitatus againſt them, and cauſe them to be indicted, and puniſhed according to their Deſerts.

But it is very remarkable, that the Prelates and Proctors of the Clergy (who were preſent alſo at this Parliament) finding it not belong to them, being Spiritual Men, to give their Advice about keeping the Peace, and puniſhing the Breaches of it, therefore they went apart by themſelves, to deliberate of the other Matters propoſed to them; from whence it appears, that not only the Prelates, but Inferior Clergy of oth Provinces then made a diſtinct Eſtate in Parliament, by Virtue of he Clauſe of Premunientes, inſerted in the Writs to the Archbiſhops nd Biſhops.

both

And it was further agreed by the King* and Eſtates aforeſaid, That the Sentence of Excommunication, which had been ordained by the Prelates nd Clergy, ſhould be pronounced againſt them in the Church of St. Paul in London, and ſent to all the Biſhops in England, to be alſo pronounced gainſt them in their reſpective Dioceſſes.

*Ib. n. 5.

As, * That all thoſe who diſturbed the Peace and Quiet of Holy Churh nd the Realm, eſpecially ſuch as made Confederacies by Covenants, Obligations, &c. or in any other manner, were declared Excommunica-ed; as were alſo the * Receivers, Favourers and Defenders of them: And further, That all ſuch Covenants, Obligations, Confederacies and Alliances were made void and annulled by the ſaid Prelates, &c. and hat if any Oath was taken to confirm them, that was alſo declared void.

* Ib. n 6.

*Ib. n. 7, 8.

But to give you ſome further light into this Ordinance, and ſhew the Reaſons for the making of it; You may remember, that the Year before, certain diſſolute bold Fellows combin'd together, and meeting in great Companies, turn'd Robbers and Highway-men, and keeping in he Woods and Foreſts, robbed all that paſs'd thoſe ways; inſomuch that [4] Sir Robert Willoughby, Lord Chief Juſtice, travelling ~~then~~ lately owards Grantham, to put the Statute of Trail-baſton in execution gainſt ſuch Malefactors, was taken by one Robert Folvile and his Gang, nd forced for the ranſom of his Life, both to lay down Ninety Marks, nd alſo ſwear never to diſcover them; but he not only complained o the King of this Villany, but likewiſe repreſented this Matter to the arliament, who took ſuch order in it, as hath been already mention-d. And now to return again to our Parliament-Rolls.

[4] H. K. col. 2559.

* As concerning the King's Voyage to the Holy-Land, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, &c. with one conſent agreed, that it could not then be erformed, becauſe the time aſſigned for it by the King of France, was too hort.

* Ib. n 9.

The Lords in Parliament diſapprove of the King's Voyage to the Holy-Land.

*It was further declared in this Parliament, on behalf of the King, y the ſaid Sir Geoffry L'Eſcrop, That whereas in the laſt Parliament, n the Fifth Year of the King, it had been agreed, that all Differences oved between the Kings of England and France, concerning the Lands eyond Sea, ſhould be reconcil'd by Treaty, or way of Marri-ge, or in ſome other Amicable manner; and that thereupon the King had ſent his Commiſſioners to the King of France, who had treated with Him, and made Report to King Edward, that His Majeſty of France told hem, That if it pleaſed their Maſter to come over in perſon, He would ſhew more favour to Him, than to any other; wherefore it was neceſ-ary to ſend ſpeedily to the ſaid King; and for this end He demanded the Advice of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, &c. in full Parliament, Whether if thoſe Envoys at their Return, ſhould repreſent to the King, that His Affairs would be in a much better condition f He went over in perſon, He ſhould go, or not; and in that reſpect all the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and other Great Men conſented to His go-ng, in hopes that all Obſtacles to an amicable Compoſure between hem might be thereby removed, and much advantage accrue to Him; hey adviſed alſo, that his Voyage into Ireland might be poſtponed until

* Ib. n. 10.

Yet they conſent to his going over into France to compoſe all Differences with that King.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxii

til Michaelmaſs next, ſo that in the mean time ſome Men at Arms, and others might be ſent in aid of His Good Subjects there.

Ib. n. 11.
The Parliament is diſſolved, having diſpatch'd much Buſineſs in a little time

* Then the Saturday after the meeting of it, this Parliament wa diſſolved, not having ſat a whole week; which ſhews us how much Buſineſs could in thoſe times be diſpatched in a few days, when all thi were drawn up, and ready prepared before-hand by the King and Hi Council.

* Ib.

It is alſo very remarkable, that tho * the King then gave leave to the Knights of Shires, and Citizens and Burgeſſes, as alſo to the Lower Clergy to return home, yet He ordered the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and His Counſellors in Parliament to tarry longer, to have their Advice in ſome other Matters of great moment, which He had further to propoſe to them.

× But I find by the Patent Rolls of this year [Pat. 6. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 5. 6. vid. Rr IV. vol. p. 518, 519] that the King sent over John Bishop of Winchester his Chancellour, Adam Bishop of Worcester, Sr William Clyaton, & Dr John Shurditch his Ambassadors to the King of France to treat with him about their Master's voyage with him to the Holy Land, & about an Interview to be between them about that Affair, as also concerning a Treaty of Marriage between Prince Edward, and Johan Daughter to King Philip. But ye war with Scotland breaking out this year which was followed with a War upon France broke off any further Effect of this Treaty.

I mention this, to ſhew further, that the Lower Clergy, as different from the Prelates, were preſent at this Parliament, and that therefore by the Proctors of the Inferior Clergy before mentioned, muſt b underſtood, their Delegates and Repreſentatives in Parliament, wh ſat by themſelves, and not with the Lay-Commons, as ſome Writer have without any juſt grounds affirmed.

A Relation of a ſtrange Revolution in Scotland, and by what means, with the weak condition of that Kingdom at this time.
[5.] Froiſſ ib. c. 20.

But to come to ſome Foreign Affairs; England affording us nothin elſe worth noting,× we will ſee what was done this Summer in Scotland where one of the ſtrangeſt Revolutions that we ſhall read of in Hiſtory was brought about by a few Engliſh Voluntiers (of whom we gav ſome Account the laſt Year). Theſe having now got their Forces ready, reſolved to invade Scotland, and indeed (as it happened) they coul never have founda better Opportunity for it; for beſides that King Davi was then a Minor, the old Lords, Douglas and Randolph, late Generals o the Scotiſh Forces were likewiſe both dead, [5.] the former being kill' in an Expedition againſt the Moors in Spain, and the latter lately deceaſed of a Natural Death at home; notwithſtanding what Boethiu and Buchanan falſly relate of his being poiſoned ſome time after this, b a Monk hired by King Edward, who feigned himſelf to be a Phyſician So that Scotland being now deſtitute of any experienced Commanders [1.] it much encouraged the Lord Beaumont, David of Stratbolgi, Ea of Athol; Gilbert Umphrevil, Earl of Angus, and Henry Lord Pierc (who claimed all Galloway); as alſo the Lord Richard Talbot, a Valian young Nobleman, together with many other Lords and Gentlemen i their deſign; And having made the Lord Baliol their General, and declared for his Right to the Scotiſh Crown, they raiſed a ſmall Army chiefly conſiſting of their own Tenants and other Dependants, and taking Shipping at Ravenſpar in Yorkſhire, [2.] came before Kingcorn, no far from Dumferling in Scotland, in the beginning of March; but th Scots having already Intelligence of their Deſign, had ſent Ten thouſand Men to hinder their Landing, [3.] under the Command of Dunca Macdulf, Earl of Fife, the Earl of Carrick, Baſtard Brother to King David, and Sir Alexander Seton, Eldeſt Son to the Lord of that Name but tho Baliol's Forces were but ſmall, not amounting to more tha Three thouſand Men; yet theſe by the aſſiſtance, and under protection of the Engliſh Archers, who ſhot inceſſantly from their Ships, landed in ſpight of the Scotiſh Army, of which they preſently killed abou Nine hundred, and from thence marched to the Abbey of Dumferling where they found great ſtore of Proviſions, and other things neceſſary fo

[1.] H. K col. 2560.
The Ld Beaumont with the Earls of Athol and Angus make the Lord Baliol their General, and raiſe Forces to recover his Right to Scotland.
[2.] Id. ib.
[3.] John Tinmouth. Hiſt. Aur.
They land in Scotland, and put the Earls of Fife and Carrick with ſeveral other Noblemen to the Rout.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxii.

or Soldiers; this done, being not yet Four thouſand Men (tho  Bu-hanan* will have them to be Ten thouſand) they again took the Field, nd hearing where the Scotiſh Army lay, [4.] they paſſed the River Erne y Night, and ſurpriſing their Camp, entred it, and utterly defeated hat part of their Forces; and tho moſt of them eſcaped away in the Dark, yet above Three thouſand of them were ſlain. But the Manu-cript Author of Scala-Chronicon, gives a truer and more modeſt Account of his Action, and ſays, That this Engagement was in the Night, not with he main Body of the Scotiſh Army, but only with their Camp-Boys and ther Dependants that looked after the Horſes, whom having put to ight, they not long after by the light of a Houſe that was accidentally et on fire, diſcover'd the main Body of the Scotiſh Army approaching hem in two great Diviſions; whereupon the Engliſh (ſeeing they could ot avoid fighting without great danger) marched boldly, and fell upon them with that fury and ſuddenneſs, that the Vant-Guard of the Scots being too hard preſs'd, recoil'd upon the next Battalion, and put hem into ſuch diſorder, that the Engliſh laying hold on this Advantage, uite routed the whole Army, and kill'ed about fourteen thouſand of hem on the ſpot; [5.] the chief of whom were the Earls of Carrick, Mar, Menteithe, and Athol (not he of Strathbogi, but another upon whom the ate King of Scots had conferr'd that Title) beſides twelve Barons, and ight hundred Military Tenants; but what was moſt remarkable on he Engliſh ſide, was, that there fell but two Knights, thirty three quires, and of Ordinary Archers and Footmen few or none: This reat Victory was obtained on Wedneſday the Eleventh of Auguſt at a lace called Gledeſmore, not far from St. John's-Town. But I muſt here bſerve, that the Scotiſh Hiſtorians do not own any more than the firſt f theſe Defeats, and were either ignorant of, or elſe deſignedly conceal the latter.

* L. 9.

They paſs the River Erne, and ſurprize the Scots Army.

[4] H. K. col. 2561.

A fuller Account of this Engagement from Scala-Chronicon.

[5.] H K. Ib.

The Earls of Carrick and Mar, with many other Noblemen ſlain, the loſs on the Engliſh ſide being inconſiderable.

The Conſequence of which was, the ſurrender of Perthe, or [1.] t. John's-Town without any reſiſtance, where they found good ſtore of Proviſions and Warlike Ammunition. Whilſt they lay here, Patrick Earl of Dunbar, and Lord Archebald Douglas came and inveſted the Town with an Army of Forty thouſand Men, and beſides this, they had nt Sir John Crabbe, their Admiral, with a ſmall Fleet of ten Sail of Flan-rian Ships to burn the Engliſh Veſſels that lay at Anchor in the Mouth f the River Tay; but here they miſſed of their Deſign, for tho at firſt they ook one or two Ships, yet the reſt of the Fleet having time to arm, ade ſo vigorous a defence, that albeit they were inferior to the Scots in umber of Men, however they ſo exceeded them in Valour and Conduct, hat they not only put them to flight, but ſunk and took moſt of their Veſſels; Crabbe their Admiral getting on Shore, eſcaped to Berwick, nd brought the firſt News of this Defeat, which was given on St. Bar-olomew's Day: Upon this Succeſs the Scots raiſed the Siege of St. John's Town, and marched off; then the Engliſh delivered the Cuſtody of it by he Lord Baliol's Order to the Earl of Fife, who upon this late Succeſs ad revolted from King David, and not long after as treacherouſly went ack again to the other Party, and betray'd the Town as an Earneſt of is Loyalty to his former King. And I cannot but obſerve here by the bye, hat * Adam Muremuthe by his prepoſterous beginning of the Year at Michaelmaſs, hath placed this Expedition, and King Baliol's Coronation hat followed it, under the foregoing Year; which has led Walſingham

[1.] Id. ib.

St. John's-Town ſurrendered to Baliol.

The Earl of Dunbar, and Lord Douglas inveſt the Town by Land, whilſt Sir John Crabbe does the like by Sea.

But the Fleet is defeated, and the Siege raiſed.

* Ad An. 1331.

as

⅄ Upon which victory the new King went to Roxborough, & there resided for some ti which I find most remarkable is, that during his stay there he seald a Charter (not taken notice of by our Historians) whereby he acknowledged his Kingdom of Scotland to be held of ye Kings of by Liege Homage and Fealty, & yt K. John his Father had done Homage for it to King Edward I ving by the Sufferance and Assistance of his Lord, and Cousin King Edward of England, and by ye ai Party, he had now his Kingdom of Scotland & was crowned King of the same. Therefore in acknow ye ancient Right by wch ye sd Kingdom, with ye Isles thereunto belonging had been held of the Kings of England as the Soveraign Ld. he now did Liege Homage to ye K. Edward his dear Lord & Cousin in ye words following, the said King holding his Hands between his Soveraigns. I Edward by ye Grace of God King of Scotland & ye Isles thereunto belonging become your Liege Man for ye sd. Kingdom & Isles agt all men to live & dye. Which Homage being receivd as afforesaid, he further confirmed his Fidelity to ye King of England by touching the Holy Evangelists, & taking an Oath to ye same Effect with ye former words. Then follows a further grant to King Edward (in consideration of ye great Assistance given him by ye said King) of certain Lands to ye value of 2000 pr. Ann. together with ye Town & Castle & County of Berwick, wch were to be surrendred to him by Michaelmas next ensuing, or sooner if it could be performed, with a further Covenant, that if ye marriage between David de Brus & Joanna King Edward's sister were not consummated he would marry her, if she would give her Consent thereunto, & also increase her Dowrie by 500 pr. An: and in Case he did not take her to Wife, to pay her, or her Heirs 10000 sterling within ye space of one year, with other Clauses & Conditions; which since they could never be performed, I omit. This Charter bears Date at Roxburgh 23 Novr. in ye first year of his Reign; which deserves your notice, because it thereby appears yt King Edward was this year in Scotland & had a personal Interview wth K. Bailiol, which neither our own, nor ye Scottish Historians do mention: and this Homage preceded yt made at Edinburgh above a year & a half, as you will find when you come to it, being almost in ye same words with this, ye Grant of Edinburgh, Roxborough, & other Places excepted.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxii.

The Lord Baliol with consent of divers of the Scotiſh Nobil. is made K. of Scotland.

[2.] T. W.

* Buchanan wrongfully places His Coronation 20 Kal. Septem. He preſently after routs Sir Andr. Murrey.

* Rot. Clauſ. 6 Ea. 3 m. 7. Vid. Cotton's Abridg. p. 12, 13.

Rot. Parl. 6 Ed. 3. n. 1. 3.

The K holds a Parliament at Weſtminſter, with the Occaſion of it.

The K. has a Fifteenth and a Tenth then granted him at once.

* Rot. Clauſ. 6 Ed 3. m. 4. Dors. Vid. Cot Rec. p. 13.

The K calls a new Parliam. at York, and demands their advice, what He ſhould do concerning Scotland

* Rot. Parl. eod An. n. 3. Cot. Rec. p. 13.

(as he has done ſeveral of our Modern Hiſtorians) into the ſame Err to the great confuſion of the Scotiſh Affairs.

The Lord Baliol having by the Aſſiſtance of the Engliſh Forces, th beat his Enemies quite out of the Field, and divers of the Scotiſh Nobili thereupon coming in to him; [2.] he was by their General Conſe as well as that of the Engliſh who came in with him, Crown'd King Scotland, at the Abbey of Scone, on the * Twenty Seventh of Septe ber. Not long after which, He had another Engagement with Ki David's Party near Roxburgh; where Sir Andrew Murrey, Governor the Realm was taken, and ſent Priſoner to Durham. ⅄ But you will anon King Baliol's good Fortune did not laſt; being ſometime af driven out of Scotland with greater Precipitancy than he won it. A now we will return to the Affairs of England, from which we ha made too long a Digreſſion.

Not long after this Succeſs of King Baliol, (the News of which, ſeems, had not as yet reached England) * King Edward held a Par ament on the Morrow after the Nativity of the B. Virgin, or Ninth September, at Weſtminſter; where the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Lo Chancellor, declared, That the Cauſe of their Meeting was about t Affairs of France, and the King's Expedition thither, to put a St to the Succeſs of His Enemies in thoſe Parts. Then the Parliament h ving been adjourn'd till the Thurſday following; they recieved ſo ſudden News out of the North, which made them fear an Invaſion fro the Scots: Whereupon the Prelates, Lds., and Knts. of Shires, did each their ſeveral Petitions, adviſe and requeſt the King not to go into I land, but only to ſend thither a ſufficient Supply of Men and Mone whilſt Himſelf marched with a Strong Force towards the North, the to watch the Motions of the Scots. For which Expedition He had gran ed Him a Fifteenth of the Perſonal Eſtates of the Prelates, Lords, a Knights of Shires; and a Tenth of all Cities and Boroughs: On they deſired, That the King would pleaſe to live of His own, witho grieving His Subjects by Outrageous Prizes, or ſuch like illegal Tax Whereupon the King revoked the late New Commiſſion for raiſing certain Talliages or Cuſtoms; and promiſed from henceforth to ſett the ſame according to the Old Rates.

Soon after this Parliament was diſſolved, the King, that He mig recieve the ſpeedier Account of the Poſture of Affairs in Scotlan which were now quite alter'd for His Advantage, removed His Cou to York; where having heard the News of King Baliol's unexpect Succeſs in Scotland, He was not only out of fear of any Invaſion fro thence, But ſo ſoon almoſt as He came thither, He thought fit to * ſu mon a New Parliament to that Place, on the Friday before the Feaſt St. Michael, to give their advice, what was beſt for Him to do on th Occaſion. But the Parliament did not meet until the Second day December: When Sir Geoffrey le Scrope declared the Cauſe of the Meeting was, * That the King having lately underſtood that the Lo Baliol had cauſed Himſelf to be proclaimed King of Scotland, and th the Truce with David Bruce was newly expired; He demanded th Advice, whether He ſhould fall upon Scotland in His own Name, an claim the Dominion thereof as His own Right; or elſe by joining wi King Baliol, ſhould take the Advantage of recovering the Homag and Services His Anceſtors had enjoyed. But becauſe moſt part of t

Prelat

The Original of this is preserved among ye Royal Archives at Westminster & is published in R–s iv. Vol. p. 537, 5 And there is also extant in ye same Place another Charter of ye King, whereby he obliges himself & his heirs to assi Edward & his Heirs wth all their Power against all such as shd. make War against them, & wth this further Clause (which inserted in ye former Charter) yt he will renew ye sd. Letters Patents in ye next Parliament with ye assent thereof. bears ye same Date & at ye same Place with ye former Letters Patents. — And on ye 12 of Feb. followin ther Charter, under his Great Seal, bearing Date at Burgh upon ye Sands, reciting ye large former Letters Pat to King Edward, he appointed & deputed Sr. Alexander de Mowbray, & Sr. John de Geltown to be his special Proctors & his name to confirm all things contained in ye same, & to swear on his behalf (or upon his Soul as it is there express should observe and maintain all those things without ever acting against them. But this was done after he driven out of Scotland, as you will find in ye next Leaf. The curious Reader may see a Copy of from ye original in R–s iv. Vol. p. 458.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxii.

Prelates and Clergy were abſent, theſe things were not at that time reſolved on: So the Parliament was adjourn'd until the Octaves of Hillary next enſuing.

But is adjourned without coming to any Reſolution.

* Id. ib. p. 14. And the Cauſe of it.

The * Cauſe of this Diſappointment, the ſame Record informs us, was, thro' the Pride and Emulation of the two Archbiſhops. For, He of York and the Biſhop of Carliſle appearing there, the Primate of Canterbury and all his Suffragans (except the Biſhop of Lincoln) would not come to this Parliament; becauſe the Archbiſhop of York being in his own Province, made his Croſs to be born before him, which the other Firſt Prelate could not endure; and ſo by reaſon of this Non-appearance of the Biſhops, the Parliament came to no Reſolution as to the preſent carrying on the War in Scotland; to the great Prejudice of the Nation, and the Charge and Trouble of doing that in a New Parliament, which ought to have been done in this. And it being now thus broke up, the King returned into the South of England, there to keep His Chriſtmaſs.

I have no more to add concerning this Parliament at York, only the MS. called Scala Chron. as alſo the Chronicle of * Lanercoſt tell us, that at this Aſſembly, the Lord Beaumont, and the Earl of Athol, with divers other Noblemen who had been in the late Battels with King Baliol, appear'd; being ſent by Him to uſe all their Intereſt to engage the King and the Eſtates of England to declare in His Favour: And at the ſame time there came certain Envoys from David Bruce, to beſeech the King that He would give no Aſſiſtance to His Enemy, but rather to help Him who was His Brother-in-law and Ally; with whom alſo He was then in Amity. But the K's Council were of Opinion, That He was not obliged to act againſt His own Subjects, who had loſt all their Eſtates in Scotland by the late Articles of Peace, upon His Account. We ſhall now proceed with a Relation of the reſt of the Affairs of that Kingdom this Year.

* Ad hunc An.

[3] H. K. ib. K. Baliol retires to Anan in Anandale.

[4] Buch. l. 9. ad hunc Ann.

[5] T. W. ad Ann. 1331. H. K. ib. King Baliol grants the Scotiſh Noblemen of K. David's Party a Truce in order to a Parliament, of which they taking advantage by Surprize drive Baliol quite out of Scotland.

[5] Boeth. Buchan. ib.

After this Parliament, [3.] King Baliol left Roxburgh, where He had continued ſince His late Victories, and retired to the Town of Anan in Anandale, being His own antient Inheritance; where He ſtay'd for ſome time, to divert Himſelf. And whilſt He continued here, [4.] Alexander Bruce, Lord of Carick and Galloway, ſuppoſing the Affairs of his Kinſman King David to be quite deſperate, ſubmitted himſelf to the Conqueror; who was now ſo far lull'd aſleep with His late Succeſs, [5.] as to agree to a Truce which the E. of Dunbar, and the Lord Douglas, and ſome other Noblemen, who ſtill continued firm to King David, had deſired of the New King, until Candlemaſs-day next enſuing. And this being granted, it was alſo further agreed, That a Great Council or Parliament of both Parties, ſhould meet at the Town of Anan, near the Borders of England, there to make a firm Union between them. But this proved fatal to King Baliol's Affairs; for thinking Himſelf ſecure, He diſmiſſed the greater part of His Forces into Winter-Quarters; which the Scots Noblemen of King David's Party hearing of, reſolved to take the Advantage of it; And on [5.] Chriſtmaſs-day at night, the Lord Archibald Douglas, with the Earl of Mar, and divers other Barons, having muſter'd up a Thouſand Choice Horſe ſurprized the New King with thoſe few Noblemen that were with Him, in the Town of Anan; moſt of whom, viz. the Lord Comyn, and Henry the King's Brother, Anno Dom. Mcccxxxii.

together with divers others, they ſlew upon the Place; the King Hi ſelf hardly eſcaping out of His Bed, half-naked into England. Bu muſt obſerve to you, that all this Relation concerning the Truce, depends on the Credit of our Engliſh Hiſtorians: For the Scotiſh mak it no more than a bare Surprize upon Baliol, in time of open War without any Truce appointed, or Meeting agreed on between them, a ours relate. Yet this much is certain, that the Conſequence of thi Defeat was, That [1.] King Bailiol being forced to quit Scotland for time, fled immediately to Carliſle; where He was kindly received b the Lord Dacres Governor of that Place, and Sheriff of Cumberland with whom He ſtayed during the Chriſtmaſs-Holidays. From whenc He went into Weſtmorland, and was there as honourably entertained b the Lord Clifford at Appleby-Caſtle: And not long after, He remove into Lancaſhire; and reſided there for ſome time with the Lady o Gyſnes His Kinſwoman; who furniſhed Him with all things neceſſary according to His Quality.

[1] H. K. ib. K. Baliol flies to Carliſle, where He is kindly received; and then goes to His Couſin the Lady of Gyſnes, who maintains Him.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiii

[2] Buch. ib. The Noblemen of Scotland join with the Ld. Douglas, to oppoſe K. Edw. and fortify Berwick.

[illegible]

[2] Immediately after Baliol's Expulſion, thoſe Noblemen who were for K. David, joined with the Lord Douglas, then newly made Governor of the Kingdom in the room of the Ld. Murrey; (that had been lately taken Priſoner at Roxburgh) and they all agreed to make ſuch Proviſions as were neceſſary for their Defence. ~~And~~ they believing that King Edward would quickly take Baliol's Part, ~~they~~ invade Scotland, and begin with Berwick. To prevent this, the Scots furniſhed it with a ſufficient Gariſon, and appointed the Lord Patrick of Dunbar Governor o the Caſtle, and Sir Alexander Seaton to defend the Town; whilſt the Lord Douglas was ſent into Anandale, to guard the Weſt of Scotland. And in this Poſture the Affairs of that Country continued till the Engliſh Invaſion and Siege of Berwick, which happ'ned in the following Spring; and falling preſently after Chriſtmaſs-day, ought (according to our Account) to have been placed in the Beginning of next Year, but that I would not interrupt the Series of the Scotiſh Affairs.

[3.] H. K. Scala Chron. K. Edward now reſolves to make War upon K. David.

About [3.] the ſame time, the Four Year's Truce with Scotland being expired, King Edward and His Council calling to mind the Apparent Right His Grandfather had acquired to Scotland, as well by the Ceſſion of King John, as by Conqueſt; and alſo that the Scots continued in a ſtrict Alliance with the French, the King's ſecret Enemies; It was therefore now reſolved, not to renew this Truce any longer; for it having been concluded in His Minority by the Queen His Mother, and the Lord Mortimer, without His Conſent, He thought Himſelf not at all obliged by it: Yet that He might not be ſaid to make War upon King David His Brother-in-law, without ſufficient Cauſe, * about the Middle of December, He ſent the Lord Baſſet and William de Dunham, as His Ambaſſadors to that Prince, to demand preſent Reſtitution of the Town of Berwick, being His Right by Inheritancee, as having been enjoyed by His Father and Grandfather: And further, to ſummon Him to come into England, and do His Homage for the Kingdom of Scotland, as holden of His Crown. [4.] To which Meſſage, King David adviſing with His Council, return'd an Anſwer to this effect: 'That He much wonder'd at King Edward's Unreaſonable 'Demands; ſince it did no way appear to Him, that the Crown of 'Scotland was ever held by Homage, or any other Service, from that of 'England: That His Father King Robert had regain'd Berwick by the Sword,

* Rot. Pat. 6 Ed. 3. P. 3. m. 3. And in order to it, ſends certain Ambaſſadors to demand Homage for that Kingdom which King David refuſes. With His Anſwer [4.] Froiſſ. ib. cap 26. Buchan. ib.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiii.

‘Sword from Edward the Second, and He Himſelf would keep it, ſince His ſaid Father would never do Homage for it to the Grandfather or Father of King Edward. And then concluded with a Proteſtation, That He fully intended to keep the Peace lately made at Northampton; and hoped, the King would not give ear to evil Councellors, who endeavoured to ſtir up Diſcord between them; but ſhould rather ſuffer Him to enjoy the Antient Rights and Liberties of His Crown, for His Siſter's Sake, whom He had married, and taken into His Boſom. But theſe Affinities are of little or no Conſideration with Princes, when either Intereſt or Ambition perſuade to the contrary: For King Baliol being now almoſt driven out of Scotland, as you have heard, and knowing that He had no way left to recover what he had ſo careleſly loſt, but by the Aſſiſtance of King Edward, was fain to treat and agree with Him upon His own Terms; which were, to hold as much of Scotland as the King would allow Him, by Homage from Himſelf; as you will hear a little after.

We find nothing elſe conſiderable to have happened in England this Year, [5.] only that the Lady Eleanor, King Edward's younger Siſter, about Fourteen years of Age, was given in Marriage to Reginald or Reynold the Second, Earl of Gueldres, a great Friend of King Edward's and the Engliſh Nation. Her Portion was Fifteen Thouſand Pounds Sterling; no ſmall Sum of Money in thoſe days.

[5.] Speed. Chron. p. 564. Sanford's Gen. Hiſt. p. 155.

Eleanor the King's Siſter is married to the Earl of Gueldres.

King Edward being now reſolved to make War upon Scotland, [1.] early in the Spring ſent other Ambaſſadors to King David, upon the ſame Errand as the former, viz. That He ſhould come and perform His Homage to the King of England. But the Scotiſh King and His Nobility utterly refuſing it, as they had done the time before; the Ambaſſadors declared open War, and defyed that King, according to the Inſtructions they had received from their Maſter.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib.

K. Edw. ſends other Ambaſſadors to King David; who upon His denial of Homage defy Him, and declare War.

Then, for the more effectual carrying on this War, [2.] the King had before ſummoned a Parliament to meet at York; which being met, He communicated to them his Deſign of marching into Scotland in Perſon, to aſſiſt King Bailiol, and to reduce Berwick to His Allegiance; Which was agreed to by all there preſent. * Then having prefixed Trinity-Sunday for the time of His Rendezvous at New-caſtle upon Tine, the Parliament was diſſolved.

[2] H. K. Col. 2563.

He communicates His Deſign of invading Scotland to His Parliament, who approve of it.

* Rot. Clauſ. 7 Ed. 3. n. 19. Dors.

[4] But before the K. invaded Scotland in Perſon, He ſent a ſtrong Detachment under the Command of Henry, Son to the Earl of Lancaſter, and the Lords Montague and Nevil, who joining their Forces with thoſe King Baliol had raiſed in the North of England, enter'd Scotland, and beſieged a ſmall Caſtle near the Borders, belonging to the Lord Colvil, and made the Owner and ſeveral Perſons of Quality that were in it, Priſoners; then carrying away all the Proviſions they found there, they ruined the Place; and ſo marched forward to Berwick, which they blocked up, but could make no Aſſault upon it, until the King's Arrival with the reſt of the Army, which was not till above a Month after.

[3] H. K. Col. 2562.

The K. ſends a ſtrong Detachment thither before He went Himſelf; which joins with the Forces of Baliol, and taking ſeveral Places, block up Berwick.

Whilſt [4.] they thus lay before the Town, Sir Arch. Douglas entred England about our Lady-day with Three Thouſand Men, burnt and deſtroyed the Country of Gilleſland, belonging to the Lord Dacres, for above Thirty Miles round, and ſo returned. But about the ſame time, Sir Anthony Lucy entred Scotland with Eight Hundred Men, putting all they

[4] Id. ib.

Sir Arch. Douglas enters England, and deſtroys the Country.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiii.

they met to Fire and Sword; yet as they returned with a great Booty of Cattel, Sir William Douglas, Governor of Lockmabam, ſally'd out upon them with a great many Men, between whom and the Engliſh there began a fierce Encounter, in which the Scots were routed, and Douglas was taken Priſoner, and the Engliſh came off victorious.

[5.] T. W. Ad Ann. 1332. ſed falſo. K. Edward invades Scotland in perſon, and beſieges Berwick, whereupon the Beſieg'd deſire a Truce.

King [5.] Edward having muſter'd his Forces at New-caſtle, invaded Scotland about the end of April with a powerful Army, and coming before Berwick, laid cloſe ſiege to it by Sea and Land, and when He had continued ſo to do for above a Month, there happened a Cruel Fire in the Town, which made the Beſieged deſire a Truce for ſome time, upon promiſe of ſurrendering it and the Caſtle, if they were not relieved within fifteen days, and gave twelve Hoſtages for the performance of it. But before that time was expired, all the Nobility of Scotland, who took part with King David, marched with a great Army under the conduct of the Lord Archibald Douglas their General, to the ſuccour of the Beſieged, as far as the River Tweed; but finding it very difficult to relieve the Town, they reſolved to act by way of diverſion, and hearing that the Young Queen was then in the Caſtle of Bamburgh, in Northumberland, they marched thither with all haſt, in hopes to ſurprize it, or at leaſt to divert King Edward from the Siege; but being likewiſe fruſtrated in this Deſign, in their return they ſpent ſix days in burning and ſpoiling the Country; then being further encouraged by freſh Meſſages, and importunate Requeſts, from the Beſieged, [1.] that if they would again advance and fall upon the Engliſh Army, they muſt in all probability prevail, ſince they much exceeded them in number of Men, and that otherwiſe the Town muſt certainly be ſurrendered; upon this the Scots returned to relieve Berwick, having drawn up their Army in four great Battalions under as many Noblemen of note. On Monday the Nineteenth of July King Edward marched forth to meet them, leading up His Army in Perſon, and on Bothul, or Halydown-hill, not far from Berwick, fought with, and routed the whole Scotiſh Army, tho much ſuperior in number, killing between thirty and forty thouſand, and the reſt, being about twenty thouſand more, run away. But the Scotiſh [2.] Writers will own but ten thouſand, or, at moſt, but fourteen thouſand to be ſlain in this Battel; whereupon, within two days after, the Beſieged ſurrendered both the Town and Caſtle to the King's Mercy, [3] who kept it in His own Hands by the Right of Conqueſt, as well as that derived from His Father and Grandfather: but as for the reſt of Scotland, He left the New King Baliol, with a ſufficient Army, to reduce it to His Obedience.

Chron. Lan. The Scotiſh Nobility march to their relief, but finding it very difficult, enter Northumberland with a deſign to ſurprize the Queen, but being fruſtrated, they burn and ſpoil the Countrey.

T. W. ib. [1.] H. K ib. The Scots march back to the relief of Berwick, and being met by K Edward at Halydown Hill, are there utterly routed, and great numbers ſlain [2.] Boeth. Buchan. Whereupon the Town and Caſtle of Berwick are ſurrender'd to King Edward. [3.] C. A M.

[4] T. W.

Upon this great Change of Affairs, [4.] the Scotiſh Prelates, (who were all of Bruce's Party) fled ſome of them into France, and others to the Pope, to make their Complaints, and implore their Aſſiſtance againſt King Edward, but to little purpoſe.

*L. 15. l. 9. K. Ed. vindicated from the aſperſion of Cruelty laid to His Charge by the Scot. Hiſt. for executing the two Sons of Sir Alex Seaton.

I muſt not here omit taking notice of a moſt Tragical Story which is related by * Boethius and Buchanan* of King Edward's Cruelty at the Siege of this Town, viz That Sir Alexander Seaton the Governor having had Alexander his Second Son lately taken Priſoner, afterwards delivered his Eldeſt Son to the King as a Hoſtage, That he would ſurrender up the Town by ſuch a day if he were not relieved, and that upon the approach of the Scotiſh Forces, for this purpoſe, King Ed- ward

rd before the day came, ſummon'd the Governor to ſurrender, which e refuſing, both his Sons were brought forth, and a Gibbet being ſet up ſight of the Town, the King ordered him to be told, That if he would ot immediately give it up, both his Sons ſhould be hanged before his ce: He was ſometime in ſuſpence what to do, but as he was about have yielded to the King's Demands, the Mother of the Young Men mes up to her Husband, then upon the Wall, and there harangued m in a long ſtudied Speech, (which it is plain Boethius made for her, the Stories he alludes to out of the Greek Poets); upon which the Governor's Mind being now ſetled, he rather choſe to let both his Sons e their Lives, than to be falſe to his Truſt. This is the Sum of that elation, which is there ſet out with all the Rhetorick and aggravating ircumſtances thoſe Eloquent Authors were Maſters of; which tho' it th ſome truth in it, yet is diſguiſed with ſo many Falſe Colours gives it quite another Turn, and would make King Edward one the Falſeſt and moſt Cruel Princes that ever lived; which is a Chaeter not given Him by any other Authors.

Vid. Bocc. Parnaſſ. print 1656. p. 66.

But I ſhall from two Manuſcript [4.] Chronicles (of ſufficient credit) ve you a truer Account of this Tranſaction, which happened thus: hen the fiſteen days Truce made with the Scots at Berwick, upon e Terms already recited, wereexpired, and the Scotiſh Army u'd put no Relief into it, for the Reaſons already given, King dward ſummon'd the Beſieged to ſurrender; but Sir Alexander aton the Governor, ſent Him word, That he did not think himſelf liged to do it, ſince he ſtill hoped the Scotiſh Army might relieve e Town within a few days: To which the King return'd Anſwer, at the time of the Truce being expired, and no Relief put into the ace, and the Scotiſh General not having been able to raiſe the Siege, beat him from his Poſt, within the time limited, He therefore expect- the performance of the Treaty; but when the Governor per-ed in his Reſolution, and began to find other Evaſions in the Arti- s of the Truce, this Double Dealing ſo highly provok'd the King, at (by the Advice of His Council) He commanded one, and not both the ſaid Governor's Sons (as the Scoriſh Writers, to aggravate the atter, falſly relate) to be hanged before His Face; which Execution o perhaps too ſevere) wrought this Good Effect upon the reſt of the ntlemen and Townſmen, whoſe Sons were alſo Hoſtages, that fear-g the King ſhould treat them after the ſame manner, they came to w Terms with Him, and obtain'd a Prolongation of the Truce eight days more; within which time, if they were not relieved by o hundred Men at Arms at the leaſt, they would then ſurrender the wn and Caſtle without any further delay. But the Scotiſh Army ich once more endeavoured it within that time, being routed, the wn was thereupon immediately ſurrendered: Now tho King Edward d upon cooler Thoughts grant the Beſieged a longer time, yet He uld no ways be accuſed either of Cruelty, or breach of Faith, if He d what the very Articles of the Firſt Truce allowed Him: nay the otiſh Hiſtorians themſelves a few Lines after own, that Sir Alexander aton upon the delivery of the Town, was compell'd to own and do Homge to King Edward, and come into His Party, which he would ne-r certainly have done by any compulſion whatever, had the King juſt fore uſed him thus barbarouſly, contrary to the Articles He had made.

[4.] Chron. Lan. Scala: Chron.

This

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiii.

This I take notice of, that ſo the Ordinary Readers of the Scotiſh Hiſtory may not be carried away by the Natural Byas of thoſe Authors who always ſpeak for their Countrey, right or wrong. ×

I muſt here likewiſe obſerve, that Walſingham's placing theſe Tran actions under the Year 1332, is a Miſtake; for all the Scotiſh, as well as our Own Writers relate this Battel, and the taking of Berwick, under this preſent Year.

To ſay ſomewhat more concerning this Town; it being thus reduced t King Edward's Obedience, He ſtay'd there ſome days to refreſh Himſel and His Soldiers after ſo great a Fatigue, and put an Engliſh Gariſon in to it to keep it for His Uſe, [5.] giving the Scotiſh Townſmen forty day time to diſpoſe of their Effects, and be gone: and Leaving the remainder of the War to be finiſhed by King Baliol, whom He left His Lieutenant General, [6.] He return'd into England with a ſmall Retinue, to g on Pilgrimage to pay His Devotions to certain Holy Places which H had vowed to viſit, if God ſhould give Him ſucceſs in this Expedition.

Then the New King of Scots, after the departure of K. Edward, at th Head of twenty ſix thouſand Men, (moſt of them Engliſh, with ſom few Scots that took part with Him) marched forward to proſecute H Succeſs into the very heart of Scotland, taking Towns and Caſtles at H pleaſure, for there were none to reſiſt Him; ſo having paſſed beyond th Frith of Edinburgh, and reduced all the Strong Places that held out fo King David, except Dunbritton, and a few other Caſtles, He came t Edinburgh, and there remain'd the reſt of this Winter.

But I cannot here omit what the Chronicle of Lanercoſt* relates; Th a little before the Siege of Berwick, Baliol ſent to King Davi that if He would come in upon His ſafe Conduct, and ſurrender up H Right to the Kingdom of Scotland, He ſhould then quietly enjoy all th Lands and Inheritance of His Father and Grandfather, but thoſe th had the government of this young Prince, would not permit Him accept of ſuch mean Conditions, but rather to quit the Kingdom: F about this time (as [1.] the Scotiſh Authors relate) He having now a moſt loſt it, they thought it ſafeſt for Him to leave Scotland, and tog ther with His Queen to go over into France, where they were kind recieved by King Philip, who allowed Him a Maintenance ſuitable His Dignity; and not long after the Antient Leagues that had bee formerly made between the French and Scots were again renewed; th Articles of which I need not here mention: But King Philip thought H might very well juſtifie this Proceeding, becauſe King Edward had no long before kindly received the Lord Robert of Artois, His Mortal En my, who had been proclaimed a Traytor in France, and being arrive here in England, did all he could to excite King Edward to renew H Claim to that Crown.

After Bruce's departure, King Baliol took this Opportunity to r duce almoſt all the reſt of Scotland to His Obedience, [2.] for about th middle of Auguſt, He marched again with above twenty thouſand M beyond the * Frith, and took moſt of the Strong Places in the North and now finding Himſelf pretty well eſtabliſhed in His Throne, [3.] H ſummon'd a Parliament, about Michaelmas, to meet Him at Perthe, a as, St. John's-Town, to which all thoſe Engliſh Lords, that claimed E ſtates in Scotland, came, and there did their Homage for the reſpecti Land

The King having put a Gariſon into Berwick, leaves K. Baliol to carry on the War, and returns home.

[5.] H. Kn. ib.

[6.] T. W. ib.

Who performs it with good ſucceſs, taking almoſt all the South of Scotland, except the Caſtle of Dunbritton.

* Ad hunc Annum.

[1.] Boeth. Buchan. ib.

King David leaves Scotland, and retires with His Queen into France.

[2.] H. K. col. 2565.

* Called by my Author Mare Scoticum

[3.] T. W. ad Ann. 1332.

King Baliol having reduced moſt part of the North of Scotland, calls a Parliament at Perthe, where all the Engliſh Lords that held any Lands in Scotland did Him Homage.

× I cannot but here observe, that since ye printing ye former Vol. of this History, I have from Mr. Rymer been furnished wth another & fuller ~~aut~~ Proof of ye Falshood of this Story of King Edward's Cruelty towards Sr. Alexander for there is now discovered among the Rolls of Scotland in ye Tower [Rot. Scot. 7. Ed. 3. m. 14] certain Articles of a made by way of Indenture between King Edward, & Patrick Earl of Dunbar, the Earl of March and others of Castle & Town of Berwick, concerning the Surrender of the Castle, reciting a Cessation of Arms by Land to continue until Thursday being St. Margarets Day, or of July next ensuing, within which if ye sd. Castle were not relieved, either by a Battle, or a Recruit of 200 Men at Arms put into the Ca ye Monday preceding ye sd. Feast, then ye sd. Town & Castle should be surrendered to ye King of England without any Fraud or Delay; but in case it were so relieved, & 200 such Men put into it, & ye castle should not be taken by yt Time, yn the Hostages, who are there named (viz: Edward & John, Sons of John de Haym) should be delivered to ye sd. Earl on ye sd. Thursday between the rising & setting of the Sun. This Agreement bears Date at ye Siege of Berwick ye 15. Day of July A.D. 1333.

Then on the same Roll follows [m. 16. Rs. Coll. IV. vol. p. 566, 567.] another Indenture between ye sd. King & Sr. William de Keth then Governour of Berwick, and all ye People as well of ye Clergy as Laity within ye sd. Town, reciting yt ye King had granted them a like Cessation of Arms for ye same Term as in ye former Agreemt. above mention'd for the Castle, and yt during ye same they might all remain in Peace & Quiet within ye sd. Town, wth ye like Conditions for ye Surrender of it, if it were not relieved by ye Power of Scotland between ye Day of ye Date hereof, & ye Monday before ye Thursday in ye former Agreement mentioned. This was Sealed on behalf of ye King by the Ld. John of Eltham, Earl of Cornwall & by Sr. William de Keth on behalf of ye Town, which Indenture being interchang'd, one Part of it was to be kept by ye King of England, & ye other Part by ye sd. Sr. William. Written at ye Siege of Berwick 16 July the year above written.

From which documents we may draw these conclusions.

1. That not Sr. Alexander de Seaton, but Sr. William de Kethe was then Governour of Berwick & consequently it was not in his Power either to keep or surrender ye sd. Town at his Pleasure.
2. That none of his Sons were by this Agreement deliver'd as Hostages for ye true Observation of it by ye Governour & People within ye Town, & ye two Hostages there named are the same in both Indentures, & consequently it was not in King Edward's Power to hang any of Sr. Alexander's Sons for ye Breach of ye sd. Articles (as the Scotch Historians relate) -- But if it be ask'd how it comes to pass, yt all of them should fall into so gross a Mistake, I can solve it no other way, but yt they follow'd one another, and when Hector Boethius had taken it out of ye Continuator of Fordun, it was very easy for Buchanan who transcribed & abridg'd both, to commit ye like Errour; and I must likewise warn the Reader that I am mistaken in Vol. p. 379. in making ye MSpt. Chronicle of Lanercost to relate the Story, as it is there recited, upon a Review of it; I cannot find any thing relating to the executing of Sr. Alexander Seaton's Sons in ye sd. Chronicle nor in the Cotton Library.

hew aknowledg my self mistaken in following this author cited in ye margin in this ity, since I suppos'd King Edward to have return'd into Scotland in ye begining of Feb. this year sent at ye holding of a Parliamt. in that Kingdom: But it appears by ye original Commission trument [vid. R's. Coll. vol. IV. 588.] in the Chapter House at Westminster, that he was in Scotland, but had appointed Sr. Geoffrey de Scrop, Ld Chief Justice of England, the Ld. Ed- Bohun, Will: Montague Ld. of the Isle of Man, Henry de Peircy, & Ralph Nevil Steward of hold, Ambassadors and special Procurators to be present at the Parliament to be held by Edward de Bayliol King of Scotland, & to approve & confirm certain Agreements made between him & ye sd. King, as by ye King's Letters Patents does more fully appear. This Commission bears Date ye first of Feb: in ye 8th year of his Reign. And in Prosecution thereof it appears by another Instrumt. that ye sd. Noblemen, his Ambassadors & Procurators did in the ensuing Parliament receive a Confirmation from ye King, & all ye Estates by their Homage & Fealty, which had been performed to King Edward, as has been already related. This bears Date under ye Test of a Notary publick appointed for ye purpose at ye Holy Rood House in Edinburg ye 12th: of Feb: 1334. & is ye to which ye foregoing Relation refers. After wch. follow ~~four~~ four several Charters dated at ye same Time, ye first of which contain a Confirmation of ye Rent, or a Pension of 2000 Pounds pr. annum already granted by King Bayliol to K. Edward ye 23d. of Novr. beforegoing. The 2d. is a Recital & Confirmation of an agreemt. already mention'd, whereby ye King of Scotland engages for himself & his Heirs, with ye ~~[illegible]~~ assent of ye Prelates, Earls, Barons, & others assembled in ye Parliamt to assist King Edward in Person with his whole Power, and at his own Expence against all such as should make war against ~~all such as should make war against him~~, in England, Wales & Ireland, & yt for ye space of six months. The third is not recited in Mr. Rymer's Collection, but I conceive it to be a Confirmation of King Bayliol's Agreement faithfully to perform & keep ye Peace between him & King Edward & those Realms as contained in certain Letters Patents (vid. R's Coll. vol. IV. p. 539) bearing date ye 23d. of Novbr. last past, and for ye sure maintaining thereof Sr. Alexander de Mowbray & Sr. John de Felton, as Proctors & Attornies for ye sd. King, had confirm'd & ratify'd all things contain'd in ye sd. Letters Patents, & had also sworn on his behalf that he should inviolably observe & maintain ye same, as appears by other Letters Patents bearing Date 12th Feb. This present year. vid. R's Coll. p. 548. The 4th & last Charter confirmed by ye Scottish Parliament was that of ye grant of ye Town [Id. ~~vol.~~ p. 594. County of Berwick, whereby K. Bayliol to K. Edward & his Heirs, in part of ye Consideration of ye 2000 £ yearly Rents, wch he had formerly granted to ye sd. King. All these several Charters are under ye great Seal of Scotland in green wax, & are also witness'd by ye Bps. of Glascow Aberdeen, & Dunkeld, & by several & Noblemen of yt Kingdom who were then in K. Bayliol's Interest; & these Charters and all Proceedings thereupon drawn up into due Form & attested by William Sireston Clerk & publick Notary, authorized by ye Pope. You may see at large in R's. IV. vol. p. 590. to 595.

Lands they held under Him, excepting the Allegiance they owed to their Sovereign Lord the King of England; the chief of theſe were the Lord Beaumont, Earl of Buchan, the Lord Richard Talbot, David Earl of Athol, the Lord Henry Piercy, with divers other Engliſh Noblemen, who were all now reſtored to the Honours and Eſtates which they claim'd in Scotland; and in this Parliament all Acts, Statutes, Ordinances and Grants of Lands made by Robert or David Bruce, late Kings of Scotland, were declared null and void. Thus King David was ſeemingly unking'd, and Edward Baliol to all appearance placed in the Scotiſh Throne; but within a few Years He was turn'd out, and David again reſtored, who it proved in the end to His greater Diſgrace, as you will find hereafter. But to return to our own Affairs:

King [4] Edward having ſtaid in England untill He had perform'd His Pilgrimage, and offer'd His Thanks to God at the Shrines of St. Edward at Weſtminſter, and St. Thomas at Canterbury, and other Holy Places, then that He might be the more ready wholly to renew the War next Spring, in the beginning of November He again took a Journey into Scotland, as far as Roxburgh, where He ſtay'd until after Chriſtmaſs; and there we ſhall leave Him for a time, and conclude this Year with [5] the Death of Simon Mepham, ABp of Canterbury, who deceaſed in October, and was ſucceeded by John Stratford, Bp of Wincheſter, a Prelate of great Learning and Judgment.

The [1.] King having kept His Chriſtmaſs at the Place abovementioned, went to Edinburgh about the beginning of February, where King Baliol then held a Parliament; who in the preſence, and by the aſſent, of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Knights, and Others of His Kingdom in the ſaid Parliament, did Homage to King Edward in French, in this Form, as it is expreſſed in His Charter. I Edward, by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, and the Iſles thereto belonging, become your Liegeman for this Realm, and the Iſles, againſt all People that can live and die. Then the Charter proceeds thus; 'And the ſaid King of England received our Homage in the Form abovesaid, as Sovereign Lord of the Realm of Scotland, and the Iſles; and He then entred into the Faith of the ſaid King of England, Sovereign Lord of the ſaid Realm and Iſles, touching the Holy Goſpels, with the Words that follow: We will be true and faithful to our moſt dear Lord the King of England, and to His Heirs, as Sovereign Lords of the ſaid Realm of Scotland, and Iſles, againſt all People that live and die; and We grant and oblige Us, and our Heirs to do to our ſaid Lord the King of England, and His Heirs, Liege-Homage and Fealty in the Forms above written, upon every change of a Lord, or renewal of one Party or the other.

In the ſame Inſtrument He granted to King Edward, Berwick, &c. In witneſs whereof He then made His Letters Patents dated at Edinburgh the Twelſth of * February, A. D. 1333. in the Second Year of His Reign. ^ see above.

The French Original of this Charter under the Great Seal of England, is ſtill preſerved in a Box, entituled, Scotia, Tempore Regis Edwardi Tertii; which is in a great Cheſt with that ſame Title, in the Old Chapter-Houſe at Weſtminſter, where the Reader that is curious to view ſuch Antient Monuments may find it, or may be ſatisfied with the Tranſcript of it, printed in Dr. Brady's † Second Volume of His Hiſtory; and this rather deſerves our notice, becauſe none of our Hiſtorians either in Print

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiii.

[4.] Id. ib. King Edward having viſited the Shrines of divers Saints, returns into Scotland before Winter.

[5] Chron. Will. Thorne. in hunc An. The death of Simon ABp. of Canterbury.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiv.

[1]. H. K. ad Ann. 1333. The King goes to Edinburgh, and there receives Homage from King Baliol; with the Form of it.

*Note, according to this Account, the Year begins at our Lady-day; but we beginning at Chriſtmaſs, it was Ann. Dom. 1334, as we now place it.

† Pag 195.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiv.

in general only in Print or Manuſcript, ſay any thing of this Charter, ~~nor~~ mention ~~any~~ Homage ~~to have~~ was been done by this Baliol to our King Edward. for [illegible] Scotland.

The King having thus ſetled His Affairs in Scotland, immediately return'd to York, * whither He had ſummoned a Parliament to meet on the Twenty Firſt of February. The Chief Matters then enacted were, That the Great Charter and Liberties of the Foreſt, and other good Statutes, ſhould be duly obſerved; and what Clauſes therein were obſcure, ſhould by good Advice be explained. There were alſo ſeveral other Acts then made, which the Reader may find in our Printed Statute-Book: And he may alſo ſee an Abſtract of them among the Laws at the End of this King's Reign; and as for other Tranſactions in this Parliament, he may conſult Cotton's Abridgment of Records.

*Rot. Parl. 8 Ed. 3. Cot. Abridg. p. 15.

A Parliament held at York, and what was done there.

So ſoon as the Parliament was ended, [2.] King Edward advanced again towards Scotland, and kept His Whitſuntide at New-caſtle upon Tine; and on the Nineteenth of June, (as Walſingham relates) Baliol there renew'd His Homage to King Edward for the Realm of Scotland; tho' I am apt to conceive it to be a Miſtake in this Author, as alſo in Adam de Murimuthe, who alſo makes this Homage to be done about Midſummer; whereas it is moſt likely to have been no more than the ſame Homage which was already performed in February before at Edinburgh, and which is juſtified by His Charter upon Record. But this is more certain, [3.] that at this time, David Earl of Athol, and ſeveral other Scotiſh Lords who held Lands in England, then did Homage to King Edward for the ſame. But what is yet more remarkable, King Baliol at the ſame time granted to King Edward His Letters-Patents, reciting, That whereas the ſaid King had by the great 'Expence and Labour of Him and His People, given Him great Aſſiſtance in the Recovery of His Inheritance, He therefore granted and 'aſſigned for Him and His Heirs, unto the ſaid King, Two Thouſand 'Pounds yearly in Lands and Rents, in the Borders where it ſhould beſ 'pleaſe Him; and in Part of this Two Thouſand Pounds per Ann. farther granted Him the Caſtle, Town, and County of Berwick upon 'Tweed, with their Appurtenances, Seperate from the Crown of Scotland, and to be annex'd to the Crown of England for ever, by Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Knights, and Others of tha 'Kingdom in Parliament aſſembled. And in further and full Satisfaction of the ſaid Two Thouſand Pounds per Ann. by the ſame Aſſen 'in Parliament, He alſo gave, granted, and aſſigned, the Town, Caſtle, and County of Roxburgh; the Town, Caſtle, and Foreſt o 'Jedworth; the Town and Caſtle of Selkirk and Etrick; the Town 'Caſtle, and County of Edinburgh; with the Conſtablaries of Haddington and Linlithgou; the Town and County of Pebles, and Town 'County and Caſtle of Dunfrees, with their Appurtenances, Knight 'Fees, and Services; with all the Advouſons of Churches, Chappels 'Religious Houſes, Cuſtody of the Temporalties in the time of the 'Vacation of Biſhopricks, and all other Things whatſoever belonging 'to them; and with the Subjection and Government of the People in 'thoſe Places; to hold them to Him and His Heirs, ſeparate from the 'Crown of Scotland; and annexed unto, and incorporated with the 'Crown of England for ever. This was dated at New-caſtle upon Tine the Twelfth of June in the Second Year of His Reign: The Origina whereo

[2.] T. W. in Ann. 1333.

The K. advances towards Scotland, and at Newcaſtle renews His Homage, as did alſo ſeveral Scotiſh Lords.

[3.] H. K. Col. 2566.

K. Baliol grants to K. Edward the Towns and Caſtles of Berwick and Roxburgh, with ſeveral other Lands to the value of 2000*l.* per Ann.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxiv.

whereof under the Great Seal of Scotland, is in the ſame Box above-noted, and alſo confirm'd by ſeveral other Inſtruments in the ſame place, under the Great Seal of that Kingdom. X X you may see a true Copy of this Charter in Ry's Coll: p. 614. 615. where note yt ye Lands of Bayliol, Kenmure, and Kirkandres, being Part of ye County of Dumfrees were within 6 Days after ye Date of the former Charter granted back by King Edward to ye King of Scotland because they were part of the ancient Inheritance of the Bayliols, & did not belong to the Crown of yt Kingdom, as appears by King Edward's Charter to King Bayliol, bearing date at Newcastle ye 18 Day of June this year [Rot. Scot: 8 Ed. 3. m. 13 vid. Ry's Coll. p. 615] & I cannot but take notice yt not long after King Edward by his Letters Patent [Rot: Scot: m. 20] bearing Date at Chester ye 21 of June appointed John de Bourdon Clerk his Chamberlain for all the Lands in Scotland which had been made over to him by ye King of Scots.

But this Homage, and theſe over-liberal Conceſſions made by the New King of Scots to King Edward, were ſo far from advancing the Intereſt of either Prince, that they rather ſerved to turn the Body of that Jealous Nation againſt them both; ſince the Scots plainly ſaw, that Edward ſought His own Grandeur and Intereſt above that of their Country; and they looked upon this New King only as an Inſtrument ſet up to promote His Deſigns. For [5.] not long after the Earls of Bouchan and Athol being diſcontented, by reaſon of a Sentence which King Baliol had given in Parliament in favour of Sir Alexander Mowbray, for certain Lands he claimed againſt the former of theſe Earls, who had married one of the Daughters and Heirs of Sir John Mowbray, elder Brother to Sir Alexander; they both at once revolted, and fortified their Caſtles againſt Him, and became the Heads of the Brucean Party. [1.] About the ſame time alſo, the Lord Talbot, very angry that his Advice was not followed, reſolved to quit King Baliol's Service, and return into England: But travelling thither with a ſmall Retinue, he was met with, and taken Priſoner by ſome of King David's Party; and being carried to the Caſtle of Dunbritton, could not obtain his Liberty, until he had paid Two Thouſand Marks for it.

Theſe over-liberal Conceſſions turn the Scotiſh Nobility againſt K. Baliol.

[5.] Buch. l. 9. Many of whom being diſcontented upon that as well as other Accounts, revolt from Him.

[1.] H. K. ib. The Lord Talbot in his Return into England is taken Priſoner, and carried to the Caſtle of Dunbritton.

After theſe things, [2.] King Baliol's Affairs met with various Succeſſes; for tho' He took the Town of Ranfew, and the Iſle of Bute, with divers Caſtles in Kyle and other Places, yet Sir Alexander Mowbray, highly incenſed that the King had revoked the late Sentence given in His favour, and adjudged thoſe Lands that were ſtill in Diſpute, to the Lord Beaumont, and the Earl of Athol, to bring him over again to His Party: He therefore took up Arms, and joining with the Lord Andrew Murray then Governor of that Part of Scotland which held out for King David, they beſieged the Lord Beaumont in the ſtrong Caſtle of Dundarg; to whoſe Relief the King of England not long after marched, but without performing what He went for, as you will find anon. But this is certain, [3.] that the greater Part of the Nobility and People of the Kingdom of Scotland were ſo incenſed againſt both Kings for this laſt Homage to King Edward, that riſing up in Arms, they ſlew ſeveral of His Adherents, and forced K. Baliol out of that Kingdom: So that He went into England, and paſſed ſome time at Ravenſhelm, (or rather Ravenskelthe-Caſtle) in Yorkſhire, till King Edward could come to His Aſſiſtance. This is the Sum of the Scotiſh Affairs which were tranſacted the reſt of this Summer, and part of the Winter following. But it is time to return to thoſe of England.

[2.] Id. ib. The various Succeſſes of K. Baliol's Affairs in Scotland.

[3.] T. W. An. 1333, falſo, ſed Yo. Neuſt. 1334. The greater Part of the Nobility and People of Scotland take Arms and drive back K. Baliol out of that Kingdom into England.

King Edward after He had parted with the Scotiſh King at New-caſtle, went immediately to Windſor; from whence He ſummoned the Biſhops, Earls, and Barons, to meet Him at [4.] Nottingham on the Tenth of July, to adviſe about the Arduous Affairs of the Realm. In this Council 'twas ordained, That a Parliament ſhould * be ſummoned to meet at Weſtminſter on Monday after the Exaltation of the Croſs, or about the Twentieth of September; which meeting accordingly, the King did then declare, [5.] That being now thereto invited by His Couſin the Duke of Bretaigne, who came lately on an Ambaſſy from France, He had form'd a Reſolution to take a Voyage with the French

[4.] Id. Hiſt. ad An. 1333.
* Rot. Clauſ 8 Ed. 3. m. 18. Dors. T. W.
The K. calls a Parliament; wherein He again propoſes His Voyage to the Holy Land.
[5.] T. W.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxiv.

King and other Chriſtian Princes to the Holy-Land: For tho' He had not as yet anſwered King Philip directly, when He requeſted his Company in this Expedition, becauſe He had been credibly inform'd, that about this time He had ſent out ten great Ships, deſign'd for Scotland, to aſſiſt King David's Party: Yet foraſmuch as thoſe Veſſels, being miſerably ſhatter'd at Sea, were at laſt forced to return home without any effect, and alſo becauſe Scotland then ſeemed pretty well ſetled under the Government of King Baliol, He was the more willing to partake with the reſt of the Princes of Chriſtendom in this Enterprize, tho He had ſet no time for the doing of it.

[5.] T. W. ib. That Deſign is quaſhed, upon the ill News out of Scotland.

[1.] Id ib. H. K. C. 2565.

[2.] Id. ib. He thereupon immediately marches towards Scotland; but before He could arrive, the Ld. Beaumont ſurrenders the Caſtle of Dundarg, together with himſelf.

* Rot. Pat. 9 Ed. 3. p. 2. m. 22.

And was forced to pay a great Ranſom for his Liberty.

But this Deſign was preſently quaſhed, by reaſon of the ill News which came before this Parliament broke up, [5.] viz. That the Scots had again rebelled againſt King Baliol, and taken the Lord Talbot Priſoner, and beſieged the Lord Beaumont in his Caſtle, as hath been already related: Whereupon the King had granted Him towards His War with Scotland [1.] a Fifteenth from the Lords and Knights of Shires, and a Tenth from the Clergy, as alſo the like from the Citizens and Burgeſſes: And then the Parliament broke up.

Immediately after which (tho' it were now late in the Year) [2.] the King made another Expedition into Scotland, but not being able to reach Berwick until All holland-tide, the Lord Beaumont was forced to ſurrender the Caſtle of Dundarg for want of ſpeedy Relief, and was himſelf made a Priſoner: tho' not diſcharged upon his Parole, (as Hect. Boeth. relates) but he was fain to pay a great Ranſom for his Liberty, as appears from a * Record; which ſhews, that about a Year after, King Edward, in requital of his Services, acquitted him of all ſuch Debts as were due from him to the Exchequer; and then too He particularly forgave him (among the reſt) Four Hundred Marks formerly lent unto him at York, towards the Payment of his Ranſom in Scotland.

[3.] T. W. ad An. 1333. ſed in Ypod. Neuſt. 1334 quod rectum eſt.

K. Edward enters Scotland, joins K. Baliol's Army, and marches in perſuit of thoſe Scots that took part with K. David, as far as Caithneſs, and then returns to Berwick.

The Earl of Dunbar revolts.

K. Edw keeps His Chriſtmaſs at Roxburgh.

Yet preſenly after, [3.] about the middle of November, King Edw. enter'd that Kingdom (by the way of Galloway) with a Gallant-Army, which He joined to King Baliol's; who, being thus ſtrengthened by theſe Forces that were now lent Him, marched as far as Glaſco and Cunningham, ſpoiling all before Him. In the mean while K. Edward not troubling Himſelf with ſtaying to take in any Caſtles or other ſtrong Places, perſued thoſe Scots who continued of King David's Party as far as beyond Caithneſs, which was farther than Edward his Grandfather had ever been. After theſe Actions, the two Kings of England and Scotland rejoined their Forces, and returned towards Berwick. Then not long after, Patrick Earl of Dunbar revolted, and retiring into the Highlands, denounced his Homage to both Parties; which made King Edward remain the reſt of this Year in the Borders of Scotland, and keep His Chriſtmaſs at Roxburgh, ſtill having with Him the Pope's Nuncio; who was come to mediate a Peace between Him and David King of Scots, that was ſtill in France.

[4.] T. W. ib. The Death of Pope John XXII.

As to Foreign Affairs, I can find nothing remarkable, [4.] excep the Death of Pope John XXII. who deceaſed at Avignon the Fourth o December; being a Prelate of a Haughty Spirit, having had perpetua Feuds with the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, whom He had excommunicated. On the Twentieth of the ſame Month, James Cardinal of S. Priſca, a Native of Foix, was elected in his ſtead by the Name of Benedi

th

the Twelfth; a Perſon of great Prudence and Frugality, tho' being a Frenchman, he always ſhewed Himſelf Partial to the Intereſt of that King, againſt the King of England.

King Edward having [5.] kept His Chriſtmaſs at the Caſtle of Roxburgh, which He had newly repaired, preſently after the Holy-days marched into the Foreſt of Etherick, looking for the Scots whom He heard were there: But none daring to appear, He ſent King Baliol with the Earls of Warwick and Oxford to Carliſle, to defend that Side againſt any Incurſions of the Enemy. But the Earls hearing by the way, that the Earl of Murrey and many Scots in his Company, lay at Pebles, they turned thither; and putting moſt of them to the Sword, deſtroy'd the adjacent Country; and then went on to Carliſle, where they ſtayed the reſt of this Winter. Preſently after the Feaſt of Epiphany, there came thither the Militia's of the Counties of Lancaſter, Weſtmorland, and Cumberland; who after ſome ſtay marched into Scotland; and joining with King Baliol and the Earls and Barons that ſided with Him, burnt and ſpoiled all the Country next the Borders that held out againſt Him; and then the Engliſh returned to Carliſle.

And now K. Edward having done as much as He could in Scotland for this time, return'd into England by the way of New-caſtle. From thence [1.] He went to Nottingham, where He held a Private Council with His Nobility *on Mid-Lent Sunday, and then gave an Anſwer to the Biſhop of Auranches and a certain Baron whom the French King had lately ſent over to ſollicit a Peace for the Scots; which tho' King Edward would not agree to, yet He granted them a Truce from Eaſter until Midſummer following, at the Interceſſion of theſe Ambaſſadors, as alſo for the convenience of His own Affairs. During this Interval, whilſt the King continued at Nottingham, He iſſued out * Writs for a Parliament to meet at York on the morrow after the Feaſt of our Lord's Aſcenſion, there to treat how to carry on the War againſt the Scots, when the Truce ſhould expire: And farther in this Parliament, divers Laws were enacted that proved for the General Good of the Kingdom; an Abſtract of which you will find at the end of this Reign, and thoſe that deſire to ſee them at length, may conſult the Statute-Book. (2) vid also ye King's Concessions to ye French Ambassadors concerning this Truce in Rot. Scot. 9. Ed. 3. m. 41. & printed in R— Coll. p. 640.

Then about [2.] Midſummer, the Truce being near expired, the King marched again with His Army to New-caſtle, whither K. Baliol came to Him from Carliſle; and here it was agreed between them and their Council, That King Edward ſhould on the Twelfth of July enter Scotland on that ſide next Carliſle, whilſt the Scotiſh King did the like on the other ſide; which was put in execution accordingly: For on the Eleventh of that Month, the King being attended by the Lord Henry, Son to the Duke of Lancaſter, with ſeveral other of the Earls and Barons of England, enter'd Scotland, and [3.] paſſing over Solway-Frithe, marched thro' Anandale without any Oppoſition, or ſeeing any of the Scotiſh Forces; but what were become of them you will ſee by and by. In the mean while, King Baliol alſo enter'd Scotland on the other ſide, beſieged and took the ſtrong Caſtle of Cumbermouth, belonging to the Earl of Athol, and in it divers Perſons of Quality, whom He made Priſoners.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxv.

[5] Ypod. Neuſt. ad An. 1335. Chron. Lan. ad An. 1334.

King Edward ſends K. Baliol with ſeveral Earls to defend all the Engliſh Borders, and in their way they rout the E of Murrey's Forces.

[1.] Id. Hiſt ad An. 1334.

* Rot. Clauſ. 9 Ed. 3. m. 34. Dors. H. K.

The K. being returned into England, holds a Great Council at Nottingham.

* Rot. Clauſ. 9 Ed. 3. m. 28. Dors.

After which He holds a Parliament at York; and what was done there.

[2.] Chron. R. Southwell, cited by Holingſhed, p. 898.

The Truce being expired, the K. marches again towards Scotland, and He and K. Baliol invade it at once at two different Parts.

[3.] H. K. Col. 2565.

I cannot omit saying somewhat of Scholastick Affairs in this Kingdom: that great Quarrels & Dissention having lately fallen out in the University of Oxford, between the Southern & Northern men, insomuch that they often ended in Fighting & Shedding of Blood to ye great Disturbance of the Studies of the Scholars there; so yt a great many of them withdrew from thence to ye Town of Stanford, & there began as a new University, until upon Complaint of the Chancellour & Scholars made thereupon to the King, he issued out his Writt to ye Sheriff of Lincolnshire, reciting these abuses & commanding that he should go to ye sd Town of Stanford & cause it to be proclaimed yt no Persons under Pain of Forfeiture of their Goods should presume to follow their Studies, or perform any Exercises in any other Places than in one of ye Universities. This bears Date ye 2d of Aug. at Windsor this year. [Rot. Claus: 8. Ed. 3. m. 17. R— Coll. p. 621] Which not being found to have a sufficient Effect, was ye year following reinforced by a special Commission [Pat. 9. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 29. Rs. Coll. 623] under the great Seal, directed to Sr. William Trussel, where after ye Recital of ye former Writt to ye Sheriff of Lincolnshire, & the neglect of ye observation of ye sd Proclamation to the great Slight of the King & Disposition of the University of Oxon; he therefore straitly charges & commands the sd William Trussel to go to the sd Town of Stanford & again to proclaim yt no Scholars shall presume to study there, or perform any Scholastick exercises, & yt he should return up the names of such, who after the sd Prohibition were found to act contrary thereunto; & ye Sheriff of Lincolnshire was also commanded to assist him in ye sd Affair. This bears Date at Nottingham the 24th of March. 1335. And ye King to put a Stop to these Quarrels & Dissentions, had some time before given a Commission under the great Seal [Pat. 8. E 3. p. 2. m. 23. R— Coll. p. 622. 623.] to the Bishops of Lincoln, Coventry, Litchfield at the Petition of the Chancellour of ye University of Oxon to go thither in Person & enquire into ye Causes of the said Dissentions by the Information of the Chancellour Proctors & Masters, and to treat with them about composing of the same; and then to certify the King of their Proceedings therein, yt he & his Council might do such things as they in their Discretions should think fit. This bears date at Westminster ye 20th of September before ye last Commission. By which prudent Management, partly by Perswasion, & partly by Force ye Scholars in a short time removed from Stanford either to Oxford or Cambridge, & so there was an End of that new University, which lasted but for a few years.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxv.

[3.] Id. ib.
The Scots taking their advantage, ſurprize 500 Engliſh, whom they put to the Sword.
Holingſ. ib.
The Earl of Namur, with his Brother going to the aſſiſtance of K. Edward are taken Priſoners yet are ſoon diſcharged.
The Earl of Murrey is taken Priſoner.
[4] Holingſhed, pag. 898.

But [3.] tho the Scots were ſuppoſed to be retired into their Woods and Mountains for ſafety, yet they only lay upon the watch to take their advantage; for ſhortly after, under the conduct of the Earls of Murrey and Dunbar, they ſurprized five hundred Engliſh Archers, who, returning home too ſecurely, as not dreaming of any danger, were put all to the Sword; and not long after John Earl of Namur, (called by the Scotch Earl of Gelder's, but falſly) with Sir Robert his Brother, having landed in England, marched to the aſſiſtance of King Edward, together with divers Barons and Knights, and a choice Band of one hundred Men at Arms, who being on their March near Edinburgh, were aſſaulted by the Scots under the conduct of the Earl of Marche and the Lord Douglas; and after a ſharp Conflict, retiring to a ruin'd Caſtle for defence, were at laſt forced to ſurrender themſelves Priſoners; yet either out of Generoſity or Policy, to gratify the King of France, (theſe Young Princes being his Kinſmen) they were not only releaſed by the Lord Randulph the Governor, and the Earl of Murrey, but were alſo by him convey'd back as far as the Engliſh Borders; however the Earl pay'd dear for his Complement, [4] for in his Return being met with by the Gariſon of Roxburgh, his Party was routed, and he was taken Priſoner by Sir William Prieſtwood. x x This Earl being thus taken was not long after convey'd into Engl: & by John Feriby kept cloſe Priſoner in ye castle of Nottingham, as appears by the Kings Commiſsion for that purpoſe extant in the Pat: Rolls. pat. 9. Ed. 3. p. 2. m. 23. vid: Rs: Col: f 642

[5.] T. W. ib. Hol. Hiſt. Scot. 899.

[5.] Some time after this, John Earl of Cornwal, entred Scotland, and having joined his Forces with thoſe of Sir Anthony Lucy, they deſtroy'd Galloway, Carrick, Kyle, and all the Weſtern Parts that ſtill held out againſt King Baliol; after which Succeſs Earl John marched to St. John's-Town, where he found the King his Brother newly returned from His Expedition into the High lands.

[1.] H. K. col. 2367.
Od. Raynol ad. Ann. 1335.
[2]. H. K. ib.

King Edward being come back from thence, ſpent ſome time in repairing and fortifying the Town of Perth which had been lately burnt; and whilſt He lay there, He received Ambaſſadors from the King of France; who, to hinder His further Progreſs in Scotland, [1]. had alſo procured the Pope to do the like, to mediate a Peace between King David and Him, and alſo to deſire Him to accompany King Philip in the Holy War, which He had lately undertaken by the Pope's Encouragement and Perſwaſion: But [2.] Edward being offended at the French King's intermedling ſo far in His Affairs, gave His Ambaſſadors a ſhort and reſolute Anſwer to this effect, 'That He was able (He bleſſed God) 'to make War upon the Infidels when He thought fit, without any aſſiſtance from their Maſter; and that He neither could nor would undertake any Foreign Expedition, till He had ſubdued his Enemies the 'Scots.

The Scotiſh Nobility are forced to ſubmit to the King, with their Names.
[3.] Rob. de Averſbury's MS. Chron. cap. 21. in Bib. Dom. Sim. Dew's.

Thus King Edward put off the King of France's Ambaſſadors at that time, and proceeded with ſuch ſucceſs in Scotland, that about the middle of Auguſt many of the Scotiſh Nobility of King David's Party who were tired out, came [3.] in upon his ſafe Conduct, and ſubmitted themſelves to his Majeſty at St. John's-Town, the chief of whom were David Earl of Athol, and the Lord Robert, Steward of Scotland; but before they actually came in, certain Lords and Knights of their Party treating with King Edward and Baliol's Counſellors, concluded upon a Peace in the Following Form, and under this Title; the Original of which is in French.

Theſe [4.] are the Points and things accorded between the Council of the Kings of England and Scotland of one part, and the Lords Alexander de Mowbry, Geoffrey de Mowbrey, Geoffrey de Roſs, Sir William Bullske, and Euſtace de Loreigne, having full Power from the Lord David de Strabolgi, Earl of * D'aſcelle, and Robert, Steward of Scotland, to treat, accord and agree all Points between the aforeſaid Kings, and the ſaid Earl and Steward on the other part.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxv.

[4.] Id. ib. H K. c. 2566. The Arcicles of Agreement between the Kings of England, and Scotland and them.

* i. e. Earl of Athol, then called in French Aſoelles.

Firſt, It is accorded and agreed, that the Earl of Aſcelle, and the Great Men and Others of the Community of Scotland, who came into theſe Conditions, ſhall have Life and Member, their Lands, Tenements, Fees and Offices in Scotland ſaved to them, which they ought to have by Heritage or other Right, except thoſe that ſhall be excepted by Common Aſſent.

2. Alſo 'tis agreed, that they ſhall have pardon of Impriſonment for all Treſpaſſes by them done in the Realms of England and Scotland, from the beginning of the World to the Day of the date hereof.

3. The Third is a Reſervation for the Earl of Aſcelle, and Sir Alexander Mowbray, their Title to ſuch Eſtates and Offices as they had in England at their Departure, after their Homage at New-caſtle upon Tine.

4 and 5. The Fourth and Fifth contain a Confirmation of the Franchiſes of the Church of Scotland, according to Antient Uſages; as alſo of the Laws of Scotland, and the Towns, Burghs and Sheriffdoms within that Kingdom, as they were uſed in the time of King Alexander.

6. That tho the Offices in Scotland ſhould be always adminiſt'red by People of the ſame Nation, yet that the King of Scotland of His Royalty may make ſuch Officers as He pleaſes, and of what Nation ſoever.

7 and 8. By the Seventh and Eighth it is agreed, That all thoſe who are compriſed within this Agreement of the Earl of Aſcelle's, and have Lands in Scotland, ſhall again enjoy their Eſtates and Offices, as they had at their departure of the ſaid Homage at New-caſtle, except thoſe that ſhall be excepted by common aſſent; and further, if they ſhall be impleaded concerning their Lands and Tenements aforeſaid, they ſhall have liberty to make their Defences, and have Recoveries in ſuch Courts where they ought to have them.

The reſt being of things that concern'd Particular Perſons, and not much material to be known, I here omit; but the Concluſion is thus: This Accord and Articles of Peace were made at the Town of St. John in Scotland, the Eighteenth day of Auguſt, in the Year of Grace 1335, and Ninth of Edward the Third.

* Knyghton further adds to theſe Articles another, tho under the next Year; That the greateſt part of the Scotiſh Nobility being now tired out by the continual Harraſings and Devaſtations of the Engliſh, did voluntarily ſubmit to King Edward, upon Condition, That they would Obey King Baliol during His Life; and in the mean while David Bruce and His Queen were to have a Royal Maintenance in England; but that

* Col. 2568. Another Condition added by Knyghton.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxv.

if Baliol died without Iſſue (as He had none at preſent) that then Davi was to ſucceed Him ; for whom they further engag'd, that He ſhoul appear at the next Parliament to be holden at London the enſuing Mich elmaſs, there to ſtand to King Edward's Award and Arbitrement co cerning theſe things; and in the mean while the Scotiſh Noblemen, wh had now ſubmitted, ſhould renew their Homage to King Edward as thei Superior Lord.

* Comp. Hiſt. p. 198.
† M. 85.
The pretended Homage made by K. David to K. Edward.

under this year

But ſince I can find this Article in no other Author, and that Kin David never perform'd any part of it, I have great reaſon to believe it t be a Miſtake, thro ſome Miſinformation of this otherwiſe diligent Wri ter : Yet certainly it is a much greater Miſtake in * Dr. Brady, in reci ting ~~here~~, and alſo adding at large in his † Appendix a Charter of Ho mage, ſuppoſed about this time to be made to our King Edward by Davi Bruce for the whole Kingdom of Scotland, 'which He there acknow 'ledges to hold, as well Himſelf as His Progenitors, of the Kings of Eng 'land by Leige-Homage and Fealty; for which He avouches the Feal 'ties made to them, appearing by Antient Records and Pleas of th 'Crown, as well in Parliament as in the Iters, or Circuits of the Cham 'berlains and Juſtices of His Predeceſſors and Progenitors. And it furthe 'recites, That theſe His Letters Patents, made with the Advice and Con 'ſent of the Three Eſtates of the Kingdom in Parliament at Edinburgh 'did acknowledge to hold the Kingdom of Scotland of Edward III. King 'of England, by Liege-Homage and Fealty, as of the Superior Lord o 'the Kingdom of Scotland, notwithſtanding all and all manner of Relea 'ſes, Remiſſions, Quiet Claims, and other Letters whatſoever, mad 'by any King or Kings of England to the contrary. This Inſtrument i ſuppoſed to be dated in full Parliament the firſt of November, in the fift Year of His Reign ; (that is, this very Year, as Dr. Brady places it) which could by no means be true, ~~it~~ this being ~~but~~ the ~~fourth~~ [illegible] Year of thi King's Reign, which began in July, 1329. It ~~must~~ not have been thi Year, but in 133~~4~~3, that this Charter was to have been made, if ever i were made at all; for all Hiſtorians, both Engliſh and Scotiſh, agree, tha King David was ever ſince the Year 1332, or 33 at fartheſt, gone over into France, from whence He never return'd until above eight Years af ter the making of this ſuppos'd Charter ; which having carefully view'd and conſidered, I do for this, as well as for divers other ſufficient Rea ſons, conceive it to be counterfeit, and for which I refer the Reader to my Introduction, where I have ſpoken more at large concerning thi great Queſtion of the Homage ſuppos'd to be done from the Crown of Scotland to that of England. But it is time to return to our Hi ſtory.

Seaventh

This Charter proved to be forg'd.

[5.] Holingſ. Hiſt. Scot. p. 236.
The King having ſetled His Affairs in Scotland, returns into England.
[1.] Buch. L. 9.
[2.] T. W. Ypod. Neuſ.

King [5.] Edward having ſetled His Affairs in Scotland by the late Agreement with the Earl of Athol, and thoſe of his Party, and fortify'd St. John's-Town, new built the Caſtle of Sterling ſtronger than ever it was before ; as alſo the City of Edinburgh it ſelf, which He deliver'd to the cuſtody of Sir John Striveling, who was afterwards made a Baron of England: I ſay, theſe things being diſpatch'd, [1.] and leaving ſufficient Forces under the command of the Earl of Athol, to ſupport and defend King Baliol, He return'd into England about the end of Autumn, [2] carrying home with Him the valiant Lord Richard Talbot, who was now ranſom'd from his Impriſonment. After King Edward's departure, the Earl of Athol, being reſolved to do ſomewhat to redeem his Credit notwithstanding these Provocations, the King at the Intercession of ye Pope & ye King ance prolonged ye Truce with David King of Scots from ye 22d of Jan: to ye Day of St. Pant ion during which Time ye Pope & King Philip rec'd a safe Conduct to send their into Scotland with Letters to treat with ye Adherents to King David about a Peace; with they came six Persons, from that King himself who were authoriz'd for yt Purpose as by the Rolls of this Year [Rot. Scot: 9 Ed. 3. m. 3] 10 Ed. 3. m. 36. Vid: Rym Coll. p. 684/685.] yet all those Transactions came to nothing; for ye war was not long after carry'd on in Scotland with greater vigour than before.

th King Edward, and [3.] Baliol having provided a ſufficient Army Horſe and Foot, with other Neceſſaries, preſently laid ſiege to the aſtle of Kildrumney on the River Done, which ſtill held out for King avid; but ſo ſoon as Patrick Earl of Dunbar, and the Lords Murrey d Douglas heard of it, they were reſolved to raiſe the Siege, and alſo niſh his Perjury; but the Earl receiving timely notice of their com- g, preſently marched forth to meet them; and then both Armies engag- g in the Field of Kilblaine, there began a bloody Battel, in which when e Earl of Athol was like to gain the Victory, Sir John Crabbe, Governor Kildrumney-Caſtle, ſallying out of it on the backs of the Earl's Party, ith three hundred Men, added ſuch Courage to the almoſt conquer'd uceans, [4.] that they not only routed his whole Army, but ſlew e Earl of Athol, with divers other Noblemen of his Party; ſo that tho mefew eſcaped to the Caſtle of Camoran, yet theſe were forced to yield e next day for want of Proviſions. This Victory was obtain'd the Firſt Dec., and however of it ſelf it was not very conſiderable, yet it added eſh Courage to thoſe of King David's Party, ſince they won it, not- ithſtanding their Enemies were almoſt three for one, the Earl of Athol aving three thouſand Men, and the other ſide but eleven hundred, be- des thoſe freſh Forces that came in to their relief.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxv

[3.] Buchan. Ib.

The Earl beſieging the Caſtle of Kildramney, is ſet upon by the Earl of Dunbar, and his Forces are utterly defeated, and himſelf ſlain.

[4.] T. W. Ypud. Neuſt.

I have nothing more to ſay concerning this Matter, but that the eader may take notice, that this David, whom our Writers ſtile David Stratbolgi, Earl of Athol, is called by Boethius and Buchanan, David umin, as being (I ſuppoſe) of that Family; but theſe Authors do not ive him the Title of Earl, becauſe he held with Baliol.

The unexpected Death of the Earl of Athol was greatly [5.] reſented y the Kings of England and Scotland, and the Lord Beaumont, his Fa- her-in-Law, in revenge, put all the Scots he could meet with to the word, that were of the Adverſe Party, and that had been in the Battel here he was kill'd. Then the King having held a Parliament at Lon- on in Lent, did after Eaſter ſend the Earls of Lancaſter, Warwick and rundel, with other Noblemen before Him into Scotland, with ſufficient orces, and ſome time after Whitſontide, He followed them in perſon, eſolving a ſevere Revenge for the death of the Earl of Athol. But I ſhall ive you a particular Account of this Years Expedition, from our Engliſh s well as Scotiſh Hiſtorians, being thus:

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvi.

[5.] Hec. Boeth. L. 15. Chron. Eveſh. MS. Holin. p. 902.

The Lord Beaumont in revenge of the death of the Earl of Athol, puts all the Scots he could meet with to the Sword, and then King Edward ſends the Earls of Lancaſter and others with ſufficient Forces into Scotland.

[6] King Edward ſent to King Baliol to take along with Him the Lord Henry Plantagenet, who had been made Lieutenant-General of the Engliſh Army in Scotland, and the Earls of Oxford, Warwick, and Arundel, together with divers other Lords and Officers of both Nati- ons; and with their Joynt Forces forthwith to enter the Field. Upon which, King Baliol and theſe Lords paſſed over the Scotiſh Frith, and went to St. John's-Town, where they waited King Edward's farther Orders.

[6.] C. A. M. Id. ib

King Baliol takes divers Engliſh Lords to His aſſiſtance, end marches as far as St. John's-Town

In the mean while, [1.] about Whitſuntide, the King held a Parlia- ment (or rather a Great Council) at Northampton, [2.] where He re- ceived ~~advice~~, that the King of France had engaged to protect and aſ- ſiſt the Scots; and to that purpoſe had ſent over ſeveral eminent Com- manders, with conſiderable Supplies of Men, Money, and Ammuni- tion. King Edward was not at all diſpleaſed with this News, becauſe it gave Him now a juſt Occaſion for turning His Arms againſt France; and He hoped alſo that ſo ſoon as the French and Scots were joined, they

[1] T. W. ad hunc Ann.

[2] H K. Col. 2568.

(2) × note ye King by a special commission under ye great-seal [Rot. Scot: m. 28. vid: Rym Coll. p. 695] had appointed him Generall in this Expedition

(3) × whom he ~~com~~ also communicated to them his late Treaties with the King of France; and it was thereupon resolv'd, that the King should send other Ambassadors with full Power to treat and agree with that King or those Commission'd by him concerning all Quarrels, Debates and Differences between them concerning the Injuries done to each others Subjects; & by Reason of the King's Dominions in Aquitaine, or elsewhere. But the Issue of this new Treaty was, that the King rec'd Advice from his Ambassadors, that all their reasonable offers and Proposals were refus'd by the King of France as you will find hereafter

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxxvi.

[3] Id. T. W. He leaves the Lords in Council at Northampton, and poſts away into Scotland, to join K Baliol's Forces, they would not decline coming to a Battel. Therefore to puſh on t War in Scotland with all the Vigour He could, [3] He privately l

the Lords and Prelates at Northampton, to their Parliamentary Debat and with a ſmall but ſelect Company, poſts away incognito for Scotla and never ſtopp'd until He came to Berwick: And there taking ſo Freſh Men for His Guard, He rode on to St. John's-Town, where H found King Baliol ready with the Forces of both Nations; who, wi the Lords that were with Him, were highly encouraged by the Kin unexpected Arrival: Nor was He leſs ſatisfied to find His Forces in ſu a Readineſs and good Diſpoſition for Action. He came thither in very good time, [4] for not long before His Arrival, Patrick Earl Dunbar, Sir William Douglas, and Sir William de Kethe, the Chief Co manders for David Bruce, having received freſh Courage fro the French Auxiliaries, had taken the Caſtles of Bothwell, and St. A drew's, and were gone to beſiege that of Sterling. This Place was i deed vigorouſly aſſaulted, but notwithſtanding it was as bravely d fended from within. But after the Scots had heard of King Edwar Approach, and had made one other briſk Aſſault againſt it, th thought it beſt to march off; as did alſo another Party of them th then lay before the Siege of the Caſtle of Lochindoris, wherein w the Lady Catherine Beaumont, Relict of the late Earl of Athol: B they likewiſe upon the News of the King's Approach, would ſtay n longer, but ſtrait raiſed the Siege.

[4.] Id ad An. 1335.

With which He marches to relieve Sterling Caſtle.

Buchan. l. 9.

[5.] Id. ib. He paſſes thro' Athol and Murrey, as far as Elgin and Innerneſs, the Scots not daring to encounter Him.
[6.] H. K. ib. A. M

In [5] the mean while, King Edward paſſed with His Army b
Dunkelden thro' Athol and Murrey, as far as Elgin and Innernes, whe Scotland is bounded by the Sea, in perſuit of the Enemy, to ſee if b any means He could bring them to a Battel. Yet for all their Aſſ ſtance from France, they durſt not look Him in the Face, [6.] bu kept themſelves in the Mountains and other Faſtneſſes; only in th Night-time they would make ſome falſe Alarms, to try if they coul frighten the Engliſh. But they knew them ſo well, and kept ſuch ſtric Watch over them, that they eaſily prevented all their Attempts tha way; which made the Scots ſo wiſe as to keep themſelves at a diſtanc and would not hazard the Small Forces they had left, againſt a Roya Army. But the King was now reſolved not only to keep the French a home, but to be revenged of them for the Injuries they had lately don For beſides the Aſſiſtance K. Phil. had a little before given to the Brucean with hopes that they would be able to make a Diverſion in Scotlan
He [1.] now grew mighty confident, and thinking thoſe Force would be ſufficient to deal with England, He fell to invade King Ed ward's Territories in Gaſcoigne, ſurprizing and taking moſt of th Towns and Caſtles, and killing His Subjects there; tho' not withou conſiderable Loſs on His ſide. For the Lord Oliver Ingham, then Se neſchal of that Country, a brave and experienc'd Commander, mad a Vigorous Reſiſtance, conſidering the ſmall Forces he had with him Yet the French Hiſtorians make no Great Matter of theſe things; an will own no more to have been done, either in this or the laſt Yea except the demoliſhing of the Caſtle of Xainctes by Charles Count o Alanſon, their King's Brother; but they confeſs, that the County o
Acques, and divers other Towns and Caſtles, which had been taken b Charles of Valois, Father to King Philip, from Edward the Secon were ſtill detain'd. And beſides theſe Provocations, [1.] H. K. Col. 2570. K. Philip invades the Engliſh Territories in Gaſcoigne, and takes ſeveral Towns and Caſtles.

Whilſ

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvi.

Whilſt King Edward was in Scotland, the French King had ſent Six nd Twenty Gallies well mann'd, to cruize about the Engliſh Coaſt, either to watch for ſome Advantage, or elſe with a Deſign to ſail for Scotland, to aſſiſt King David's Party. King Edward hearing of it whilſt He remained at St. John's Town, iſſued forth a Commiſſion o the Lord Geoffrey de Say, then newly made His Admiral of the Southern and Weſtern Seas; an Extract whereof, becauſe it ſerves to prove the King of England's Antient Power and Juriſdiction over the Brittiſh Seas (the Latin Original being ſomewhat long) I ſhall here ſet down in Engliſh.

'The * King firſt recites His former Orders to the ſaid Geoffrey de Say, viz. That taking with him certain Ships belonging to the Cinque-Ports, which had been equipped for that purpoſe, he ſhould forthwith ſet out to Sea, to reſiſt and oppoſe thoſe Foreign Gallies that were then in the Narrow Seas, to moleſt and grieve the King and His Subjects. And that He being further inform'd, that there were indeed ſuch Gallies to the Number of Six and Twenty, newly ſet out from the Coaſts of Bretaigne or Normandy, for the Deſign aforeſaid; and calling to mind, That His Progenitors, the Kings of England, had before theſe times been Lords of the Engliſh Seas on every ſide; yea, the Defenders thereof againſt the Encroachments of Enemies: He therefore now reinforces His former Orders, and that immediately upon ſight of theſe Preſents, the ſaid Admiral ſhould ſet forth to Sea, with the Ships of the Ports aforeſaid, and ſuch other Ships as were then ready; and with them to look after, and take the ſaid Gallies, if they ſhould preſume to bend their Courſe for the End aforeſaid, either towards England, or the Coaſt of Scotland; or if they ſhould ſteal away, to perſue after and utterly deſtroy them. After which, there follows in the ſame Commiſſion a Power from the King to preſs Seamen, with ſome other Matters of that kind, needleſs to be here recited. The like Commiſſion was iſſued forth to the Lord John de Norwich, Admiral of the Northern Parts; both bearing the ſame Date. Witneſs the King at St. John's Town, the Sixteenth Day of Auguſt, Per ipſum Regem & Concilium.

The French K. having ſent out 26 Galleys to cruize on the Engliſh Coaſt; King Edward iſſues out a Commiſſion as Lord of the Narrow Seas, to ſeize them.

The Effect of this Commiſſion.

Selden's Mare Clauſum, l. 3. cap. 23. p. 246, 247.

This Commiſſion Mr. Selden hath tranſcribed in his * Mare Clauſum, o prove the Antiquity of the Dominion of the Kings of England over he Brittiſh Seas; where the Reader may find it truly Copy'd from the * Rolls in the Tower.

* L. 2. c. 23. p. 247, 248.

* Rot Scotiæ. 10 Ed 3. m. 16.

King Edward did not do much more the reſt of this Year in Scotland, [2.] only the People there not being able to make any great Head againſt Him, He marched from one Province to another, ſpoiling and deſtroying thoſe Countries that held out for the other Prince: And in His Return He burnt the Town of Aberdeen, (becauſe the men there had treacherouſly killed an Engliſh Knight, called Sir Thomas Roſſelyn;) nd likewiſe divers other Places; deſtroying the Country where ever He came that made any Oppoſition to Him. And then King Edward finding there was nothing more for Him to do in Scotland, left King Baliol to reduce the Remainder of the Scots. And ſometime in Auguſt after, the Earl of Cornwall the King's Brother, and the Lord Lucy, together with a conſiderable Force raiſed out of the Northern Countries, came to His Aſſiſtance, and in their way deſtroyed the County of Carrick, and other Weſtern Parts that did not acknowledge King Baliol.

[2.] T. W. An. 1334.

The K marches thro' Scotland, ſpoiling and burning the Country and Town of Aberdeen.

Buchan. l. 9.

The E of Cornwall and Ld. Lucy come with a conſiderable Force to the Aſſiſtance of K. Baliol.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvi

[3] Id ib.
[4] H. K. Col. 2568.
* Rot. Clauſ 10 Ed 3 m 16.

The K. returns into England and holds a Parliament at Nottingham, where He has a Tax given towards His Wars.

Then [3] the King having repair'd and new fortified the Caſtles o Sterling and Bothwell, about the middle of September returned into England to His Parliament at * Nottingham, the Monday after St. Matthew's Day, or Twenty Fifth of September; where He had granted Him towards the Maintenance of His Wars in Scotland and Gaſcoigne, a Twentieth Part from the Nobility and Knights of Shires, a Fifteenth from the Citizens and Burgeſſes, and a Sixth from the Clergy; beſides the Merchants of England were to pay Forty Shillings a Sack for all Wooll Tranſported, and Foreigners Three Pounds Sterling.

K. Edw. ſends Ambaſſadors into France, to demand the Towns and Caſtles detain'd by that King.

In Relation to Foreign Affairs, I find nothing elſe to have happened further this Year, only that the King by the Advice of the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, at the late Council at Northampton, ſent the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Biſhop of Durham, with the Lords Scrope and Montacute, Ambaſſadors to the King of France; to demand the Towns and Caſtles by Him unjuſtly detain'd; As alſo that He ſhould engag not to aſſiſt the King's Enemies the Scots: Which things if King Philip would agree to, Edward promiſed to accompany Him to the Holy-Land.

T. W. Yp. Neuſt.
[1.] Gaguin. Hiſt. de France, in Fol. p. 133.
Fab. Chron. ad hunc An.

The K. of France is at firſt like to make Peace, but being perſuaded to the contrary, refuſes to agree, unleſs the Scots be included therein.

When theſe [1.] Ambaſſadors arrived in France, they were (tho' with ſome difficulty) admitted into the King's Preſence: And having made theſe Propoſals to Him, His Majeſty ſeemed ſo zealous for Hi Voyage to the Holy-Land, that He at firſt agreed to all their Demands, and the Peace proceeded ſo far, as to order it to be proclaim'd the next day in Paris. But the Ambaſſadors were ſcarce got to thei Lodgings, when Philip (either by the Inſtigation of the King o Scots, or of ſome of His own Courtiers, Enemies to England) ſen for them back to Court, where He told them, That upon better Conſideration, He found it not conſiſtent with His Honour or Safety, unleſ the King of Scots might be alſo included in this Peace. To which Demand the Ambaſſadors anſwered, That having had no Inſtruction fro their Royal Maſter concerning any ſuch thing, they could ſay nothing to it. Whereupon they were ordered to depart; and ſo returning home, to give the K. an Account of what they had done. Upo which, the Difference between theſe two Princes became wider than i was before. This is the Account, that not only our own, but th French Hiſtorians give of this Tranſaction: Whereby it plainly appears, That it was not King Edward, but the French King, who b His Levity in again inſiſting upon what He had already given up not only hinder'd the intended Expedition againſt the Infidels but gave King Edward a juſt Occaſion of beginning a War, whic laſted ſo many Years, almoſt to the Ruin of the Kingdom of France.

That the fault of this Breach lay at the K. of France's door.

The K. reſolves to regain His Right in France by force.
[2.] Froſſ. ib. c 28.
He communicates His Reſolutions to His Council who adviſe Him to conſult His Father-in-law & Uncle.

When the King ſaw there was no more hopes of prevailing wit Philip by fair means, He reſolved to regain His Right by Forc and was particularly adviſed by the Lord Robert of Artois (now made one of His moſt Secret Councellors) to be revenged o Him for uſurping and detaining from Him that Crown. The Kin was well enough pleaſed with this Advice, and having communicate it to His Privy Council, and they approving of it, prayed Him firſt t conſult His Father-in-Law, William Earl of Haynault, and His Uncl John, commonly called the Lord de Beaumont, who had done the Kin great Service, in conducting His Mother and Himſelf into Engla In perſuance of this Advice, He at the Beginning of this Summe

ſen

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvi.

ent [3.] Henry Burgherſh Biſhop of Lincoln, a Prelate of great Knowledge and Experience in State-Affairs, together with two Bannerets, and two Doctors of Law, to acquaint them with His Intentions, and to ſatisfy them of the Juſtice of His Claim to the Crown of France. They not only approved of His Deſign, but further adviſed Him to make New Alliances with ſome other Neighbouring Princes nd Great Men, whoſe Countenance and Aſſiſtance might be thought eceſſary for the carrying on this preſent Undertaking.

[3.] Id. ib
The K. ſends Ambaſſadors to them, who approve of His Deſign, & adviſe Him to make Allyances.

Wherefore after the Return of the Biſhop and his Collegues, [4.] the King by Special Commiſſion, dated the Sixteenth of December, impower'd William Earl of Haynault (ſtiled alſo therein, Earl of Holland and Zealand, &c.) to treat and agree with ſuch Noblemen, Perſons of Note, and Others, as he ſhould think fit, about Allyances, and ſuch Retainers as they ſhould bring in. The like [5.] Commiſſions with the like Powers, and of the ſame Date, were ſent to William Earl of Juliers, the King's Brother in law, (as having married Joanna, Siſter to Queen Phillippe) and to Sir John Montgomery, Knt. and Mr. John Walwyn, Chanon of Darlington.

[4.] Rot. Pat. 10 Ed. 3. p. 1 m. 6.
The K. iſſues Commiſſions to the Earls of Haynault & Juliers, to contract with ſeveral Noblem. and others for his Service.
[5.] Ibid.

And here, to keep entire the Thrid of my Diſcourſe, I ſhall put together whatſoever was tranſacted of this nature, (tho' it fell not out till the Beginning of the next Year, viz. in April following.) [1.] The aboveſaid Biſhop, William E. of Saliſbury, and William E. of Huntingdon, were, by Virtue of a like Commiſſion, (dated the Nineteenth of that Month) ſent into Flanders; and likewiſe in other Countries, [2.] they contracted with ſeveral Noblemen and Gentlemen, in Haynault, Guelderland, and Juliers, to aſſiſt the King againſt France; and alſo agreed upon what Number of Forces each of them ſhould raiſe for this intended Expedition, and the Pay they were to receive for their Service. And within a ſhort time after, [3.] Reginald Earl of Gueldres, (who had marryed the King's Siſter) and William Marquiſs of Juliers, came into this Allyance; as did likewiſe Rupert Duke of Bavaria, and Count Palatine of the Rhine.

[1.] Rot. Pat. 11 Ed. 3. Part 1. m. 11.
Other Ambaſ. likewiſe empower'd to contract with the Noblemen of divers Countries.
[2.] Rot. Alm. 11 Ed. 3. m. 9, 10, 11.
[3.] Ibid.
The Earl of Gueldres & the Marquiſs of Juliers, as alſo the D. of Bavaria enter into this Allyance.

The King having thus ſtrengthened Himſelf with Foreign Allyances, immediately reſolved to fall upon France; [4] and therefore recalled His Ambaſſadors from thence. And He was the rather induced to this, becauſe He underſtood, that while they were Treating of Peace, King Philip had ſet out a well-appointed Fleet to aſſiſt the Scots, under the Command of David Bruce their Exiled King, who had therewith done a great deal of Damage to the Engliſh Merchants about the Iſle of Wight, and had ſlain ſeveral of the Inhabitants of Guernſey and Jerſey. To put a Stop to this, K. Edward being now at Bothwell in Scotland, proſecuting the War, He immediately iſſued out a [5.] Commiſſion, dated the Eleventh of December, directed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Henry Plantagenet, Son to the Duke of Lancaſter, and other Noblemen, commanding them to meet at London on Wedneſday after New-Year's-day next enſuing, to conſult about Matters relating to the Defence of the Kingdom, and the repelling the Enemies thereof; and to do all things for His Honour and the Common Safety, as if He Himſelf were perſonally preſent.

[4.] T. W.
The French K. ſets out a Fleet to aſſiſt the Scots.
[5.] Rot. Scot. 10 Ed. 3. m 3.
K. Edw. iſſues out a Commiſſion to divers Noblemen.

King Philip being now [1.] acquainted with King Edward's Deſigns, began to abate of His Zeal for the Holy-War, perceiving He was to meet with one at home; and therefore countermanded His Officers

[1.] Froiſſ. ib. cap. 28
K. Philip lays aſide all thoughts of the Holy War.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxvi

[2.] Odoric. Raynold. contin. Biron. ad Ann. 1336. The Pope ſends Letters to the Kings of France and England, exhorting 'em to Peace.

from making any further Preparations for it till they had freſh Orders from Him. Then [2.] Pope Benedict finding the Quarrel grown to ſuch a heighth between theſe two Crowns, ſent His Letters directed to Them both, by His Nuncio Philip de Camberlake, in way of Mediation, to perſwade Them to an Agreement; but eſpecially to pacifie King Edward, whom He exhorted to diſmiſs Robert D' Artois, as one that was continually exciting Him to War: He alſo wrote to Queen Philippe, and to the ABp of Canterbury, perſwading them to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to bring the King to ſome Reaſonable Terms with France, but it was now too late; for He was ſo exaſperated by the Obſtinacy of His Adverſary, that nothing could prevent that Bloody War between the two Kingdoms, which ſhortly broke out, and continued for ſo many Years, to the great impoveriſhment and weakening of both, and particularly France.

[3.] T. W. ad Ann. 1334. falſo; Sed in MS.Bod. 1336. quod rectum eſt. The Deceaſe of the Earl of Cornwal the King's Brother.

But before we put an end to it, I cannot forbear taking notice, [3.] that not long after the King's departure from Scotland, John of Eltham, Earl of Cornwal, His only Brother, deceaſed the Fourteenth of September, or elſe about the beginning of October (as Walſingham relates) tho he is very much out in the Year, in placing it under 1334; but this much is certain, that having over heated himſelf in the late Expedition againſt the Scots, he fell into a Feaver, that ended in a Flux, of which he died at St. John's-Town in the twentieth Year of his Age, without being married; his Death was highly lamented by the King his Brother, and all the Nobility, being a Prince of great Hopes and Courage, and was twice left Guardian or Lieutenant of all England, during the King's Abſence in France and Scotland. x x I have nothing more to add concerning this hopeful young Prince, but that he dyed without Issue, having never been married, altho divers Proposals of Marriage had been set on Foot by yᵉ King his Brother for yᵉ daughters of divers Foreign Princes, as appears by several Commissions for yᵗ Purpose entred on yᵉ Rolls. Rot. Pat. 8. Ed. 3 pᵗ. 1. m. 4. & 22 vid. R— Coll. p. 608 620. 624.]

[4.] L. 15. f. 320. The great malice of Hector Boeth. to the Memory of this Prince, and falſhood in the Relation and manner of his Death.

I cannot but here obſerve the great Malice of [4.] Hector Boethius to the Memory of this Young Prince, relating the manner of his Death quite otherwiſe; as that he having done many abominable Cruelties in Scotland, without any regard to Holy Places, after all came to St. John's-Town, where the King his Brother then was in the Church at His Devotions, near the Altar, and that upon ſight of him, the King, who had heard of all his Barbarous and Prophane Cruelties, queſtioned him about thoſe Matters, but receiving from him a harſh and undutiful Anſwer, was ſo far provoked, that immediately drawing His Sword, He there ſlew Him with His Own Hands, ſaying theſe Words, That the Altar ought not to be a Refuge for One who had by Fire and Sword violated both Church and Altars. But indeed this Story is ſo groſs, that it needs no Confutation; and Buchanan is more modeſt than to relate it, tho he often follows this Author in Matters altogether as falſe, when they tend to the leſſening the Honour of the Engliſh Nation, and the advancing his own.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxvii.

[5] Chron. Francois MS. Civit London.

[5.] Nothing elſe happened worth our noting, only, that in the beginning of March was a great Eclipſe of the Sun, that darkened above half his Body.

[1.] C. A. M. The King returns out of the North to be preſent at His Brother's Funeral.

Immediately after the Feaſt of Epiphany, the King with the Archbiſhop of York returned out of the North, to [1.] be preſent at the Funeral Obſequies of His Brother Earl John, who was buried in the Abbey of Weſtminſter, in the Chappel of St. Edmund, where a handſome Monument erected to his Memory is ſtill to be ſeen, on which lies his Statue in Alablaſter, with an Earl's Coronet adorned with ſmall Flowers about his Helmet; being the firſt I have obſerved of that kind.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

The firſt Action I find to have been perform'd in Scotland this Year, was the laying cloſe Siege to the Caſtle of Dunbar by the Earls of Saliſbury and Arundel, on the ſeven and twentieth of January, which was vigorouſly defended by the Counteſs Agnes, Wife to the Earl of Marche, and a Woman of a Maſculine Spirit, who made ſo brave a Defence, that tho King Baliol ſent two ſeveral Parties to the aſſiſtance of the Beſiegers, yet when they had almoſt brought it to Surrender, it was relieved with Men and Proviſions by Sir Andrew Ramſey, who with one Veſſel paſſed by Night through the Engliſh Fleet, ſo that after a long Siege of about twenty Weeks, the Engliſh Forces being out of hopes to take it, the Lords abovemention'd not only agreed to raiſe the Siege, but the Scots alſo then obtained a Truce for about Six Months, which was very much reſented in England; but the King at that time needed the aſſiſtance of His Subjects for the War He was then about to make upon France, and the Engliſh Lords in Scotland were more eager to go with Him than to carry on the War in that Kingdom: But theſe things did not happen till the Summer following.

[2] Buchan. A. D. 1337. The Caſtle of Dunbar is beſieged by the Earls of Saliſbury and Arundel, and is vigorouſly defended by the Counteſs of Marche. And being relieved, the Siege is raiſed and the Scots obtain a Six Months Truce.

About [3.] the middle of March the King held a Parliament at Weſtminſter, wherein it was ordained, That no Wool of Engliſh growth ſhould be tranſported beyond the Seas, and that all Cloath-workers ſhould be received from whatever Foreign Parts they would come, and fit Places ſhould be aſſigned them, with divers Liberties and Priviledges; and that they ſhould have a certain Allowance from the King, till they might be fixed in a way of living by their Trade.

[3] C. A. M. Ib. T. W. Ypod. Neuſt. The King holds a Parliament at Weſtminſter, where it is ordained, that no Wool ſhall be tranſported beyond Sea, and that none ſhould wear any Foreign Cloaths.

It was alſo ordained, [4.] That none ſhould wear any Cloaths wrought beyond Sea, or to be imported hereafter, except the King, Queen, and their Children; alſo, That none ſhould wear Foreign Furs or Silks, unleſs he were worth one hundred pounds of yearly Rents; by theſe and the like Good Laws, (tho for the preſent they did not take any conſiderable effect, by reaſon of the enſuing War with France) King Edward by degrees revived the Woollen Manufacture, after it had been loſt for many Years to this Nation; from whoſe time it hath ſtill increaſed to the general advantage of the whole Kingdom.

[4] C. A. M.

Alſo in this Parliament [5.] the King created His eldeſt Son Prince Edward, Duke of Cornwal, he being the firſt that ever wore that Title of Duke in England; the King alſo then created ſix Earls, to wit, Henry Lancaſter Earl of Darby, William Montacute of Saliſbury, Hugh de Audley of Gloceſter, William Clinton of Huntington, William Bohun of Northampton, and Robert Ufford of Suffolk; at which Solemnity the King made a Magnificent Entertainment: This Great Advancement of the Prince and Nobility was certainly in this Year, according to our Account, beginning the Year on Chriſtmaſs-day, but it is very much miſplaced by Walſingham, who puts it under Anno Dom. 1335, two Years before it happened, for John Earl of Cornwal did not die till the laſt Year.

[5] Id. ib. T. W, The King creates Prince Edwad His eldeſt Son Earl of Cornwal, and makes ſix new Earls.

But to proceed to ſomewhat more material: Let us ſee what was done in the mean time in Scotland, where Patrick Earl of Dunbar, and the Lords Douglas and Murrey being encouraged by the abſence of King Edward, took the Caſtles of Bothwell and St. Andrew's by force, and were like to have taken that of Edinburgh by ſurprize, and then laid cloſe

The Earl of Dunbar takes ſeveral Caſtles in Scotland.

ſiege

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

ſiege to Sterling Caſtle; but when the King heard of it, He reſolved to raiſe the Siege, and having recruited the Gariſon with freſh Men, and taken out the Sick and Wounded, He returned into England.

[1.] John Tinmouth. Hiſt. Aur.

* Rot. Alman. 11 Ed. 3 m. 11.

The K. ſends the Bp of Lincoln and divers other Noblemen Ambaſſaders to treat with the German Princes.

† Cap. 28.

The firſt thing we find the King to have perform'd after His return home, [1] was, to ſtrengthen Himſelf with Alliances abroad; to which end, on the Nineteenth of April, He granted a * Commiſſion to Henry Bp of Lincoln, William Earl of Saliſbury, and William Earl of Huntington, who were thereby appointed His Ambaſſadors to treat with ſeveral Princes and Lords of the Upper and Lower Germany; and it further appears from † Froiſſart, that the ſaid Bp having ſome Noblemen with him, had about the ſame time been ſent to the Duke of Brabant, and engaged him to declare for King Edward, tho it were to defie the French King Himſelf.

* M. 9, 10, 11.

The Engliſh Ambaſſadors conclude a Confederacy between the King and ſeveral Princes of Germany and the Low-Countries againſt France.

And it further appears from the above cited * Record, that by the Fourteenth of May next enſuing, the Engliſh Ambaſſadors had play'd their Buſineſs ſo well, that they contracted with ſeveral Princes, Noblemen, and Others in Hainault, Guelderland and Juliers to aſſiſt the King againſt France.

* Rot. Aleman. 11 Ed. 3 m. 10.

* Ib. m. 8.

* Ibm.

And it alſo appears from the ſame Record, that in a very ſhort time after, * Reginald Earl of Gueldres and Zutphen, (who married Eleanora the King's Siſter) and William Marqueſs of Gulick or Juliers, came into this Alliance, as did alſo Rupert Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Duke of Bavaria, the Emperor's Brother, and many other Princes; by virtue of which League they obliged themſelves and their Heirs to aſſiſt each Other with all their Power to recover their Inheritances and Poſſeſſions withheld from them by Philip of Valois; * ſo that by the thirteenth of July, John Duke of Lorain, Brabant and Lemburgh was retain'd for King Edward, with many petty Earls and Lords of Germany; and about the ſame time there was * alſo concluded between the Emperor Lewis, Himſelf and the King of England, and their Heirs, a firm Union and Confederacy againſt Philip of Valois, (who ſtiles Himſelf King of France) for the Recovery and Defence of their Honours and Poſſeſſions: The like Confederacy was alſo made about the ſame time with Lewis, eldeſt Son to the Emperor, by the Title of Marquiſs of Brandenburgh, Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Duke of Bavaria, &c. which was made by the Aſſent of the Emperor his Father.

* Rot. Scot. 11 Ed 3. m. 1. 6 & 11.

[3.] It further likewiſe appears by the * Scotiſh Rolls of this Year, that ſeveral Confederacies are entred there, where in ſome of them the Wages were expreſſed, allowed by the King to His Retainers, for every Man at Arms they brought into His Service, by the Month, viz. fifteen Florens of Florence, which was five and forty Shillings Sterling, and was better than eighteen Pence a Day at this time.

The Confederacies made by the King of France againſt England.

[2.] Du Cheſn. Hiſt. Fran. f. 646.

Nor was the King of France behind hand with King Edward in bringing in what Princes of Germany He could to be of His Party; and accordingly on the French ſide were engaged John King of Bohemia, and Earl of Luxemburgh, Henry Count Palatine of the Rhine, Aubert Bp of Metz, and the Bp of Leige, Otho Duke of Auſtria, Theodore Marquiſs of Montferrat, Amè Earl of Geneva, Geoffrey Earl of Linanges, Waleran Earl of Deux-Ponts, Henry Earl of Vaudemont, John Earl of Sarbruck, Imbert Baſtard of Savoy, and many other Captains and Lords of Almain, Spain, Franche-County, Dauphinè, Savoy, and other Countries beſides the Scots and Duke of Lorain, I mean, he that was really ſo; but as for the ke of Brabant, beforementioned, he only made uſe of that Title.

Duke

Thus was almoſt all Europe divided either by Intereſt or Inclination take part with one of theſe mighty Monarchs.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

Nor did King Edward's Agents prevail upon the German Princes alone, t [3.] by the Perſwaſions and Promiſes of one Sir Edward Brett, a ntleman of an obliging Carriage, moſt of the Leading Men of the ief Cities and Towns in Flanders were brought over to the Engliſh tereſt, eſpecially when it alſo made for their own; they being now omiſed, that the Trade of Engliſh Wools, of which they had been deiv'd for three Years paſt, ſhould be again reſtored to them; and they ereupon engaged to take part with King Edward, whenever there ould be occaſion: And [4.] tho Lewis, then Earl of Flanders, who was holly of the French King's ſide, did what he could to oppoſe K. Edward's eſigns, yet it was all in vain; for having raſhly, and without due Form Law put to death a Nobleman of Flanders, called Sir Simon de Courtrey, r too boldly aſſerting in Council, That the Friendſhip of England was be preferr'd before that of France; this Injuſtice cauſed ſuch a Comotion among the People, that ſoon after taking up Arms, they not ly routed his Forces in the Field, but forced him to take refuge in one his Caſtles, to fortifie it againſt them.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 29. Fabian p. 204.

The leading men of the Cities and chief Towns in Flanders are brought over to K. Edward's Intereſt, notwithſtanding the Endeavours of Lewis Earl of Flanders to the contrary.

[4] Froiſſ. ib.

[5.] Immediately upon this Sir Edward Brett abovementioned, alſo ined the Good Will of the Citizens of Gaunt to be for King Edward henever there was occaſion, which he performed by the means of one acob Van Artefeld, a Brewer of that City, who by his Riches, Boldneſs d Fluency of Tongue, had now, upon the flight of their Earl, got the hief Authority with the Citizens, and by his means it was granted by e major part of them, that King Edward ſhould have free leave come and reſide at that City when ever He pleas'd; which Advan-ge the King laid hold on the Year following, as you will find here-fter.

5.] Id. ib.

[The Citizens of Gaunt are gain'd for K. Edward by the means of Jacob Van Artefeild a Brewer, who obtains leave for K. Edward to come thither when He pleas'd.

But we muſt now return to the Affairs of England: King Edward, nding that all His Offers to the King of France were utterly in vain, as reſolved to prepare for War; in order to which He ſummon'd a arliament at Weſtminſter, (and not at Nottingham, as Walſingham re-ates); but of this more anon.

The King in order to a War with France, ſummons a Parliament, where He has a Tax granted Him.

But we ſhall now intermix ſome other Foreign Tranſactions which ere done not long before. King Edward having brought over ſo con-derable a Party of the Flemings to His Intereſt, reſolved to act more penly againſt the French King, and to this end ſent the* ABp of Canterury, with the Bps of Durham and Lincoln, and the Earls of Salisbury, orthampton, Hereford and Suffolk, with John Lord Darcy, Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold, and Sir Geoffrey Scrope, Chief Juſtice of England, Ambaſſadors to King Philip, not to demand reſtitution of a few Caſtles or Towns unjuſtly taken or detained, but to declare King Edward's
Right to the Crown of France it ſelf, as alſo by the bye to propoſe ſome Conditions for a Treaty with David Bruce, the Exild King of Scotland, then in France; but if the French King ſhould prove untractable and averſe to Reaſon, they were then to go to the Court of Prince Rupert, Count Palatine of the Rhine, the Emperor's Brother, to engage Him alſo, on the behalf of England, againſt King Philip:
[1.] Theſe Ambaſſadors being arrived at Bologne, received advice, that King Edward's mind was alter'd; which made them conceive that their

The K ſends the ABp of Canterbury with other Bps and Noblemen to the K. of France to ſet forth King Edward's Right to that Crown.

* Ib. m. 17.

[1.] T. W. ad An. 1335. ſed falſo.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

But upon a Change of the Circumſtance of Affairs, the Ambaſſadors quit their Deſign for France, and go to Haynault to renew the League with the young Earl and other German Princes.

* Rot. Alman. 11 Ed. 3. m.5

their Journey to the French Court might be hazardous, and expoſe them to the Fury of an angry Prince, who in His Paſſion might make no difference between Juſt and Unjuſt; and had before threat'ned other Ambaſſadors with Death, who were ſent to ſet forth their Maſter's Right to that Crown, if ever they offer'd to come again on that Errand: Wherefore the Ambaſſadors quitting their Deſign of going to Paris, directed their Courſe for Haynault, where they renewed the League with William the young Earl, (whoſe Father, of the ſame Name, had deceaſed not long before) as alſo with the Earl of Gueldres and Marquiſs of Juliers. And from thence proceeding to Cologne, made * a like Agreement with Rupert Duke of Bavaria; he undertaking to ſerve King Edw. againſt all Men living (the Emperor his Brother only excepted) with an Hundred and Fifty Men at Arms. The whole Number to be raiſed by theſe Princes, amounting to above a Thouſand Horſe of that ſort: In lieu whereof the Engliſh Commiſſioners engaged, before their Return for England, to pay unto him at Dort, Two Thouſand Seven Hundred Florens of Florence, or their equivalent Value in Sterling-Money: And moreover, upon the Feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing, the Sum of Fifteen Thouſand Florens of Gold, viz. for every Soldier Fifteen Florens, for the two firſt Months Service; which was as much as One Shilling and Six Pence per diem; great Wages in thoſe days.

* Ad An. 1335

And, I ſuppoſe, it is to this Tranſaction that * Walſingham refers, (tho' he has ante-dated it near two Years) when he relates, that the Biſhop of Lincoln, with the Earls of Salisbury and Huntingdon, (inſtead of Hereford) were, by the Advice of the Great Council held at Stamford, to have been ſent to the King of France: But when they came to Bologne, underſtanding their Journey might prove hazardous, went no further than that Place; and then changed their Courſe towards Haynault, in order to treat with that Earl, as alſo with the Emperor Louis of Bavaria, the Earl of Gueldres, and other Lords, with whom they then made an Allyance on the King's Behalf.

[2.] Id. ib. H. K. ad hunc Ann.

Theſe Ambaſſadors in their Return take two Flemiſh Men of War, in which were the Bp. of Glaſco and ſeveral Scotiſh Perſons of Quality, whom they took Priſoners.

[3] Froiſſ. ib. cap. 30.

* Note, my Author calls it Cagant, but corruptly.

The Ambaſſad. upon their return complain to the K. of the Gariſon of Cadſant, ſetting out Ships to take them; whereupon the K. ſends Forces againſt it.

[3.] Theſe Ambaſſadors having thus diſpatched the King's Affairs to His Satisfaction, ſail'd for England, and by the way took two Flemiſh Men of War, with an Hundred and Fifty Scots on board 'em; among whom were the Biſhop of Glaſco, and divers Noblemen and Ladies needleſs here to be named. Beſides theſe, there were ſent by the French King, to aid the Scots of King Bruce's Party, a great many Arms, Horſes, and ready Money to the Value of Fifteen Thouſand Pounds; all which were now taken by the Engliſh Admiral, the Soldiers being moſt ſlain, and all the reſt made Priſoners; and the Biſhop being wounded (tho ſlightly) in the Head, was brought into Sandwich, where of that and Grief together he died ſoon after. Walſingham places the Ambaſſy, as alſo the following Action under the Year 1335; which is a Miſtake; and therefore I have followed Knyghton and other Writers, who more truly place both of them under this Year.

Theſe [3.] Ambaſſadors at their Return out of Flanders, complain'd to the King of certain Flemiſh Officers and Soldiers, who keeping a Gariſon in the Iſle of * Catſand, (lying between the Ports of Sluice and Fluſhing) had from thence ſent out certain Veſſels to Sea, with a Deſign to have taken them in their Return home. To revenge which, King Edward ſent the Earl of Derby, the Lord Walter Manny, the

Lord

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

Lord Reginald Cobham, and divers other Knights and Eſquires, with Five Hundred Men at Arms, and about Two Thouſand Archers, who all went on board near London; and arriving before the ſaid Iſle, they landed under the Shot of their Archers, in ſpite of the Flemings, who were above Five Thouſand Men, drawn up upon the Shore, commanded by Guy the Earl's Baſe Brother, called the Baſtard of Flanders, a bold and expert Leader. As ſoon as the Engliſh got on Shore, they fell furiouſly upon the Flemings; who tho' they made a brave and vigorous Defence, yet thro' the great Courage of the Earl of Derby and the Lord Manny, they were all either kill'd or taken Priſoners (of whom divers were Knights of great Note and Quality) and the Town taken, plunder'd, and burnt. In which Action there was great Cruelty exerciſed: For about Three Thouſand of the Inhabitants being fled for ſafety into a Church, were by the enraged Welſhmen burnt, together with the Place it ſelf. This was the firſt Stroke that was given in this Unhappy War, and which was not begun without great Provocation from the French and Flemings, as hath been already related. [4] The Action being over, the Engliſh Commanders returned home, bringing away a great deal of Plunder and many Priſoners; the Chief of whom, was the Baſtard of Flanders above-mentioned: Who was ſo kindly received by King Edward, that being won by His Generoſity, he not long after came over to His Party. This Succeſs did ſo animate Jacob Van Artefeld and thoſe of his Party, that they thereupon ſent a Meſſage to King Edward, offering Him their Service, and deſiring Him to come over, for that the Gauntois were impatient until they ſaw Him.

[4] Froiſſ. ib. c. 31.

The Baſtard of Flanders being there taken Priſoner, is kindly treated by K. Edward.

But before He could go thither, it was neceſſary for Him to hold a Parliament at London, and to raiſe Money to carry on the intended War; and alſo to conſult about His going over, and the Reception of the Legates who were ſhortly expected to come from the Pope. The Great Council or * Parliament being met according to Summons the Friday before Michaelmaſs, the King had a Tenth granted unto Him by the Community of the Kingdom, and a Fifteenth by the Citizens and Burgeſſes. [5] The Archbiſhop of Canterbury held a Convocation of the Clergy at the ſame time, which alſo gave the King a Tenth of their Temporalties, for Three Years, towards His War with France.

* Rot Clauſ. 11 Ed. 3 p. 2. m 40 dors.

[5.] T. W. ad hunc Ann

[5.] Chron. Eveſham. MS. in Bib. Bod.

In [6] this Parliament (which Walſingham falſly places at Nottingham) it was alſo ordain'd, that for the further Encouragement of the Manufacture of Woollen Cloth, all Flemiſh Weavers, and thoſe of other Countries, ſhould have free Liberty to come over, and inhabit in England, and exerciſe their Trade. From whence the Reader may obſerve, that even in thoſe Times, the coming of Foreigners into England, who brought over with them any uſeful Trade or Manufacture, was encouraged by a Law.

[6] Ad hunc Ann

The Parliament gives leave for Flemiſh Weavers to come over and exerciſe their Trades.

And not long after, for the raiſing a ſufficient Fund againſt the intended War with France, the [1] King iſſued out a Commiſſion to the Lord Molins, for the ſeizing of the Eſtates of all Lombard Merchants, who by reaſon of their Exceſſive Extortion by Uſury, were now become odious, and a Publick Grievance to the Nation. And he was order'd to deliver all their Jewels and ready Money, &c. to the Conſtable of the Tower, to be kept by him for the King's Uſe. About the ſame time, [2.] He alſo cauſed to be ſeized into His Hands, the Goods and

[1] Dugdale's Baron. Vol 2. p 146

The King iſſues a Commiſſion for the ſeizing the Eſtates of the Lombards, for their exceſſive Extortion

[2] H. K Col. 2570.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

He alſo ſeizes the Revenues of Priories Alien.

Vid. Clem. Reyner. Ap. Ben. Part 2. in Ap. p 71.

and Revenues of all Alien and Foreign Priories, eſpecially of the Cluniac and Ciſtercian Orders, which were immediately let out to Farm to thoſe Monks, who paid a ſufficient Rent for them during theſe Wars.

* Chron. Eveſ. MS.

† H. K. Col. 2469 & ad An. 1336. ſed falſo.

The K. amaſſes a great Quantity of Treaſures, which produces a great Scarcity of Money in the Country.

* By theſe means the King is ſaid to have amaſſed together ſuch an exceſſive Quantity of Treaſure, that thereby the Country was almoſt exhauſted of Money, and conſequently † Victuals and other Commodities became exceeding Cheap; a Quarter of Wheat being then ſold at London for Two Shillings, and a fat Ox for Six and Eight-pence, a fat Sheep for Eight-pence, a fat Gooſe for Two-pence, and Six Pigeons for a Penny. This I take notice of, that ſo the Reader may from hence obſerve, that the Price of Proviſions hath abated or riſen in this Kingdom, according to the Plenty and Scarcity of Money; and with it the Price of Human Labour in this, and (generally ſpeaking) in all other Countries: Tho' by reaſon of ſome particular Accidents, this Rule may ſometimes fail, as we have ſeen it in England a few Years ſince; when notwithſtanding the great Scarcity of Coyn, Corn and all other Proviſions continued at a very high Price. But that was purely accidental; becauſe there was then great need of Proviſions for the Army and Fleet; and beſides this, there was at that time a great Dearth of Corn in France and other Countries. But to return to our Hiſtory:

[3.] Id. Col. 2570.

That [3.] which the more increaſed theſe Hardſhips, was, the King had the Summer before taken up all the Wooll in England, at the Price of Nine Marks the Sack, giving the Owners Wooden Tallies, or ſhort Notes in Writing for the ſame, under the Hands of certain Merchants, who were employ'd in each County by the King for that purpoſe. Theſe Wools, amounting in all to about Ten Thouſand Sacks, were not long after ſent over into Brabant by the Biſhop of Lincoln, the Earls of Northampton and Suffolk, and there ſold for Twenty Pound each Sack, and the Money diſpos'd of to pay for the Levies in Germany above-mentioned. Yet theſe Wools together with many Soldiers being put on board in the River Thames, and other Places, were a long time detain'd by contrary Winds, to the great prejudice of the Kingdom, and Loſs of Trade, (as my Author obſerves.) And indeed the Manufacture of Woollen Cloaths lately encouraged by Parliament, muſt needs have been much hinder'd thereby.

* Rot. Alman. 11 Ed 3. n. 10.

The K. ſends Ambaſſadors to treat with Louis the Emperor.

† Ib. n. 11.

Immediately after this, the King again took in hand that Great Affair of ſtrengthening His Alliances abroad; and to that Purpoſe, * another Commiſſion, bearing Date the Third of Octob. was iſſued out to the aforeſaid Biſhop of Lincoln, and Earls of Salisbury and Suffolk, and John Lord Darcy, Steward of the King's Houſhold; with Power to any Three of them to treat thereupon with Louis the Emperor There was † alſo another Commiſſion of the ſame Date made out t them, and to Richard Winkele, John Vfford, Paul de Monteſleur, Jo Montgomery, and John Walwyn; impowering them to treat with and to retain all Perſons, as well Nobles as others, for the King's Service And as the King did by theſe means endeavour to enable Himſelf fo the Recovery of the Crown of France, ſo likewiſe did He not negle all due Methods of Peace: And to that end, by * another Commiſſi on dated the Seventh of October, He conſtituted the foreſaid Biſho of Lincoln, with the reſt of the Perſons already named, His Agents t

* Ib. n. 7.

He alſo appoints the ſame Perſons to treat with the King of France.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxvii.

to treat with the Magnificent Prince, the Lord Philip, the Illuſtrious King of France (as He is ſtiled in the Commiſſion) or His Deputies, touching His Right to the ſaid Crown; to wit, whether it ought to remain to Him, or King Edward: And farther, by another Commiſſion of the ſame date, they were impower'd to treat upon all Controverſies and Demands whatſoever, relating to the Dukedom of Aquitain, or other Parts beyond Sea, as alſo of a happy or perpetual Peace, if it might be obtain'd.

* Rot. Scot. 11 Ed. 3. m. 1. printed in Dr. B's Appen. n. 85.

He makes the Duke of Brabant His Lieutenant General againſt France.

Yet leſt this Propoſal ſhould not meet with an agreeable Return, He at the ſame time order'd a * Commiſſion to John Duke of Brabant and Lorrain; wherein He ſets forth, That ſince the Famous Kingdom of France was lawfully devolved to Him by Right of Succeſſion, and that He had claimed it as His Inheritance, He therefore appointed the ſaid Duke His Lieutenant General there, with the ſole command of the Sword; and with other Claſes needleſs here to be recited.

* Ibidm.

And directs His Letters to all the people of France to obey Him as ſuch; and now takes the ſtile of King of that Kingdom, tho He does not retain it.

* After theſe Commiſſions ſo made, He directed His Writs or Letters of the ſame Date to the ABps, Bps, Dukes, Marquiſſes, Earls, Barons, and all other perſons in the Kingdom of France whatſoever, commanding them willingly and freely to receive the ſaid Duke, and obey him in all things, as if He were preſent Himſelf; letting them know, that to the Obedient He would be very kind, and to the Stubborn ſevere.

I cannot but take notice, that in all theſe Commiſſions He ſtiles Himſelf King of England and France, which was the firſt time that ever He uſed that Title; and in a Duplicate of the ſame (for moſt of them were double) He is ſtil'd King of France and England; which Variation I ſuppoſe was made that He might not give offence to either Kingdom: And it is further to be noted, that when He had iſſued forth theſe Commiſſions He made no more uſe of the Title of King of France in any Charter or publick Writing until about three Years after, and then He reaſſum'd it, together with the Arms thereof; and you will then alſo find upon what Conſideration it was done. But it is certain that theſe Commiſſions and Writs could have little effect in France, which was then ſufficiently united under King Philip, to prevent any Endeavours that ſhould be uſed to promote the King's Deſigns in that Kingdom. But as for the Commiſſions that were granted to the Princes and Noblemen of Germany, thoſe Treaties had better ſucceſs by means of the King's Ambaſſadors abovementioned; ſo that ſome out of kindneſs and reſpect to the King of England, and others out of a deſire to finger the Golden Florens from England (which the King then cauſed to be plentifully diſtributed among them, on pretence of Wages to their Soldiers) they moſt of them declar'd for Him, and offer'd to defie the French King, and to bring into the Field ſuch a number of Men as had been agreed on, whenſoever King Edward ſhould pleaſe to command them. x x And among those German Princes Rupert Count Palatine of the Rhine then entered into Covenant with the Lords Ambassadors above mentioned, that in consideration of the sum of 15000 Florens in Gold to be paid at the City of Cost on the Feast of St Michael next ensuing, he would thereupon serve K. Edward with 150 Men for ye Term of two Months after the Rate of 15 Florens, the Monthly pay for each Soldier; as appears by another Copy of this Agreement made at Frankfort the last Day of June 1337. & is entered on the Rolls [Rot. Alman: 11. Ed. m. 3.] vid. Rym. Coll. p. 773, 774.

The King's Affairs have no very good ſucceſs in Scotland.

As for the reſt of the Foreign Affairs of this Year, I have not much to add, only in Scotland things did not go ſo well for the King's Advantage; for He having committed the care of the Marches to the Earl of Warwick and other Noblemen, tho they made ſeveral Incurſions into that part of the Kingdom that held for King David, yet had they no great ſucceſs: Whilſt on the other hand, the Scots invaded England, and did much miſchief both by Fire and Plundering, till the Truce that was made upon the raiſing the Siege of Dunbar, (as hath been already related :) But this could not be well avoided, the King being wholly taken up with Preparations for the War with the French King.

As for the Duke of Brabant he was to have for his Assistance & Service this year no less than 60000 Sterling, payable within three Years next ensuing, according to the several Sums & Days of Payment appointed in the Instrumt, or Obligation it self, made to the sd Duke under the Kings great Seal, bearing Date at Stanford, the Year above mention'd being the 11th of King Edward's Reign; & is likewise entered on the same Roll, [Ib. m. 8.] Vid. Rym. Coll. Vol. IV. p. 777.

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxxvii.

Philip ſeizes ſeveral Towns in Gaſcoigne.

*Rot. Vaſconi. 11 Ed 3. m.42.

The King thereupon ſends ſome Forces into Gaſcoigne, which turns the Scale of Affairs.

[5] Contin. Chron. Guil de Nangiſ.

In France the King's Affairs were but in an ill condition neither, for in the beginning of this Year King Philip had ſent Forces into Gaſcoigne, where He ſeized (as we have already mentioned) many of His Caſtles and Fortreſſes: Upon this News King Edward, to put ſome ſtop to the Progreſs of the French King, * gave orders to preſs twenty Ships in the Port of Southampton and other places, and to have them ready at Portſmouth, to carry over Men for Gaſcoigne on Whitſunday-Eve enſuing, [5.] for the reinforcement of the Lord Oliver Ingham, Seneſchal of that Countrey ; who after the arrival of theſe Forces, turned the Scale of Affairs, and marching into the King of France's Territories, took the ſtrong Caſtle of Parcole, and deſtroy'd divers Towns with Fire and Sword.

[1] Victorel. & Giacon. 1 Vol p. 862. Odoric. Reynold. ad hunc Annum Holingſhed, p. 901.

The Pope ſends two Legats to mediate a Peace with France, who are received with great pomp.

* Rot. Clauſ. 11 Ed. 3. Part. 2. m. 11. Dorſ.

A Parliament ſummon'd at Weſtminſter, at Candlemaſs, till which time a Truce is granted with France.

* Rot. Fran. 11 Ed.3. m 2. Dorſ. Odoric. Raynold. ad hunc Ann.

[2.] Rot. Franc. 11 Ed 3. m. 2. Dorſ.

The [1.] Pope now perceiving that a War was ready to break forth between the Two Kings, ſent into England about Martinmaſs, Peter, Prieſt and Cardinal of St. Praxedes, and Bertrand, Cardinal Deacon of St. Mary in Aquire, to uſe their beſt means to compoſe the Differences between them : Then for the more honourable reception of theſe Pacificators, according to the King's Order, the ABp of Canterbury and divers other Bps, with the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London, went forth and met them on Shooter's-Hill ; then the Young Duke of Cornwal, with the Earl of Surrey, and ſeveral others of the Nobility received them a Mile without the City, and the King Himſelf met them at the Leſſer Hall Door of His Palace at Weſtminſter, (which we now call the Court of Requeſts) and carried them into the Painted- Chamber, where they delivered their Letters from the Pope ; * whereupon the King cauſed a Parliament to be ſummoned to meet Him at Weſtminſter on the morrow after Candlemaſs-day, 'till which time upon the Cardinal's Mediation, tho a Peace could not be effected, a * Truce was agreed on till the ſaid morrow after Candlemaſs-day. But Peace was not the only Buſineſs about which theſe Legates came, but the Privileges and Immunities of the Church, which (as the Pope Alledged) were very much invaded, as appears [2.] by His Letters to the King, bearing date IX Kal. July, Ann. Pontif. III°.

Anno Dom.
Mcccxxxviii.

[3] T. W.

The Convocation meets, at which one of the Legats reflects on the King's Proceedings, but is anſwered by the ABp of Canterbury.

The first thing that occurs this Year, is,[3.]that at the meeting of the Convocation a little before the Parliament above-mentioned, Cardinal Bertrand (a Frenchman, and one of the Legates) ſoon declared himſelf no impartial Mediator for Peace ; for in his Sermon which he preached ad Clerum, he could not forbear making ſeveral Reflections upon King Edward's Actions, putting the beſt Colour he could upon thoſe of King Philip; which ſo far provoked the ABp of Canterbury, that notwithſtanding the Cardinal's Character, ſo ſoon as his Sermon was over, he roſe up and made another Diſcourſe to the Aſſembly, wherein he ſhewed all the Cardinal's Aſſertions and Arguments to be vain and frivolous.

The Parl. meet, give the K. a great Tax out of Wool.

Then on the Third of February the Parliament began, in which the Laity granted the King the one half of their Wools throughout the whole Realm for the next Summer, which He received very graciouſly ; and
He then levied of the Clergy the whole Tenth, cauſing them to pay nine Marks for every Sack of the beſt Wool, but after the rate of one half
He took in whoſe hands ſoever it was found, as well Merchants as

Others,

(1) And that the Borders towards Scotland might not be left unguided during the King's Absence beyond Sea, he appointed Richard Earl of Arundel Captain General of all the Forces that were to be rais'd against the Scots with a full Power of mak[illegible] and appointing all inferiour Officers, as appears by his Commissions under the great Seal dated April 24. Rot Scot. 12. Ed. 3. m. 20. published in R— Coll. [illegible] p. 28.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxviii.

Others, according to the foreſaid Grant: After this He took a Fifteenth of all the Commonalty of His Realm in Wool, the Price of every Stone (at fourteen Pounds per Stone) being rated at two Shillings.

*At the ſame time the Legates prevail'd with the King to prolong the Truce till the Firſt of March, which day being alſo come, at the Inſtance of the ſaid Cardinal, the King further continued the aforeſaid Truce with France to Midſummer following, in caſe that King conſented to it, and would give Security that it ſhould duly be obſerved; after which, on the Twenty firſt of the ſaid Month, theſe Cardinals [4.] (who coſt the Church of England fifty Marks per diem all the time of their ſtay) took Shipping at Dover, the ABp of Canterbury and the Bp of London bearing them company, with intent to further the Treaty between the Two Kings; but becauſe all their Endeavours brought forth no Accommodation, we ſhall at preſent ſay no more of their Proceedings, but return to the Matter in hand.

*Rot. Alman. 12 Ed. 3. m. 36.
The Legates having prolonged the Truce with France, leave England.
[4] H. K. Col. 2570.

* see [illegible] Letters Patents to [illegible] firm it. [illegible] m. 36 [illegible]

When King Edward underſtood that the French King refuſed to give any ſecurity for the inviolable obſerving the Truce, * He thought good to revoke the latter Prorogation, which was done accordingly; ſo on the ſixth of May He made Himſelf ready for a Journey into Flanders, there perſonally to confer with His Allies, in perſuance of His deſign'd War againſt France; but before He went, upon the Cardinal's further Importunity, a *Commiſſion was iſſued to John ABp of Canterbury, Richard Bp of Durham, Robert Earl of Suffolk, Sir Geoffrey Scrope, Knt., and Mr. John Ufford, Archdeacon of Ely, with Power to treat and agree touching all things in difference between the Two Kings, in reference to a full and final Peace: And by another Commiſſion of the ſame date, viz. the One and Twentieth of June, the Duke of Brabant, the Earls of Haynalt and Gueldres, the Marquiſs of Juliers, and Sir William Dunort, Lord of Oſtervandt, Knt., are added to them: Theſe Commiſſions were double, and of two ſeveral Stiles; in the one the King calls King Philip only Philippus de Valois Conſanguineus noſter Franciæ; but in the other, Excellentiſſimus Princeps, Dominus Philippus Rex Franciæ, Illuſtris Conſanguineus noſter, &c.

* Rot. Alman. 12 Ed. 3. m. ~~36~~.
K. Edward revokes the Truce with France; and why.

[illegible] *R̶t̶. Rot. Alm[illegible] Pars 1. [illegible] in R[illegible] Col: [illegible]

*Rot. Alman. 12 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 5.
A Commiſſion is granted to the ABp of Canterbury and others to treat with the King of France about all Differences between the two Kings.

The reaſon (I ſuppoſe of theſe Double Commiſſions, was, that it might be left to the Commiſſioners either to own or diſown King Philip's Title, according as they ſhould found it made for or againſt their Maſter's intereſt; but this Treaty came to nothing, ſo that now all Reaſonable Propoſals of Peace being rejected, [5.] Jacob Van Artefeld, with thoſe of his Party, earneſtly deſired the King's preſence in Flanders,(2)* ~~therefore~~ He reſolved to go over thither; and on the Sixteenth of July [1.] took Shipping at the Port of Orewell, near Harwich, in Suffolk, with a Royal Navy of five hundred Sail, with many Earls and Barons of England in His Company; among whom were Henry Earl of Darby, William Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, &c. to the number of near twenty of the Flower of the Nobility of England, whoſe Names it would be too tedious to repeat.

[5.] Froiſſ. ib. cap. 5.
[1] Chron. Rob. Avesbury.
The King paſſes over into Flanders with a great Fleet and Army. Vid. Dugd. Baron. 1 Vol. ſub. nom. ſingulorum.

(2) × The King having appointed his eldest son Duke of Cornwall, Guardian of the Realm during his absence, he resolved to go &c. Rot. Pat. 12. Ed. 3. p. 2. m. 12. R— Coll. p. 67.

Theſe with their Retinues made a Formidable Body of Horſe, beſides whom [2.] King Edward had a great multitude of Archers and Welſhmen, with all which He arrived at Antwerp, belonging then to the Duke of Brabant, on the Two and twentieth of July; while He reſided here, People came flocking from all parts to ſee Him, and to obſerve the Royal Magnificence of His Court.

[2] H. K col 2571.

One

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxviii.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. He ſends to the Dukes of Brabant and *Gueldres,&c.*to meet Him at Antwerp, and revokes all Commiſſions to treat with the King of France.

* Rot. Alman. dat. apud Antwerp. 12 Ed. 3. m. 3 & 7.

[4.] Froiſſ. ib. The King's Demands from theſe Princes, with their Anſwer.

One of the firſt things the King did after His arrival was, [3.] to ſend Letters to the Duke of Brabant, the Earl of Gueldres, the Marquiſs of Juliers, and the Lord John of Haynault, with other great Lords of His Party, inviting them to a perſonal Congreſs or Enterview at Antwerp, and accordingly they came to Him within a few days; and ſoon after King Edward * publickly revoked all the Powers which He had formerly given to His ſeveral Commiſſioners before mentioned, to treat with Philip of Valois as King of France; and then [4.] He deſired to know the Reſolutions of theſe Princes and Lords, whether they would truly perform what they had undertaken in His behalf. He likewiſe earneſtly preſſed them to 'Diſpatch what they intended with all poſſible 'expedition; for to that purpoſe, (He ſaid) He was come over thither 'with His Forces ready prepared to begin the War, and that it would 'be an infinite damage to Him to protract it much longer. Theſe Princes and Lords having maturely conſidered the King's Propoſals, return'd to this effect: 'That being now come only to give His Majeſty a perſonal Viſit, they were not juſt then prepared to give Him an Anſwer 'to ſo weighty a Demand; but they would return again to their reſpective Subjects, and after they had conſulted them, would give 'His Majeſty a poſitive Anſwer, when ever His Majeſty pleaſed. The King ſeem'd not very well pleaſed with this, and ſhewed them at what great Charges He had been, and was further like to be by theſe Delays, that He expected to have found all of them ready at His coming thither; but ſince it was not ſo, He for His part reſolved not to return to England until He had a plain Anſwer from them one way or other: Then they all appointed a day for their March to be within three Weeks afte Midſummer; which being agreed to by all there preſent, they took thei leaves of the King for that time.

The Duke of Brabant holds private Correſpondence with the King of France.

He ſtill continued at Antwep, being lodged in the Abbey of St.Bernard and moſt of His Great Lords continued with Him; as for the Duke o Brabant, He returned to the City of Lovain, from whence He ſent privately frequent Meſſages to the King of France; requeſting, that H would not entertain any Suſpicion of him, nor give credit to Idle Rumours; for he aſſured Him that he would not make any Alliance or Agreement to His Diſadvantage; tho (as He ſaid) the King of England being His Couſin-German, he could not in honour refuſe Him the Civility of his Country. Thus the Duke of Brabant endeavouring to keep i with both Kings, was really a Friend to neither.

[5.] Id. ib. The German Princes ſtill excuſe their coming with their Forces, and on what pretence.

[1.] H. K. col. 2571.

The [5.] Third of Auguſt being come (which was the day appointed) the King expected the Anſwer of theſe Lords; but they makin their Excuſes, ſent the King word, That as for their part they and thei Men were ready, provided the Duke of Brabant would be as ready o his part, for he was nearer than they; therefore, when they ſhould underſtand that he was fully provided, they would not be at all behin him: The King was extremely diſpleaſed in His Mind at this put of for He found no Sincerity in any of them except [1.] in the Earl of Gueldres; and He indeed privately told the Bp of Lincoln, That His Majeſ had not been well adviſed hitherto. The King upon this immediatel communicated the Anſwers of the Lords to the Duke of Brabant, an urging the Matter home to him, required him as His Friend and Kinſman, to deal freely with Him, for that hitherto He perceived he ha been very backward in His Intereſt, ſo that He had reaſon to fear, u le leſs he grew more warm, and ſhew'd more Concern for His Cauſe, He ſhould loſe the Aſſiſtance of all the Other Lords of Almain.

The K. ſends again to the Duke of Brabant.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib.

The [2.] Duke being rouzed by this Meſſage, began to conſider more ſeriouſly of the Matter; and fearing that by this Double-dealing he might loſe both Princes, and thereby expoſe himſelf to their Diſpleaſures; at laſt he ſent the King word, that he was as Affectionate as any for His Service, only deſired once more to ſpeak with the foreſaid Princes and Lords together. Upon which they were again ſummoned, and the time of their Meeting appointed to be the middle of Auguſt, at a Place called Halle, a Town of Haynault, on the Borders of Brabant. And this Place was judged the fitteſt, becauſe the young Earl of Haynault, and his Uncle the Lord John of Beaumont, might the more eaſily be there. In ſhort, the Reſult of this Aſſembly at Halle, was, that the Princes and Lords having again conſidered of the Buſineſs very ſeriouſly, they found themſelves ſo much devoted to King Edward's Service, that they declar'd they would never deſert Him, unleſs compell'd by the Emperor, to whom only they owed Allegiance: Wherefore in the Name of Himſelf and all the reſt, the Duke of Brabant addreſſed himſelf thus to King Edward: 'Sir, We of our ſelves cannot find any juſt cauſe, all things conſidered, to defy the French King, without the Conſent of the Emperor our Sovereign Lord; and that He ſhould command us ſo to do in His Name. But there being long ſince an Article Sworn and Sign'd between France and the Empire, that no King of the former ſhould hold any thing belonging to the latter: Notwithſtanding this Agreement, King Philip hath taken the Caſtle of Creveceur in Cambreſis, and the Caſtle of Alves in Bailleul, and alſo holds the City of Cambray it ſelf; ſo that the Emperor hath good reaſon on His ſide to defy the King of France. Now, Sir, if you can obtain His Conſent, it will be much for our Honour; otherwiſe all the World will ſay, that without the Imperial Authority, the Lords of Almaign commenced an unjuſt War, having no Provocation thereto.

Who deſires another Meeting with the reſt of the Princes and Lords, which is held accordingly, with the reſult of it.

[3.] Id. ib.

The King appoints the Marquiſs of Juliers and certain Engliſh Knts to go to the Emperor, and treat with Him about His Aſſiſtance.

This [3.] Declaration appeared reaſonable enough to the King: Wherefore He appointed the Marquiſs of Juliers, and ſome Engliſh Knts and Learned Civilians, together with one or two of the E. of Guelderes Council, to go to the Emperor, and to treat with Him about this Affair. But tho' the Duke of Brabant would by no means appear in this Treaty, for fear of diſpleaſing the King of France, yet however he freely lent King Edward his Caſtle of Louvain, to reſide there when ever He pleaſed to make uſe of it.

The Emperor deſires a Perſonal Enterview with the King, who comes to the City of Cologne to meet Him.

Froiſſ. ib c. 35.

When the Marquiſs and thoſe that accompanied him, had received their Audience of the Emperor, who was then at Florebech in Bavaria, He partly by his own Inclination, and partly by the Perſuaſions of the Empreſs His Wife, Siſter to Queen Philippe, was willing to grant King Edward's Requeſt; and for the better Settlement of all Affairs between them, deſired a Perſonal Enterview with Him.

[4] H. K. ib.

The Manner of this Enterview with the great Number of Princes and Nobility that appear'd there.

Whereupon, the King, in compliance thereunto, [4] met the Emperor at the City of Cologne, who Himſelf came out of Germany, no leſs than Seven Days Journey, on purpoſe to meet His Majeſty at that Place. The Enterview was very Magnificent, being in the Market-Place, where two Thrones were erected in the open Air, the one for the Emperor, the other for the King. The former took His Place firſt, the other ſat down afterwards. In which Magnificent Aſſembly, there were as Aſſiſtants, Four Great Dukes, Three Archbiſhops, and Six Biſhops, Thirty Seven Earls, and of Barons, Bannerets, Knights and Eſquires, (according to the Eſtimation of the Heralds) about Seventeen Thouſand.

The Emperor defies the King of France, and appoints King Edward His Vicar-General of the Empire on this ſide.

Then the Emperor ſet forth the Falſhood which the King of France uſed towards Him; and thereupon He defyed Him, and pronounced both Him and His Adherents Enemies to the Empire. And further by a Charter or Bull which He then deliver'd to the King in the Sight of all there preſent, He ordained and conſtituted Him His Deputy and Viear-General of the Sacred Roman Empire, over all the Provinces on this ſide, as far as Cologne. The next day, theſe two mighty Potentates, with their Great Lords and Prelates, met again in the Cathedral-Church of Cologne; where, after High Maſs, the Emperor and all His Barons ſwore to the King of England, That they would ſtand by, help, and defend Him againſt the King of France and all His Adherents, both to live and to die with Him, for the Space o Seven Years to come, provided the War between the ſaid King ſhould not be compoſed before that time. And moreover it was further ſworn, That all the Barons of Almain, from Cologne and on thi ſide, ſhould preſently enter into the King of England's Service, again the King of France, as often as they ſhould be required; as well wher the King of England ſhould be in Perſon, as to any other Place wher He ſhould aſſign them: And if it ſhould happen, that any one o the Confederate Princes and Lords of Almain ſhould refuſe to obey th ſaid King in this His Enterprize, that then all the other Lords of Germany would riſe up in Arms till they had deſtroyed him.

He and His Barons ſwear to help Him againſt the K of France and all His Adherents.

All Points being thus fully agreed on and eſtabliſhed, after many Interchangeabl Careſſes and Noble Entertainments, the King of England took Hi leave of the Emperor, and return'd with all His Company t Louvain.

The Emperor and K. Edward take their leaves of each other.

As ſoon as [5.] King Edward was come again into Brabant, He iſſued out His Summons to the Duke of Gueldres, the Earl of Juliers and all other His Allies in thoſe Parts, to be preſent at a General Aſſembly which He intended to hold at the Town of Arques in the County of Lauze, or (as our [1.] Hiſtorian ſays) Mechelen or Malins i Brabant: Whither at the time appointed the Princes and Lords met th King in the Town-Hall of that City, which was nobly furniſh'd fo that purpoſe. The Chief Perſons were, the Duke of Gueldres, th young Earl of Haynault, the Earl of Juliers, the Lord of Valkenberg or as the French pronounce it, Faulquemont, and all other Barons o this ſide Cologne; except only the Biſhop of Liege, who was a Grea and Powerful Prince in thoſe days. In this [2.] Aſſembly, the Kin being placed in a Stately Throne five Foot higher than the Floor, th Emperor's Letters-Patents were openly read: Wherein it was declar'd That King Edward of England was made Vicar-General to the Emp ror; and that He had full Power to make Laws, and to adminiſter Juſtice to every Perſon in the Emperor's Name, and to coin Money, bot Gold and Silver, at His Pleaſure. It was further alſo commanded b theſe Letters-Patents, That the Lords and Subjects of the Empi ſhould yield Obedience and pay Homage to the King His Vicar, as t Himſelf. Immediately hereupon, for Form-ſake, and as an Acknowledgmen

[5.] Froiſſ ib. c. 35.

K Edward ſummons all His Allies to a General Aſſembly at Malins.

[1.] H. K. Col 2572.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib.

They meet, and the K is there declared Vicar-General of the Empire, and acts as ſuch.

ledgment of the Power of this New Vicar, certain Legal Claims were made before Him, and Judgments given by Him between Parties, as if it had been before the Emperor Himſelf, in His own Court or Great Council. Then [3] the King, in perſuance of His New Authority, held another Court on the Borders of the Territory of Liege, and there ſummoned that Biſhop to appear, and come in and own Him; which, He being already engaged in the French Intereſt, refuſed to do. Whereupon the King ſent the Biſhop of Lincoln to complain of Him to the Emperor, and to require Juſtice againſt Him. To which Meſſage the Emperor return'd in Anſwer, That He would ſhortly come in Perſon, to revenge and aid His Brother the King of England.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxviii.

[3.] H. K. ib. The King as Vicar-General holds a Court, wherein the Biſhop of Liege is ſummoned to appear, but refuſes it.

[4.] Theſe things being diſpatched, the Princes and Lords of Germany departed, having firſt agreed upon a certain day, viz. the Eighth of July following, when they were all to meet before Cambray, in order to lay cloſe Siege to it. Then King Edward went back to Louvain to the Queen, who was lately come thither out of England, being nobly attended by ſeveral Ladies who took that Opportunity to wait on Her, and alſo to viſit their Fathers and Husbands then in the King's Service. After the Queen had ſtayed ſome time at Louvain, She together with the King return'd to Antwerp, as being more Commodious for Her Lying-in: [1.] Where on the Nine and Twentieth of November following, She was brought to Bed of a Son, who was Chriſt'ned Lionel, and was afterwards, upon the Marriage of the Daughter and Heir of William de Burgh, created Earl of Ulster, and Duke of Clarence, and proved a Prince of great Courage, and of a moſt Graceful Perſon; and of whom you will hear further in the Sequel of this Hiſtory. Whilſt [2.] King Edward continued at Antwerp all this Winter, He kept a moſt Magnificent Court, and, as Vicar of the Empire, there ſet up His Royal Mint, where He coined a great deal of Money both in Gold and Silver. ×

[4] Froiſſ. ib. The Princes and Lords appoint to meet before Cambray on a certain day.

The Queen is brought to bed of a Son at Antwerp.

[1.] T. W. Sanford's Gen Hiſt. p. 219.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. The K. keeps a Magnificent Court, and as Vicar of the Empire coyns Money.

× Whilst the King continued at Antwerp he received a very disobliging Letter from Pope Benedict, dated at Avignon on ye Ides of November, wherein he complains not only of the Emperour Lewis of Bavaria as an Invader of Italy, & a Favourer of Hereticks, but also of the King for taking his Part, and accepting ye Title of Vicar of the Empire therefore his Holiness lets the King there understand, that he has granted the King of France the Tenth of the Benefices of his Clergy to be employ'd, not against the King of England in particular, but agst. all Partakers, and adherents whatsoever of ye sd. Lewis, that should invade that Kingdom: and concludes with advising the King to repent, & withdraw himself from any Confederacy with the sd. excommunicated Prince; or otherwise he would make himself lyable to the Apostolical censure. See it at large publish'd in H. K. Coll p. 88. to 91. But I shall defer the King's Answer to this Letter till the next year.

But ſince the Series of Foreign Affairs, which could not be well interrupted, would not give me leave to mention what was done this Year in England, as well ſome time before as after the King's going beyond Sea; I ſhall here inſert thoſe Tranſactions, beginning with ſuch as relate to the Sea.

On [3.] the Eve of our Lady-day, certain Norman Gallies enter'd the Haven of Portſmouth under Engliſh Colours, and landing with a ſufficient Force, plunder'd the Town, and then ſet it on fire, and burnt all except the Pariſh-Church; But the Country riſing upon them, they were forced to betake themſelves again to their Ships. From whence we may obſerve, how Naked and Unguarded the greateſt Ports of England were in thoſe days; and I could wiſh they were yet better fortified, to prevent the like Affront from our Enemies abroad. Thus the French made the firſt Aſſault upon England, which was ſeverely return'd upon them ſome time after.

[3.] Chron. MS. de Eveſham. H. K. C. 2570. Certain Norman Galleys enter the Haven of Portſmouth, and plunder and burn the Town.

Whilſt [4] the King was abſent in Brabant, the young Prince Edward, Duke of Cornwall, being Guardian of the Kingdom by Commiſſion from the King His Father, held a Parliament at Northampton, which began on the Twenty Sixth of July; wherein a great Aid was granted to his Father, towards the Maintenance of His Wars, viz. Of every Town a Tax (upon Goods of a Twentieth Part) where the Value of them amounted to Twenty Shillings. The * King had alſo

[4] H. K. Col. 2571. Prince Edward as Guardian of the Kingdom, holds a Parliament at Northampton, where He has a great Tax granted for the Wars.

* Polychron. H K. ib.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxviii.

granted Him all the Wooll of the Kingdom, to be bought at a low Price; which muſt needs amount to a vaſt Proportion; ſince only the Three Counties of Leiceſter, Lincoln, and Northampton, afforded no leſs than Twelve Hundred and Eleven Sacks of Wooll. Beſides which, He had an Aid of the Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Rectors, who held in Capite, and went not with Him to the War: Of ſome an Hundred Pounds a-piece, of others Two Hundred, according to their Eſtates and Abilities. And moreover, ſome time after, * in a Convocation held the Firſt of October, a Tenth was granted of the Clergy for two Years to come. ^

* This year there was so great a plenty in England that a quarter of wheat was sold for 2 shillings, and a fat ox for half a mark. Chron: de [illegible] ad hunc ann:

* Rot. Clauſ. 12 Ed 3 P. 2. m. 17. dors.

But [5] to come to Military Matters. About this time, there were Sixty Sail of Stout Ships appointed for the Defence of the Cinque-Ports, beſides the preſent Fleet; and William Clinton Earl of Huntingdon, and Conſtable of England, was made Warden or Lieutenant of Suffolk, and the Lord Robert de Morley of Norfolk; which, by the way, is the firſt time I find any mention in our Hiſtorians of ſuch Officers.

[5.] H. K. Col. 2573.

A great Fleet ſet out for the Guard of the Cinque Ports.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

What the King did this Winter, and great Part of the following Summer, I do not find; only it is likely, that He (as well as the Princes of Germany) made the beſt uſe they could of this Seaſon, to get themſelves in readineſs againſt the time appointed for Action: For King Edward had now received His Recruits from England, which He had long expected, and which arrived the Beginning of June. About this time, * the Duke of Gueldres did Homage to Him as Vicar of the Empire: In conſideration whereof, the King granted him a Thouſand Pounds per Ann. during his Life. *And He further made an Allyance with Albert Duke of Auſtria, and Otto Duke of Stiria and Carinthia, and received their Homages.^ But yet before He began His March into the French Territories, at the Inſtance of the Cardinals, Peter and Bertrand (of whoſe Endeavours for Peace we ſpake before) † John Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Richard Biſhop of Durham, Henry Biſhop of Lincoln, the Earls of Derby, Salisbury, and Suffolk, with ſome others, were by the King empower'd to Treat once more with Philip of Valois, or His Deputies, concerning the Dignities, Honours, Lands, and Rights, belonging to King Edward, and all other Controverſies whatſoever: The Deputies on the other Part, being the Archbiſhop of Rouen, the Biſhops of Langres and Beauvois; and the Places of Treaty were, firſt Campaigne, and then Arras. But when no Peace could be thereby effected, the Demands of both Parties being ſo high, the King reſolved to prepare for War.

K Edward receives His Recruits from England, and prepares for Action.

* Lit. Pat. inter Reg. & Magnates German. 13 Ed. 3. m. 2.

The Duke of Gueldres does Him Homage as Vicar-General, &c. as do alſo the Dukes of Auſtria and Carinthia.

* Rot: Pat: inter Regem et diversos Magnates German: 13 Ed: 3. m: 2. vid: Rymers collect: p: 90

† Pat. Conceſſ. Homin. Angl. & Vaſcon. 13 Ed. 3. m. 17.

The ABp. of Canterbury and other Nobles treat with the Commiſſioners of France concerning a Peace, tho' in vain, and why.

The chief conditions of this League were they should assist the King against all adversaries [illegible] Philip of Valois & also [illegible] [illegible] the Duke of Burgundy [illegible] subject and confederates with two hundred armed soldiers. ~~[illegible]~~

But before He began this Campaign, He wrote to the Pope and College of Cardinals a long Epiſtle, of which I ſhall only give you the Contents, and leave the Reader to conſult the Original in * Walſingham and other Authors. 'The King, after a long Preface, [1.] wherein 'He vindicates the Right of Self-defence againſt injurious Violence, as 'juſtified by the Law of Nature; then proceeds to bewail that He 'cannot now undertake a War againſt the Enemies of the Chriſtian 'Faith, by reaſon of the great Malice and Obſtinacy of His Perſecutor, 'who ſtiles Himſelf King of France, and who doth daily entrench up'on, and diminiſh His juſt Rights, without any Attempt or Provocati'on given on His ſide.

The K. again prepares for War, but firſt writes to the Pope and Cardinals to juſtify His Procedings againſt France.

* An 1336. ſed falſè.

[1.] C. ad Mur. ad hunc Ann.

He

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

He ſets forth His Title to that Crown notwithſtanding His Mother's Incapacity to ſucceed.

'He in the next place proceeds to ſet forth the Uſurpation which Philip hath made upon the Realm of France, and His forceably detaining it to His great prejudice; and alſo ſhews His Own Title to it, viz That the Crown belonged to Him by Lawful Right of Succeſſion, as being Grandchild to Philip the Fair by His Mother Queen Iſabel; who (He grants) could not inherit by the Conſtitution of France, ſhe being a Woman, yet when all the Sons of Philip were dead without Iſſue-Male (Charles the Fair being the laſt) He claims it as the neareſt Heir-male to His Grandfather King Philip, and as Uncle to K. Charles deceaſed, and as having the Right of Succeſſion before Philip of Valois, Son to Charles Earl of Valois, His ſaid Grandfather's Brother; and affirmed, that His Mother's diſability to take the Crown, could not, nor ought to bar Him of His Right; the Reaſon for which (as not being much to our Purpoſe) I omit.

He excepts againſt the validity of the Judgment of the Peers of France in His Prejudice.

'And as for the Judgment of the Peers of France, which had been given in prejudice of His Title, He excepts againſt its validity, becauſe it was not only given without any due Citation, and that too during His Minority, but alſo His Proctors, who inſtantly deſired that they might legally appear for Him and His Title, were ſo far from being allowed an equitable Hearing, that they were rudely and unjuſtly repelled with horrible Menaces of no leſs than preſent death. Then He proceeds to ſet forth the Injuries which Philip had done Him by invading and ſeizing His Territories in Aquitain, and alſo in aſſiſting and maintaining His Vaſſals the Scots againſt Him; and then lays all the blame of this War upon His Injuſtice, and that He only took up Arms to defend His Own Rights and thoſe of His Subjects; and in order to prevent the Hoſtile Preparations of His Adverſaries, by ſuch Alliances as were neceſſary for His own defence, and for the juſtice of His Quarrel, appeals to the juſt Sentence of the moſt High God, which He hopes He will give Him by the Power of His Sword; nor can He believe that any Impartial Umpire, or Juſt Judge can interpret this Act of His, (viz. what He hath done for His Own Defence, and the ſecurity of His juſt Rights) to be any Injury or Offence.

He appeals to the Judgment of God by the Sword, which He juſtifies as done in His Own defence.

He anſwers the Objection made againſt His joining with the Emperor tho' excommunicated.

'And then He advances an Objection which He knew not but might be made againſt Him, for His entring into a League of Friendſhip with * a Man againſt whom the Vicar of Chriſt's-Church is ſaid to have judicially proceeded; to which He anſwers, That He does this only to defend Himſelf from the Dangers that threaten Him, and that He may be enabled to contend for His juſt Rights, which is the real cauſe of His thus acting: In the doing of which (as Equity allows) the final Cauſe of the Action, or its principal Motive is chiefly to be conſidered; ſince as to Human Actions, only the real Act it ſelf, and not any Malicious Conſtruction thereof is to be conſidered; and then concludes with a ſubmiſſion of His Cauſe to His Holineſs and His College of Cardinals, from whom He deſires an Information in the Truth, if He hath in any Particular deviated from it, being ready to yield Himſelf to Reaſon in all His Actions. This bears date at Antwerp the Sixteenth of July this Year.

* Viz. The Emperor.

[2.] Id. ib. The ſubſtance of the Pope's Anſwer

And I ſhall here ſubjoin the ſubſtance of the Pope's Anſwer to this Letter, [2] which was written ſome Months after; for the Epiſtle it ſelf is very tedious, and is directed to His dear Son Edward, King of England; Firſt, He is pleaſed wholly to paſs by unanſwered all that the King had

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

He blames the K. for joining with the Emperor, and commands Him to lay aſide the Title of His Vicar.

'had wrote to juſtifie His Proceedings, and in defence of His Title to 'the Crown of France; the moſt part of this Letter is taken up in relating the Original of the Quarrel between the Emperor and Pope Joh 'His Predeceſſor, and then proceeds to accuſe the King as an Enemy 'and Perſecutor of the Pope Himſelf and the Roman Catholick See; tha 'deſpiſing the Proceſſes of His Predeceſſors, He had joined with the pretended Emperor, in accepting from Him the Vicarſhip of the Empire, 'and did thereby invade the Honours belonging to Him and the ſaid 'Church, to whom the Government and Adminiſtration of the Roma 'Empire (being now void) does of Right belong.

And threatens the King with Excommunication, if He do not obey it.

And then concludes with a deſire, 'That the King would ſeriouſly 'conſider the dangerous Snares into which ſome endeavour'd to involve 'Him, not without the hazard of His utter Ruin; then recites a Conſtitution of His Predeceſſor, whereby He denounced an Excommunication againſt all perſons whatſoever; who, without the ſpecial Licenſe 'of the Apoſtolick See, ſhould preſume to take the Name of Vicar, or o 'any other Office within the Empire, it being wholly void, and of none 'Effect; and if not laid down within the ſpace of two Months, would 'involve Him within the ſaid Sentence, from which He could no way 'be delivered but by the Abſolution of the Apoſtolick See, ſince the ſaid 'Lewis the Emperor is neither King nor Emperor; nor is any thing tha 'He hath done, or ſhall do, as ſuch, of any validity; and further, tha 'it did not become the Honour of ſo great a Prince, who hath alread 'the Title of a King, to be ſtiled the Vicar of any Temporal Lord whatſoever, and therefore deſires Him ſpeedily to return back into the Right 'Way, and not to deſpiſe the Judgment of the Cardinals, who ſincerely 'love Him and His Realm, but to endeavour to make Peace with the Frenc 'King, as a thing pleaſing to God, and deſirable by Men; then conclude 'with a Threat, that if He did not acquieſce in theſe His wholſom 'Admonitions, He ſhould be forced to provide the beſt Remedy H 'could concerning the Premiſes, by proceeding againſt Him as Juſtic 'requires, and which both may and ought to be done, if it ſhall (which 'God forbid) become neceſſary, however troubleſome and ungrateſu 'it is to put it in execution. Dated at Avignon under the Seal of the Fiſher, &c. in the Fifth Year of His Pontificate. But we ſhall now retur to Matters of greater moment.

the 4th. of the Ides of Octob.

[3] Froiſſ. ib. Chap. 36. The King begins His March to Villenort and there expects the arrival of the German Princes, but in vain; whereupon He ſummons them again. The Great Army the King maintain'd whilſt He lay at Villenort, and expence He was at.

Before the receipt of this Anſwer from the Pope, [3] King Edwar (immediately after the date of His Own Letter to Him) began His March with His whole Army to Villenort in Brabant, where He lodg'd His Men, partly in the Town, and partly without in Tents along the River ſide; here He tarried from the Twentieth of July till the middl of Auguſt, ſtill expecting the coming of the Lords of the Empire, H Allies, but eſpecially of the Duke of Brabant, on whom chiefly the reſ did depend; but when His Patience was almoſt tired out with fruitleſ expectation, He was fain to ſend once more His Envoys to each of 'em, ſummoning them to come and meet Him at Mechelen, or Malines, the Metropolis of Brabant, on the Firſt of September following, and then to ſhew Him the cauſe of theſe Delays. Now all this while tha the King waited thus at Villenort for His Confederates, He maintain'd at His own coſt and charge Sixteen hundred Men at Arms, and Twenty thouſand Archers, beſides all the neceſſary Proviſions for His Court, and the great Armies and Gariſons He had in other places; and beſides the vaſt Sums of Money which He had diſpos'd of to the Princes His Confederates. x x which not being ~~anſwer~~ ſent him out of England forced the King to borrow ſeveral great Sums upon uſury of the Merchants of Mechlin and Bruges, to the latter of which he pawned his Jewels for 9000 florens as appears by the Kings letters Patents dated this year & publiſhed in R. S. Col. p. 118. 120.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

The [4] French King, for His part, was not ways unprovided of Neceſſaries for Reſiſtance; for beſides His formidable Preparations in France, Normandy, and Aquitain, He had ſet forth a mighty Fleet of Ships, conſiſting of French, Normans, Bretons, and Spaniards, who had Orders, ſo ſoon as ever the War ſhould break out, to invade England where they could to the beſt advantage.

[4] Id. ib. The French King prepares a Fleet to invade England.

On [5.] the Firſt of September the Princes and Confederate Lords of Germany came at laſt to Mechelen to meet King Edward according to His Summons, where it was agreed that His Majeſty ſhould begin His March within Fifteen days at the fartheſt; but for the better juſtification of their Cauſe, they firſt reſolved to ſend the King of France a Defiance in every one of their Names, which having been already mentioned, I need not here repeat; only the Duke of Brabant, out of ſome politick Conſiderations, refuſed to do it until a more convenient time: Theſe Defiances under the Seals of the ſeveral Princes concern'd, were ſent by the Bp of Lincoln, attended by a Herald to the French King then at Paris, they having firſt obtain'd a ſafe Conduct for that purpoſe: But He ſeemed to receive it without any Paſſion or Concern.

[5.] Id ib. The German Princes and Lords at laſt meet King Edward at Mechelen, and there agree to begin their March within 15 days. They ſend their Defiances to the K. of France by the Bp. of Lincoln.

When King Philip thus ſaw the War ready to break out upon Him, He forthwith raiſed all the Forces He could, and put a ſtrong Gariſon into the City of Cambray, and [1.] ſent forthwith to ſeize the County of Ponthieu (as yet in King Edward's poſſeſſion) into His hands; and He had already engaged John King of Bohemia, and the other Princes and Lords of the Empire of His Party, to come ſpeedily to His Aſſiſtance.

K. Philip fortifies Cambray, and ſeizes the County of Ponthieu, and then ſends to the K. of Bohemia to come to His aſſiſtance.

[1.] Id. ib. c. 37.

In the mean while to ſtrike a terror into the Engliſh at Sea, [2.] He ſet out a ſtrong Fleet; one Squadron of which, conſiſting of thirteen Sail, met with two brave Engliſhmen of War, which had on board them a great Sum of Money, lately received for the Engliſh Wool in Flanders, being attended with two or three ſmall Ships of inconſiderable value, which upon the approach of the French, ſail'd away; but the Engliſh Men of War being heavy laden, could not do ſo, but were preſently encompaſſed and boarded by the French; and tho they diſputed their ſeiſure with a great deal of Bravery, yet they were at laſt overpowered, taken, and carried into France, moſt of the wounded Engliſh being flung overboard.

[2.] Fabian. Chron. ad hunc Ann.

He ſets out a Fleet, and takes two Engliſh Men of War.

Then on the [3.] Fifth of October following, being Sunday, fifty Gallies of Pycards, Normans, and other Nations, under the command of Sir Quiriel, Peter Babuchet, and Captain Barbanon, the French Admirals, came before the Town of Southampton, where they eaſily landed, the greateſt part of the Inhabitants running away from the Church, and out of their Houſes. Then the French took the Town, and not only plunder'd and burnt it, but alſo (as our Authors relate) exerciſed great Cruelties in it, killing the Men, raviſhing the Women, and hanging up thoſe of the better ſort in their own Houſes; but before the French could all of them get on board again, Sir John Arundel, a Gentleman of Hampſhire, came upon them with the Militia of the County, and killed three hundred of them, the chief of whom [4.] was the King of Sicily's Natural Son, who was knocked down and kill'd by a Country

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. Stow. p. 239.

ir

The French Fleet takes Southampton, and plunders and then burns it; yet are at laſt beaten to their Ships.

[4] Speed in the deſcription of Hampſhire, p. 13.

Fellow

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix

Fellow with a Flail, tho he cry'd out Rançoon; which the Clown gave no heed to, not underſtanding what he ſaid.

[5.] Stow. Ib.

The French Fleet deſtroy all the Engliſh Ships in the Ports of Cornwal and Devonſhire, but landing at Plimouth, are repulſed by the Earl of Devonſhire.

Some [5.] time after eleven of theſe French Gallies ſailing upon the Coaſt of Eſſex, endeavoured to fire the Town of Harwich, but without ſucceſs; after which the French Navy endeavoured to land at the Iſle of Wight, but being reſiſted by the Inhabitants there, they ſheer'd off. Then having done ſome ſmall Miſchiefs upon the Coaſt of Kent, they ſail'd back to the Ports of Devonſhire and Cornwal, where they took and deſtroyed whatever Veſſels they found in the Harbours; and having enter'd Plimmouth Haven, they there burnt ſome great Ships, and part of the Town; but before they could return again on board, Henry Courtney, Earl of Devonſhire (near fourſcore Years of age) came upon 'em with the Train-bands of the County, who falling upon the French with downright handy Strokes, made them run away to their Gallies with ſo much haſt, that above five hundred of them were either kill'd or drown'd before they could reach them.

[6.] H. K. col. 2573.

Another Fleet of French come before Sandwich, and do ſome miſchief on the Coaſt of Kent, but are at laſt perſued by a Squadron of Engliſh.

About the ſame time [6.] there came another Fleet of Frenchmen, conſiſting of twenty great Ships, fifteen ſmall ones, and thirty two Gallies, and rode before Sandwich, but they durſt not land, becauſe they ſaw the Country Militia ready drawn up to receive them; from thence therefore they tacked about to Rye, where landing, they did much miſchief; but while they were there, a Squadron of Engliſh Ships came up to 'em, whereupon the French hoiſted Sail and fled, the Engliſh all the while making after them till they came to Boloigne, and there landing, they ſe fire to part of the Town, and hanged twelve Captains of the French Fleet, whom among others they had taken Priſoners.

Whether our Engliſh Militia would be now hard enough for the French, is very doubtful.

I have been the more particular in this Account of theſe Actions of the French Fleet, and the ſeveral Attempts it made upon the Engliſh Coaſts this Year, becauſe tho of no great moment in themſelves, yet it may ſerve to let the Reader ſee how much more England might have ſuffered for want of a good ſtanding Fleet of Men of War; and though our Engliſh Militia was in thoſe days hard enough for the French, whenever they landed upon our Coaſt, yet it may very well be doubted, if the like ſhould happen again, whether they would be able to do the ſame Service now, unleſs they were better exerciſed and diſciplin'd at this day, eſpecially if thoſe that were ſent on this Deſign, ſhould be (as is moſt likely they would) old experienced Soldiers.

[1.] Stow. p. 235.

The King hearing the News of the French Hoſtilities, declares to the Pope's Legates, that He would never deſiſt till He had fought the French.

[2.] Froiſſ. c. 39.

[3.] Chron. Rob. Aveſ.

The K. comes to Cambray, and lays ſiege to it, where the Duke of Brabant comes to His aſſiſtance.

The [1.] News of theſe Hoſtilities of the French, and eſpecially of their late barbarous Actions at Southampton, being brought to the King of England, then in Brabant, it ſo far provoked Him, that He declared to the Pope's Legates beforementioned, who were then preſent perſwading Him to Peace, That He would never deſiſt till He had met with and fought theſe Invincible Frenchmen. This the King ſaid in Raillery, becauſe Cardinal Bertrand had juſt then ſpoke with great contempt of his Power, and made it a thing almoſt impoſſible for Him to enter the French King's Dominions without a Battel.

But to come to ſomething more material: The [2.] next day after this, He departed from Mechelen, and went to Bruſſels, and thence to Valenciennes, where after a day or two's ſtay, on the Nineteenth of September, He marched to Cambray, which [3.] He preſently inveſted with His Army. Within a few days came thither to Him the young Earl of Haynault, and the Lord John of Beaumont his Uncle, with a Strong Force, and and Six days after the Siege began, the Duke of Brabant openly declar'd himſelf for King Edward, and came to His Aſſiſtance with Nine Hundred Lances. During this Siege, there were many Skirmiſhes and Aſſaults, but all to no purpoſe: [4.] For John Duke of Normandy, eldeſt Son to the King of France, being admitted by the Biſhop, had put himſelf into it with Five Hundred Freſh Men. The City prov'd too ſtrong to be taken by any other means than Starving; ſo that after ſome brisk Aſſaults which proved in vain, [5] K. Edward asking the Advice of the Ld. Robert of Artois, and the Engliſh Nobles that were with Him, they all agreed, that it was in vain to waſt this Noble Army upon ſo difficult an Enterpriſe; but rather, by marching into the K. of France's Territories, to do ſomething worthy the great Charge and Expence they had been at.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

[4] Mezeray Ann. 1339. John Duke of Normandy puts himſelf into the Town with 500 freſh men.

[5.] Froiſſ. ib.

In complyance with this Advice, [1.] the King order'd His whole Army to diſlodge, and having burnt and deſtroy'd the Country of Cambreſis, paſſed over the River Skelld, and enter'd the French Territories, burning the Country before Him. The Earl of Haynault left the King, pretending he was ſent for by K. Philip his Uncle; and that as he had aſſiſted the Former whilſt He was within the Bounds of the Empire, ſo he was obliged to ſerve the Latter in France. Then he, with the Earl of Namur, taking their leaves, return'd back into Haynault with their Forces. In the mean while, the K. of France being ſtill at Campaigne, ſent Orders to the Earl of Ewe Mareſchal of France, and other His Governors of the Frontiers, to defend them well againſt the Enemy, whilſt He Himſelf went to Perrone, intending there to make His Rendezvouz. Then, after a ſhort Truce of about Four Days, in order to a Treaty of Peace propoſed by the Duke of Brabant, which had no effect, the King proceeded forward into France thro' the Country of La Tieraſche; the Engliſh Army being divided into Three Batallions, marched in Three diſtinct Lines, deſtroying the Country, and taking and burning ſeveral Conſiderable Towns, without any Reſiſtance from the French, tho' King Philip lay near St. Quintins with an Army of above a Hundred Thouſand Men.

[1.] Id. ib. *H.K.*Col. 2574. The King finding the Place too ſtrong to be taken, quits the Siege, and marches into the French Territories.

The K. enters France, and burns and ſpoils the Country in His March.

Thus [2.] King Edward continued in France about Five Weeks, and ſo ravaged the Country with His Armies, that in a manner all the Lands of Cambreſis, Vermandois, Tieraſche, and Laonois, and other Parts of Picardy and Artois, were wholy waſted, except ſome few Places which had ſworn Allegiance to Him; as alſo Churches and Monaſteries, or ſuch Caſtles which were too ſtrongly fortified to be taken: So that the Inhabitants of the Country fled on all ſides, without making any Reſiſtance. [3.] Then the King having paſſed from Morevile to la Flamenguere, there encamped, being above Forty Thouſand ſtrong. In the mean while, King Philip was removed from St. Quintin with all His Army, and was gone to Vironfoſſe in Cambreſis, where He ſtayd ſome time, (His Forces daily increaſing) and then reſolved that He would not ſtir from thence till He had fought with the King of England and His Allies. And [4.] to this end, on the Monday following, the Chief Commander of the French King's Croſs-bows ſent Letters to one Hugh de Geneva, (a Gentleman in King Edward's Army) deſiring him to give his Maſter notice from K. Philip, That if He would chuſe any open Place, not incumber'd with Woods or Bogs, He would give Him Battel before Thurſday next: Which was alſo confirm'd by [2.] Stow ib. The K. ſtays in France near Five Weeks, and lays waſt many Counties.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. Cap. 40.

The French K. being come to Vironfoſſe, reſolves to fight K. Edward, and to that end ſends a Challenge to give K. Edward Battel.

[4.] H. K. Col. 2575.

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

by another Meſſenger, in a Letter under the Seals of the King of Bohemia and Duke of Lorain. Yet for all this, the King of France's Heart fail'd Him, and He declin'd coming to a Battel, as you will fin by and by.

[5.] Id. ib. The two Armies face each other, K. Edw. ſends Philip a Challenge to fight His Army, who accepts it, and appoints the Day of Battel. Froiſſ ib 41. Du Cheſne l. 15. p. 648.

In [5] the mean while, the two Armies were now advanced with in a League of each other, and whilſt they lay thus encamped in thi Champaigne Country, facing each other, King Edward was adviſed b the Duke of Brabant and other Great Lords in a Council of War
That in order to put this Difference to the Deciſion of a Battel, H ſhould, by a Herald, ſend the King of France a Challenge, to figh
His whole Army on what day He would pleaſe to appoin
The Herald being ſent, and having done his Meſſage accord ingly, King Philip accepted the Offer, and appointed Friday th Twenty Second of October to be the Day. In the mean while the Princes and Great Men, together with the Armies on bot ſides, had notice to prepare themſelves for this Great Encou ter. When, on the Day appointed, both Armies being draw out ready to fight, and the Engliſh, in Three Battallions, were alread marched into the Field, and that every body expected a Bloody Batt would enſue; [1.] it began to be again debated that very Morning i the King of France's Council of War, Whether it were beſt to give th Engliſh Battel, or not? Many of His Counſellors wiſely maintainin that it was not ſafe ſo to do, ſince if they loſt the Day, the Crown France would be in great Danger: Whereas if the Enemy were bea en, neither King Edward, nor any of His Allies, would thereby lo any Part of their Dominions. But whilſt this Matter was in di pute, and the French Army ſtood drawn out ready to fight, exp cting only the Signal of Battel, at that very Inſtant there [2.] arrive Letters from Robert King of Naples and Sicily, to the French King wherein He adviſed Him to decline Fighting at that time: For, bein a Great Aſtrologer, He pretended to diſcover by the Stars, either b Calculating the Nativity of theſe Princes, or by ſome other way, th if the French King ſhould now fight with King Edward, (bein there in Perſon) He muſt expect to be overcome; and that He ſa many ſad Conſequences which would fall on the Realm of France b ſo fatal a Miſcarriage.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib. Cap. 42.

Moſt of the French Counſellors oppoſe Fighting, and their Reaſons why.

[2.] Du Cheſne p. 649. Robert King of Naples ſends to K. Philip to decline Fighting with the Engliſh, and His Reaſon.

Whereupon K. Philip and His Counc. reſolve not to fight, and then the French retreat to their Camp. [3.] H. K. Col. 1575.

Whether this Advice was well grounded or not, I ſhall not determin but this is certain, that it then had ſo powerful an Effect as proved a ſolutely deciſive to the King of France's Council, not to fight at a Whereupon [3.] King Philip immediately gave Orders to His Arm to retreat to their Camp, which being encompaſſed with a Ditch, a they having alſo cut down many Trees in the way, to hinder the A proach of the Engliſh; the French King, that Night, privately decam ed, and marched off another way in to the Borders of Flanders. B
King Edward was wholy ignorant of it, by reaſon of certain Fre Scouts that were taken, who gave Him falſe Intelligence on purpo ſo that the Engliſh Army was drawn out in order to fight, not only the Friday, but Saturday following: Who then, ſeeing there was n thing to be done, removed their Camp, and marched off towar Aveſnes in Haynault.

A

Anno Dom. Mcccxxxix.

And in the mean while, [4.] King Philip being come to St. Omers, from thence gave Orders for the placing His Men in ſeveral Gariſons in Flanders, eſpecially at Tournay, Lyſle, Doway, and other Towns bordering on the Empire; and then having ſetled His Affairs, and diſmiſſed the reſt of His Forces, Winter drawing on, He returned to Paris with the Reputation of more Caution than Courage, conſidering the great Brags He had made, that He would Fight the K. of England ſo ſoon as ever He ſhould ſet His Foot in France. Yet immediately after His Return to Paris, He began to be diſpleaſed at Himſelf, becauſe He had thus declin'd a Battel: But the Lords of His Council wiſely told Him, 'That He had not at all prejudiced His Honour, ſince He had courageouſly ſought out His Enemy, and faced Him boldly many days; and had made Him quit His Realm, without any great Advantage gained. And they further added, That He muſt be forced to make many Great and Expenſive Campaignes, before He could be able to Conquer any thing in the Kingdom of France; unleſs the Frenchmen, by their own Heat and Raſhneſs, would give up their Country. This Advice proved true enough in the Sequel; tho' at the ſame time the Sword-Men highly blamed the King's Conduct, that for the Opinions of a few Grey-headed Old Men, and the Pannick Fears of a Star-gazing King, He had loſt one of the faireſt Opportunities that could ever be expected, of Beating the K. of England and all His Allies quite out of France: And they ſeemed to have Reaſon on their ſide. For Philip had not only Three Kings with Him, viz. John of Luxemburgh King of Bohemia, Charles King of Navarre, and David King of Scotland, of whom, the two former brought conſiderable Forces along with them; But, beſides theſe, there were no leſs than Five Dukes, Thirty Six Earls, Four Thouſand Lords and Knights, and above Sixty Thouſand French Common-Soldiers; which, together with the Forces of the Princes His Allies, made in all above a Hundred Thouſand Fighting Men; whereas the Engliſh Army did not conſiſt of Fifty Thouſand in the whole. So that it is evident, the French King had very much the Odds of K. Edward, had He then joined Battel with Him; but what the Succeſs had been, God only knows.

[4.] Froiſſ. ib Cap. 42.

K. Philip having put His Men into Gariſons in Flanders, returns to Paris.

The King of France being diſcontented at His not Fighting, is comforted by His Councellors.

The Military-Men are much diſcontented at the King's not Fighting.

The many Kings, Princes, and other Forces the K. of France had then with Him, far exceeding the Engliſh in Numbers.

I muſt here tell you, [1.] before I proceed further, that not long after the King's Return into Brabant, the Pope wrote Him a civil Letter, 'Wherein He expreſſes His Satisfaction, that when lately the Armies of the Two Kings were ready to engage, yet no Battel enſued; and attributes the Cauſe of their not Fighting, as an Effect of the Divine Clemency, for the ſparing the Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood: And then, after many ſerious Reflections on that and the Miſeries of War, He conjured Him, by the Mercy of God, to think on a final Peace, and in the mean while to conſent to a longer Truce, which He had order'd His Legates the Cardinals of St. Praxedes and St. Mary in Aquiro (had appointed for that purpoſe) to propoſe to Him; and ſo a War being prevented, He wiſhes the Bond of Peace and Charity, as well as that of Blood and Affinity, to be again cloſely knit between the Two Kings. And further, if what thoſe Cardinals ſhould propoſe could not procure that Bleſſed Iſſue, He deſires, that Himſelf (tho' taken up with many other Cares) might afford His own Perſonal Mediation, for a happy End and Compoſure

[1.] T. W. ad Ann 1336. ſed falſò. Odoric Rayn. ad hunc Ann.

Anno Dom. Mccccxxxix.

'of all Differences; and ſo concludes with His Requeſt of a ſpeedy 'Anſwer. Dated at Avignon X. Kal. Jan. (or the Twenty Third o December.) To which the King did, not long after, return His Holi neſs an Anſwer to this effect.

[2.] Id. ib.

'In the [2.] firſt Place, He gives Him His moſt humble Thank 'for the Mediation He had offer'd, not only by the Cardinals His Le 'gates, but alſo in His own Perſon; and for the Care and Affectio 'He ſtill expreſſed for all His Spiritual Sons: and that He ſhould moſ 'readily perſue His wholſome Admonitions, were it not that His Ad 'verſary Philip had unjuſtly uſurped the Crown of France, lawfull 'devolved upon Him after the Death of His Uncle Charles, the la 'King thereof: That He had ſeiſed on Aquitain, and invaded th 'Kingdom of England with His Fleet, which He ſet forth unde 'a Colour of a Voyage to the Holy Land; and had likewiſe excited th 'Scots to rebel againſt Him: and tho' He offer'd Him divers rea 'ſonable Conditions of Peace, yet He had hitherto met with nothin 'from Him but Fraud and Delays, that He might thereby put Him t 'the more Charges, and (if it were poſſible) quite exhauſt His Treaſur 'He therefore beſought His Holineſs to excuſe Him, if He ſhould en 'deavour to recover His juſt Rights, by the Help of God. And alth 'the Kingdom of France, that had been demanded by His Ambaſſado 'before the Cardinal-Legates who had earneſtly and laudably labour' 'in the Great Affair of the Peace; yet He could never obtain a tolera 'ble Anſwer, So that none could tell what He deſign'd to do or offe 'And then concludes with an Appeal to God, that He deſired nothin 'more than to promote and defend the Honours and Liberties of th 'Church; and that if God ſhould proſper His Arms, He hoped to tur 'them againſt the Enemies of the Chriſtian Faith. Theſe Letters, th not having any Date or Place expreſſed in Walſingham, as appea from Odoricus Raynoldus, ~~they~~ were written about the latter end o the preſent, or beginning of the enſuing Year, from ~~Antwerp~~; how ever Walſingham is very much out, in placing them under the Year 1336 whereas, it is plainly evident, that they muſt have been written abou this time.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib.
K. Edward diſmiſſes His Foreign Forces, and returns to Antwerp with the reſt of His Army.

I ſhall now return to the Hiſtorical Part of this Relation. Whe K. Edward ſaw that the French had thus left the Field, [3.] He though He might without any Diſhonour do the ſame; ſo having diſmiſſed th German Princes with their Forces, becauſe the Winter was now prett well advanced, He returned with the reſt of His Army to Antwer where He had left His Queen: And upon His coming thither, to ſhe that He had ſtill Inclinations for Peace, He iſſued out His * Commi ſion to John Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Richard Biſhop of Durha Henry Biſhop of Lincoln, William Earl of Salisbury, Sir Bartholome Burgheſh, and Sir Geoffry le Scrope, Knights, and John Vfford Arch deacon of Ely; to treat of Peace with Philip of Valois, (as He i called in the Commiſſion) or with Commiſſioners from Him. And Month after, on the Sixteenth of December, the ſaid Commiſſion w renewed, upon adding Robert Earl of Suffolk to the forenamed Com miſſioners. I do not find any effect of theſe Treaties, therefore ſup poſe, they came to nothing.

* Rot. Pat. 13 Ed. 3. m. 3.
He iſſues a Commiſſion to the ABp of Canterbury and ſeveral other Biſhops and Noblemen to treat of a Peace with certain Commiſſioners to be appointed by the K. of France.

Th

The King, intending to keep His Chriſtmaſs at Antwerp; the more to dorn the [1.] Solemnity, reſolved to ſend for His Eldeſt Son Edard, Duke of Cornwal to come over to Him; this young Prince being ow about ten years of age, having been (as I have ſaid) his Father's uardian of the Kingdom, or Lieutenant during His Abſence, had eld a * Parliament on the Thirteenth of October at Weſtminſter, where aving had an expreſs Commiſſion for it from the King his Father, at the eginning of it the Cauſes were declared to be three; Firſt, 'To take care that there be a ſtrict Obſervation of the K's Peace: Secondly, To provide for the Defence of the Marches towards Scotland, ſince that People being thereto inſtantly urged by King David's Letters from France, and the promiſed Aſſiſtance of the French King, began to make freſh Stirs, notwithſtanding the late Truce. And the Third Reaſon was, for the better guarding the Seas. To all which was added a demand of a Supply for the King in His Wars.

Anno Dom. Mccexxxix.

The King reſolves to ſend for Prince Edward over to Him, who had held a Parl. during His Abſence, and what was done there.

* Rot Parl. 13 Ed. 3. pars, 2. m. 28. Vid. Cotton's Records, p. 17.

* After this the ABp of Canterbury, who together with Richard Bp f Durham, and Sir Michael de la Poole came lately from beyond the eas, as the King's Meſſengers to the Parliament, made a Narration of he great Actions which He had lately done in France and Flanders, and he preſent hazards both He and His Men were expoſed to for want of ore liberal and ſpeedy Supplies out of England: It was alſo further delared, That the King, and others for Him, to procure the aſſiſtance of His Allies, and for the neceſſary Expences of this War, ſtood bound n Three hundred thouſand Pounds, and till this Sum was paid, the ing could not in honour depart thence: Upon the hearing of all which, t was unanimouſly agreed and granted by the Great Men, that they ould give Him the Tenth Sheaf of all the Corn of their Demeſnes; as lſo the Tenth Fleece of Wool, and the Tenth Lamb of their own Stock, o be paid in two Years, deſiring withal, that the Maltolt (or illegal uties) ſet upon Wool ſhould be revoked, and that this Grant ſhould ot turn into a Cuſtom: But the Commons would not then proceed ſo ar, (I ſuppoſe not having the Conſent of thoſe who had elected them) ho they declared themſelves very forward to aſſiſt the King; yet pray'd he Duke of Cornwal, That he would ſummon another * Parliament in a onvenient time, that in the mean while they might go into the Countrey, to endeavour to have an Aid granted anſwerable to the King's Neceſſities: And they farther pray'd, That two Knts. of the beſt Eſtates hould be choſen in that Parliament; and accordingly * Writs were iſued out on the Sixteenth of November for another Parliament, to meet ight days after St. Hillary next, being the Twentieth of January enuing.

* Id. pars 1. n. 4.

The ABp of Canterbury ſets forth the K's Great Actions abroad, and the great want He was in of a liberal Supply.

The Nobility agree to grant the K. a great Tax upon Corn and Wool, but the Commons refuſe till the next Parl.

* Id. n. 6.

Writs iſſued out for another Parliament

* Rot. Scot. 13 Ed. 3. p. 2. m. 1.

At which time, Prince Edward being absent to go~~ne~~ over to his Father at Antwerp, there were ~~appointed Six Commiſſioners to hold~~ this Parliament in his ſtead, viz.~~ [4.] the ABp~~s~~ of Canterbury ~~and York, and four Juſtices of the King's-Bench and Common-Pleas;~~ theſe, or any ~~two~~ few or ~~three of them were ordered by the King's Letters Patents~~ to hold his Parliament in the Name of the King and His Son, the Lord Guardian of England, and were thereby impowered to do all things which ither he or the King Himſelf could have performed.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

[4.] ~~Cotton's Abridg. ſh. p. 19.~~ Rot: Pat: 13 E: 3. P. 1. m. 4.

The Prince being now gone over to his Father, the Parliament is held by Six Commiſſioners. Then adjourn'd.

Theſe Commiſſioners being met at the day appointed, cauſed ſeveral f the Lords and Commons to aſſemble in the Preſence Chamber, but becauſe many of both Houſes were not yet come up, they adjourn'd the Parliament

Anno Dom MCCCXL.

At their meeting the Cauſes of the Parliament are declared. They grant the K. thirty thouſand Sacks of Wool.

liament from day to day till Monday next after their meeting; And the the Houſes being full to do Buſineſs, the Cauſes of the Parliament were declar'd to be the ſame as before; namely, for granting the King a Aid for keeping of the Seas, and for the defence of the North-Marches whereunto the Commons required time till Saturday the 19th of Febru ary, and then they unanimouſly granted to the King for an Aid Thir ty thouſand Sacks of Wool, on certain Conditions expreſſed in a pair o Indentures made thereupon; but as for the Clergy, they gave no thing now, becauſe in the Eleventh Year of His Reign, they had gi ven a Tenth for three Years, not yet expired, towards His War wit France, and to pay His Foreign Soldiers.

* Ibidem. The Merchants and Owners of Ships to bear half the Charge of Tranſportation.

* As for the Merchants and Owners of Ships, they themſelves wer to bear half the Charges of the tranſporting theſe Wools, the other hal the Council promiſed to pay out of their own Good-wills to their Kin and Countrey, but not of Duty, or that it ſhould ſtand for a Precedent The Mariners of the Weſt promiſed to ſet forth Ninety Sail, and Te of them of the Burthen of One hundred Tun or more, and to bear th whole Charge, if they could.

This I take notice of, that ſo the Reader may ſee what ſort of Ship the Navy of England then conſiſted of, and how it was for the mo part raiſed, viz. either of the Ships of ſuch Merchants or Owners wh were hired out for the King's Service, or elſe were found by the Cinque Ports, according to the ſeveral number of Ships each of them were ra ted at in thoſe Days, when the Kings of England had but few Men o War of their own.

* Ibid. The Parliament take order for guard of the Seas, and chuſe who ſhould be Admirals, and then is diſſolved.

* Then the Parliament having taken Order for the Guard of the Sea and that Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, ſhould be Admiral of th Ships belonging to Portſmouth, and the other Ports of the Weſt for th guard of that Coaſt; and that the Ships of Thames and the Cinque-Port ſhould lie at Winchelſey under the command of William Clinton Earl o Huntington; and that the whole Fleet ſhould be ready before Lent; an had alſo taken care for the defence of the Marches in Scotland, and o the Northern Counties, as likewiſe of the Iſle of Wight, (I ſay) whe theſe things were ſetled and agreed on, the Parliament was diſſo ved.

[5.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 43. The K. leaves Antwerp and goes to Bruſſels to meet the Confederate Princes; with their Advice to Him.

We ſhall now look back into Flanders, and ſee what the King ha been doing there in the mean while. Preſently after Chriſtmaſs [5.] th King leaving Antwerp, went to Bruſſels, where was held a General A ſembly of the Princes and Lords that were His Allies, wh adviſed Him to obtain the Aſſiſtance of the Flemings, that they ſhoul march whither He would lead them, in defiance of their Earl and th King of France, who had lately diſmember'd Liſle, Doway, and Bethu from Flanders, to reunite which King Edward was adviſed to promi the Flemings He would uſe His utmoſt endeavour.

[1.] Id. ib. Jacob Van Artefeld comes to K Edward with a noble Retinue; and procures Gaunt and other Towns to ſend Deputies to Him.

Then at the [1.] King's Requeſt Jacob Van Artefeld did not only com thither in perſon (with a Retinue like an Earl) but he alſo procured th City of Gaunt, and other Cities and Towns of Flanders, and th Low Countries, to ſend their Deputies to the ſame place; And as for tho of Flanders, when the King had made them the Offer beforementione they after ſome Conſultation return'd an Anſwer to this effect by Ja Van Artefeld, who contrived it, That they were very well pleaſed wit the Propoſal, and as willing to comply with it, if they might do it withou

Lo

Loſs or Diſhonour, [2.] and were it not that they were obliged both by Oath, and under a Bond of two Millions of Florens of Gold to be paid into the Pope's Treaſury, never to take up Arms againſt any Lawful King of France; which Forfeiture not only kept them in awe, but alſo the fear of being interdicted by the Pope, if they wilfully ſhould break the Oath they had made to Him: But Jacob then farther aſſured the King, that if He would take upon Him the Title and Arms of the King of France, and quarter them with His Own, they, the Flemings, would not only look upon Him as true King of that Realm, againſt whom they were not to make War, but would alſo reſt ſatisfy'd with His diſcharging them from the ſaid Bond, nor would they after that value the Pope's Interdict, if He ſhould inflict it upon them, but would at any time be ready to obey all His Commands.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

[2.] John Villani. Hiſt Ital. L 11. 108. A. p. 650.

The Flemings being afraid to take up Arms againſt France, Jacob Van Artefeld finds out an Expedient to excuſe them.

Thus did Jacob Van Artefeld by this Subtile Expedient ſatisfie the reſt of the Deputies, of the Juſtice of taking part with King Edward againſt France, notwithſtanding all their Solemn Engagements to the contrary: yet at firſt the King demurr'd to agree to this Propoſal; for tho He believed He might lawfully claim the Crown of France in Right of His Mother Queen Iſabell, yet He thought it not much for His honour to take upon Him the Arms and Title of that Kingdom before He had made a Conqueſt of ſome part of it, not being ſure whether ever He ſhould be able to ſucceed in His Deſign or not; yet on the other ſide, He was very loth to refuſe the Flemings their Requeſt, ſince their Aſſiſtance might prove very ſerviceable to Him: wherefore [3.] He adviſed with the Dukes of Brabant and Guelders, the Earl of Juliers, and other Earls and Lords His Confederates, as alſo with the Noblemen of England, that were then with Him, concerning it; who all agreed, that He ſhould by no means refuſe the Requeſt the Flemings had made Him. Whereupon the King return'd them this Anſwer, That if they would ſwear and engage to ſerve Him upon all Occaſions in this War, He would then readily do all that they deſired, and in juſtice He might; and further undertook to reſtore them thoſe three Cautionary Towns of Liſle, Doway and Bethune, which had been delivered up as Pledges of their Faith to the French King. [4.] To this the Flemings having unanimouſly agreed, the Three and twentieth of January was appointed for the day when theſe Covenants and Conditions ſhould be ratify'd at Gaunt by both Parties: Accordingly King Edward coming thither in Perſon, was met by all the Deputies of the Towns of Flanders, and then the ſaid Articles being reduced into Writing, both His Majeſty and they interchangeably put their Seals to them; and thus the King firſt took upon Him the Title and Arms of France. And further it appears (as Speed* hath very well proved in his Chronicle) that the King at firſt quarter'd the Arms of England before thoſe of France in His Court of Arms and Seals; tho afterwards, perhaps, the more to ingratiate Himſelf with the French Nation, He placed the French Flower-de-Liſes before the Engliſh Lyons; and about this time He placed this French Motto under His Shield, Dieu & Mon Droit; in Engliſh, God and my Right: Declaring thereby His Confidence to be only in God, and the Juſtice of His Cauſe: Which Motto, together with the Arms of France, hath been continued by all the Kings of England, His Succeſſors, even down to this day.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. The King by the Dukes of Brabant and Guelders accept of the Propoſal of the Flemings.

[4.] J. Vil. ib. Odoric Raynold. Ad hunc Ann. The Covenants between King Edward and the Gauntois are mutually ratify'd.

* P. 572.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

[5] H. K. col. 2576.

K. Edw. comes to Gaunt, and is acknowledg'd for K. of France by the Flemings.

So Soon as the King had taken upon Him the Title of France, [5] He found the Contrivance of Jacob Van Artefeld fully to anſwer his Expectation; for when He came to Gaunt in the beginning of February, al the People of Flanders acknowledged Him for true and Rightful King o France, and did Him Homage as to their Superior Lord.

[6.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 44.

* Rot. Franc. 14 Ed. 3. m. 1.

He iſſues out a Declaration, ſetting forth His Right to that Crown, directed to all the Subjects of France.

In [6] the late Aſſembly at Bruſſels it was reſolved, that the War o France ſhould begin with the Siege of Tournay; and therefore to prepare the Minds of the French for it, as well as to lay open to them His Right to that Kingdom, * King Edward iſſued out His Declaration by way of Letters Patents, dated from Gaunt, and directed to the Prelates, Peers, and Commons of France to this effect:

'That Charles, late King of France, His Mother's Brother, being 'dead, the ſaid Kingdom was devolved to Him by manifeſt Law and 'Right of Inheritance, and that Philip of Valois, Son to the Uncle of 'the ſaid King, had by Violence and Injuſtice intruded into it during 'His Minority, and even yet wrongfully detains it; leſt therefore He 'ſhould ſeem to neglect His Own Right, He now thought good to own 'the Title of King of France, and to take upon Him the Defence and 'Government thereof; and then declares He would be very gracious 'to the Good and Obedient, and do Juſtice to every one according to the laudable Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom. 'That He would reform all things that were amiſs, and add, according 'to the Condition of the Times whatever was beſt and moſt expedient 'for them, by Aſſent of the Peers, Prelates, and Great Men, and His 'other faithful Subjects. Then He concludes, That having offered 'the ſaid Philip divers Amicable Conditions of Peace, and He refuſing 'to come to any Terms of Condeſcenſion, King Edward thought He 'was neceſſitated to defend Himſelf, and recover His Right by Force 'of Arms: And therefore all ſuch Subjects as would ſubmit to Him, as 'true King of France, by Eaſter then next enſuing, ſhould be received 'into His Royal Grace and Protection. This was dated at Gaunt, the Eighteenth of February, being the Thirteenth over France, and the Fourteenth over England. Here, by the way, you may obſerve, that the Stile of France is ſet firſt, and the Title of Duke of Aquitain omitted; it being now merg'd in the more General Title of King of France. This is the Sum of theſe Letters, which the King cauſed to be ſent to the Frontiers of the French Dominions, and to be fixed upon the Doors of divers Churches, and in other Publick Places. Theſe Letters are ſomewhat long, and thoſe that are Curious may find them at large * in Speed's Chronicle; and Dr. Brady hath given us the Effects of them in his Hiſtory, from Walſingham, without citing the Record. This is ſufficient to ſhew us, that the Kings of France did not, in thoſe days, pretend to a Power of diſpoſing of the Lives and Liberties of their Subjects, without the Conſent of the Great Council of the Kingdom.

* P. 572.

The King quarters the Arms of France in His Great Seal, and then goes into England.

* Rot. Clauſ. 14 Edw. p. 1. m. 42.

No ſooner had King Edward thus ſetled His Matters in Flanders, and cauſed His Seals to be changed, by ſuperadding to them the Arms of France; But finding it neceſſary for His Affairs, ſpeedily to return into England, to raiſe more Money of His Subjects to carry on the War, He left the Queen and Prince His Son at Gaunt, and * taking Shipping at Sluice, landed at Orwell near Harwich, on the Twenty Firſt of February. Where, as ſoon as He arrived, the firſt thing He cauſed

to † note, the like Writs of Summons were also sent to the Arch BPs and BPs: in which it commands them to ~~cause two~~ warn their Deans and Chapters and all the Clergy of their Dioceses to chuse two sufficient Proctors to appear at the Parliament at Westminster on the day therein mentioned. and in these writs he likewise gives them notice of the change of his Stile into that of King of France for divers causes him thereunto moving, but yt it shall no ways derogate from or prejudice the Rights and priviledges of the Kingdom of England

o be Sealed with His † New Seal, were the *† Writs directed to all the heriffs of England, to ſummon a Parliament to meet on the *Wedneſ-*ay after Mid-Lent-Sunday, being the Nine and Twentieth of March ext enſuing. Theſe were dated at Harwich, the One and Twentieth f February, being the day of His Landing.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

† Vid. Fig. hujus ſigillis Sanford Gen Hiſt. p. 124.

* Rot. Clauſ. 14 Ed. 3. p 1. m. 42. dorſ.

Note; it appears by the Date of theſe Writs, in Caſe of Abſolute Neceſſity, a Parliament might be then called within leſs than Forty ays, though the Uſage is otherwiſe now. ✗

✗ Also I cannot here omit that the ~~first~~ next thing the King further did after his arrival was, to ~~give notice~~ to all ye Sherifs of England ~~of this change of his Stile to that of King of France &c and cause ye change of his~~ Seals, the Severall ~~Impressions~~ of wch were, [illegible] together with those writs to be openly shewn at the County Courts or other publick meetings. as appears by ye writs themselves. printed in Rs. Col. from Rot. Claus. 14 Ed: 3. pt. 1. m. 3[illegible]

When the † Parliament met, the King order'd the Cauſe of their ummons to be declared, viz. 'For Granting Him a Great Aid, or elſe He ſhould be for ever diſhonoured, and His Lands as well on this ſide, as beyond the Sea, in great danger, if He ſhould loſe His Allies: And further, That He was in His own proper Perſon to return to Bruſſels, and ſtay there as a Pledge, until the Sum He was engaged for was all paid. But in caſe He ſhould have a ſufficient Aid, all theſe Miſchiefs would be prevented, and His Deſign (with the help of God) have a good Iſſue, &c. Wherefore, at His Requeſt, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Knights of Shires, having regard to the Miſchiefs aforeſaid, granted Him the Ninth Sheaf, Fleece, and Lamb, and the Citizens and Burgeſſes the Ninth Part of all their Goods, according to the true Value, for Two Years next coming; upon condition, He would conſent to the Petitions preſented to Him and His Council. The Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Clergy, alſo granted the King a Tenth in their Convocations.

† Rot. Parl. 14 Ed. 3. P. 1. n. 567. Cot. Abridg. p. 22. H.K. Col. 2567.

The Cauſe of their Meeting.

† Then the Great Men and Commons made it their Requeſt, eeing the King had taken upon Him the Title of King of France, and dded the Flower-de-Liſes to His Arms, that they might not be bound to bey Him as King of that Realm, nor that the Kingdom of England e put in Subjection to Him as King of France. He thereupon cauſed ertain Letters-Patents to be paſſed under His Great Seal, whereby He eclared, that it was not His Intention that England ſhould be any ways Subject to the Realm or Crown of France: and theſe He publiſhed for their greater Satisfaction. This the Reader may find printed in Latin in * Dr. Brady's Appendix, and is alſo to be ſeen in the Old ditions of our Statutes in Engliſh, to both which I refer you.

† Ibid. n. 9, 10.

The Petition of the Parliament, that they might not be ſubject to the Crown of France.

* N. 86.

I cannot here omit taking notice, that ſince the Aids * given in the aſt Parliament were not duly anſwer'd to the King by thoſe that had the Care thereof, certain Perſons were appointed to take the Accounts f Sir William de la Pole, Sir John Charnel, and others who had received the Money and Wools formerly given; and they had a Day aſſigned them to produce their Accounts; and in the mean while ſeveral Noblemen and Knights became bound for the Accountants, that they ſhould nſwer for what they had received. This deſerves our notice, becauſe t is the firſt Example I can find, that any Moneys given in Parliament were by them order'd to be accounted for to Perſons appointed by themſelves. I meet with little elſe done in this Parliament, * only that the Marquiſs of Juliers was now created Earl of Cambridge, with a Penſion of a Thouſand Pound per Ann. for His Good Service to the King.

* Rot. Parl. n. 11.

* Vid. Cot. Abridg. p. 23.

Then † on the Thirtieth of May next following, the King, before His Departure ✗ iſſued out ~~other~~ Writs, being a Declaration, wherein He ſet forth His Intentions of going ſpeedily beyond Sea, for the Defence and Safety of His Kingdom, and the Recovery of His Own, and the † Rot. Clauſ. 14 Ed 3. P. 1. m. 23. dorſ.

The King ſummons another Parliament to meet after His Departure beyond Sea.

✗ leaving by consent of Parliament again appointed his son the Duke of Cornwall, Guardian of the Realm by his Letters Patent dat: May 27. with Power to confer and dispose of all such dignities, offices & employments mentioned in the Letters Patent dated May 29. issued out writs. Rot: Pat. 14 Ed: 3. pars 2. m. 23. et 16.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

the Rights of His Crown: To which end He ſummoned another Parliament to meet at Weſtminſter on the Wedneſday after the Feaſt of the Tranſlation of St. Thomas the Martyr, (that is, T. Becket) which was the 'Seventh of July; to be holden before His Son Edw, Duke of Cornwal and Earl of Cheſter, whom He had conſtituted Guardian of 'England in His abſence. And He therein not only publickly declared His Intention of going over, in the ſaid Writs of Summons, but 'appointed the preciſe Day to be on the Thirteenth of June, that He 'would paſs from Orwell in Suffolk into Flanders; [1.] and He had prepared a Fleet of about Forty Sail of Ships, that there lay ready for His Paſſage. Upon this Reſolution, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ~~(then His Chancellor)~~ inform'd Him, That Philip of Valois His Adverſary of France, foreſeeing His Paſſage, had privately ſet a great Fleet of Men of War to encounter Him, in the Haven of Sluice, and adviſed Him to provide more Ships, and reinforce His Fleet, otherwiſe He might meet with great Danger in the Paſſage. But the King not giving any Credit to that Report, ſaid, He would go, whatever came of it. Whereupon the Archbiſhop quitted his Council, and taking leave, departed, and reſigned the Seal of his Office to Him. Then the King thinking better on the Matter, called to Him Rober de Morley His Admiral, and one Crabbe a famous Seaman, who, upon His Enquiry, gave Him the ſame Information and Advice. Walſingham ſays, that the Duke of Gueldres gave the King the firſt notice of this great Fleet that lay in wait for Him. But which way ſoever the King received it, He preſently ſent for the Archbiſhop, and deliver'd the Seal again to Him: And having forthwith ſent Orders to the Northern and Southern Ports, and to that of London, He, within ten days had got ready a brave Fleet, conſiſting of Two Hundred and Sixty Veſſels, and more Armed Men and Archers than He had need of.

[1.] Rot. Aveſ. C. 29.

The Archbiſhop informs the King that he was way-laid by the French, and adviſes Him not to go over, but the King does not believe him.

~~[illegible] was [illegible] the Chancel~~ who was not then Chancellor having reſign'd the Seale just before the K^s going over into Flanders vid: Rot. Claus. 14 Ed: 3 m 13 & publ. in Rs Col. p. 194

But upon further information, He reinforces His Fleet to 260 Sail.

When He was thus provided, on the Two and Twentieth of June He took [2.] Shipping at Orwell, attended by His Navy, and a ſufficient Number of Land-Soldiers. And when it arrived upon the Coaſt of Flanders, near Blank-Berg and Sluice, they diſcovered a great many Sail of Ships. The King being told, they believed it to be thoſe the King of France had ſent out to intercept His Paſſage; He thereupon commanded the Lord Cobham and two other Knights to take Boat, and go privately on Shoar above the Place where the French Fleet lay, to view their Number and Strength: Who, upon their Return on Board, told the King, that the Enemy's Fleet conſiſted of about Four Hundred Sail, (as near as they could gueſs) and were Riding in the Harbour of Sluice, divided into three Squadrons. Then the King being reſolved to fight, order'd His Ships to caſt Anchor, in order to engage them the next Morning. Upon this, the Engliſh Fleet weighing Anchor ſtood out to Sea, to give the French leave to come out; tho', as their Writers relate, their Admiral would not let his Fleet quit the Harbour: But this does not ſeem probable; becauſe the French Ships were Superior to the Engliſh in Number; beſides which, the Haven was too ſmall for ſo many Ships to engage in: But be this as it will, [3.] the King commanding Himſelf in Perſon, order'd His beſt Ships that were well mann'd with Archers and other Soldiers to be ſet foremoſt in the Line of Battel; then having tack'd about to get the Weathergage of Wind and Sun, they boldly received the firſt Onſet.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. Cap. 51. C. A. M.

The K. takes Shipping, and meets the French Fleet on the Coaſt of Flanders. H.K. Col. 2577.

He thereupon reſolves to fight them.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib.

For

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

For the French Admirals ~~fore~~ſeeing the Banner Royal of England diſplay'd on the Main-Top-Maſt of one of the Biggeſt Ships, they were ſatisfied that the King was there in Perſon; they therefore reſolved to do their utmoſt to rout His Fleet, and take Him Priſoner. So falling boldly upon the Engliſh, there began a Bloody Fight, firſt with a dreadful Shower of Arrows, by which the Engliſh Archers ſhooting farther, did much more Miſchief than the French Croſs-bows: The Shot being pretty well waſted, (for Guns either were not invented, or at leaſt not then uſed) the two Fleets came up to each other, immediately fell to Boarding, and made uſe of their Grapling-Irons for that purpoſe. The Men at Arms leaping into each others Ships, fell to handy-Strokes, whereby a moſt deſperate Slaughter was made, and that for a time with various ſucceſs, till at laſt the Engliſh gain'd the Advantage by retaking the Ship Chriſtopher, which the French had won from them the Year before. This Fight continued with much obſtinacy from Ten in the Morning until Seven at Night, when the French Ships (tho' almoſt as many more, and the Men four for one) were put to flight, their firſt Squadron being entirely defeated, and the ſecond ſo much ſhatter'd, that they could not get away. [4.] So that of their whole Fleet there did not eſcape above thirty Veſſels, which made all the Sail they could for the Coaſt of France: to perſue which, the King ſent forty Sail under the conduct of Sir John Crabbe, one of His Admirals; but we find nothing of their Succeſs, and therefore, I ſuppoſe, they could not overtake them. In this Fight there were killed at leaſt Thirty thouſand, of which about four thouſand might be Engliſh. This was the greateſt Sea-Fight that had ever happened on the Narrow-Seas, and the firſt as well as the laſt, in which a King of England commanded in Perſon; and the moſt conſiderable Earls and Barons of His Kingdom being likewiſe there, behaved themſelves very gallantly that day: As for the French Admirals, two of them were kill'd in the Fight, but the Third, called Barbenoir, a Genoeſe, eſcaped with thoſe that fled.

And the French Admiral reſolves to do his utmoſt to take Him Priſoner, and fall upon the Engliſh.

Who after a ſharp Engagement put the French Navy to Flight, and ſunk or took moſt of their Ships.

[4.] H. K. ib.

Indeed ſome of the French Hiſtorians tell us, that King Edward was then wounded in the Thigh with a Spear, and that in Revenge He hanged Admiral Bahuchet upon the Main-Yard of his Ship; but as for the manner of that Commander's death were it ſo, it was not for that, but (as Mezeray himſelf acknowledgeth) as a Puniſhment for thoſe Barbarities which he had either ordered or permitted to be done upon his landing at Southampton. And as to what relates to the King's Wound, it was ſo inconſiderable, that He Himſelf does not ſo much as mention it in His Letters, nor did it any way hinder Him in His Affairs. Yet ſome of our own [5.] Hiſtorians here relate, that the Admiral above-mentioned eſcaped alive from this Fight, and that the French loſt above Two Hundred Sail of Ships, ſome of which were very conſiderable, having been taken from the Engliſh before. I cannot here omit, that the French Writers lay the blame upon this Admiral Bahuchet, as having mann'd his Ships with Peaſants and Raw Soldiers, refuſing Mariners and Experienc'd Seamen, becauſe they required greater Wages. If this were true, he juſtly deſerved the Puniſhment King Edward inflicted on him, as being treacherous to his Maſter; but whether it were ſo or no, I will not diſpute: However, this evil Practice could not extend to the whole French Fleet, but only to the Squadron which that Admiral commanded. But Mezera lays the blame of this Defeat on the ill Underſtanding there was be tween the two French Admirals.

The falſe Relations of the French Hiſtorians confuted.

[5.] H. K ib.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib K. Edward congratulated upon His Victory by the Burgeſſes of Sluice and Bruges.
[2.] Chron. Fran. MS.

He goes on Pilgrimage to give Thanks to our Lady of Ardenburgh, and thence to Gaunt.
[3.] T. W. ad An. 1339.
The Birth of John of Gaunt.

King Edward having obtain'd ſo great a Victory, [1.] ſtay'd o board that Night and part of the next Day, till He received the Con gratulations of the Chief Burgeſſes of Sluice and Bruges who cam thither to him; [2.] but in the Evening He and all His Retinue wen on Shore at Sluice: On which News His Queen went thither fron Gaunt, to meet Him, and congratulate His Safety and Succeſs, and ſ return'd to the ſame Place. But the King, within two days after went on foot in Pilgrimage to our Lady of Ardenburgh, (formerly conſiderable Place in Flanders, tho' now ruined) to render her Thank for His late good Succeſs; and here He took Horſe, and rode to Gaunt which is about Four Leagues further: Where the Queen again recei ved Him with great Satisfaction, and preſented Him with Her Fourt Son, of [3.] whom She had been delivered a few Months before who, from the Place of his Birth, was called John of Gaunt, and mad a Conſiderable Figure in our Engliſh Hiſtory, as you will find here after.

Immediately after the King's Arrival there, He thought fit to ſen a Letter directed to the Biſhops and Clergy of England, giving then an Account of His late Victory by Sea, near the Haven of * Swyne (for ſo that Port is called in our Old Hiſtorians) and deſiring then to return Solemn Thanks to God for the ſame. The Reader, if he b curious to ſee it, may find it at large in Mr. Fox's † Acts and Monu ments. This Letter was incloſed in another of the King's, directed t His Son the Prince, Guardian, who then reſided at Waltham.

* i. e. Sluice.

† Pag. 494. Edit. 1641.

[4] Froiſſ. ib. Chap. 44.
K. Philip ſends the Count de Laillè into Gaſcoigne, to take the City of Bourdeaux; but was prevented by a Stratagem.
[5.] T. W.

Before I proceed further, I muſt give you a ſhort Account of wha had paſſed beyond Sea, during K. Edward's being here; and I ſhall firſ begin with France: [4] Where King Philip appointed the Count o Laillè, an experienc'd Officer, to march with a Conſiderable Arm into Gaſcoigne, and there to take the City of Bourdeaux and what Pla ces He could in thoſe Parts, which were but ſlenderly Gariſoned, b reaſon of King Edward's Forces being then employ'd in Flanders This was accordingly put in Execution by the Earl; who comin on the ſudden before Bourdeaux, [5.] Sir Oliver Ingham, the Gove nor, was much ſurpriſed to ſee ſo Great an Army there, at a tim when he thought the French Forces had been otherwiſe employ'd wherefore, not having Men enough with him to defend the Tow againſt an open Siege, he had no way left to do it but by a Stratagem which was thus: Knowing that the Citizens were very well affected t the Engliſh Government, he commanded them to put up the Frenc Colours with Flower-de-Liſes over the Gates, which were alſo ſet wid open, as if the Citizens had actually declared themſelves for the Frenc They ſeeing all things in ſo quiet a Poſture, verily thought the Cit had been their own; (ſuppoſing the Engliſh Gariſon were either fled o made Priſoners) and ſo enter'd the Town, headed by their Comman der. But ſo ſoon as they were got into the middle of it, the Gove nor, who had conceal'd his Soldiers in their Houſes, (being about Fiv Thouſand Men at Arms) ruſh'd out ſuddenly upon them, and join'd by the Townſmen, made a great Slaughter of the French, the Commander himſelf hardly eſcaping. This News being brought

Kin

Anno Dom. MCCCXL

King Edward then in England, He thereupon wrote to the Citizens of Bourdeaux a Letter of Thanks; wherein extolling their Loyalty, and the Greatneſs of the late Service they had done, He promiſed to reward it by His Royal Bounty. And thus this City was wonderfully ſaved from the French. I ſhall ſhew you likewiſe, what hath been done in Flanders and Haynault, during the King's Abſence in England; ſince it ſeems to give Light to the preſent State of Affairs in thoſe Parts.

[2.]Not long after King Edward's Departure for England, the ABp of Cambray, being then at Paris, complain'd to King Philip that the Hainalders had done him great Damage, having lately deſtroy'd and over-run his Countrey, and that John Earl of Haynault was an open Enemy to France, and the Earl his Nephew a private Friend to England; whereupon King Philip preſently order'd the Gariſons in Cambreſis and about Tournay to be drawn out, making about ſix hundred Men at Arms, who were joined with a Detachment of Germans; theſe marched to the Town of Haſpre in Haynault, which they ſurprized, plunder'd and burnt, without ever declaring any War: At this Cruel Action the young Earl being highly provok'd, vowed Revenge, and raiſing a ſufficient Army, marched againſt the Town of Aulinton in Tyerache; but they having notice of their coming, the Townſmen thought they had ſufficiently provided for their own defence, tho it ſeems to little purpoſe; for the Earl ſitting down before it with his Army, took it by Storm, and put moſt of the Gariſon to the Sword, and having done the like there as the French had to his Town, he marched away with a great deal of Booty.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib c 45.
K. Philip upon Complaint of the ABp of Cambray, orders His Forces to make War upon the Earl of Haynault.
Which is revenged by the Earl in taking the Town of Aulinton.

When [2.] the French King had received the News of this Action, He commanded His Eldeſt Son, John Duke of Normandy, to make a brisk Incurſion into Haynault, and to haraſs and deſtroy the Countrey, and revenge the Miſchief which the Haynalders had done; but ſince it required ſome time for the Duke to raiſe an Army fit for that purpoſe, I ſhall in the mean while ſay ſomething of what was done between the French and Flemings in Flanders, of whom, when King Philip heard they had done Homage to the King of England, He complain'd to the Pope, who taking part with the French King, immediately excommunicated the Flemings, and laid His Interdict upon the whole Country, ſo that no Maſs could be ſaid there, until King Edward ſent them over ſome Engliſh Prieſts, that did not think themſelves oblig'd by that Sentence. But when King Philip found that this had little or no effect upon them, He reſolved to take another Courſe, and ordered about thirteen hundred Men at Arms, and Croſs-Bows, to be ſent from Tournay, who marching before the Town of Courtray, killed or hurt as many as they found without the Walls, and beſides carried off a great Booty in Sheep and other Cattle; at which the Flemings were ſo provoked, that raiſing a conſiderable Body of Men under the conduct of Jacob Van Artefeld, they reſolved to march againſt the City of Tournay, and there to have their Revenge; but before he would undertake ſo difficult an Enterprize, he deſired to have the help and Advice of ſome more experienced Commanders: [3.] wherefore they ſent to Ypres to the Earl of Saliſbury, and the Ld Robert Ufford*, Eldeſt Son to the Earl of Suffolk, to come to their aſſiſtance, with as many Soldiers as they could ſpare, which were but fifty Men at Arms, and forty Croſs-Bows; but being to paſs near the

[2.] Id. ib.
The French King orders His Son the Duke of Normandy to make another Incurſion into Haynault.
Upon King Philip's Complaint againſt the Flemings, they are excommunicated by the Pope, whereupon K. Edw. ſends over ſome Engliſh Prieſts to ſing Maſs to them.
The Flemings under Jac. Van Arte. reſolve on the ſiege of Tournay, but are diſappointed by the taking Priſoners of the Earl of Saliſbury and Lord Ufford, going to their aſſiſtance.
[3.] Id. ib.

* Froiſſ. calls him E. of Suffolk, but it is a miſtake.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

Town of Lille, theſe of that Gariſon having intelligence of their coming that way, laid a ſtrong Ambuſh for them behind the Hedges, not far from that Place, conſiſting of above fifteen hundred men, by whom, (being hem'd in on all ſides,) though theſe with their Men behaved themſelves very valiantly, they were taken Priſoners, and carry'd fetter'd to Paris, and there brought before the King: Who was (I know not for what Reaſon) ſo incenſed againſt them, that He would have put them all to death, had it not been for the more calm Perſuaſions of the prudent King of Bohemia, who not only remonſtrated to Him the unworthineſs of the Action in Cold Blood, to put to death Men of ſuch high Quality, who were only Priſoners of War, but alſo that it might happen that ſome of His Commanders might fall into the like Miſfortune, and muſt then expect the like Treatment: Theſe Conſiderations ſo far wrought upon the French King, that He only commanded them to be kept cloſe Priſoners, where they continued till the enſuing Truce, and then they were ſet at liberty, paying their Ranſoms: But when Jacob Van Artefeld heard of their being taken, he immediately diſmiſſed all the Forces he had raiſed, and return'd home to Gaunt.

[4.] Id ib. c. 48. The Duke invades Haynault with a great Army, and deſtroys all the Country.

But to return to the Duke of Normandy, [4.] who had Orders from his Father to invade Haynault: having now raiſed a great Army of above Twenty thouſand Men, made his General Rendezvouz at St. Quintin, and accompanied with divers of the Chief of the French Nobles, enter'd Haynault, and there deſtroying without mercy, burnt all the Towns on that ſide the Countrey almoſt as far as Valenciennes, except that of Queſnoy, and ſome other places that were too ſtrong to be eaſily taken; after which Deſolation Duke John return'd to Cambray, where he disbanded ſome of his Men, and ſent the reſt into Gariſons; but the Reaſon why the Haynalders made ſo ſmall a reſiſtance, was, that the Earl finding himſelf overpowered by the French, was lately gone over into England, to implore the aſſiſtance of the King his Brother-in-Law, who received him very kindly, and notwithſtanding his late deſerting his Intereſt, now made a League offenſive and defenſive with him; which being concluded, the Earl went over again, but before he returned home, he went into Germany to the Emperor Lewis, who had married his Eldeſt Siſter, and made the like League with Him: Theſe Tranſactions detained the Earl of Haynault abroad much longer than was expected, and his Uncle the Lord John of Beaumont, would not venture to engage the French in a Battel, without the Earl his Nephew's Preſence, or expreſs Orders.

Whereupon the Earl implores the aſſiſtance of King Edw. His Brother-in-Law.

[5.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 50. The Duke of Normandy lays ſiege to the Town of Thine L' Eveſque. The E of Haynault comes to the relief of it with 100000 men, and offers the French battel, which is declined by them.

Then [5.] the Duke of Normandy taking this Advantage, and being excited by the Archbiſhop of Cambray, who told him the Town and Caſtle of Thine l' Eveſque having been lately ſurprized by the Engliſ and Haynalders, was a very troubleſome Neighbour to that City; h thereupon marched with a conſiderable Army to beſiege it, and ſo batter'd it with his Warlike Engines, that the Beſieged were very near a Surrender; when the Earl of Haynault now return'd home with an Army of about Forty thouſand Men, he march'd to the relief of that Place, and before he arrived there, he was reinforc'd by near Sixty thouſand Flemings, that came to his aſſiſtance; ſo that his Army made about an hundred thouſand in all; therefore finding himſelf ſuperior to the French in number, he ſent to the Duke of Normandy

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

mandy by one of his own Knights to offer him Battel, but the French Prince having the advantage of a River between him and the Haynalders, which could not be paſſed without great danger to that Party that undertook it, he by the King his Father's Advice, (who was then incognito in the Camp) return'd this Anſwer, That he had no occaſion to fight, ſince he could take the Caſtle without it; to which King Philip alſo added, that when He thought fit He would paſs the River, and deſtroy Haynault worſe than it had been already. When the Earl heard this, and found that he could not draw the French to a Battel, and that there was no relieving the Place without it, he gave notice to the Beſieged to ſhift for themſelves as well as they could, [1.] and for that end ſent them divers Veſſels down the River by which the Caſtle lay, and on theſe the Beſieged going on board in the Night with all their Baggage and Proviſions, quitted the Place, having firſt ſet it on fire. This being perceived by the French, they preſently got into it, and quenched the Flames, which, notwithſtanding, had done conſiderable damage to the Buildings.

[1.] Fabian. Ad hunc Ann. Whereupon the Beſieged quit the Place, which is ſurrender'd to the French, and the Earl with his Forces return home.

This Misfortune happened preſently after King Edward's laſt Arrival at Gaunt; [2.] but before He heard of it, He wrote to the Earl to give Him notice of his late Victory at Sea, and deſired him to ~~continue~~ the Siege; but the Earl ſeeing there was nothing more to be done, decamp'd and return'd home to Valenciennes, with the reſt of the Princes and Lords of the Empire that accompany'd him in this Expedition.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 50. raiſe

But [3.] before they departed thence, it was agreed between King Edward and them, that a General Aſſembly of all the Confederates ſhould ſhortly be held at Villenort, a Town in Flanders, there to conſult how to carry on the War the reſt of this Campaign; then about the middle of July King Edward met at the Place appointed, together with the reſt of the Princes and Lords formerly mentioned; beſides whom there were three or four Burgeſſes ſent from every good Town in Flanders.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 53. A General Aſſembly of the Confederate Princes meet at Villenort, and what is there reſolv'd.

In this Aſſembly it was agreed, that two compleat Armies ſhould be forthwith raiſed, the One conſiſting of the Men of Gaunt and Bruges, and Other Flemings, with a certain number of Engliſh Archers, making up in all about Fifty five thouſand [4.] Men; which being commanded by the Lord Robert of Artois, was to lay ſiege to St. Omer's; and the Other conſiſting of King Edward's own Forces, with thoſe of His Allies, was to ſit down before Tournay; but King Philip to prevent their Deſigns, had already ſent thither Eudes Duke of Burgundy, with many other Lords and Captains, to the reinforcement of the Earl of Armagnac the Governor; theſe came near to it with two and forty Ships well furniſhed with Soldiers and Proviſions of all ſorts: Then King Edward and the Confederates reſolved, that he ſhould ſet forward with his Forces by the middle of Auguſt next enſuing, and lay ſiege to the City of Tournay, and that thither all the Lords of the League ſhould repair to him with their ſeveral Forces, except the Lord Robert of Artois, who was to lie before St. Omer's: Theſe things being ſetled, the Aſſembly broke up, and every one made himſelf ready to perform what had been now agreed upon.

[4.] Du Cheſne Hiſt. P. 651. King Philip to prevent the Confederates Deſign, reinforces the Gariſon at St. Omer's.

Anno Dom
MCCCXL.

[5.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 53
As alſo that of Tournay.

[1.] Fabian. Ib.

When [5.] King Philip had information of the Reſolutions of this Aſſembly, He immediately gave orders not only to reinforce the Gar-ſon of St. Omers, but becauſe the City of Tournay was like to be firſt attack'd, He immediately ſent thither a ſtrong Detachment under the command of the Earl of Ewe, with other Lords and Chief Commanders of France, amounting in all to Four thouſand Men at Arms, and Ten thouſand Foot, [1.] the City it ſelf being able then to raiſe Fifteen thouſand Men of its own Burgers; and beſides all this, the French King had taken convenient orders to furniſh the Town with all things neceſſary for a Siege.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 54.
The Confederate Princes have a General Rendezvouz of all their Forces, with which King Edw. marches to the Siege of Tournay.

Toward [2.] the latter end of July, or beginning of Auguſt, all thing being ready, the Confederate Princes again met according to appointment, and King Edward began His March towards Tournay, attende by ſeven Engliſh Earls, eight Prelates, eight and twenty Barons, an two hundred Knights; his Army was very numerous, conſiſting Four thouſand Men at Arms, and Nine thouſand Archers on Horſe back, and beſides a great number of Foot, and the Forces of the Con federate Princes and Lords that accompany'd Him; alſo Jacob Van Ar tefeld came to the Siege with no leſs than Forty thouſand Flemings with this powerful Army the King marched from Gaunt, and paſſin the River Eſcant, approached near Tournay.

[4.] T. W.
K. Edw. ſends K. Philip a Letter of Defiance.
[5.] C. A. M.

But I cannot here omit, that before King Edward had begun to la actual Siege to it, [4.] He thought fit to ſend to King Philip a Letter Defiance, which being ſomewhat long, I ſhall here give you the Con tents of it, It was directed thus; [5.] 'Edward, by the Grace of Go
'King of England and of France, and Lord of Ireland, to the Rig
'Noble and Puiſſant Lord Philip Earl of Valois; and then accoſtin Him with no other Title than bare Philip of Valois, [yet moſt the French Hiſtorians make this Letter begin with Sir Philip de Valoi which ſhews more Civility, and agrees better with the Directions; tells Him, 'That He had for a long time beſought Him by Meſſages an
'all other Reaſonable Ways to reſtore His Rightful Heritage of Fran
'long detain'd from Him; but ſince He ſaw He would not do Him J
'ſtice, He had entred into the Country of Flanders as Sovereign Lo
'thereof, and that by the Aid of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Power of H
'Own People and His Allies, He would put a ſhort end to His Clai
'if He would advance nearer towards Him; but becauſe two ſo gre
'Armies as there were now on both ſides, could not ſubſiſt near ea
'other, without great damage to the People and Countrey, which 'good Chriſtians ought to prevent, eſpecially Princes and Governo
'of Nations, He therefore deſired a brief Period might be put to t
'Matter; and to avoid the Deaths of ſo many Chriſtians, (the Quar
'being between them two only,) that therefore the deciſion of th
'Claims might be determined by and between their ſingle Perſons:
'which Iſſue He referr'd Himſelf, for the Cauſes aforeſaid; and in co
'ſideration of the great Valour of His Perſon, as alſo of His Senſe a 'Good Advice: But if He would not conſent to this Way, then that 'might be ended by a Battel of a hundred of their beſt Men on eith
'ſide; and if He would not accept one of theſe Offers, then that H
'would aſſign a certain Time within ten days after the date of this L
'ter, to fight Army againſt Army, before the Town of Tournay; a
'this His Deſire was not out of any Pride or Preſumption, but that t

'W

Will of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt might be declared between them, for the greater Repoſe of true Chriſtians; and that all the Enemies of God may be the better reſiſted, and Chriſtianity put in ſafety; ſo deſires King Philip's ſpeedy Anſwer to it by the Bearer thereof. This bears Date at Chyn upon the Skell, near Tournay, the 26th day of July, Privy Seal; the firſt Year of His Reign over France, and fourteenth over England.

[1.] Id. ib. K. Philip's ſpeedy Anſwer to it by the Bearer thereof.

To this Letter King Philip return'd the following Anſwer, which, not being very long, I ſhall here give you at length: [1.] 'Philip, by the Grace of God, King of France, to Edward King of England: We having ſeen your Letters brought to our Court, in which were contained certain Requeſts made to one Philip of Valois, but for that your Letters were not directed, or the Requeſts made to Us, as clearly appears by the Tenor of them; We ought not to have given You an Anſwer, nevertheleſs, becauſe We underſtand by the ſaid Letters, and otherwiſe, that You are enter'd into Our Kingdom of France, doing great Damage to Us, Our Realm, and Our People, without Reaſon, not regarding what a Liege-man ought to obſerve toward his Lord; for You have enter'd into Our Homage, and recognized Us King of France according to Reaſon, and promiſed ſuch Obedience as Men ought to promiſe to their Liege Lord, as appears more clearly by Your Letters Patents ſealed with Our Great Seal, which We have by Us: Our Intention therefore is, When it ſhall ſeem Good unto Us to drive You out of Our Realm, and that We may be able to do this, We have firm Hopes in Jeſus Chriſt, from whom all Our Puiſſance is derived; ſince by Your Unjuſt Enterpriſe, proceeding more from Wilfulneſs than Reaſon, We have been hinder'd from † that Holy Voyage beyond Sea, and alſo a great Multitude of Chriſtians to loſe their Lives; and Divine Service hath been diminiſhed, and Holy Church leſs reverenced. And as touching that which is noted in Yours, that You look to be aſſiſted by the Flemings; We hope, and ſurely believe, That the Good People and Commons of that Country, will ſo carry themſelves towards Our Couſin, the Earl of Flanders, their Lord, that it may not be to their Diſhonour: And that to Us, their Sovereign Lord, they will maintain their Faith and Loyalty. And as for what they have hitherto done, otherwiſe than well, We are aſſured, that was occaſioned by the Evil Advice of ſuch Perſons, who neither had any Regard to the Publick Weal, nor to the Honour of their Country; but only to their own Private Advantage. Given in the Fields near adjoyning to the Priory of St. Andrew les Airs, under Our Privy Seal, in Abſence of Our Great Seal, the Thirtieth of July, in the Year of Grace 1340.

† i. e. to the Holy-Land.

[2.] Du Cheſne p. 671. Mezeray.

The [2.] French Writers relate this Matter very differently: As, that King Philip only return'd this Anſwer by Word of Mouth; That a Lord ought not to accept of a Defiance from his Vaſſal; and further added, That if He would ſtake His Crown of England againſt that of France, He would fight with Him for both; otherwiſe He (the French King) ſhould fight for what was His Own already, which was very unequal. This, they ſay, King Edward would not hearken to; and ſurely He had good and ſufficient Reaſons for ſo doing; ſince, as He wanted not Courage to make that Challenge, ſo His Prudence prompted Him to weigh well the Conditions.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

Yet I cannot admit of the Truth of this Relation; for ſince the Authentick Copies both of King Edward to the French King, and alſo of His Anſwer, are extant in all our Hiſtorians of that time; it ſeems all Needleſs and Impertinent for Him to have return'd any other Anſwer by Word of Mouth, more than had been already ſent in Writing. But leaving the King a while at the Siege of Tournay, we will now look into England, and ſee what hath been done there in this ſhort time of His Abſence from thence; ſince it will ſhew us the chief Reaſon of His wanting Succeſs at this Siege.

A Parliament held at Weſtminster during the King's Abſence, and the Cauſe of calling it.

* Rot Parl 14 Ed. 3. pars. 2 n 2, 3. Vid. Cotton's Abridg p. 27.

Not long after the King's laſt going over, a Parliament was held by * Commiſſion, on the Seventh of July, at Weſtminſter: The Reaſons of their Meeting were declared by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Chancellor, to be, Firſt, to conſult what further Courſe was beſt for the King and His Allies to take againſt France. Secondly, To provide for the Common Peace; and how to keep Good Order at Home. Thirdly, To take care for the Defence of the Northern Ports. Fourthly, For the Dominion at Sea. And, Fifthly, How to anſwer the King the Subſidy laſt granted Him.

Ibid. n 3, 4 The King's late Victory by Sea declared, and a great Supply is required.

The next day, being Thurſday, was openly declared in Parliament the Great Victory which the King had lately obtain'd at Sea: Yet, that to proceed ſo as to perfect theſe Happy Beginnings, He muſt be further enabled with Great Supplies of Money; and deſired their Advice, how it might be raiſed with the leaſt Grievance to His People: The Anſwer to which was reſpited till Saturday next enſuing. At which time, the Lords and Commons granted unto His Majeſty, as in the laſt preceding Parliament, the Ninth of their Corn, Wool, and Lambs, and many uſeful Proviſo's were made for the Anſwering the ſame.

Id. n. 6, 7.

On the ſame day came thither the Earls of Arundel and Gloceſter, with Sir William Truſſel, who were ſent with the King's Letters under the Privy Seal, directed to the Lords and Commons in Parliament; putting them in mind of His late Victory near the Port of Swyne, and preſſing for a ſpeedy Supply of Money to carry on His War this Summer.

Ibid. The ABp of Canterbury and other Bps and Abbots undertake to raiſe 20000 Sacks of Wool on their own Credit.

In Obedience to which Demands, John Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Ralph Biſhop of London, with other Biſhops, Abbots, and Knights there named, freely undertook, on their own Credit, to raiſe the King Twenty Thouſand Sacks of Wool. So that for every Sack of the beſt Sort, the King ſhould be anſwered Six Pounds, for others Five Pounds, and for the worſt of all, Four Marks; beſides His Cuſtom of Forty Shillings for every Sack: And of all this a ſpeedy Return to be made to the King. And it was ordered, that the Subſidy of the next Year ſhould be employ'd for the Payment of theſe Woolls, and this to be Confirm'd by the King's Letters-Patents.

Ib. The Wool given in this as well as in the laſt Parliament, order'd to be ſpeedily ſold to certain Merchants, who agreed to pay ready Money for it.

Then it was further agreed in Parliament, That for the ſpeedy Sale of this Wool, and turning it into Money, as alſo of the Ninth Fleece which had been given in the laſt Parliament, the Sheriffs ſhould be commanded to ſend up from all Cities and Boroughs of their ſeveral Counties, certain Merchants, to appear before the King's Council at Weſtminſter, on the Fifteenth of Auguſt next enſuing; to treat with them about the buying the ſaid Wool in all Counties. Where the ABp of Canterbury, with ſome other Biſhops, Earls, and Barons of the King's Council, there named, treated with them, and contracted for a great

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

a great Number of Sacks of Wool; the Money to be paid at Bruges within three Weeks after, or upon the Eighth of September, or elſe upon the Feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing at the fartheſt. The Merchants of Bardeton and Pruſſia contracted for a great deal of this Wool, and engaged to pay the Money to thoſe of Louvain and Malins: And ſeveral particular Perſons are there named, both Almans and Others, that had been retained by King Edward. And the Lords of the Council ſent for divers Perſons to Account before them, and order'd them to return this Money to the King beyond Sea: But what the Reaſon was that theſe Returns were not made to the King accordingly, is hard to determine; ſome of our Writers laying the fault upon the Merchants that were to return the Money; and others, upon the Knavery or Negligence of the King's Officers; who having got theſe Wools into their Hands, did not deliver them to the Merchants, according to their Agreement. But to give ſome further Light into this Matter,

The Return of which is not made to the King accordingly.

Ib. n. 29.

^ tho not ~~then~~ Chancellor having resigned that office ~~just before the King~~ [illegible] ~~being~~ [illegible] Rot. Claus. 14 Edw. 3. p. 1. m. 13.

It appears upon the ſaid Parliament-Roll, that by the End of July, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury^ ~~then Chancellor~~, and the Treaſurer, with other Lords of the Council, finding the King very uneaſy upon Failure of the Payment of His Money, wrote over to Him, giving Him an Account of His late Subſidy; and letting Him know, that the late Grant of Twenty Thouſand Sacks of Wool, was not made until the Four and Twentieth of July by the Parliament, which was then but newly riſen; and that therefore the King and His Allies ſhould not wonder, that neither the Wool nor Money could be yet return'd; ſince certainly as much as could be raiſed of this Subſidy, ſhould be ſpeedily ſent Him, as far as the Art or Induſtry of Man could perform it. Yet, for all this, it ſeems, the King received no Part of this Money all the while He lay before Tournay, which proved the Ruin of that Deſign, and ſo far incenſed Him againſt all thoſe Miniſters of State, and other Officers who had undertaken this Charge, that He revenged it very ſeverely when He came back; as you will find hereafter. We ſhall now return to the Siege of Tournay.

The Failure of which proves the Ruin of His Deſign.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. Cap. 54. The King lays cloſe Siege to Tournay, but cannot take it by Force.

So ſoon as [3.] King Edward had ſat down with His Army before that Place, in the beginning of Auguſt, He preſently laid cloſe Siege to it with all His Forces, and then proceeded to make ſeveral vigorous Aſſaults, as well with Engines of Battery, as by Storm: But the Ciy was too well provided, both with Men and Proviſions, to be won by plain Force, or by any other way than direct Starving; which neiher the Engliſh Patience nor Money could then afford: So that all the Revenge they could take, was, that the Earl of Haynault in the mean while plunder'd and burnt all the Villages and Towns in the Adjacent Countries. Then, after a tedious Siege of above Nine Weeks, when 4.] King Philip had brought a powerful Army into the Field, and made ſeveral fruitleſs Attempts to raiſe the Siege, He was hinder'd by he Lords of His Council from coming to a Battel, which was there ofered Him: [5.] ~~Yet~~ He kept at a diſtance from the King of England's rmy, as being afraid to engage them. Nor could He be provoked to ght, tho' the Earl of Haynault and the Lords Manny and Cobham, he King's Marſhal, and other Officers, being ſent out with Parties uring the Siege, waſted the adjacent Country, and burnt Three undred Cities, Towns, and Villages, within Six Leagues round Tournay:

[4.] Id. ib. c. 57. K. Philip attempts in vain to raiſe the Siege, and is hinder'd from coming to a Battel.

[5.] T. W.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

Both Kings being weary of War, the Counteſs-Dowager of Haynault mediates a Truce between them; which is concluded by Commiſſioners on both ſides.

[6.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 64.

Tournay; and killed many Barons and Knights belonging to the French Army, beſides Common Soldiers. So that both Kings began now to be weary of the War; the French, from the Deſpair He had to relieve the Town without Fighting the Engliſh Army, which He did not think Safe; and the Engliſh, becauſe His Returns of Money fail'd Him, wherewith to pay His Army; and further, for that (as Villani the Italian Hiſtorian relates) the Duke of Brabant being bribed by King Philip, and not deſiring that ſo Conſiderable a City ſhould fall into the Hands of the Engliſh, asked leave of King Edward to depart; [6.] whereupon, the Lady Jane of Valois, Counteſs-Dowager of Haynault, (Siſter to King Philip, and at that time a profeſs'd Nun in the Abbey of Fountain au Tartres) offer'd her Mediation between theſe two Princes, her Brother and Son-in-law; and being alſo urged by Letters from the Pope, (who ſent two Cardinal-Legates for that purpoſe) King Edward conſented to a Truce until Midſummer next enſuing. To conclude which, and draw it up into Articles, [1.] the Commiſſioners appointed for the King of England, were, the Duke of Brabant, the Duke of Gueldres, the Marquiſs of Juliers, and John de Haynault Lord of Beaumont; thoſe for the King of France, were John King of Bohemia and Earl of Luxenburgh, Adolph Biſhop of Liege, Ralph Duke of Lorain, Arnè Earl of Savoy, and John Earl of Arminiac: Who, after ſome time of Debate and Conſideration, concluded a Truce between the Two Kings and their Allies, upon the enſuing Articles, viz.

[1.] H. K. Col. 2578. Chron. Rob. Aveſ. C. 34.

^ Amadé

1. That no Prejudice or Injury ſhould be done by either Party to the other, during the Truce and Reſpite.

2. That the Two Kings, their Adherents and Confederates, whoſoever they were, ſhould remain, during the ſaid Truce, in the ſame Poſſeſſion and Seizin they were in at that time, of all Goods, Lands and Poſſeſſions, which they held, or had acquired any manner of way.

3. That during the ſaid Truce, the Two Kings, their Aſſiſtants and Confederates, whoever they were, might ſafely go out of one Country into another; and the Merchants, with all manner of Merchandize and all other People with their Goods, might go and come, as well by Land as Sea, as freely as they uſed to do at other times; paying their Paſſage-Money, and Tolls, and Cuſtoms, as antiently due. And the Barons and others of Gaſcoigne, and in the Dutchy of Guyenne, were to be compriſed in this Article.

4. That neither of the Kings ſhould procure, or cauſe to be procured, by Themſelves or Others, any Prejudice to be done to the Other, His Friends or Allies, by the Church of Rome, or others of Holy Church, whatever they were; nor to their Lands or Subjects, by reaſon of the War, or any other Cauſe; nor for the Service the Allies and Aſſiſtants of both Kings had done, or that ſhould be done for either of them: And if their moſt Holy Father the Pope, or Others, ſhould offer to do ſo, both Kings might oppoſe them to the utmoſt of their Powers, without doing ill, during the Truce.

5. All Priſoners of War on both ſides ſhould be releaſed during the Truce, upon their Paroles, to return again to Priſon when it was ended.

6. That

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

6. That there ſhould be a Truce between the Engliſh and Scots for the ſame time, and certain perſons were to be appointed upon the Borders of each Kingdom to ſee it obſerved, upon ſuch Conditions as had been formerly; which if the Scots refuſed, the King of France was not to aſſiſt 'em with Forces, nor any other ways to relieve or encourage them: And it was further agreed, That this Truce ſhould be notify'd or proclaim'd in England and Scotland ſix and twenty days after the date thereof. This was confirm'd and ſeal'd with the Seals of the Commiſſioners on both ſides, in the Church of Eſpetelyn, on Monday the twenty fifth of September, in the Year of Grace 1340, and was afterwards ratify'd by both Kings.

[1.] There was alſo a private or ſeparate Agreement then concluded by all Parties at this Treaty, that both Kings ſhould ſend four or five Commiſſioners to treat further of a firm and laſting Peace between them; of which you will find more by and by.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib. C. 64.

But I cannot here omit, that during the late Siege of Tournay [2.] the Confederate Princes met with another piece of Ill Succeſs, which much accelerated the late Truce, and it was thus: The Lord Robert of Artois had at the ſame time undertaken the Siege of St. Omer's, and tho attended by an Army of above forty thouſand Men, was yet nevertheleſs forced not long after to raiſe it to his no ſmall diſgrace; but it did not happen, as Froiſſart relates, from a Panick Fright that then aroſe in the Flemiſh Army on the News of the ſudden approach of the French, nor from any Mutiny againſt the Lord Robert of Artois, their Leader, as our Hiſtorians will have it, but rather as [3.] ſome of the French Writers more truly report, from the Flemiſh Army's being made up of Tradeſmen and Artificers from divers Cities and Towns of Flanders, who were under no Diſcipline, and would not obey their Commanders; but when they were brought to aſſault a Trench that was newly caſt up by the Beſiegd for their defence, they not only refuſed to do it, but retreated to their Camp without ſtriking a Stroke; This being obſerved by the Duke of Burgundy, and the Earl of Armigniac, who then commanded within the City, they took freſh Courage, and ſally'd out upon the Flemings with all the Forces they could ſpare; which had ſo good an effect, that tho' Robert De Artois the Flemiſh General, and thoſe about him behaved themſelves very well, yet his Men being raw and undiſciplin'd, were ſoon routed, and he forced to retreat to his Camp, with the loſs of near four thouſand Men; and, finding that alſo deſerted, he was forced to retire in the Night to Caſſel, and from thence removed to Ipres, ſo that his Army being broken, he could do no more in thoſe Parts. From thence He marched with all the Forces he had left to the aſſiſtance of King Edward, who ſtill lay before Tournay, though their arrival did Him but little ſervice, for He was forced to riſe from before that Place, as you have already heard. But to return to the preſent Affair:

[2.] Id. ib.

[3.] Chron. Fran. MS.

The raiſing this Siege, and the Defeat of the Flemiſh Army was certainly a great Diſappointment to King Edward's Deſigns, and all He then gain'd by it, was, that the Officers and ſome of the Soldiers who had been at St. Omers, came to reinforce His Army; albeit to little purpoſe, ſince by the raiſing both theſe Sieges, and making the Truce beforementioned, it is evident the French King gain'd a great advantage,

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

for He not only ſaved both theſe Cities from being taken, but by this means ſo broke all King Edward's Meaſures, that He not long after made the Emperor and the Confederate Princes of Germany to fall off from His Party, when they found He could do them no farther Service.

A Brief Account of the Affairs of Scotland for three Years paſt.

[4.] *H.K.*Col. 1580.

1 under the Command of the Earls of March & Sothirland invaded &c

2 had not S[illegible] Grey met with them, & gave them a repulse and allso the following Truce &c

If we look back into England, we ſhall find the King's Affairs to have been unſucceſsful this Summer, in relation to Scotland, where King Baliol being but weakly aſſiſted by King Edward, could not recover what He had loſt; [4.] all that He could do, was only to make ſome ſlight Excurſions into Scotland, attended by the Earl of Angus, the Lord Piercy, and other Noblemen, with no great Forces: But in revenge, whilſt King Edward lay before Tournay, the Scots invaded England, and plunder'd and burnt the Countrey as far as Durham, and had done much more miſchief had not the Truce been made between England and France, in which the Scots were included, and all further Hoſtility ceaſed for a time.

[1.] Hec. Boeth. l. 16. Buchan. l. 9.

But ſince the Relation of the Affairs abroad hath hindred me from ſpeaking any thing of Scotland till now, I will here give you from Her Hiſtorians a Brief Account of what happened there for theſe three Years laſt paſt; [1.] during which time King Edward, being wholly taken up with the War againſt France, could not ſpare any Forces conſiderable to aſſiſt King Baliol; by which means, upon the Death of the Lord Murrey, who had been Vice-Roy to King David, the Lord Robert Stewart, the King's Nephew, was choſen in his Place; by whoſe Conduct (whilſt King Edward was thus employ'd abroad) moſt of the Strong and Conſiderable Places of Scotland were again reduced to K. David's Allegiance, together with the greateſt part of the Country: For firſt Sir William Douglas recovered all Tividale, and likewiſe overthrew the Lord John Striveling at Craging, won the Caſtle of Hermitage, baffled Sir Laurence Vaux, and took Sir William Abernethie Priſoner, being at that time ſent by the Lord Robert Stewart into France to King David, to requeſt His Orders and Aſſiſtance, becauſe a War was expected from England.

The Lord Robert Stewart is made Vice-Roy of Scotland, and reduces divers ſtrong Places to the Allegiance of K. David.

In the mean while the Lord Robert beſieged Perthe, which was by the Engliſh vigorouſly defended againſt him for the ſpace of ten Weeks; but the Lord Douglas arriving on the ſudden from France, bringing with him into the Tay five Ships well furniſhed with Men, Arms and Ammunition, Sir Thomas Ughtred the Governor, not being able to hold out any longer, was forced to ſurrender the Place, tho upon honourable Conditions; by which great Succeſs King Baliol's Party in Scotland was reduced ſo low, that for want of Succours from England He was forced to quit His Kingdom, and take refuge here; tho the Scotiſh Writers relate, that He was brought hither by King Edward before His War with France, either for His greater Security, or hoping by His Removal to keep the Scots more at quiet; or elſe out of ſuſpicion of His Loyalty.

The French King ſends Supplies of Men and Money into Scotland.

Whilſt King Edward lay at the Siege of Tournay, the French King ſent new Supplies of Men and Money into Scotland, inciting the Lord Robert Stewart to make War upon England, that ſo by ſuch a Diverſion King Edward might be forced to quit the Siege; upon which the Scots taking heart, not only won many Fortreſſes in Scotland, but alſo adventured in ſeveral great Bodies to enter England, where they deſtroy'd the Country in the manner already related: In ſhort, they did make ſuch good uſe of King Edward's Abſence, that [2.] by this time there was ſcarce any place of moment left untaken, except Berwick, Striveling, Roxburgh, and Edinburgh, the Caſtle of which Town being ſeated on a high Rock, and reckoned the ſtrongeſt place in all Scotland, [3.] was not long after ſurprized and taken by a Stratagem, through the ſubtile Contrivance of Sir William Douglas, and Sir Simon Frazer, who feigning themſelves to be Merchants that had brought Wine, Coals and other Proviſions for the Caſtle, were brought up to the Gates by a great many of their Party diſguiſed like Clowns, and by ham-ſtringing two of the Horſes directly in the Gate-way, they ſurpriſed and killed the Porter; from whom Douglas taking the Keys, let in his Companions that ſtood without, and ſo falling ſuddenly upon the Gariſon, put them all to the Sword, except a few Engliſh Gentlemen who were kept Priſoners. This Loſs happening whilſt the King lay before Tournay, an Account of it was carried thither to Him, at which He was very much troubled.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 55.

[3.] Buchan. ib.

The Caſtle of Edinburgh taken by ſurprize.

Theſe being the Chief Actions that happened in Scotland during the ſpace of three Years laſt paſt, I have here put together without ſetting down the exact time when each of them was done, becauſe the uncertain and contradictory Accounts and falſe Computations of the Scotiſh Writers render it as impoſſible, as it is unneceſſary to be known.

[2.] We ſhall now look back into Flanders, where ſo ſoon as the Siege of Tournay was over, King Edward returned again to Gaunt, where He was joyfully received by His Queen; and here He ſtaid for about two Months to ſettle His Affairs, ſtill waiting for a Supply of Money out of England; of which when He found Himſelf wholly diſappointed, He was forced at laſt privately to return home in order to raiſe it, for payment of the great Debts He had contracted in this late Expedition.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib.

The King returns to Gaunt, where He ſtays till His going into England.

But ſeeing, as well before that, as after it, the Pope had very much beſtirr'd Himſelf to make Peace between the Two Kings, I ſhall here inſert the Letters that paſſed between His Holineſs and King Edward, which tho of great Moment, yet could not, by reaſon of other Affairs, be inſerted in their Proper Places, without breaking the Thrid of the Hiſtory; therefore I ſhall now give you them all together, that the Reader may ſee the Inclinations of the Pope and Court of Rome, and their Partiality to the French Intereſt.

An Account of this Year's Tranſactions between the Pope and King Edward.

[3.] In the beginning of this Year, ſo ſoon as King Edward came to Gaunt, He wrote to the Pope to give Him an Account of His aſſuming the Arms and Title of King of France, and the Reaſon why He had ſo done, viz. ‘Becauſe the Lord Philip of Valois, Couſin German to the ‘late King Charles, (and thereby one Degree removed further from that ‘Crown than King Edward) had during His Minority, by Force and U‘ſurpation intruded Himſelf into that Throne: Then the King concludes ‘with great Profeſſions, how ready He ſhould be at all times to preſerve ‘the Good Laws and Cuſtoms of that Kingdom, and not to oppreſs it ‘by change of Coin, or any Inordinate Exactions, and alſo how willing ‘He ſhould be to accept of a Peace, for the Recovery of the Holy-Land, ‘were it not that the ſaid Lord Philip raiſed War againſt Him, and would ‘not condeſcend to any Reaſonable Conditions of Peace. This bears

[3.] Odoric. Raynold. ad hunc Ann. §. 4.

The King writes to the Pope to juſtifie His Proceedings againſt the French King.

Date

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

Date at Guant the Eighth of February, in the firſt Year of His Reign over France, and the Fourteenth over England.

[2.] Id. ib. The Pope's Anſwer to this Letter.

‘[2.] To this Letter the Pope not long after return'd an Anſwer, wherein He more plainly than ever before declared Himſelf of the French King's ſide; for after having blamed the King of England's Conduct in aſſuming the Arms and Title of France, as proceeding from Evil and Unrighteous Councils, He farther reproves Him, That under the Pretence of being Supreme Lord of Flanders, He had joined with the Flemings, who had never been noted either for Conſtancy or Loyalty, and who had often rejected their own Natural Lords.

‘He then bids Him conſider His Imprudence in taking the Title abovementioned, which indeed belonged to King Philip, as having been many Years poſſeſſed of it, and who had been recognized by King Edward Himſelf in His doing Homage to Him; ſo that thoſe who hear theſe things, will aſcribe what the King had done to meer Simplicity or Vanity; ſince, if it be well conſidered, ſuch a Title wanting both Reality and Advantage, the taking of it muſt have proceeded from the fault of thoſe Men who only ſeek their own Profit, tho never ſo much to the King's Loſs and Detriment. And then deſires Him further to reflect how much He had thereby provoked the Kings and Princes who were now confederated againſt Him, and thereby rendred the Concluſion of any Peace between Him and the King of France impracticable; ſince the Princes, Nobles and Subjects of that Kingdom would rather expoſe themſelves to death and loſs of Eſtates, than ever accept of Him, as claiming by that Title He had ſet up. Nor ought He to repoſe much Confidence in the Germans and Flemings, for tho they ſeemd ſo kind for the preſent, yet He would find them Broken Reeds, not to be at all rely'd upon, when once they had drained Him of His Money; the truth of which He would quickly find, if He pleas'd but to peruſe the Actions of His Progenitors, where He would ſee how the Germans and Flemings had dealt with them upon the like Occaſions.

‘He then concludes with an earneſt Exhortation, That He would receive what He had written with a favourable Mind, and ſeriouſly conſidering it, would lay aſide the aforeſaid empty Title, and incline His mind to Peace and Concord, whereby He might obtain thoſe things which appear to be His Right, and that a mutual Agreement being made between Him and the ſaid King, as they were nearly allied by Blood, ſo they may be united in the perpetual Bond of Love and Confederation. Dated at Avignon Tertio Non. Martii, Anno Pontiff VI.

[4.] Id. ib. § 8. He again admoniſhes Him to break off His Alliance with the Emperor.

‘[4.] And the Pope at the ſame time wrote other Letters to the King, wherein He chid Him, That notwithſtanding His having been admoniſhed the laſt Year, that under penalty of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, He ſhould break off His Alliance with Lewis of Bavaria, that is, the Emperor, (for the Pope would not own Him as ſuch) and concerning which He had hitherto returned Him no Anſwer; and therefore He now deſired ſpeedily to know His Reſolution concerning it. This bears Date at Avignon, the ſame Day with the former.

‘And Anno Dom.

MCCCXL.

[5.] Id. ib. §.8

‘And [5.] it further appears from the ſame Author, that upon the King's deferring to declare Himſelf, and renounce the Emperor's Friendſhip, thoſe very Cardinals that had been lately Mediators of the Peace, wrote to the Pope, that thoſe Cenſures He had once threat'ned the King withal, ought now to be inflicted on Him; becauſe He ſtill retained the Vicarſhip of the Empire. But the Pope did not come to that Height of Severity, but wrote back to them to forbear ſuch ſevere Proceedings, until He, together with the Cardinals, had more maturely weighed ſo important an Affair. And, before things went thus far, we ſhall find the Emperor Himſelf to have repealed His Commiſſion granted to King Edward; ſo that there was no further Occaſion for the Pope to come to that Extremity.

[1.] Id. ib. The K. ſends two Italians as Envoys to the Pope, with their Inſtructions.

Moreover, [1.] King Edward being reſolved to juſtifie His Right the Crown of France, whilſt He reſided at Gaunt, employ'd two alians, Nicholas de Fliſco, and Andrew his Son, as Envoys to the ope, with theſe following Inſtructions. Firſt, ‘They were to ſet forth the King's Title to that Crown. Secondly, They were to anſwer all Objections that could be made againſt it, in reſpect of His having done Homage to King Philip, and thereby acknowledged Him Rightful K. of France; as alſo that Main Objection, of His being deſcended by a Female, and thereby made incapable of Succeeding to the Crown of that Kingdom: And that the French Nation had done Him no Injuſtice, ſince they had already ſet aſide ſome Nephews and Grandchildren of the late Kings, Lewis and Philip, Elder Brothers to Charles the Fair. All which, ſince they are much the ſame in the Objections and Anſwers, expreſs'd in the King's firſt Letter to the Pope, I ſhall here aſs over; only to the laſt Objection, the Ambaſſadors were order'd to eply, ‘That, tho' it is true, that there were ſeveral Daughters born to the ſaid Kings, ſome of whom had Sons, yet thoſe were all dead without Iſſue: And as for the two Daughters of the late K. Charles, King Edward claim'd to Succeed before them, as being the neareſt Kinſman to His late Uncle King Charles; whoſe Daughters being themſelves incapable to Succeed, were alſo then without any Heirs-Male.

[2.] Id. ib.

Theſe Inſtructions were ſent by [2.] Nich. de Fliſco, and his Son Andrew above-mentioned, and were followed by other Letters from the ing to the Pope, Sealed with the Arms of England and France; which ad been ſent before, but that He could not get this New Seal ſoonr made.

I cannot here omit taking notice, that whilſt theſe Envoys remain'd t Avignon, certain Bold and Wicked Men thinking to curry Favour ith the King of France, broke into their Lodgings by Night, and iſing on their Perſons, hurried them away into the French Territories. But as ſoon as ever the Pope heard of it, He wrote to the ing of France, demanding to have the ſaid Envoys return'd Safe to vignon, or elſe He would put His Kingdom under an Interdict. Upon which, Philip return'd Anſwer, that He was utterly ignorant f the Fact, andhad given Orders to make a ſtrict Search for them, and o carry them back from whence they were taken, which was done ccordingly: And the Pope was ſo exact in His Juſtice, that He cauſed everal of His own Family to be hanged, whom He found had a hand n this Violence. This, tho' it happened towards the latter end of this

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

this Year I have inſerted here, that ſo I might put all things concernin this Affair together.

[3.] Id. ib. ad hunc An. § 37. The K. writes again to the Pope, to thank Him for His Endeavours to procure a Peace.

I ſhall now return to King Edward, who whilſt He continued a Gaunt, long before His Departure for England, wrote another Letter t the Pope; wherein [3.] ‘He thanked Him for His Diligence in endeavouring a Peace between the two Realms, which He Himſelf alſo highly deſired; that thereby He might be at Liberty to proſecute th Holy-War againſt the Common Enemies of Chriſtendom. Then He declared, how, at the importunate Inſtances of ſome Great Perſons, (as well as His Holineſs's Interceſſion) He had accordingly condeſcended t a Truce, even then when He had almoſt reduced Tournay to the laſ Extremity: And yet, that upon Sight of His Holineſs's Letters, He had prolonged the Term of the ſaid Truce, that thereby H might give Him fuller Information of His own Intentions, and alſo of the Equity of His Cauſe; requiring thereupon His Advice which He ſhould be ſtill ready to embrace. Alſo, that He had ſen His Envoys to the Apoſtolick See, to return Thanks to His Holineſs, for His Diligence in obtaining the Liberty of Nicholas de Fliſco; deſiring God Almighty to preſerve His Holineſs in the Government o His Holy Church, many and happy Days. Dated at Gaunt the Nineteenth of November, in the Firſt Year of His Reign over France, an the Fourteenth over England.

* Rot. Pat. 15 Ed. 3. m.

*About the ſame time, He ſent to His Holineſs the following Juſtification of Himſelf and His Cauſe, by certain Commiſſioners who were appointed for that purpoſe, viz. William of Norwich Dean of Lincoln, John Ufford Archdeacon of Ely, and Thomas Thoresby Chanon of Southwell, who declared on the Behalf of their Lord the King, His ſincere Intentions to accept of a Peace: In order to which, they thought i neceſſary, truly to repreſent to His Holineſs the State of the Matte of Fact. As Firſt, ‘The Lord Philip's Uſurping the Realm of France, and, to hinder King Edward from proſecuting His Right, had aſſiſted the Scots againſt Him; as alſo, by unjuſtly ſeiſing ſeveral Places in the Dutchy of Guienne; ſo that the King, being then under Age, and unexperienc'd, had not (till of late) taken any Courſe to proſecute His Right to the ſaid Kingdom of France: Yet deſiring Peace and Quiet, He had already offer'd the Lord Philip, for the Recovery o the ſaid Dutchy, and for His forbearing to aſſiſt the Scots, theſe following Conditions: Firſt, The Marriage of His Eldeſt Son with a Daughter of the Lord Philip, without any Dowry. Secondly, The Marriage of His own Siſter, now Lady of Gueldres, with a Son of the ſaid Lord Philip, with a Great Portion. Thirdly, The Marriage of His own Brother, the Earl of Cornwal, (deceaſed) with any Siſter or Kinſwoman of His. Fourthly, To redeem the Seiſure of His Lands, He had offer'd unto Him a Sum of Money, to be adjuſted at the Diſcretion of the ſaid Lord Philip. Fifthly, Becauſe the ſaid Lord Philip pretended that He would croſs the Seas to the Aid of the Holy-Land, their ſaid Lord the King, out of the great Zeal He always had, and ſtill hath to undertake this Expedition, offer'd to accompany Him thither, and to grant the Scots a Reaſonable Truce; on condition, that the ſaid Philip would faithfully promiſe Him, after His Return, to do Him full Right and Juſtice, as to the Dutchy of Guienne. But He deſpiſing and rejecting all theſe Reaſonable Conditions, proudly anſwered, That He would 'do nothing, until He had given to the Scots full Satisfaction for all Places which, in His time, had been taken by Force in Scotland. And when King Edward's Ambaſſadors anſwered, That as to this Point, they were not impowered to make any Return, nor did they believe their Lord the King would agree to it: To this the Lord Philip immediately replyed, That it would never be well, until there was one King of both the Realms of France and England; (thereby meaning Himſelf.) This the Archbiſhop of Canterbury declared publickly at his Return from France, before a great number of Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others.

Then they proceeded further to ſet forth, 'That the King having Summoned a Parliament, it was there, by the Advice and Conſent of all the Eſtates of the Kingdom, decreed and ordain'd, That ſince by humble and moderate Ways He could not obtain Peace, and that by the Judgment and Deciſion of divers Doctors and Advocates, as well of the Court of Rome, as of the Students at Paris and Oxford, and eſpecially of the moſt Learned and Expert Prelates of England, by all whom He had cauſed His Right to be carefully diſcuſs'd; It had appear'd to them, that the ſaid Kingdom of France, was, by the Death of His Uncle, the late Lord King Charles, lawfully devolved upon Him by Right of Succeſſion as next Heir-Male; therefore, that He might lawfully proſecute His ſaid Right by Force.

[5.] Id. ib.
A Brief Relation of what had been tranſacted in England before the King's laſt going over.

'And [5.] that it was therein further ordain'd, that thoſe Alliances ſhould be made in Almaign, which were ſince concluded by the Biſhop of Lincoln and ſeveral Noblemen of England. Then, after a ſhort Account of the making of thoſe Alliances, they proceeded to ſet forth the King's Voyage beyond Sea, His late War upon France, with His Return out of Flanders; and how in His Paſſage over thither again, He had been ſet upon by the French Fleet, which He had deſtroyed: And that upon the Confidence of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Promiſe, of furniſhing Him with Money ſufficient, He had then gone over quite unprovided of any, and ſat down before the City of Tournay; where not having yet received any for the Payment of His Forces, He had been forced to raiſe the Siege, and agree to a Truce, when the Place was near being taken. And theſe Commiſſioners further reported, as they had it from the King's own Mouth, that the ſaid Archbiſhop had not only been negligent in the Return of His Moneys, but had alſo endeavoured to ſtir up Variance and Diſcord between Him and the Queen, by ſpeaking to Each of them to the Prejudice of the Other, if Credit had been given to what he had ſaid. As to theſe laſt Points, the Commiſſioners deſired the Pope would be pleaſed to keep them Secret; but as for the reſt, He might publiſh them, if He thought fit.

[1.] Id. ib.
King Edward's Commands & Reſolutions expreſſed by His Commiſſioners.

Then [1.] the Envoys went on, and declared King Edward's Demands and Reſolutions, which were to this effect: 'That tho' He challenged the whole Realm of France as His Right, devolved to Him by Hereditary Succeſſion, yet that out of Reverence to His Holineſs, He was ſtill ready to treat of Peace; provided that in the ſaid Treaty, Conſideration might be had to His Claim to the ſaid Kingdom; and not only concerning the Dutchy of Guienne, with which, being His own already, He ſhould not ſit down contented tho' He might

Anno Dom. MCCCXL

‘have it free from all Service and Subjection to any one. Then they ‘further offer'd the Pope on the King's behalf, That out of His great ‘Confidence, and the Reverence He had for Him, He was willing to ‘accept of His Holineſs's Mediation in Perſon, ſince He had already ‘offer'd it by His Letters, if Deputies from both Parties might be ‘ſent unto His Court for that purpoſe.

[2.] Id ib. § 38. The Pope adviſes the King to be more moderate in His Demands.

[2.] ‘These were the King's ultimate Propoſals, made at ‘that time to the Pope; who ſeeing there was no likelihood ‘of bringing theſe Princes to any final Agreement upon thoſe ‘Terms, but rather that K. Philip would, upon the hearing of them, ‘be more incenſed than before; He therefore adviſed the King to be ‘more moderate in His Demands; for that the King of France was ſo ‘far from granting ſo much, that in His laſt Letters to Him, He had ‘only offer'd the Reſtitution of thoſe Lands in Aquitain, which had ‘been forcibly taken by His Father Charles of Valois, in the time of ‘King Charles the Fair, when the late King Edward refus'd to come ‘over and do Him Homage; as alſo thoſe Places that the preſent King ‘had lately ſeiſed into His Hands.

Commiſſioners agreed on to be ſent to Arras, to treat of a General Peace.

I have been more particular in relating all the Points of this Negotiation, not only becauſe they are to be found in no other Author, except the above-cited Odoricus Raynoldus, but alſo that it lays before the Reader all the Proceedings in that great Difference between theſe two Kings, and what made it almoſt impoſſible for them ever to come to any Agreement. So that all that could be done in this Conjuncture, was, that (according to the Agreement at the laſt Treaty for the Truce) both the Kings ſent Five Commiſſioners to meet at Arras; whither alſo the Biſhop of Rome ſent two Legates: And theſe being all met together, were to conſult and agree upon the Beſt and moſt Equal Conditions, for eſtabliſhing a Firm and Laſting Peace.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. Cap. 64.

They can come to no Agreement, but only to prolong the Truce for about a Year and a half.

* Rot. Alman. 15 Ed. 3 m. 7.

[3] In Complyance to which, the Pope (not as a Judge, but a Common Friend and Mediator) impowered the Cardinals of Naples and Clermont, as His Legates; Who going firſt to Paris, and having conferr'd with the French King, went from thence to Arras, attended by His Commiſſioners or Plenipotentiaries, who were, Charles de Valois Earl of Alençon, King Philip's Brother; Peter Duke of Bourbon, Lewis Earl of Flanders, Guy de Caſtilion Earl of Blois, the Archbiſhop of Sens, the Biſhop of Beauvois, and the Biſhop of Auxerre; and they were met by Seven of King Edward's Delegates, who were, Henry Burwaſh Biſhop of Lincoln, Richard Bury Biſhop of Durham, Henry Plantagenet Earl of Derby, Thomas Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, the Lord Robert of Artois, Sir John of Haynault Lord of Beaumont, and Sir Henry Earne of Flanders: All theſe held a Treaty at Arras for Fifteen Days together, but could come to no Agreement as to a laſting Peace; for the Engliſh Demands were too high, and the French Conceſſions too low, they yielding to nothing but the Surrendring the Earldom of Ponthieu, and thoſe other Places in Aquitain, which were already the King's Right. So all that then could be done, was, by ſeveral Meetings, to continue the Truce one Year and half longer; viz. according to our * Records, Firſt, to the Twenty Ninth of Auguſt next enſuing, and from thence it was prolonged to the Fourteenth of September, and from that time till Midſummer, in the Year 1341. ^x which does not amount to full two Years, as Froiſſart makes it: But it is no great x which last Truce was made by the means and mediation of John King of Bohemia, Arnulf Bp. of Leige Ralph Duke of Lorrain and ~~John~~ Aymé the Count of Savoy and John Count d'Arminiak: as appears by a Copy in Cotton Library Otho E. II. f. 113. vid: Rd. Coll: p. 205. to 209. which was likewise [illegible] by King Edward for the sd. Term. as appears by the Kings writ to the [illegible] Kent, Rot: Claus: 14 Ed: 3. m. 32. d. vid: Rd. Coll: above mentioned: dated Oct. 6. this year great matter how long or ſhort the time was, ſince before it was expired, the War broke out again, as you will find anon. So ſoon as this Truce was again renew'd and confirmed for the time beforementioned, the Aſſembly broke up, and the Cardinal Legates at the Lord John of Haynault's Deſire, went homeward through his Countrey, where by him and the Earl his Nephew they were nobly treated.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

[5.] Lewis Earl of Flanders being by virtue of this late Truce reſtored to his Countrey, now came to viſit King Edward, whilſt He continued at Gaunt, where the two Princes, tho lately Enemies, feaſted each other very magnificently; however, the King could take but little Pleaſure in thoſe Recreations, being very uneaſie by reaſon of His Great Debts which He had contracted for the laſt Summer's War, having not been able to receive any Money out of England, as He had long expected: wherefore finding it abſolutely neceſſary to look into this Affair Himſelf, and to ſee where the fault lay that He was no better ſerv'd, He reſolved to go over into England; in order to which [1.] He went privately firſt to Zealand, where He ſoon after took Shipping with only His Queen, and eight more Perſons of Quality in His Company; but upon the Sea He met with a very Violent Storm, which laſted for three days together, inſomuch that both He and all that were with Him were in extreme danger of periſhing; however at laſt the Storm being happily abated, * He landed ſafe on the 30th of November, about Two in the Morning at the Tower of London, with His Queen and ſome few Perſons of Quality.

[5.] Holingſhed. Chron 912.

The Earl of Flanders returns home, and is treated by K Edward.

The King reſolves to return privately into England.

[1.] Stow. in hunc Ann.

The King Lands at the Tower.

* Rot. Clauſ. 14 Ed. 3. part. 2. m. 12. dorſ.

* [illegible] in the mouth of the River of [illegible]

Upon [2.] the King's entring the Tower, He found no Guard there, only His Children and a few Servants that waited on them; wherefore in great Anger He preſently ſent for the Lord Nicholas de la Beche, Conſtable of the Tower, and committed him to cloſe Confinement in the ſaid Place; as alſo He ſerved Andrew Aubrey, Mayor of London, the Lord Thomas Wake, Sir John St. Paul, Keeper of the Great Seal, Sir John Stonore, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, Michael Wath, Henry Stratford, and Robert Chickwel, Clerks of the Chancery, and Philip Thorp, Clerk of the Exchequer, all whom, having been concerned in raiſing or receiving the late Subſidies, He ſent for and impriſoned in the Tower. The [3] King alſo ſent and ſeized the Bp of Chicheſter His Chancellor, and the Bp. of Litchfield and Coventry His Lord Treaſurer, whom He put out of their Offices, and then impriſoned them for a while, yet durſt not detain them for fear of the Clementine Conſtitution, forbidding Bps to be impriſoned.

[2.] T. W. Ad hunc Ann.

He commits many of His Great Officers Priſoners to the Tower. And Impriſons the Bps of Chicheſter and Litchfield, but dares not detain them.

[3] Antiq. Britan. p. 213. Edit. Hanov.

The [4] next Morning after the King's Arrival, He ſent to Lambeth for the ABp. of Canterbury, but he was removed from thence the day before, and being afraid of the Storm he heard was like to fall upon him, on the Third of December removed to Canterbury, thinking himſelf ſafeſt there from the K's Diſpleaſure. But ſo ſoon as He heard where he was gone, He ſent the Lord Nicholas de Cantelupe with Letters of Credence, who in the King's Name warned the ABp before a Publick Notary, and declared, That whereas he ſtood bound to Foreign Merchants, under pain of forfeiting his Goods, to ſee ſuch Sums diſcharged as the King had borrowed for maintenance of His Wars; and that He having been diſappointed of thoſe Moneys, for the raiſing of which He had wholly rely'd upon the ABp's fair Promiſes, and that [4.] Vid Ang. Sacra. 1 Vol. f. 21 to 25.

The ABp of Canterbury being afraid of the K's Diſpleaſure, removes to his own See. The K. ſends the Lord Cantelupe to him with a ſevere Meſſage, and the ABp's Anſwer.

Anno Dom. MCCCXL.

this Diſappointment had reduced Him and His Army to great Streights and Neceſſities; wherefore the King's Will was, That he the ABp ſhould preſently pay thoſe Sums of Money, or elſe go over into Flanders to anſwer the Creditors, and to remain there in cuſtody till the Money was paid; and to this the Lord Cantelupe deſired the Lord ABp's immediate Anſwer: But he could not be perſuaded to it, and required ſome longer time to return an Anſwer to a Matter of ſo great Moment and Conſequence.

Theſe Meſſages between the King and him took up all the reſt of this Year.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

[5.] Id. ib. The ABp's firſt Letter to the King. [1.] T.W.

[5.] But when the Archbiſhop ſaw that by the K's Exorbitant Demands upon him, not only his Eſtate, but his Good Name was in danger; tho he did not think it ſafe to go to the King whilſt He was under that Paſſion, yet preſently after Chriſtmas he wrote Him a long Epiſtle, [1.] wherein he admoniſh'd Him to 'Take better Advice, and 'make uſe of Good and Able Counſellors, and to remember, that by 'Evil Counſel His Father had, contrary to the Laws of the Land, and 'Magna Charta, impriſoned divers Great Men, and adjudged others of 'them to death, ſeized their Eſtates, or put them to grievous Ranſom, 'and what happened to Himſelf for this Cauſe. He alſo put Him in 'mind, That by the Prudence and Diſcretion of the Prelates and other 'Wiſe Men of the Nation, His Own Affairs had proſper'd, ſo that He 'had won the Hearts of the People, and had met with more Aſſiſtance 'from the Clergy and Laiety than any of His Progenitors whomſoever; 'but at preſent, by the Evil Council of ſome about Him, who loved 'their own Profit more than His Honour, or the Safety of the People, 'He had impriſoned Clerks and Others againſt the Laws of the Land, 'His Coronation Oath, and againſt the Great Charter; the Infringers 'whereof were, by the Prelates of England, and the Pope's Bull (which 'he had by him) excommunicated; which things the King had done to 'the great danger of His Soul, and detriment of His State and Honour. 'He then tells Him, He had pronounced Excommunicate all ſuch about 'Him that were Favourers of Treaſon, Flatterers of, and Impoſers up'on Him; and, as His Spiritual Father, beſeeched Him to hold them as 'ſuch; ſome of whom, by their Sloth and Ill Service and Advice had 'loſt Tournay: Then beſought Him to call together the Prelates, Great 'Men, and Peers of the Land, to look and enquire into the Miſchiefs of 'the State, and in whoſe hands the Wool, Moneys, and other things 'then remained, which ſince the beginning of the War had been gran'ted to Him for maintaining thereof; and by what means, and through 'whoſe default He loſt Tournay, and to puniſh the Offenders in all 'things according to Law. And as to what concern'd him, Saving al'ways the Eſtate of Holy-Church, and his Own Order, he was ready in 'all Points to ſubmit to the Judgment of His Peers. This Letter was dated at Canterbury the firſt of January this Year.

[2] Id. ib. Ang. Sacra. The Subſtance of his Letter to the new Lord Chancellor.

rcher

'In [2.] the ſame Month he wrote to Sir Robert Boughier a Lay-man, 'who had been lately made Chancellor in the room of the Biſhop of 'Chicheſter, That he ſhould preſerve the Liberties of Holy Church and 'the Laws entire, and he let him know, that a Ninth had been levy'd 'and diſtrain'd for, upon Prelates and others of the Clergy, who were 'not bound to pay it; and alſo the Tenth was exacted on ſuch as were 'only bound to pay a Ninth; thereby oppreſſing the Clergy againſt all

'Juſtcie;

Juſtice; exhorting and requiring him in the Lord, not to permit the Religious and Clergy to pay otherwiſe than according to the Form of the Grant of theſe Taxes; nor to give his Advice or Aſſent to any thing in prejudice of the Great Charter, or that might tend to the ſubverſion of Church Liberties; declaring, if he ſhould make out any Writ, Commiſſion or Precept to that purpoſe, he would not neglect to exerciſe ſuch Power as Holy Church had committed to him.

[3.] Nor did the ABp ſtop here, but growing yet bolder, he again wrote to the King and His Council, wherein he lets them know, ‘that as ABp and the Pope's Legat, he had declar'd all thoſe that do arreſt Clerks, put them in priſon, and detain them againſt their Wills, Excommunicated by the Canon; which Sentence he publiſhed in the Church of Canterbury, and cauſed it likewiſe to be publiſhed by all his Brother Suffragans or Bps of that Province; after the Denunciation of which Sentence, ſeveral Clerks (there named) were taken and impriſoned, to the prejudice of God and Holy Church, againſt the Laws and Priviledges of all Clerks, and to the danger of their Souls who did ſuch things, or gave Advice, or aſſented to the doing of them; wherefore he now beſeech'd the King to preſerve the Rights and Privileges of Holy Church inviolable, and forthwith to releaſe the Clerks, and others, that had been impriſoned againſt the Great Charter, the Laws of the Land, and Privileges of ſuch as were detained. And he further beſeeched all thoſe of the King's Council, who had preſumed to adviſe Him to commit ſuch things, not to hinder the releaſe of thoſe Clergymen that were then impriſoned: he alſo declared, That the King's Miniſters or Officers, of what Condition ſoever, who had entred the Granges, Houſes, and other Places of ABps, Bps, or other Eccleſiaſticks, and Religious Perſons, without the Conſent of their Bailiffs, and took and carry'd away their Goods, and all thoſe that commanded ſuch things to be done, were involved in the ſame Sentence of Excommunication; wherefore he wiſhed the King would vouchſafe to apply a fit Remedy thereunto, for he could not diſſemble, but that againſt ſuch (as his Paſtoral Office required it of him) he ſhould by his Brethren execute what was his and their bounden Duty to perform; yet it was not his Intention that the King, Queen, or their Children ſhould be comprehended in this Sentence of Excommunication, as far as by Law or Right they might be excuſed.

[3.] Id. ib. His Letter to the King and Council, complaining of the Grievances of the Clergy.

Then [4.] the ABp (to be as good as his Word) wrote to all the Bps of his Province, ‘Commanding them to declare excommunicate all ſuch as invaded the Rights of Churches, and all thoſe who through Malice infringed or diſturbed their Liberties or Free Cuſtoms; and eſpecially thoſe that violated the Antient Liberties and Free Cuſtoms of his Church of Canterbury, or in any manner diminiſhed them, or did any thing contrary to its Privileges: Alſo thoſe that diſturbed the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, or that gave Advice or Aſſiſtance to, or favoured them that did ſo: As likewiſe thoſe who by any Artifice whatſoever, ſhould violate, diminiſh, or change any of the Liberties and Free Cuſtoms contain'd in the Great Charter, or Charter of the Foreſt, privately or openly, by Word, Deed, or Advice, or the Antient Liberties and Free Cuſtoms granted by them to the City of London, ſhould be declared Excommunicate: And then he directs them to proceed in the ſame manner againſt all ſuch as impriſoned Clerks, or entred [4.] Id. ib. The ABp commands the Bps of his Province to excommunicate all Invaders of the Church's Rights.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

The King writes to the Bp of London to vindicate His own Proceedings, and to recriminate the ABp, and gives an Account of the Tranſactions between them.

[5.] Id. ib.

'tred into the Houſes, Granges, &c. of Archbiſhops, Biſhops, &c as before.

[5] When the King ſaw that the ABp went about to make himſelf popular, and by ſtanding up for the Liberties of the Church and Kingdom, to caſt all the blame upon Him and His Miniſters, He was exceedingly incenſed; wherefore to take off the Odium from Himſelf, and to recriminate upon the ABp, He wrote Letters to the Bp of London, and to the ~~Prior~~ Dean and Chapter of ~~Canterbury~~, in very high and ſevere Language; ſetting forth, 'how He had been uſed, and charged with many great Crimes; but firſt gives a Narrative of all the Tranſactions between Him and the ABp; as that being advanced to the See of Canterbury during His (viz. the King's) Nonage, He had put great Confidence in his Fidelity and Diſcretion, and uſing him as the Director of His Soul, and likewiſe of the Affairs of the Kingdom; and ſeeing the Kingdom of France devolved upon Him by Right of Succeſſion, but was uſurped by Philip of Valois, he with great importunity perſwaded Him to make a Confederacy againſt Philip with the German Princes, thereby engaging Him in a hazardous War, upon his promiſing and affirming, that he would cauſe the Expences of it to be defray'd out of the King's Revenues and Subſidies; and that relying upon this, He had gone beyond Sea, and enter'd into a War at a vaſt Expence, obliging Himſelf to His Confederates in great Sums of Money upon the Promiſes of the ABp; but this Aſſiſtance in Money not coming to Him, He was forced to contract vaſt Debts under exceſſive Uſury, inſomuch that He was not able to proſecute His Expedition, but forced of neceſſity to return into England; where declaring to the ABp His Streights and Misfortunes, He called a Parliament, which gave Him the Ninth, as above, and the Clergy a Tenth; which if fully collected, and in due time, had probably been ſufficient for the carrying on His War with good Succeſs, and the payment of His Debts, to the no ſmall confuſion of His Enemies. Then He ſays, The ABp promiſed a ſecond time to aſſiſt Him effectually toward collecting the ſaid Subſidies, and adminiſtring other Neceſſaries; upon which, truſting to thoſe Promiſes, He again took Shipping to perſue His Right, and by God's help obtained a Victory over His Enemies, as has been before related: He afterwards beſieged Tournay, as aforeſaid, and every day expecting from the ABp's prudent Management to be relieved (under thoſe His preſſing Neceſſities) with what had been promiſed Him, He found at laſt all His Hopes were fruſtrated; and tho by many Letters and Meſſengers He had ſignified to him and others of His Counſellors the great Exigences and Dangers to which He was expos'd for want of Money, yet He was only put off with frivolous Excuſes, by which they palliated their Fraud and Malice, ſo that He was forced full ſore againſt His Will to conſent to a Truce, ſo much to His Diſhonour, as well as to the loſs of His Expedition.

'That at length, all His Faithful Friends in theſe His Adventures, with whom He diſcourſed how He might beſt be delivered from His preſent Misfortunes, unanimouſly agreed, that the Fault lay wholy at the ABp's door, and proceeded either from his Sloath or Negligence, if not his Malice; complaining againſt Him, that He had not before corrected the Inſolence of the ABp and His other Officers, and threatned, that if He would not do it ſpeedily, they would quit His Service, and withdraw themſelves from the Confederacy; that therefore for the

Correction

* But when the King perceived [illegible] resigne was ~~confirmed~~ by his ~~letters~~ ~~recantation~~ to hin[illegible] Day the Clergy from paying him a ninth part, the ~~[illegible]~~ of ye Corn and wools which had been granted ~~him~~ by them in Parliament for 2 years. he thereupon directs his writs to at the ~~[illegible]~~ and the rest of ye Bps. seting forth the sd Grant, and yt understanding that they had received divers admonitions, [illegible] directed [illegible] other clerks [illegible] [illegible] them to the great Prejudice and loss, he [illegible] commands them not [illegible] admonitions or Inhibitions to be published or commanded or procured by them, whereby this affairs may be any ways hindred or retarded. this writ bears date the 10th of [illegible] at Westminster. And when the King [illegible] Rot. Claus. 15 Ed. 3. p. 3. m. 47. d.

Rot. Claus. 15 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 43. d.

not to

'Correction of thoſe Evil Officers, He had removed ſome of them from His Service, for oppreſſing the People, and taking Bribes; and others of leſs Note, He committed to Priſon; and then believing He might have a fuller Account of the Actions of His Officers from the Archbiſhop, to whom He had committed for a long time the Adminiſtration of all His Affairs, He ſent Sir Nicholas de Cantelupe, to command him to come forthwith to London, to diſcourſe with Him. ~~Which, together with his Refuſal, being already related, I need not repeat.~~

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

~~& that the the King sent him his Letters of Protection both to come to him, and return again in Safety, yet he notwithstanding refused to appear before him w.ch he highly resented~~, than which he had neglected. then

'That He had ſent a ſecond time to him by Sir Ralph Stafford Steward of His Houſhold, with Letters of Safe-Conduct; to come to, and inform Him about the Affairs of His Kingdom; but that contemning His Requeſts and Meſſages, he (with an haughty and diſdainful Air) anſwered, That he would not come to, nor confer with Him, but in full Parliament; which at that time it was not expedient to convene. Then recounting His Great Bounty and Beneficence towards him, with the extraordinary Reſpect and Affection ſhown to him, and the mighty Truſt and Confidence He had in him; declares, how Ungrateful he was, and how much he had deceived Him: Wounding His Innocence by railing at, and reproaching the Juſtice, Fidelity, and Diligence, of His Officers; by Preaching publickly, and ſending Letters into divers Parts, that by Royal Power, and againſt Juſtice, the People had lately been oppreſſed, the Clergy confounded, and the Kingdom over-burthened with Exactions, Taxes, and Talliages.

and Protection ~~for his~~ Returns.
Vide Rot. 15. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 18.
Rymers Col. p. 223.

The King ſets forth the Archbiſhop's Ingratitude;

'But becauſe the Archbiſhop endeavour'd to obtain the Name of a Good Paſtor, which indeed he always wanted; (being by Common Opinion a Notorious Mercenary) he now took upon him to aſſert the Liberty of the Church; which, if it had been injured either in Things or Perſons, it was chiefly owing to his Remiſsneſs, crafty Inventions, and reprobate Councils; whilſt he wickedly pretended, That he had certain Sentences, and Articles of Excommunication, made in general againſt the Violators of Church-Liberty, and the Great Charter; on purpoſe to leſſen the Good Opinion His Subjects then had of Him; to defame His Miniſters, trayterouſly to raiſe Sedition amongſt the People, and to withdraw the Affections of the Earls, Barons, and Great Men, from Him. And laſtly, He concludes, That being obliged to ſecure His Reputation, and to obviate the Archbiſhop's Malice, He was now forced to publiſh ſome other of his Actions beſides thoſe above-recited: As that by his imprudent Advice, He had made ſo many exceſſive Gifts and Alienations of His Lands and Revenues, that His Treaſury was quite exhauſted, and His Crown-Rents much diminiſhed; and that being corrupted by Bribes, He had remitted ſeveral Sums of Money due to Him, and had given away much of His Revenues to Perſons not deſerving, or, at leaſt, converted them to his own Uſe; and had preſumed to attempt other things, to the Damage of His Eſtate, and Detriment of His Royal Dignity, and Grievance of His Subjects; abuſing the Power committed to him; commanding thoſe to whom his Letter was directed, to publiſh it, and cauſe others to publiſh it, in ſuch Places as they ſhould think convenient. Witneſs Himſelf at Weſtminſter, the Twelfth of February, in the Fifteenth Year of His Reign. * And the very ſame Complaints againſt the Archbiſhop, the K. ſent in a Letter to the Pope, tho' in ſomewhat ſmoother Language; and requeſted Him, that the Arch-

And his Seditious Practices.

* Rot. Rom. 14 Ed. 3. m. 4.

The K. writes to the Pope againſt the Archbiſhop.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

[1.] Angl Sacr. Vol. 1. p. 23. The Archbiſhop preaches in the Cathedral at Canterbury, and cauſes the King's Letter to the Prior to be read, and then anſwers it.

Archbiſhop might be removed out of the Kingdom, for the Preſerv tion of the Publick Peace, and preventing the Dangers that mig otherwiſe enſue. This was dated at Langley the Fourteenth of March

On [1.] Aſhwedneſday, being the Twenty Firſt of February, t Archbiſhop preached in the Cathedral of Canterbury; and at the e of his Sermon, he told the People there were certain Letters direct by the King to the Prior and Convent of Chriſt-Church againſt hi which he deſired might be read; Which was done accordingly b Order of the Prior, and the Contents of them publiſhed in the Engl Tongue; Againſt which the Archbiſhop in every Point defended his I nocence, and then admoniſhed the People to pray for the King, Quee and their Children. And to thoſe that ſhould devoutly do ſo, a alſo pray for the State of Holy Church, being Penitent for their Sin he granted Forty Days Indulgence from Purgatory. But the next d being the Twenty Second of that Month, the Abbot of St. Auguſti in Canterbury, to whom and his Convent the like Letters had been ſe publiſhed them anew to the People in his own Church, expoundi them in hatred to the Archbiſhop, that ſo they might have an ill O nion of him: The reaſon of which was, that the Abbots of this M naſtery had ſtill great Quarrels and Diſputes with the Archbiſhops Canterbury, about their Privileges; of whom to be revenged the A bot was glad of this Opportunity of publiſhing the King's Lette Which likewiſe bears date at Langley the Fourteenth day of March.

The Abbot of St. Auguſtin's publiſhes the K's Letters to him, and juſtifies the King.

[2.] Id. ib. p. 27. The Archbiſhop in Vindication of himſelf, writes the King an inſolent Letter, advancing the Power of the Clergy above that of the King.

Then [2.] the Archbiſhop being highly incenſed at theſe Proceeding was reſolved further to juſtifie himſelf; and to this end, wrote to t King a bold and inſolent Letter; which being very long, I ſhall he only give you the Contents of it. The Title whereof is thus; T Anſwer or Excuſe of the ABp to a Slanderous Libel: Then addreſſing hi ſelf to the King by way of Preface, tells Him, 'That there were Tw 'Things, by which the World was governed, the Holy Pontifical A
'thority, and the Royal Subordinate Power. Of theſe Two, t
'Charge of the Prieſts was the Greateſt and Higheſt; inaſmuch
'they were in the laſt Judgment to give an Account of Kings them
'ſelves: Wherefore He ought to know, that even they depend upo
'the Judgment of Prieſts, and might not be directed by their ow
'Wills: for who could doubt, but Chriſt's Prieſts were to be though
'the Fathers and Maſters of Kings, Princes, and of all Faithful Pe
'ple? Then he proceeds to tell Him, that many Biſhops had Excom
'municated Kings and Emperors; and alſo to inform Him, what goo
'Kings ought to do, and how they ought to behave themſelves towar
'Biſhops; and what Reverence, Honour, and Reſpect was due to them
'After which, he complains, that the Honour due to him, in rega
'of his Dignity, and as he was his Spiritual Father, was turn'd int
'Diſgrace, and the Reverence into Contempt; whilſt His Epiſtle
'Sealed with the Royal Seal, but more truly, Slanderous Libels, dictate
'and written by his Enemies, containing many Crimes falſly impute
'to him, were ſent to the Bps of his Province, and all the reſt of th
'Clergy, to be publiſh'd to his Injury and Diſgrace: By which unhear
'of Fact, Royal Power preſum'd to judge the Lord God, in his Servan
'and Prieſts, and He ſeemed to condemn him his Spiritual Father, an 'Greateſt Peer of the Land, againſt the Order of God, Human La
'and Natural Reaſon, being not called nor convicted by Record, an

'unheard, and that to the danger of His Soul, and as an ill Example, to the manifeſt prejudice of all the Peers of England.

And then proceeds to juſtifie his own Actions in relation to the Things whereof he ſtands accus'd, and anſwers all the Points of his Charge.

'Then making large Profeſſions of his Affection to the King, and ſetting forth the great Services he had done Him, he proceeds to his Anſwer: And as to the firſt thing laid to his Charge, that when the Kingdom of France was devolved to Him by Right of Succeſſion, he had importuned Him to make a League with the Almains, to recover His Rights, and ſaid, He need only to find Soldiers, and he would find Money; which failing, the King was forced to contract great Debts upon Uſury: To this the ABp anſwered, That at the beginning of the King's Government, when himſelf was Bp of Wincheſter, it was known by whoſe Counſel He was governed; that afterwards when His Right to that Kingdom was ſo adjudged in the Parliament at Northampton, two Bps, viz. of Worceſter and Coventry, were ſent into France to lay Claim to it on His behalf, and to hinder the Coronation of Philip de Valois: which Embaſſy was the firſt occaſion of the War; but at that time He being not ABp, was out of favour at Court, (tho for what Reaſon God knows) yet afterwards when it pleaſed His Majeſty to call him, with others of His Council, to conſult of Publick Affairs, that they conſidering the danger of Mens Souls, Bodies and Goods by a devouring War, did all they could to make Peace between the Two Kingdoms; but that after all Endeavours for Peace proved unſucceſsful, and Philip had made War upon Him: Then in a Parliament at Weſtminſter, called for that purpoſe, ſeeing the Obſtinacy of the French K., it was agreed that He ſhould league with the Germans and others; but as for the payment of the Expences of His War, there were Agreements made with certain Merchants in a Council at Stamford, which are to be found in Chancery; which if they had been obſerved, theſe, together with other Subſidies, granted both by the Clergy and Laity, and the great Cuſtom of Wool (if well managed) would have been (as was thought by all the Council) ſufficient for the War.

Then the ABp utterly denies that theſe Agreements could be broken or changed by him, ſince thoſe Subſidies never came into his hands; for after the King's firſt going over, he (the ABp.) ſtaid not in the Kingdom, but went with the Cardinal Legates and the Bp of Durham into France, to treat of Peace, going often backward and forward, to and from the King then in Brabant, and with whom he ſtay'd, and was partaker of His Neceſſities; and that he with other Prelates and Great Men of England had been become bound for Him in great Sums upon Uſury.

'The Second Thing charged upon him in the King's Letters (he ſays) was yet more wonderful, viz. That when the Ninth was granted, he promis'd effectually to aſſiſt in the levying of it, and that by reaſon of the non-performance of that Promiſe, when the King lay before Tournay, He was forced to raiſe the Siege, and conſent to a Truce contrary to His Mind; to this he anſwered, That the whole Subſidy of the Ninth, for the firſt Year, was aſſigned to the King's Creditors before His ſecond going beyond Sea, as might appear by the Aſſignations themſelves; and therefore it was manifeſt that he neither promiſed to ſend, nor could ſend any thing to the Siege of Tournay, eſpecially not knowing when it began.

Anno Dom.
MCCCXLI.

'To the Third; That the Neceſſities and great Streights the K. was 'then brought into were by his Fault, Negligence and Malice, and that of 'his other Officers; and that when upon deſiring to have a better Infor- 'mation of His Affairs, He had ſent for him by two ſeveral Meſſengers, 'he refuſed to come; to this the ABp anſwered, by denying that 'he ever made Him any ſuch Promiſe of ſending Money to Him; 'and therefore ſuch as ſerved Him in the War had no reaſon to com- 'plain of his Fraud and Negligence; and again ſets forth how faithful 'and diligent he had been both then and at all other times in His Ser- 'vice; that as for thoſe who had brought Him into theſe Inconvenien- 'cies and Misfortunes, if culpable, they ought to be puniſhed; yet by 'Juſt, not Arbitrary Proceſs.

'Then as for the two Meſſages that had been ſent to him, he an- 'ſwered thus; To the firſt, Sir Nicholas Cantelupe bringing the King's 'Letters of Credence, only cited and enjoined him to go into Brabant 'to diſcharge the King's Debts, and ſtay there till they were paid; fo 'that if he had been ſummon'd to have been at London with the King, '(as His laſt Letters intimated) he muſt have been here and beyond Sea 'at the ſame time. To the Second; That Sir Ralph de Stafford came 'without any Letters, and by his bare Word cited him to come to 'the King, affirming, he ought not to fear any Treachery; but to this 'the ABp reply'd, That notwithſtanding the King's Letters of Safe 'Conduct at firſt view ſeem'd ſufficient for his coming to, ſtaying at, 'and returning from His Councils, if he had been legally ſummoned, 'as he was not, yet the ſame day he received theſe Letters of Conduct, 'the Sheriff of Canterbury brought him the King's Writ to appear at Lon- 'don before the King and Council upon a Contempt: So tho the King's 'Letter gave him free liberty of returning, yet by His Writ, he 'was of neceſſity to fall into his Enemies hands, which became not His 'Royal Majeſty: Nevertheleſs, he was, and ſhould always be ready to 'anſwer what ſhould be objected againſt Him, before the Prelates and 'Peers, ſaving His State and Order.

'As to what was charged upon him for publiſhing Sentence of Excom- 'munication, and commanding it to be publiſh'd againſt the Violators 'of Eccleſiaſtick Liberty, and the Great Charter, to blacken the King's 'Reputation, defame His Miniſters, and traiterouſly move Seditio 'amongſt the People, and to withdraw the Affections of the Earls, 'Barons, Nobles and Great Men from the King; ſince this ſeemed to 'affix the Crime of Treaſon upon him, in which caſe no King or Tem- 'poral Lord could be his Competent Judge, therefore he proteſted open- 'ly by theſe Preſents, That by what he now ſaid, or ſhould ſay, he 'intended not to prejudice His State in any thing, but wholly to de- 'cline Tryal by any Secular Judge whatever.

'And Laſtly, As to his own Prodigality in giving away the Reve- 'nues of the Crown to undeſerving perſons, and waſting the Product 'of them, and converting the King's Treaſure to his own Uſe, he ut- 'terly denies it, aſſerting again his Innocence, the Great Service he had 'done, and the Labour and Expences he had been at for the Crown: And 'near at the Concluſion of his Letter ſays, This may ſuffice for Anſwer 'to the Scandalous Libel at preſent, and wiſheth for the King's Honour 'it had neither been written nor publiſhed.

Th

The Original of this Letter is very long, which the Curious Reader may find at large in the Firſt Volume of Anglia Sacra, and I wiſh that this Abſtract of it may not prove tedious to him; but I thought fit to inſert thus much, that ſo he may obſerve not only the Original and Progreſs of this Great Difference between the King and the ABp, but alſo how inſolently the ABps of Canterbury preſumed to carry themſelves towards their Sovereigns in thoſe days, and how much they exalted their pretended Eccleſiaſtical Authority, above the Temporal. How far the ABp was to blame in this Matter I will not diſpute, I only ſpeak as to the Manner of the Management of this Controverſie.

[3.] Id p.36. The K. is not ſatisfy'd with the ABp's Juſtification, and writes him a ſhort and ſevere Anſwer.

However [3] the King was not at all ſatisfied with his long Epiſtle, to which He immediately afterwards return'd him a Brief Anſwer; wherein He firſt reproves him for his Inſolent and Undutiful Language, and tells him, 'That how much ſoever He honoured and revered His 'Spiritual Fathers, yet that He ought not to overlook their Offences 'when He ſaw them tend to the danger of Him and His Government: 'Then ſhews him his Miſtake when he complained he was condemned 'of Capital Crimes, being abſent and unheard; as if He (the King) 'in thoſe Letters wrote in His Own Vindication, had proceeded criminally againſt him; but forbids him and all other Bps to publiſh any 'Sentences of Excommunication, or other Things againſt the Rights of 'His Crown, or derogatory to His Royal Dignity and Prerogative, as 'they had been always uſed by His Progenitors.

The K. ſummons a Parliament.

During this Controverſie between the King and the ABp. there was a * Parliament ſummon'd to meet at Weſtminſter on the Monday after he Quindene of Eaſter, or 23d of April, being Eaſter Monday; the Cauſes whereof were declared to be, how the King might be ſpeedily ſupply'd by the Grants made Him in the Parliament laſt Year, upon His going over in perſon againſt His Enemy Philip of Valois, great part of which was detained from the King by Evil Officers: Alſo Secondly, how a ſufficient Sum of Money might be raiſed for His preſent Neceſſities; after which Declaration was made in the King's Name, That whoever of His Subjects ſhould think themſelves hardly dealt with either by the King, or His Officers, upon Complaint and Proof hereof made, they ſhould have their Remedy.

* Rot. Clauſ. 15 Ed. 3. part 1. m. 37. dorſ.

[4] Antiq. Brit. p. 235. To which the ABp comes privately, tho not ſummoned, and demands admittance, which is deny'd.

To [4] this Parliament the ABp came privately, tho he had no Writ ent him, and almoſt as ſoon as it aſſembled, came to the K's Palace, ttended with a great Company of Clergymen and Knights; but upon is Entrance into the Houſe the High-Steward and Chamberlain met im, who in the K's Name forbad him to enter the Parliament, until n the Exchequer he had undergone a Tryal concerning certain Crimes id to his Charge: The ABp, leſt he ſhould move the King too much, went into that Court, and there took a Copy of the Articles of which is Accuſation conſiſted, and to theſe he promiſed to return an Anſwer, hen with the K's leave he came into the Parliament Chamber for that me, and there before the Prelates and Lords of the Realm declared the Cauſes of his coming to be for the Honour, Rights and Liberties of the hurch, for the Profit and Commodity of the Realm, and for the Inte-ſt and Honour of the King; and laſtly, that he might clear Himſelf n Parliament of ſeveral Crimes laid to his Charge, and publiſhed over l England to his Prejudice.

* Cot. Abridg. p. 30.
A great Debate ariſes among the Lords thereupon.

This occaſion'd a * Great Debate among the Lords for ſome days about this Point, Whether the Nobles of the Land ſhould be put to anſwer, except before their Peers in open Parliament? And a Committee of the whole Houſe was appointed to draw up a Repreſentation of this Matter to be laid before His Majeſty; and they were alſo to enquire concerning the Crimes laid to the ABp's Charge, and fairly to repreſent how far they thought him culpable: Whilſt theſe Things were in agitation, he came again to the Houſe, but [5.] was forbid by Sir William Attewood to enter the Room, ſo he ſtood at the Door, and being kept out by the Guard, took his Croſs into his own hands, and ſolemnly proteſted, That he would not ſtir from that Place till the King gave him leave to come into Parliament, or a ſufficient Reaſon why he ſhould not: Whilſt he thus ſtood there, certain Noblemen happening to come out, he beſought them to requeſt the K. on his behalf, and for the Right of his Church of Canterbury; this they kindly promiſed him to do. Theſe Accuſations were ſuppoſed to be contrived by the Bp of Wincheſter, the Lord Darcy, and William Killesby, the firſt being his ſecret, but the two laſt his open Enemies; yet at length by the Interceſſion and Favour of the Lords, the K. gave leave for his Admiſſion into Parliament, where he offered legally to purge himſelf of the Crimes objected againſt him; but he was referr'd to the ſaid Bps and Peers, who had his Cauſe under conſideration at that time.

[5.] Ant. Brit. p. 236.
The ABp comes again to the Houſe, and being kept out, proteſts he would not ſtir till he had admittance.

[1.] Cot Abridg. p. 31.
The King comes to Parl. and the ABp being admitted in, humbles himſelf to Him, and deſires an open Tryal, which the K. does not think fit to grant him.

On the [1.] 19*th* of April (being Thurſday) the King came into St. Edward's (commonly called the Painted) Chamber, to whom, in ſight of the Lords and Commons then aſſembled, the ABp being admitted in, humbled himſelf, and required His Gracious Pardon; which upon the General Suit and Intreaty of the whole Parliament, His Majeſty granted Him; after which the ABp deſired, That whereas he was publickly defamed throughout the Realm, he might now be arraigned in open Parliament before his Peers; but the King anſwered, He would firſt attend to the Common Affairs, and after that examine leſs Matters. However a little after, without any more Accuſation, or Anſwer, the King of His own accord declared him legally diſcharged and excuſed. And thus ended the ABp's Troubles, the Matter being no more reſum'd, he either appearing innocent, which is moſt likely, or however made ſo by the King's Pardon; but I do not find he was ever employed by the King with the ſame Confidence as he was before, notwithſtanding what the Learned * Author of Antiquitat. Britan. relates t the contrary.

* P. 236.

Thus have I put together all the Proceedings againſt the Arch biſhop, that they may not interrupt the Thrid of other A fairs.

* Rot. Parl. 15 Ed. 3. n. 4.
The King demands how He ſhall be anſwered for His Subſidies ſtill in arrear.
† Ibid. n 42.
But the Great Men defer it till the K. anſwers their Petition.

I ſhall now proceed to the main Things that were tranſacted in thi Parliament; where * in anſwer to the King's chiefeſt and moſt materi al Demands, how He might more ſpeedily receive the Ninth Fleece ſti in arrear for the firſt Year, and how the like Subſidy (ſtill due) migh be beſt raiſed for this ſecond Year before Midſummer next coming, t which they were deſired to give their Anſwer on Saturday next enſuing but † the Conſideration of this Matter was put off until the King's A ſwers to the Petitions of the Great Men, the Clergy and Commons, wer reduced into Statutes; which being ſhown to the King, tho clogg'd wit certain hard Conditions demanded by the Great Men and Commons

ye

yet upon a new Grant of Thirty thouſand Sacks of Wool now made to Him in compenſation of the Ninth of the ſecond Year, He then ſeem'd content to agree to them; tho this were indeed no new Subſidy, but being very neceſſary and advantageous for His preſent Occaſions, He on that Conſideration paſſed all theſe Petitions into Statutes, which being read before the Great Officers of the Kingdom, they were required to ſwear to the obſervation of them, (as it might in their Places concern them); the Chancellor, Treaſurer, and ſome of the Juſtices made Proteſtation, that they neither conſented to the Subſtance nor Form of them, nor that they could keep them in caſe they were contrary to the Laws and Uſages of the Kingdom, which by Oath they were bound to obſerve; yet however theſe Statutes were then paſſed, and being put into the Form of a Charter, was ſealed with the Great Seal, and delivered to the Great Men and Knights of Counties.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

Which upon a new Grant of 30000 Sacks of Wool, He at laſt agrees to.

The K. paſſes all their Petitions into Statutes, which are proteſted againſt by the Great Officers of the Kingdom.

Some of the K's Anſwers to the Articles or Petitions of the Clergy, brought in by the ABp and other Bps are remarkable; As for Inſtance; His* Anſwer to the Second Petition, That the Liberties of the Church, and all Liberties granted to any other Eſtate or Perſons may be kept; and that the Great Charter may be proclaimed again, and confirmed by Oath, to be obſerved; the King's* Anſwer was, He was willing that the Great Charter and other Liberties ſhould be obſerved; which being already exemplify'd under the Great Seal, He thought was ſufficient, and there was no need of ſwearing to it, conſidering that in the Kingdom there were already too many perjur'd: (Which by the by, ſhews that Oaths taken of courſe were no better kept in thoſe Times than they are in Ours.) To the Fifth, containing a Complaint againſt the K's Officers for having entered into Religious and Parſonage-Houſes, and by force taken away their Goods; and that further, they had by an Oath forced upon Religious Perſons and Parſons, enquired of things within their Houſes, and them ſo found, have carried away; His Anſwer was, That He would not that any Man ſhould enter into the Church's Fees againſt their Liberties, nor would that any of His Officers ſhould enter upon Church Lands or Houſes to take their Goods; but if Lay-men to defraud Him brought their Goods thither, He thought Himſelf wronged.

* Ibid. n. 20.

* Ibid. n. 30.

The King denies to have the Great Charter ſworn to, and why.

His Anſwers to the reſt of their Petitions.

To the Seventh; That the K's Officers had levy'd of Parſons and Rectors of Churches the Ninth Sheaf, the Ninth Lamb, and the Ninth Fleece, when they ought only to have paid their Tenths; * the Anſwer was, He would not have their Ninths or Tenths to be otherwiſe paid than they were granted; that is the Ninth, by ſuch as held a Barony, or uſed to be ſummoned to Parliament; and then the K. granted for him and his Heirs, that if any Perſon do any Act againſt the Form of the Great Charter, or any other Good Statute, that he ſhould anſwer in Parliament, or other Place where he ought by Law to anſwer.

* Ibid. n. 32.

All the Statutes and Conditions abovementioned are enter'd in the Back of the Roll, and printed in the Statutes at large this Year, and are a true Tranſlation of the Record in French; where, among other things, in the third Chapter of theſe Statutes it was agreed, That the Chancellor, Treaſurer, Barons, and Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Juſtices of both Benches, Juſtices aſſigned in the Country, Steward, and Chamberlain of the K's Houſe, Keeper of the Privy-Seal, Treaſurer of the Wardrobe, Comptrollers, and thoſe that were appointed to remain

The Great Officers of the Km. for the future to be nam'd and ſworn in Parl. to maintain the Liberties of the Church and Magna Charta.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

main and be about the Duke of Cornwall, ſhould be named and ſworn in Parliament, and ſo from thenceforth at all times, when they ſhould be put in Office, to keep and maintain the Privileges and Franchiſes of Holy Church, all the Points of the Great Charter, the Charter of the Foreſt, and all other Statutes, without breaking any of them.

Theſe Statutes, and the Conditions abovementioned, are entered on the back of the Roll, and are printed at large in our Statute Books.

[3] Vid. printed Stat. 15 Ed. 3. The King to put in new Officers in the room of thoſe that ſhould die or be removed by advice of Parl.

In the [3.] Fourth Chapter it was alſo agreed, That if any of the Officers aforeſaid, or Chief Clerks in either Bench ſhould die or be removed, that the King ſhould put in another, by the Advice of His Great Men and thoſe about Him, and theſe Officers were to be ſworn according to the Form aforeſaid; and at the beginning of every Parliament, the Offices of all the ſaid Miniſters (except the Juſtices of both Benches, and the Barons of the Exchequer) were to be taken into the King's hands, that they might be the fitter to anſwer any Complaint that ſhould be put in againſt them; and if upon ſuch Complaint, or otherwiſe, any of them ſhould be found faulty, then to be attainted in Parliament, and puniſhed by Judgment of the Peers, and ouſted of his or their Office, and another Convenient Perſon put in his Place; and the King was to cauſe Execution to be done without delay, according to the Judgment of the Peers in Parliament.

It is very probable that theſe Statutes concerning Officers were Contrivances of the ABp, Bps, and Clergy; for it was a great vexation to them, that the Chancellor, Treaſurer, and many other Officers who had been Clergymen, and were lately put out of their Offices (as hath been related) upon the King's arrival in England; and that others who were Lay or Secular Perſons ſhould be placed in their ſtead.

[4.] Vid. printed Stat. Book, ib. The King not long after repeal'd the Statutes made this Parl., as derogatory to His Royal Prerogative; the Sum of the Writ concerning it.

[4.] But I muſt here obſerve, that the Statutes abovementioned were ſome Months after the making of them (that is, on the firſt of October next enſuing) revoked by the King's Writ or Proclamation, as contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Land, His Prerogatives and Royal Rights; as appears by the Writ it ſelf (of the ſame date), directed to the Sheriff of Lincoln, printed at large in the Statute Book; as likewiſe appears by a * Writ directed to the ABp of Canterbury; the Effect of which is much the ſame with that to the ſaid Sheriff; ſetting forth, 'That whereas in the laſt Parliament at Weſtminſter, &c. there were 'certain Petitions made, not only expreſly contrary to the Laws and Cuſtoms of England, but alſo very prejudicial and reproachful to the Royal Dignity, which if the King had not permitted to be made into a 'Statute, the ſaid Parliament had ended without Succeſs, and been 'diſſolved in Diſcord, and ſo His Wars with France and Scotland had 'likely come to nothing; wherefore having * præmitted a Proteſtation of revoking thoſe things when He could conveniently tho He 'had permitted the ſaid Statutes at that time to be ſealed with His Seal 'yet that by the Advice and Aſſent of the Earls, Barons, and other 'Wiſe Men, for Lawful Cauſes, as for that His Conſent was wanting to the making of them; tho then (as it behoved Him) He diſſembled in 'the Premiſſes, to avoid the Dangers which by denying of the ſame 'He fear'd would enſue; He therefore hereby declared it null and void 'and that it ought not to have the Name and Force of a Statute.

---

* Rot. Clauſ. 15 Ed. 3. part. 3. m. 25. dorſ. printed in Dr. B's Append. n. 88.

* Præmiſſis Proteſt.

But

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

A Remarkable Clauſe in the Writ to the Archbiſhop.

But there is ſomewhat peculiar in this Writ to the ABp, quite different from that to the Sheriff abovementioned, viz. ‘That ſince He ‘(the King) underſtands that he had ſummoned a Provincial Council ‘to meet at London on the Morrow after St. Luke next enſuing, in which ‘he intended to excite the Bps of His Province againſt Him (~~the King~~) ‘and to ordain and declare ſome things to His prejudice, about confirming the ſaid pretended Statute, and to the depreſſion and diminution ‘of His Royal Rights and Prerogatives, for the Preſervation whereof ‘he is bound by Oath, &c. and further, that he, the ABp, intends ‘to promulge grievous Cenſures concerning theſe things; wherefore ‘the King being willing to prevent ſo great a Miſchief, does ſtraitly forbid the ABp to propound, or any ways attempt any thing in that ‘Council, in derogation or diminution of His Royal Dignity, Power ‘and Rights of the Crown, or of the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, or in confirmation of the ſaid pretended Statute, or in contempt of His Honour, or to the diſadvantage of His Counſellors and ‘Servants: And then concludes with a Threat, That if the ABp did ‘theſe Things, He would proſecute Him as His Enemy, and a Violator of His Rights, with as much Severity as lawfully He may. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter the firſt of October.

This Repeal by the King alone is afterwards confirmed in Parl.

But tho it muſt be granted that this was a high ſtretch of the King's Prerogative, and ſuch as our Times would not bear, yet even then when neither the Bps, Barons, nor Commons in Parliament ever gave their Conſents to this Revocation, they were not at all ſatisfied with this Precedent; for in the next Parliament of the 17th of this King, this Statute abovementioned was by them legally made void and repeal'd, (without any mention of the King's late Writ or Proclamation) as appears upon the Statute Roll, tho not printed in our Statute Books; the *Record is in French; and is thus render'd into Engliſh; Alſo it is accorded, and aſſented unto, that the Statute made at Weſtminſter in the Quinden (i. e. fifteen days) after Eaſter, ſhall be wholly repealed and annulled, and loſe the Name of a Statute, as being prejudicial and contrary to the Laws and Uſages of the Kingdom, and the Rights and Prerogatives of the King. But for that there are ſome Articles in the ſame Statute, which are reaſonable and agreeable to Law, 'tis agreed by the King and His Council, that thoſe Articles, and Others accorded in this preſent Parliament, ſhall be made into a New Statute, by the Advice of the Juſtices and other Sages, which ſhall be perpetual. Yet that ever any ſuch Statute was made, I do not find.

* Rot. Parl. 17 Ed. 3. n. 23. printed in Dr. B's Appen. n. 89.

The Evil Conſequences of printing the Writ of Repeal without the Subſequent Statute.

This Revocation very well deſerves our further Remark; for ſince no more than the K's Writ to the Sheriff of Lincolnſhire was thought fit to be printed by thoſe who firſt publiſhed the Statutes in Engliſh, without the Subſequent Statute laſt mentioned, it hath been commonly made uſe of by the high Aſſertors of the Royal Prerogative, as a ſufficient Precedent to prove, that the King alone has a Power to make void and repeal any Law or Statute that He ſhall judge derogatory to His Prerogative, or the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm; and He needs no more but to ſay as King Edward did in this caſe, That He diſſembled in the Premiſes, and never gave His free Conſent, but only to void greater Dangers, or to obtain a Subſidy when He needed it to carry on His Wars: But the Lords and Commons were not ſatisfy'd with this Doctrine, and tho they would not quarrel with the King as to what

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

what was paſt, yet it is evident they were not ſatisfied with His Prero-gative in vacating this Statute, or elſe there had been no need for them to have made another Repeal of it: And tho the Learned Mr. Barne in his Elaborate Hiſtory of this King's Reign, hath been ſo candid a to recite verbatim, not only the K's Writ of Revocation, but the un printed Statute laſt mentioned, yet he looks upon it as a meer Reſult o the King's Prerogative Royal, in thoſe days eſteemed of ſufficient force, an as ſuch afterwards confirm'd by Act of Parliament: Which I can by n means gather from this Statute, but rather conclude the contrary fro this Inſtance.

There were then alſo ſome other Petitions made by the Com-mons, for which, together with the K's Anſwers to them, as bein now obſolete, I refer the Reader to the Parliament-Rolls, or elſe to th Abſtract of them in Cotton's Abridgment. But before I leave this Parli-ament, I ſhall take notice, that the neceſſitous Condition of the K' Affairs requiring Twenty thouſand Sacks of Wool to be tranſported be-fore Michaelmaſs next coming; it was then provided, that no man be-fore that time ſhould ſend beyond Sea any Wool, on pain of thrice th value, and loſs of Life and Member.

It is provided in Parl that none ſhall ſend Wool beyond Sea till the K's is tranſported.

We ſhall now paſs to ſomething of Foreign Affairs: Not long afte the making of the late Truce, the King of France (like a wiſe Prince did all He could to ſtrengthen Himſelf with Foreign Alliances again the time that the War might be again renewed by the King of England and finding none more able to do Him hurt than Lewis the Empero He deſired to gain His Friendſhip, for which there was now a fair Op-portunity offer'd it ſelf; for His firſt Wife being deceaſed, He had new-ly married the Niece of K. Philip by His Siſter; and the Emperor Him-ſelf was alſo the more inclin'd to make Peace with that King, becau of the great Intereſt He knew He had with the Pope, and that it was b His Interceſſion that He might expect an Abſolution from His ſo lon continued Excommunication. Upon theſe Conſiderations and Encou-ragements K. Philip diſpatched Ambaſſadors to the Emperor for th purpoſe, who [5.] not only made a firm League with Him, but one o the chief Conditions of it was, That He ſhould revoke the Bull or Cha-ter which He had formerly made to K. Edward, to be Vicar of the Em-pire, which He conſented to; and therefore thought fit to ſignifie ſ much to the King by a Letter He ſent Him.

The French King ſends His Ambaſſadors to the Emperor to deſire Peace.

[5.] H. K. col. 2580.

Vid: a Copy of this Lette in Bib. Cotton: Claud. C. 11. publisht in R[illegible] [illegible]

[1.] T. W. ad An. 1340. ſed falſò.

The Emperor writes to K. Edward, wherein He lets Him know He had made Peace with K. Philip, and offers His Mediation to do the ſame for the King.

[1.] Wherein after ſome previous Complements, He proceeds to le Him know, 'That Philip K. of France had given Him Authority by H 'Letters to mediate a Peace between them, which, tho incumber'd wit 'many great and weighty Affairs, He was willing to undertake, it bein 'very expedient for, and advantageous to K. Edward, His Kingdom an 'Allies; if He would give Him like Power by His Letters, to treat o 'and make a Peace or Truce for a Year or two. Nor ought the Frien 'ſhip enter'd into and contracted between Him and Philip K. of Fran 'to move K. Edward; for ſince He Himſelf had made Truce and A 'greement (meaning the late Truce at Tournay) with K. Philip with 'out His knowledge or Aſſent, He (the Emperor) by Advice of H 'Princes, (who beſt underſtood His Leagues and Agreements, an 'thought a Friendſhip with the ſame Prince might be made with ho 'nour) had enter'd into League with Him; and therefore for the Cauſ 'before noted, He thereby revoked His Commiſſion, by which He ha ma

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

And further revokes His Commiſſion of Vicar of the Empire.

'made Him His Vicar of the Empire; yet notwithſtanding lets Him know, that in His Mediation and Treaties He would take care of Him like a Brother; and if He would acquieſce in His Advice, His Cauſe ſhould be brought to a good End by His Aſſiſtance: And therefore for His further Information, He had ſent to Him one of His Chaplains of the Order of Hermites, who, He deſired, might ſpeedily be ſent back. Theſe Letters were dated at Frankfort, the Four and Twentieth of June, in the Twenty Seventh Year of His Empire.

[2.] Id. ib. See the ~~lette~~ original, in Rot: Claus: 15: Ed: 3. p 2 m. 34 d. [illegible]

K. Edward's Anſwer to the Emperor's Letter.

[2.] Tho' K. Edward was inwardly vexed at the Emperor's thus quitting His Confederacy, and making ſo ſtrict an Allyance with the French King, and at the revoking His Imperial Bull, yet He was too prudent to expreſs any publick Reſentment of it; but return'd Him an Anſwer to this effect: 'He firſt lets Him know, that He had received His Letters with Reſpect; then commends His Zeal for offering to make an Agreement between Him and Philip of Valois; and tells the Emperor, that He always wiſh'd for a Reaſonable Peace with Him, which He had perſued as much as in Honour and Juſtice He ought; and that He deſired, ſuch a Peace as He wiſh'd for might be procured at the Inſtance of ſo Great a Mediator. But, becauſe He knew His own Right to the Kingdom of France to be ſufficiently clear, He would not commit it to any doubtful Arbitration of Judgment; and much wonder'd, that He ſhould join with Philip, that had done Him ſo many Notorious Injuries, ſeeing the evident Juſtice He had for His Demands, and Philip's Obſtinacy in not complying with them, He had for that reaſon entred into a League with Him. And as to what was ſaid, that He, without His Knowledge or Aſſent, had made a Truce, and entred into a Treaty of Peace with Philip; conſidering the Circumſtances of the Fact, it ought not rationally to have moved Him, becauſe at that time He beſieged Tournay, and ought to follow the Advice of thoſe that were with Him, and gave Him their Aſſiſtance: Conſidering alſo, that Winter was coming on, and the Diſtance between them, He could not be permitted to conſult Him. And further, He put Him in mind, that He had granted, that when He had an Opportunity, He might Treat without His knowledge; but ſo, as not to make a final Peace with Philip without His Conſent, which He never intended to do. It ſeemed alſo to ſome, that the Revocation of the Vicarſhip was too ſuddenly done; when, according to the Agreement made by His Imperial Bull, it ought not to have been done, until He had obtained the Kingdom of France, or the greateſt Part of it. Dated at London, the ~~Eigh~~four*teenth* day of July, in the Second Year of His Reign over France, and over England the Fifteenth.

But tho' the King, by the Emperor's thus quitting His Party, loſt the Confederacy of the German and Belgick Princes, yet not long after, He had an Opportunity offered Him of making War upon France another way, and that without any Breach of the late Truce; ſince He acted for the Aſſiſtance of a Confederate Prince. I ſhall here briefly give you the Occaſion of it.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib. c 65.

[3] Some Months after the Siege of Tournay, John D. of Bretaign, who had there ſerved the K. of France, fell ſick, and died in Normandy, the Thirtieth of April, in his Return home, without any Iſſue,

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

The Death of the Duke of Bretaign, and the Contention that aroſe between the Competitors for that Dutchy.

tho' he had been thrice married. Upon whoſe Deceaſe, there aroſ a great Contention between Charles Earl of Blois, and John Earl o Montfort, who ſhould be his Heir. Their Titles ſtood thus: Arthur th Second Duke of Bretagne, Father to the Deceaſed, had by his firſ Wife one Son, who died before his Father, and left only one Daughter, who had been married ſome Years before to Count Charles o Blois, Nephew to the French King. But beſides this Son, Duke Arthur had another by a Second Wiſe, viz. John Earl of Montfort; wh being in Bretagne at the Death of his Half-Brother, not only ſeiſed al his Treaſure, with which he ſecured his Brother's Soldiers to his Intereſt, but alſo being very well beloved, [4.] he poſſeſſed himſelf o the Towns of Nants, Breſt, Rhennes, and the Caſtle of Hennebond with other ſtrong Places; ſo that moſt Part of the Nobility did Homage to him, and owned him for their Duke.

John Earl of Montfort ſeiſes upon the Chief Places in it, and is own'd for Duke of Bretaign.

[4.] Id. c. 66, 67.
[5.] Froiſſ. ib. c. 69.

Montfort implores K. Edward's Aſſiſtance againſt the E. of Blois.

But [5.] Montfort being ſenſible, that he ſhould not be able by hi ſingle Force, to defend himſelf againſt the K. of France, who, he wa certain, would ſide with the Earl of Blois againſt him; went over privately into England, and offer'd K. Edward to hold that Dutchy o Him by Homage and Fealty, if He would defend him againſt th French King, and all Others, who ſhould give him any Diſturbance The King accepted his Offer, and thought He ſhould have great Advantage by it; as not having a nearer and more Commodious Way o entring France, than through Bretagne: For He had found by experience, that the Germans, Brabanters, and Flemings, had been no great Help to Him, but had only drain'd Him of His Money. After Earl John had done his Homage to K. Edward, in the Preſence o divers Lords of Bretaign and England, He thereupon promiſed to aid and defend him, as His Liege-Man, againſt the French K. and all others; after which the Charter of Homage, and Articles of Agreement, being Sealed and Delivered inter-changeably, and E. John having been nobly preſented by K. Edward, he return'd home.

[1.] Id. ib. c. 70. The French K. ſummons the Count of Montfort to appear at Paris, which he obeying, and fearing Judgment would be given againſt him, eſcapes from thence.

[1.] The French K. knowing what the Count of Montfort had done in Bretagne, and hearing likewiſe of the Homage he had made to the K. of England, for that Dutchy; He was, at the Requeſt of the Earl of Blois, ſummoned to appear at the Parliament of Paris before the King, His Peers, and other Great Lords of France. He appeared according to the Summons; and when the King charged him with having done Homage to His Adverſary, the King of England, he denyed it: However, he was commanded, upon pain of loſing all he held of Him, that he ſhould not depart from Paris in Fifteen days; within which time, the Twelve Peers, and other Lords and Barons, ſhould judge of his Right. But he expecting no equal Juſtice from them, ſuddenly and privately withdrew from Paris, and return'd into Bretagne.

[2.] Id. c. 71. Vid. Hiſt. de Bretaign, per D' Argenter. He has Sentence of Arreſt pronounced againſt his Title to Bretaign, in the Parliament at Paris.

[2.] Immediately after his Departure, the Great Court of the Peers and Lords of France, again Aſſembling at Conflans, pronounced a Solemn Arreſt or Sentence againſt Him, concerning the Dutchy of Bretaign; That it belonged to Mary, the Wife of the ſaid Earl of Blois. And further, their Judgment was, That if ever the Earl of Montfort had any Right, he had doubly forfeited it: Firſt, By doing Homage to any other Lord than the K. of France, of whom he ought to have held it; and then, By diſobeying the King's Commands, in going from Paris without His Leave. No ſooner was this Sentence paſſed againſt Him; but the Earl of Blois with a great Army from the King of France enter'd Bretagne, and ſurprized and took the Count of Montfort Priſoner in the City of Nantes, by the Treachery of the Townſmen, from whence he was ſent to Paris, and kept Priſoner a long time. Froiſſart ſuppoſes him to have deceaſed this Year, but he is therein greatly miſtaken; for he ſuffer'd about three Years Impriſonment, and then obtain'd his Liberty, but died ſoon after; which perhaps might lead that Author into this Error: But he is right enough in placing theſe Things about the Feaſt of All-Saints this Year.

The Earl of Blois enters Bretagn and takes Count Montfort Priſoner, who is ſent to Paris.

[3] But the Matter did not end ſo, for Margaret, Wife to the Earl of Montfort, and Siſter to the Earl of Flanders, a Lady of a Maſculine Spirit, was not caſt down at this Misfortune, but being then in the City of Rhennes, went from thence to all the Good Towns and Fortreſſes that continued in her Intereſt, and carrying with her the Lord John her Son, then a Child, ſhe by his Preſence, but more by her own Perſwaſions, ſecured them firmly to her; which being perform'd, ſhe retired to the ſtrong Town of Hennebond, where (as Froiſſart relates) ſhe ſtay'd with her Son all that Winter, and the next Spring ſhe was beſieg'd by the Lord Charles of Blois, but in the mean while ſhe had ſent to implore King Edward's Aſſiſtance. This tho true in Matter of Fact, yet our Author is certainly miſtaken in point of Time, for it appears from the Authority of all the [4.] French Hiſtorians, as well as from other Circumſtances, that all theſe Great Actions of this Counteſs were done this Autumn, and part of the enſuing Winter, and therefore I ſhall here inſert them altogether.

[3.] Id. ib. Cap. 73. Whereupon his Counteſs carries on the War in his Name.

She implores K. Edward's aſſiſtance.

[4] Vid. Contin. Guil. de Nangis. Du Cheſne. Mezeray.

[5.] Though the Counteſs of Montfort had ſecured her ſelf in the Town of Hennebond (as you have already heard) yet had ſhe not Forces ſufficient to take the Field; ſo that Count Charles of Blois not long after the impriſonment of the Earl of Montfort again enter'd Bretagn, to reduce what remain'd unconquer'd under his Obedience. But upon the firſt news of this Invaſion, the Counteſs ſent the Lord Amery de Clyſſon into England to deſire Succour of King Edward, offering her only Son and Heir in marriage with one of the King's Daughters; which (tho it could not then take effect, yet) was conſummated ſome Years after, as you will find in its due place: This Offer was then readily accepted by King Edward, and He preſently order'd Sir Walter Manny to go over and aſſiſt the Counteſs with as many Men at Arms as ſhe deſired, beſides Three thouſand Archers; but theſe Forces being put on Shipboard, were detained above ſix Weeks at Sea by contrary Winds, ſo that her Affairs were reduced to the laſt extremity before they could arrive; for Count Charles of Blois being backed by a powerful Army from France, had taken the City of Vannes, reſolving to put a ſpeedy period to the War, had laid cloſe Siege to Hennebond, in which the Counteſs and her Son then were, and made ſuch furious Aſſaults upon it, that had ſhe not behaved her ſelf with a Courage above her Sex, and even equal to that of moſt Men, they had both loſt ther Liberties, together with the Place. After a ſharp Aſſault which the French made upon it, ſhe finding it could not be preſerved without ſome extraordinary Effort, armed her ſelf Cap a Pied, and mounting on Horſeback, rode from Street to Street, deſiring the Men to make a Vigorous Defence; and She order'd the very Women to tuck up their Coats, and to carry Stones and Pots of Quick-Lime

[5] Id. c. 79. The Count de Blois again invades Bretagn, whereupon the Counteſs ſends into England to implore the King's aſſiſtance, which He immediately grants.

The Lord Manny is ſent with ſome Forces, but they are detained by contrary Winds.

The Counteſs is beſieged in the Caſtle of Hennebond, and makes a vigorous Effort in her own perſon to raiſe the Siege.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

to the Walls, and throw them down upon the Enemie: And not onl this, but ſhe perform'd Actions almoſt incredible, were they not atteſ ed by the Writers of that Time; for in the next Aſſault the Frenc Army made, ſhe aſcending a Tower to behold the Succeſs, obſerve that whilſt the French were aſſaulting the Town with all their Force their Camp was left unguarded; whereupon ſhe took Horſe, and arm ed as ſhe was before, ſally'd out with Three hundred choſen Men, an fetching a Compaſs to prevent being diſcern'd, fell into the Frenc Camp, (in which there were few beſides Servants) and cut down and ſet fire on the Tents and Pavilions: So ſoon as the Enemy perceiv' this by the Smoak, they ſuppoſing ſome Treachery, preſently left th Aſſault, and returned to defend their Camp; but when the Counteſ ſaw them coming, ſhe rally'd her Men, and finding ſhe could not wit ſafety return the ſame way ſhe came, took another, and made towar Breſt, which was above two and twenty French Miles from thence and tho ſhe was cloſely perſued by a Party of Horſe, led by Prince Lewi of Spain, then Marſhal of the French Army, yet ſhe out-rode them, an getting into Breſt, was received with great joy by the Inhabitants However, ſhe ſtaid not long there, for having reinforced the ſmall number ſhe had brought with her, with Five hundred Freſh Men at Arms, o the fifth day after her coming thither, ſhe returned back to Hennebond and paſſing thro a part of the French Camp, which was but weakl guarded, got in at the ſame Gate from whence ſhe had ſally'd out, whic was preſently opened to her, and there ſhe was received not only wit all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy, but with wonderful Aſtoniſhment, for they did not know till then what was become o her.

[1.] Id. c. 89.

This [1.] Action highly raiſed the Courage and Valour of her People in the Town, but at the ſame time likewiſe it did the more ſtir up and exaſperate the Fury of the Enemy, for the Siege was carried on by Prince Lewis with more fierceneſs than before, in the abſence of Count Charles, who was employ'd in the Siege of Auray; but the Walls at laſt were ſo mightily ſhatter'd by the great Stones that were thrown from the Engines, that it made the Bp of Leon, and other perſons in the Town deſirous to treat about a Surrender; and they had done it, but that the Counteſs happily interpos'd, and only begg'd three days reſpit of them, within which time (ſhe ſaid) ſhe hoped the Succours from England would arrive; which falling out very ſeaſonably according to her Expectation, the Lord Manny with his Forces were there joyfully received; and as this added freſh Courage to the Beſieg'd, ſo it diſpirited the Beſiegers to that degree, that the Lord Manny making a brisk Sally ſoon after his Arrival, with about three hundred Archers, beſides a few Men at Arms, they not only broke into the French Camp, but deſtroy'd the chiefeſt battering Engine they had; ſo that finding it impoſſible at that time to take the Town, they thought it beſt to raiſe the Siege, and march off.

The Town juſt ready to be ſurrender'd, is relieved by the Lord Manny.

[2.] Id. ib. Who not being ſtrong enough to given battel, only takes ſome Caſtles, and routs Don Lewis of Spain.

The [2.] War was continued the reſt of this Winter with various ſucceſs; Sir Walter Manny not long after took the Field with a tolerable good Army, yet however he found himſelf not ſtrong enough to give the Enemy Battel, nor yet to lay ſiege to any conſiderable Place, tho he took ſome Caſtles, as that of Conqueſt and Goryla Foreſt, and routed Don Lewis of Spain, who commanded part of the French Army in

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

in Bas-Bretagn, and killed his Brother, with a great number of his Men; but the Forces of Count Charles of Blois were ſo much ſuperior to his, that they took the Towns of Dinant and Auray, as alſo the City of Vannes, and the Towns of Karais, and then returned back, and laid freſh ſiege to Hennebond, but it was again as valiantly defended by Sir Walter Manny, being encouraged by the preſence of this brave Counteſs her ſelf; inſomuch that the French finding it too ſtrong to be taken by force, reſolved to raiſe the Siege, and ſince Winter was now far advanced, they retreated to put their Army into Quarters of refreſhment.

The Count de Blois takes Dinant and Auray, and again beſieges Hennebond, tho in vain.

[4] During this time of Receſs, both Parties being tired, a Truce was at laſt concluded between Count Charles of Blois, and the Counteſs of Montfort, and conſented to by all their Allies, to endure to the 15th of May next enſuing; whereupon ſo ſoon as the Articles were ratified, ſhe, together with her Son, took Shipping, and went for England under the Conduct of the Earl of Northampton, and arrived in ſafety at Plimouth, from whence ſhe was honourably convey'd to the K., and by Him received very graciouſly. He likewiſe took care of her Son the Lord John, who ſome Years after married the King's Daughter, but in the mean while was educated in England, and brought up in all Manly Exerciſes befitting a young Prince that was to fight for, and recover his Dominions by the Sword, before ever he could enjoy them.

[4.] Id. ib. A Truce is concluded between Count Charles and the Counteſs, who thereupon goes over into England with her Son.

Froiſſart makes the Counteſs of Montfort to have come over into England about the latter end of November, 1342, and to have ſtay'd here all this Winter, and then to have returun'd into Bretagn the beginning of the Year, Anno Dom. 1343, in the Company of the Lord Robert of Artois, whom the King ſent over to her Aſſiſtance; but this muſt certainly be a Miſtake in our Author; for all our Hiſtorians both in Print and MS, which are alſo confirmed by our Records, agree, that King Edward's Expedition into Bretagn, was not till after the Death of the ſaid Lord Robert, viz. in the ſixteenth Year of His Reign, being the Year 1342: And there is likewiſe another Infallible Proof for it, that the next Truce which was made before Vannes, bears Date the 19*th* of January that Year, or elſe Anno Dom. 1343, if it be reckoned according to our Account to begin at Chriſtmaſs.

Froiſſart's miſtake in the Counteſs's coming over rectify'd.

This I thought fit to take notice of, ſince this Error of Froiſſart hath led divers of our Modern Hiſtorians into the ſame Miſtake, and particularly the Learned Mr. Barnes, in his large Hiſtory of this King's Reign.

We ſhall now return to the Affairs of England, from which we have made too long a Digreſſion, were it not that they are ſo interwoven with thoſe of Bretagn, that they cannot well be ſeparated, eſpecially ſince it gives us the Original and Progreſs of that great Quarrel between the Potent Families of Blois and Montfort, which was carry'd on, though with various ſucceſs, for the ſpace of above Twenty Years.

In the mean while nothing happened here conſiderable, but that [5.] Queen Philippe was on the fifth of June, brought to Bed at Langley in Hertfordſhire of Her Fifth Son, who was called Edmund, and was afterwards Duke of York. King Edward having now a ſhort Interval of Peace, to expreſs His Joy at His Son's Chriſtening, (tho Froiſſart will

[5.] T. W. In hunc Ann. The Queen is brought to bed of Her fifth Son, called Edmund, needs have it to be for the Love of theOunteſs of Salisbury) proclaimed a Solemn Tourneament at London, to which reſorted many Noblemen and Knights from Foreign Parts, who took delight in ſuch Manly Exerciſes, which were then maintained with great Magnificence for fiſteen days together.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

* L. 15.
† L. 9.
A Miſtake of the Scotiſh Hiſtorians confuted.

To ſay ſomewhat of the Scotiſh Affairs: what * Hect. Boeth. and † Buchanan relate, That K. Edward immediately after the Truce at Tournay invaded Scotland with a great Army of Forty thouſand Men, and being preſſed for want of Proviſions, was forced to grant the Scots a Truce for four Months, is a great Miſtake; for the Scots had been included in the late Truce with France, and that it was obſerved for great part of the laſt Year, is as certain; but that they begun the War again in this, we have * Froiſſart's Authority for it; who relates, That about Midſummer the Scots under the Conduct of Sir William Douglas beſieged the Caſtle of Sterling, and becauſe he knew, that K. Edward being now at home, it was not probable the Siege could laſt long without ſome Powerful Diverſion, he therefore uſed the greater Fury in all his Attacks, hoping thereby to carry the Place before any Succour ſhould arrive; but King Edward about the beginning of September, being alarm'd at the News of theſe Motions of Scotland, came to York, having before x iſſued out His Commands to His Lords and Military Tenants, to meet Him with their ſeveral Retinues by ſuch a time at Berwick, where the Commiſſioners of Array for the North, did ſo beſtir themſelves, that the King was ſhortly after provided with ſufficient Forces, both of Horſe and Foot, ſo that His Army daily increaſed to the Number of near ſixty thouſand Men; which when the Lord Douglas heard, fearing if King Edward ſhould arrive before the Town was taken, that the Siege would then be raiſed, wherefore to prevent this, he ſo vigorouſly preſſed the Beſieged with continual Aſſaults, that they were at laſt forced to capitulate on Condition to march out with their Lives and Liberties preſerved, but to carry off no more than the Cloaths on their Backs.

* Id. c. 70.
The Scots beſiege the Caſtle of Sterling.

Rot. Scot. 15. Ed. 3. m. 8.
x appointed King Edward Bayliol his Lieutenant General for the defence of ye North parts of England & those in Scotland that were under ye Kings ~~[illegible]~~ Dominion, he issued out &c

Upon which K. Edward raiſes a great Army to reſcue it.

But before His arrival the Beſieged are forced to ſurrender upon Conditions.

[1.] Id. ib.
The King returns to New-caſtle for want of Proviſions.

[1.] When K. Edward received this Ill News, tho He was very much concern'd for the loſs of a Place, which was of ſo great importance to Him, yet He could not then tell how to help it, ſo that being in great want of Proviſion for His Army, He was forced to return back from Berwick to New-caſtle, and there attend the coming up of His Fleet for above a Month, [2.] in which time it was ſo ſhatter'd and diſperſed by a Tempeſt, that but a ſmall part of it was able to arrive there, and that not till November, whereby the Engliſh Army ſuffer'd much for want of Victuals, the Scots having deſtroy'd and convey'd away all the Corn and Forage from thoſe Parts.

[2.] Buchan. Ib.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib.
The Scots not knowing the K's Neceſſity, deſire a Truce, which is granted for ſix Months.

[3.] It happened well for K. Edward, that the Lord Douglas and the other Scotiſh Lords knowing nothing of this Misfortune, had before retired farther into Scotland, where dreading a ſudden Invaſion, they knew not how to prevent it, but by ſending a Bp and an Abbot to K. Edward to deſire a Truce; the Meſſengers found the King at New caſtle in the beginning of December, and there entring into a Treaty with Him and His Council, a Truce was concluded for ſix Months on theſe Conditions, viz.

Tha

Anno Dom. MCCCXLI.

That [4.] during this time, the Scots ſhould ſend into France to their King David, to let Him know, that unleſs He would return home by the Firſt of May next, with ſufficient Power to meet His Enemies in the Field, and defend His Realm, they would all ſubmit to King Edward's Government, and never after own David for their King. Theſe Reaſonable Conditions, in ſo bad a Conjuncture, were well accepted by King Edward, and the Scots went home with a Ratification of the Truce into Scotland; and the King having ſettled His Affairs in thoſe Parts, return'd towards London, and all things remain'd in the ſame State all the reſt of this Year.

[4.] Froiſſ. ib. Bach. ib.
The Conditions of it.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

This is Froiſſart's Account of King Edward's Expedition; which, tho' * H. Knyghton does not particularly mention, yet he ſays in general, That K. Edward went into Scotland the laſt Year, towards the end of November, and kept His Chriſtmaſs at the Abby of Melros; and that the Earl of Derby did the like at the Caſtle of Roxburgh, During which time, the Truce was made between England and Scotland. After which, removing to Berwick, He there kept His Eaſter. And thither came Twelve of the beſt Scotiſh Knights, to a Tourneament then held by Him; wherein Two of them were kill'd, with a Knight of the Earl of Derby's: Which Lord (he ſays) behaved himſelf in this Expedition, with that Courteſie and Honour, that he gain'd the general Eſteem of all Sorts of Men.

* Ad hunc An.
The K. keeps His Chriſtmaſs at the Abby of Melros, and from thence removes to Berwick, and holds a Tourneament.

So ſoon as the King return'd into England, He † held a Parliament, or rather Great Council, of the Biſhops and Peers at Weſtminſter, about the laſt of April: Wherein, as * Froiſſart relates, all the Earls and Barons there preſent, adviſed the King, That laying aſide all other Affairs, He ſhould give a ſpeedy Aſſiſtance to the Counteſs of Montfort, who then ſojourn'd with the Queen. And they further adviſed Him, That ſince He had a Foreign War upon His Hands, it would be very convenient to make a Truce with Scotland for Two Years.

† Rot. Clauſ. 16 Ed. 3. m. 38. dors.
* Ibid. c. 91.
The K. holds a Great Council, and what was done in it.

As to the firſt Part of their Advice, the [1.] King readily complyed with it; and by the end of May, ſent back the Counteſs of Montfort, attended by the Lord Robert of Artois, (Chief Commander in this Expedition) and the Earls of *Northampton and Devonſhire, with the Lord Stafford, beſides other Barons and Perſons of Quality; with a ſufficient Army of Archers and Men at Arms, in a Fleet of about Forty Six Sail, bound for Bretagne. But Count Charles of Blois hearing of this Deſign, had got ready a Navy of between Thirty and Forty Sail, in which were about Four Thouſand Men, and had ſent them out to fall upon the Engliſh Fleet, and hinder the Landing of their Forces: They met with them near the Iſle of Guernſey, but the Engliſh, as ſoon as ever they diſcover'd them to be the Enemy, came furiouſly upon the French Fleet, having the Advantage of the Wind, ſo that both Fleets preſently engaging, there began a dreadful Sea-Fight, firſt with Arrows, ſhot from the Genoueſe Croſs-Bows, on the one Side, and the Engliſh Long-Bows on the other; till at laſt the Ships coming up cloſe together, fell to Boarding and Handy-ſtrokes; where (as our Author tells us) the Counteſs of Montfort her ſelf, being Armed like a Man, behaved her ſelf with her Sword, as gallantly as any Soldier in the Fleet. The Fight began about Four in the Afternoon, and continued till Night parted them, without any great Advantage on either ſide: Then they caſt Anchor not far from each other,

[1.] Id. ib.

The Lord Robert of Artois is ſent into Bretagne with a ſmall Army, and in his Paſſage encounters the French Fleet.

* note th[illegible] of the [illegible] was appointed by the King to be his [illegible] [illegible] as appears by his Comissione [illegible] upon the Roll [illegible] Rot [illegible]

In which the Counteſs of Montfort behaves her ſelf very gallantly.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

The two Fleets are parted, & diſperſed by a Storm.

for they reſolved to fall on again the next Morning; but a Violent Stor ariſing in the Night, did ſo diſperſe both the Fleets, that they cou never meet again; that belonging to the French, conſiſting of gre Ships, was forced to beat it out at open Sea; whilſt the Engliſh Fle which were much Smaller Veſſels, by Morning recovered the Shor
Where the Lord Robert of Artois landing with his Forces near the Ci

The Lord Robert lands his Forces near Vannes.

of Vannes, reſolved to begin with the Siege of that Place; which w preſently undertook, being encouraged by the Preſence of the Cou teſs of Montfort; and, after a vigorous Aſſault made by the En liſh, tho' without any effect, the Town was taken the Night followin thro' Surpriſe, by a Party commanded by the E of Oxford and Sir Wa ter Manny, who privately clapt Scaling-Ladders to the Walls, at

And takes the Town by a Scalade.

Place where there was little or no Guard kept; whereby they enter the Town under the Cover of two falſe Attacks, which were made the ſame time, by the Lord Robert and the Earl of Salisbury, at tw different Places, to divert the Beſieged.

But the Triumph of this Victory was but of a ſhort Continuanc
For the Counteſs of Montfort, with Sir Walter Manny, and divers the Engliſh Nobility, as well as the greateſt Part of their Forces, preſen

[2.] Id. c. 93. The Lord Robert of Artois is beſieged in Rhennes by the French Army.

ly going away to [2.] Hennebond, and the Earl of Salisbury marchin to beſiege Rhennes, the Lord Robert of Artois was left in the Tow with but a very indifferent Gariſon. Not long after, the Lor Henry de Leon, and Sir Oliver Clyſſon, with ſome other Noblemen Count Charles's Party, who were extremely concern'd at the late I Succeſs, reſolved to recover the Town by the ſame Way it was taken
So drawing together about Twelve Thouſand Men, they on the ſud den encamped before the Place; to which they gave ſo vigorous a Attack, that prevailing by their Numbers over the Gariſon, they en tred the Town by Force, and put all the Engliſh they could meet wit to the Sword; the Lord Robert himſelf hardly eſcaping, got thro' Poſtern to Hennebond, being grievouſly wounded in the Buttock; bu the Air not agreeing with him there, he return'd into England, i hopes to meet with better Remedies: Yet tho' he came alive to Lon don, he died there ſoon after of his Wounds; or, as the French MS Chronicle relates, of a Flux. His Death being as much regretted b King Edward, as it gave Occaſion of Joy to the French, who looke upon him, as one that had Sacrificed the Peace of his Country to hi own private Reſentments. I ſhall now ſay ſomewhat of the Scoti Affairs.

[3.] Id ib. The Scotiſh Nobility ſend into France, deſiring their King's Return, who lays hold of the Opportunity of the Truce to do it, and lands in Scotland.

[4.] Buch. l. 9.

Not [3.] long after, the Scotiſh Nobility, according to their lat Engagement to King Edward, ſent Sir Robert Veſci, and Sir Simo
Fraiſer, with two other Knights, to King David into France, to deſir
His Return: But in the mean while, before their Commiſſioners coul arrive there, King David had thought it moſt convenient for His Af fairs, to lay hold on this Opportunity of the late Truce, to retur home. Wherefore [4.] taking His leave of the French King, (wh furniſhed Him with Men, Shipping, and all things neceſſary for Hi Voyage) He left France, together with His Queen, (King Edward' Siſter) and on the Third of June, landed at the Haven of Innerber vey in Scotland, after near Nine Years Abſence, before His Subjec heard any thing of His coming. But as ſoon as they knew of i they came flocking in to Him, to congratulate His Return: And bein arrived

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

rrived at St. John's-Town, He was met by the Lord Robert Stewart, is Vice-Roy, and Others of the Nobility, who highly complain'd of e Spoils and Devaſtations the Engliſh had made, [4.] which the King ſured them He would revenge with all the ſpeed He could. [5.] In der to this, He forthwith raiſed a great Army, of which making the ord Randolph General, (the King Himſelf, for ſome private Reaſons, oing with him Incognito, and only as a Voluntier); then having with eſe Forces depopulated Northumberland for near Two Months, as far s the River Tyne, He returned home with a great deal of Plunder, and ithout receiving any conſiderable oppoſition; ſome time after the ing declaring Himſelf Commander in chief of the whole Army, arched in perſon into England; and tho the Engliſh Generals declin'd ghting (as the Scotiſh Hiſtorians ſuppoſe, tho falſly, that K. Edward as then ſtill in France) however they watched the Motions of the Scots, nd with a good Body of Horſe, not only hindred them from ſpoiling he Country, but killed five Scotiſh Knights, who had ſtraggled too far om the Army, putting to flight thoſe that came with them. Then ing David, that He might not ſpend His Time in vain, brought back is Forces, and muſtering them once more, made a Third Invaſion bout the end of Autumn, when the Weather proving very bad, by rea- on of the Great Rains that fell, it ſo raiſed the Rivers and Brooks, that t hindred His Men from going out to forage; ſo that contenting Him- elf with burning a few Caſtles in the Borders, He returned home with- ut doing any great matter. But not long after there was a Truce agreed n between the Two Nations, provided the King of France would allow f it; for it had been already concerted, that the Scots ſhould make no eace without that King's Privity and Conſent.

He is joyfully received by His Subjects.

[4.] Froiſſ. c. 79.

[5.] Id. ib. Hect. Boeth. L. 15.

He raiſes a great Army, and therewith invades England thrice in one Summer.

This is all that I can find related by the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, concerning three ſeveral Expeditions, which they relate their King to have made mmediately after His Return, and of which our Engliſh Writers are n a manner ſilent; yet * Froiſſart makes a more formidable Buſineſs of t, and ſuppoſes K. David to have made but one Invaſion into England his Year, but that a very terrible one; for that King having raiſed an Army of no leſs than Sixty Thouſand Foot, and Three Thouſand Horſe, with which He invaded Northumberland, ſpoiled all the Coun- ry, and beſieged New-caſtle; but that whilſt He lay there, the Lord Nevil, Governor of the Caſtle, ſent out about Three hundred Lances one Morning before Day to make an Aſſault upon the Scotiſh Camp, which was performed with ſo good Succeſs, that ſurprizing them in their Beds, they not only ſlew a great many of them, but alſo ſeizing upon the Earl of Murrey, one of their Generals, they carry'd him away Priſoner into the Tower: This Affront ſo enraged the King, and all that were with Him, that the next day they made a vigorous Aſſault upon it, but not being able to take it, [1.] His Council perſwaded Him to quit the Siege, and march to Durham, as a more eaſie Prey; which City our Author falſly ſuppoſes that King to have taken, plundered and burnt without any difficulty, and that He ſpoiled even the Shrine and Church of St. Cuthbert of all its Plate, Jewels and Ornaments; and that having put all the Inhabitants of whatſoever Age, Sex or Condition to the Sword, without ſparing the very Monks and Clergy, He with His Army returned home laden with Spoil; which, I doubt not, but is all a Miſtake of this Author, proceeding from Falſe Information, ſince I can-

* cap. 75. Froiſſart's Relation of King David's Invaſion very different from that of the Scotiſh Writers.

[1.] Id. c. 76. Froiſſart's Miſtake about the Scots taking and burning of Durham.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

not find any thing like it either in the Scotiſh, or in any of our own H ſtorians, in Manuſcript, or Print, of that Time, who would not hav failed to have mentioned ſo Cruel and Sacrilegious an Action; yet pe haps this Author being a Foreigner, confounds this Expedition of Ki David's with that he made about four Years after; when again inv ding England, He haraſſed and plundered the Biſhoprick of Durba tho without taking the City it ſelf: But I ſhall now give you the r of this Expedition, according as this Author relates it, tho what follo ſeems more probable.

[2.] Id. c. 77. The Scots are ſet upon in their Return by the Gariſon of Werk Caſtle.

[2] The Scotiſh Army being thus laden with Spoils, in their Retu homeward, paſſed by the Caſtle of Werk in Northumberland, whi belonged to the Earl of Salisbury, who was at that time a Priſoner France, but his Lady, the Counteſs, was then in it, together with Sir Wi liam Montacute, her Husband's Brother, who was Governor of it: Th Caſtle the Scots would have paſſed by, when the Governor obſervi them to march in ſight of it with a vaſt Train of Horſes and Carriag laden with Plunder, he reſolved to have a ſhare of it, and ſo makin a brisk Sally with about forty Horſe, fell upon the Rear of the Scots A my, and putting them to the rout, returned with no leſs than ſix ſco Horſes laden with Rich Plunder, which he carried into the Caſtl This ſo enraged the Scots, that in revenge they immediately began aſſault the Caſtle, but the Beſieged being encouraged by the Counte of Salisbury, Lady of the Caſtle, made ſo vigorous a Defence, that th Scots being beaten off with great loſs, were forced to retreat for th time; but King David reſolving to take it, commanded His Batte ing Engines to be raiſed againſt it, which when the Governor ſaw, b ing ſenſible that the Place could not long hold out without a ſpeed Relief, and not being able to perſuade any body in the Caſtle to ven ture through the Scotiſh Camp to give K. Edward notice of their da ger, and to beg His ſpeedy Succour, therefore the Governor himſe mounting a ſwift Horſe, ventured to do it, and paſſing by Night thr the Enemies Camp, met K. Edward, then upon His March near th Place; for ſo ſoon as He had heard of King David's having enter'd Eng land, He had raiſed a great Army, with which He now approache near that of the Scots; which when they heard, not thinking it ſa for them to venture a Battel, being heavy laden with Plunder, the preſently raiſed the Siege, and early the next Morning paſſed the Twee with all their Forces, taking the direct way to the Foreſt of Tedworth there to wait K. Edward's Motions, and ſee whether He would go back or invade Scotland.

Whereupon K. David lays ſiege to it.

King Edward having notice of it marches to its Relief, whereupon the Scots raiſe the Siege.

[3.] Id. c. 78. King Edward comes to Werk Caſtle, where He is met by the Counteſs of Salisbury.

The [3.] very ſame day the Scots marched off, K. Edward arrive with His Army at the Caſtle of Werk, where His coming was ver opportune and lucky, for as He went up to the Caſtle, He was met with out the Gate by the Counteſs of Salisbury her ſelf, who falling upo her Knees, gave the King her moſt humble Thanks for His Seaſonabl Relief; His Majeſty preſently took her up, and having ſaluted her ſhe treated Him and His Company very magnificently during on Night that He ſtay'd there: The Courtly Addreſs the King made to the Counteſs, who (tho then above thirty Years of Age) was ſtil ſufficiently beautiful, gave occaſion to Froiſſart, and after him, to other Hiſtorians, to ſuppoſe that K. Edward then fell in love with her,

although

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

although there were no reaſonable Grounds for ſuch a Conjecture, as I ſhall ſhew further hereafter.

[4.] Id. c. 79. The K. takes His leave of the Counteſs, and perſues the Scots, who retreat into the Foreſt of Tedworth.

[4.] The King having taken His Leave of this Lady, put Himſelf at the Head of His Army, and perſued the Scots till He came to Berwick, from whence He marched forward within eight Miles of Tedworth Foreſt, where K. David was already enter'd with all His Forces, in confidence that none durſt follow Him thro' that almoſt impaſſible Deſart; for three Days together K. Edward lay near the Skirts of it, to ſee whether the Scots would come forth and give Him Battel; yet all this while there were divers Skirmiſhes between the Two Armies, and ſeveral were ſlain and taken interchangeably on both ſides, tho the greater ſhare of the Loſs fell to the Scots.

[5.] Id. ib. The Noblemen of both ſides endeavour a Truce, which is at laſt agreed to by the Scotiſh K. for a time; and the Conditions of it.

[5.] Notwithſtanding theſe ſmall Sallies and Rencounters of the Scots and Engliſh, during the ſpace of three Days, there were certain Noblemen, on both parts, that earneſtly labour'd to compoſe Matters for the preſent between the Two Kings; and their Treaty at laſt had ſuch good effect, that a Truce was agreed on for Two Years, provided the French King would give His Conſent to it; for K. David was ſo cloſely confederated with K. Philip, that He could admit of no Peace or Truce without His Leave, and therefore He could only for the preſent conſent that the Truce ſhould continue until the firſt Day of May following. It was alſo further agreed, That the Earl of Murrey ſhould be quitted of his Ranſom and Impriſonment, if the K. of Scots could ſo far prevail with the French K., as that the Earl of Salisbury, who was already at liberty, upon Parole, ſhould now be acquitted of all Obligations. This Truce the K. of Scots was by His Council earneſtly adviſed to make, that Scotland might thereby have a breathing-while to recover it ſelf, and that the Husbandmen might return again to the Plough, which was now almoſt wholly neglected; and K. Edward, for His part, agreed to it the more willingly, not only becauſe the Seaſon of the Year began to call for a Reſpit, but alſo, that He had ſeveral Armies at this time to maintain at a vaſt Charge in Gaſcoign, Bretagn, and other Places, beſides His other Expences; and ſurely there muſt have been at that time very great Reaſons which induced King Edward to that Temper, as not to take a ſevere Revenge upon the Scots for the Miſchief they had lately done in England.

The Reaſons why this Truce was ſo willingly conſented to on both ſides.

[1.] Id. ib. The Earl of Salisbury and Lord Ufford are exchanged for the Earl of Murrey.

[1.] Soon after this, K. David by His Ambaſſadors prevail'd upon the French K. to conſent to this Truce in the Form as it was agreed on; and alſo to releaſe the Earl of Salisbury and the Young Lord Ufford, Son to the Earl of Suffolk, in exchange for the Earl of Murrey, who had been long kept Priſoner; but they being two for one, the K of France had 3000 Pounds of them in Money to Boot.

This is the Account that Froiſſart gives us concerning K. Edward's Expedition this Summer, which I cannot find mentioned by any other Hiſtorian, either Scotiſh or Engliſh, any more than the reſt of the Actions already related; ſo that I muſt ſtill doubt whether our Author hath not here plaid the part of a Romancer, in ſuppoſing K. Edward to have made this Expedition, that he might have a freſh Occaſion of mentioning the Courtſhip, which he all along (without any Juſt Grounds) ſuppoſes this King to have made to the Counteſs of Salisbury; and therefore I ſhall leave it to the Reader's Judgment what Credit to give to all this Relation: but we may give more to this Author's Teſtimony concerning the Affairs of Bretagn, that were carry'd on by K. Edward in Perſon this Year.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. The K. raiſes an Army to paſs over into Bretagn.

* Rot. Clauſ. 16 Ed 3. m. 28. dorſ.

The K. goes on board with His Army, and lands not far from Vannes, which he aſſaults, but without any effect.

* Ib. part 2. m. 23. dorſ.

[3.] Froiſſ. ib.

Whereupon He marches to Nants, which He beſieges without ſucceſs.

He removes to Dinant, which He takes by Storm.

For ſo ſoon as He received the News of the Bad Succeſs of His Forces in Bretagne, and not long after ſaw the Death of His Friend the Lord Robert of [2.] Artois; at which being highly grieved, He vowed to revenge it, and to this end raiſed a powerful Army, and appointed it by Proclamation to be ready to paſs with Him into Bretagne by Midſummer following; and * then wrote to Pope Clement the Sixth to put up Prayers to the Almighty for His Happy Progreſs, and that He Himſelf would alſo cauſe Proceſſions and other Pious Offices to be exercis'd in England for a Bleſſing upon His Forces, which at that time He intended to ſend over againſt France; all which being performed accordingly, the K. with His Forces went on Shipboard the 4th of Octob. at Sandwich, and landed at a Port not far from Vannes, near the very Place where the Lord Robert of Artois had come on Shore after his Fight at Sea; [3.] the King, after His Army were all landed, and a little refreſhed, inveſted the Town, and gave it a vigorous Attack, but without any great ſucceſs, for the Lord Henry de Leon, and Sir Oliver Cliſſon, with other Noblemen were in it, and it was now too well fortify'd (beſides the numerouſneſs of the Gariſon) to be eaſily taken; the King perceiving the Strength of the Place, and that His whole Army was not able to continue there for want of Forage, divided His Forces, and having left a ſufficient number to block up the Town, marched to Nants, where He heard Count Charles of Blois then was; reſolving, if he would not come out to give Him Battel, to beſiege Him in that place: but when the King had made divers Aſſaults upon the City, without any effect, and found He could not make Count Charles come out to fight Him, being weary of ſtaying longer there, He left a Body of Six hundred Men at Arms, and Two thouſand Archers to block it up, whilſt He with the reſt of His Forces marched away to Dinant, which not being ſo ſtrong as any of the other Places already mention'd, was after ſome reſiſtance taken by Storm, and all the Gariſon put to the Sword, (except the Governour) who had his Life ſaved for his extraordinary Valour.

[4.] Id c. 95.

The French making a Sally out of Vannes, are repulſed with loſs.

In [4.] the mean while the Siege of Vannes was carry'd on with better ſucceſs than could be expected, conſidering the ſmalneſs of the Forces that lay before it; for K. Edward with the beſt part of the Engliſh Army being now gone, the Beſieged grew ſo bold, that ſetting open their Gates, they made a brisk Sally upon the Engliſh, under the command of the Lord de Leon, and Sir Oliver Cliſſon; but were ſo warmly received by the Earl of Warwick, and Sir Water Manny and other Noblemen (who were then leading up their Forces to make an Attack upon the Town) that the French were driven back with conſiderable loſs, even to the Barriers of the Town; ſo that fearing the Enemy ſhould enter along with them, they preſently cloſed the Turn-Pikes upon thoſe that followed; but it happened very unluckily, for the Lord de Leon and Sir Oliver Cliſſon, who valiantly made good the Retreat, being with about forty Gentlemen more ſhut out, they were made Priſoners, upon which the Beſieged growing more wary, durſt make no more Sallies, yet the Place ſtill held out.

Whilſt [5.] K. Edward's Forces were thus employ'd in carrying on three Sieges at once, there happened ſomewhat which put a ſtop to His further Succeſs; for when Count Charles of Blois perceived he ſhould be overpower'd by the great Forces that the K. had now brought over with Him, he ſolicited the K. of France by frequent Letters and Meſſages to ſend him a powerful Aſſiſtance with all the ſpeed he could; He thereupon ordered His Son, the Duke of Normandy, to raiſe a great Army for that purpoſe, who as ſoon as He could get His Forces in a readineſs, forthwith marched from the City of Angiers towards that of Nants; but upon his approach the Engliſh Commanders (by K. Edward's Order) raiſed the Siege before that Place, and marched with thoſe Forces to Vannes, to which Siege the K. was then returned in perſon, and had ſo ſecurely intrenched Himſelf, that the French Army (tho far more numerous than His) could not force Him to a Battel but as He Himſelf pleaſed: for the Duke of Normandy, with Count Charles, and all the joint Forces having relieved Nants, were come before Vannes, and encamped in a large Meadow between the Rivers of Claye and Vilaine, and had made a great and deep Trench round about their Army.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

[5.] Id. c. 98. The Count of Blois ſolicits K. Philip for aſſiſtance, which is ſent under the command of the Duke of Normandy, who raiſes the Siege of Nantz, and then comes before Vannes.

[6.] Upon the News of their approach, K. Edward ordered that part of the Army commanded by the Earls of Salisbury and Pembroke to quit the Siege of Rhennes, and to come and reinforce Him, for He expected to have a Battel with the French at that time, and His Forces, both Engliſh and Bretons made up but about Two thouſand and five hundred Men of Arms, and Six thouſand Archers, and about Six thouſand others on foot, beſides thoſe who were left to keep the Navy, and others in Gariſon, and with the Counteſs in Hennebond; but theſe were all choſen Men under good Leaders, and were very ſtrongly entrenched in their Camp, which was not to be eaſily forced, (as I have already obſerved): Thus theſe two Armies lay facing one another for ſeveral days, without any Action, further than ſome light Skirmiſhes; for the French could not force the Engliſh to Battel, nor durſt they attempt them in their Camp; and K. Edward thought it not Wiſdom to leave His Intrenchments, and attack the Enemy at ſuch great diſadvantage as He knew the Aggreſſor muſt needs undergo; eſpecially ſince He muſt then leave the City on His Back to ſecond the Enemy: Nor did He give any more Aſſaults to the Place, becauſe of keeping His Men freſh and entire againſt the time of Battel, if it ſhould be offer'd, and which He then reſolved to accept.

[6.] Id. ib. The K. commands the Siege of Rhennes to be raiſed, and the Forces to come to Him, who ſtrongly entrenches Himſelf in His Camp, and lies ſtill, expecting what the French would do.

I will now, for the better underſtanding of what follows, here inſert ſomewhat of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory: *_Pope Benedict_ XII. a Prelate more affectionate to the exaltation of the Roman See, than that of His own particular Family, deceaſed in April this Year, leaving a great Treaſure to His Church, but little or nothing to His own Relations: He was ſucceeded by Peter Roger, ABp of Roan, by the Name of Clement VI. who took a quite contrary Courſe, and as He made no ſcruple to divert the Riches of that Church to His own Pride and Grandeur, ſo He alſo again introduced the Nepotiſm, to the great Prejudice and Scandal of it. I have nothing to add more upon this subject but that [illegible] King received an Acc[illegible] from the Cardinals at Avignon of this Popes election he immediately wrote him a congratulatory epistle upon his advancement to the papal See, farther recommending himself and his affairs to his holiness [illegible] lish'd in [illegible] p. 313.

* T. W. ad An. 1340, ſed falſo. Mezeray, ad hunc Ann.

But to return to the Affairs of War: Whilſt [1.] the Two Princes lay thus in their reſpective Quarters, conſidering what to do, Winter was pretty well advanced, and yet both Armies lay ſtill encamped juſt as they

[1.] Id. ib.

* Rot. Parl. 17 Ed. 3. n.8.

[2.] Froiſſ. ib. The Deſigns of the French againſt the Engliſh Army, yet both of them ſuffer much hardſhip.s

they did before: In the mean while the New * Pope Clement ſent Two Cardinals, Peter of Præneſte, and Annibald of Tuſculum to mediate Peace between the Two Crowns, and they rode every day between a both Parties to endeavour to bring it about; at firſt they met with great Difficulties, for the [2.] French thought to keep the K. there, as it were beſieged, till He ſhould even be forced to come forth, and give them Battel, to His great Diſadvantage; and the K. had beſides ſome Appre-henſions that the Enemy would adventure to break into His Camp, and force Him to fight; or at leaſt, ſo weary Him out, that He ſhould be able to lie there no longer: And indeed both Armies endured great Hardſhips; for as the French ſuffered much by the Wet and Cold Weather, ſo on the other ſide, tho the Engliſh had made themſelves good Huts againſt both thoſe Inconveniences, yet they were in great Streight for Proviſions, not daring to go out into the Country to forage, but i great and ſtrong Parties, for fear of the French, who commanded th Country; and Prince Lewis of Spain, who had then a Fleet at Sea, ſ narrowly watched the Coaſt, that little Proviſion could be brought t them that way. And tho' one part of the K's Navy lay at Breſt, an the other at Hennebond, however they did not go out to Sea at all thi Winter, but for what Reaſons I am not able to determine; yet had hi Fleet then commanded the Sea, (as it might have done) His Arm had never been reduced to thoſe Streights as it was for want of Provi ſions.

[3.] Odoric. Rayn. ad hunc Ann. A Truce is at laſt propoſed between the two Princes by the Cardinal Legates, which is at firſt proteſted againſt by King Edward.

[3.] Theſe Difficulties at laſt ſerved to prepare the Minds of bot Princes to hearken to a Truce, and render'd them more inclinable t accept of the Cardinal's Offers: At firſt they both conſented to a ſho Truce for Bretagne only; but when the Cardinals urged, that the ſhould appoint a time for a further Treaty, concerning a final Accom modation between them before the Pope, here K. Edward proteſted, th
He would never allow the Pope ſuch an Abſolute Power as to determi
His Quarrel, unleſs a Peace might be had both honourable to Himſel and profitable for His Allies: and then He would conſent to have t Treaty about it brought before His Holineſs, and then too He wou ſubmit to Him only as an indifferent Arbitrator, and not as a Judg and if they would not yield to this, He would perſue His Quarrel t the utmoſt. So careful was this K. (like as K. Edward His Grandfath had been before) leſt the Pope ſhould improve this Precedent into Right, of making Himſelf a Judge of all Differences and Quarrels th might ariſe between theſe Princes.

The Legates at laſt obtain a Truce between England and France for three Years, which is ſworn to by K. Edward and by the Duke of Normandy.

However at laſt theſe Cardinals laboured ſo effectually, that they o tain'd a Truce between England and France, and their Allies, to hold f
Three Years; during which time, the whole Controverſie then depen ing, was to be weighed, and impartially conſidered, and ſome equ
Method of Peace to be deviſed by the Pope (not as a Judge) but o ly as a Friend to the Common Peace of Chriſtendom; Some of the Chi Articles of this Truce being agreed on, were ſworn to by K. Edward
His Own Name, and by the Duke of Normandy, on the behalf of t K. His Father: But ſince there was then a neceſſity for both Armies i mediately to decamp, a Time was appointed in the beginning of Janu
ry following to treat more fully thereof, at Maleſtroit in Bretagne, whe the Plenipotentiaries to be appointed by both Kings were to have Meeting; and ſo there being a mutual Exchange made of ſome of t

Priſone

Priſoners taken during this War, as particularly the Lord Oliver Cliſſon was exchanged for the Lord Stafford; then the Armies broke up, and both Princes civilly took leave of each other.

[4.] Preſently after this Agreement, about Chriſtmaſs following, K. Edward went on Shipboard with His Forces, having the Counteſs of Montford in His Company; but in His Paſſage met with ſo violent a Storm, as drove His Fleet upon the Coaſt of Spain, whereby ſeveral of His Ships, with divers Perſons of Quality periſhed. The Counteſs with much ado landed in Devonſhire, but the King being kept at Sea above five Weeks by contrary Winds, landed on the ~~firſt~~ of March at Weymouth, and ſoon after came to London, where He was received with great Joy by His Queen, and all the Nobility, who had been in mighty concern what was become of Him. * ~~Then ſoon after He ſet forth a Proclamation to give Publick Notice~~ of the ~~Truce lately made in~~ Bretagn.

In [5.] the mean while certain Commiſſioners appointed by both Kings met at the Priory of St. Mary Magdalen's in Maleſtroit, a Town in Bretagne, where, by the Mediation of the Cardinals aforeſaid, the Articles of the Truce were reduced into theſe enſuing Heads; which I ſhall not give you as they are found in Walſingham, and ſome other Writers, for they are tedious and immethodical; but according as they are abridged by the Diligent Du Cheſne, who hath drawn up the whole and entire Senſe of them in this ſhort Form.

1. That out of Reverence to Holy Church, the Support of Chriſtianity, and Eaſe of the Subjects of both Kings, and for the Honour of the Cardinals then mediating Peace and Concord between Them, the Two Kings would ſend ſome of their Own Blood, with Others to the Court of Rome, to end all Differences and Debates before the Pope, having Power by His Conſent, with the Conſiſtory of Cardinals, to alledge and propound their Reaſons on both ſides; not that He ſhould end and decide it, or give Sentence, but only for the making a better Peace and Treaty by way of Compromiſe.

2. The Treators and Ambaſſadors to appear before the Pope by the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt (or Midſummer-day) next coming, and that before Chriſtmaſs the Treaty ſhould be ended, if nothing happened that requir'd the further delay to it: But in caſe the Treators be not hindered by other Buſineſs, or that the Pope cannot by that time compoſe the Differences between the Two Kings, yet neverthleſs the Truce ſhall continue for Three Years after the Feaſt of St. Michael next following, between the Kings of England and France, the K of Scots, the Earl of Haynault, and all the Allies of the ſaid Kings; that is to ſay, the Dukes of Brabant and Guelderland, the Marqueſs of Juliers, Monſieur John de Haynault, and the People of Flanders in all their Lands and Seignioories.

3. That the K. of Scots, and Earl of Haynault, and other Allies of the ſaid Kings ſhould ſend their Ambaſſadors to the Court of Rome, by the Feaſt of St. John, with ſufficient Power to conſent to, and confirm the Treaty before the Pope, for what belongs to Them; but if they would not ſend, the Treaty was to proceed notwithſtanding.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLII.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII.

[4.] H. K. col. 2583. Froiſſ. c. 100. The K. goes on Shipboard, and in His Paſſage endures a violent Storm, and is kept at Sea above five Weeks.

* ~~Rot. Clauſ. 16 Ed. 3.~~ p. 1. ~~m. 31.~~

[5.] T. W. The Truce is fully concluded after the K's departure, with the Articles of it.

and [illegible] before the Kings arrival in England he ordered certain writs [illegible] sent to all the Clergy and great Officers [illegible] Ireland and Wales [illegible] to proclaim the [illegible] truce [illegible] in the Counties and districts [illegible] 17 Ed: 3. pt. 1. m. [illegible] and immediately upon his arrival Sr. Robert Parning then Ld. Chancellor attended the King with the great seal [illegible] to him [illegible] the same time another great [illegible] which he had carried [illegible] with him into Britany [illegible] the Chancellor having received [illegible] it [illegible] the King [illegible] it was inclosed and sealed caused divers writs to be sealed [illegible] which being done he put it into the bag again and sealed it with his own seal [illegible] the King's [illegible] ing. Rot. Claus. 17 Ed: 3. m 23. d. Vid Rs. col. p 357.

4. That

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII.

4. That the Truce ſhould be obſerved in Bretagne between the Tw Kings and their Allies, notwithſtanding they both pretend Right t the ſaid Dutchy.

5. The City of Vannes ſhould remain in the Hands of the Cardinal or of one of them, to be holden during the Truce in the Name of th Pope, and after the end of the Truce, they to diſpoſe of it as the pleaſed.

6. That the Cardinals ſhould labour diligently to find ſome way ho the Flemings might be abſolved from the Pope's Cenſures which the had incurred.

7. That the Earl of Flanders ſhould remain in his Earldom as Lord though not as a Sovereign, provided the People give their Conſen to it.

8. That both Kings ſhould endeavour without Fraud that their Subjects ſhould not make War upon each other in Gaſcoigne, nor in Bretagne, during the Truce, nor in any other Place; and in caſe they ſhould it ſhould cauſe no Rupture between the Princes.

9. That none who were under the Obedience of one King, before or at the Time when the Truce was made, ſhould put himſelf under th Obedience of the other during the Truce.

10. That nothing ſhould be given or promiſed, directly, or indirectly, to any Party to make War during the Truce.

11. That the Truce be kept and obſerved by Land and Sea, and ſworn to by other Parties, and ſpeedily publiſhed through both Armies and within fifteen Days in Gaſcoigne, Bretagne, and Flanders; and in England and Scotland within Forty.

The Reſidue of the Articles are the ſame with thoſe of the Truce mad at the Siege of Tournay the 25*th* of September, 1343; which being already expreſs'd, need not be again repeated.

This Truce was made in the Priory of St. Mary Magdalen, in the Town of Maleſtroit, and ſigned the 19*th* of January, A. D. 1343, according to Avesbury; as it ſhould be alſo by Walſingham, were he true to hi own Reckoning, in beginning the Year at Chriſtmaſs; but the Treaty it ſelf is alſo miſplaced in his Chronicle, and under Anno D 1341.

The manner of the French and Engliſh Commiſſioners taking an Oath on their Maſters behalf, that they ſhould obſerve the Article of the Truce.

And to theſe Agreements the Lord Otho, Duke of Burgundy, the Lor Peter, Duke of Bourbon, with the Earls of Boulogne, Auxerre, Sancerre Joigny and Porcien; the Lords Milo de Nogheres, and Ingelram de Couc were Witneſſes, who as Commiſſioners for Philip K. of Franoe, took a Oath, Upon His Soul (as the Form then was) that He ſhould obſerv it: And in like manner the Earls of Darby, Northampton and Saliſbury, with the Lords Stafford, Burghwaſh, Cantilupe, Cobham, Maun Berkley, and Dr. John Ufford, Arch-Deacon of Ely, did ſwear On th Soul of Edward K. of England, their Maſter, by laying their Hands upo the Holy Goſpels.

Theſe Articles of the Truce being ſolemnly confirm'd in the Manne abovementioned, the Cardinals cauſed a Charter thereof to be draw into the Form ſet down at large in our Authors, and to which all th ſaid Perſons ſet their Hands and Seals on the Day and Year above-written, in the preſence of the Cardinals themſelves, and many other Grea Lords and Gentlemen of both Nations.

I ſhall conclude this Year with the Affairs of England, which, ſince we were taken up with the War in Bretagne, could not well be mentioned ſooner.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII

About three Months after the Concluſion of this Treaty, a * Parliament was held at Weſtminſter, Fifteen days after Eaſter, or the Three and Twentieth of April: As for the Cauſes of Summoning it, we need go no further than the Writ it ſelf; viz. That it was to treat and adviſe with the Great Men and Commons, what was beſt to be done about the King's Affairs, as alſo concerning the Truce lately made between Him and His Adverſary of France: And laſtly, about the good Government and Safety of His Realm and People.

* Rot Parl. 17 Ed. 3. n. 7, 8, 9.

A Parl. held at Weſtminſter, and to what Intents.

The Parliament being Aſſembled, the Chancellor ſent for Sir Bartholomew Burgherſh to come into the Houſe; and becauſe he had been with the King at the making of the late Truce, and knew beſt what had paſſed there, he was appointed to declare to the Parliament, upon what Occaſion it was concluded. Whereupon he gave them a brief Account, 'That after the King had begun the War with France, by Aſſent of the Prelates, Great Men, and Commons, to obtain His Rights and Inheritance there; He had divers times paſſed the Sea with His Army, and after His laſt going over, had taken ſeveral Towns, Caſtles, and Forts in Bretagne; but that whilſt He lay at the Siege of Vannes, He was deſired by the Pope, for the Honour of God and Holy Church, to accept of the Mediation of two Cardinals whom He ſhould ſend to Him, to mediate a Truce, until a Peace could be treated of: And then concluded, That the King, perceiving the Truce to be Honourable, and Advantageous for Him and His Allies, aſſented to it: That, during the Continuance thereof, a Treaty of Peace might be had, before the Pope, as a Mediator and Friend, but not as a Judge. Which Peace, if Good and Honourable, the King would accept of; if not, He would perſue His Quarrel. And Sir Bartholomew further ſaid, That becauſe the War was begun by the Common Advice of the Prelates, Great Men, and Commons, the King would not Treat of, or make Peace without the like Aſſent. Wherefore the Prelates and Great Men were charged to Aſſemble on Thurſday the Firſt of May, to treat, adviſe, and agree among themſelves, Whether the King ought to ſend any Envoys to the Court of Rome, to propound His Right before the Pope, or not? And in the ſame manner, the Knights of Counties, and Commons, were charged to Aſſemble in the Painted Chamber, to treat, and adviſe in like manner, and to report their Anſwer and Agreement, in full Parliament, at the ſame time.

Sir Barth. Burgherſh gives the Parliament a Relation of the Succeſs of the King's Affairs beyond Sea, and of the late Truce.

The Eſtates of Parliament are charged to give the King their beſt Advice in this Juncture.

On * which day, the Prelates and Great Men anſwered, their Advice was, That the Truce was Honourable, and Advantageous to the King and all His Friends; and that every Chriſtian ought to wiſh, that the War, which was ſo great and hurtful to all Chriſtians, might ſoon end in a Peace: Wherefore they agreed to the Truce; and that the King ſhould ſend Meſſengers to Rome, to lay before the Pope, as a Mediator and Friend, (but not as a Judge) His Rights and Demands, in order to a Treaty of Peace, according to the Form of the Truce. And then the Knights of Counties came in, and the Commons, and anſwered by Sir William Truſſel, in the White Chamber, (i. e. the preſent Court of Requeſts) who in the preſence of the King, Prelates, and Great Men, propoſed on behalf of the Knights

* Ibid.

The Prelates and Great Men approve the Truce, and adviſe the ſending Envoys to Rome, to lay the King's Demands before the Pope.

Which is alſo agreed to by the Commons

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII

‘and Commons, That they were fully agreed, the Truce ſhoul kept, to the end a Good and Honourable Peace might be made And further, the ſaid Commons prayed the King, to ſend expreſ Envoys, or Meſſengers, to treat of Peace, as aboveſaid; and in caſ He could have an Honourable and Advantageous Peace for Himſel and His Friends, that He would accept of it; but if not, the ſaid Commons declared, that they would aid and aſſiſt Him, and maintain Hi Quarrel with all their Power. With which Hearty and Loyal Anſwer, the King could not but be very well ſatisfied.

* Rot. Pat. 17 Ed. 3 m. 24. n 27. Edward the K's Eldeſt Son is created P. of Wales in this Parl. in which alſo the Statute of Proviſors was made.

† Vid. the Account of Laws at the end of this Reign.

I have no more to add concerning this Parliament, only that in th Beginning of it, * the King created His Eldeſt Son Edward, now i the Thirteenth Year of His Age, Prince of Wales; inveſting him b a Coronet and Ring of Gold. In this Parliament alſo, upon grea Complaints made by the Peers and Commons againſt the Pope's En croachment of beſtowing Eccleſiaſtical Benefices in England, by way o Proviſion, upon Strangers; and alſo by Impoſitions of Tenths and Fir Fruits: For Remedy of the ſaid Abuſes, that Notable Statute o Proviſors was then enacted; which you may find at large in the Printed Statute-Books; and † I have given you an Abridgment of it in another Place. But as for the Letters which were then written in th Name of the whole Parliament to the Pope, concerning this Affair, a alſo His Anſwer to King Edward about it, with His Reply to the ſame, ſince they are things of an Eccleſiaſtical Nature, I ſhall refer the Reader to the End of the Reign, where ſuch Church-Affairs as could no ſo well be inſerted into the Body of this Hiſtory, are particularly related by themſelves.

[1.] Odor. Rayn. ad hunc Ann. The K. writes to the Pope, deſiring the time for ſending His Commiſſioners to Rome might be prolong'd.

Preſently after this Parliament, King Edward, upon more matur Deliberation, wrote a [1.] Letter to the Pope, That, whereas by th Articles of the late Truce, He had agreed to ſend Commiſſioners t His Holineſs before Midſummer enſuing; He deſired the Term migh be prolonged until the Eighth of September; and that in the mea while His Holineſs would be pleaſed to write to the King of France, that the Earl of Montfort (who had been taken Priſoner in the lat War) might be ſet at Liberty; as alſo, that David King of Scotlan ſhould be admoniſhed to obſerve the Truce more ſtrictly than He ha done.

* Rot. Franc. 17 Ed. 3. m. 12. The K. iſſues out a Commiſſion to certain Nobles and Civilians to treat with the French Commiſſioners before the Pope; which is followed by a Second Commiſſion, but to no effect.

About the Beginning of this Summer, King Edward iſſued out a * Commiſſion, bearing date the Twentieth day of May, to Hugh le Diſpenſer Lord of Glamorgan, Ralph Lord Stafford, William de Norwich Dean of Lincoln, Sir William Truſſel, and Andrew Ufford a Civilian: Theſe had thereby Authority to treat in the preſence of the Pope (not as a Judge, but as a Friend and Private Perſon) and with the Commiſſioners that ſhould be appointed by Philip of Valois, concerning the King's Right to the Crown of France, and all other Dominions, Lands, &c. in the ſaid Kingdom, and about which any Controverſie or Difference might ariſe. Neither was this alone thought ſufficient; for about three Months after, a Second Commiſſion, bearing date the Nineteenth of Auguſt, was granted to Henry Earl of Derby, Thomas Earl of Warwick, Robert Earl of Suffolk, and to the Lords, Hugh le Diſpenſer, de Nevil, de Burgherſh, le Grey de Ruthyn, de Cobham, and de Brodiſtan; and to theſe Doctors of Law, William de Norwich Dean of Lincoln, John de Ufford Archdeacon of Ely, Robert Herward Archdeacon

Deacon of Taunton, and Andrew de Vfford : But yet that all theſe New Commiſſioners ever went over, I do not find, but rather the contrary; and as for theſe firſt mentioned, [2.] they in September following met thoſe that were ſent thither by the K. of France.

[2] Chron. Franc. Ms.

[3.] Bp Stillingfleet's MS. n. 8.

The Anſwer of the Engliſh Commiſſioners to that great Objection from the Salick-Law againſt the Succeſſion of Women to the French Crown.

And it may not be amiſs to give you ſome Account of this Treaty and Negotiation, what were the [3.] Arguments that were urged by the Commiſſioners of either Party: Firſt, Thoſe for the K. of England ſet forth their Maſter's Right to the Crown much after the ſame manner as had been done before, That He was the next Heir-Male to the late Deceaſed K. Charles; and further ſupported it with theſe following Reaſons, That if the Salick Law were ſtill objected, That not only Females, but thoſe deſcended from them, were thereby excluded from the Succeſſion; that Law can no ways affect the Kingdom of France, by theſe Words, In terram Salicam Mulieres nè Succedant: For that the Salick Land lies in Germany between the Rivers Elbe and Sala, the Country of the Antient Francs; and that which the French now call a Law, was but a wicked and unjuſt Uſurpation, a Cuſtom firſt of all introduced by Clotaire the Firſt, to the excluſion of His Nieces Chrotherge and Chroteſinda, Daughters of His Elder Brother Childebert the Firſt; and that this Law had not been ſince that Time obſerved in France, they proved by ſeveral Inſtances: As that K. Pepin, Father to Charles the Great, having depoſed K. Childeric the Third, (the laſt of the Merovean Race) claimed the Crown of France before Pope Zachary, as Heir General of that Family, being deſcended of Blithildis, Daughter of K. Clotaire the Firſt; Father of that Hugh Capet, who upon the Death of K. Lewis the V. uſurped the Crown (when claim'd by Charles Duke of Lorain, the Heir-Male of the Line of Charles the Great), and to make his Title good, pretended to come of the Lady Lindigardis, Daughter of King Charles the Second, ſirnamed the Bald, Grandſon to Charles the Great; and that K. Lewis the Ninth, who is now Sainted, could never be ſatisfied in His Conſcience that He had any Right to the Crown of France, until it was made out to Him, that Queen Iſabelle, or Elizabeth, His Grandmother, Daughter to Baldwin Earl of Haynault, was lineally deſcended from the Lady Ermingardis, Daughter and Heir to the aforeſaid Charles, Duke of Lorain; ſo that in the Judgment of this Holy King, the Salick Law was then in no force; and that Scripture might not be wanting, eſpecially before a Pope, they urged that Text, which had been already made uſe of on this Occaſion, viz. * If a Man die, and have no Son, he ſhould cauſe his Inheritance to paſs to his Daughters.

* Numb. c. 27. v. 8.

Their Anſwer to the Objection of the French Commiſſioners, concerning K. Edward's doing Homage to K. Philip.

And when the French Commiſſioners alſo urged, That K. Edward by doing Homage to the King their Maſter, as Lawful King of France, had already acknowledged His Right; to this it was anſwered, (beſides what hath been already mentioned in the K's Letters to the Pope, of His being then under Age, and doing it for fear of loſing the Dutchy of Guienne,) that it was a Rule in the Civil Law, Ei qui alio Jure venit, quam eo quod amiſit, non nocet id, quod perdidit, Sed prodeſt id, quod habet, &c. And beſides He had done Homage on Condition that He might have the ſaid Dutchy entirely reſtored to Him according to the Articles; which King Philip having never perform'd, the Homage was void.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII.

Their Anſwer to the Objecti-on, That no Women could transfer a Right to that Crown to any other.

Then the Commiſſioners for the K. of France further urged on th behalf of their Maſter, theſe expreſs Words of the Salick Law, whic they aſcribed to K. Pharamond, and would have to belong to the who Kingdom of France; Since no Woman had ever been admitted to the Thron much leſs can ſhe transfer her Right to another; for, Nemo dat quod non h bet; alſo that He was a Stranger, and ſo not to be admitted to the G vernment of that Realm, which long before refuſed Charles Duke
Lorain, upon that very Account, tho He was unqueſtionably the nex Heir: To both theſe the Engliſh Ambaſſadors anſwered, by wholl denying the Legality of thoſe Actions.

They laſtly urged the Judgment of the Twelve Peers of France, wh had adjudged the Crown to be K. Philip's, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it no continued after a long and peaceable enjoyment, even with King Ed ward's own Acknowledgment of it, as ſufficient Proof of His fai Right.

Theſe Arguments being banded to and fro by the Civilians of bot Parties, appeared ſo intricate to the Pope, that He would come to n poſitive Reſolution in this Matter, but only offer'd certain Equivalent to the Engliſh Commiſſioners for all their Maſter's Pretences and De mands in France, which they would by no means accept of; ſo tha all which could be then agreed on, was, That the Triennial Truc already made ſhould continue without any violation to the end of th Term.

*Cleopatra E. 2. f. 34.

Another Treaty held before the Pope by other Commiſſioners, but without any effect.

But it appears by a MS in the * Cottonian Library, that after thi there was another long Treaty managed at the ſame Place before th Pope and certain Cardinals, every day, from the 22*d* of October t the 29th of November following, partly by ſome of the former Com miſſioners, and partly by ſome new ones, (viz.) William Bateman Bp o Norwich, John Ufford Dean of Lincoln, the Arch-Deacon of Norwich
Sir Hugh Nevil, and Nicholas de Fliſco: But when the Pope would hav had them firſt to treat about what had been done againſt the Truce and by whoſe means it had been broken, they would not enter upo any ſuch Matter, till they were ſatisfy'd in their Maſter' Demands concerning the Crown of France; and ſo this Affair conti nu'd undetermin'd to the latter end of the next Year, when Ope War broke out again between the Two Crowns; though the Truce was looked upon by K. Edward to have been already violated by th French King a few Months before, as will appear by the followin Action.

K. Edward looks upon the Truce to be already violated, and why.

[4] Froiſſ. c. 100. Mezeray. Ad hunc Ann

Oliver Cliſſon, with other Noblemen of Bretagne are ſeiſed and put to death without any Tryal.

[5.] Chron. Francoiſ. Civit. London. Ad hunc an.

[4] Oliver de Cliſſon, a Nobleman of Bretagne, (who had lately fo valiantly defended Vannes againſt the Engliſh, and been himſelf taken Priſoner) with Ten or Twelve other Lords of the ſame Countrey and Party, having accompany'd Count Charles of Blois to a great Tournea- ment, that was then to be held by King Philip at Paris, they were all on the ſudden, almoſt as ſoon as ever they were arrived, arreſted, which [5.] was towards the latter end of Auguſt; and within a few Days after, without Tryal, or making any Defence for themſelves, they were drawn through the City, and executed as Traytors, and their Heads ſent into Bretagne, to be ſet over the Gates of Nantes, and other Ci- ties.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIII.

As for the Crime for which they ſuffer'd, Froiſſart ſays it was on ſuſpicion of their holding Intelligence with the Engliſh; but Du Cheſne nd other French Hiſtorians carry it higher, and ſay, That all of them, ſpecially De Cliſſon, held a private Correſpondence, and had made a ſecret League with K. Edward, under their Seals, contrary to the Ninth Article of the Truce; which was, That None in the Obedience of ne King, at the Time of the ſaid Truce, ſhould put himſelf under the Alleiance of the other, whilſt it continued. But what proof there was of this I do not find, only K. Edward in His next Letter to the Pope, as alſo n His Declaration ſubſequent thereunto, calls thoſe Noblemen that had been put to death in Bretagne, His Adherents. But Mezeray freely acknowledges, that this ſudden Execution of theſe Noblemen without any Legal Tryal, or Cognizance of the Cauſe, was a great aſtoniſhment to all the World, and was received with great Indignation by the Nobility, whoſe Blood did not uſe to be ſhed, unleſs it were in defence of their Countrey; and that the King was too ſevere in taking ſo cruel a Revenge on meer Suſpicions, which ſo alienated the Affections of the Great Men, not only of Bretagne, but France it ſelf, that they afterwards ſerved Him very ill when He had moſt occaſion for them.

Which highly incenſes the Nobility of France and Bretagne.

[1.] When King Edward had received the ſad News of the Execution of the Lord Cliſſon, and the other Noblemen abovementioned, He was ſo very much concern'd at it, that (though they had been lately His Enemies) looking upon it as an open Breach of the Truce, He was like to have treated the Lord Henry de Leon, who was then a Priſoner in England, in the ſame manner; but at the Interceſſion of the Earl of Derby, He gave him his Life and Liberty, on Condition that he ſhould go from Him to King Philip, and let Him know, That the Truce having been broke by His late Murthers and Unjuſt Actions, He thereupon defy'd Him, and therefore reſolved to renew the War: Which accordingly began again, not long after, both in Guyenne and Bretagne.

[1.] Froiſſ. ib.
K. Edward looks upon this Execution as a Breach of the Truce, and ſends the Lord de Leon to defie King Philip.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIV.

Yet did not this Accident in France ſo take up the King's Mind, but that He ſpent the beginning of this Year in Tourneaments and other Martial Exerciſes; for I muſt here take notice, that the King being reſolved to renew the Memory of the Famous King Arthur, and His Knights of the Round-Table, [2.] had the laſt Year order'd a ſpacious Room of Wood to be erected at Windſor-Caſtle, no leſs than Two hundred Foot over, which He call'd the Round-Table, becauſe it was there He intended to treat all the Knights He not long after invited from Foreign Parts: Then on the Firſt of January this Year He began to hold His Feaſt of the Round-Table at Windſor, and alſo iſſued out Letters of Safe-conduct for all Foreign Knights and their Servants, who ſhould come to the Solemn Tourneament to be held there on the Octaves of St. Hillary (which fell that Year on the 19*th* of January) and to be continued till Candlemaſs following.

[2.] T. W.
The K. erects a ſpacious Room in Windſor-Caſtle, and there holds a ~~Tournament and~~ Feaſt of the Knights of the Round-Table.

At the Day appointed there was a great Appearance both of Engliſh and Foreign Knights and Noblemen, and the Solemnity began with a Sumptuous Entertainment, or Supper; and the Day following the Juſts or Tourneaments began, and were continued almoſt every Day during the King's Letters of Protection, and were perform'd in the preſence of the Queen and all the Ladies of the Court, who had Scaffolds erected

At which there is a great appearance both Engliſh of and Foreign Nobility.

on

Anno Dom MCCCXLIV.

on purpoſe to behold thoſe Manly Exerciſes ; with which the King wa ſo well pleaſed, that this firſt Building being erected ſuddenly wit Timber, He about the beginning of Auguſt following cauſed Carpen ters and Maſons to be hired, and Carriages to be impreſt, for a mor durable Structure to be erected of the like Form, and for the ſame Ex erciſe to be continued every Year.

The Miſtake of Froiſſart and Polydore Vergil, in aſcribing this Inſtitution of the Knights of the Garter to this Solemnity.

I cannot but here take notice, that to this Solemnity, which wa held the beginning of this Year, both Froiſſart and Polydore Vergil d erroneouſly aſcribe the Inſtitution of the Knights of the Garter, an their Authority hath led many of our Modern Hiſtorians into the lik Miſtake ; for this Order was not inſtituted till about five Years after as I ſhall ſhew you, when I come to that Time. But I muſt here ob ſerve by the way, that this Military Exerciſe of Tourneying or Til ing (as it was afterwards called) though it was a little too boiſterous and ſometimes fatal to the Performers, yet certainly nothing contribu ted more to ſtrengthen the Bodies of our Young Nobility and Gentry and to beget a Noble Emulation amongſt them, who ſhould acqui themſelves beſt at theſe Manly Exerciſes ; by which means they wer not only obliged to maintain a competent number of able Horſes fo the Great Saddle, and fit for War, whenever there was occaſion ; bu their Owners, in order to theſe Military Performances, were likewiſ obliged to know how to ride and manage them, to be uſed to wear Ar mor, and to handle the Sword and Spear; a much more noble, manly and uſeful Expence, as well as Exerciſe, (ſince it enabled them to figh for the defence of their Country) than to ſpend a great part of thei Eſtates in ſlight Race-Horſes and Hunters, according to the Mode o our more Polite, but leſs Warlike Age.

After theſe Solemnities I find nothing of moment to have happened til the beginning of June following, when the King (according to
* a Writ of Summons dated the 20*th* of April before) † held a Parliament at Weſtminſter on Munday next after the Octaves of Holy Trinity, or 7*th* of June : The next Day after their meeting the Names of the Lords were read and examin'd before the King in Parliament, to ſee who appear'd, and who fail'd, and the Names of thoſe who were not come were given to the King in Writing.

* Rot. Clauſ. 18 Ed. 3. part. 1. m. 14. dorſ.
† Rot. Parl. 18 Ed. 3. n. 5.
The King holds a Parl. at Weſtminſter.

*On Thurſday following the Chancellor declared the Cauſes of the Summons to be, concerning the late Truce made in Bretagne, and the Breach thereof in Seven Articles ; and began his Speech thus ; My Lords, in the Truce lately made, agreed and confirm'd, amongſt other Articles it was agreed ;

* Ib. n. 6, 7.
The Chancellor declares the Cauſes of the Parl. to be about the Infraction of the Truce by the French K.; the Articles of which are there recited.

'That the Truce ſhould be kept in Bretagne between the Two Kings
'and their ſeveral Allies, notwithſtanding the Right they both claim'd
'in the ſaid Dutchy.

2. 'The Second Article he alſo repeated at length, which being the ſame
'with the Ninth Article of the Truce already mention'd, I need not re'cite.

3. 'The Third is, That there be no renewing of Injuries againſt each 'other, in prejudice of the Truce whilſt it continues.

4. 'Alſo that the ſaid Lords, their Adherents, Coadjutors and Al'lies, whatever they be, do remain in ſuch Poſſeſſion and ſuch Seiſin,
'as then they had of all Benefices, Lands and Poſſeſſions which they 'held, or had any ways enjoy'd during the Truce : The other Two, as
'not being much to the purpoſe, I paſs by.

7. 'But the Seventh was, That none of either Party, by any Gift or Promiſe, ſhould be wrought on directly or indirectly to make War during the Truce.

'Then the Chancellor proceeded to declare, How that ſeveral things had been done contrary to the ſaid Articles, as the King's Council have been inform'd by ſome Perſons of Bretagne.

* Ibid. The Breaches of ſeveral of theſe Articles ſet forth.

'* As firſt, That divers of the Allies of Him that calls Himſelf the King of France, have taken and impriſoned many Men at Arms, of the Allies of our King, and ſome they ſent into France, there to remain in Priſon during the French King's Pleaſure.

'Alſo the ſaid Adverſary hath cauſed many Knights, Eſquires, and other Perſons of Bretagne, (theſe, I ſuppoſe, were the Lord Clyſſon, and the other Gentlemen of Bretagne already mentioned) who were known to be in the Legiance of our King before the Truce made, (and were compriſed in it, and ought to have been protected by it) to be carried to Paris, and there put to death without the Aſſent or Decree of the Peers and Others of His Council in Parliament: And others He had cauſed to be murthered in their own Country, falſly and maliciouſly, againſt the ſaid Truce, and againſt His Oath. 'And that the ſaid Adverſary had ſent Men at Arms, and Foot, in great Numbers, into Gaſcoigne and Bretagne; who, after the Truce made, took Caſtles, Towns, and Fortreſſes, and ſeiſed the Lands and Eſtates of thoſe who were in Poſſeſſion, and under the Obedience of our King at the time of the Truce made: In which, amongſt other things, it is contain'd, That no new Action ſhould be attempted, during the Truce.

'And further the ſaid Adverſary endeavours, by all ways He can, to take and ſeiſe all the Lands and Poſſeſſions which our King had beyond Sea, and to procure His Allies in Brabant, Flanders, and Almaign or Germany, to leave Him; and are reſolved (as our King and Council have been certainly inform'd) to conquer England, and deſtroy the Engliſh Language, if a ſufficient Remedy be not applied to oppoſe His Malice. On the other ſide, the Scots, who are the ſaid Adverſaries Allies, have openly declared, That when He gives them notice, they will not obſerve or regard the Truce, but march into England, and do what Miſchief they can.

* Ibid. The K. thereupon deſires the ſpeedy Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Lords & Commons.

'* Wherefore the King prays, and charges the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commons, that, theſe things conſidered, they would give Him ſuch Advice and Aſſiſtance, as is neceſſary for the ſaving His and their own Rights and Honours.

'Which things being recited to the Archbiſhops, the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others of the Commons, they pray, that they may deliberate till Monday next following.

* Ib. n. 8. Who deſire longer time to deliberate upon it.

And * from that Monday, becauſe they had not then fully declared, they deſired further reſpite till Wedneſday, being the Eve of St. John Baptiſt: Upon which day, the Archbiſhop and Ten other Biſhops, Five Abbots, Two Priors, Eight Earls, Six Barons, being all there named in the Record, and the Commons of the Realm Aſſembled in the White-Chamber, in the preſence of the King; and having regard to the great Miſchiefs and Dangers which may befal the King, and all His Subjects and Allies, if the Malice of His Adverſary be not ſtopped: And conſidering the heavy Charges, which the Great Men and Commons of Anno Dom. MCCCXLIV.

They adviſe the K. to make an end of the War.

England had been at, and ſuffered, by reaſon of the War continuing ſo long, by falſe Truces and Sufferances; and ſeeing that an end of the War, or ſo good a Peace as ought to be, cannot be made without great Power and Force of Men; they thereſore pray the King, with one Accord, and every particular Perſon of the Great Men, for himſelf, that He would make a ſpeedy end of this War, either by Battel, or by a Convenient Peace, if it might be had.

Ib. n. 10. And not put off His Voyage beyond Sea for any Letters from the Pope or any other; after which the Parl. and Conv. grant the K. a great Tax for this War, but on certain Conditions.

And that when the King ſhould be ready to paſs beyond Sea, to take what God ſhould allot Him, upon the Iſſue of this Affair; He would not, for the Letters or Command of the Pope, or any other, lay aſide His Voyage, until He had made an end one way or other. The which Prayer the King fully granted. But becauſe all this could not be done without a Great and Agreable Aid, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prelates, and Procurators of the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation, granted to the King a Triennial Tenth. Then the Commons granted to the King for the ſame Cauſe, Two Fifteenths o the Commonalty of the Land, and Two Tenths of the Cities and Burghs. Yet after that, the ſaid Commons granted another Fifteenth See the Conditions of theſe Grants in the Statutes at large, 18 Ed. translated exactly from the French, on this Roll, from N 14, to N. 23 which Statute was made at the Petition of the Commons, and is called in the Todding on the * Roll, the Charter of the Commons: Where i alſo the Statute or Charter of the Clergy, bearing date the Eighth o July, in the Eighteenth Year of His Reign, which gave them many Privileges in both theſe Statutes, that are now in a manner become obſolete. 'Tis ſaid, the Great Lay-men (that is, the Earls and other Noblemen of the Kingdom) having granted to paſs over and adventur themſelves with the King; they therefore are not found upon the Ro to be taxed.

* Rot. Parl. n. 23.

The Reſidue of this Year was ſpent in Tourneaments and othe Military Exerciſes, at Dunſtable, Smithfield, and eſpecially at Windſor, in Feaſtings, Revellings, Dancings, and all Sorts of Diverſion.

[3.] T. W. Ib. n 24. The French K. gives His Subjects Timber out of His Foreſts to build Ships.

Since England affords us nothing more conſiderable, we ſhall loo into France; where we find, [3.] King Philip, not long after the ſe ting up of His Round-Table at Paris, (which He did in the Beginnin of the Year, in Emulation to King Edward) made a very Politic Order, to encourage the French to build Ships, in hopes that thereb He might beat the Engliſh at Sea; and He gave His Subjects leave t cut down Timber for that purpoſe, gratis, in His own Foreſts.

[4.] Mezeray in hunc Ann. But impoſes the firſt Gabelle upon Salt, which proves very grievous to His Subjects.

But [4.] as this King granted ſome things that were very Beneficia to His Subjects, ſo He likewiſe laid greater Impoſts upon them tha any of His Predeceſſors had done before; which very much cool their Affections towards Him: For beſides the Extraordinary Taxe which His Subjects granted Him for His Wars, it ſeemed very grievou that He impoſed a Gabelle upon Salt: For which cauſe, King Edwar by way of Raillery, called Him, The Inſtitutor of the Salique-La This Impoſt, which makes the very Natural Beneſices of the Sun an Water Saleable, was the Invention of the Jews, as the Word Gabell denotes, which comes from the Hebrew Original.

Notwithſtanding King Edward's Defiance of the French King, i ſeems, the Biſhop of Norwich, with the other Commiſſioners ſent th laſt Year to treat with thoſe of France, before the Pope, were not a

ye

Anno Dom. MCCCXLIV.

* Rot. Franc. 18 Ed. 3. m. 2.

Other Commiſſioners ſent to the Pope, with the effect of that Negotiation.

yet return'd: For we find by * a Roll of this Year, that there were two other Commiſſioners added to the former; viz. John de Thoreſby, and Sir Ralph Spigurnel Knight; who appeared before the Pope on the Five and Twentieth of November, and then delivered to Him the K's Letters; who appointed the next day to give them Audience, about the Buſineſs for which they came. When they told the Pope, that they were ſent to Him upon two Accounts; firſt, For an Amendment of what had been attempted againſt the Truce; and, 2*ly*, That they might aſſiſt the other Commiſſioners in the Treaty. Then after two days Attendance, when they ſaw the Pope ſtill deferr'd, or elſe was not willing to return them a poſitive Anſwer; and alſo found by the King of France's Commiſſioners, that King Edward ſhould never enjoy any thing in France, but under their Maſter's Subjection; they reſolved to treat no more, before they knew the King's Mind: Yet at laſt the Pope told them, He would ſend Sir Hugh Nevill to Him with Letters, and likewiſe Sir Simon de Buſſy to the King of France: And thus the Treaty for a time ſtood ſtill, until it was quite broke off about the end of November. When the King's Commiſſioners ſaw, that the Pope had created Prince Lewis of Spain, King of the * Fortunate Iſlands near Affrica, and that under the Pretence of Conquering them he began to raiſe Men in his own, and the Pope's Name, over all France and Italy; they no longer doubted, but that all theſe Preparations were deſigned againſt England; wherefore they ſecretly left Avignon, and made all the haſte home they could; where they related theſe Matters to the King; and Du Cheſne himſelf confeſſes, that the Preparations were really intended againſt King Edward; tho', as being a Frenchman, he qualifies the matter, ſaying, it was only in order to reſiſt a New War, which was lately threatened by the Mouth of Sir Henry de Leon, as hath been already related.

The Treaty before the Pope at laſt quite broke off, and for what Reaſons.

* Suppoſed to be the Canaries. Vid. Ferrar. Lex Geograph.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLV.

[4.] Froiſſ. c. 102.

The K. ſends Sir Tho. Dagworth into Bretagne with ſome Forces, to aſſiſt the Counteſs of Montfort.

Not long after the Beginning of this Year, the [4.] King ſent Sir Thomas Dagworth over into Bretagne, with One Hundred Men at Arms, and Two Hundred Archers, to reinforce the Counteſs of Montfort, becauſe He knew, the War between her and Count Charles of Blois would ſoon break out again. And the King having a little before received News out of Gaſcoigne, that His Affairs were but in a weak Condition in thoſe Parts, He thereupon reſolved not only to ſend ſufficient Forces to defend His Territories there, but which might alſo carry on the War vigorouſly againſt France, ſo ſoon as it ſhould be freſh declared. But that He might do nothing unfairly, * He iſſued out His Commiſſion to William Bohun Earl of Northampton, dated the Four and Twentieth of April; whereby He empowered him to carry a Defiance to Philip of Valois, as a Truce-breaker, His Capital Enemy, and Unjuſt Uſurper of His Inheritance, the Kingdom of France. Which Defiance being made, he was order'd to go with John Earl of Montfort into Bretagne, as the King of England's Lieutenant-General, to defend that Dutchy againſt the Lord Charles of Blois, being alſo empowered to receive the Fealty and Homage of thoſe People in the King's Name, which was due to Him as Sovereign of France: A like Power having, Three Years before, been given him in the ſame Parts; all which he perform'd accordingly. Note, that at the ſame time [illegible] his commiſsion [illegible] Defiance he [illegible] two letters dated Apr 24, whereby he was constitute Capt. General, and Lieutenant of all the Kings [illegible] in France [illegible] but of the transactions there you will find more hereafter. Rot. Franc. [illegible]

vid. p. [illegible]

p. 449

* Rot. Franc. 19 Ed. 3. m. 24. P. 1.

The K. empowers the E. of Northampton to defy the French King, and then appoints Him Lieutenant-General of Bretagne.

Anno Dom. MCCCXLV.

* Rot Rom. 19 Ed. 3. m. 2. Dorſ.

The K. juſtifies His Actions in a Letter to the Pope.

Preſently after this, * the King thought fit to juſtifie His late Actions, in a Letter to the Pope, the effect of which was; ‘That for the avoiding of the Dangers and Damages that might ariſe, by reaſon of the Wars between Himſelf and Philip of Valois, He had offer'd Him many Propoſals of Peace, that ſo He might apply Himſelf (as He much deſired) to the Service of His Redeemer, beyond Sea; but was always put off, and delay'd with fair Words and Treaties, without any effect, to His great Prejudice. Then after a Narrative of the Truce made before Vannes, He complains, that when He returned into England, and had left only a few Men in Bretagne, and ſent His Commiſſioners to treat before His Holineſs about a Peace, He received News which pierced His very Soul, viz. That certain Noblemen of Bretagne, were, by Command of Philip, taken at Paris, and unjuſtly put to death; and alſo complains of the Great Ravage, and Depopulation, made in Bretagne, Gaſcoigne, and other Places: That He endeavour'd by Crafty and Secret Treaties, to draw His Allies and Subjects from Him, and procured divers other things to be done againſt the Truce, by Sea and Land; therefore He (the King) thought it utterly broken and diſſolved by His Adverſary of France.

‘Then He proceeds further to complain, That ſince the Time of Treaty before His Holineſs was expired, and no Reaſonable Terms of Peace had been propos'd, nor the things done againſt the Truce reform'd or amended, but rather encreaſed and multiplied; altho' by His Holineſs's Letters, the ſaid Philip had been often required to reform them; (not to ſay any thing of His Legate, who being ſent into Bretagne, to cauſe the Truce to be obſerved, yet took the contrary Part) He therefore thought Himſelf excus'd by God, Holy Church, and the World, if, ſeeing He could have no other Remedy in a Juſt Cauſe. He now declar'd the Truce diſſolved by Philip; and therefore defied Him, and again renewed the War, proteſting He would attempt nothing that might offend His Holineſs, or the Apoſtolick See; both which, He ſtill deſired to revere; or that might do injury to any one; but only with Moderation to defend Himſelf, and proſecute His Juſt Rights; aſſerting, that what He did was for want of other Remedy, and againſt His Will; offering Peace, whenever He might have a good one, by juſt means, and on equal Terms.

I ſhall here alſo ſubjoin the Pope's Anſwer to the King's Letter, tho' it was not ſent till ſome time after; that ſo the Reader may make a better Judgment concerning the Grounds King Edward had to renew the War, before the Time of the Truce was expired; for tho' the Pope would therein ſeem to act only as a Mediator, yet He plainly juſtifies the Proceedings of the King of France. The Letter being very long, I ſhall give you the effect of it in as narrow a Compaſs as I can.

* Rot.Rom.ib. The Subſtance of the Pope's Anſwer to it.

*It begins with the Obliging Appellation, of ‘Beloved Son; and then calls God to witneſs, who underſtands all Secrets, That He had faithfully endeavoured to procure a Peace between Him and the King of France without Partiality, and would not yet ſpare any Pains for the effecting it: And He goes on and tells Him, That thoſe who wrote His Letters, probably underſtood not the Truth of the Affair, for that there were ſome Things left out which cauſed Notable Errors: For it was agreed by the Truce, That there ſhould be ſome of the Royal

‘Blood

Anno Dom.
MCCCXLV.

Blood commiſſioned to treat on either ſide in His preſence; and tho' the King of France had ſent ſeveral of His Royal Blood, and many Prelates of great Authority (as had been agreed) with ſufficient Power, who were very ready to treat, yet He (the King of England) had ſent none ſuch; and therefore it ought to be conſidered, whether the King of France, or Himſelf were in fault, that the Peace did not proceed as it ought to have done.

‘Next He proceeds to juſtifie King Philip's puniſhing thoſe Noblemen mention'd in the King's Letter, and upon which, He alledged, the Truce was broken; to which His Holineſs replies, That He had already wrote to Him, and alſo told His Commiſſioners, That King Philip in anſwer to the Invective Letters He had wrote to Him upon that Subject, affirmed, That thoſe Noblemen had manifeſtly violated the Truce, by committing Murthers, by burning and waſting the Countries, and doing other horrid Wickedneſſes in Bretagne, where they were taken and puniſhed according to Juſtice; and that the ſame perſons had owned they were not in confederacy with Him, but with John of Bretagne, Earl of Montfort, who had alſo deny'd, when at Paris, that he had any Confederacy with Him, viz. King Edward

Though, by the by, this ſeems but a meer Pretence, ſince it is certain, that the King had long before entred into a Confederacy with the Counteſs of Montfort, Wife to the ſaid Earl, on His behalf; and if it could not be made actually with himſelf, it was becauſe he was then a Cloſe Priſoner; but indeed he had done Homage to K. Edward before that time, upon condition of His aſſiſtance: And if this did not mount to a Confederacy, I leave the Reader to judge.

This I take notice of, that you may obſerve how eaſie the Pope was to believe any thing that would make for the French King's Juſtification, tho never ſo frivolous.

But to return to the Letter it ſelf: Then as to the King's Complaints of what had been done againſt the Truce in Bretagne, Gaſcoigne, and other Places, He anſwers; ‘That the King of France had likewiſe complained of divers Things done againſt the Form and Tenor of the Truce in the ſame Places, as alſo upon the Sea, having exhibited to Him divers Articles thereof; and that therefore He had directed Letters to them both about this Matter; to which the King of France anſwered, He would inviolably obſerve the Truce, and cauſe whatever had been done againſt it to be revoked, provided King Edward would do the like: And that having charged Him with giving aſſiſtance to Charles of Blois, as Duke of Bretagne, K. Philip had often wrote back, That He had never aſſiſted Him ſince the Truce with Men or Money, and His Son, the Duke of Normandy, had in His (the Pope's) preſence conſtantly affirmed the ſame.

‘And whereas He Himſelf had wrote effectually to Charles of Blois about the obſervation of the Truce, he thereupon came to Him, and in the preſence of the Cardinals that mediated the Truce, declared and affirmed, he never entred into the Truce, nor was ever required or asked to do it; and that by the Words of the Truce he could no ways be comprehended in it; of which he had given notice to His Majeſty's Commiſſioners before their departure from his Court.

But this was likewiſe a Pretence of Count Charles; for tho he is not particularly named in the Articles, yet it was without doubt intended he ſhould be comprized in them, as appears by the Fourth Article, viz. That the foreſaid Truce ſhould be kept in Bretagne between the ſaid Ks, and their Adherents, ſince both Parties claim a Right to that Dukedom: From whence it appears, that both the Pretenders were looked upon as Adherents to one of theſe Kings, or elſe this Clauſe ſignified nothing. So much I thought fit to remark by the by.

The Pope offers again to conſider the Complaints made on both ſides.

Then His Holineſs ſets forth, ‘That He thought it moſt expedient for the avoiding of Scandal, and for other Cauſes, to conſider the Complaints made on both ſides, which were long, many, and intricate, according to a Method to be propounded, and conſented to by both Parties, concerning the Revocation, of what had been done againſt the Truce, with which He had acquainted His Commiſſioners, and to the ſame purpoſe wrote to them both; to which the King of France had returned His Letters of Conſent, according to His Propoſition, ſealed with His Seal, readily and freely, without any limitation of Time; but that He, (viz. King Edward) prefixed ſo ſhort a Time, as nothing could be undertaken in that Buſineſs.

